During the last two days French scout planes have reported roads leading to the Trier sector, on the extreme northern tip of the front, jammed with German troops, convoys, heavy artillery and ammunition moving up to reinforce the Nazi Siegfried Line.

It was these Nazi divisions which apparently the German General Staff threw into the battle for possession of the strategic heights and wooded areas that cover a 100-mile long strip of No Man's Land from the Moselle to the Rhine River.

As the German counter atack began France tightened its economic belt for a long war.

HOLD WARNDT FOREST

The Cabinet late in the afternoon approved a series of financial decrees which Finance Minister Paul Reynaud will announce and explain to the nation in a broadcast at 8 p.m. tomorrow (3p.m. Brooklyn time).

The 200-square miles of territory held by the French included about 20 square miles of the Warndt Forest, west of Forbach, where a starlight attack last night swept through the wooded area which embraces one of the Saar Basin's richest coal deposits.

Forbach is on the northern flank of the French line, where infantry and tanks were reported to have penetrated seven or eight miles into German territory, reaching the Saar River, in their advance toward the Siegfried line.

PLANES JOIN ATTACK

Infantry and tanks, supported by fast attack planes, were believed to have pushed advance guards toward the Saar River. The river flows parallel to the French frontier. It lies five miles within German territory from a point opposite Forbach and runs through the German towns of Saarlouis and Merzig. From Merzig it gradually widens its distance from the frontier until it flows into the Moselle just below Trier.

Beyond the river line the Germans apparently were making a serious stand, the unofficial reports said, adding that they had blasted all bridges crossing the stream, which in this district is wide enough to be navigable. Roads leading to river crossings had been mined by retreating Germans so that they could be blown up with a touch of a plunger from the other side when French troops came into view.

NAZIS STRIKE ENEMY

As the French approached the river German airplanes flew low in action to bomb and machine-gun the infantry snaking its way through underbrush, and tanks ploughing across country, these sources recounted.

Paris reports, however, said French planes fought off the German airmen reducing to a minimum the danger from air attacks.

The French Cabinet met for an hour tonight, issuing a communique stating that it had approved a series of wartime economic and financial decrees, all of which were signed by President Lebrun. Details of the decrees were not immediately divulged.

An hour before the meeting Premier Daladier received the American Ambassador, William C. Bullitt.

Conquest of German territory, even so industrially rich as the Saar area, was considered by military observers to be merely incidental to two main results of the first week's operation of Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin's plan to aid Poland through the "back door."

These results, not only obvious to observers but confirmed in the cautious terms of the general staff's communiques were:

PRELIMINARY MOVES

1. Germany already is rushing up reinforcements to the Siegfried line, diverting that many divisions from those available to attack Poland.

2. The French advanced approximately half-way through the 15-mile wide no-man's land separating the northern flanks of the Maginot and Siegfried lines, thus clearing positions for assault on the main line Nazi fortification.

Not to be considered as representing an outstanding immediate French victory, observers said this analysis of the first week's results was only preliminary to long operations which were certain to grow increasingly difficult.

The French have taken the offensive against the German Westwall which French military men admittedly consider a formidable defense even if built on different principles from the French Maginot Line.

This fact was reflected in the cautious manner in which the French opened their drive. Having devoted a week to preparatory clean-up of approaches to the Westwall, they have not yet made contact at the chief fortifications.

Although German reinforcements were observed moving down the valleys toward the German city of Trier, which lies just in front of the Westwall at the northernmost end of the line of hostilities, this had little appreciable effect on the campaign in Poland.

The German advance, indicated even in Polish communiques reaching Paris, appeared to be continuing in all sectors, though the Poles making a desperate stand before Warsaw and on the line of the middle Vistula River through the City of Lodz. It was understood here that the Polish Army established a strong line of resistance along this front where the Russians stopped a German drive in 1914. The line held firm for months.

30.24 3189

But is on the western front that French observers believe the real issue of the war lies. It is here, they say, regardless of what happens to Poland, that a decisive conflict between France and Britain and Germany will have to be fought out.

Britain and France already have indicated that even if Germany succeeds in Adolf Hitler's plan for a quick cleanup of Poland and than suggests that there is nothing more for France and Britain to fight about, the two Allies will carry on the war to a final decision on the western front.

including twenty square miles of the Warndt Forest, west of Forbach.

Rich Coal Deposits Won.

The forest covers one of the richest coal deposits of the Saar Basin.

Late today the French Cabinet was called into session with President Lebrun presiding. It was believed that the meeting would result in formation of a new war cabinet, on which Premier Daladier has been working for several days.

An hour before the meeting the Premier conferred with the United States Ambassador, William C. Bullitt.

RESISTANCE OF NAZIS DESCRIBED BY PARIS

First Mention of Opposition in Communique —French Now Claim Gains of 200 Square Miles.

PARIS, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The French reported tonight that the Germans were counter-attacking on the western front.

A French general staff communique indicated that German heavy artillery had been brought into action.

Official communique No. 12 added that German pursuit planes had flown into battle on the front.

It was the first time that the French had officially mentioned a German attack since fighting began.

Text of the Communique.

Communique No. 12 said:

"The enemy is resisting along the entire front. Various local counter-attacks on their part are reported.

"A brilliant attack by one of our divisions assured us possession of an important section of territory.

"There has been reaction of enemy artillery.

"Our aerial reconnaissance is carried out despite intervention of enemy pursuit planes."

Military observers said tonight that the French Army attacking Germany's western frontier was in possession of approximately 200 square miles of German territory,

Communique No. II. issued this morning said:

"Activity in the course of the night by our first line land forces:

"The great Forest of Warndt, west of Forbach, is mostly in our hands. It was found filled with evidences of destruction and traps of all sorts.

"Our aviation continues active in support of land forces."

Steady Progress Is Indicated.

The communique indicated steady French progress toward Germany's rich Saar basin.

Forbach is on the northern flank of the French line, where tanks and infantry were reported to have reached the Saar River in their advance toward the Siegfried Line. That would mean they have penetrated seven to eight miles into German territory.

The reported capture of Warndt Forest tracts further served to straighten the French line which jutted back into France like a huge knob.

The morning communique was issued at 10:55 A. M. (5:55 A. M., New York time).

Called Preliminary Operations.

A French spokesman, however, pointed out that operations on the western front so far, including the reported advance in the forest, fall in the category of preliminary cleaning up of approaches to the Siegfried Line.

The official journal informed French civilians they must shoulder heavier burdens to meet war expenses.

Those younger than 18 or more than 45 years old who hold jobs, it announced, will have to contribute 4 per cent of their incomes to the war budget, starting January 1.

Those between those ages who belong to no military organization will have to pay 15 per cent.

The decree, signed by Premier Daladier and President Albert Lebrun, also specified that industrial and commercial profits and professional incomes be taxed 15 per cent beginning October 1.

Troops Blast Pontoons.

Retreating German soldiers blasted railroad pontoon bridges across a narrow stream winding north and west from France and emptying into the Moselle River near the German city of Trier, where the French expect to meet the main German fortifications.

German re-enforcements are moving up toward Trier, French air observers reported.

However, military experts did not expect a major conflict to develop in this region for several days because of the difficult terrain and the necessity of keeping French flanks protected through the forested, hilly country.

As British troops moved up to assist the French, air forces of both nations directed artillery fire on the left flank, where the French were occupied in cleaning out small fortresses atop dominant hills.

The French action rolled along the irregular left side of the giant inverted V which represents the Maginot Line that V thrusts toward Germany. The left side extends from the Luxembourg border to Lauterbourg, near the Rhine, but the French penetration is greatest in the area between Luxembourg and Forbach, a distance of about thirty-five miles.

Civilians Leaving.

The rich Saar Basin lies just opposite Forbach, in the path of the French advance.

Dispatches have reported German civilians are leaving towns in the Moselle and the Saar River regions, including Saarbrucken, important river city of 130,000. The Saar region was returned to Germany in the plebiscite of January, 1935.

The French staff communiques said the Germans are placing land mines before the French in order to check their advance.

French artillery continued to pound German forts on the other side of the river along the right side of the Maginot inverted "V."

Evidently the French are proceeding cautiously in this fortress war, because they are moving always against unlocated, scattered pill boxes in no man's land between the Maginot and the Siegfried Lines.

With the British fleet harrying the Kiel Canal area and both nations apparently fully ready for a long war, French leaders emphasized" Hitlerism must be destroyed" no matter what Poland's fate is in the East.

An army communique also added the information that "on the sea our patrol forces are showing very great activity. Co-operation with the British naval forces is closely assured, with a view to defending sea communications."

The infantry patrols were supported by tanks and armored cars, and the mechanized forces were meeting their first real tests as they ran into the blasted area which had been mined by the Germans to cover their retreat.

Concerning Italy's neutrality, which he characterized as one of reserved expectancy, the diplomatic correspondent of Le Journal said it could only be temporary, explaining:

"Germany makes no mystery of her intentions. She pretends that if Poland can be crushed quickly the general conflict could be stopped and the new frontiers of Germany re-established on a 1918 basis.

"Such a proposition cannot be entertained in any way by Britain or France. Now that war has begun it will be pushed right to the limits. That's why the position of reserve adopted by Italy can only be temporary."

Source of Supplies.

He intimated that supplies from Russia, Rumania and Yugoslavia for Germany are secure. Marshal Goering spoke in the Rhein Metall-Borsig munitions factory in Tegel, a Berlin suburb. His speech was broadcast throughout the nation.

"Only America remains for Britain," he said, "but we can get on without the United States—as a source of raw supplies.

"If you do not believe we have raw materials," he said, you must agree that the Russians do have them."

Goering Jeers at England As Arch-enemy of Germany

Marshal Says That British Effort to Capture Liner Bremen Misfired — Polish Debacle in Few Days Seen.

BERLIN, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Britain cannot defeat Germany either by military or economic weapons, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering assured the German people today. He declared that "we can hope" the conquest of Poland will be completed "fourteen days after the beginning of the fight"—by September 14.

"That is what happens once the German sword has been unsheathed," he continued. "Once drawn, it destroys the enemy."

American Aid Forecast.

While Marshal Goering was speaking a voice in his audience of Berlin munitions workers shouted:

"What about the Americans?"

Marshal Goering answered:

"They will be along later."

He hastened to add that America was all that Britain had left, but that Germany does not need the United States—as a source of supplies.

Speaking with great disdain of Britain and Britons, the Nazi aviation and economic chief scouted the British theory that Germany can be worn down and told an attentive nation that "in the north and east we cannot be blockaded." He jeered at British efforts to capture the liner Bremen, saying that these had misfired.

Calls Chamberlain Methuselah.

The Germans and Russians are not going to "be so silly as to smash each others heads for Britain."

Neither Rumania or Yugoslavia intend to "get smashed for Britain's sake."

The No. 2 Nazi man spoke slightingly of Britain's seventy-year-old Prime Minister Chamberlain, comparing him with Methuselah. He revealed that the German eastern army is composed of seventy divisions.

Marshal Goering again held out his hand to France, repeating Hitler's many time expressed statement that "Germany wants nothing from France." He disputed the theory that a long war is weakening to a nation, asserting "we will emerge much stronger," he added "if necessary, we shall walk about in bathing trunks."

British Will to Fight.

With Poland cleaned up and her riches exploited for the Reich, the entire Nazi force can be concentrated on the western front, Marshal Goering said. He said that he doubted whether "Britain really wants to fight."

"I felt strongly the desire to speak to you at this moment when I may discuss the tremendous events stirring us all." he said. "I purposely selected this factory. Between you (his immediate audience of workers) there stand forth those gigantic cannon barrels which are striking terror to the enemy.

"Chancellor Hitler asked nothing more than that a German city which didn't even belong to the opponent (Danzig) be returned and that a road to the east be guaranteed to Germany."—Hitler's demand for a passage across the Polish Corridor to East Prussia.

Fun Poked at Poles.

Marshal Goering asserted that it was "simply inconceivable" that these were not granted.

"Germany was even ready to renounce stations wherein Germans were living," he said. "Yet, the Fuehrer offered this because, as he said, he alone could make such an offer. Yet the Polish Government declined. This is a complete riddle."

The Nazi marshal made fun of the Poles as a nation pretending to be a big Power. He compared the country to inflated rubber figures at a carnival.

"But it was not Poland alone that offered resistance," he declared. "Behind it rose the shadow of a country which ever puts itself in the way of Germany"—(Britain).

Jeers for England.

The jeers of the audience greeted this reference to England.

"We violated no rights of Britain," he said. "We recognized her rights on the five seas. They should have had the decency to tell Poland 'Germany is right—you must fulfill her wish.'

"A country which was built up on force dares speak of moral principles. There has been too much lying in world history, but what we experienced now beats everything we've known.

"It is said they are not fighting Germans, but the Nazi regime, but when the shooting starts, it is Germans who are hit. We know this old trick. The British are sitting on their treasures and won't let anybody else have them. They talk about morals. That, too, after they swallowed many peoples."

Three-front Fight.

Marshal Goering told the munitions workers that they were fighting on three fronts, "military, economic and domestic."

"As regards the military front," he asserted, "only near Luxemburg is there an unprotected 200-kilometer section. On sea, the German coast is so protected that Britain—this she knows—cannot approach, for not only is danger lurking below the sea, but, also, in the air and this is very uncomfortable for her.

"Britain, with her powerful fleet, rules the seas, but the Baltic Sea is closed to her. The German fleet is master there.

"There is the question of a blockade in the west. Undoubtedly Britain will be able to prevent any German ships from reaching our harbors, but, thank God, the greater part of the German fleet is already in German harbors. Britain's attempt to capture the Bremen missed fire.

Polish Debacle Forecast.

"Now what about the front in Poland? I speak in the name of all of you when I say German arms on land and in the air have achieved what has been considered unbelievable.

"We can hope that fourteen days after the beginning of this fight (in Poland) that it will practically be ended. The last cleansing will have been accomplished in less than four weeks. That is what happens once the German sword has been unsheathed. Once it is drawn, it destroys the enemy.

"The last news I received was that Radom had been captured and that the Polish Army was throwing away its guns and surrendering to us."

Long applause followed this.

"The enemy is now encircled on all sides," Marshal Goering continued. "There has been no such Tannenberg in history (a reference to the German victory over Russia in 1914.) Only a few days can elapse before the last remnants of the Polish Army will be in German hands."

Advance Surprised Him.

"Our seventy divisions now in the east can be thrown on the west (against France and England) and certainly our position will not be weaker. The Briton thought he could attack on the northwest. He has learned his lesson. If it is claimed that German battleships were struck, I can tell you only one ship was damaged, namely, by a crashing enemy plane.

"In eight days to go as far as we did (in Poland) was not considered possible by anybody, not even ourselves. Our divisions marched as humans never marched before. Proudly, I can say, above all, this was due to one weapon—that is our air force. Whenever it appeared the enemy was defeated.

"With the defeat of the Poles, the threat to Germany's security on two fronts ceases. That was our danger in the past, but now, if the enemy attacks us, we must fight on one front only.

Economic Self-Sufficiency.

"I think the Britons know this. That is why their desire to fight does not seem to be too great. I do not know whether they want to fight. If they should be mad enough to attack our western line, streams of blood would flow. I do not know what they could do with their ships. The Britons know fully well we are superior to them in defense.

"Ah, say the Britons, but if we don't fight them (the Germans) militarily it does not matter; we can break Germany down economically. They have said that for a long time, but when I started a four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency, I did not do it for my pleasure, nor to place burdens on you, but, rather, to create a weapon that is unbeatable. Germany is today the best-equipped State in the world.

"No power on earth has such a munitions industry. None has as good skilled workers. None has such intelligent workers. We knew we had no gasoline, so we created our own factories for manufacture of synthetic products. Three things are necessary: raw materials, plants and workers. We have three in reserve."

Partial Text of Speech.

The following is a partial text of Marshal Goering's speech:

"The enemy may have zinc, lead and copper, but we have men who produce more than our enemies, so we enter the fight forced upon us with confidence. From now on the utmost will be done that has ever been done. What we have done hitherto economically is child's play with what is to happen later. Every plant will be converted to the needs of the nation.

"It is claimed that we lack materials. Yes, there are some we lack, but we have coal and iron, two fundamental raw materials. In the realm of the iron industry, things occurred which hitherto were unbelievable.

Coal for Barter.

"If Germany today were to halt coal production, various other countries would have to cease production, for while Britain is unable to export coal, we not only can supply our own needs but export coal in sufficient quantities to enable us to get other essential raw materials in return. At this psychological moment we got coal from Poland and we fell heir to fat regions which Poles took from the Czechs.

"We don't know as yet what fine things we've inherited from Poles. Once we begin exploiting, Polish figures will mean nothing. We've been strengthened enormously by our conquest thus far.

"You must believe me if I tell you the thesis of a long war weakening a nation is not true. With every year we will grow stronger. Now, when we remove all that is unnecessary, it is self-evident that we will emerge much stronger. In 1918, too, we were much stronger industrially than 1914.

Ersatz Not So Good.

"If hitherto we produced hundreds of airplanes daily, we will produce many more hereafter. That I promise, not only the German people, but also, especially, the British. I come to 'Ersatz.' I do not deny that many things will not be as good as originally.

"Suit clothes made from cellulose manufactured of potatoes may not be the best, but is that decisive? No, if necessary we will walk about in bathing trunks.

"We will restrict our wants. We will have but one thought, namely that you will not distate another Versailles to us, my dear Britons.

"Now, there is another matter—blockade — wherewith they so harmed us in the world war. In the world war the blockade was complete. That was uncomfortable.

"Then we were not prepared for that. Now we are, but how does a blockade today look? It's damned thin.

"In the north and east we cannot be blockaded. We have just concluded deals whereby we will get things. If you do not believe we have raw materials you must agree the Russians do have them.

"We will have our Nazism and the Russians their Bolshevism, but we are both peoples who want peace and we are not going to be so silly as to smash each others' heads for Britain.

Favorable in Southeast.

In the southeast, our position, too, is favorable. Britain forgot that the world since the world war has become favorable. The Rumanians, as the Yugoslavs, remain neutral and do not intend to get smashed for Britain's sake. Besides, they know they would be destroyed if they dared oppose Germany. Then, where is the British blockade?

"Only America remains for Britain, but look at our trade figures. We can get along without America. Just consider our position during world war and now. The only thing that is like 1914 is the British attitude. Otherwise, we are on an entirely different position.

"We want nothing from the French. We guaranteed their frontiers for all times. If they insist on bleeding for Britain, it is their business, but we do not attack. Added here [illegible] fact that neutrality [illegible] by most nations. Britain acknowledged this, but whether she will keep her promise, we do not know. Already, they have unloaded bombs in the wrong place.

Mobilized Nation.

"Today, the entire nation, from sixteen years on, is mobilized—no matter where he stands, everybody is in the service of the Reich. Here is a special word to women. They are quiet sufferers. We know the German frau will bear the heaviest burden of war, but we know she is aware of what is at stake.

"If leaflets are being thrown down in good German, it's the Bruenings, the Treviranuses, the Jews and other scoundrels who are now outside Germany and who say Hitler must disappear. Whoever commits a sin against the idea of a common front must be broken. You can understand how happy I am to lead the domestic front, besides putting my air force at the disposal of the nation.

"The food situation is very good. We have had a bumper crop, so we have plenty of grain. There really needs to be no restriction, but I am the father who looks ahead for years. So I am restricting from the first moment.

"Shopkeepers must remember they are now public servants. If a woman comes, they must not let her stand for a whole hour. Nobody lives for himself any longer. Automobilists should drive small cars, not large, and, best of all, should not drive at all.

"I do not consider it necessary to evacuate Berlin. I understand, of course, why the British evacuate London, but if they knew how many cannon I have here, they would understand why I do not evacuate the German capital. Along the western front it was necessary to evacuate some places.

"An iron law stands above us all: It is a crime to draw private gain from the sacrifice of war. There must be no profiteering. If all must sacrifice, nobody may profit therefrom. The Jew today cannot profiteer—he is in a concentration camp.

Truth for People.

"I am always going to tell the truth to the people. The people must enjoy victories as well as defeats. The people deserve confidence. I may hurt you, but I will never cheat you. The greatest thing the Fuehrer did was to unite the entire people. That is something wonderful and I must now test this unity.

"If I ordered that foreign radio stations must not be listened to, it was not because I feared foreign propaganda, but because it is dishonorable at this time to listen to the vile rattle of lies of foreign stations.

"I am surprised at the stupidity of foreign propaganda. To think these laughable flyleaves might have any effect! So long as our Fuehrer is with us and our people united—what do they think they can do with propaganda? Chamberlain may know something about umbrellas, but he knows nothing about German propaganda. What is said about our war aims—Ukraine, Hungary, Rumania—is laughable. We did not start out to conquer Poland.

Will for Peace.

"We simply want our old frontiers and assurance that our Germans in Poland will not be maltreated. We built the industrial regions of Poland. We have a right to them. We did not demand them originally, but Poland would not listen. Chamberlain should be ashamed himself for standing by the Poles.

"The will for peace is great in German people, especially in the soul of our Fuehrer. I know how difficult it was for him to ask the nation to make the supreme sacrifice. We went the limit in concessions.

"We did not want war and do not want it now. We want nothing of the French. If Daladier will not believe this, that is his affair. It is the English Government which incites people. We know England will fight till the last Frenchman—remember that, you Frenchmen!

"Do not confuse our peace offers with weakness. We often refrained from air attacks because we didn't want civilians to suffer. I can proudly say that the Polish enemy air force no longer exists. Not a single bomb struck Germany. Where is the proud Polish air force? Should any of our open towns be bombed, we will wreak vengeance immediately.

"I do not underestimate the bravery of the English and French flyers, but ours are better. Besides, they fight not to defend their country or empire but to remove the Nazi regime while we defend ourselves."

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY DECLARING ITS COLUMNS WERE AT WARSAW'S GATES AND THE POLISH TROOPS WERE RETREATING EAST OF THE VISTULA, HITLER INDICATED THAT ALTHOUGH STILL LARGER PARTS OF POLAND SOON WILL BE IN HIS HANDS HE INTENDS TO ANNEX NO MORE
POLISH TERRITORY THAN IN THE OLD GERMAN EMPIRE.

REESTABLISHMENT OF THE FRONTIER BROUGHT NOT ONLY DANZIG AND POMORZE (THE POLISH CORRIDOR), BACK INTO THE REICH BUT ALSO UPPER SILESIA AND PARTS OF EAST AND WEST
PRUSSIA WHICH WERE ASSIGNED POLAND IN THE

SEP 1 1939

Hitler Draws Own Line on Map

Re-establishes 1914 Frontier in East

LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, SEPT. 9—(AP)—GERMANY'S 1914 EASTERN FRONTIER WAS REESTABLISHED TODAY BY ADOLF HITLER IN A DECREE ISSUED WHILE FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN WILHELM GOERING WAS ASSURING GERMANS THAT BRITAIN COULD NOT DEFEAT THEM EITHER BY MILITARY OR ECONOMIC MEANS.

30.24-3191

30.24 3191

WORLD WAR SETTLEMENT.

HITLER'S DEGREE REESTABLISHED CIVIL AUTHORITY IN THIS TERRITORY, EXCEPT FOR A SMALL STRETCH IN SILESIA, SUPERSEDING THE MILITARY WHO CONQUERED IT AFTER THE GERMAN INVASION STARTED SEPT. 1.

THE 1914 FRONTIER RAN WESTWARD FROM EAST PRUSSIA TO TORUN, ABOUT 125 MILES NORTHWEST OF WARSAW, AND THEN TURNED SOUTHWARD TO CZESTOCHOWA AND INTO UPPER SILESIA.

A COMMUNIQUE DECLARED THAT "THANKS TO THE UNINTERRUPTED ADVANCE OF GERMAN TROOPS IN THE EASTERN THEATER OF WAR, GERMANY'S EASTERN FRONTIER HAS BEEN RENDERED SECURE FOR ALL TIME.

"THE SUPREME COMMAND THEREFORE HAS REPORTED TO THE FUEHRER THAT THE NECESSITY FOR THE MILITARY TO EXERCISE EXECUTIVE POWERS WITHIN THE GERMAN REICH FRONTIERS IN THE EAST NO LONGER EXISTS."

FIELD MARSHAL GOERING, SPEAKING TO MUNITIONS WORKERS AT TEGEL, A BERLIN SUBURB, IN AA SPEECH THAT WAS BROADCAST TO THE NATION, ASSURED GERMANS THAT "IN THE NORTH AND EAST WE CANNOT BE BLOCKADED" AND INTIMATED SOVIET RUSSIA WAS READY TO SUPPLY THE REICH WITH NEEDED RAW MATERIALS.

HE SAID YOGOSLAVIA AND RUMANIA ALSO WERE KEEPING THEIR FRONTIERS OPEN FOR GERMANY, AND DECLARED BRITAIN COULD NOT DEFEAT GERMANY EITHER BY MILITARY OR ECONOMIC MEANS.

THE HIGH COMMAND ISSUED TWO COMMUNIQUES BUT NOTHING WAS SAID CONCERNING PROGRESS IN ENTERING WARSAW. PREVIOUSLY THE ARMY HAD SAID ARMORED CARS HAD FORCED THEIR WAY INTO THE POLISH CAPITAL LAST NIGHT.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY THAT THREE OBSERVATION PLANES HAD BEEN SHOT DOWN BY GERMANS WHILE SCOUTING ALONG THE WESTERN FRONT. ONE BRITISH PLANE WAS REPORTED SHOT DOWN IN THE SAME REGION.

A FOURTH FRENCH CRAFT WAS SAID TO HAVE LANDED AT A GERMAN AIRFIELD AND ITS THREE OCCUPANTS SEIZED.

SEP 10 1939

The total area of these districts is 17,810 square miles and the normal population about 3,854,000.)

SEP 10 1939

Four Columns Reported Advancing

The Supreme High Command announced again that German troops had entered Warsaw from the south (an earlier communique said from the southwest); had reached the Vistula river, a major Polish defense line, at four points and had gained a footing east of the river at Sandomierz.

Sandomierz, center of the Polish munitions industry, is 125 air-line miles south of Warsaw. The four columns have reached the river between this city and the capital, the announcement said.

The communique said Lodz, eighty miles southeast of Warsaw, would be occupied today by units pressing into the city from the east while the great bulk of troops fighting there are following the enemy south of the Bzura river by passing the city on both sides as the Polish troops retreat fighting.

Zwolen and Radom, sixty and forty miles, respectively, west of Lublin, were taken, the communique said, by the armies which then continued toward Lublin, to which the Polish Government fled from Warsaw early in the week.

Sirens Wail In Berlin

An unexpected air-raid alarm, the first of the war, aroused Berlin before dawn today while the capital waited expectantly for final word that Warsaw had fallen.

Screaming sirens awoke most of Berlin's 4,000,000 inhabitants at 3.38 A. M. A second alarm was sounded less than an hour later.

The city's huge air-defense machinery went into instant action. Thousands of artillerymen manned anti-aircraft guns and many fighting planes warmed up for take-offs from dozens of secret hideouts.

Reports English Flyers Captured

DNB, official German news agency, issued the following statement at noon today, evidently in explanation of early morning air-raid alarms here:

The approach of enemy planes from a northwesterly direction was reported over northwestern Germany in the coast region. The enemy encountered our anti-aircraft artillery.

Enemy planes turned off in a southeasterly direction and started a return flight over the Netherlands. No bombs were dropped.

Along the Netherlands border German night pursuit planes took off to ward off enemy planes. One English bombing plane crashed. The crew of five jumped out with parachutes and was taken.

The communique did not say whether the flyers reported captured were taken by German or Netherlands forces.

Berlin was jubilant over the Supreme High Command's announcement that a German vanguard of armored cars had forced entry into the Polish capital.

Confident Of Victo

SEP 10 1939

But there also were vague reports of hard fighting for possession of the city and confusing broadcasts which indicated that the Germans were in possession of some Warsaw radio stations while Poles still held others.

There was confidence throughout Germany, nevertheless, that the fall of Warsaw within a few hours was inevitable.

With their army campaign apparently overrunning Poland, many Germans expected the eastern campaign to turn quickly into a real blitzkrieg, or lightning war, and reach a climax even faster than Nazi strategists had calculated.

Large sections of Poland, it was acknowledged, still are unoccupied, but a spearhead was being driven at Warsaw to effect a rapid demoralization and, if possible, swift Polish surrender.

DNB reported that German troops had captured Rzeszon and were heading for Jaroslaw, in the north Carpathian Mountains.

Rzeszow, the railhead between Krakow and Lwow, has a population of 28,000.

In the south, a high army command communique said the Wisloka river was crossed and Dembica reached. At Sagmo, it said, a crossing of the Dunajec river was forced, and the eastern bank of the Vistula was reached near Sandomierz.

SEP 10 1939

It was indicated that Lodz, between Berlin and Warsaw, still was unoccupied. But Germans said the advance on Warsaw was so well organized that there was no danger of a successful flank attack on the long Nazi lines. They said such spots as Lodz could be wiped up later with relatively little trouble.

Bewildered About Western Front

The average German still was in the dark on what was happening in the west and there was growing bewilderment over what turn the war there would take next.

There were accounts of a few British freighters sunk and some scattering of pamphlets from the air by the British. But there were no reports of serious developments.

For this city's inhabitants, the war's first alarm was a startling experience.

Even tiniest lights were extinguished. Police cars sped through streets. Air-raid supervisors in every block routed out sleepers in night clothes.

Parents bundled up children. Within a few minutes the whole population, except for those in defense services, was in fairly secure shelter.

There was disorder in some buildings where occupants forgot to take their gas masks to cellars. Many were sent back for them. Others made emergency masks by dipping cloths into water.

SEP 10 1939

Photographs Of "Massacres" Displayed

Mothers hustled to cellars with vacuum bottles filled with hot milk and packages of food. Bathtubs were filled and buckets of water stood by virtually every stairway. Police cleared the streets.

The nation was aroused by reports of massacres—of which it was shown photographs—of German nationals in Pomorze (the Polish Corridor).

DNB said most of these were the work of snipers, but it charged that the Polish Army was involved in some cases.

German vengeance was swift in the case of captured snipers.

"They were promptly rendered harmless," said DNB.

Reports from the eastern front said bridges over the Vistula river south of Warsaw had been destroyed, or so damaged that retreat was obstructed.

Industrial Towns Claimed

They said the seats of key industries south of the Polish capital were being occupied rapidly, these including centers of munitions and airplane manufacturing. The reports also said Poland's aviation industry was virtually prostrated.

Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, supreme commander of the German army, arrived on the northern front in Poland yesterday and [illegible] several units for their accomplishments.

German propaganda, which was being given world-wide circulation in all languages, attacked alleged "lies about Germany."

SEP 10 1939

Athenia A Sore Spot

Foremost remained the British charge that a German submarine had torpedoed the British liner Athenia, sunk last Sunday night off the Scottish coast.

Other alleged lies included reports of German bombardments of Polish unfortified cities, attacks on the Polish Red Cross, poisoning of streams, scattering of poisoned candy for Polish children, use of gas and violation of Lithuanian neutrality.

Screaming sirens roused most of Berlin's 4,000,000 inhabitants from beds at 3:38 A. M. (9:38 P. M., New York time, last night). Second alarm was sounded less than an hour later.

The city's huge air defense machinery went into instant action. Thousands of artillerymen manned anti-aircraft guns, and many fighting planes warmed up for take-offs from dozens of secret hideouts.

But no hostile planes appeared in the clear, starlit sky, and the startled population was notified later by an "all clear" signal it could go back to bed.

German military authorities refused to explain the reason for the alarm and the Propaganda Minister offered no official information.

In well-informed quarters, however, the warning was associated with the battle for Warsaw.

The presumption was that German military forces in Poland, alarmed by the possibility that some suicide squad of Polish aviators had broken away to make a desperate attack on Berlin, had transmitted the alarm to the German capital.

No anti-aircraft artillery was heard, and the great battery of searchlights near the Templehof Airdrome and other vital spots remained dark.

One official said there were no test alarms planned now.

"The psychological effect would be too drastic," he sad. "It is reasonabel to suppose there was substantial basis for the alarm."

Goering Tells France Nazis Want Nothing

Only America Urges by Britain, He Says, and 'We Don't Need U.S. Goods'

Reich Plans to Keep All Polish Industry

'14 Frontiers Restored, One Bureau Proclaims; Fight in West Admitted

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 9—Nine days of war have brought such surprising victories to German arms that Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, addressing munitions workers today—in reality, talking to the world—felt strong enough to hold out a peace offer to France.

He declared "we want nothing from France," and added that, "if they insist on bleeding for Britain, it is their business." He asserted confidently that Great Britain could not defeat Germany economically or militarily. "Only America remains for Britain," he said, "but we can get on without the United States as a source of raw mater

Makes No Claim To Warsaw

Unofficial reports said beleaguered Warsaw had not fallen before the Nazi steam roller tonight and official German dispatches did not elaborate on a statement yesterday afternoon that armored cars had entered Warsaw. No claim was made that Nazi troops now occupy the city.

The supreme high command merely announced that troops had entered Warsaw; reached the Vistula river, an important Polish defense line at four points and had gained a foothold on the V[illegible] east bank at Sandomierz.

Sandomierz, center of the Polish munitions industry, is about 125 miles south of Warsaw.

Predicts Fall Of Lodz

Lodz, the communique said, would fall today although the bulk of troops was passing on either side of the city following the retreating Poles south of the Bzura river.

Zwolen and Radom, 60 and 40 miles, respectively, west of Lublin, were reported taken by German troops pushing toward Lublin, to which the Polish Government moved from Warsaw several days ago.

Goering said in view of German victories in Poland "it is beyond discussion that we will ever return the industrial region." Observers said this meant that whatever may happen to Poland later as a result of bargaining, Germany will claim Silesia, Pomorze, Pomerellen and Danzig.

This is so much a part of German official consciousness that the Ministry in Wilhelmstrasse officially interpreted a decree by Chancellor Hitler to mean that the Fuhrer was reestablishing Germany's eastern frontiers as they stood in 1914, retaking from Poland those areas which the Treaty of Versailles took from Germany and allotted to the new Polish state.

The decree set up civilian administration in areas formerly under military rule.

An official announcement tonight said that German troops which penetrated Warsaw Friday and Saturday still were fighting within the city limits.

Fight Continued At Night

In Galicia, along the entire front between the Beskid Mountains and the Vistula river, fighting continued into the night with [illegible] pursuing the Poles toward the river San, the announcement said.

Here, after a hard battle, the Germans reported that they had won the Dukla and Krosno areas and that farther north speedy troops had crossed the river Wisloca at Rzeszow and reached Kolbuszowa. This column was marching toward Lwow.

In the area west of the rivers Vistula and Pilica, heavy battles were in progress east of Radom, which already is a German possession, according to the Berlin announcement. The Germans reported their advance in the drive on Lublin was endangering the retreat of the Poles across the Vistula.

Reports Losses Are Few

The high command announced that despite the fact there has been very heavy fighting at times, the German losses in the Polish campaign continue to be small.

For the first six days of battle casualties for all troops of the eastern army averaged nine dead and forty wounded for each 10,000 men, it was stated.

Goering said in his speech of almost two hours that nobody even in Germany had expected such a rapid advance of the German war machine. Officials explained that the army is using the pincers-like encircling tactics at Warsaw that have proved successful in other sections.

May Not Storm Lodz

There is an obvious desire to avoid damage to the large cities and industrial centers. By cutting off Warsaw from the rest of Poland, officials said they hoped the capital would surrender without a struggle.

Similarly Lodz was reported encircled and it was explained authoritatively that there were so many Germans in Lodz that the army hopes storming it may be avoided.

Most encouraging from the German point of view is that many of the industrial points [illegible] Nazi forces in Silesia with its coal, zinc, lead and advanced chemical industry is considered a rich find.

Equally important is the reported capture of the so-called "munitions triangle," centering about Sandomierz. Germans assert the Poles are now completely cut off from all necessities of war and such military forces as remain can do nothing but exhaust whatever they now have in the way of munitions and supplies.

Radio Part Of Strategy

In its attempt to hasten the rout of Polish forces and undermine the civilian morale, the German war machine has invoked the aid of radio in an unusual manner, tuning in on exactly the same wave length as one of two Warsaw broadcasting stations which seems to have been silenced by German planes.

The German station from time to time gives broadcasts in Polish purporting to come from Warsaw. People are told their Government drew them into a hopeless fight. Broadcasts in the Polish language have been made over regular German stations throughout the week.

Irked By British Blockade

While professing amusement at British leaflets, German publicists speak with the greatest indignation of Britain's declaration of her intention to seize contraband on the seas. The afternoon press recalled the blockade of the British [illegible] during the World War and declared the British are up to their old tricks of making war on defenseless women and children whom they are trying to starve. This time, however, they assert that Germany is immune to a blockade.

In his speech, Goering said a blockade would be ineffective because Russia has plenty of raw materials and will supply them. Rumania, Yugoslavia and Hungary are neutral, hence will have no [illegible] with necessities.

Goering added that Poland is rich in ores and agricultural products and with German efficiency, production in the occupied areas will be stepped up enormously.

Report From Western Front

The first official intimation of war activity on the western front came today with the announcement that five French planes had been shot down and one forced to land at a German airport where the crew of three officers was arrested.

In addition, officials admitted, "occasional little exchanges" are taking place along the Siegfried-Maginot lines, but it was asserted that no major action had taken place.

That fortifications work on the Siegfried line [illegible] is continuing was indicated in a telegram sent Goering on completion of his speech by Labor Leader Robert Ley. Ley stated he heard the speech "amidst workers on the western fortifications."

In the speech Goering told Germany that, although there were plenty of food reserves, supreme sucrifices must be made [illegible] to prevent waste. Almost coincident with his [illegible] press releases indicating further restrictive measures.

Beer Subject to War Tax

Throughout Berlin, for instance, all restaurants and saloons must close at 1 a. m. Hitherto they were permitted to remain open until 3 a. m. A war tax on beer of 4 to 5.5 cents a liter (about a quart) was decreed.

As a further war measure, the number of girls in camps for the nation's labor service was doubled to 100,000. In a special order of the day by Konstantin Hierl, the Reich's Labor Service leader, the girls were admonished to "help German mothers, especially those farmers' wives who are doubly engaged through the drafting of their husbands."

Other decrees announced tonight strictly regulated the distribution of coal, ordered confiscation in favor of the state of all unroasted coffee now in wholesale and retail stores and provided a series of restrictions on the use of metals in building construction.

The first high army command communique issued today said:

"The Poles again are retreating on all fronts.

"The first German troops have entered Warsaw from the southwest. In the south, the Wisloka River was crossed and Debica reached. At Zabno the crossing of the Dunajec River was forced. The eastern embankment of the Weichsel (Vistula) River was reached near Sandomierz.

"Further occupation of the Posen (Nozman) Province is continuing without the enemy's resistance. The Polish air force again is hardly in action. On the western front a hostile reconnoitering plane was shot down near Karlsruhe."

Bremen Safe, Goering Says

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Field Marshal Goering declared today that "Britain's attempt" to capture the German liner Bremen "missed fire," but he added no details to clarify the mystery surrounding the $20,000,000 vessel.

The Bremen [illegible] New York without [illegible] on the evening of Aug. 30.

Nothing had been heard of the ship until Wednesday, when German officials announced its arrival at an unidentified neutral port.

Goering's U.S. Reference Sets Capital Wondering

Berlin Says Remarks Speech Need No Interpretation

BERLIN, Sept. 9 (AP).—A fleeting reference to the United States by Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering had the capital guessing tonight regarding its significance.

The official text of Goering's speech contained no references to the United States.

In his address to munitions workers, the marshal was explaining it was impossible to blockade Germany because Russia was ready to supply the Reich while northern and southeastern countries remain neutral.

"What about America?" shouted one of the workers listening to Goering's speech in a factory at Tegel, near Berlin.

"Die werden kommen!" ("They'll be along later") shot back Goering, half laughingly.

Pressed for interpretation, both Foreign Office and Propaganda Ministry officials responded, "it is not for us to interpret as plain a speech as that of the marshal."

Besides, they added, they would have to study the official text carefully.

Goering quickly followed up his puzzling utterance with the assertion that Britain had only the United States left while Germany didn't need America.

"Only America remains for Britain," he said. "But look at our trade figures. We can get along without America. Just consider our position during the World War and now. The only thing that is like 1914 is the British attitude. Otherwise we are in an entirely different position."

FALL OF HITLER DECLARED SOLE KEY TO PEACE

British Press Unanimously Declares Poland Must Be Restored.

PROPAGANDA RAID PLANNED

Energetic Steps Promised to End Submarine Warfare by Germany.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The British press discussed possibilities of a German peace proposal today with unusual unanimity and declared the British-French war on Germany "will cease only with the overthrow of Hitler and the restitution of all Polish lands and rights."

"Nazi leaders are basing their policy and indeed their war strategy, on the belief that if they can overrun Poland they may conclude the conflict by inviting us to accept that situation and promising once again—how perjured already they are—that they will make no further acts of aggression," the Daily Mail said.

It added: "The immense momentum of the forces we are gathering will not be stayed by any offer of peace which leaves Hitler in power and Poland in chains."

Meanwhile, Great Britain intensified her naval offensive and disclosed another aerial propaganda raid aimed at disrupting Germany's internal economic and political structure. At the same time, she continued to get troops ready to reenforce the steady French drive on Germany's western front.

To Halt German Supplies.

A communique of the Ministry of Information last night said that Great Britain would use her belligerent rights "to the full" to prevent war supplies from reaching Germany. Contraband bases have been established at Kirkwall, Weymouth, The Downs, Gibraltar and Haifa, Palestine, and all vessel bound for Germany were urged t call voluntarily at one of them fo examination.

"If they do so and it is established that they carry no contraband, they may be given a pass to facilitate their [illegible] journey," the communique said. "Vessels which do not call voluntarily will be liable to be diverted to a base in cases where adequate search at sea is not practicable. A proclamation specifying the list of goods to be treated as contraband was issued on September 4."

The communique said that al-

30.24 3193

though the name "blockade" is used often as a convenient way of describing economic warfare, "no blockade of Germany in the formal sense of that term has been declared."

The Government also announced that energetic steps are being taken to halt what the communique described as "Germany's ruthless submarine warfare."

The Ministry of Information said Germany obviously had planned her submarine campaign long before war began and asserted that submarine commanders apparently had been ordered to sink merchant men on sight without warning "in direct contravention of the rules of submarine warfare."

It predicted "effects of the German submarine campaign will, however, decline rapidly . . . soon as a full convoy system is introduced and German submarines at present on the high seas run out of supplies."

Friendly to France.

In speaking of possibilities of a German peace proposal, the Mail captioned its editorial: "Delusions."

The News Chronicle caption was "The Great Delusion," and the Manchester Guardian wrote under the heading, "Hitler's Plan."

All took their cue from Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement on September 3, the day war was declared, that "I trust I may live to see the day when Hitlerism has been destroyed."

The News Chronicle description of Hitler strategy said the Fuehrer "has deliberately refrained from provocative bombing operations in the west, and the tone of his press is distinctly friendly to France; then anything to stop war on terms which leave him in possession of his prize (Poland)."

The Manchester Guardian declared any German attempt to dictate peace terms once Poland has been conquered would fail.

"Everybody knows," it said, that the Fuehrer's plan of peace would mean a short respite and then a new demand, a new crisis and a new war."

Short War Expectation.

The editorial said Hitler still holds hope of obtaining his objective "without more than a few weeks of war," and that his terms would be "superficially generous." It continued:

"Has not Hitler paid homage to Pilsudski and praised the gallantry of a Polish garrison? Why not a conference — a conference that would start by accepting the facts? Unfortunately for his prospects of success, he is a man with a past.

"The plan that is in Hitler's mind and in other minds though any statesman should be able to see through it, has a superficial attraction which might mislead a good many people.

"No doubt those who put it forward have some hope of embarrassing the allied governments and thus of weakening their effort if they do not secure their main object. To understand its full importance we must remember that all Europe is watching an encounter between Hitler, whose neighbors live in mortal fear of his intentions, and the allied governments, who pledged their help to Poland.

Effect on Small Nations.

"What Hitler hopes to do is to persuade Europe that the Allies will not or cannot help those whom they promise to help.

"How will Rumania [illegible]

Greece, Bulgaria and all the other States who are dreading to find themselves in the German orbit hope to stand out against Hitler if they find that the strong governments of the West have not the will or the resolution to check his aggressions even in cases where their pledges have been given?

"Its [Britain's] decision to declare war was taken from a grim and imperative sense of obligation."

British Expect War Will Last Three Years

Cabinet Policy Seen As Blunt Answer To Goering Speech

By [illegible]

London, Sept. 9 (AP) — The British Government announced today it would base its policy on the assumption that the war would last at least three years. The Ministry of Information, which made the announcement, said the decision was agreed upon at a meeting of the war cabinet.

The war cabinet is "confident that this significant decision will meet with the whole-hearted support of the British people and will be welcomed by our allies and friends," the Ministry said.

Urgent instructions have been issued to all government departments to prepare plans for the future on this basis, it was announced.

The Ministry of Supply is to take immediate steps to insure that productive capacity for all kinds of munitions is increased "on the scale required to meet every possible demand."

ANSWER TO GOERING

Conforming arrangements are being made by the admiralty and the air ministry.

The Cabinet's decision was regarded as a blunt reply to the peace feelers put out today by Germany's Field Marshall Hermann Wilhelm Goering in a broacast speech to German munitions workers.

The decision was interpreted as emphasizing the Government's determination to achieve victory over "Hitlerism" regardless of how long it takes.

The communique said that "the measures, for which preparation has already been made, are being brought fully into active operation."

It continued:

"In furtherance of the expanded defense programs that are already operating, the ministry of supply will forthwith take the necessary steps to insure that productive capacity for munitions of all kinds is increased on the scale required to meet every possible demand.

"Corresponding arrangements are being made by the admiralty and the air ministry.

"In the great national effort which is implicit in the war Cabinet decision, the civil needs of the country will be borne in mind, as well as the importance of maintaining the export trade.

"The war Cabinet is confident that this significant decision will meet with the whole-hearted support of the British people and will be welcomed by our allies and friends."

'REALISTIC POLICY'

The British Press Association commenting on the Cabinet's long-range policy, said:

"The pronouncement cannot be otherwise interpreted than an act of rigid realistic policy. It may be well that the estimate of three years—an estimate upon which all war preparations are now being based—is unduly pessimistic.

"Lessons have been learned from the Great War. One was that if a long-term view had been taken from the commencement of hostilities, the duration of the Great War might have been reduced by 18 months. As it was, the long view was ignored in spite of the warning of Lord Kitchener, and months had passed before the nation realized the scale and possible duration of hostilities."

CLAIM SEA SUPREMACY

In another communique the ministry of information declared that in the first week of the war Britain had established her supremacy on the high seas.

It announced that "the cutting off of Germany from overseas sources of war supply is now virtually complete except for the Baltic."

British sea communications, it added, proceeded "without serious interruptions."

At the same time Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in a message to former President Edouard Benes of Czcho-Slovakia — now a German protectorate—declared "we look forward, through the triumph of the principle for which we have taken up arms, to the relief of the Czech people from foriegn domination."

Goering's appeal to Chamberlain to lay down arms once German troops have conquered Poland was regarded here as the most significant part of his speech today.

The London newspapers carried Goerings speech in full or with generous quotations.

The Sunday Express captioned the speech: "Goering's peace 'try on'" and "attempt to bluff Britain and France into sparing Hitlerism."

Inform quarters here expressed the opinion that Goering exaggerated the successes of German arms so far in the invasion of Poland by overlooking the fact that no decisive blow has been dealt the Polish armies.

After citing the success of the British blockade of Germany, the Ministry of Information added by way of contrast that British sea communications were continuing "without serious interruptions." It said further that the task of sweeping all enemy shipping from the seas" would be continued.

WARSAW DEFIES NAZIS AT GATES AS BOMBS FALL

'We Will Fight to Death,' Is Broadcast Between Air Raid Alarms.

HITLER RECASTS FRONTIERS

Spokesman for Fuehrer Says They Are to Go Back to the Pre-1914 Status.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Warsaw radio announced at 6:30 o'clock tonight (1:30 P. M. New York time), that although the Polish capital is "under constant bombing, we will not yield!"

"We will hold out to the very last!" said the broadcast.

After broadcasting successive air raid warnings, with the wail of sirens outside plainly audible, the radio station appealed to all railway workers to report immediately to repair damaged tracks around the capital.

Refugees pouring into the city from the west were told to report at relief headquarters.

A chorus of mixed voices then sang: "We will all men and women, young and old, fight for Warsaw until death."

The radio station broadcast an air raid warning at 5 P. M. today (noon, New York time).

The announcer cried in Polish: "Warning for the city of Warsaw! Warning for the city of Warsaw!" Sirens sounded.

The alarm was interpreted as meaning that German planes still were bombing the Polish capital.

The Warsaw radio sounded an all clear signal at 5:13 P. M., but ten minutes later the same warning was repeated with screaming sirens.

Musical Interlude.

Between the alarms the station played phonograph records, presumably while a raid was in progress.

At 5:57 P. M. the third warning within an hour was broadcast from Warsaw. Inhabitants were told to divide themselves into three groups in case of fire: First, women and children to carry water; second, a group to extinguish flames with sand, and third, a group to remove inflammable material from the vicinity of the flames.

Rival broadcasters, both speaking on the Warsaw radio station wave length, let the outside world take its choice today whether the Polish capital was in Polish or German hands.

One, speaking Polish with a German accent, said Warsaw was being entered by German forces.

"The Germans," he said, "have taken over our wave length. Everyone in Warsaw is at his post."

[The German Supreme High Command announced in Berlin last night that fast-traveling Nazi armored cars had forced entry into Warsaw at 5:15 P. M. (12:15 P. M., New York time) yesterday.]

The purportedly German announcer warned all residents of Warsaw they faced punishment if found with weapons when the city finally falls. He ordered janitors to collect guns and store them in basements.

"Germans will hold all those responsible who have weapons in their possession when we enter," he said. "We don't wish to destroy you. In your own interest, listen to reason."

Says City Is Surrounded.

The German announcer told the populace its city was surrounded, all communications were broken, and that "stores and banks are closed and will remain closed."

On the other hand, the supposedly Polish broadcast said banks would open, reported a general order to the Army from the chief of staff commanding Polish soldiers to "defend the capital with all your strength" and issued instructions for resisting the German advance.

Poles Urged to Save City.

The Polish broadcaster stuck to his microphone throughout the night to exhort Warsaw citizens to lay down their lives in a last-ditch fight to save their city.

He spoke despite intermittent band music and static turned on by both stations to blur out the other.

"All citizens are admonished not to listen to persons who may accost them in the street or in air raid shelters telling them to leave Warsaw immediately," he warned.

"All citizens must remain in the capital, where they are more than ever needed. All those accosted by such persons must turn them over to the police. They will be executed on the spot."

He urged workmen to help repair railroad tracks and for villagers to open soup kitchens for soldiers "who badly need warm food." A woman speaker called on Girl Scouts, nurses and soldiers to "believe in ultimate victory."

Admittedly, however, Warsaw was suffering heavily under German air raids, and defense force facing a German Army advancing from the southwest were falling back under pressure.

A broadcast, which the announcer said came from Warsaw, reported shortly after 11 o'clock (6 P. M. New York time) last night that German warplanes were bombing the center of Warsaw steadily. He said bombs were raining on the theater square and principal streets.

An announcement forty minutes later said the Germans were bombing "purely non-military objectives in the central and most densely populated sector of town." This broadcast was in English.

Barricades Are Erected.

German planes were said then to be dumping loads of bombs on Vistula River bridges and in the city.

"Due to constant heavy air raids on bridges," the English speaker continued, "inhabitants have moved to the center of Warsaw.

"The entire populace, in full support of radio warnings, now is preparing a defense of the streets, erecting barricades of all sorts of objects and digging deep ditches in the hope they will catch enemy tanks.

"Street cars are running, shops are open and there is no food shortage. Crowds are listening to news loud speakers over stores undisturbed by the noise of planes overhead unless the warning is sounded."

The station identified as Warsaw's acknowledged that the "push of the German army is so terrific, Polish land forces have been obliged to yield in the direction of Kielce, Pitkrow and Tarnow, where they will take up new positions."

The three towns form an almost straight line from Kielce, 50 miles northeast of Krakow, southeast to Tarnow, near the Slocak frontier

Warsaw Radio Pledges Battle To the Last Man

Women Called to Take Up Arms as City Fights On, With Foe Closing In

By The Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Sept. 9.—A Warsaw radio broadcast described the Polish capital tonight as "drowned in the noise of roaring airplanes and the explosions of heavy bombs," but still resisting German attacks on the outskirts of the city. The an-

30.24-3193

30.24 3193

though the name "blockade" is used often as a convenient way of describing economic warfare, "no blockade of Germany in the formal sense of that term has been declared."

The Government also announced that energetic steps are being taken to halt what the communique described as "Germany's ruthless submarine warfare."

The Ministry of Information said Germany obviously had planned her submarine campaign long before war began and asserted that submarine commanders apparently had been ordered to sink merchant men on sight without warning "in direct contravention of the rules of submarine warfare."

It predicted "effects of the German submarine campaign will, however, decline rapidly as soon as a full convoy system is introduced and German submarines at present on the high seas run out of supplies."

Friendly to France.

In speaking of possibilities of a German peace proposal, the Mail captioned its editorial: "Delusions."

The News Chronicle caption was "The Great Delusion," and the Manchester Guardian wrote under the heading, "Hitler's Plan."

All took their cue from Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement on September 3, the day war was declared, that "I trust I may live to see the day when Hitlerism has been destroyed."

The News Chronicle description of Hitler strategy said the Fuehrer "has deliberately refrained from provocative bombing operations in the west, and the tone of his press is distinctly friendly to France; then anything to stop war on terms which leave him in possession of his prize (Poland)."

The Manchester Guardian declared any German attempt to dictate peace terms once Poland has been conquered would fail.

"Everybody knows," it said, that the Fuehrer's plan of peace would mean a short respite and then a new demand, a new crisis and a new war."

Short War Expectation.

The editorial said Hitler still holds hope of obtaining his objective "without more than a few weeks of war," and that his terms would be "superficially generous." It continued:

"Has not Hitler paid homage to Pilsudski and praised the gallantry of a Polish garrison? Why not a conference — a conference that would start by accepting the facts? Unfortunately for his prospects of success, he is a man with a past.

"The plan that is in Hitler's mind and in other minds, though any statesman should be able to see through it, has a superficial attraction which might mislead a good many people.

"No doubt those who put it forward have some hope of embarrassing the allied governments and thus of weakening their effort if they do not secure their main object. To understand its full importance we must remember that all Europe is watching an encounter between Hitler, whose neighbors live in mortal fear of his intentions, and the allied governments, who pledged their help to Poland.

Effect on Small Nations.

"What Hitler hopes to do is to persuade Europe that the Allies will not or cannot help [illegible] whom they promise to help.

"How will Rumania [illegible]

Greece, Bulgaria and all the other States who are dreading to find themselves in the German orbit hope to stand out against Hitler if they find that the strong governments of the West have not the will or the resolution to check his aggressions even in cases where their pledges have been given?

"Its [Britain's] decision to declare war was taken from a grim and imperative sense of obligation."

British Expect War Will Last Three Years

Cabinet Policy Seen As Blunt Answer To Goering Speech

By [illegible]

London, Sept. 9 (AP) — The British Government announced today it would base its policy on the assumption that the war would last at least three years. The Ministry of Information, which made the announcement, said the decision was agreed upon at a meeting of the war cabinet.

The war cabinet is "confident that this significant decision will meet with the whole-hearted support of the British people and will be welcomed by our allies and friends," the Ministry said.

Urgent instructions have been issued to all government departments to prepare plans for the future on this basis, it was announced.

The Ministry of Supply is to take immediate steps to insure that productive capacity for all kinds of munitions is increased "on the scale required to meet every possible demand."

ANSWER TO GOERING

Conforming arrangements are being made by the admiralty and the air ministry.

The Cabinet's decision was regarded as a blunt reply to the peace feelers put out today by Germany's Field Marshall Hermann Wilhelm Goering in a broacast speech to German munitions workers.

The decision was interpreted as emphasizing the Government's determination to achieve victory over "Hitlerism" regardless of how long it takes.

The communique said that "the measures, for which preparation has already been made, are being brought fully into active operation."

It continued:

"In furtherance of the expanded defense programs that are already operating, the ministry of supply will forthwith take the necessary steps to insure that productive capacity for munitions of all kinds is increased on the scale required to meet every possible demand.

"Corresponding arrangements are being made by the admiralty and the air ministry.

"In the great national effort which is implicit in the war Cabinet decision, the civil needs of the country will be borne in mind, as well as the importance of maintaining the export trade.

"The war Cabinet is confident that this significant decision will meet with the whole-hearted support of the British people and will be welcomed by our allies and friends."

'REALISTIC POLICY'

The British Press Association commenting on the Cabinet's long-range policy, said:

"The pronouncement cannot be otherwise interpreted than an act of rigid realistic policy. It may be well that the estimate of three years—an estimate upon which all war preparations are now being based—is unduly pessimistic.

"Lessons have been learned from the Great War. One was that if a long-term view had been taken from the commencement of hostilities, the duration of the Great War might have been reduced by 18 months. As it was, the long view was ignored in spite of the warning of Lord Kitchener, and months had passed before the nation realized the scale and possible duration of hostilities."

CLAIM SEA SUPREMACY

In another communique the ministry of information declared that in the frist week of the war Britain had established her supremacy on the high seas.

It announced that "the cutting off of Germany from overseas sources of war supply is now virtually complete except for the Baltic."

British sea communications, it added, proceeded "without serious interruptions."

At the same time Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in a message to former President Edouard Benes of Czcho-Slovakia — now a German protectorate—declared "we look forward, through the triumph of the principle for which we have taken up arms, to the relief of the Czech people from foriegn domination."

Goering's appeal to Chamberlain to lay down arms once German troops have conquered Poland was regarded here as the most significant part of his speech today.

The London newspapers carried Goerings speech in full or with generous quotations.

The Sunday Express captioned the speech: "Goering's peace 'try on'" and "attempt to bluff Britain and France into sparing Hitlerism."

Inform quarters here expressed the opinion that Goering exaggerated the successes of German arms so far in the invasion of Poland by overlooking the fact that no decisive blow has been dealt the Polish armies.

After citing the success of the British blockade of Germany, the Ministry of Information added by way of contrast that British sea communications were continuing "without serious interruptions." It said further that the task of sweeping all enemy shipping from the seas" would be continued.

WARSAW DEFIES NAZIS AT GATES AS BOMBS FALL

'We Will Fight to Death,' Is Broadcast Between Air Raid Alarms.

HITLER RECASTS FRONTIERS

Spokesman for Fuehrer Says They Are to Go Back to the Pre-1914 Status.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Warsaw radio announced at 6:30 o'clock tonight (1:30 P. M. New York time), that although the Polish capital is "under constant bombing, we will not yield!"

"We will hold out to the very last!" said the broadcast.

After broadcasting successive air raid warnings, with the wail of sirens outside plainly audible, the radio station appealed to all railway workers to report immediately to repair damaged tracks around the capital.

Refugees pouring into the city from the west were told to report at relief headquarters.

A chorus of mixed voices then sang: "We will all men and women, young and old, fight for Warsaw until death."

The radio station broadcast an air raid warning at 5 P. M. today (noon, New York time).

The announcer cried in Polish: "Warning for the city of Warsaw! Warning for the city of Warsaw!" Sirens sounded.

The alarm was interpreted as meaning that German planes still were bombing the Polish capital.

The Warsaw radio sounded an all clear signal at 5:13 P. M., but ten minutes later the same warning was repeated with screaming sirens.

Musical Interlude.

Between the alarms the station played phonograph records, presumably while a raid was in progress.

At 5:57 P. M. the third warning within an hour was broadcast from Warsaw. Inhabitants were told to divide themselves into three groups in case of fire: First, women and children to carry water; second, a group to extinguish flames with sand, and third, a group to remove inflammable material from the vicinity of the flames.

Rival broadcasters, both speaking on the Warsaw radio station wave length, let the outside world take its choice today whether the Polish capital was in Polish or German hands.

One, speaking Polish with a German accent, said Warsaw was being entered by German forces.

"The Germans," he said, "have taken over our wave length. Everyone in Warsaw is at his post."

[The German Supreme High Command announced in Berlin last night that fast-traveling Nazi armored cars had forced entry into Warsaw at 5:15 P. M. (12:15 P. M., New York time) yesterday.]

The purportedly German announcer warned all residents of Warsaw they faced punishment if found with weapons when the city finally falls. He ordered janitors to collect guns and store them in basements.

"Germans will hold all those responsible who have weapons in their possession when we enter," he said. "We don't wish to destroy you. In your own interest, listen to reason."

Says City Is Surrounded.

The German announcer told the populace its city was surrounded, all communications were broken, and that "stores and banks are closed and will remain closed."

On the other hand, the supposedly Polish broadcast said banks would open, reported a general order to the Army from the chief of staff commanding Polish soldiers to "defend the capital with all your strength" and issued instructions for resisting the German advance.

Poles Urged to Save City.

The Polish broadcaster stuck to his microphone throughout the night to exhort Warsaw citizens to lay down their lives in a last-ditch fight to save their city.

He spoke despite intermittent band music and static turned on by both stations to blur out the other.

"All citizens are admonished not to listen to persons who may accost them in the street or in air raid shelters telling them to leave Warsaw immediately," he warned.

"All citizens must remain in the capital, where they are more than ever needed. All those accosted by such persons must turn them over to the police. They will be executed on the spot."

He urged workmen to help repair railroad tracks and for villagers to open soup kitchens for soldiers "who badly need warm food." A woman speaker called on Girl Scouts, nurses and soldiers to "believe in ultimate victory."

Admittedly, however, Warsaw was suffering heavily under German air raids, and defense force facing a German Army advancing from the southwest were falling back under pressure.

A broadcast, which the announcer said came from Warsaw, reported shortly after 11 o'clock (6 P. M. New York time) last night that German warplanes were bombing the center of Warsaw steadily. He said bombs were raining on the theater square and principal streets.

An announcement forty minutes later said the Germans were bombing "purely non-military objectives in the central and most densely populated sector of town." This broadcast was in English.

Barricades Are Erected.

German planes were said then to be dumping loads of bombs on Vistula River bridges and in the city.

"Due to constant heavy air raids on bridges," the English speaker continued, "inhabitants have moved to the center of Warsaw.

"The entire populace, in full support of radio warnings, now is preparing a defense of the streets, erecting barricades of all sorts of objects and digging deep ditches in the hope they will catch enemy tanks.

"Street cars are running, shops are open and there is no food shortage. Crowds are listening to news loud speakers over stores undisturbed by the noise of planes overhead unless the warning is sounded."

The station identified as Warsaw's acknowledged that the "push of the German army is so terrific, Polish land forces have been obliged to yield in the direction of Kielce, Pitkrow and Tarnow, where they will take up new positions."

The three towns form an almost straight line from Kielce, 50 miles northeast of Krakow, southeast to Tarnow, near the Slocak frontier

Warsaw Radio Pledges Battle To the Last Man

Women Called to Take Up Arms as City Fights On, With Foe Closing In

By The Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 9.—A Warsaw radio broadcast described the Polish capital tonight as "drowned in the noise of roaring airplanes and the explosions of heavy bombs," but still resisting German attacks on the outskirts of the city. The announcer said that "high flames are leaping from the buildings against a jet-black sky."

"Warsaw will die to the last man, woman and child," he said. "We will never surrender."

At 10:05 p. m. (5:05 p. m. New York time) the Polish station at Lwow (Lemberg) came on the air with an appeal to Polish women to fight side by side with the men against the Germans.

"The heroic Polish women are not only supplying soldiers with food, but in many places they have thrown hand grenades at the onrushing Germans," the announcer said.

"The German army which fights Poland will shrivel," the broadcast added.

"Polish women: Faith is now necessary like that of great Polish women of history. Hand in hand Polish soldiers and women will destroy Hitler."

Through an almost constant wail of air-raid warnings, an impassioned appeal was broadcast earlier, pleading with Warsaw citizens to resist invasion. The broadcaster identified himself as Warsaw's Mayor and said he was speaking from the Warsaw radio station.

The Warsaw radio at 6:30 p. m. (1:30 p. m., New York time), admonished the population to refuse to listen to "false reports" circulated by Germany which declared Warsaw had fallen. The broadcaster asked the Polish stations at Lwow and Wilno (Vilna) to tell foreign stations, particularly in England and France, that Poland still held Warsaw.

The broadcast attributed to the Mayor came at 7:20 p. m. (2:20 p.m., New York time), an hour after the Warsaw radio announced that although the capital was "under constant bombing, we will not yield."

Details of the Polish stand were vague, but radio reports indicated that the city was taking a battering from German bombers. The sound of air raid sirens came through receiving sets here on an average of every twenty minutes, with only a few minutes between the "all clear" signal and a wail announcing new attacks.

The broadcasters announced that Warsaw was holding out at the end of the first twenty-four hours of a virtual siege by Nazi enemies and was determined to resist the invaders. So far as could be determined from the Warsaw radio, Polish troops, backed by the civilian population, were fighting in a ring around the city except for an opening still available to the southeast.

The speaker, who identified himself as Mayor Starzinski, said, "Last night we had war in Warsaw; tonight we have war and it will be like this until we win."

"Remember Gen. Walerian Czuma, the defender of Warsaw, was given orders by Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz to defend Warsaw," the speaker added. "We know the army will do so. We must all co-operate under the most difficult conditions.

"I thank you for coming out with brooms to sweep up the wreckage. Refuse to be frightened by barricades and trenches. These were made by the foresight of the army. We hope we wont need them, but the army must be ready for all emergencies.

Swedens Hears City Holds Out

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9 (AP).—A Stockholm dispatch to the Danish News Agency said that the Swdish Foreign Office received a telegram today from the Swedish legation in Warsaw to the effect that Warsaw was not occupied and that the Polish army still controlled the city.

MOTORIZED NAZI ARMY SUCCEEDS

Attack on Poland Marked by Quick Advance.

PINCERS AROUND WARSAW

Reich Seeks Quick Victory to Free Troops for Rhine.

LWOW (Lemberg), Poland, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—(By Courier to Bucharest).—Overwhelming German forces led by strong motorized units have occupied most of western Poland in a week of bitter fighting and now are attacking Warsaw in what may be one of the decisive battles of the war.

In an attempt to annihilate the Polish Army before their British and French allies get into action on the Rhine front, the Germans have thrown at least sixty divisions and an extremely large number of artillery and mechanized units into action for a swift kill.

[German Army divisions usually have 10,000 to 12,000 men.]

A lack of systematized official Polish information makes it impossible to draw lines on a map of Poland showing the cities and towns already occupied by German forces.

As far as can be determined on the Polish side, however, German forces have advanced into Poland from the north, east and south, occupying most of the country except the slowly diminishing wedge which juts east from Warsaw.

[If German claims are correct the Nazi Army has overrun about one-third of Poland.]

The capital's fate depends on whether a gigantic German pincer movement is successful in nipping Warsaw off from its narrowing link with eastern Poland.

Withdrawal Considered.

Even greater importance is attached, however, to whether the Polish Army must withdraw eastward before the north and south points of the pincers meet near Warsaw, bottling up any Polish forces still north, south and west of Warsaw.

When the Associated Press correspondent left Warsaw Wednesday night with Major William H. Colbern, the United States Military Attache, the Germans had advanced almost to within artillery range of the capital and strong motorized units were spread out to attack from a dozen directions.

Advancing German forces and repeated bombings had left only one route of escape, through Lubin, 100 miles southeast of the capital.

German planes, in daily raids have inflicted severe damage and heavy casualties on Polish industrial towns and communications centers.

Thirty persons were killed, many others were wounded and over 200 homes and two square blocks of business structures were burned in one raid on Tomaszow, half way between Lublin and Lwow, in one of the worst bombings the correspondent saw in Poland's industrial section.

Villagers feared that many others had been killed or would be burned to death in fires which were still burning when he passed through yesterday.

A weeping woman between sobs gave the story of what had happened.

It was market day, and the town was filled with peasants from the surrounding countryside. At about 3 P. M. a droning was heard in the sky and some villagers looked up to see nine specks.

Suddenly German planes appeared and swooped low as the villagers ran for cover. Terrific explosions shook the town as incendiary and a number of smaller explosive bombs dropped from the planes.

The German planes came so low, the woman said, that one could see the pilots and crew leaning out to see what havoc they had caused.

The town's only physician was among the dead.

With telephone and telegraph communications interrupted and no automobile, horses or other means of transportation available it is impossible to make a survey of the damage done by German raiders.

Fire Seen Far Off.

Major Colbern and the correspondent were warned miles away of the Tomaszow bombings by seeing huge fires on the horizon as we approached at night.

Coming closer they met villagers and peasants leaving the town with what possessions they could save. Half the town, which has 3,000 inhabitants, was in flames.

Standing on its edge they counted more than forty white stone chimneys projecting from the smoke and scores more were in the furiously blazing business district.

A village policeman, a peasant in a one-horse cart, and dozens of others told the same story. All said that there were no troops in Tomaszow nor any manufacturing establishments which could be classed as war industries. There were no anti-aircraft guns and there was nothing to indicate that it was a military objective.

Peasants passing water buckets from hand to hand in an emergency brigade, were trying to save the houses still not ablaze, but they had given up the rest as doomed.

Many of Warsaw's citizens, threatened by air raids and the German advance, believed that the military miracle might be repeated. They flocked to Vistula bridges to pray for that miracle, addressing special supplication to "Our Lady of Czestochowa," the image of the Virgin which now is in German-conquered territory.

At least sixty German army divisions and extremely large numbers of artillery and mechanized units have been thrown into the Polish campaign for a swift "kill." Germany army divisions usually number between 10,000 and 12,000 men.

When I left Warsaw Wednesday night with Major William H. Colbern, the United States military attache, the Germans had advanced almost to within artillery range of the capital. Strong motorized units were spread out to attack from a dozen directions.

One Escape Open

The advancing Germans and repeated air raids had left only one avenue of escape open, the road southeast to Lublin.

Highways were choked with Warsaw citizens on foot and using every possible mode of conveyance to try to escape before a major battle occurred on the city's outskirts.

Major Colbern was ordered to leave Wednesday for Nalenczow, near Lublin, about one hundred miles southeast of Warsaw. The Polish Government set up temporary quarters at Lublin.

Trucks, cars, carts, bicycles and refugees scurrying on foot blocked the road.

German planes were overheard twice during the late afternoon but bombed objectives some distance from the thronged highway. Traffic conditions and a ban on all lights made the trip a nightmare through the darkness since we did not reach Nalenczow until well after midnight.

We traveled in a blundering old car requisitioned for us and filled with gasoline by Polish authorities. When we reached the little resort town it was deserted except for a long line of motor cars franctically trying to get fuel from the only gas-pump.

Foreign Office Moves

We found the Polish Foreign Office—which had been at Nalenczow—already had decided to move its headquarters further east out of the line of the German push from the west and south.

Foreign Office officials and diplomats again packed everything hastily into cars and drove off into the night for an unnamed destination.

Major Colbern was certain the advancing German forces were not close enough to reach us before daylight and, needing sleep, we had our pick of the deserted houses and chateaux of the summer resort.

Biddle was gone from the chateau to which he had moved.

We slept on straw mats while hurrying autos outside rushed to fill their tanks with gasoline and then sped away eastward toward the Russian frontier.

Poles, Fighting Against Big Odds, Try To Establish Line On Vistula

By LLOYD [illegible]EHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Lwow (Lemberg), Poland, Sept. 9 (by Courier to Bucharest)—Poland's armies, battling overwhelming odds and tremendous German artillery, aerial and man power for possession of Warsaw, today attempted to establish new defense lines along the Vistula as a major battle progressed which may be decisive in the German-Polish war.

German invaders have advanced swiftly into Poland since September 1 from three main directions—north, west and south—hoping to strike a death blow before France and Britain can launch a major offensive on the Rhine front.

German forces from the north now are on the right bank of the Vistula which flows through the heart of Warsaw.

[Associated Press Editor's Note: This presumably is northwest of the city. Berlin communiques reported the Germans also had reached the right, or east bank of the river at Sandomierz, 125 miles south of Warsaw.]

There the Poles, heartened by memory of a previous victory when they repulsed a Soviet Russian army at the gates of Warsaw in 1920, hoped to stem the German military tide.

But Warsaw's fate probably will depend on whether a gigantic German pincer movement is successful in shutting off Warsaw from its narrowing link with unoccupied territory to the east. And even greater importance is attached to whether the Polish army must withdraw eastward before the north-south points of the pincers meet near Warsaw bottling up any Polish forces still resisting to the north, south and west.

Already the Germans from the south have advanced to Lodz, eighty miles southwest of Warsaw, and to Radom within striking distance of the capital from the south.

But a Polish army officer reminded me of strategy used effectively to repulse Bolshevik troops in 1920 when all seemed lost. Then the Poles withdrew to their best defenses outside Warsaw and on August 16 succeeded in turning the enemy flank to drive the Russians back and finally save Poland.

FOUL TACTICS LAID TO REICH

Poles Say That Civilians Are Attacked.

ALLEGE LYING BROADCAST

Assert That German Airplanes Bear Polish Insignia.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Polish Telegraph Agency, under a Warsaw date line, carried this official communique today.

"Despite superiority of ninety-eighth divisions and enormous supplies of war materials collected over a year's period, the Germans are fighting also with trickery, plots and cynicism. They shamelessly posted a German guard at (Marshal Josef) Pilsudski's grave thus to make this great statesman a Polish Hacha (Emil Hacha, president of Czecho-Slovakia).

"Daily the German radio broadcasts assurances that solely military objectives are attacked. The (Polish) Government repeats that hundreds of cases are incontrovitably established that women and children are killed; also that passing German planes machine-gunned holiday trains full of children and farmers.

"A German flight officer brought to Lwow Hospital severely wounded, reported German flyers received orders to shoot down 'everything standing and moving.' The officer said they had not expected such fierce Polish anti-aircraft forces. He said they were told Germany could fly freely over Polish territory.

"Heavy German propaganda is the outcry that German parachutists have been shot as spies in Poland. Germans claim this is an outstanding breach of international agreement. They fail completely to mention that many German parachutists carry extra Polish uniforms to ensure a safe landing.

"Deceptions are common not only to soldiers but also to planes. A German plane sighted over Lwow Saturday apparently pursued nine Polish chasers which actually, however, were German airplanes with Polish insignia. The Germans are now using insignia easily mistaken for Polish.

"The peak of German fighting methods was reached the night of September 8-9, when Berlin (broadcasters) broke into Warsaw and low wave lengths. The German radio at Breslau broadcast in French, English and Polish an announcement to Polish inhabitants that Warsaw and Lwow had fallen and complete capitulation was demanded as a Polish order from those in power.

"At the same time was read aloud an order from Polish Brig.

1939

30.24-3195

30.24 3195

Gen. Walerian Czuma that 'our chief commander Smigly-Rydz demands we let the German offensive bog down before the capital walls. The commander's orders will be carried out.'"

Italian Press Seeking To Split Britain, France

Fascists Indicate Country Fears Attack By Neighbor Under Impulsion Of English

SEP 10 1939

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Rome, Sept. 9—Premier Mussolini passed the word along to the Italian people today that they should go on quietly with their work while Italy prepares for her role—as yet a puzzling secret—in the European war.

Il Duce maintained his silence, but an anti-British movement appeared in the Italian press as though to split France away from British leadership in the war against Germany.

Some highly placed Fascists indicated Italy feared eventually an attack by France under the impulsion of Britain once the German army, having conquered Poland, attained its full power on the Western front.

Say British Look To Il Duce

Usually well-informed persons in the foreign colony said, on the other hand, the British were endeavoring to persuade Mussolini to withhold aid from Hitler in a long war which they predicted.

The Italian liner Rex sailed for New York with 2,000 persons, including many Americans, aboard. Some Italians declared this resumption of worldwide steamship service indicated a return to normal conditions.

In addition to the sailing of the Rex, it was announced Italian steamship service was being resumed by other ships to North and South America, Japan, India, Australia and Africa.

Indicate Wait For Bargain

On the other hand, Fascists in high positions said they were aware of the possibility that Italy might become involved in the war.

Whatever Mussolini decides, the Fascist press promised the people it would be to the advantage of Italy, indicating perhaps il Duce was waiting for the best bargain.

The newspapers asked the people to work intensively to increase the production of their country "in every field but especially in that of war apparatus, to be ready for every event."

Fascists continued to reject the suggestion that Mussolini might break off his alliance with Hitler while also minimizing the likelihood of Britain accepting a peace overture from Hitler after the conquest of Poland or an offer of mediation by Mussolini.

See France Fighting Unwillingly

Signs of a desire to drive a wedge between France and Great Britain appeared in at least two Fascist organs—the Milan weekly Relazioni Internazionali and Rome's La Tribuna.

The Relazioni Internazionali dwelt lengthily on the theme that France was going to war unwillingly—like a condemned man going to his execution at Britain's decision.

La Tribuna, more pointedly, said, "France finds herself practically alone in bearing the brunt of greater shock—while waiting to fight to the last Frenchman."

On the other hand, the Fascist press has refrained from a single mention of the German-Italian military alliance—so-called pact of steel—since the war began.

Denied Coffee And Gasoline

Schools have reopened for the fall term and Italian life has been affected by the war only in the disappearance of coffee, midnight closing of public gathering places and a ban on private motoring to save gasoline.

Turin authorities, however, announced a plan for the gradual digging of thirteen and a half miles of trenches as well as the erection of sandbag shelters for the protection of inhabitants of that city near the French frontier against possible air raids.

SEP 10 1939

RUSSIAN TRADE ON CASH BASIS

SEP 10 1939

War and Raw Materials Are Made Available.

BUYERS' STATUS NOT CLEAR

Soviet - German Agreement Set Up Credit Facilities.

MOSCOW, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Russia was strengthening the western frontier today and simultaneously putting foreign trade on a virtual cash-and-carry basis. Russia was rushing both war and raw materials to the Polish-Soviet border where there appeared to be a possibility of Germany's establishing a border.

This action followed the disclosure—in unofficial but unimpeachable circles—that the Soviet Government, since Thursday or possibly before, had been calling up reserves.

In a new decree on foreign trade, the Government reserved the right to restrict or forbid the export of goods and declared that such goods must be paid for in advance. The effect of the decree on the August 20 trade agreement with Germany was not clear.

Germany Granted Credits.

However, since Germany granted credits to Russia, it was believed that the new decree more particularly would affect France and Britain.

[The German-Soviet agreement called for a German credit of 200,000,000 marks (about $80,000,000) for a period of seven years at 5 per cent interest for purchases of German goods in the next two years. It also provided for the sale by Russia to Germany within two years of goods to a value of 180,000,000 marks ($72,000,000).]

The Council of People's Commissars—the Soviet Cabinet—last night authorized the foreign trade commissariat to limit or prohibit exports to countries where the situation would create unfavorable conditions for Soviet foreign trade.

Emergency Measures.

The ruling applies to countries where the unfavorable conditions are created by legislation, administrative orders, administrative or court practice, or the introduction of currency restrictions.

It applies to the delivery of goods already shipped as well as to future shipments.

Military authorities in Moscow began the requisitioning of automobiles, horses and other belongings of civil organizations, including chauffeurs.

SEP 10 1939

Doctors and nurses have been ordered to register and have been instructed on their services in the event of an emergency.

Considered significant was the closing of one of Moscow's two leading gasoline stations.

Russia Calls Up More Troops to Meet War Peril

'Wide and Menacing' Nature of Polish Conflict Cited; Trade Put on Cash Basis

MOSCOW, Sept. 9. (AP).—Tass, Soviet official news agency, announced tonight that the government had decided to call to the colors parts of several military classes as a result of the German-Polish war, which acquires a wide and menacing character."

The news agency said the decision was reached as a means of "further strengthening the defense of the country.' It said reservists called into the Red Army were from the Ukraine, Byelorussia, Leningrad, Moscow, Kalanain and Orel military areas.

The announcement came as the Soviet Union was strengthening its western frontier, while at the same time putting its foreign trade on a virtual "cash and carry" basis.

War and raw materials were being rushed to the western border, where there appeared the possibility of Germany's establishing a frontier with the Soviet Union. (Russia and Germany had a common frontier in 1914 before the Polish republic was created).

Unofficial but unimpeachable sources disclosed that the Soviet government had begun calling up reserves as early as last Thursday, and possibly before then. Doctors, chauffeurs and nurses were summoned along with reserve troops. In some cases they were recalled from vacations.

A train jammed with reservists departed tonight from the station where trains usually routed westward leave. Some wore uniforms and sang military songs. Wives on the platform alternately wept and smiled.

An unofficial report said the military classes of 1901, 1905, 1906, 1907 and 1911 (men born in those years) were affected. There was no indication of the number involved.

The newspaper "Gudok," organ of railroad workers, said 23,600 women had completed training for railway work, indicating they might relieve those called to bear arms. Forty-four locomotive engineers were among those who finished the training.

Other Soviet preparedness measures included requisitioning at Moscow of automobiles, horses and other belongings of civil organizations, and the closing of two large gasoline stations in Moscow.

A new decree, which would affect France and Great Britain particularly, it was believed, reserved for the Soviet government the right to restrict or forbid the export of goods and stipulated that such goods must be paid for in advance. It was not clear what effect the decree would have on the Aug. 20 trade agreement with Germany.

Quiet Along Rhine Makes War Unreal for Swiss

Yet River Is No Man's-Land for 100 Miles North of Basel

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 9 (AP).—The broad, deep Rhine is a No-Man's-Land for a hundred-mile stretch north of Basel, and yet, reports reaching Switzerland said today, not a shot has been fired across its flow since war was declared. From Strasbourg south to Basel it is difficult to believe France and Germany are at war.

In the World War Paris was the base of the French lines, today the Maginot Line, with its powerhouses, telephone exchanges, stroes of ammunition and food, and even dozens of underground garages and airplane hangars, has become the center of French military activity.

"You could cut off all France south of Nancy and Rheims," explained a French colonel on duty at Huningue, opposite Basel, "and the offensive could continue continue six months as scheduled."

Official Statement.

An official statement of the plan was issued later. It said:

"Thanks to the uninterrupted advance of German troops in the eastern theater of war, Germany's eastern frontier has been rendered secure for all time.

"The Supreme Command, therefore, reported to the Fuehrer that the necessity for the military to exercise executive powers within the German Reich frontiers in the east no longer exists.

"Solely in the province of Silesia, north of the Oder River, present conditions must continue for a brief time for technical reasons.

"The Fuehrer and Supreme Commander then ordered that, beginning at zero o'clock, September 9 (7 P. M., New York time), and with the exception of Silesia north of the Oder River, the back-lying frontier of the operations area is to be advanced to the German eastern frontier.

"The Supreme Commander of the army thanks all Germans for always fully supporting the armed force in a spirit of sacrifice and thereby contributing its share toward success of the great work."

An officer explained the phrase, "the back-lying frontier of the operations area is to be advanced to the German eastern frontier," as meaning re-establishment of Germany's 1914 frontier on the east.

Graf Zeppelin Reported Blown Up by Saboteurs

London Recalls Swiss Saw Glare of Fire Near Friedrichshafen

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP).—The newspaper "The Star" said today it had heard the German airship Graf Zeppelin was blown up at its moorings at Friedrichshafen, Sept. 4 as the result of sabotage.

"The Star" recalled that Swiss sources reported on that day seeing the glare of fire in the direction of Friedrichshafen. The paper gave no indication of the source of its information concerning the Graf Zeppelin.

(The Associated Press has received no confirmation of the reported destruction of the Graf Zeppelin, although it did receive a dispatch from Switzerland reporting the glase, possibly from an explosion, in the direction of Friedrichshafen.)

Says Nazis Fell Back.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Polish embassy in London maintained today that the Germans had been repulsed north of Warsaw, and that Polish troops still were defending the capital.

Bridges over the Vistula River were intact, the spokesman said, and 120,000 persons were digging Warsaw trenches.

SEP 10 1939

LONDON—STRATEGY IN L

By [illegible] (Of the Associated Press)

London, Sept. 9—The Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force struck boldly in the first week of the war while the army prepared for the big French-British push against Germany.

From communiques, statements by neutral observers and hints from officers and officials, the following may be deduced:

ONE—Britain's blockade which throttled the Central German Empire has been effected against the Third Reich. Although the Landing Forces Possible

TWO—The air force has [illegible] close cooperation with the [illegible] has done valuable propaganda

The bombing of one, and perhaps two, of three German pocket battleships at the Kiel Canal entrance is described here as the most effective British action of the war.

Aids Blockade

Through it, the British help the Germans lost their lagging chance of breaking the blockade, because with one or two battleships laid up for repairs any attempt to break through would be suicide.

THREE—The British undersea fleet has not been idle.

Two ships were announced as sunk by British "fire" in one day. While no mention of submarines was made, it is reasonable to assume they were used.

Both Grain Carriers

Both ships were grain carriers out of Buenos Aires, an indication that the economic objective looms large in minds of the Admiralty despite a communique that no economic blockade "in the formal sense of that term" has been declared.

The British have minimized German reprisals, yet they have admitted that a half-dozen British ships have been sunk, all by submarines, in addition to the Athenia. The British air raid on Kiel may have been answered by a German raid on a British naval base, no one will say definitely.

The allied blockade in the World War was never absolutely effective against submarines. Thus far, the new one has been little better. Yet there is a difference.

Detection Is Better

Submarine detection devices and defenses have improved so much that once the submarines outside Germany are rounded up and destroyed, as Britain plans, it will be extremely difficult for other submarines to run the blockade.

So much for the war waged by the sea and air arms.

The army has been mentioned little in official communiques. It probably will join the French and take a crack at the Siegfried line at a point already chosen by the French general staff as the most vulnerable.

The Allies hope to throw an invading army into the Saar, an industrial district vital to Germany's war economy and within striking distance of Dusseldorf and Cologne, other important munitions centers. They also hope that the attack on the Reich's west wall will draw German troops away from the wavering Polish front and give the Poles a breathing spell.

They Don't Quit

But German military men rarely have withdrawn from one objective until it is completed. Von Hindenburg, despite pressure in the west, kept after the Russians until he had smashed them at Tannenberg.

It is hard to conceive of the Germans withdrawing any sizable force until their primary military objective in Poland has been accomplished.

This is not, as many seem to think, the capture of Warsaw. It is to smash the Polish army. Warsaw, with the Polish army believed [illegible] at large and unbroken, entrenched east of the Bug river, is the hollowest of objectives.

On German Soil

But even if the British-French push does not bring part of Germany's eastern armies to the western front, it will be valuable. For one thing, it will bring the war to the Germans, a people who suffered little from actual shellfire and bombing in 1914-18.

No one can estimate the extent of the French advances in the drive at the Siegfried line. If they are extensive it can be laid to one of two factors. First, Britons contend, they would prove that the line is not as strong as the Germans and a large part of the world believe. Second, the French heavy artillery, believed by some experts inferior to the German, would be revealed as far more formidable than pre-war estimates.

The Siegfried line was built in eight months in 1938, and the dearth of building materials in Germany suggests that it may crumble under concentrated shellfire and bombing. But this would necessitate extensive preparation by heavy artillery in which the French were supposed to be deficient.

A Trap?

There is some tendency to regard the French advance as a German "come-on."

Here again military history and political expediency do not bear out the suggestion.

The primer of German militarism is an unbroken western front. To engage in [illegible] withdrawals from the [illegible] would be unthinkable from the German military standpoint.

Thus far the war resolves into three phases, two of which the British feel are fairly favorable to Britain and France

No Challenge At Sea

The blockade by sea and air has been set up and is in operation with the additiona factor that the German battle fleet is not ready to challenge the British.

Possibility of the French cracking the Siegfried line at a strategic point offers the added chance of a swift and effective follow up.

On the other hand, the German Army has advanced steadily and smoothly against the Poles.

The fact that the Poles are brave and disciplined is not enough. They must have munitions, artillery and food. Indeed, under the circumstances under which modern wars are fought, bravery and discipline alone are never enough.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 9—Four occupants of an airplane of unidentified nationality were rescued by lifeboats tonight after the plane fell into the English Channel off the south coast. Lifeboats at Hastings and Dungeness answered the plane's radio S O S and took it in tow.

Another British Ship Torpedoed

Anglo-American Oil Co. Tanker Sunk by U-boat—17 Vessels Lost in War.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9 (A..P.).—A message from the Netherlands steamship Breedyk reported today that the 5,548-ton British tanker Kennebec had been sunk by a torpedo but that the entire crew of thirty-two had been saved.

The message from the Breedyk's master to the owners of his ship, the Holland-America Line, did not give the location of the sinking because of war dangers. He said that he had picked up the tanker's crew. The Kennebec was owned by the Anglo-American Oil Company.

Sunken Ship's Crew in England

FOLKESTONE, England, Sept. 9 (AP).—The thirty-five-man crew of the sunken 5,809-ton British steamship Pukkastan reached here in a rescue ship tonight and told of leading a submarine a two-mile chase before giving up.

"We saw a periscope just above the water, not more than fifty yards away, about midday Thursday," said one of the sailors. "We attempted to keep the U-boat on until help arrived, by steering a zigzag course for nearly two miles.

"The submarine then came to the surface, and, realizing it was useless, we took to our two boats."

He said the submarine commander determined that all hands were safely off, then announced, "I'm going to sink your ship. Goodbye."

A Netherlands boat soon picked up the crew.

Germans Off the High Seas.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Information said today that "there are practically no German merchant ships on the high seas," but that the task of "sweeping all enemy shipping from the seas" would be continued.

The Ministry added that British Empire communications continued without serious interruption after the first week of the war.

The majority of German merchant ships which were at sea or in neutral ports on the outbreak of war, it was announced, were now sheltering in neutral ports. The Ministry said that if [illegible] leave those neutral ports they almost certainly fall into the hands of the Royal Navy."

In Distress in Irish Sea.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Lifeboats were called out from Arklow, in Wicklow county, early today to aid a ship reported in distress in the Irish Sea [illegible] forty miles [illegible] of Dublin.

The lifeboats returned later in the morning without finding any trace of a distressed ship.

Ninety German Ships Take Haven in Spain

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—It was reported [illegible] today that the number of [illegible] vessels now in Spanish ports totaled about ninety. They were mostly at Vigo, Cadiz, Malaga and Almeria.

Limitless U-Boat Warfare Denied Again by Reich

Berlin Calls British Charge 'Crude Lying Propaganda'

BERLIN, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The high command issued tonight a denial of what was said to be a British charge that Germany had ordered "unlimited submarine warfare on commercial ships."

The statement said: "The official British report is nothing but another brilliant instance of crude lying and agitation practiced by the British Information Ministry against Germany.

"These are [illegible] British propaganda methods serve to influence the attitude of neutral states against Germany."

The statement once more declared the German Navy was commanded to abide by the rules of international law.

Cheerfulness On Home Front Is The Watchword In Britain

Newspapers Go Into Hysterics Over Jokes About Hitler—War Talk Taboo In Family Circle

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Sept. 9—Cheerfulness and "business as usual" are Britain's chief objectives at home after six days of war.

Cheerfulness is so thick at [illegible] can cut it with a knife. Newspapers go into hysterics about not too funny cracks at Hitler and humor in pubs at night is reminiscent of old 10-20-30 days in vaudeville.

Some of its gets you, though. For instance, its a little difficult to see a girl and a man in uniform, she of the Ambulance Corps, he in the Royal Air Force, saying good-by and "Meet you at the Adlon (Berlin's swankiest hotel), darling," without feeling it.

Some Comedy Touches

Some of it is funny. For instance, one woman living in a seashore town heard the air-raid sirens last Sunday and made a bee line for the nearest shelter. She didn't come out until Wednesday morning. She claimed she hadn't heard the "all clear" signals and that as she had stocked the place with food, books and bedding everything was fine.

If you go to an English home there's a conspiracy not to mention the war. They crack jokes about Hitler, speak longingly of the fall racing season, most of which they will miss, and explain laughingly that they call their air-raid shelter "the better 'ole."

Every business firm that has not moved out of London is carrying on with studious calm. I went out to buy shirts. The little old fellow who has been there so long served me exactly as though it were any other [illegible] was apologetic when [illegible] explained that he had to go downstairs for civilian shirts. All the rest of the shop was given over to military shirtings.

Women Taking Over Men's Jobs

One by one women are appearing where men usually work. The trolleys have women drivers. There are women waiters where there used to be men. Women serve you in a tobacco shop, which is as masculine as a fight camp. Women fill sandbags, direct traffic and sell newspapers on the [illegible].

The nation has gone to war in an entirely different spirit from that at the start of the great war. In August, 1914, the streets were filled with cheering crowds. There are not any cheering crowds today. The troops marching along the streets don't bellow "Tipperary." If they sing at all it is "Heigh Ho, Heigh Ho," or "South of the Border."

American-born Wallis Warfield, and the controversy over whether she should be addressed as "Your Royal Highness," was the fact a British destroyer [illegible] France to get [illegible].

The duke, ready to undertake an important wartime task for the empire, left Cannes with his wife last night, en route to a channel port where the destroyer was said to be waiting to rush them to England.

Most observers thought this meant old wounds had been healed by the war, that the Government felt King George VI had attained such stature there was no danger he might be overshadowed by his colorful brother, and that the Duke might get some important job to help his country.

No Contention Expected.

"The announcement that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are leaving Antibes for England will cause no surprise, still less any kind of contention," commented the Times, which often mirrors Government views.

"It has always been tacitly assumed that a war would sweep away whatever difficulties there may have been in the way of the Duke's earlier return.

"These difficulties, though they could not but engage the attention of the responsibility of the Cabinet, have never been political. One reason, indeed, why the Times and most other newspapers have steadfastly refrained from speculation and comment on the whole subject is that discussion of the Duke's plans seemed [illegible] and impertinent intrusion into matters that were primarily of private and personal concern.

"Now, too, the events and the hour which bring the Duke to rejoin his fellow countrymen may be left to speak for themselves. They relieve his homecoming of all possible trace of controversy and embarrassment and should safeguard him against prying publicity.

Press Welcomes Windsors

Semi-official London Times Says Absence of Duke in War Time Is Unthinkable.

LONDON, Sept. 10 (A. P.).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, returning to England for the first time since they went into voluntary exile three years ago, received a significant editorial welcome today from the influential London Times.

Significant, too, in the light of the stir created by the Duke's abdication December 10, 1936, to ma

1939

30.24 3197

Absence Now Unthinkable.

"No one could dream of the Duke's absence from England at a time in which absence would become intolerable exile, or suppose for a moment that anything would be lacking on the Government's part to speed the fulfillment of his dearest and most urgent wish."

The effect on the British public of the return of the Duke and Duchess was watched closely. There was no immediate announcement of their plans and their homeward route was kept secret.

The return got only briefest mention in London's morning papers. Paragraph items were inconspicuously placed amidst headlined war news.

It was expected the couple would take up residence quietly at one former King's old residence, Fort Belvedere, outside of London. The closely secluded castle remained his property after the Government crisis which Windsor's insistence upon marrying "the woman I love" created.

Speculation Upon Duchess.

The castle has been kept up by a large staff of servants and ready for immediate occupancy.

Speculation today centered about the reception of the Duchess by British aristocracy, and what the Duke might do to help his nation in wartime.

Some thought he might be named to head some form of national service work, others that he would enter active service with the armed forces. He has been commissioned in the army, Royal Air Force, and navy.

The principal commission he still retains is colonel-in-chief of the Welch Guards.

British-Belgian Air Battle

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels Sept. 9—Belgian pursuit planes battled two British bombers over Belgian territory last night and brought them down in an incident expected here to have diplomatic consequences.

A Belgian plane fell in flames during the battle, and its two occupants, who took to their parachutes, were injured.

The bombers were returning from a reconnaissance and leaflet-dropping flight over central Germany when they were intercepted by the Belgians near Mons.

One of the British craft came down immediately, and the two officers and three crew members were arrested. The second plane refused to land and was taken under fire after being chased by the Belgians.

[Editor's Note: The British Air Ministry said the two British planes crossed the Belgian border "inadvertently" in "unfavorable weather conditions." London said the British Ambassador in Brussels had been instructed to present an apology to the Belgian Government.

A joint communique issued by the Belgian National Defense and Foreign Affairs Ministries said simply: "Belgian territory was violated this morning by foreign aircraft."

Chamberlain Predicts Relief For Czechs In His Message To Benes

London, Sept. 9 (AP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain said in a message today to former President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia that "we look forward, through the triumph of the principle for which we have taken up arms, to the relief of the Czech people from foreign domination."

Benes, whose country now is a German protectorate, previously had telegraphed Chamberlain expressing his support of Britain and France in the war against Germany.

Chamberlain said, "I gratefully acknowledge your excellency's generous message of sympathy and support in this grave hour. The sufferings of the Czech nation are not forgotten."

Two Bombers Forced Down.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Belgian planes were reported today to have forced down two British bombers after they had been sighted flying over Belgian territory near Mons. One plane was reported to have landed near Brusselles and the other near Nivelles. Both were reported to have been interned.

Rumors that a Belgian plane had crashed could not be confirmed.

ENGLISH PLANES FIGHT BELGIANS

Cross Wrong Border After Raid on Germany.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry disclosed today that British warplanes fought with Belgian fighter planes over Belgian territory last night. The British planes, returning from a reconnaissance over central Germany, crossed the Belgian border inadvertently, the Ministry asserted.

The British Ambassador in Brussels has been instructed to present an apology to the Belgian Government.

During the reconnaissance flight, "made in unfavorable weather conditions," the British planes distributed further copies of the note to the German people, the Ministry said. It was the fifth such flight by British planes over Germany since the war started.

Britain Slow in Enlisting Refugees in War Service

Picks Only a Few Interpreters and Women Nurses

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP)—Eagerness to play a part in the war against Germany has been manifested among refugees from Germany, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia who have had temporary haven in England.

The British authorities, however, are proceeding carefully and only a small number of women have qualified for hospital nursing and few interpreters thus far have been enlisted for anything resembling active duty.

Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary, indicated in the House of Commons Sept. 4 that special committees would examine the status of refugees and decide their eligibility. Representations then were made by Members of Parliament that special consideration be extended to Czechs. When that is done those refugees will be able to enlist or participate actively in war work.

Women nursing volunteers were asked to fill out forms for possible duty.

George VI Receives Henderson

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP).—Sir Neville Henderson, former British Ambassador at Berlin, was received in audience today by King George VI.

REPORTED UNREST IN REICH DOUBTED

Stories May Be Wishful Thinking, Say London Military Circles

LONDON, Sept 9 (AP)—Authoritative British military quarters today cautioned the public that stories of discontent in Germany may be only "wishful thinking."

"Make no mistake, this is going to be a long war and a big war, and we are convinced that Germany won't crack until there is nothing else left for her to do," said an expert in these quarters. "It may last two years, it may last ten, but stories of German discontent will not make our task any easier."

Paying tribute to Poland's stand against the German [illegible] advance from the south and [illegible] toward Warsaw, the expert said "the Poles have fought extremely well. They are the chaps who have taken the first knock, and a hard knock, too."

Early Peace Scouted

These quarters, like the morning press, assailed any suggestion Germany would be able to mop up Poland, then achieve peace with Britain and France.

The expert reiterated that Britain was not fighting to save Poland.

"We are fighting to save the world from Hitler," he declared.

Lack of official British military information was explained as a carefully planned move to prevent Germany from getting information as to troop movements and positions.

Secrecy Held Vital

Such an "obstructionist policy" was called "absolutely vital" to save the lives of British troops.

"If the Germans got an inkling that ships were taking troops across the Channel they at once would send planes up to reconnoiter and then they would come across and play merry hell with shipping," the expert said.

"Thousands of lives might be sacrificed to make a cheap sensation. "In warfare surprise is essential to success, but you can't have surprise without secrecy."

Britain Assures Siam In Respect To Neutrality

Notifies Thai Of Stand; Says Nervousness There Was Fostered By Outsiders

London, Sept 9 (AP)—An assurance that Great Britain will respect completely the neutrality of Thai (Siam) so long as other powers do likewise has been presented to the Thai Government by the British Minister at Bangkok, the British Ministry of Information announced today.

The Ministry's announcement asserted that "nervousness" in Thai as to that country's neutrality "appears to have been deliberately fostered by outside elements."

Boxer Tommy Farr Joins The British Air Force

Former English Heavyweight King Stayed With Louis

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP).—Tommy Farr, former British heavyweight boxing champion, has enlisted in the Royal Air Force.

He Was Popular in America

Tommy Farr returned to England from America last February, carrying with him a great deal of good will in lieu of boxing crowns. Probably his most outstanding fight was with Joe Louis in 1937, when Farr surprised experts by staying in the rin gthe full fifteen rounds.

Farr, now twenty-five years old, also lost fights to Jimmy Braddock, Max Baer an dothers, but his defeats never lost him his popularity. A Welshman, he first came to this country [illegible] years ago as the first [illegible] in nine years to get a chance at the heavyweight title. He had been fighting since 1929, and his record, up to the time he fought Louis, was seventy-one matches, of which he won fifty-four and lost ten. The rest were draws. He became champion of the British Empire in April, 1937.

Britain To Requisition Chilled Meat Imports

Government Also Will Take Over All Wholesale Stocks Of Sugar

London, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Government will take over all wholesale stocks of [illegible] and start requisitioning all imported chilled or frozen meat at midnight Sunday, the Ministry of Information announced tonight.

Dealings in sugar outside the United Kingdom will be allowed only under license, and wholesale and retail prices will be regulated.

New restrictions on the export of currency, gold and securities also were announced.

OF ANOTHER COLOR

Ponies to Get Zebra-like White Stripes.

LONDON, Sept. [illegible]—Because [illegible] have been hitting ponies running wild during blackouts in England's New Forest, planted by William the Conqueror, recommendations were made today that they be given a zebra-like appearance by painting white stripes on them. Street lamps and roadside trees will get similar treatment.

Doumenc Becomes Full General

PARIS, Sept. 9 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Joseph Doumenc, commander of the First Corps [illegible] promoted today to a full [illegible] commanding an army. General Doumenc headed the French military mission to Moscow in connection with the unsuccessful negotiations for a French-British-Soviet Russian mutual assistance pact.

IN THE FIRST PROMOTIONS OF GENERAL OFFICERS SINCE THE WAR STARTED, THREE MAJOR-GENERALS WERE RAISED TO THE RANK OF LIEUTENANT GENERAL, FIVE BRIGADIERS WERE ADVANCED TO MAJOR GENERAL AND 16 COLONELS WERE MADE BRIGADIERS.

SN1005PED

Britain Wonders If Duke Will Enter Thick of Fight

LONDON, Sept. 9 (AP).—Britons were speculating tonight about what the returning Duke of Windsor would do to aid his country in the war against Germany.

The former King Edward VIII and his American bride, the former Wallis Warfield, after an exile of nearly three years, left Cannes, France, last night for a channel port to board a British destroyer for the return to London.

Besides wondering what sort of official reception would be accorded the Duchess—whom the Duke has insisted should be addressed as "Her Royal Highness"—Londoners wondered whether the Duke would go to the front or remain here in some administrative post.

The former King retained the military ranks held during his reign, field marshal, admiral of the fleet and air marshal.

The influential Times, which often mirrors Government views, gave the Duke and Duchess an editorial welcome, saying their return "will cause no surprise, still less any kind of contention."

From Neutral Fronts

New Restrictions In Greece

Athens, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Greek Government today ordered immediate enforcement of a further series of wartime restrictive measures.

They provide that there be no slaughtering on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays; that no meat, game or poultry shall be sold on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays, nor served in hotels, private residences or restaurants on these days. Hospitals and clinics are excepted.

Hoarding of foodstuffs for private use is strictly forbidden, and only one week's supply is permitted.

Bans Recruiting

Belgrade, Sept. 9 (AP)—A decree forbidding the recruiting of volunteers for foreign armies was issued today by the Yugoslav Ministry of the Interior.

Observers believed the measure was designed to protect the country's neutrality in view of efforts made by Polish sympathizers to recruit here for one of the Polish legions composed of foreigners.

Sweden Boosts Defense Fund

Stockholm, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Swedish Government today proposed an additional defense appropriation of 330,000,000 crowns (about $77,350,000).

The proposal includes 115,000,000 crowns (about $27,025,000) for the army, 70,000,000 (about $16,450,000) for the navy and 40,000,000 (about $9,400,000) for the air force and the remainder for other phases.

180,000 To Quit Copenhagen

Copenhagen, Sept. 9 (AP)—A precautionary plan has been prepared for the removal of 180,000 persons, mostly children and the aged from Copenhagen, the police prefect announced in a radio broadcast tonight.

Those removed will receive cards designating where they will be quartered in the event an emergency arises.

Food Cards In Denmark

Copenhagen, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Government announced today that food cards will be introduced in Denmark next week.

The Food Commission will meet today to determine individual quotas and decide on maximum prices.

Refugees Reach Rumania

Bucharest, Sept. 9 (AP)—Great numbers of refugees from Polish regions occupied by the German army arrived at the Rumanian [illegible] today. Troops were rushed to frontier stations to keep order.

Officials said the refugees would be allowed to enter Rumania because Rumania is prompted by "tenets of Christian love and will supply these unfortunate people with food and shelter."

Spain Internes 30 Nazi Ships

Vigo, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Spanish Government tonight ordered thirty German merchantmen interned and their radio broadcasting apparatus sealed.

Help Censor: Use Postcards

PARIS, Sept. 9 (AP)—The post-office department [illegible] recommended tonight that the French use postcards for their correspondence. "This will lighten the work of censors," officials explained, "and hasten the delivery of mails."

French Wives To Get Subsistence Fund

PARIS, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Paris wives, who were left without means of support when their husbands were called to the front, will receive approximately [illegible] cents a day maintenance from the French Government plus 13 cents additional for each child under 16.

Wives living in other communities with a population of more than 3,000 will receive 8 francs (18 cents) daily. Elsewhere the allotment is 7 francs (15 cents).

THE HAGUE, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Netherlands envoy to Berlin was instructed by his Government today to "take steps in connection with violation of Holland's neutrality by a flight of German warplanes over the eastern Dutch border yesterday in the vicinity of Limburg province, which borders on Germany.

Danes Chase Enemy Balloon

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9 (AP).—A balloon-barrage balloon of the British type, [illegible] capable of lifting and drifting over Denmark today with three Danish planes in pursuit. Officials said the cable was damaging power lines.

Miners Paralyze Danish Fishing

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9 (AP).—Extensive [illegible] fields around Denmark have completely paralyzed Danish fishing fleets, endangering the livelihood of about 100,000 workers dependent directly or indirectly upon the fishing industry.

Warned Against Joining Foreign Military Bodies

Czechs Told By Government Such Action Would Be Regarded As Traitorous

Prague, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Czech Government warned Czechs today against joining foreign military organizations, and said such action would be regarded as traitorous.

The statement was believed directed against [illegible] reported formation of a Czech army in France and against a Czech legion in Poland. The legion, according to advices here, fought against the Germans in the Teschen area and now is with the Poles.

The last headquarters of the Czech legion, which was estimated to have numbered 18,000 men under Gen. L. Prchala, was understood to have been at Lodz.

Holland Floods District As a Defense Measure

Precautionary Step Declared Test of Possibilities

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Netherlands inundated today a "small basin" in Utrecht Province, about twenty miles southeast of Amsterdam, as a defense precaution. The exact location of the flooded area was not announced but it was said to be, roughly, in the center of the country.

An official announcement said the step was taken "to ascertain the inundation possibilities of Holland at any time in relation to the existing water level." It emphasized there was no immediate reason for flooding the basin other than as a precautionary measure under their defense plans.

The government said it would see that the civil population of the flooded district suffered the least possible inconvenience.

Netherlands newspapers carried only a brief announcement of the action.

TURKEY CALLS UP RESERVE CLASSES

Many Reported [illegible] Bulgarian Border in Emergency Move

ISTANBUL, Sept. 9 (AP).—A Government communique announced today that several classes of reservists had been called to active duty with the army. Observers said Turkey was [illegible] ready to meet any possible [illegible].

Streets were jammed with reservists leaving for their units by train and boat. Many were reliably reported to have been sent to the Bulgarian border.

Not So, Says Paderewski

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 9 (AP).—Ignace Jan Paderewski, famous pianist and former Premier of Poland, issued a statement today declaring German troops did not enter Warsaw Friday as they announced, but convinced the world, through a radio ruse, that they fought their way into the city.

The Polish pianist-patriot, now living in retirement near here, said that according to information he received the Germans were still outside the Polish capital Saturday morning.

His statement recited that German bombers put Warsaw Radio Station No. 1, five miles outside the city, out of operation early Friday afternoon. In the evening came the announcement from Berlin that German motorized troops entered Warsaw at 5.15 P. M.

Next, at 11 P. M., the same station, on the same wave length as Warsaw Radio No. 1, broadcast [illegible] German troops entering Warsaw, and began giving German news bulletins, including an announcement that Warsaw had fallen.

"The station which broadcast that news was not Warsaw Radio No. 1," Paderewski's statement said, "but simply the radio at Breslau broadcasting on the Warsaw wave length in an effort to fool the world and the Poles themselves."

Other Polish sources in Switzerland held a similar view and declared that Breslau was silent during the time the supposed Warsaw No. 1 was broadcasting German news.

Mobile Anti-Nazi Radio Station May Be Myth

Stamps Sold For Its Support Taken To Switzerland By Germ[illegible]

Zurich, Sept. 9 (AP)—[illegible] entering Switzerland from Germany today brought stamps sold secretly both inside and outside of Germany for support of an almost mythical mobile anti-Nazi short wave radio station.

Whether the station, supposed to be called "German Freedom," exists remains debatable.

Some stamp buyers said they frequently had heard it operating, changing its wave length from time to time around 29.8 meters. Other buyers said "maybe it's just a racket," but bought just the same.

Reich Women Run Trolleys

Berlin, Sept. 9 (AP)—Eighty-four women street-car conductors began their duties today. Many [illegible] are being trained for the work.

2000 ON THE REX BOUND FOR U. S.

Most of the Passengers Are Americans.

400 OTHERS LEAVE PARIS

Refugees From France Will Join 2500 Sailing on Two Ships.

ROME, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Two thousand persons, mostly American refugees from the European war, sailed today on the Italian liner Rex for New York. Italians cited the resumption of world-wide steamship services as showing a tendency here to return to normal, but highly placed Fascists said that they were not overlooking the possibility that Italy might become involved in the war.

The Rex was not only loaded to capacity [illegible] sun deck was converted into a temporary dormitory to accommodate [illegible] passengers as possible. Huge [illegible] flags were painted on her sides and decks for identification. There were reports that she would be accompanied by Italian submarines until she passed Gibraltar, but no sign of an escort was seen as she left the harbor.

The British were reported in informed circles as trying to induce the Italians to maintain their neutrality. They were said to have told the Italian Government that a German victory would be just as injurious to Italy as to Britain and France.

At the same time, usually well-informed circles said, the British maintained that Germany had no chance of winning, that Britain and France, with their greater resources, were prepared to fight for years if necessary. The British reference to Italy [illegible] in case of a German victory was said to have been based on the argument that Adolf Hitler, once becoming the master of Europe, would begin thinking of southern Tyrolean points on the Adriatic and complete domination of the Balkans.

400 Leave Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—More than 400 Americans were removed from Paris today aboard a special train to join about 2,500 others fleeing the European war aboard the United States liners President Harding, sailing tonight, and the Washington, [illegible] at dawn tomorrow.

Accommodations aboard [illegible] liners have been doubled to meet the emergency. Among those leaving was Thomas Bullitt, cousin of the American Ambassador.

Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, was sailing with her two children en route to China.

The Washington, which has normal space for 1,052 passengers, is taking 2,000, while the President Harding will carry more than 1,000. Officials of the United States Lines said seven persons would be put in staterooms which normally hold three and that all saloons would be filled with cots.

"It is literally impossible to put one more person aboard," one official said.

Large American flags were painted on both sides of the liners as well as on the boat deck, which at night is illuminated by strong searchlights.

Big Italian Ships Can't Pick Up Man in Yacht

PARIS, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Italian Line officials said today that neither the Conte Di Savoia nor the Rex, about to sail for the United States, could pick up George Monroe Moffett, New York food merchant, now aboard his [illegible] Ramfis near the Azores.

Mr. Moffett, [illegible] across the Atlantic with seventeen officials of the Dominican Republic, had asked that he be picked up.

The line said either of the ships would have to go hundreds of miles off course to take him aboard, but suggested that if the yacht put into Lisbon, Portugal, he could be accommodated aboard the liner Vulcania there.

STRICT RULES AT PANAMA

Canal Zone Authorities Clamp Down on Information

CRISTOBAL, C. Z., Sept. 9 (AP).—Strict enforcement of neutrality regulations affecting the Panama Canal was started today. Barriers were raised against the press at the Cristobal port captain's office, and there was no information given on ships approaching or leaving the canal.

Canal Zone authorities, who were asked regarding the daily report on ships moving through the canal, said "such information is unavailable until further notice."

The passenger and cargo congestion at Cristobal becomes more acute daily, [illegible] more than 2,000 tons of cargo is piled up, [illegible] authorities said, would be [illegible] under usual regulations affecting unclaimed cargo.

Both belligerents and neutrals were finding the greatest difficulty in obtaining transportation. Airlines were unable to accommodate all passengers seeking passage. Army, navy and civil authorities of the Panama Canal clamped down on all information.

Rumors of German submarine activities in the Caribbean persisted with no confirmation.

Argentine Objects To Blockade Goods

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo delivered last night to the British embassy a note expressing Argentina's objection to any inclusion of foodstuffs in goods listed by Britain as war contraband.

32 Americans, Trapped In Poland, Sail From Riga

Report Their Train Bombed on Way From Warsaw

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 9 (AP).—Thirty-two Americans who were trapped in Poland by the outbreak of hostilities, and whose train was reported bombed on the journey out of Warsaw, were on their way from Riga to Stockholm [illegible] aboard a small Swedish steamer.

The trip from Warsaw to the Latvian border took four days. The refugees reported that German bombers attacked their train, which stopped several times while the passengers sheltered themselves in surrounding bushes and woods.

In the group was Dr. John Radzinski of Chicago, who went to

30.24-3199

30.24 3199

Warsaw Aug. 31 to attend the international neurological congress.

"The journey from Warsaw to Wilno, which normally takes eight hours, lasted twenty-three hours," he said. "Near Bjalystok our train was attacked by several bombers, which dropped seven bombs, four of which exploded about a hundred feet from the train."

Dr. Radzinski said the train was only twelve hours out of Warsaw when the planes appeared. They were driven back by anti-aircraft guns.

The United States Consul at Riga is aiding Americans to return home as they cross the frontier daily. Most of them are now on their way to Stockholm from Riga, either directly by ship or through Esthonia and Finland by train. All are seeking passage to New York from Gothenburg. To date about seventy-five Americans have crossed the frontier.

SENATE ACTION IS FOLLOWED BY COMMONS

Dominion May Proclaim State Of War Within Few Hours

Quebec Group Will Oppose Any Move For Conscription

SEP 10 1939

[By the Canadian Press]

Ottawa, Sept. 9—Canada's Parliament tonight approved the Government's policy, which is expected to lead to an early declaration of war against Germany.

After the Senate had approved the Government's policy unanimously, the House of Commons at 10.25 P. M. also indorsed it without a record vote.

Declaration Due

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King earlier had told Commons that Parliamentary approval of the Government's policy would be followed by immediate steps "for a formal proclamation of a state of war" existing between Canada and Germany.

The Prime Minister's office declined tonight to [illegible] exact hour when the proclamation would be issued, but stated it [illegible] within a few hours.

Immediately the House rose following [illegible] Mackenzie King called the Cabinet into session.

The Prime Minister has suggested to Parliament that one of the best ways Canada could help Britain immediately would be to dispatch "trained air personnel" overseas.

Raoul Dandurand, Government leader, speaking in the Senate, said Canada would help Britain and France with airmen and supplies.

Motion At Issue

The Parliamentary votes technically were being taken on a motion to approve the Government's address in reply to the speech from the throne of last Thursday.

Knowing that adoption of the address was tantamount to authorizing the Government to issue a declaration of war, the Senate approved the address after only six Senators had spoken in the debate.

As debate proceeded in Commons the position of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation group remained in doubt. Speaking for this group of seven members, M. J. Coldwell, of Saskatchewan, said they would not vote for the address unless the Government should make a clear statement of Canada's war aims and take immediate steps to fix prices and prevent war profits.

Maxime Raymond, Quebec Liberal, said he was opposed to Canadian participation in any war in which Canada was not attacked. He said participation in the present war would bring internal divisions in Canada.

Ernest Lapointe, Justice Minister, told the House that every Quebec Minister would leave the Cabinet if the Government should inaugurate conscription—a step it already is committed against.

Many Volunteering

Nevertheless, Lapointe said, applications for voluntary service "are pouring in—and they come from Quebec also from people anxious to serve."

Lapointe stood by the Prime Minister in declaring there could be no such thing as neutrality for Canada in a war in which Britain is involved. He is one of three members who sat in the House when war was declared in 1914.

The Senate vote came after Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, pleaded for a united effort in prosecution of the war and urged that all Canada's resources should be thrown into the struggle.

Success of Nazi Germany, he said, would mean the end of the world as Britons know it. Germany would not be a tolerant victor, he added, but instead, would make a German colony of every British and French island and possession, and the Dominion of Canada itself would be in danger.

Warns Colleagues

"If we don't win this war on the banks of the Rhine we'll have to win it on the banks of the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi," he said. "Let us get this into the minds of all our people."

Dandurand asked the Senate to approve the Government's policy to defend Canada and the territorial possessions of Britain and France on this side of the Atlantic.

Senator C. P. Beaubien, Conservative, of Quebec, urged vigorous prosecution of the conflict and united action to that end.

Planes Must Get Permits For Flights Over Canada

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Authority said today it had been notified by Canadian officials that all aircraft must obtain specific permission from the Minister of Transport to fly over Canadian territory.

Scheduled transport services operating into Canada already have been granted permission, the C. A. A. said, but the Canadian Minister of Transport has asked that pilots of other planes be warned of the new defense regulation.

First Week of the War

By The Associated Press

SUNDAY

England and France declare "state of war" with Germany two days after Hitler invades Poland. German air bombs hit Warsaw, 16 other Polish cities, and shatter windows in villa of U. S. Ambassador Anthony Joseph Drexel Biddle, Jr.

MONDAY

Explosion sinks British merchantship, Athenia, carrying war refugees; 128 of 1,400 passengers dead or missing. Blame German submarine; Germans deny. English bomb German warships at Kiel Canal entrance and shower Germany with leaflets. French open cautious advance on Nazis' Siegfried Line. Hitler motors to Polish front.

TUESDAY

Berlin "blacks out." Paris suffers air raid scares. Thousands flee Warsaw as Germans, 50 miles away, bomb constantly. Poles say their planes bomb Berlin. Berlin denies. Five steamships—one British and four [illegible]—sink. British again rain leaflets on Germany.

SEP 10 1939

WEDNESDAY

On Western Front, French report "local gains." First British troops arrive to back them up. Poles move capital to Lublin. British planes "bomb" Germany with leaflets third time. President Roosevelt declares United States neutral.

THURSDAY

Heroic Poles surrender Westerplatte, Danzig munitions center, after six days withering assault from water, land and air. Germans claim to have cut Corridor from rest of Poland. German reinforcements reported rushed as French invade German soil from Luxembourg to Lauterbourg.

FRIDAY

Germans say they pierce Warsaw. Conflicting Polish radios affirm, deny. Poles claim recovery of Bydgoszcz, key city to Corridor. Say they will "yet" make offensive. Government moves from Lublin further East. Allies bomb German base on Sylt Island, off Denmark. Drop more pamphlets. French use tanks to increase pressure on Siegfried [illegible] report Germans retreating. Three more ships go down.

SATURDAY

Hitler announces nine days of "lightning" war in Poland has expanded Reich borders to Eastern frontier of 1914. Warsaw still held by Poles, however, in bitter battle. On Western front French claim to have seized 200 square miles of German territory. First German counter-attack reported. Berlin has air raid false alarm. Women begin taking men's jobs in London, where The Times—often a government mouthpiece—pledges England and France to wipe out "Hitlerism" and reject expected German peace offer if Poland falls. Government says it is planning on war at least three years long. German subs get another ship, No. 17 to sink on all sides since war began.

F. D. Revises Staff, Junks 'Brain Trust'

Sets Up 5 Divisions To Cind White House For All Emergencies

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 9 (AP)—In an Executive order which was described officially as tossing "such things as the old, so-called Brain Trust out the window," President Roosevelt revamped his White House staff tonight to put it in better shape to handle problems arising "in the time of national emergency" as well as those incident to normal government operations.

The order set up five principal divisions: The White House office, the budget bureau, the national resources planning board, a liaison office for personnel management, and an office of government reports.

In addition, it provided "in the event of a national emergency, or threat of a national emergency," for "such office for emergency management as the President shall determine."

ORDER LISTS DUTIES

In general, the order listed in detail the duties of White House officials in accordance with changes already made in the set-up of the Executive offices under a plan for government reorganization.

Mr. Roosevelt said it was intended to establish systematic procedures "so that the flow of work will be speedy, smooth and effective."

"Only after this has been accomplished," his statement said, "will the President have adequate machinery for the businesslike handling of his job."

With reference to the "Brain Trust," a group of individuals like Thomas Corcoran and Benjamin Cohen, generally understood to be key advisers to the Chief Executive, Stephen T. Early, a Presidential secretary, told reporters:

"It is out the window for the much-heralded and celebrated creatures of imagination. We have heard and read about the Brain Trust. Here's an emergency. Here's an Executive order. I do not see any place for those we previously heard about."

Heretofore the intimate and immediate direction of business by the President has been confined to the White House Office. Although the President under the Constitution and the statutes actually is responsible for the conduct of the administrative management of the executive establishment, he has not heretofore had appropriate means to discharge this responsibility effectively.

Particularly, under the Pendleton Act of 1883 he was charged with certain duties with respect to personnel, and in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 he was made responsible for the preparation and the execution of the budget; and, in many acts of Congress since 1789, responsibilities have been placed directly upon him for which he had no compensating authority or machinery for carrying into effect.

Vast Growth Since McKinley

This is all a part of the continuing growth of the nation's business. Forty years ago President McKinley could deal with the whole machinery of the executive branch through eight or ten persons, and a small personal secretarial staff was sufficient to care for all his personal and official correspondence. Now, when inquiries with respect to the business of the government come to the President from private citizens in thousands every day, to say nothing of the complex character of the business of the government itself, the President can conduct the executive business of the government only if he has a more orderly organization.

The services that the government renders, and the tasks of protection and supervision that are imposed upon it, are carried on through departments and agencies specially set up by the Congress and provided with the funds to carry out the work that had been determined upon by the people and the Congress, but, nevertheless, the task of general supervision and over-all management continues to rest upon the President as the constitutional Chief Executive.

This particular responsibility of the President requires better organization, and to that end, with the concurrence of the Congress, under the Reorganization Act, certain

President's Order on the White House Staff Reorganization

The text of Mr. Roosevelt's statement and Executive order appears on Page 11

By The Associated Press.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Following is the text of a statement and an executive order, issued today by President Roosevelt, outlining a reorganization of White House offices to provide "adequate resources for management" in periods of emergency:

SEP 1 0 1939

The Seventy-sixth Congress in the Reorganization Act of 1939, required the President, subject to the approval of the Congress, to undertake the reorganization of the executive branch. The first steps toward effecting this reorganization have been taken. Among other organizational changes there have been transferred to the Executive Office of the President, with the concurrence of the Congress, certain agencies having to do with the over-all management and central direction of the executive branch of the Federal Government.

agencies and functions were transferred to the Executive Office of the President. These transfers give the Executive Office no new powers, no new duties, no additional responsibilities, but are merely the organizational expression of existing law and practice.

Varied Functions Involved

But the mere transfer of these agencies and functions to the Executive Office of the President is not sufficient. They, along with the White House Office, must be molded into a compact organization, with the functions and duties of each unit clearly prescribed, with relationships between units carefully defined, and with systematic procedures developed so that the flow of work will be speedy, smooth and effective. Only after this has been accomplished will the President have adequate machinery for the business-like handling of his job.

In the time of national emergency, domestic or foreign, the job of the President is even more difficult. In such periods it has always been found necessary to establish administrative machinery in addition to that required for the normal work of the government. Set up in a time of stress, these special facilities sometimes have worked at cross-purposes both within themselves and with the regular agencies.

In order that the nation may not again be caught unaware, adequate resources for management should be provided in advance of such periods of emergency. Although these management facilities need be brought into action only when an emergency or serious threat of emergency exists, they must function in an integral relationship to the regular management arms of the President.

Text of the Executive Order

To accomplish these objectives, the following Executive Order has been issued by the President:

Executive Order

Establishing the divisions of the executive office of the President and defining their functions and duties.

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and statutes, and in order to effectuate the purposes of the Reorganization Act of 1939, Public No. 19, Seventy-sixth Congress, approved April 3, 1939, and of reorganization plans Nos. 1 and 11 submitted to the Congress by the President and made effective as of July 1, 1939, by Public Resolution No. 2, Seventy-sixth Congress, approved June 7, 1939, by organizing the Executive Office of the President with functions and duties so prescribed and responsibilities so fixed that the President will have adequate machinery for the administrative management of the executive branch of the government, it is hereby ordered as follows:

I. There shall be within the Executive Office of the President the following principal divisions, namely: (1) The White House Office, (2) the Bureau of the Budget, (3) the National Resources Planning Board, (4) the Liaison Office for Personnel Management, (5) the Office of Government Reports and (6) in the event of a national emergency, or threat of a national emergency, such office for emergency management as the President shall determine.

II. The functions and duties of the divisions of the Executive Office of the President are hereby defined as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE OFFICE

In general, to serve the President in an intimate capacity in the performance of the many detailed activities incident to his immediate office. To that end the White House Office shall be composed of the following principal subdivisions, with particular functions and duties as indicated:

The Secretaries to the President

To facilitate and maintain quick and easy communication with the Congress, the individual members of the Congress, the heads of executive departments and agencies, the press, the radio and the general public.

The Executive Clerk

To provide for the orderly handling of documents and correspondence within the White House Office and to organize and supervise all clerical services and procedure relating thereto.

The Administrative Assistants to the President

To assist the President in such matters as he may direct, and at the specific request of the President, to get information and to condense and summarize it for his use. These administrative assistants shall be personal aides to the President and shall have no authority over any one in any department or agency, including the Executive Office of the President, other than the personnel assigned to their immediate office. In no event shall the administrative assistants be interposed between the President and any one of the divisions in the Executive Office of the President.

THE BUREAU OF THE BUDGET

(a) To assist the President in the preparation of the budget and the formulation of the fiscal program of the government.

(b) To supervise and control the administration of the budget.

(c) To conduct research in the development of improved plans of administrative management, and to advise the executive departments and agencies of the government with respect to improved administrative organization and practice.

(d) To aid the President to bring about more efficient and economical conduct of government service.

(E) To assist the President by clearing and coordinating departmental advice on proposed legislation and by making recommendations as to Presidential action on legislative enactments, in accordance with past practice.

(F) To assist in the consideration and clearance and, where necessary, in the preparation of proposed executive orders and proclamations, in accordance with the provisions of Executive Order No. 7298 of Feb. 18, 1936.

(G) To plan and promote the improvement, development and coordination of Federal and other statistical services.

(H) To keep the President informed of the progress of activities by agencies of the government with respect to work proposed, work actually initiated and work completed, together with the relative timing of work between the several agencies of the government; all to the end that the work programs of the several agencies of the executive branch of the government may be coordinated and that the moneys appropriated by the Congress may be expended in the most economical manner possible with the least possible overlapping and duplication of effort.

THE NATIONAL RESOURCES PLANNING BOARD

(A) To survey, collect data on, and analyze problems pertaining to national resources, both natural and human, and to recommend to the President and the Congress long-time plans and programs for the wise use and fullest development of such resources.

(B) To consult with Federal, regional, State, local and private agencies in developing orderly programs of public works and to list for the President and the Congress all proposed public works in the order of their relative importance with respect to (1) the greatest good to the greatest number of people, (2) the emergency necessities of the nation, and (3) the social, economic, and cultural advancement of the people of the United States.

(C) To inform the President of the general trend of economic conditions and to recommend measures leading to their improvement or stabilization.

(D) To act as a clearing house and means of coordination for planning activities, linking together various levels and fields of planning.

THE LIAISON OFFICE FOR PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT

In accordance with the statement of purpose made in the message to Congress of April 1, 1939, accompanying Reorganization Plan No. 1, one of the administrative assistants to the President, authorized in the Reorganization Act of 1939, shall be designated by the President for liaison officer for personnel management and shall be in charge of the Liaison Office for Personnel Management. The functions of this office shall be:

(A) To assist the President in the better execution of the duties imposed upon him by the provisions of the Constitution and the laws with respect to personnel management, especially the Civil Service Act of 1883, as amended, and the rules promulgated by the President under authority of that act.

(B) To assist the President in maintaining closer contact with all agencies dealing with personnel matters in so far as they affect or tend to determine the personnel management policies of the executive branch of the government.

The Office of Government Reports

(A) To provide a central clearing house through individual citizens, organizations of citizens, State or local governmental bodies, and where appropriate agencies of the Federal Government may transmit inquiries and complaints and receive advice and information.

(B) To assist the President in dealing with special problems requiring the clearance of information between the Federal Government and State and local governments and private institutions.

(C) To collect and distribute information concerning the purposes and activities of executive departments and agencies for the use of the Congress, administrative officials and the public.

(D) To keep the President currently informed of the opinions, desires and complaints of citizens and groups of citizens and of State and local governments with respect to the work of Federal agencies.

(E) To report to the President, on the basis of the information it has obtained, possible ways and means for reducing the cost of the operation of the government.

III—The Bureau of the Budget, the National Resources Planning Board and the Liaison Office for Personnel Management shall constitute the three principal management arms of the government for the (1) preparation and administration of the budget and improvement of administrative management and organization, (2) planning for conservation and utilization of the resources of the nation, and (3) coordination of the administration of personnel, none of which belong in any department but which are necessary for the over-all management of the executive branch of government, so that the President will be enabled the better to carry out his constitutional duties of informing the Congress with respect to the state of the Union, of recommending appropriate and expedient measures, and of seeing that the laws are faithfully executed.

IV—To facilitate the orderly transaction of business within each of the five divisions herein defined and to clarify the relations of these divisions with each other and with the President, I direct that the Bureau of the Budget, the National Resources Planning Board, the Liaison Office for Personnel Management and the Office of Government Reports shall respectively prepare regulations for the governance of their internal organizations and procedures. Such regulations shall be in effect when approved by the President and shall remain in force until changed by new regulations approved by him. The President will prescribe regulations governing the conduct of the business of the division of the White House Office.

V—The Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall prepare a consolidated budget for the Executive Office of the President for submission by the President to the Congress. Annually, pursuant to the regular request issued by the Bureau of the Budget, each division of the Executive Office of the President shall prepare and submit to the bureau estimates of proposed appropriations for the succeeding fiscal year. The form of the estimates and the manner of their consideration for incorporation in the budget shall be the same as prescribed for other executive departments and agencies.

The Bureau of the Budget shall likewise perform with respect to the several divisions of the Executive Office of the President such functions and duties relating to supplemental estimates, apportionments, and budget administration as are exercised by it for other agencies of the Federal Government.

VI. Space already has been assigned in the State, War and Navy Building, adjacent to the White House, sufficient to accommodate the Bureau of the Budget with its various divisions (including the Central Statistical Board), the central office of the National Resources Planning Board, the liaison office for personnel management and the administrative assistants to the President. And although, for the time being, a considerable portion of the work of the National Resources Planning Board and all of that of the office of government reports will have to be conducted in other quarters, if, and when, the Congress makes provision for the housing of the Department of State in a building appropriate to its function and dignity and provision is made for the other agencies now accommodated in the State, War and Navy Building, it then will be possible to bring into this building, close to the White House, all of the personnel of the executive office of the President except the White House Office.

This order shall take effect on Sept. 11, 1939.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

NEUTRALITY STEPS MEET LAW IN FULL

Washington Officials Expect No New Important Moves Until Congress Call

PUBLIC IS BEING SOUNDED

Frazier Predicts Delay on the Session and Demands Arms Embargo Be Retained

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (AP).—Well-advised authorities said today that the Administration believed it had established all the necessary machinery to protect American neutrality, and that in the absence of unforeseen developments it would take no further important steps until Congress was called into special session.

It was said that the Administration had not yet drafted any new proposals for revision of the Neutrality Act, but it was thought certain that Congress would be asked to repeal the arms embargo.

Public sentiment, it was said, probably would determine whether the President would ask for complete repeal of all neutrality legislation or would suggest the substitution of a cash-and-carry program for the present law.

Cash-and-Carry Terms

Under a cash-and-carry program belligerents could buy what they wanted in the United States and carry it away in their own ships. This proposal would open United States markets to Great Britain and France, because they presumably would have control of the Atlantic sea lanes.

President Roosevelt was reported in some quarters as anxious to obtain assurances from all Congressional leaders that the special session would be confined to action on neutrality and that it would be as brief as possible.

Administration officials declared that there had been evidences of increasing sentiment for repeal of the embargo provision, but this was disputed by Senator Frazier, North Dakota, Republican.

He predicted that there would be "a determined battle" if Congress were asked to repeal the embargo, and declared that "any attempt to supply arms to either side will push us into that mix-up."

He left for his home today, saying he was confident there would be no special session for several weeks.

Surmises Roosevelt Course

"I don't think the President will call Congress unless he feels pretty certain he can get what he wants in a hurry," he commented. "And I believe he knows that is not possible on neutrality legislation."

Senator Guffey, Pennsylvania Democrat, asserted that the neutrality law could be revised along the lines desired by the Administration within two weeks after Congress was reconvened unless there was "a filibuster by a handful of Senators."

Although the Chief Executive has no power to limit the agenda of a special session, some informants asserted that he might issue a proclamation asking Congress to act specifically on the neutrality question. Not since the administration of President Taft has a Chief Executive definitely named a subject for consideration in a proclamation calling Congress into special session.

IDEAS CLEAR TODAY ON WHAT IS CONTRABAND

Subject Is Not Likely To Raise So Many Controversies Now

British List Is Almost Exactly Same As That Of U. S. In 1917

1939

30.24-3201

30.24 3201

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 9—The question of contraband, what it is and what it isn't, which raised so many controversies for the American Government during the World War, seems likely to cause little trouble in the present European conflict.

Contraband means a product useful in war which a belligerent—say, Britain—could take from a ship—say, American—if destined to another belligerent—say, Germany.

The British Government already has presented this Government with a list of what—for the moment—it will regard as contraband. It embraces everything likely to prove useful to the German army, navy and air force. It has been received here without a murmur. Why? Because it is almost word for word the very list the United States itself issued when it became a belligerent in 1917.

In the World War, the British started out with a small list and gradually extended it. The extension was accompanied by regrets, protest and reservations of rights on the part of the United States.

Situation In World War

Acting Secretary of State Lansing told the British the month after the war opened that the United States always had insisted that foodstuffs were legitimate articles of commerce, and that mere destination to an enemy port did not justify their seizure or confiscation.

There was a diplomatic exchange between the two countries on the subject of making cotton contraband, but the State Department did not protest.

When, however, the British added turpentine and rosin, Secretary of State Bryan told them he received this information "with profound regret."

Lansing And Bryan

The next year, when Britain announced she intended to treat alike absolute contraband (war materials) and conditional contraband (products that might be useful, like foodstuffs) Lansing notified the British Government of the reservation of all rights of the United States in regard to any American interests which might be injured by this action or by the "illegal extension of the contraband lists during the present war by Great Britain or her Allies."

But when the United States itself became a belligerent, things looked different. The Government on June 30, 1917, issued a contraband list which could be easily mistaken for the one Great Britain issued the other day.

It, too, was all-embracive.

Two years before, Secretary Bryan had told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the record of the United States itself with regard to contraband was not free from criticism. When neutral, he said, it had "stood for a restricted list" of absolute and conditional contraband, As a belligerent, the United States had sought a liberal list according to its "conception of the necessities of the case."

Now we have the present British contraband list containing five categories, as did the American list of 1917. The British list starts out with the words: "All kinds of arms, ammunition, explosives, chemicals or appliances suitable for use in chemical warfare, and machines for their manufacture and repair; component parts thereof, articles necessary or convenient for their use."

STANDARD OIL LOSES TANKER BY TORPEDOING

Ship Owned By London Subsidiary Flew British Flag

SEP 1 0193

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—The far-reaching attacks of European belligerents against enemy shipping on the high seas carried an indirect blow at American interests today in the torpedoing of the loaded oil tanker Kennebec near the English coast.

Although the 5,548-ton vessel flew the British flag, she was owned by a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey, the Anglo-American Oil Company of London. She was commanded by Capt. E. J. Instone and left New York August 8 for Aruba, where Standard Oil maintains a refinery. The Kennebec traveled from there to San Juan and back to Aruba before sailing August 22 for England with a load of fuel oil.

Crew Called All-British

Standard Oil officials in New York said they believed all the crew members were British. The ship usually carried thirty-seven men, they said, but a Holland-American Line freighter yesterday advised Amsterdam she had saved the full crew of thirty-two.

The only reported loss of the day the tanker raised to seventeen the known total of ships sunk since the war broke out and sent the British-French toll to ten. Four German, one Dutch, one Greek and an unidentified vessel which observers believed German also have gone down.

Meanwhile, the chief foes in the sea warfare—the British and Germans—made conflicting claims as to the success of England's efforts to halt Nazi shipping and thus cut off vital supplies.

Britain Claims Success

The British Government asserted Germany is "virtually" cut off from "overseas sources of war supply," and that the naval blockade is "now virtually complete except for the Baltic."

In a speech to German munition workers, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering declared a blockade would be ineffective because Germany could obtain raw materials from Russia—as well as Poland.

Crew Describes Sinking Of Their Ship By U-Boat

Folkestone, England, Sept. 9 (AP)—The thirty-five-man crew of the sunken British steamer Pukkastan reached here in a rescue ship tonight and told of leading a submarine a two-mile chase before giving up.

"We saw a periscope just above the water not more than fifty yards away about midday Thursday," said one of the sailors. "We attempted to keep the U-boat off until help arrived by steering a zigzag course for nearly two miles.

"The submarine then came to the surface and realizing it was useless we took to our two boats."

He said the submarine commander determined that all hands were safely off, then announced, "I'm going to sink your ship. Good-by."

A Netherlands boat soon picked up the crew.

SEP 10 1939

Girl, 10, From Athenia Dies On Rescue Vessel

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Maritime Commission received a message tonight from the captain of its steamer City of Flint, saying that Margaret Haysworth, 10, died early this morning from a brain injury received at the time of the torpedoing of the British steamer Athenia.

The message asked that John Hayworth, of Hamilton, Ontario, be notified. The City of Flint is expected to reach Halifax, N. S., probably Wednesday bringing 215 survivors of the Athenia disaster.

British Cable-Laying Ship Leaves Boston

Boston, Sept. 9 (AP)—The British cable laying ship, John W. McKay, her hull painted a gray-black, sailed from here today with her exact destination unknown. She was believed bound for the North Atlantic for transatlantic cable repair work.

The McKay, which took on a large amount of fuel oil, put in here two weeks ago. She was repainted after war was declared.

British Vessel Cancels New York-Nassau Sailing

Nassau, Bahamas, Sept. 9 (AP)—The British steamship Lancastria has canceled its weekly sailing between New York and Nassau because of the war.

Persons now here with round-trip tickets will return to New York on the liner Munargo.

64 Belligerent Ships Now In South America

Buenos Aires, Sept. 9 (AP)—The end of the first week of the war found at least thirty-one British, thirty German and three French ships anchored in South American east coast harbors, from Belem, northern Brazil, to Mar Del Plata, Argentina.

British shipping generally was continuing with restricted movements, but German merchantmen have not left the harbors since blockading British cruisers were reported to have seized and sunk at least three Nazi vessels.

WARNS U. S. SHIPS

Hydrographic Office Gives Advice for War Safety.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (A. P.)—The Naval Hydrographic Office, officials disclosed today, has inaugurated a supplemental system of special warnings to shipping as a result of the European situation.

These special warnings, providing word of international developments affecting shipping, are in addition to the office's primary function of collecting and disseminating information to promote navigational safety.

The office has issued the United States Maritime Commission's directions to all American merchant vessels en route to or from European ports not to zigzag or blackout and to have American flags painted on each side of the hull and on hatches for and aft, and on sundeck of passenger vessels with flag on staff spotlighted at night.

Supplementing this special warning was other commission advice that vessels engaged in domestic trade, nearby foreign trade and Pacific trades, except 'round-the-world vessels, were not required to have the flag painted on hull, hatches or sundeck. Instructions covering zigzagging, blackout and illuminating the flag apply, however.

DRAFTED SHIPS SAIL ABROAD FOR AMERICANS

Manhattan Gets Under Way After Several Hours Of Delay

SEP 10 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—Commandeered ships today turned their bows toward Europe, many of them under forced draft, to bring home American nationals from war zones.

The United States liner Manhattan, after several hours delay attended by labor controversies and confusion among passengers, sailed at mid-afternoon for Cobh, Southampton and Leverdun, carrying 735 passengers, including but few Americans.

She will be available for approximately 2,200 stranded Americans, 700 more than normal capacity, on the home voyage.

The Manhattan left a day behind the New York-Cuba mail liner Orizaba, chartered by the United States Maritime Commission, and was to be followed as soon as hasty arrangements could be made by four other ships drafted from coastwise service.

Other Drafted Ships

They are the Shawnee, at its pier after arrival from Florida yesterday; the Iroquois, returning from a Carribbean cruise; the Acadia, which arrived from Bermuda yesterday, and her sister, the St. John, expected from Nova Scotia tomorrow. These, plus the Orizaba, will return approximately 3,500 persons.

Floating safely in dock after an anxious crossing through the torpedo-menaced north Atlantic lanes was the French liner Ile de France; she brought 1,801 passengers to American shores, 1,294 of them American citizens. They touched home soil early today.

The Italian liner Rex left Genoa yesterday with 2,000 more refugees, principally Americans.

Two More England-Bound

Two United States lines ships, the American Importer and the American Banker, also were on the high seas, England-bound, ahead of normal schedules.

Delayed almost four hours, the Manhattan found itself earlier today without sufficient skilled crew, which slowly was supplied. Labor difficulties pivoted on the National Maritime union's (C. I. O.) demand for a bonus of $250 an individual, $25,000 individual insurance and a forty per cent., personnel increase on ships sailing in war zones.

It was subsequently said that the line was not in position to grant extra benefits, but that the Maritime Commission had indicated its willingness to negotiate a fair arrangement.

Shortage, Belief

Line officials said they believed a genuine shortage of skilled and experienced men was responsible for the delay.

Passengers included the former Virginia Cherrill, of the movies, now the Countess of Jersey, who has opened her English home to 168 London children.

Another ship arrival was the Johan Van Oldenbarnevelt, a Netherlands liner. Carrying 502 Americans, she docked at Hoboken, N. J., early today.

FREIGHT RATES

SEP 10 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—Freight rates on cargo from Atlantic ports of the United States to Great Britain were increased 33½ per cent. today by the North Atlantic-United Kingdom Conference.

The conference, composed of the principal American and foreign lines operating to England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland, said the step was necessary because of increased war-risk insurance costs.

The North Atlantic-Baltic Conference earlier this week suspended all contracts with shippers in some instances and advanced other rates one hundred per cent.

Underwriters' First Loss

Meanwhile, American war-risk underwriters here reported their first loss since the outbreak of war in the sinking of the British freighter Olivegrove with a cargo of sugar valued at $250,000. The ship was torpedoed off Ireland on Thursday.

Except for a small claim early in the Sino-Japanese War, this was the first loss suffered by marine war-risk underwriters here since 1920.

Boom At West Coast Ports

San Francisco, Sept. 9—Freight charges on ships operating between the Pacific Coast and Europe, and between South America and this coast, will be increased 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. next Monday due to war conditions.

War cargo demands are causing a shipping boom in all Pacific Coast ports.

The rate increases were announced yesterday after meetings of the Pacific Coast-European Conference and the Pacific Coast-River Platte-Brazil Conference. Representatives of twenty-eight lines attended.

Increases Explained

George Yater, chairman of the Pacific Coast-European Conference, said the rate increases were based on estimated increased costs, chiefly war-risk insurance and increased wages and bonuses for the crews. Rates to Norway, Denmark and Mediterranean ports were increased fifty per cent. Those to the United Kingdom and mid-Continental ports go up one-third.

E. J. A. Watts, spokesman for the Pacific Coast-River Platte-Brazil Conference, said rates for northbound cargoes, except coffee and Brazil nuts, would be increased fifty per cent. Southbound cargo increases will be announced next week.

Building Five New Ships

Shipping firms disclosed that all American West Coast ships were booked to capacity, due to diversion of cargo from foreign lines.

The Maritime Commission ordered the construction of five new 12,875-ton, 14-knot freighters in San Francisco shipyards.

1939

Shipping men at Houston, Texas, yesterday increased the freight rate for cotton shipments to United Kingdom and French ports.

NAZIS NOT TO GET COTTON

5,000 Bales Germany-Bound Unloaded At Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 9 (AP)—Port officials said tonight 5,000 bales of cotton en route to Germany aboard the American steamer Patrick Henry were being discharged here.

The Patrick Henry, which sailed from Corpus Christi September 1, bound for Rotterdam and Bremen, was ordered to turn back and discharge her cargo here. The cotton will be placed in storage.

Maritime Commission Backs War Insurance

Pledges Aid to Seamen's Union, Appeals for Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Maritime Commission told a union leader today it would press for seamen's war-risk insurance legislation, in event of a special session of Congress, but urged that the matter not be allowed to interfere with bringing Americans home from Europe at the present time.

The commission announced that Emory S. Land, chairman, had given this assurance to Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, Committee for Industrial Organization aliate, during an informal discussion of the problems involved in obtaining such insurance and extra compensation for seamen on American vessels.

Mr. Land explained, the announcement said, that the commission had no legal authority to engage in the writing of war-risk insurance for seamen. The most expedient solution, the commission added, was contained in the agreement between the crew of the liner President Roosevelt, which sailed this week, and the United States Lines, under which the company agreed to make retroactive any war-risk insurance and extra compensation provided within sixty days.

First War-Risk Loss

With the sinking of the British freighter Oliverove Tuesday, the American [illegible] War-Risk Re-Insurance Exchange, comprising about 100 members, suffered its first loss of the war and the first since early in the Chinese-Japanese war, it was learned today. The ship, which was torpedoed, carried a $250,000 cargo of Cuban sugar. The exchange was formed June 10 to pool war-risk insurance.

—U. S. DEFENSE—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 9—The army and navy hope to recruit in a few weeks most of the 100,000 reinforcements of the armed forces called for by President Roosevelt as a national emergency measure.

The President, proclaiming a limited emergency yesterday, ordered expansion of the regular army to 227,000, the National Guard to 235,000, the navy to 145,000 and the Marine Corps to 25,000.

Hundreds Of Volunteers

He directed that the armed forces be brought thus to a total man power of 632,000 as rapidly as possible.

Judging by the hundreds of volunteers who have come forward since the start of the European war, officials said the additions could be made in a matter of weeks.

Many details remain to be worked out for the most intensive recruiting drive in peacetime history, but official announcements and explanations indicate these developments are likely:

1. The net increase of 17,000 in the regular army will be added to the existing recruiting quotas and the present army enlistment drive accelerated.

2. Less pressure will be exerted to expand the National Guard beyond its present strength of about 190,000 men and about 14,000 officers, as it is a second-line force.

3. The navy must add the largest number, 29,000, beyond increases for which Congress provided funds, but many of these can be taken quickly from a waiting list of more than 10,000 applicants and as volunteers from the Naval Reserve of 41,985 men and 14,060 officers.

4. The Marine Corps similarly has a reserve of 14,600 men and 1,126 officers from which to draw to increase its active strength by about 6,000.

Requirements Eased

The army, too, may draw from its reserve of 100,000 officers and 123,000 men.

To forestall delays, all the services are expected to be less strict in their requirements. The navy already has announced lifting of its top age limit, for first enlistments of six years, from 25 to 31. Former sailors out of the navy for less than eight years will be accepted at their old ratings. Other qualified ex-service men will be accepted up to 35.

—U. S. NAVY—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 9 — President Roosevelt's declaration of a limited national emergency found the navy today at an apparent peak of strength except in manpower.

The remedying of that deficiency was started with the President's order directing that personnel be expanded by 29,000, to a total of 145,000, "as rapidly as possible."

The navy and Coast Guard already were patroling the Atlantic Coast, but with the utmost secrecy. A blanket "no information" order masked the vessels' movements, officials said. Secrecy was essential, they explained, if the patrol was to detect warcraft in United States waters.

348 Ships In Commission

Aside from World War type destroyers now to be recommissioned, the navy has fifty-two vessels for East Coast duty, though some are submarines, whose usefulness is ilmited because they might be mistaken for foreign raiders.

Second in tonnage only to the British, the navy had 348 ships in commission during the past year, plus 101 under construction, and decommissioned destroyers awaiting only reconditioning.

In contrast, this country had only 187 vessels built and building in 1914, when its tonnage ranked below that of both Britain and Germany.

Disposition Of The Ships

Recreated in the midst of last spring's European crisis for the first time since 1931-32, the Atlantic squadron includes three battleships, an aircraft carrier, four heavy cruisers, nineteen destroyers and fourteen submarines.

There are also ten craft guarding the Panama Canal, and indications are that more will be added promptly.

On the West Coast the main battle force of 150-odd ships is being kept alert, while the Asiatic Fleet of 40 continues to stand by in the Far East.

In addition, a European squadron of three ships maintains a watch started during the Spanish civil war.

2,000 Planes, Five Carriers

For air combat there are 2,000 planes, with plans for a total of 3,000 within five years. Five aircraft carriers are in operation and two more are building.

Also under construction is a whole new network of naval bases.

Maintaining communications with the scattered fleets and bases are the million-dollar radio receiving station at Cheltenham, Md., put into use this year; the sending station at Annapolis and thirty-six radio traffic stations.

—U. S. PROFITEERING—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 9—The Capital speculated today as to whether the Administration might ask Congress to enact anti-profiteering laws at its regular session in January if prices should rise to an unjustified extent.

Present laws are inadequate to check undue rises, Attorney General Frank Murphy said yesterday. He added that he had almost completed study of increases in [illegible] since the war started.

Plenty Of Food

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday there were sufficient food supplies to meet any demand. He said there should be no hoarding and that Americans had no need to fear any shortages.

The President said some food prices might go up a little, but that they were not going through the roof as they did in World War days. Most food prices, he declared, were still below the parity figures sought by the farm program. An objective of that program is to elevate farm purchasing power to the 1909-14 level.

No Legislation Proposed

Murphy would not indicate whether new legislation would be sought, but Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference he had heard of no proposals.

Most of those in touch with the situation agreed that unless there were great price rises no action would be asked at the prospective special session of Congress. Informed legislators have indicated that the President hoped the special session would devote attention only to revision of the neutrality law.

In a speech last night, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace expressed confidence that farmers, processors, wholesalers, grocerymen and labor would not seek undue profits.

The National Association of Food Chains made public a letter to Secretary Wallace pledging its cooperation in the effort to preserve reasonable prices.

COTTON SESSIONS STOPPED BY WAR

International Conference in Washington Adjourns.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The International Cotton Conference adjourned today after deciding that a world export agreement, proposed by the United States, would be impractical because of the European war. In a resolution adopted at its closing session, the conference said, however, that "normally we would have recommended steps to achieve international agreement" to improve the cotton situation.

The American Government, in calling the conference which opened on Tuesday, sought the approval of the major cotton-exporting nations to a program providing for export quotas which would give each country its fair share of world markets and for adjustment of production to needs. Such a program, this Government had argued, would help to reduce present huge cotton surpluses and boost prices for growers.

Countries represented at the conference included India, Egypt, Brazil, the British cotton-exporting colonies, the French cotton-exporting colonies, Russia, Peru, Mexico, the Sudan and the United States.

BRITISH CENSOR SLOWS PHOTOS

Transmission [illegible] Barred, Sending by Cable Restricted

Radio transmission of news pictures from London to New York has been halted by the British censors and transmission by cable has been sharply restricted in the crush of news copy, the Associated Press said today.

Because of the British censorship, most of the war photos published here in the last few days came from Berlin where they were passed by the Ministry of Propaganda.

A shipment of AP pictures dispatched in time to have caught the Clipper which left Foynes, Ireland, Wednesday was not on board Thursday when the plane reached Port Washington, L. I.

Yesterday the British Board of Trade ruled that no pictures could be brought into Great Britain.

RETAILERS ASKED TO CURB PRICE RISE

Roosevelt Appeals To National Dry Goods Group To Protect Consumers

Says Higher Costs Would Absorb Purchasing Power And Affect Sales

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—President Roosevelt, in a letter to the National Retail Dry Goods Association, today asked the aid of the nation's retailers in protecting the public against wartime boosting of prices.

"It is absolutely essential that we protect the consumer by preventing any general rise in prices," said the communication.

"Unwarranted increase in prices would absorb purchasing power and block expansion of sales volume. Such a development would mean serious threat to continuance of our business progress.

"I hope that the nation's retailers, comprising as they do such an important segment of our economic life, will meet these new responsibilities in a manner best serving the interests of all our people."

On Eve Of Demonstration

The association made the letter public on the eve of National Retail Demonstration Week, planned as a nation-wide effort to show the role of retailing. The President praised the objectives of the demonstration as "serving a useful purpose."

He noted "American retailers have been enjoying the fruits of this year's upward business swing" and then turned to the price problem, asserting the "tragic events abroad" increased the retailer's responsibility to the public and demanded "business statesmanship to discourage and prevent any unwarranted advance in prices."

Lew Hahn, general manager of the association, representing 5,700 department and specialty stores, said the letter "strikes responsive chords in the minds of the retailers' representatives."

Agree With President

"We find ourselves in agreement with the President," he continued, "but it is necessary to point out that retailers have no control over what is happening in production and wholesaling markets."

Hahn said retailers, unaware of any threatened shortages of raw materials, generally were "confused and indignant over price advances which are being made in certain lines of merchandise."

"It is our judgment," he commented, "that the retailers, as purchasing agents for the public, can best fulfill the hope of the President and serve the general good at this time by keeping their heads, refusing to be stampeded and by resisting price increases which do not seem warranted."

The national retail demonstration is sponsored by the dry goods association with the support of various other national business groups, including the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Bankers Association.

WAR BLOWS MONEY TO U. S. MAP TRADE

More Sold Last Week Than Since 1918—Stocks Declared Exhausted

Presses Hum To Give Americans Something To Stick Little Red Pins In

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—The ill wind of Europe is blowing a lot of good American dollars into the pockets of American map makers and sellers.

Hitler's invasion of Poland on September 1 caught the map makers empty-handed, so to speak, Andrew McNally, of Rand, McNally & Co., said today, but the presses are working at top speed now to give Americans something to stick little red pins in.

"In the first twenty-four hours of the war," McNally said, "our stock was completely exhausted. We sold maps of Europe, [illegible]land, of Germany and France, as well as atlases.

"We sold more maps than we had sold since 1918."

All Maps Go As Guns Boom

Moreover, he said, the company sold out the maps it imports from Germany and England. Everything went as the guns boomed and men marched.

McNally said his company's latest map, which probably will be ready for distribution in a week, will show in detail the fortifications of the western front—France's Maginot Line and Germany's lines or Siegfried Line.

1939

30.24-3203

30.24 3203

"The presses are rolling off thousands of these and hundreds of thousands of maps of Europe," he said.

The outbreak of the war caught map makers with low stocks because Hitler's policy had engendered a certain hesitancy in map publishers. Changing boundaries from month to month gives map makers a protracted headache.

Map Making A Gamble

Map making, too, is a slow process. It involves the drawing, and an expensive and delicate engraving process. In the weeks before the drawing is started and the finished map comes off the press, the map itself may already be obsolete.

One map-making house waited a year before it changed its maps to show Ethiopia as an Italian colony.

Hitler, of course, has been responsible for more map changes than any other man since the World War. His Austrian coup was taken in their stride by publishers. They simply made the change, giving Austria to Germany.

The Czecho-Slovak crisis last September was more of a headache because they were uncertain what other changes lay ahead. Therefore, they proceeded slowly, keeping comparatively small stocks on hand in anticipation of another march.

Now, however, McNally said, they are prepared to turn out maps as fast as people will buy them, or even faster.

BARS CASH-CARRY

SEP 1 0 1939

Father Coughlin Says It's Road to War for U. S.

BOSTON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, in a telephoned address from his home in Royal Oak, Mich., told a rally of the Union for Social Justice last night that if a cash-and-carry clause is inserted in the neutrality act "the United States will be in the European fight within two years."

Arguing that Hitler's invasion of Poland was inexcusable, he said he held no brief for England and France for the terms imposed by the Versailles treaty.

"Two years after any cash-and-carry plan is put in effect, if the war lasts that long," the priest said, "you mothers and fathers can begin to prepare your sons for the slaughter."

U. S. War Councillor Called From Alaska

SEP 10 1939

Gen. Robert E. Wood Summoned By Word Carried By Indian Runner

Jun[illegible], Sept. 9 (AP)—An Indian runner's thirty-hour forced march through the wilds of Alaka sent Gen. Robert E. Wood, a member of the United States Emergency War Council, hurrying back to the States today.

Wood, head of Sears, Roebuck and Company, and three companions were hunting in the Donjex river country when the Indian stumbled into camp with word that Europe was at war.

With Wood were Russell B. Stearns and H. Wendell Endicott, Boston, and Col. William Donovan, New York City.

TO SEND POLES SUPPLIES

Red Cross Appropriates $50,000 For Hospital Work

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP)—The American Red Cross announced today it had appropriated $50,000 to purchase hospital tents, medicine and blankets for the Polish Red Cross.

It also advanced $25,000 to the American Hospital in Paris.

A.T.&T. To Open Service With Italy Tomorrow

SEP 0 9 1939

New Direct Radio Telephone Communication Arranged Several Weeks Due to War

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—The American Telephone and Telegraph Company announced today that because of conditions in Europe it had set ahead the opening of direct radio telephone service to Italy.

The service, which begins Monday instead of later in the month as originally planned, soon may be extended to other countries in Central and Southeastern Europe.

MYSTERY AT CAPITAL

State Paper Disappears From President's Desk.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (A. P.).—The President of the United States looked over his desk, ruffled some papers and said in effect:

Now, where did I put it?

The room was crowded with reporters and the paper was pretty important—a copy of the limited emergency proclamation.

He picked up a folded paper and searched beneath it. He shook his head. It wasn't there. He looked under another paper. It wasn't there, either.

It was there a minute ago, he said.

His secretary, Stephen Early, joined the search.

About 150 newspaper men stood around silently as the President hunted high and low.

Two secret service men joined the search, without success.

The President repeated that the paper was there a minute ago.

The hunt continued.

Mr. Roosevelt made sure he wasn't sitting on the proclamation.

He puffed up his cheeks and directed his attention to the waste basket.

This drew a big laugh.

Finally, Mr. Roosevelt threw up his hands, abandoned the hunt and asked an aid to go get him another copy.

1939 WAR BRIDE MET HIM IN 1917

SEP 10 1939

First Romance Spoiled, So They Hurry to Wed This Time

CHICAGO, Sept. 9 (AP)—Cupid won a long duel with the god of war today when Yvonne Jacques became the bride of Paul Revelli.

Yvonne, a Parisian school teacher, met Revelli in 1917 when he was recuperating from wounds. The war prevented their marriage. Three years later Yvonne came to Chicago. She married an American artist and bore two children. She was divorced in 1932.

Last week Paul, a wealthy perfume manufacturer, arrived in Chicago, determined that another war should not spoil the romance. After their marriage today Paul will hurry home to serve his country, Yvonne and her mother will continue with their antique shop here.

Dominic Mussolini Gets His Citizenship Papers

SEP 10 1939

Unemployed Steelworker Says He Is Cousin of Il Duce, But He Wouldn't Go Back

Warren, Ohio, Sept. 9 (AP)—Dominic Mussolini, a 57-year-old unemployed steel worker who says he is a second cousin of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, became an American citizen today.

He told Judge Dewey McVicker he and the Duce played together when both were children, and that he came to the United States from Buenos Aires in 1909.

Asked by Judge McVicker if he under his cousin's rule, Mussolini replied:

"No, I love this country; I want to would like to return to Italy to live stay here."

Students Organize Band and Play Home

SEP 10 1939

Hoboken, N. J. Sept. 9 (AP)—Stranded without money in Europe, five University of Pennsylvania students organized "the hottest swing band you ever heard" and played their way home on the Holland-American liner Johnann Van Oldenbarnevelt, which arrived today.

"We weren't good, but we were loud," said Robert Lowe Junzig, of Philadelphia, leader of the troupe.

With money borrowed from the American consul at Cherbourg, France, after they spent their own, the students purchased second-hand instruments and went to Holland.

"Finally," Kunzig added, "we got to a couple of directors of the Holland American Line and they agreed to give us an audition. Wow! How we played! There was nothing else for them to do but sign us up."

With Kunzig were William Wren, of Merion, Pa.; Bud Howell, of Wayne, Pa.; Robert Schullin, of Stoneborough, Pa., and Norman Davis, of Berlin, New York.

How European Censors Work

France Has Her Black Chamber, but Reich Puts Reporters on Own Responsibility.

SEPT. 9 By Associated Press. SEP 10 1939

Europe's wartime censorship is hampering the flow of news, but creating its own antidote in the vigilance of well-trained newspaper men.

Britain, France, Germany and Poland often can prevent American reporters from sending promptly unfavorable truths, but can't compel them to send recognized lies.

A newspaper man's judgment of what is true may be imperfect, but the mere idea of censorship puts him on his guard and he keeps a "Stop! Look! Listen" sign on his typewriter.

Censorship varies in different countries. Here is the present situation:

London—Censors sit in the cable, wireless and telegraph offices actually reading dispatches submitted. They delay the news, but they find little to suppress. Trained newspaper men, by intelligent selection of public statements or the method of presentation, can present the facts.

When British planes made their flights over Germany to drop leaflets warning Germans against their own German Government, there was news in the fact and news in what the British Government said. The expedition's propaganda motive was labeled as such.

At the same time, American reporters in Bordin showed what German propaganda machinery was doing to counteract it. Coupled with those two sides of the story was a presentation from a neutral, uncensored point of this propaganda war, making the reader fully aware of what was being done and the propaganda reasons.

Paris—French censors long have functioned in what the French call the Cabinet Noir (Black Chamber). In every transmission office, a governmental employee watches dispatches, largely as a matter of form, but the machinery was ready and functioned frequently to prevent immediate dispatch of news which might affect France's credit abroad. This censorship has been expanded to permit examination of all outgoing and incoming dispatches.

Berlin—Censorship existed before the war only on a responsibility basis. Correspondents were free to transmit what they wished, but if they sent what the Ministry of Propaganda declared to be untrue, and which was considered damaging to Germany, the correspondent would be in disfavor. He might not be received by officials for some time, or he might be expelled from the country.

Germany still grants considerable freedom to foreign newspaper men and the Associated Press bureau has been able to send its news without other than this moral censorship of very strict responsibility.

Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press in Berlin, recently told A. P. headquarters in New York that correspondents were operating with the military on a basis of mutual trust, a sort of gentlemen's agreement.

Warsaw—So far as is known, Poland has left correspondents free to send what news they wished, but in Poland, also, even before the war, the Foreign Office watched news published abroad and complained if a dispatch seemed unfavorable. However, rarely, if ever, was there any attempt at disciplinary action.

Rome—Italy long has had a censorship of responsibility such as that in Germany, but perhaps more severe. Probably more correspondents have been expelled from Italy than from Germany.

Italy Expels Reporters.

There is considerable restriction on a correspondent's freedom to telephone out what news he wishes, but this may be due only to the interruption of many telephone circuits from Rome which pass through France and Germany. The Associated Press correspondent in Rome has been able to send some news by telephone to another A. P. bureau for relay, but other dispatches come by cable, in which case they pass through a governmental functionary who is not admitted by Italy to be a censor, but who has the authority to read all messages.

Moscow—Once, the Russian censorship was rigidly careful, but, a month ago, it was abolished. Today, correspondents may send what they wish, but, as in Germany and Italy, they are made to feel strong personal responsibility for the accuracy and freedom from bias of their news.

Even Among Neutrals.

Neutral countries—Censorship is not visible in neutral countries such as Switzerland, The Netherlands and Belgium, but various requirements that dispatches be signed and all in clear language is proof that they are being watched, even if they are not being censored in a technical sense.

Radio—Broadcasts from all countries abroad, so far as is known, are submitted in writing before being delivered, or there is a close watch by authorities with power to interrupt.

Censorship is an old habit in Europe. The German and Italian papers long have been under strict Government control. Occasionally, a newspaper steps out too far and the offending issue is confiscated. Sometimes, papers are suspended.

In Hungary, one is aware of local censorship when papers appear with blank spaces where there should have been type. Foreign correspondents, however, are unaware of any censorship of their dispatches.

By and large, European censorship probably does its exponents more harm than good. American newspaper men keep good faith in refraining from sending anything which might be military information useful to an enemy, but they are even more alert to smell out propaganda. Some propaganda is news, but when it bears a label, the harm it can do is lessened, if not eliminated.

Some countries put out fantastic stories of victories or widespread atrocities which newspaper men quickly identify as intended for home consumption and disregard. Mention of them occasionally is to show the nature of the propaganda war which never has been on such a scale as in this Anglo-Franco-Polish-German war, with four Powers participating.

ADD-LWOW, POLAND—SEPT. 9—XXX DESTINATION

LATER WE LEARNED THAT THE GERMAN RADIO STATION IN KOENIGSBERG, HAD ANNOUNCED THAT THE POLISH FOREIGN OFFICE HAD MOVED TO LALENCZOW AND EVEN DESCRIBED THE HOUSE WHERE UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR ANTHONY J.DREXEL BIDDLE, JR., HAD MADE HIS HEADQUARTERS.

MAJOR COLBERN WAS CERTAIN THE ADVANCING GERMAN FORCES WERE NOT CLOSE ENOUGH TO REACH US BEFORE DAYLIGHT AND NEEDING SLEEP WE HAD OUR PICK OF THE DESERTED HOUSES AND CHATEAUX OF THE SUMMER RESORT.

BIDDLE WAS GONE FROM THE CHATEAU TO WHICH HE HAD MOVED.

WE SLEPT ON STRAW MATS WHILE HURRYING AUTOS OUTSIDE RUSHED TO FILL THEIR TANKS WITH GASOLINE AND THEN SPED AWAY EASTWARD TOWARD THE RUSSIAN FRONTIER.

SEP 10 1939

WHEN WE HUNTED BREAKFAST THE NEXT MORNING WE WERE DIRECTED BY AN AMERICAN WOMAN, MRS.STEFAN SLIWONSKI, WHO FORMERLY WAS MISS ELIZABETH LONDZEISKI OF (1426 WOODWARD AVE.) LAKEWOOD, OHIO. AS THE WIFE OF A POLISH ARMY CAPTAIN SHE AND HER DAUGHTER WERE REMAINING IN NALENCZOW.

BETWEEN LUBLIN AND LWOW I SAW EVIDENCE OF THE HEAVY CASUALTIES AND SEVERE DAMAGE WHICH GERMAN AIR RAIDERS HAVE INFLICTED FAR BEHIND THE BATTLE LINES.

ONE TOWN OF 3,000 INHABITANTS, TOMASZOW, WAS IN FLAMES WHEN I STOPPED THERE FOR MORE THAN AN HOUR DURING THE NIGHT.

AT LEAST 30 PERSONS HAD BEEN KILLED, MANY WOUNDED AND OVER 200 HOMES BURNED. FRANTIC VILLAGERS FEARED THERE WERE MORE CASUALTIES TRAPPED IN THE BURNING RUINS AS THE RESULT OF A BOMBING RAID THAT AFTERNOON WHEN THE TOWN WAS CROWDED WITH PEASANTS ON MARKET DAY.

A18

A WEEPING JEWESS BY THE ROADSIDE TOLD ME HOW THE VILLAGERS SUDDENLY HAD SEEN NINE SPECKS APPEAR IN THE BLUE INDIAN-SUMMER SKY ABOUT 3 P.M. A FEW MOMENTS LATER NINE GERMAN PLANES SWOOPED LOW WHILE THE VILLAGERS RAN FOR COVER.

QUICKLY TERRIFIC EXPLOSIONS SHOOK THE TOWN AS INCENDIARY AND A NUMBER OF OTHER SMALLER EXPLOSIVE BOMBS FELL FROM THE PLANES. FIRES FLARED IN A DOZEN PLACES AT ONCE. THE FRANTIC POPULACE FOUGHT TO ESCAPE THE BURNING BUILDINGS INTO THE OPEN COUNTRYSIDE.

THE JEWESS' STORY WAS CONFIRMED BY DOZENS OF OTHER VILLAGERS WHILE I WATCHED THE TOWN BURNING AND COUNTED SCORES OF CHIMNEYS STANDING AMONG THE SMOKY RUINS.

WITH TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMMUNICATIONS INTERRUPTED AND NO AUTOS OR HORSES AVAILABLE IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO MAKE A SURVEY OF OTHER POLISH TOWNS TO DETERMINE EXTENT OF THE DAMAGE BY GERMANY'S AIR INVADERS.

SEP 10 1939

BUT ALL THE VILLAGERS AGREED THAT THERE WERE NO TROOPS IN TOMASZOW NOR ANY INDUSTRIES WHICH MIGHT BE CONSIDERED MILITARY OBJECTIVES.

DISRUPTED COMMUNICATIONS AND A STRICT CENSORSHIP MADE IT IMPOSSIBLE TO FILE DISPATCHES FROM POLAND, FORCING US TO GO TO RUMANIA.

ALONG THE ENTIRE ROAD FROM WARSAW, WE SAW NO RETREATING POLISH TROOPS. ALL THAT WERE MOVING BY DAY AND BY NIGHT WERE GOING TOWARD THE FRONT LINES.

THERE WAS NO SIGN OF PANIC AMONG THE POPULATIONS OF TOWNS AND

30.24-3205

30.24 3205

VILLAGES FROM LUBLIN EASTWARD AND LIFE WENT ON NORMALLY WITH PEASANTS TILLING THE FIELDS AND HARVESTING CROPS.

MORE THAN A DOZEN TIMES DURING THE RIDE, GERMAN PLANES FLEW OVERHEAD, BOMBED TOWNS AND CITIES OF MILITARY OBJECTIVE IN THE DISTRICT, BUT WE WERE UNABLE TO CHECK ON THEM.

IN TOWNS AND CITIES WHICH HAD BEEN BOMBED, CITIZENS AND OFFICIALS WERE EXTREMELY SUSPICIOUS OF ALL FOREIGNERS BECAUSE OF THE PREVALENCE OF GERMAN SPIES. WE WERE SUBJECTED TO A CLOSE EXAMINATION OF CREDENTIALS AND QUESTIONING.

WE REACHED BUCHAREST 50 HOURS LATER, AFTER THREE BLOWOUTS, SEVERAL HALTS BECAUSE OF ENGINE TROUBLE, HOURS OF DRIVING WITHOUT LIGHTS OVER SOME OF THE WORLD'S WORST ROADS, FOUR CHANGES OF TRAINS, LONG TIRESOME STOPS, WAITS IN STATIONS CROWDED WITH REFUGEES, TWO BOMBINGS, 12 AIR ALARMS, AND NO SLEEP OR HOT FOOD.

G826PED

SEPT 9— ADD KY LATEST XXX EMERGENCIES.

"SWEEP AWAY CALMLY ALONG THE BARRICADES. THANK YOU FOR GIVING FOOD AND ENCOURAGEMENT TO OUR BRAVE SOLDIERS. KEEP ON ENCOURAGING THEM AND CONTINUE YOUR CALM DAILY LIVES."

SEP 10 1939

THE SPEAKER ADMONISHED THE CITIZENS TO "REFUSE TO LISTEN TO LIARS AND INTRIGUERS. REMAIN WHERE YOU ARE AND REPORT TO AIR DEFENSE COMMITTEES AND HOME GUARD HEADQUARTERS. WATCH EVERY STREET CORNER. WE MUST PROTECT OURSELVES FIRST, AND NOT EXPECT HELP FROM OTHERS.

"I SAW A YOUNG MAN ON DUTY WHO HAD BEEN THERE 24 HOURS TO PROTECT YOU AGAINST RAIDS. PLEASE RELIEVE THESE YOUNG MEN. THE FIRE DEPARTMENT CAN NOT GET AROUND THE CITY NOW, BECAUSE OF BARRICADES SO YOU MUST HELP EXTINGUISH INCENDIARY BOMB FIRES.

"GO TO THE SLAUGHTERHOUSE FOR PIGS HAVE ARRIVED. HELP THE BUTCHERS THERE. GO TO THE POSTOFFICE AND PICK UP YOUR MAIL YOURSELVES. THE BANKS ARE OPEN, SO DO YOUR BANKING. ALL STORES MUST BE KEPT OPEN. LEAD YOUR LIVES QUIETLY, GO ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS, BELIEVE IN GOD AND OUR JUST VICTORY."

SEP 10 1939

THE SPEAKER TOLD THE CITIZENS THEY MUST GET ACCUSTOMED TO WAR.

"WE WILL NEVER SURRENDER AND OUR ENEMY WILL HAVE TO YIELD," HE SAID. "HE IS BEING PRESSED IN THE WEST BY FRANCE AND WILL HAVE TO WITHDRAW SOME FORCES HERE."

THE POLES WERE HEARTENED BY "WESTERN FRONT SUCCESSES OF FRANCE," THE SPEAKER SAID AND ANNOUNCED THAT HUGE SYMPATHY DEMONSTRATIONS WERE HELD TONIGHT BEFORE THE FRENCH AND BRITISH EMBASSIES.

THE POLISH TROOPS WERE DESCRIBED AS "FIGHTING TIRELESSLY, AIDED BY CIVILIANS."

"THREE COMPANPES OF CIVILIAN RELIEF WORKERS ARE MAINTAINING A LIASON BETWEEN THE TROOPS AND THE CITY," THE BROADCAST SAID. "HOUSEWIVES ARE EVEN RUSHING FOOD OUT TO THE LINES. OTHERS HAVE BEEN SWORN INTO THE POLICE FORCES."

"EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN WARSAW IS AIDING THE VALIANT TROOPS FIGHTING BACK THE ENEMY AT THE GATES OF THE CITY," THE ANNOUNCER SAID. "ALL ARE DETERMINED TO DIE OR MAKE THE GERMANS BREAK THEIR TEETH ON WARSAW."

G819PED

AA2

ADD SEPT. 1—

EDITORS: THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER FOURTH GRAPH, PARIS, HENRY'S SECOND NIGHT LEAD FRENCH, XXX OF TERRITORY."

THE FACT THAT THE COMMUNIQUE FOR THE FIRST TIME MENTIONED THE USE OF FORCES AS LARGE AS A DIVISION INDICATED THE BATTLE WAS ONE OF GROWING SCOPE.

IT INDICATED, TOO, THAT THE FIRST PART OF THE SECOND WEEK OF THE WAR MIGHT SEE AN END TO PRELIMINARY ACTION AND THE BEGINNING OF OPERATIONS ON A LARGER SCALE.

DURING THE FIRST WEEK THE GENERAL STAFF INSISTED ON OPERATIONS LIMITED TO LOCAL ADVANCE GUARD ACTIONS.

DURING THE LAST TWO DAYS XXX ETC. PICKING UP FIFTH GRAF.

SEP 1 01939

DB721PED

PARIS--FIRST ADD FIRST NIGHT LEAD FRENCH X X X WESTERN FRONT.

SEPT 9

WHEN FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT STARTED AT DAWN MONDAY IT TOOK UP, AS FAR AS THE TACTICAL SITUATION WAS CONCERNED, ALMOST EXACTLY WHERE IT LEFT OFF AT 11 A.M., NOVEMBER 11, 1918. TWO GREAT LINES OF ENTRENCHMENTS WERE SEPARATED BY A NO-MAN'S-LAND.

WHERE THE LAST WORLD WAR STARTED AS ONE OF MANEUVER, THIS WAR ALREADY WAS STABILIZED IN THE TRENCHES WITH POSITIONS FULLY MANNED BEFORE THE FIRST SHOT WAS FIRED. ACTION STARTED MONDAY WITH HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE ALONG THE WHOLE FRONT FROM LUXEMBOURG TO THE SWISS FRONTIER.

SEP 1 01939

IT IS NOT YET ESTABLISHED JUST EXACTLY WHAT THE FIRST FRENCH MOVE WAS, ALTHOUGH THE REST OF THE PICTURE OF THE FIRST WEEK'S FIGHTING IS NOW FAIRLY CLEAR.

IT WAS BELIEVED AT THE TIME THAT THE FRENCH STARTED--JUST AS FIGHTING WAS RESUMED SO MANY TIMES DURING THE WORLD WAR--WITH A DOUBLE FLANK ACTION AT BOTH ENDS OF THE LINE, LEAVING THE GERMANS IN DOUBT WHETHER THE MAIN PRESSURE WOULD COME THROUGH THE BURGUNDY GATE JUST NORTH OF SWITZERLAND OR ALONG THE MOSELLE VALLEY AT THE OPPOSITE END OF THE FRONT.

TUESDAY'S AND WEDNESDAY'S OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUES LEFT NO DOUBT THAT THE FRENCH CONTINUED THE OPERATION WITH A CLEANUP OF NO-MAN'S-LAND IN THE SAAR BASIN ON THE NORTHERN FLANK. MEANWHILE, HEAVY ARTILLERY PRESSURE ON THE SOUTH WAS CONTINUED TO KEEP THE GERMANS GUESSING WHETHER THE MOSELLE ADVANCE WAS A CAREFULLY PLANNED FEINT.

AS THE ATTACK DEVELOPED THE FRENCH STRUCK LIGHTNING BLOWS IN CLEANING OUT FIRST ONE POCKET AND THEN ANOTHER BETWEEN THE MOSELLE AND THE RHINE, STRAIGHTENING LINES IN ADVANCE OF THE MAGINOT AND WRESTING POSITIONS FROM NAZI TROOPS FOR JUMP-OFF POINTS AGAINST THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

SEP 10 1939

IT IS NOW APPARENT THAT FIRST PATROLS STRUCK OUT JUST SOUTHEAST OF THE LUXEMBOURG FRONTIER ALONG THE MOSELLE VALLEY PROPER. THEN ACTION SHIFTED FURTHER SOUTHEASTWARD WITH TROOPS SWINGING INTO ACTION NORTHWEST OF THE LAUTERBURG "HINGE" OF THE FRONT WHERE IT JUTS SHARPLY IN TOWARD GERMANY LIKE A SWINGING DOOR LEFT AJAR.

THIS ACTION THRUST THE FRENCH DEEP INTO BIENWALD FOREST, WHERE THE SIEGFRIED LINE APPROACHES CLOSEST TO THE MAGINOT FORTIFICATIONS ON THE NORTHERN FLANK.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON AND NIGHT THE FRENCH DRIVE, WHICH BY THEN WAS REACHING STIFFER GERMAN OPPOSITION, SHIFTED BACK TO THE

30.24-3207

30.24 3207

MOSELLE VALLEY WHERE REPORTS UNCONFIRMED BY GENERAL STAFF COMMUNIQUES SAID THE ADVANCE REACHED THE DEPTH OF SEVEN OR EIGHT MILES.

WITH EVER-CHANGING RAPIDITY THE NEXT FRENCH PENETRATION CAME FRIDAY NIGHT WITH CAPTURE OF THE WARNDT FOREST WHICH STUCK LIKE A CLENCHED FIST INTO FRENCH TERRITORY WEST OF FORBACH.

THIS FOREST COVERS THAT PART OF THE SAAR MINING AREA WHICH THE FRENCH WON THE RIGHT TO WORK FOR A PERIOD OF YEARS BEFORE THE SAAR WAS RETURNED TO GERMANY IN 1935. FRENCH WORKED THE MINES UNDER THE FORTIFIED GERMAN FOREST BY MEANS OF SHAFTS WHICH STARTED ON THE FRENCH SIDE OF THE FRONTIER.

SFP 10 1939

G921PED

ADD LONDON—SEPT 9, XXX CONTINUED.

AN EXPERT IN BRITISH MILITARY CIRCLES, REITERATING THAT BRITAIN WAS NOT FIGHTING MERELY TO SAVE POLAND, ASSILED ANY SUGGESTION THAT GERMANY WOULD BE ABLE TO MOP UP POLAND AND THEN ACHIEVE PEACE WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

SFP 10 1939

"WE ARE FIGHTING TO SAVE THE WORLD FROM HITLER," HE SAID.

HE DEFENDED THE SCARCITY OF OFFICIAL BRITISH MILITARY INFORMATION AS A CAREFULLY PLANNED MOVE TO AVOID INFORMING THE ENEMY OF TROOP MOVEMENTS AND POSITIONS.

"IN WARFARE SURPRISE IS ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS, BUT YOU CAN'T HAVE SURPRISE WITHOUT SECRECY," HE SAID.

"MAKE NO MISTAKE," HE SAID. "THIS IS GOING TO BE A LONG WAR AND A BIG WAR, AND WE ARE CONVINCED THAT GERMANY WILL NOT CRACK UNTIL THERE IS NOTHING ELSE LEFT FOR HER TO DO.

"IT MAY LAST TWO YEARS, IT MAY LAST TEN."

HE CAUTIONED THE PUBLIC THAT STORIES OF DISCONTENT IN GERMANY MIGHT BE ONLY "WISHFUL THINKING" AND SAID THESE STORIES "WILL NOT MAKE OUR TASK ANY EASIER."

THE COMMUNIQUE ON NAVAL OPERATIONS SAID "ALREADY THERE ARE PRACTICALLY NO GERMAN MERCHANT SHIPS ON THE HIGH SEAS. SOME HAVE BEEN CAPTURED BY OUR WARSHIPS. IN MORE THAN ONE CASE THE CREW OF THE GERMAN SHIPS OPENED THE SEACOCKS AND SCUTTLED THE SHIP BEFORE ABANDONING HER XXXJ

"THE GREAT MAJORITY OF GERMAN MERCHANT SHIPS WHICH WERE AT SEA OR IN NEUTRAL PORTS ON THE OUTBREAK OF WAR ARE SHELTERING IN NEUTRAL PORTS.

SFP 10 1939

"IT HAS ALREADY BEEN ANNOUNCED THAT 54 GERMAN MERCHANT SHIPS ARE SHELTERING IN THE NORTHWEST SPANISH PORT OF VIGO AND THAT THERE ARE SEVERAL GERMAN MERCHANT VESSELS IN JAPANESE PORTS.

"THERE ARE ALSO NUMEROUS ENEMY MERCHANT SHIPS WHICH HAVE SOUGHT SHELTER IN NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA, ICELAND AND ELSEWHERE.

"PROVIDED NO STEPS HAVE BEEN TAKEN BY THESE ESSELS TO ARM THEMSELVES AS RAIDERS OR TO TAKE ANY OTHER PART IN HOSTILITIES THEY ARE NOT OF COURSE INTERNED IN NEUTRAL HARBORS. THEY KNOW, HOWEVER, THAT IF THEY SHOULD LEAVE PORT THEY WILL ALMOST CERTAINLY FALLIINTO THE HANDS OF UNITS OF THE ROYAL NAVY."

THE BRITISH AIR FORCE HAS BEEN ACTIVE THROUGHOUT THE WEEK PRIMARILY IN RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHTS OVER GERMANY IN WHICH MILLIONS OF LEAFLETS HAVE BEEN DROPPED TELLING THE PEOPLE THAT THEIR RULERS HAVE LED THEM INTO A NEEDLESS WAR. FIVE SUCH FLIGHTS HAVE BEEN REPORTED.

THE ONLY BOMBING ATTACK ANNOUNCED WAS ONE MONDAY NIGHT ON GERMAN

NAVAL BASES AT WILHELMSHAVEN AND BRUNSBUTTEL AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE KIEL CANAL." IT WAS STATED OFFICIALLY THAT THE BOMBERS SCORED TWO DIRECT HITS ON ONE OF GERMANY'S THREE POCKET BATTLESHIPS. SEP 10 1939

THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION DISCLOSED THAT ROYAL AIR FORCE PLANES IN THEIR FIFTH RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHT OVER GERMANY LAST NIGHT, DROPPED TWO TYPES OF LEAFLETS. ONE WAS A COPY OF PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S RECENT BROADCAST TO THE GERMAN PEOPLE ASSERTING THAT BRITAIN'S QUARREL WAS WITH GERMANY'S LEADERSHIP AND NOT WITH THE GERMAN PEOPLE.

EDITORS:

THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED IN WINDSORS LONDON, AFTER SEPT 9
FOURTH GRAPH ENDING XIX HELP HIS COUNTRY.

THE DUKE OF KENT AND HIS WIFE, THE FORMER PRINCESS MARINA, WILL NOT GO TO AUSTRALIA, WHERE HE WAS TO HAVE BEEN GOVERNOR GENERAL, IT WAS ANNOUNCED.

THE DUKE HAS JOINED THE NAVY. LORD COURIE WILL CONTINUE AS GOVERNOR GENERAL.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT XXX ETC., FIFTH GRAPH. SEP 10 1939

WASHN—SEPT 9 REX USE.

THE CATEGORIES OF EACH OF THE TWO LISTS FOLLOW THE SAME ORDER. WITH THE EXCEPTION OF A FEW WORDS, CATEGORIES "B", DECLARING CONTRABAND ALL DEVICES FOR TRANSPORTATION, AND "C", ALL DEVICES FOR COMMUNICATION, MIGHT HAVE BEEN LIFTED FROM THE AMERICAN LIST. CATEGORY "D", LISTING COIN, BULLION, CURRENCY, ETC., IS EXACTLY THE SAME RIGHT DOWN TO THE COMMAS. SEP 10 1939

OVER CATEGORY "E". (FOOD AND CLOTHING). HOWEVER, THE BRITISH, ALTHOUGH EMPLOYING PRACTICALLY THE SAME WORDING AS THE AMERICAN LIST, HAVE PLACED THE HEADING "CONDITIONAL CONTRABAND." THIS MEANS THAT AN AMERICAN SHIP COULD CARRY SUCH ARTICLES TO GERMANY, IF IT WERE PROVEN THAT THEY WERE NOT DESTINED TO THE ARMED FORCES. BUT THE BRITISH HAVE AN EASY "OUT" BECAUSE GERMANY'S ECONOMY IS GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED AND GERMAN IMPORTS PASS THROUGH THE HANDS OF THE GOVERNMENT. WHEN SUCH IS THE CASE, THE ARGUMENT BEHIND CONDITIONAL CONTRABAND, THAT IT IS DESTINE

CONDITIONAL CONTRABAND, THAT IT IS DESTINED TO THE CIVILIAN POPULATION, FALLS DOWN. OFFICIALS EXPECT LITTLE, IF ANY ARGUMENT ON THIS POINT. SEP 10 1939

TAKEN ALL IN ALL, THE ISSUE OF CONTRABAND WILL NOT FORCE SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL TO TEAR HIS SILVER HAIR AS IT CAUSED WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN AND ROBERT LANSING TO REND THEIR RESPECTIVE LOCKS.

XM1217PEDM

ADD HYDE PARK - SEPT 9, XXX ABOUT 11

HE EARLY SAID THE PRESENT OFFICIAL CAPACITIES OF CORCORAN, SPECIAL COUNSEL TO THE RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORP., COHEN, GENERAL COUNSEL TO THE NATIONAL POWER POLICY COMMITTEE, AND OTHER OLD UNOFFICIAL ADVISERS WOULD NOT BE AFFECTED BY THE CHANGED SETUP. SEP 10 1939

MR. ROOSEVELT NOTED IN HIS STATEMENT THAT "IN THE TIME OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY, DOMESTIC OR FOREIGN, THE JOB OF THE PRESIDENT IS EVEN MORE DIFFICULT."

30.24 3209

30.24 3209

SEP 10 1939

HE ADDED:

"IN SUCH PERIODS, IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN FOUND NECESSARY TO ESTABLISH ADMINISTRATIVE MACHINERY IN ADDITION TO THAT REQUIRED FOR THE NORMAL WORK OF THE GOVERNMENT.

"SET UP IN A TIME OF STRESS, THESE SPECIAL FACILITIES SOME TIMES HAVE WORKED AT CROSS PURPOSES BOTH WITHIN THEMSELVES AND WITH THE REGULAR DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES.

HYDE PARK FIRST AND WITH LEAD ROOSEVELT ADVANCE X X X AND AGENCIES.

"IN ORDER THAT THE NATION MAY NOT AGAIN BE CAUGHT UNAWARE, ADEQUATE RESOURCES FOR MANAGEMENT SHOULD BE PROVIDED IN ADVANCE OF SUCH PERIODS OF EMERGENCY. ALTHOUGH THESE MANAGEMENT FACILITIES NEED BE BROUGHT INTO ACTION ONLY WHEN AN EMERGENCY OR SERIOUS THREAT OF EMERGENCY EXISTS, THEY MUST FUNCTION IN AN INTEGRAL RELATIONSHIP TO THE REGULAR MANAGEMENT ARMS OF THE PRESIDENT."

UNDER GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION POWERS GRANTED BY CONGRESS, THE PRESIDENT ALREADY HAD BROUGHT THE BUDGET BUREAU, THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY COUNCIL AND SEVERAL MINOR AGENCIES INTO THE WHITE HOUSE OFFICES. IN ADDITION, HE NAMED THREE ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANTS.

TODAY, HE DISCLOSED HOW THE WHITE HOUSE WOULD UTILIZE THESE AGENCIES AND OFFICIALS, AS WELL AS HOW THE REGULAR WHITE HOUSE STAFF WOULD FUNCTION FROM NOW ON.

THREE SUBDIVISIONS WERE CREATED IN THE MAJOR DIVISION OF THE WHITE HOUSE OFFICE:

1-THE SECRETARIES TO THE PRESIDENT--EARLY AND BRIGGEN E.M.WATSON--ARE TO "FACILITATE AND MAINTAIN QUICK AND EASY COMMUNICATION WITH THE CONGRESS, THE INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS OF THE CONVRESS, THE HEADS OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES, THE PRESS, THE RADIO AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC."

2-RUDOLPH FORSTER, THE EXECUTIVE CLERK, WILL HANDLE DOCUMENTS AND CORRESPONDENCE AND SUPERVISE ALL CLERICAL SERVICES.

3-THE ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANTS, WILLIAM MCREYNOLDS, JAMES ROWE, AND LAUCHLIN CURRIE, WILL HELP THE PRESIDENT AS HE DIRECTS AND HAVE NO AUTHORITY OVER ANYONE IN ANY GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OR AGENCY, INCLUDING THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE, EXCEPT INDIVIDUALS ASSIGNED TO THEIR IMMEDIATE OFFICES. THEY WILL OBTAIN INFORMATION AND CONDENSE IT FOR MR.ROOSEVELT'S USE.

THE OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT REPORTS, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF LOWELL MELLETT, FORMER HEAD OF THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY COUNCIL, WILL SERVE AS A "CENTRAL CLEARING HOUSE" THROUGH WHICH INDIVIDUAL CITIZENS, ORGANIZATIONS OF CITIZENS, STATE OR LOCAL GOVERNMENT BODIES, AND FEDERAL AGENCIES "MAY TRANSMIT INQUIRIES AND COMPLAINTS AND RECEIVE ADVICE AND INFORMATION."

SEP 10 1939

THUS IT HOLDS OUT TO AN AVERAGE AMERICAN THE POSSIBILITY OF BRINGING HIS PROBLEMS TO THE WHITE HOUSE WHERE, IF THEY DID NOT RECEIVE THE PERSONAL CONSIDERATION OF THE PRESIDENT, THEY WOULD COMMAND THE ATTENTION OF PERSONS CLOSE TO HIM.

THE NATIONAL RESOURCES PLANNING BOARD IS TO HANDLE PROBLEMS PERTAINING TO BOTH NATURAL AND HUMAN NATIONAL RESOURCES AND RECOMMEND TO THE PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS "LONG-TIME PLANS AND PROGRAMS FOR THE WISE USE AND FULLEST DEVELOPMENT" OF THESE RESOURCES.

MC REYNOLDS, WHO HAS HAD WIDE EXPERIENCE IN CIVIL SERVICE MATTERS, WILL DIRECT THE LIAISON OFFICE FOR PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT.

1939

A225

THIS OFFICE, TOGETHER WITH THE BUDGET BUREAU AND RESOURCES PLANNING BOARD, THE EXECUTIVE ORDER SAID, WILL CONSTITUTE THE THREE PRINCIPAL MANAGEMENT ARMS OF THE GOVERNMENT FOR:

PREPARATION AND ADMINISTRATION OF THE BUDGET AND IMPROVEMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE MANAGEMENT AND ORGANIZATION.

PLANNING FOR CONSERVATION AND UTILIZATION OF THE NATION'S RESOURC

COORDINATION OF PERSONNEL ADMINISTRATION.

UNDER THIS ARRANGEMENT, THE ORDER SAID, "THE PRESIDENT WILL BE ENABLED BETTER TO CARRY OUT HIS CONSTITUTIONAL DUTIES OF INFORMING THE CONGRESS WITH RESPECT TO THE STATE OF THE UNION, OF RECOMMENDING APPROPRIATE AND EXPEDIENT MEASURES, AND OF SEEING THAT THE LAWS ARE FAITHFULLY EXECUTED."

THE BUDGET BUREAU, DIRECTED BY HAROLD SMITH, WILL CONTINUE TO PERFORM MUCH THE SAME FUNCTIONS IT HAS HAD IN THE PAST, HELPING PREPARE AN ANNUAL BUDGET, FORMULATING THE GOVERNMENT'S FISCAL PROGRAM, AIDING IN PREPARATION OF EXECUTIVE ORDERS AND PROCLAMATIONS, AND CLEARING, COORDINATING AND MAKING RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE PRESIDENT ON PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

SEP 10 1939

THE EXECUTIVE ORDER BECOMES EFFECTIVE MONDAY.

MR.ROOSEVELT ASSERTED THAT WHILE THE PRESIDENT WAS CHARGED UNDER THE CONSTITUTION WITH ADMINISTRATIVE MANAGEMENT OF THE EXECUTIVE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT, IN MANY ACTS OF CONGRESS SINCE 1789, RESPONSIBILITIES HAD BEEN PLACED UPON HIM WITHOUT PROVISION OF AUTHORITY OR MACHINERY TO CARRY THEM INTO EFFECT.

FORTY YEARS AGO, HE SAID PRESIDENT MCKINLEY COULD DEAL WITH THE WHOLE MACHINERY OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH THROUGH EIGHT OR TEN PERSONS AND A SMALL PERSONAL SECRETARIAL STAFF COULD HANDLE PERSONAL AND OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

"NOW, WHEN INQUIRIES WITH RESPECT TO THE BUSINESS OF THE GOVERNMENT COME TO THE PRESIDENT FROM PRIVATE CITIZENS IN THOUSANDS EVERY DAY, TO SAY NOTHING OF THE COMPLEX CHARACTER OF THE BUSINESS OF THE GOVERNMENT ITSELF," MR.ROOSEVELT DECLARED, "THE PRESIDENT CAN CONDUCT THE EXECUTIVE BUSINESS OF THE GOVERNMENT ONLY IF IT HAS A MORE ORDERLY ORGANIZATION."

THE MERE TRANSFER OF VARIOUS AGENCIES AND FUNCTIONS TO THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE IS NOT SUFFICIENT, HE SAID, ADDING:

"THEY, ALONG WITH THE WHITE HOUSE OFFICE MUST BE MOLDED INTO A COMPACT ORGANIZATION, WITH THE FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES OF EACH UNIT CLEARLY PRESCRIBED, WITH THE RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN UNITS CAREFULLY DEFINED, AND WITH SYSTEMATIC PROCEDURES DEVELOPED SO THAT THE FLOW OF WORK WILL BE SPEEDY, SMOOTH AND EFFECTIVE."

WHILE MR.ROOSEVELT WAS TAKING IT EASY ON HIS FAMILY ESTATE, HE NEVERTHELESS KEPT IN CONSTANT TOUCH WITH STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS TODAY. FURTHERMORE, A SPECIAL TRAIN WHICH BROUGHT HIM FROM WASHINGTON LAST NIGHT, STOOD READY TO RUSH HIM BACK TO THE CAPITAL IF ANY GRAVE INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS AROSE SUDDENLY.

SEP 10 1939

THE PRESIDENT DID NOT EXPECT TO LEAVE, HOWEVER, UNTIL TOMORROW AFTERNOON.

WHITE HOUSE OFFICIALS SAID DIRECT AND PRIVATE TELEPHONE LINES OPEN 24 HOURS A DAY HAD BEEN SET UP BETWEEN THE PRESIDENT'S HOME AND THE CAPITAL. ORDINARILY, MR.ROOSEVELT KEEPS IN TOUCH WITH WASH-

30.24-3211

INGTON, ON HIS HYDE PARK VISITS, BY COMMERCIAL TELEPHONE, ON A CALL-BY-CALL BASIS.

SEP 10 1939

EARLY ANNOUNCED THAT THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE HAD CANCELLED AN ENGAGEMENT TO SPEAK TO THE DEMOCRATIC WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES ON SEPT. 16. HE SAID THE PRESIDENT HAD WRITTEN MRS. THOMAS F. MCALLISTER, HEAD OF THE WOMEN'S DIVISION OF THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE, WHO HAD MADE ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE ADDRESS, TELLING HER THAT THIS WAS NO TIME FOR PARTISANSHIP BUT FOR UNITY AND PATRIOTISM.

HE SAID MRS. MCALLISTER HAD BEEN AUTHORIZED TO MAKE THE LETTER PUBLIC IN WASHINGTON. FOR THE FIRST TIME IN A WEEK, EARLY SAID MR. ROOSEVELT HAD HAD A CHANCE TO CATCH UP ON SOME MUCH NEEDED SLEEP. WHEREAS HE HAD BEEN ROUSED IN WASHINGTON AROUND 4 OR 5 A.M. TO RECEIVE REPORTS ON THE WAR IN EUROPE, EARLY SAID HE WAS NOT DISTURBED THIS MORNING UNTIL NINE.

BETWEEN TALKS WITH THE STATE DEPARTMENT, THE PRESIDENT CONSIDERED PLANS FOR ERECTION OF A LIBRARY FOR HIS PRIVATE AND PUBLIC DOCUMENTS, DROVE ABOUT HIS DUTCHESS COUNTY ESTATE, AND VISITED HIS HILLTOP COTTAGE TO LOOK AFTER THE INSTALLATION OF TWO TRUCK LOADS OF NEW WICKER FURNITURE. HE HAD NO APPOINTMENTS FOR TODAY OR TOMORROW.

DRISCOLL

SEP 10 1939

(EDITORS NOTE: THE FOLLOWING DELAYED DISPATCH BY AN ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT, GIVES A VIVID PICTURE OF CONDITIONS IN WARSAW AT THE TIME OF THE FLIGHT OF THE POLISH GOVERNMENT WHEN GERMAN INVADERS WERE APPROACHING THE CITY'S GATES)

3924 3211

BY LLOYD LEHRBAS

SEP 10 1939

WARSAW, SEPT. 7 (THURSDAY) BY COURIER, DELAYED, TO BUDAPEST)--(AP)--THE POLISH CAPITAL HAS JUST GONE THROUGH ONE OF THE MOST [redacted] BEWILDERING 24 HOURS IN ITS HISTORY.

WHILE BATTLES RAGED ON THREE SIDES, THE GOVERNMENT [redacted] TO THE SOUTHEAST AND A MASS OF NEARLY 1,000,000 INHABITANTS REMAINING ATTEMPTED TO CARRY ON NORMALLY, BUT WITH FEAR IN THE AIR AND UNKNOWING WONDERMENT IN THEIR EYES.

RANKING GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS BEGAN LEAVING THE CITY SECRETLY DURING THE NIGHT, TRANFERRING ALL GOVERNMENT OFFICES TO OTHER INTERIOR CITIES.

WITH DAWN, RUMORS QUICKLY SPREAD THROUGH THE CITY AND WHEN STAFFS OF FOREIGN EMBASSIES AND LEGATIONS BEGAN LEAVING DURING THE MORNING, THE POPULACE BECAME AWAR THAT SOMETHING OMINOUS WAS HAPPENING.

BY MIDAFTERNOON THE AMERICAN, FRENCH, BRITISH

1939

AND OTHER EMBASSIES AND LEGATIONS WERE ON THEIR WAY TO THE NEW SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, LEAVING ONLY CONSULAR STAFFS FUNCTIONING.

SOON THE [redacted] BECAME INTENSE WITH ALL AVAILABLE CARS, HORSES, WAGONS AND BICYCLES CARRYING MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN AND PILED HIGH WITH LUGGAGE.

MOST OF THE INHABITANTS WERE STILL UNAWARE OF THE REAL SITUATION AS LATE AS TUESDAY AFTERNOON SINCE NEITHER NEWSPAPERS OR RADIO GAVE ANY HINTS.

AS A RESULT, TONIGHT (THURSDAY) NEARLY EVERYONE KNOWS SOMETHING ~~CHANGING~~ HAS OCCURED, BUT ARE UNABLE TO SECURE DEFINITE INFORMATION. THE VAST MAJORITY ARE UNABLE TO LEAVE, ANYWAY, LACKING FUNDS FOR TRANSPORTATION OR TO LIVE ELSEWHERE.

SEVERAL HUNDRED THOUSAND PEOPLE WILL REMAIN IN WARSAW, REGARDLESS OF WHAT HAPPENS.

SEP 10 1939

GERMAN WARPLANES SOARED OVER THE CITY SEVERAL TIMES, WITH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS CHALLENGING. THERE WERE DISTANT EXPLOSIONS AND CHATTERING MACHINE GUNS WHEN THE GERMANS SWOOPED DOWN TO ATTACK.

SEP 10 1939

THERE WERE SOME PLANES IN THE AIR AND SOME EXPLOSIONS WERE HEARD AS THE AMERICAN EMBASSY CARAVAN GOT UNDER WAY FOR THE TEMPORARY NEW SEAT OF GOVERNMENT. OUTGOING CARS WERE ENVELOPED IN TERRIFIC TRAFFIC, WHICH CHOKED ALL HIGHWAYS LEADING EAST AND SOUTHEAST. PROGRESS TOWARD COMPARATIVE SAFETY WAS AT A SNAILPACE.

GERMAN PLANES RAIDED [redacted] THE NORTHERN SECTION OF WARSAW JUST BEFORE NOON. MORE THAN A DOZEN EXTREMELY HEAVY EXPLOSIONS WERE HEARD FROM ACROSS THE VISTULA. THE GERMAN PLANES FLEW EXTREMELY HIGH DESPITE THE LACK OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE. NO BOMBS WERE DROPPED AND NO CASUALTIES WERE REPORTED IN WARSAW SOUTH OF THE RIVER, THE INVADERS APPARENTLY CONCENTRATING THEIR ATTACK ON SEVERING CONNECTIONS ACROSS THE VISTULA.

[redacted] WITHOUT WARNING GERMAN RAIDERS DROPPED A LARGE NUMBER OF HEAVY BOMBS AROUND 12:30 P. M., ON BRIDGES AND OTHER MILITARY OBJECTIVES ALONG THE RIVER.

[redacted] IT WAS THE HEAVIEST RAID YET.

30.24-3213

30.24 3213

THE [redacted] EXPLOSIONS ROCKED THE ASSOCIATED PRESS OFFICE AND BROKE WINDOWS FOR A RADIUS OF SEVERAL BLOCKS. I WAS ENABLED TO WATCH THE ACTUAL FALL OF BOMBS WHICH [redacted] EXPLODED WITH A DEAFENING ROAR, SENDING UP GIGANTIC CLOUDS OF SMOKE. EACH WHINING POWERDIVE WAS FOLLOWED BY EARTH-SHAKING EXPLOSIONS WHICH SHOOK THE CENTER OF WARSAW.

SFP 101939

AEW-CSH-637P

LEHRBAS [redacted] 11350 THROUGH 41350

BERLIN, SEP.9-(AP)-A SECOND COMMUNIQUE OF THE DAY ISSUED BY THE HIGH ARMY COMMAND TODAY SAID:

"THE RETREAT OF THE DEFEATED POLISH ARMY CONTINUED ON NEARLY ALL FRONTS YESTERDAY ALSO. MANY TIMES THE GERMANS CRUSHED THROUGH THE ENEMY'S REAR.

SEP 101939

"FOUR MORE SECTIONS OF GERMAN MOBILE TROOPS REACHED THE VISTULA RIVER AT SEVERAL POINTS BETWEEN SANDOMIERZ AND WARSAW. GERMAN TROOPS ENTERED THE POLISH CAPITAL FROM SOUTHWARD (WEST) IN THE AFTERNOON.

"IN SOUTHERN POLAND GROUND WAS GAINED BY CONTINUED FIGHTING IN AN EASTERLY DIRECTION OVER WISLOKA RIVER. RZESZOW WAS REACHED BY MOTORIZED UNITS. AT SANDOMIERZ IT BECAME POSSIBLE TO GAIN A FOOTHOLD ALSO EAST OF THE VISTULA.

"ZWOLEN AND RADOM WERE TAKEN WEST OF THE VISTULA AS THE ARMIES HEADED FOR LUBLIN. FURTHER NORTH AT GORA KALWARJA SUCCESSFUL THRUSTS WERE MADE UP TO THE VISTULA. LODZ WILL BE OCCUPIED TODAY BY UNITS PRESSING INTO THE CITY FROM THE EAST WHILE THE GREAT BULK OF [redacted] TROOPS THERE ARE FOLLOWING THE ENEMY SOUTH OF THE BZURA BY

BY UNITS PRESSING INTO THE CITY FROM THE EAST WHILE THE GREAT BULK OF TROOPS FIGHTING THERE ARE FOLLOWING THE ENEMY SOUTH OF THE BZURA BY PASSING THROUGH CITY ON BOTH SIDES AS THE ENEMY RETREATS FIGHTING.

"THE PROVINCE OF POZNAN IS BEING OCCUPIED MORE AND MORE WITHOUT ENEMY RESISTANCE. NORTHEAST OF WARSAW THE ENEMY WAS THROWN BEHIND THE BUG RIVER NEAR WYSZKOW AND EASTWARD. THE AIRFORCE DURING THE ENTIRE DAY ATTACKED ESPECIALLY THE HIGHWAYS FOR THE RETREAT OF THE ENEMY WESTWARD AND EASTWARD.

"WITH THE EXCEPTION OF A FEW PURSUIT PLANES OVER VISTULA BRIDGES BETWEEN SANDOMIERZ AND WARSAW POLISH AIRFORCE ENTERED THE PICTURE BUTLITTLE. IN THE WEST TWO FRENCH PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN OVER GERMAN SOIL." (THIS TEXT APPARENTLY IS INCOMPLETE; THERE MAY BE AN ADD OR CORRECTION.)

SEP 10 1939

REVISED

German

Berlin, Sept. 9 (AP)—A high army command communique issued today said:

The Poles again are retreating on all fronts.

The first German troops have entered Warsaw from the southwest. In the south the Wisloka river was crossed and Dembica reached. At Sagmo the crossing of the Dunajec river was forced. The eastern embankment of the Vistula was reached near Sandomierz.

SEP 10 1939

Further occupation of the Poznan province is continuing without the enemy's resistance. The Polish air force again is hardly in action.

On the western front a hostile reconnoitering plane was shot down near Karlsruhe.

→ ZABNO

PARIS, SEPT 9-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF FRENCH COMMUNIQUE NO. 11 + 12:

"THE ENEMY IS RESISTING ALONG THE ENTIRE FRONT. VARIOUS LOCAL COUNTERATTACKS ON THEIR PART ARE REPORTED.

"A BRILLIANT ATTACK BY ONE OF OUR DIVISIONS ASSURED US POSSESSION OF AN IMPORTANT SECTION OF TERRITORY.

"THERE HAS BEEN REACTION OF ENEMY ARTILLERY.

"OUR AERIAL RECONNAISSANCE IS CARRIED OUT DESPITE INTERVENTION OF ENEMY PURSUIT PLANES."

(END TEXT)

SEP 10 1939

COMMUNIQUE NO. 11, ISSUED THIS MORNING, SAID:

"ACTIVITY IN THE COURSE OF THE NIGHT BY OUR FIRST LINE LAND FORCES:

"THE GREAT FOREST OF WARNDT, WEST OF FORBACH, IS MOSTLY IN OUR HANDS. IT WAS FOUND FILLED WITH EVIDENCES OF DESTRUCTION AND TRAPS OF ALL SORTS.

"OUR AVIATION CONTINUES ACTIVE IN SUPPORT OF LAND FORCES."

(END TEXT)

LONDON, SEPT 9-(AP)-POLAND'S AMBASSADOR TO LONDON SAID TONIGHT IN A BROADCAST TO THE BRITISH PEOPLE THAT THE POLISH ARMY WAS "FIGHTING SINGLE-HANDED THE LARGEST MECHANIZED ARMY IN THE WORLD" BUT "OUR RESISTANCE HAS NOT BEEN BROKEN."

SEP 10 1939

THE AMBASSADOR, COUNT EDWARD RACZYNSKI, SUMMED UP THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR IN THESE WORDS:

"THE LOSSES SUFFERED BY POLAND IN TERRITORY AND ECONOMIC RESOURCES ARE CERTAINLY GREAT AND OWING TO THE CRUSHING SUPERIORITY OF THE ENEMY IN EQUIPMENT THE POLISH ARMIES HAVE NOT AS YET HAD A CHANCE OF MAKING FULL USE OF THEIR SKILL AND DARING OF MANEUVER."

THE AMBASSADOR SAID "POLAND WAS THE FIRST NATION TO DEFY THE NAZI MENACE. SHE IS STILL BEARING THE WHOLE WEIGHT OF THE GERMAN FORCE AND SHE WILL NOT REST UNTIL THE FREEDOM OF ALL THE NATIONS OF EUROPE, INCLUDING HER OWN, 8' .-$3 3,584--

SEP 10 1939

OF EUROPE, INCLUDING HER OWN, IS MADE ENTIRELY SECURE AGAINST ANY DANGER OF INVASION OR FOREIGN DOMINATION."

THE AMBASSADOR SAID THAT SINCE SEPTEMBER 1 "MY COUNTRY HAS BEEN INCESSANTLY BATTERED BY PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE OF THE GERMAN ARMY AND CONTINUOUSLY BOMBED BY ITS ENTIRE AIR FORCE."

HE ADDED THAT "THE DAY OF AGGRESSION WAS FIXED BY THE ENEMY BEFOREHAND WITH RUTHLESS PRECISION.

"WHEN NAZI GERMANS STRUCK AT POLAND WITH ALL HER MIGHT, POLAND HAD NO CHOICE BUT TO TAKE UP ARMS IN THE DEFENSE OF HER INDEPENDENCE XXX THIS ACT OF COURAGE WHICH HAS ALREADY COST POLAND THE LIVES OF MANY OF HER BEST SONS, AND THE DEVASTATION OF SOME OF HER PROVINCES AND TOWNS, WAS A GREAT SERVE RENDERED TO ALL THE FREE NATIONS OF THE WORLD.

"SOMEONE HAD TO BE THE FIRST TO DARE TO SAY NO TO HERR HITLER AND BEAR THE CONSEQUENCES. IN SPITE OF THE UNTOLD SUFFERINGS ENDURED IN THE LAST WEEK BY THE POLISH NATION NO ONE IN POLAND REGRETS THE FATEFUL DECISION MADE BY THE GOVERNMENT WHEN IT REFUSED TO SUBMIT TO HITLER'S TYRANNY."

30.24-3215

30.24 3215

COUNT RACZYNSKI ASSERTED "THE CASE OF POLAND IS CRYSTAL CLEAR AND THAT IS WHY IT HAD UNIVERSAL SUPPORT THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WAS AMONG THE FIRST TO DECLARE THAT POLAND WAS INVADED AND BECAME THE VICTIM OF AN UNPROVOKED AGGRESSION."

THE AMBASSADOR SAID POLAND WOULD REMAIN FAITHFUL TO HER ALLIES AND "WE ARE ALL DETERMINED TO CARRY THE STRUGGLE ON TO THE END AND UNTIL A COMPLETE AND DECISIVE VICTORY."

SEP 10 1939

GOERING HIGHLIGHTS

BERLIN, SEPT. 9-(AP)-HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE SPEECH OF FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN WILHELM GOERING TO THE GERMAN PEOPLE TODAY:

SEP 10 1939

--DASH--

YOU MUST BELIEVE ME IF I TELL YOU THE THESIS OF A LONG WAR WEAKENING A NATION IS NOT TRUE. WITH EVERY YEAR WE WILL GROW STRONGER. X X X IN 1918, TOO, WE WERE MUCH STRONGER INDUSTRIALLY THAN IN 1914.

--DASH--

WE HAVE JUST CONCLUDED DEALS WHEREBY WE WILL GET THINGS. IF YOU DO NOT BELIEVE WE HAVE RAW MATERIALS YOU MUST AGREE THE RUSSIANS DO HAVE THEM. WE WILL HAVE OUR NAZISM AND THE RUSSIANS THEIR BOLSHEVISM BUT WE ARE BOTH PEOPLES WHO WANT PEACE AND WE ARE NOT GOING TO BE SO SILLY AS TO SMASH EACH OTHERS HEADS FOR BRITAIN.

--DASH--

WE DON'T KNOW AS YET WHAT FINE THINGS WE'VE INHERITED FROM THE POLES. ONCE WE BEGIN EXPLOITING, POLISH FIGURES WILL MEAN NOTHING. WE'VE BEEN STRENGTHENED ENORMOUSLY BY OUR CONQUEST

--DASH--

WE ENTER THE FIGHT FORCED UPON US WITH CONFIDENCE. FROM NOW ON THE UTMOST WILL BE DONE THAT EVER HAS BEEN DONE. WHAT WE HAVE DONE HITHERTO ECONOMICALLY IS CHILD'S PLAY WITH WHAT IS TO HAPPEN LATER. EVERY PLANT WILL BE CONVERTED TO THE NEEDS OF THE NATION."

--DASH--

WE CAN HOPE THAT FOURTEEN DAYS (BY SEPT. 14) AFTER THE BEGINNING OF THIS FIGHT (IN POLAND) THAT IT WILL PRACTICALLY BE ENDED. THE LAST CLEANSING WILL HAVE BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN LESS THAN FOUR WEEKS.

--DASH--

THAT THE POLISH ARMY WAS THROWING AWAY ITS GUNS AND SURRENDERING TO US.

--DASH--

SEP 10 1939

WITH THE DEFEAT OF THE POLES, THE THREATS TO GERMANY'S SECURITY ON TWO FRONTS CEASES. X X X I THINK THE BRITONS KNOW THIS. THAT IS WHY THEIR DESIRE TO FIGHT DOES NOT SEEM TO BE TOO GREAT.

--DASH--

IF THEY (THE BRITISH) SHOULD BE MAD ENOUGH TO ATTACK OUR WESTERN LINE, STREAMS OF BLOOD WOULD FLOW. I DON'T KNOW WHAT THEY COULD DO WITH THEIR SHIPS.

--DASH--

OLD CHAMBERLAIN SAID HE'D LIKE TO LIVE TO SEE THE DAY WHEN HITLER WOULD BE REMOVED. WELL, HE HAS REACHED METHUSELAH'S AGE AND I'M NOT SURE HE'LL ATTAIN HIS GOAL.

--DASH--

1939

IT IS SAID THEY (THE BRITISH) ARE NOT FIGHTING GERMANS, BUT THE NAZI REGIME. BUT WHEN THE SHOOTING STARTS, IT IS THE GERMANS WHO ARE HIT.

--DASH--

SEP 10 1939

THE BRITISH ARE SITTING ON THEIR TREASURES AND WON'T LET ANYBODY ELSE HAVE THEM. THEY TALK ABOUT MORALS. THAT, TOO, AFTER THEY SWALLOWED MANY PEOPLES.

SN1002PED

NIGHT LEAD BASEL

SEP 10 1939

BASEL, SEPT 9-(AP)-FRENCH FORCES DROVE FORWARD SLOWLY AND CAREFULLY TODAY THROUGH THE RICH SAAR COAL REGIONS TOWARD THE FIRST MAIN LINE OF FOREST IN GERMANY'S SIEGFRIED LINE.

MANY OF THE MINES IN THE AREA BEFORE THE FORTS ON THE NORTHERN BANK OF THE SAAR RIVER WERE FILLED WITH DYNAMITE CHARGES. SQUADS OF ENGINEERS AND SAPPERS REMOVED THE CHARGES BEFORE THE TROOPS WERE SENT TO STORM GERMAN PILLBOXES AND TRENCHES IN THE CARLSBRUNN WARNDT FOREST REGION.

SHELLS FROM BIG GUNS IN FRANCE'S MAGINOT LINE WERE HURLED OVER THE HEADS OF ADVANCING TROOPS INTO THE FORTIFIED AREA BEFORE THEM.

MILITARY OBSERVERS HERE LAUDED THE FRENCH COMMAND'S DECISION TO MOVE FIRST INTO THE SAAR REGION, BOTH FOR THE TREMENDOUS COAL DEPOSIT AND FOR THE MORAL EFFECT ON FRANCE AND BRITAIN.

IT WAS SAID HERE, HOWEVER, THAT FRENCH FORCES ARE STILL DEALING WITH ONLY MINOR UNITS OF THE SIEGFRIED DEFENSES AND WILL CONTACT THE LARGER FORTS ONLY AFTER THEY CROSS THE SAAR RIVER.

FURTHERMORE, THE SAAR CAMPAIGN IS CONSIDERED BY MILITARY MEN HERE AS NECESSARILY LIMITED IN SCOPE BY THE SCHWARZWALDER, HOCHWALD AND IDARWALD CHAIN OF HILLS SEPARATING THE SAAR FROM THE WIDE MOSELLE VALLEY BY THE LARGE FORTS OF SIEGFRIED GUARDING THESE HILLS.

SEP 10 1939

MANY OBSERVERS STILL LOOKED FOR THE MAIN FRENCH DRIVE TO BE HURLED AGAINST PALATINATE IN THE EXTREME NORTHEAST CORNER OF FRANCE ALONG THE RHINE VALLEY, KNOWN AS A HIGHROAD OF CONQUEST INTO GERMANY LONG BEFORE GUNS EXISTED.

AMONG THE MINOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE FRENCH ADVANCE THROUGH THE WARNDT FOREST WAS TO MAKE THE HALF-FRENCH, HALF-GERMAN TOWN OF ROSBRUCK, ALL FRENCH.

ROSBRUCK IS ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING FRONTIER TOWNS IN THE WORLD. THE GERMAN-FRENCH BORDER RAN DOWN ITS MAIN STREET. IN RECENT YEARS THE GERMANS HAVE ERECTED HIGH WIRE FENCE ALONG THE FRONTIER, SPLITTING THE TOWN, SO THAT ROSBRUCK'S CITIZENS HAD TO WALK A MILE AROUND THE FENCE TO VISIT SOMEBODY ACROSS THE STREET, ALTHOUGH THEY COULD TALK THROUGH THE WIRE.

THE FRENCH MILITARY HAVE JOINED THE TWO HALVES OF THE ROAD NOW, BUT ROSBRUCK'S CITIZENS DON'T LIVE THERE ANYMORE. THEY WERE AMONG THE FIRST TO MOVE TOWARD THE INTERIOR WHEN THE WAR WAS STILL ONLY A WAR OF NERVES.

SN1004PED

30.24-3217

30.24 3217

KING TEXT

OTTAWA, SEPT. 9-CANADIAN PRESS)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF PRIME MINISTER MACKENZIE KING'S STATEMENT IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TODAY ON A WAR PROCLAMATION (100 WORDS):

I SHOULD LIKE TO MAKE CLEAR TO THE HOUSE THE PROCEDURE WHICH THE GOVERNMENT HAVE IN MIND AS TO GIVING EFFECT TO THE DECISION OF PARLIAMENT REGARDING CANADIAN PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR.

THE ADOPTION OF THE ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE WILL BE CONSIDERED AS APPROVING NOT ONLY THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE, BUT APPROVING THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY WHICH I SET OUT YESTERDAY, OF IMMEDIATE PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR.

IF THE ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE IS APPROVED, THE GOVERNMENT WILL THEREFORE IMMEDIATELY TAKE STEPS FOR THE ISSUE OF A FORMAL PROCLAMATION DECLARING THE EXISTENCE OF A STATE OF WAR BETWEEN CANADA AND THE GERMAN REICH.

G438PED

HAVANA, SEP 9-(AP)-PRESIDENT FEDERICO LAREDO BRU TONIGHT SENT A MESSAGE TO THE CUBAN CONGRESS ASKING EXTRAORDINARY POWERS TO DEAL WITH ALL ECONOMIC DIFFICULTIES CUBA MAY FACE BECAUSE OF THE EUROPEAN WAR.

THE PRESIDENT ISSUED A DECREE PROHIBITING ALL RADIO STATIONS FROM BROADCASTING NEWS REGARDING THE ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF SHIPS FROM CUBAN PORTS.

A NUMBER OF GROCERS, ARRESTED ON CHARGES OF ILLEGALLY RAISING THE PRICE OF FOODSTUFFS, HAVE BEEN RELEASED ON BONDS OF $500 TO $2,000 EACH.

SEP 10 1939

PS205AED

(THE FOLLOWING ANALYSIS OF THE POSITIONS OF ITALY AND JAPAN TOWARD THE EUROPEAN WAR WAS WRITTEN BY JOSEPH E.SHARKEY, WHO IN THIRTY YEARS OF ASSOCIATED PRESS SERVICE ESTABLISHED UNEXCELLED CONTACTS WITH STATESMEN OF MANY NATIONS. SHARKEY, IN RETIREMENT SINCE 1937, HAS RETURNED TO ACTIVE NEWSPAPER WORK BECAUSE OF THE WAR. HIS EXPERIENCE INCLUDES TERMS AS CHIEF OF ASSOCIATED BUREAUS IN TOKYO, PARIS AND AT LEAGUE OF NATIONS HEADQUARTERS AT GENEVA AND COVERAGE OF MANY OF THE OUTSTANDING INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCES OF THE PAST 20 YEARS).

BY JOSEPH E.SHARKEY.

GENEVA, SEPT 9-(AP)-DESPITE ITALY'S POLICY OF VIRTUAL NEUTRALITY IN THE NEW EUROPEAN WAR, AUTHORITATIVE INTERNATIONAL SOURCES HERE SAY THAT THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS IS STILL FUNCTIONING.

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER AND PREMIER MUSSOLINI, THESE SOURCES INSIST, WILL REGULARLY EXCHANGE VIEWS ON THE WORLD SITUATION UNDER TERMS OF THEIR CONSULTATIVE PACT. SEP 10 1939

THESE CIRCLES, WHICH INCLUDE DELEGATIONS FROM NUMEROUS NEUTRAL COUNTRIES, AS WELL AS BELLIGERENTS, HEAR THAT GERMANY FOR THE MOMENT CHOOSES TO CONSIDER HERSELF AT WAR ONLY WITH POLAND.

WHEN GERMAN ARMIES ATTAIN THEIR OBJECTIVES IN POLAND, WHEN AND IF THE WARSAW AREA FALLS, HITLER IS EXPECTED TO PROPOSE A PEACE ARRANGEMENT.

IF THIS IS REJECTED AND GERMANY THEN BELIEVES HERSELF IRREVOCABLY AT WAR WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE, IT IS BELIEVED HERE THAT HITLER AGAIN WILL CONSULT MUSSOLINI TO DETERMINE IF HE NEEDS ITALIAN MILITARY AID.

BUT GENERALLY WELL INFORMED SOURCES EXPECT FRANCE AND GREAT BRITAIN WILL SEEK OBTAIN AT LEAST THE PERMANENT NEUTRALITY OF ITALY.

FROM A LARGER WORLD STANDPOINT, GENEVA SOURCES SEE THAT THE FUTURE ITALIAN ATTITUDE TOWARD THE ALLIED CAUSE MAY BE CONSIDERABLY INFLUENCED BY THE JAPANESE DECISION TO FOLLOW A POLICY, OF "NONINVOLVEMENT," IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

THIS CORRESPONDENT WAS INFORMED THAT THE NEW JAPANESE GOVERNMENT PLANS TO SEEK PEACE IN CHINA THROUGH A CHINESE SO CALLED "LEGITIMIST" GOVERNMENT IN SHANGHAI.

JAPANESE CHAGRINED AND FEARFUL FOLLOWING ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE RUSSO GERMAN PACT WERE DECLARED DETERMINED BRING A QUICK END TO THE CHINESE WAR BY TRYING TO GET CHINA TO ACCEPT A PLAN THEY THINK WILL GIVE A FACE-SAVING APPEARANCE OF NEITHER A VICTORIOUS NOR A VANQUISHED NATION.

BY THIS POLICY JAPANESE HOPE TO SATISFY CHINA'S PRIDE AND REMOVE THE CAUSE OF A LATER CONFLICT SUCH AS MANY JAPANESESBELIEVE WAS CREATED IN EUROPE BY THE VERSAILLES TREATY.

SOME SOURCES IN GENEVA DECLARED THE NON-INTERVENTION POLICY OF JAPAN, THE NEUTRALITY OF SPAIN MAY INFLUENCE MUSSOLINI TO REMAIN OUT OF WAR.

IT IS BELIEVED THAT BOTH JAPAN AND ITALY ARE FEARFUL OF ECONOMIC RUIN WHICH MAY FLOW OUT OF ANY GENERAL WAR.

G903PED

SEP 10 1939

ROTTERDAM, SEPT. 9-(AP)--FOUR HUNDRED AMERICANS WERE TAKEN BY SPECIAL TRAIN FROM ROTTERDAM TO FLUSHING TONIGHT TO BOARD THE HOLLAND-AMERICAN LINER VOLENDAM, SAILING FOR NEW YORK.

SEP 10 1939

THE VOLENDAM CLEARED FROM ANTWERP WITH ABOUT 300 PASSENGERS BEFORE STOPPING AT FLUSHING, TO MAKE A RECORD LOAD FOR THE 15,000 TON VESSEL.

HOLLAND-AMERICA LINE OFFICIALS SAID IT WOULD BE NECESSARY TO PUT FREIGHTERS INTO SERVICE FOR CARRYING PASSENGERS BECAUSE OF HEAVY WARTIME TRAFFIC. THE FREIGHTER BLOMMERSDYK LEFT ROTTERDAM AT 2 A.M. (8 P.M. EAST) WITH 15 AMERICANS ABOARD, BOUND FOR NEW YORK AND BOSTON.

0900

CSH--1038P

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT. 9--(AP)--SWITZERLAND IS WORRIED ABOUT HER NAVY.

SEP 10 1939

THE NEWLY ACQUIRED NAVY UNFORTUNATELY CANNOT BUDGE FROM PORT BASEL WHERE THE WAR HAS IT LOCKED UP.

30.24-3219

30.24 3219

THE NAVY CONSISTS OF HUNDREDS OF FRENCH, BELGIAN AND GERMAN RHINE BARGES AND TUGS WHICH SOUGHT REFUGE FROM THE WAR IN THE PORT'S NEWLY CONSTRUCTED DOCKS JUST OPPOSITE A BUOY IN THE RHINE MARKING THE TRI-CORNERED BOUNDARY OF FRANCE, GERMANY AND SWITZERLAND.

THE BARGE OWNERS SOUGHT PROTECTION IN SWITZERLAND AND THE BASEL PORT AUTHORITIES AGREED AND EVEN DECLARED A MORATORIUM ON DOCK FEES FOR THE DURATION OF THE WAR.

LONDON, SEPT. 9-(AP)-THE LATEST WARTIME STYLE NOTE FOR LONDON LASSIES IS THE "AIR RAID EMERGENCY SUIT."

THE MANUFACTURER GUARANTEES IT CAN BE "STEPPED INTO IN ONE MINUTE." IT'S A ONE-PIECE OVERALL AFFAIR OF STRAWBERRY ANDORA WOOL WITH A ZIP FASTENER AND PATCH POCKETS. SEP 10 1939

APL OKINS 0245 -EDP

COBH, IRELAND, SEPT. 9-(AP)-A CLOSEUP OF SUBMARINE TECHNIQUE WAS GIVEN TONIGHT BY CAPTAIN JAMES BARNETSON OF THE FREIGHTER OLIVE GROVE, SUNK BY A GERMAN U-BOAT.

CAPTAIN BARNETSON, OF LEITH, SCOTLAND, SAID HIS SHIP WAS SUNK ABOUT 250 MILES OFF THE IRISH COAST. SEP 10 1939

"THE SUBMARINE SIGHTED US ABOUT 3 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING," HE SAID. "WHEN I SAW HER I GAVE ORDERS TO PUT ABOUT AND TRIED TO ESCAPE HER BUT SHE CAME RIGHT ON AND GAVE ORDERS TO HEAVE TO. I STILL TRIED TO GET AWAY BUT SHE STEAMED AROUND US AGAIN.

"THE OLIVEGROVE ALMOST JUMPED OUT OF THE WATER AS SHE WAS HIT.

"THERE WERE TWO BOATLOADS OF US IN THE WATER. THE SUBMARINE SURFACED AGAIN AND WE SAW HER CAPTAIN, A MAN ABOUT 28 YEARS OLD WEARING A BEARD ABOUT TWO INCHES LONG. EVERY MAN IN THE CREW WORE SIMILAR BEARDS SO THAT IT WAS APPARENT THEY HAD BEEN AT SEA FOR A LONG TIME.

"THEY TREATED US VERY WELL. THE CAPTAIN HAILED MY BOAT AND ASKED ME TO COME ABOARD THE SUBMARINE. I EXPECTED THAT I WOULD BE TAKEN A PRISONER BUT ALL HE DID WAS EXAMINE MY PAPERS AND FIND OUT WHERE WE WERE BOUND. HE WAS APPARENTLY DUBIOUS ABOUT THE EXACTNESS OF HIS OWN INSTRUMENTS AND ASKED US OUR BEARINGS WHEN WE WERE HIT. HE THEN INQUIRED ABOUT THE EFFICIENCY OF OUR INSTRUMENTS.

"HE THEN SAID THAT IF WE CAME ASTERN OF HIM HE WOULD LEAD US IN A LINE TO THE FASTNET (A ROCKY IRISH ISLET WITH A LIGHTHOUSE) AND WE FOLLOWED HIM. SEVERAL HOURS LATER HE SENT UP TWO RED ROCKETS AND TOLD US HE HAD SIGHTED A STEAMER WHICH WOULD PICK US UP."

THE AMERICAN STEAMSHIP WASHINGTON PICKED UP THE CREW AND BROUGHT THEM HERE.

N422PED

LONDON-SEPT 9-(AP)-

[redacted] THE UNITED STATES EMBASSY TONIGHT DISCLOSED THE NAMES OF SIX MORE AMERICAN SURVIVORS OF THE ATHENIA SINKING WHO ARE ABOARD THE CITY OF FLINT

SEP 10 1939

COMMA MAKING A TOTAL 117 AMERICANS ON THE RESCUE SHIP BOUND FOR MONTREAL

PARAGRAPH AT THE SAME TIME H A BALCH COMMA UNITED STATES CONSUL AT DUBLIN COUNTERMANDED VOUCHERS ENTITLING AMERICAN SURVIVORS OF THE TORPEDOED SHIP AT GALWAY TO TRAVEL FREE TO GLASGOW

PARAGRAPH BALCH INSTRUCTED THEM TO REMAIN AT GALWAY OR TRAVEL AT THEIR OWN RESPONSIBILITY COMMA ANNOUNCING AMBASSADOR JOSEPH KENNEDYS STATEMENT THAT A SHIP WOULD BE SENT FROM THE UNITED STATES AND PROBABLY WOULD CALL AT GALWAY

PARAGRAPH THE EMBASSY FIGURES SHOWED THERE WERE PRESENTLY 110 AMERICANS SAFE AT GALWAY AND 111 AT GLASGOW COMMA BRINGING THE TOTAL TO 336 AND INDICATING FEW AMERICANS WERE MISSING

PARAGRAPH PREVIOUSLY THE DONALDSON LINE IN GLASGOW HAD ISSUED A LIST OF 111 CORRECT AMERICANS SURVIVORS OF THE ATHENIA SINKING WHO WERE ABOARD THE CITY OF FLINT STOP THE LIST FOLLOWS COLON

PARAGRAPH ANDERSON GUS ETCETERA PICKING UP NAMES AND ELIMING THESE NAMES WHICH EMBASSY HERE SAYS NOT AMERICAN CITIZENS COLON BROWN MARGARET BLACK VIOLET BOWEN CHARLES BALMAIN DONALD CRAIK JEAN CAINE EVA ELEPHANT ALEXANDRA ELEPHANT HELENA HAGG XX HACHHAUSER ROSA KIRKPATRICK ALIDA

PARAGRAPH THESE ADDITIONAL SURVIVORS ON THE CITY OF FLINT WERE DISCLOSED BY THE EMBASSY IN LONDON COLON CAMBALL ELIZABETH EDMONTON AL MACKESSIE MRS FRANCIS MACKESSIE ABIGAIL CRAIG MRS AND A NURSE ACCOMPANYING NICOLA LUBITSCH STARK.

SEP 10 1939

1252

PARIS,SEPT.9-(AP)-ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENTS IN PARIS, WORKING TIRELESSLY SINCE A WEEK OR MORE BEFORE WAR ACTUALLY BROKE OUT, HAVE HAD MANY VARIED EXPERIENCES WHILE MAKING THE ROUNDS GATHERING NEWS IN BOMB SHELTERS, MINISTRIES AND OTHER INFORMATION CENTERS.

WORKING DURING AIR RAID ALARMS, CHARTING THE PROGRESS OF ARMIES ON ELABORATE SYSTEM MAPS, WEAVING NEWS INTO A COMPREHENSIBLE WHOLE, THE STAFF OF NINE MEN IS SUPPLYING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER READERS CONSTANTLY WITH A QUICK, ACCURATE ACCOUNT OF EVENTS.

DESPITE THE FACT FRANCE IS AT WAR, AUTHORITIES LEFT A RADIO CHANNEL OPEN FOR THE RAPID TRANSMISSION OF NEWS DISPATCHES. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS COPY FROM FRANCE ACTUALLY REACHES NEW YORK HEAD-QUARTERS IN ROCKEFELLER CENTER FIVE TO TEN MINUTES AFTER IT IS WRITTEN IN PARIS.

SEP 10 1939

ON THE ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF IN PARIS ARE TWO--HENRY CASSIDY AND JOHN LLOYD--WHO HAD EXPERIENCE IN THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR. ROY PORTER WAS IN PRAGUE DURING THE CRISIS LAST SEPTEMBER AND IN MEMEL WHEN IT WAS TAKEN OVER BY THE GERMANS. WEST POINT GRADUATE TAYLOR HENRY CHARTS MILITARY MOVEMENTS AND EXPLAINS THEM GRAPHICALLY TO AMERICAN READERS.

VETERAN STAFF MEMBERS JOHN MARTIN AND WILLIAM MCGAFFIN, WHO SPECIALIZE IN FEATURE WRITING, ALSO ARE CONSTANTLY FOLLOWING DEVELOP-MENTS AND FILING STORIES.

THE WAR STARTED FOR HENRY WHILE HE WAS WATCHING THE FOREIGN MINISTRY DRAFT, AND SAW AN ISSUE OF, THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE FORMALLY ANNOUNCING TO THE WORLD FRANCE HAD DECIDED ON ARMED ACTION.

30.24-3221

30.24 3221

HE WAS THE ONLY NEWSPAPERMAN PRESENT, FRENCH OR FOREIGN, AND WHILE THE CHIEF OF THE INFORMATION SECTION PICKED UP ONE PHONE IN HIS PRIVATE OFFICE TO INFORM THE OFFICIAL HAVAS NEWS AGENCY OF THE ACTION, HENRY FLASHED THE NEWS ON ANOTHER PHONE TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

CASSIDY GOT A BICYCLE WHEN THE FIRST AIR RAID ALARM SOUNDED AND PEDALLED AROUND THE CITY TALKING TO PEOPLE IN DOORWAYS, WATCHING QUICK EVACUATION OF THE STREETS AND PROCESSIONS TO BOMB SHELTERS. HE GOT BACK TO THE OFFICE IN TIME TO WRITE HIS STORY BEFORE THE ALARM HAD BEEN LIFTED.

SEP 10 1939

COMING IN FROM AN ASSIGNMENT ON A TRAIN FILLED WITH RECENTLY MOBILIZED SOLDIERS STILL IN CIVILIAN CLOTHES, MCCAFFIN WAS CAUGHT IN THE MOB AT THE RAILROAD STATION AND HERDED ALONG WITH THE RESERVISTS.

WHEN HE TRIED TO GET OUT OF LINE WHILE BEING RUSHED TO THE MILITARY RECEPTION OFFICE HE WAS TOLD STERNLY BY GUARDS TO GET BACK IN HIS PLACE. IT WAS SOME TIME BEFORE HE COULD EXPLAIN THE SITUATION AND GET HIMSELF SEPARATED FROM THE SOLDIERS.

MCCAFFIN WENT TO LE HAVRE TO SEE THE ILE DE FRANCE SAIL WITH A THOUSAND AMERICANS ABOARD, FLEEING THE EUROPEAN WAR. STANDING ON THE SHORE AND SHADING HIS EYES WITH HIS HAND, HE EXPERIENCED AN EMBARRASSING MOMENT WHEN A TAXI DRIVER LOUDLY ACCUSED HIM OF BEING A GERMAN. WHEN HE EXPLAINED HE WAS AN AMERICAN, THE DRIVER AND OTHERS WHO HAD GATHERED TOOK HIM INTO THEIR CONFIDENCE AS A FRIEND.

ROY PORTER WAS ON THE RIVIERA WHEN THE WAR BROKE AND COVERED THE MOBILIZATION IN SOUTHERN FRANCE. HE HAS KEPT IN CONSTANT CONTACT WITH THE AMERICAN MEDITERRANEAN FLEET THERE.

WDSSSAED

B98

KX ST

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE WRITER OF THE FLIGHT OF REFUGEES FROM THE EUROPEAN WAR ZONE IS THE WIFE OF JOHN H. MARTIN OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF IN PARIS. SHE RETURNED FROM EUROPE ABOARD THE FRENCH LINER ILE DE FRANCE, WHICH ARRIVED IN NEW YORK WITH 1801 PASSENGERS, 1294 OF THEM AMERICANS.)

SEP 10 1939

BY LOLITA MARTIN

NEW YORK, SEPT. 9--(AP)--CROSSING THE ATLANTIC IN WARTIME ABOARD A SHIP OF A BELLIGERENT NATION IS A 7-DAY BLACKOUT.

MY HUSBAND AND I HAD BOOKED PASSAGE IN JUNE TO SAIL ON THE ILE DE FRANCE SEPT. 1. BECAUSE OF THE EUROPEAN CRISIS, MY HUSBAND COULD NOT LEAVE HIS WORK IN PARIS AND WHEN I SOUGHT TO DISPOSE OF HIS TICKET AT THE FRENCH LINE OFFICE I QUICKLY FOUND OUT HOW ANXIOUS PEOPLE WERE TO GET AWAY FROM EUROPE'S TROUBLES.

A YOUNG GIRL IN THE LONG LINE WAITING FOR PASSAGE IMMEDIATELY OFFERED TO TAKE THE TICKET -- AT ANY PRICE. BUT THE COMPANY REFUSED, POINTING OUT IT HAD GUARANTEED PASSAGE TO NUMBEROUS OTHER AMERICANS ANXIOUS TO SAIL.

THEN A YOUNG FRENCHMAN STEPPED UP TO SAY HE WOULD LIKE TO TAKE PASSAGE AS MY HUSBAND, THAT HE WOULD SLEEP ON DECK IN A CHAIR, AND THAT HE WAS MOST ANXIOUS TO SEEK REFUGE IN AMERICA. HE WAS DENIED.

I WENT ABOARD AT 2 O'CLOCK FRIDAY, BUT IT WAS NOT UNTIL 4 P.M. SATURDAY THAT WE GOT AWAY AFTER A WHOLE DAY IN WHICH WE COULD NIEHTER SEND NOR RECEIVE MESSAGES.

1939

OVERNIGHT ALL LIGHTS WERE OUT EXCEPT THE FAINT BLUE ONES SHINING AGAINST BLACK PORTHOLES.

WE REACHED SOUTHAMPTON AT 8 P.M. SATURDAY AND FOUND IT COMPLETELY BLACKED OUT DURING AN ELECTRIC STORM THAT HAD THE PASSENGERS AFRAID THEY WERE HEARING GUNFIRE.

AT SOUTHAMPTON THEY PUT ABOARD 100 EXTRA BEDS, PLACING THEM IN THE GYMNASIUM, WRITING ROOMS, ENGINE ROOMS AND LIBRARIES.

BUT THE PRINCIPAL CAUSE OF THE DELAY, I DISCOVERED, WAS THE REMOVAL OF MINES WHICH HAD TO BE PULLED OUT OF THE CHANNEL SO OUR BOAT COULD PASS SAFELY. LATER WE WERE TOLD WE HAD LEFT ONLY TWO HOURS AHEAD OF A GERMAN SUBMARINE FLEET--ONE OF WHICH, SHIP OFFICIALS SAID, HAD SUNK THE BRITISH LINER ATHENIA.

WE PULLED OUT OF SOUTHAMPTON AT 5:30 A.M., SUNDAY, STILL CONFUSED BY THE RUMORS OF WAR. BEFORE NOON TWO BRITISH CRUISERS SET OUT AFTER US BUT GAVE UP THE CHASE WHEN THE CREW QUICKLY BROKE OUT THE FRENCH TRI-COLOR.

SOON AFTERWARD WE WERE TOLD THE FRENCH AND BRITISH ULTIMATUMS WERE PASSING THEIR DEADLINES. THEN WE CROWDED AROUND THE BULLETIN BOARDS TO LEARN THAT EUROPE WAS AT WAR.

"INCREDIBLE!"

SEP 10 1939

"IT JUST DOESN'T SEEM POSSIBLE."

WE HEARD THE RUMOR THEN THAT THE GERMAN LINER BREMEN HAD BEEN CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH. (THE GERMANS SINCE HAVE SAID THE BREMEN REACHED A NEUTRAL PORT SAFELY.)

NO OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE SINKING OF THE ATHENIA WAS MADE ON OUR SHIP, BUT SEVERAL PASSENGERS WHO HAD PORTABLE RADIOS PASSED THE WORD AROUND. FROM THEN UNTIL WE LANDED TODAY WE WERE AS IF IN ANOTHER WORLD--KNOWING NOTHING DEFINITELY OF WHAT WAS TRANSPIRING ELSEWHERE.

TENSION INCREASED NOTICEABLY. THE FEW GERMAN-SPEAKING PASSENGERS KEPT TO THEMSELVES, BUT THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE OF ILL-FEELING.

THE PASSENGERS' DISPOSITION WAS NOT IMPROVED WHEN BOAT DRILL WAS ORDERED MONDAY, WITH ALL THE LIFE BOATS DOWN AND ALL OF US WEARING LIFE BELTS.

WE WENT FAR NORTH OF THE REGULAR COURSE AND ENCOUNTERED ROUGH WATER. THIS, TOGETHER WITH THE FOG AND WIND AND FRIGHT, CHILLED ALL SOCIAL ACTIVITY. EVERY NIGHT IT WAS COMPLETELY BLACK. THE ORCHESTRA PLAYED IN DARKNESS TWO HOURS EACH NIGHT TO AN AUDIENCE THAT WAS IN NO MOOD FOR "SWING."

EVERYONE RETIRED EARLY. NO ONE COULD LIGHT A MATCH OR SHOW ANY LIGHT ON DECKS ALTHOUGH ALL WERE PROTECTED WITH CANVAS.

FRENCH CREW MEMBERS, ALREADY SERVING UNDER MOBILIZATION ORDERS WHICH FORBADE THEM FROM LEAVING THE SHIP AT THE SAILING, WERE COURTEOUS BUT CRITICAL OF THE TASK ASSIGNED THEM OF RETURNING AMERICANS TO THEIR HOMES AT THE RISK OF THEIR OWN NECKS.

B100

SEP 10 1939

"WHY SHOULD WE RISK OUR LIVES FOR AMERICANS WHO WILL NOT SELL US ARMS?" ONE SEAMAN ASKED ME.

ALL THE CREW, OF COURSE, BELONG TO THE FRENCH MILITARY MACHINE AND ALL EXPECT TO SEE FRONT LINE SERVICE. THE PASSENGERS WERE SO

30.24-3223

30.24 3223

GRATEFUL THEY TOOK UP A SPECIAL COLLECTION TO REWARD SUCH MEMBERS OF THE CREW AS WOULD NOT NORMALLY RECEIVE TIPS. THIS KITTY AMOUNTED TO ALMOST 100,000 FRANCS.

ORDINARILY, LEAVING ON THE ORIGINALLY SCHEDULED SAILING, WE WOULD HAVE ARRIVED ON THURSDAY. I FOUND UPON LANDING THAT NONE IN NEW YORK KNEW WHEN THE SHIP WOULD GET IN.

ALL THE WAY WE NEVER SAW A SUBMARINE OR A CONVOY, BUT WHEN TWO CANADIAN COAST GUARD PLANES FLEW OVER US THURSDAY WE FELT WE WERE SAFE.

LAST NIGHT WE PUT INTO QUARANTINE, INSIDE THE NARROWS OF NEW YORK HARBOR AND ALL WAS WELL. WE HAD THE FIRST LIGHTS OF OUR VOYAGE. THE SHIP WAS BRIGHTLY LIT FROM STEM TO STERN--AND WHAT A RELIEF FOR ALL EXCEPT THE ROMANCERS WHO WALKED THE SHIP SEEKING THE CUDDLY DARKNESS THAT HAD BEEN THEIRS FOR ALL EXCEPT THE ONE LAST NIGHT.

APPROACHING THE PIER, WE FOUND OUR JOY AT BEING SAFELY HOME MIXED WITH A QUEER DREAD FOR THE BAD NEWS WE KNEW WOULD GREET US ON LANDING, DETAILS OF THE WAR THAT HAD BEEN KEPT FROM US DURING OUR DAYS AND NIGH OF UNCERTAINTY AT SEA.

THEN A QUICK PASSAGE THROUGH CUSTOMS AND THE WELCOME FEEL OF PAVEMENTS. AFTER THREE YEARS ABROAD I FOUND SUDDENLY THE THINGS I WAS MOST HOMESICK FOR WERE--A DOUBLE DIP CHOCOLATE SODA AND SOME CORN ON THE COB.

WB&SNGPQERPED

SEP 10 1939

Poland's Black Madonna

SEP 10 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 9—Poland's shrine, the monastery at Czestochowa with its famous Black Madonna, captured with the city this week by German troops, has a heroic military history along with its religious fame.

The Black Madonna is a painting, mostly in reds and blues, on cypress wood. It is named from the dark complexion of the Virgin, according to Mrs. Anna M. Laise Phillips, the writer who collaborated with Paderewski.

The color of the Virgin's face is that of a fair-skinned person, darkened by a fine coat of tan.

In Long Red Robes

Around this face is a wide, high headdress in blue and gray. The Virgin wears a long red robe, and holds in her left arm the Christ Child, also in a red robe down to his toes. Like her, he wears a wide, high blue and gray headdress.

The two red-clad figures are set in a blue and white mosaic of color, which forms an oval, inclosing the pair on all sides. From the outer edges of this oval bright yellow rays stream in all directions, like an elliptical sun.

For 400 years the dark, glowing face of the Virgin has been the center of of a growing religious fervor. The origin of the painting is not recorded fully. The Catholic Encyclopedia says it is attributed to St. Luke.

The painting hangs above the altar in the chapel of the monastery of the Order of Paul the Hermit, founded by King Wladislaus II, who came to the throne of Poland in 1386. He inaugurated 200 years of strong Polish nationalism.

He was a Lithuanian grand duke, and was chosen Polish king when he married Poland's young queen, Jadwiga. He lived to have four wives, the last of whom bore him two sons, who later were kings of Poland.

Converted Lithuania

He became a Catholic when he married Queen Jadwiga. He not only founded the monastery which later became one of the foremost shrines of Europe, but converted Lithuania to Catholicism.

The shrine's first taste of war was its worst. That was in 1430 when the monastery was attacked and plundered by Hussites.

More than 200 years later, in 1665, it was the scene of one of Poland's historic heroic feats. A Swedish army attacked it, and was held off by a handful of soldiers and monks. Again, in 1705, the Swedes attacked the monastery, and again it was defended by monks and soldiers.

It was a well fortified place in its earlier centuries. The Catholic Encyclopedia says this monastery has been reputed to be the world's richest sanctuary.

In modern days it has been the shrine for about a half million pilgrims annually. Twice a day the face of the Black Madonna is unveiled while lines of pilgrims wait outside. They file past her, to look on the face and to kiss the pavement below her feet and pray for recovery from illness and deliverance from troubles.

Czestochowa, the city, has nearly 100,000 population. The monastery overlooks it from the Jansa Gora, or light-colored mountain, a steep eminence. The city manufactures cotton, woolen and paper goods and does a considerable business in rosaries, images, scapulars and other religious objects.

U. S. Speeds Manufacture Of Gas Masks

SEP 10 1939

5 Million Granted To Provide 400,000 For Armed Forces

Edgewood Arsenal, Md., Sept. 9 (AP)—Drippings from the vast rearmament pot are giving new nourishment to one mode of warfare that caused about 70,000 American casualitse in the World War.

The United States has made $5,000,000 available to the Chemical Warfare Service to provide gas masks and supplies for the "initial protective force" of 400,000 men of the regular army and National Guard. The amount is almost double last year's expenditure, but small in comparison with the sums foreign nations are expending.

At first glance, the nation's center for research and manufacture of poison gas and gas masks seems to have sunk into quiet decrepitude.

A few miles north, guns are roaring with feverish tempo as new equipment for the army is tested at the Aberdeen proving grounds.

MOST BUILDINGS RAZED

But here:

Razed are most of the 600 buildings constructed in 1918 at a cost of $35,000,000 to manufacture gas and fill shells for the Allies and the A. E. F.

Machinery unused since the Armistice has become corroded beyond repair by poisons it brewed.

Skeletons remain of buildings, many never completed, that were able to produce each month at the end of the war 900 tons of mustard gas, 1,500 tons of phosgene and filling plants that could pour gas into nearly two and a half million 75-millimeter shells.

But after 20 lean years during which repeated efforts to outlaw chemical warfare by treaty failed, there is a new stirring behind the well guarded outer facade of ruins.

PLANT ALMOST HIDDEN

Almost hidden in the 10,000 acre reservation, 20 miles north of Baltimore, is the country's only plant capable of manufacturing mustard gas, the most powerful of proven war chemicals. This small plant—not much bigger than a bootlegger's still—is largely experimental. It is too small, say officers, to be considered for the tremendous war requirements of mustard, of which a pin point drop can produce a burn two inches long that takes more than a month to heal.

Here also is the country's only shell filling plant, a very small one but a model of straight line production efficiency.

Army officers and civilian experts, taking a leaf from air raid precautions in England, France, Germany, Poland, Russia and Japan, are giving serious thought to the problem of protecting civilians from chemical warfare. New compounds are under constant experimentation.

PRODUCTION BOOSTED

The only gas mask for the army, navy and marine corps—a post-war development—has boosted production of a safer and more comfortable mask than its World War predecessor, with personnel recently enlarged to 300.

In major European armies, a gas mask is as standard with each soldier's equipment as is his rifle. In the United States, however, there was only one mask available a few months ago for every four regulars and National Guardsmen. Within a year there will be a new one available for each in addition to those already in existence.

Although 300,000 masks could be turned out every month here by operating around the clock, the Chemical Warfare Service awarded an educational order to the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, for more masks. About 4,000 are to be completed and the machinery turned back to the army.

SOME PIECES ELIMINATED

The present mask has eliminated the nose clip, rubber tube and fogging eye pieces that marked the World War mask. Intake ducts divert the flow of air across the eye pieces to prevent fogging. Plastics have replaced glass to reduce the possibility of shattering.

It is lighter and with training can be worn all day without too much discomfort. The canvas holder need no longer be slung across the chest when in use but fits snugly under the left armpit where the face piece, attached to a rubber hose leading to the cannister, can be reached easily.

Special masks are being made for soldiers who work with fine optical instruments such as vernier settings on artillery range finders. One type, fitted with a diaphragm, permits officers to give commands and answer telephones. Another resembles a streamlined automobile radiator adornment with the purifying cannister fitted in back of the head.

CHEMICALS PLENTIFUL

Through long experimentation, army researchers have eliminated the possibility there will ever again be street receptacles for peach and cherry pits as was done during the World War to obtain a supply of purifying agents.

The modern mask contains chemicals easily obtainable in large quantities. Experiments are being pressed to obtain a domestic supply of charcoal suitable for removing toxic vapor molecules from the air, to replace imported cocoanuts now used.

The small research staff, in addition to studying new compounds, new methods of production and development of plant design for use in emergency, has also developed a mask for civilian use, similar to 40,000,000 ready for use in England, but said to be of better quality. Where the army mask costs slightly more than $9.25, the civilian type could be made in quantity for $1.25.

DIPLOMATIC POUCH GUARDED WITH LIFE

AUG 10 1939

Couriers Ready to Die to Insure Safe Delivery of American State Secrets

REGULAR ROUTES IN EUROPE

Three Official Messengers Receiving $3,000 Per Year Operate From Paris

SEP 10 1939

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—To and from around the world American couriers are carrying diplomatic pouches filled with secret messages giving a background of war or peace. This is the story of the diplomatic pouch, that mysterious bag with its secret cargo. And this is the story, too, of the couriers, those supposedly romantic figures who travel always, crossing two or three frontiers in a night, carrying with them a precious something that remains unknown to them, but guarding it with their lives.

The American diplomatic mail branches out in three directions from Washington—toward Europe, Asia and South America.

The pouches for Asia and Europe are closed in the State Department with a lead seal and a special rotary lock. Then they are handed over to the postoffice, which puts them aboard ship and arranges for their delivery in London, Paris and Tokyo. The pouches for Latin America are sent by air.

The American professional courier system operates out of Paris once a week over two routes. The first goes from Paris to Rome to Greece to Istanbul; then back to Paris through the Balkan countries. The second goes from Paris to Berlin, Warsaw, Riga, Helsingfors, Moscow and back.

Train Used by Preference

The courier starts out from Paris by train with a number of pouches. He has a railroad compartment all to himself and is equipped with a diplomatic passport on which he is named as a diplomatic courier. He carries also customs facilitation papers from the countries whose borders he must cross. He could travel by air, but the State Department prefers to have him take the train.

The courier carries two types of diplomatic pouches. There are pouches containing personal mail, packages, magazines, newspapers, etc., for American foreign service officers. And there is a single pouch containing confidential diplomatic missives. Actually this is not a pouch at all but a rigid dispatch box that looks like a small tan suitcase and has a special lock.

When the courier leaves his compartment, or ship stateroom, for the diner, he may lock his compartment and leave the bulky pouches behind, but he may not be separated under any circumstances from the confidential pouch.

The courier is not cautioned especially against talking to or consorting with strangers. However, he is strongly advised against making any misuse of his diplomatic position by carrying anything except the contents of his official pouches across borders for any one. He is warned emphatically against carrying any money for any one. To do so might be in violation of the strict currency laws in effect in Europe.

Pay Is $3,000 a Year

There are three professional American couriers operating out of Paris. Their pay is $3,000 a year. If for some reason no courier is available, the American Ambassador in Paris has the right to make use of a foreign service officer or an army or navy attaché for the same purpose.

In Asia there are no professional American couriers, and their places are taken by foreign service officers or military attachés along a route embracing Tokyo, Peiping and sometimes Shanghai. In Latin America there are no couriers, since the pouches are delivered by air and may be taken from the airplane at the airport by an official of the Embassy or Legation in each capital.

All told, the courier system costs the State Department $45,000 a year.

Varied and weird are some of the objects that have been carried in the diplomatic pouch. Immediately after the World War, with the disruption of ordinary postal services, the diplomatic courier service grew until it embraced thirty to forty couriers, mostly American Army officers, and some regulations became stretched.

The story is told of an American Minister in a Balkan country who had the courier bring him in every week a heavy crate of eggs. Sometimes the courier found a porter to carry it for him and sometimes he did not. At any rate his personal sentiments toward the crate of eggs became ever more explosive.

One day, on arriving at his destination, he called from the train window for a porter. Carefully waiting until the porter was about twenty feet away he tossed the crate from the window. He was not asked to bring in eggs again.

Just now the State Department's Division of Foreign Service Administration, of which Nathaniel P. Davis is chief, is considering use of the Atlantic Clipper planes for delivery of pouches to Europe.

(ADVANCE FOR A M S OF SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 10)

THOUSANDS RISK LIVES

TRYING TO ESCAPE

PERSECUTION (600)

SEP 11 1939

BY ELMER W. PETERSON

(ADVANCE) WARSAW -- (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS) -- AS YOU READ THIS, MEN AND WOMEN IN EUROPE ARE RISKING INJURY IF NOT DEATH FOR THE SIMPLE REASON THAT THEY HAVE NO PASSPORT OR BECAUSE THEIR PASSPORTS ARE NOT IN ORDER.

CHILDREN, WHO CAN ONLY WONDER AT EVENTS, SHARE IN THE MISFORTUNES OF THEIR PARENTS.

IT'S A SIMPLE DOCUMENT, THE PASSPORT, AND SOMETHING THAT MILLIONS OF PEOPLE TAKE FOR GRANTED, BUT IN EUROPE TODAY IT HAS BECOME SMEARED WITH BLOOD, AND ENTANGLED IN THEFT, DECEPTION, PATHOS AND MISERY. IT IS LINKED, THROUGH TRAGEDY IN MANY INSTANCES, TO THE MODERN-DAY REFUGEE PROBLEM OF THIS PART OF THE WORLD CALLED EUROPE.

SO IT HAPPENS THAT ON A MOVING TRAIN IN THE POLISH CORRIDOR A MAN OPENS A WINDOW. NERVOUS PERSPIRATION MOISTENS HIS FOREHEAD AND FEAR SHOWS IN HIS EYES. BUT HE CRAWLS THROUGH THE OPEN WINDOW, HANGS FOR A MOMENT AGAINST THE SIDE OF THE RAILWAY COACH, AND THEN JUMPS, SHOVING HARD WITH HIS KNEES.

WHEN HE RECOVERS CONSCIOUSNESS HE IS IN A HOSPITAL WITH HIS LEGS BROKEN. HE IS A CZECH. HE WAS BEING "TRANSFERRED" TO EAST PRUSSIA.

HE HAS NO PASSPORT.

30.24- 3225

30.24 3225

AND SO IT HAPPENS THAT ON A LONELY STRETCH OF FRONTIER BETWEEN POLAND AND WHAT WAS CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, A SMALL GROUP OF PERSONS CRAWL STEALTHILY ALONG THE GROUND. ALMOST LITERALLY, THEY ARE "HUNTED ANIMALS." THEY ARE LOOKING FOR A CHANCE TO "ESCAPE" INTO POLAND, BECAUSE THEIR PASSPORTS ARE NOT IN ORDER.

AN HOUR LATER, ONE OF THE GROUP IS WOUNDED; THE OTHERS ARE UNDER ARREST.

AND ALONG THE SILESIAN BORDER, BETWEEN GERMANY AND POLAND, A GROUP OF JEWISH REFUGEES ARE SHUNTED BACK AND FORTH BETWEEN A COUNTRY WHICH INSISTS THAT THEY LEAVE AND A COUNTRY WHICH CAN NOT ACCEPT THEM.

SEP 11 1939

BECAUSE THEY HAVE NO PASSPORTS; BECAUSE THEY HAVE BEEN DEPRIVED OF POLISH CITIZENSHIP THROUGH LONG RESIDENCE IN GERMANY, AND BECAUSE GERMANY WILL NOT GRANT THEM GERMAN CITIZENSHIP.

IT'S ALL PART OF THE SHADOWY UNDERWORLD THAT HAS BEEN CREATED IN EASTERN EUROPE--THE UNDERWORLD OF MEN, WOMEN, AND CHILDREN, WHO, FOR POLITICAL AND RACIAL REASONS, SPEND THEIR DAYS AND NIGHTS IN NECESSARY SCHEMING AND PLANNING TO SECURE A NEW COUNTRY, A NEW HOME.

IT'S AN UNDERWORLD PEOPLED BY RICH AND POOR, BY STRONG AND WEAK. IT HAS DEVELOPED ITS OWN DECEPTIONS, TRICKS, INTRIGUES. IN SOME RESPECTS IT HAS BEEN ORGANIZED FOR PROFIT, BY MEN AND GROUPS OF MEN WHO MAKE MONEY IN TRAFFICKING IN HUMAN DESTINY.

THERE IS A BUSINESS IN FORGED PASSPORTS, STOLEN PASSPORTS, AND IN THE PASSPORTS OF PEOPLE WHO ARE DEAD AND NO LONGER HAVE NEED OF OFFICIAL DOCUMENTATION ON THIS EARTH.

IT'S AN UNDERWORLD WHICH CARRIES THE CRY OF "ANYTHING, ANYTHING AT ALL FOR A PASSPORT....ANYTHING TO PREVENT BEING ARRESTED AND QUESTIONED....

IT HAS ITS OWN STORIES, ITS OWN CASE HISTORIES, ITS OWN RECORD OF WHAT PRESENT-DAY EUROPE CAN PRODUCE IN THE WAY OF QUIRKS OF FATE AND INHUMANITY OF MAN TOWARDS MAN....AND THIS MAN, TALKING TO YOU AT A SMALL TABLE IN A CHEAP CAFE, IS AN EXAMPLE:

"YOU'RE AMERICAN, AREN'T YOU? YOU'RE LUCKY. YOU'VE GOT A GOOD PASSPORT." AND WHILE HE TALKS HE CLEVERLY SPLITS A MATCH IN TWO WITH A KNIFE. HE LIGHTS A CIGARET WITH ONE-HALF THE MATCH AND PUTS THE OTHER HALF BACK IN THE BOX. IT'S ATRICK YOU LEARN WHEN EVEN A BOX OF MATCHES IS VALUABLE; WHEN A CIGARET IS SHEER LUXURY.

"HAVE YOU-EVER," HE ASKS, "BEEN THROWN AWAY? I MEAN JUST THAT --THROWN AWAY. LIKE SO MUCH REFUSE THAT NO ONE WANTS? THAT'S THE WAY I'VE FELT SOMETIMES. AND ALL BECAUSE I DIDN'T HAVE A PASS-PORT."

SEP 11 1939

HE SEEMS VERY YOUNG TO BE TALKING THAT WAY, BUT WHEN YOU LOOK AT HIM CLOSELY YOU SEE SMALL, HARD LINES AROUND HIS EYES AND MOUTH THAT TELL OF SUFFERING AND HARDSHIP.

HIS STORY IS NOT PLEASANT. ARRESTED IN VIENNA. JAILED FOR THREE WEEKS AND THEN TOLD TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY. ARRESTED BEFORE HE COULD GET OUT OF THE COUNTRY AND PUT IN A CONCENTRATION CAMP. THEN PRAGUE. AND THE SAME STORY OVER AGAIN. FINALLY, A FLIGHT TO POLAND, A MATTER OF TRAVELING AT NIGHT AND HIDING DURING THE DAY.

HE TREMBLES WITH A DEEP AND OLD ANGER AS HE SPEAKS OF IT.

"THAT'S WHAT IT MEANS," HE SAYS, "TO BE A JEW AND TO BE WITHOUT A PASSPORT."

(END SUNDAY ADVANCE. SENT SEPT.2) SEP 11 1939

P301AED

A136 SEP 10 1939

ADD CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF SHIPS SUNK (PREVIOUS SENT SEPT.8:

SEPT.9, 1939--KENNEBEC (BR) 5,545 TANKER. TORPEDOED. CREW OF 32 SAVED BY HOLLAND AMERICA LINER BREEDYK. SEP 10 1939

PS1114AED

SEPT. 10--2,796-TON LONDON STEAMER GOODWOOD (BR) "ATTACKED AND SUNK" IN NORTH SEA. CREW SAVED BY FISHING BOAT. SEP 11 1939

ED119PED

PARIS, SEPT. 10 (SUNDAY).--(AP).--THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT, ADAPTING ITS FINANCES TO THE WAR, TODAY ESTABLISHED OFFICIAL CONTROL OVER FOREIGN EXCHANGE OPERATIONS, CAPITAL EXPORTS AND GOLD TRANSACTIONS. SEP 11 1939

A79WX

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 9-(AP)-THE AMERICAN RED CROSS ANNOUNCED TODAY IT HAD APPROPRIATED $50,000 TO PURCHASE HOSPITAL TENTS, MEDICINE AND BLANKETS FOR THE POLISH RED CROSS.

IT ALSO ADVANCED $25,000 TO THE AMERICAN HOSPITAL IN PARIS.

RZ841PES NM SEP 10 1939

A71WX (ATHENIA DEAD)

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 9-(AP)-THE MARITIME COMMISSION RECEIVED A MESSAGE TONIGHT FROM THE CAPTAIN OF ITS STEAMER CITY OF FLINT SAYING THAT MARGARET HAYWORTH, 10, DIED EARLY THIS MORNING FROM A BRAIN INJURY RECEIVED AT THE TIME OF THE TORPEDOING OF THE BRITISH STEAMER ATHENIA.

THE MESSAGE ASKED THAT JOHN HAYWORTH OF HAMILTON, ONTARIO, BE NOTIFIED. THE CITY OF FLINT IS EXPECTED TO REACH HALIFAX, N.S., PROBABLY WEDNESDAY BRINGING 215 SURVIVORS OF THE ATHENIA DISASTER.

RZ823PES SEP 10 1939

NEW YORK, SEP.9-(AP)-WITH CANVAS HUNG OVER HER DECK WINDOWS TO BLACK OUT LIGHTS DURING HER CROSSING, THE FRENCH LINER ILE DE FRANCE ARRIVED TODAY, BRINGING HOME 1,294 AMERICANS.

THERE WERE 2,668 PERSONS ABOARD, 1,501 OF THEM PASSENGERS. COTS FILLED ALL THE PUBLIC ROOMS, THE GYMNASIUM AND EVEN SPACE NEAR THE ENGINE ROOM.

THE LINER, SCHEDULED TO LEAVE HAVRE LAST FRIDAY, REMAINED THERE 26 HOURS, SAILING LATE SATURDAY. SHE LEFT SOUTHAMPTON SUNDAY. AS FAR AS PASSENGERS COULD SEE, SHE HAD NO CONVOY. SEP 10 1939

NEWS OF THE SINKING OF THE ATHENIA HAD BEEN PICKED UP, PASSENGERS SAID, "BU THE SHIP'S GRAPEVINE," BUT THEY RECEIVED NO DIRECT WORD. ONLY ONE SALON WAS WELL LIGHTED AT NIGHT. MOST OF THE PASSENGERS WENTTO BED EARLY.

WALTER E.EDGE, FORMER U.S.AMBASSADOR TO FRANCE, AND MRS.EDGE RETURNED FROM A SIX-WEEKS TRIP TO ENGLAND, FRANCE, RUSSIA, DANZIG, AND SEVERAL OTHER COUNTRIES.

30.24- 3227

30.24 3227

"I THINK WE SHOULD DO EVERYTHING WE CAN SHORT OF WAR TO HELP THE ALLIES," EDGE SAID.

"THE BRITISH AND FRENCH ARE ABSOLUTELY DETERMINED TO GO THROUGH WITH THIS NO MATTER HOW LONG IT TAKES.

"THERE WILL BE NO MORE MUNICH, WAS CLEARLY THEIR FEELING. THEY FEEL IN BRITAIN AND FRANCE THAT THE GERMAN PEOPLE DID NOT WANT WAR. THEIR OBJECT IS TO END HITLERISM."

HE SAID FRANCE AND ENGLAND HAD BEEN LIVING ON THEIR NEVES SINCE MUNICH.

THE GRAND DUCHESS MARIE OF RUSSIA, ANOTHER PASSENGER, SAID THE SOVIET-GERMAN PACT "WILL MAKE PEOPLE REALIZE THAT STALIN IS AS BAD A DICTATOR AS HITLER, AND BOTH OF THEM TOGETHER MEAN THE DESTRUCTION OF CIVILIZATION. THERE IS MORE TO IT THAN HAS YET BEEN SEEN, BUT I AM SURE THAT ON THE RUSSIAN PART IT IS FOR THE WORLD REVOLUTION. WHEN THE WORLD IS WEAKENED, THEY WILL STEP IN."

SEP 10 1939

A131 (NYC OUT)

BY ALBERT W.WILSON

NEW YORK,SEPT.9-(AP)-MASTER-MIDING THE ALLIED ARMIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT TODAY ARE A MIDDLE-CLASS PARISIAN, WHO CAME OUT OF THE LAST WAR WITH A REPUTATION FOR BEING "MAP-CRAZY," AND A TOWERING SCOTSMAN, WHO ONCE FOUGHT AS AN OFFICER FOR THE FORMER KAISER.

GEN.SIR EDMUND (BIG BILL IRONSIDE AND GEN.MAURICE GUSTAVE GAMELIN, THE BRITISH AND FRENCH SUPREME COMMANDERS, ALREADY HAVE HELD MEETINGS "SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE" TO PLAN THEIR FIRST GREAT OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE GERMANS.

SEP 10 1939

THE DISPATCHES SAY GAMELIN WILL GET THE MANTLE WORN ONLY BY THE LATE FERDINAND FOCH THROUGH THE LAST SEVEN MONTHS OF THE WORLD WAR--THAT OF GENERALISSIMO OF ALL ARMIES. IT TOOK MORE THAN THREE AND ONE HALF YEARS FOR THE ALLIES TO FORGET NATIONAL JEALOUSIES AND PUT ONE MAN IN COMMAND.

IN THE LAST WAR, GAMELIN WENT IN AS A MAJOR, IRONSIDE AS A CAPTAIN. THOUGH THEY CAME OUT AS GENERALS, THERE WERE MANY GENERALS IN 1918, AND THEY WERE AMONG THE LESSER KNOWN.

GAMELIN RECENTLY SUCCEEDED GEN.MAXIME WEYGAND AS CHIEF OF FRANCE'S LAND, SEA AND AIR FORCES. HE WILL BE 67 SEPT. 20.

HIS GREATEST MILITARY FEAT TO DATE WAS THE "PACIFICATION" OF SYRIA, FRANCE'S POST-WAR MANDATE. HE WAS SENT THERE IN 1925 TO SMASH THE REBELLION OF DRUSES, FANATICAL TRIBESMEN WHO WERE IN THE HABIT OF SWOOPING DOWN ON CARAVANS AND OTHER TRAVELERS FROM HIDEOUTS IN THE LEBANON MOUNTAINS.

SEP 10 1939

(FIRST GRAF READ IT XXX MASTER-MINDING THE ALLIED)

ENTERING THE COUNTRY A FEW MONTHS AFTER THE CAMPAIGN, THE WRITER HEARD GAMELIN PRAISED AS A SAVIOR OF SYRIA BY BOTH CHRISTIANS AND MOHAMMEDANS.

GAMELIN DREW UP MAPS AND ORDERS FOR JOFFRE IN THE EARLY YEARS OF THE WAR. HE IS CREDITED WITH HAVING WARNED HIS SUPERIOR OFFICER, YEARS BEFORE HOSTILITIES BEGAN, THAT BELGIUM WAS GERMANY'S IDEAL HIGHWAY INTO FRANCE. HE WON CITATIONS IN ACTION AND WAS CHIEF OF THE RESERVE ARMIES BEFORE THE WAR ENDED.

FOR FOUR YEARS BEFORE THE SYRIAN EXPEDITION, GAMELIN ORGANIZED

AND TRAINED A MODERN ARMY FOR BRAZIL.

IRONSIDE APPARENTLY HAS RETAINED ONE RECORD HE HOLDS IN THIS WAR. IN THE LAST ONE, HE WAS THE FIRST BRITISH OFFICER TO REACH FRANCE. THEN HE WENT OVER AS A CAPTAIN TO ORGANIZE RAIL TRANSPORTATION.

HE HAD HIS FIRST TASTE OF FIGHTING IN THE BOER WAR. THERE IS A LEGEND THAT, IN HAND-TO-HAND COMBAT, HE ONCE SQUEEZED A BOER TO DEATH. "BIG BILL" WEIGHS A MERE 252 AND IS 6 FEET 4 INCHES TALL.

SHORTLY BEFORE THE WORLD WAR, IRONSIDE DISGUISED HIMSELF AS A BOER AND TRICKED THE GERMANS INTO MAKING HIM AN OFFICER IN THEIR AFRICAN ARMY WHICH WAS ENGAGED IN PUTTING DOWN NATIVE UPRISINGS. IF THEY HAD KNOWN HE WAS BRITISH, HE ALMOST CERTAINLY WOULD HAVE BEEN SHOT. HE SPOKE THE BOER TONGUE PERFECTLY AND IS REPUTED TO KNOW 20 OTHER LANGUAGES.

IRONSIDE'S FIRST BIG OPPORTUNITY CAME AT THE END OF THE WORLD WAR WHEN HE COMMANDED ALLIED FORCES IN NORTH RUSSIA IN THE 1919 WAR AGAINS THE BOLSHEVISTS. LATER HE SERVED IN PERSIA. DURING THE RECENT SPANISH WAR, HE HAD THE IMPORTANT COMMAND OF BRITISH FORCES AT GIBRALTAR.

IRONSIDE, 59, SWAPPED JOBS WITH VISCOUNT GORT, WHO IS ONLY 53 AND WHO BECAME CHIEF OF THE IMPERIAL STAFF SHORTLY BEFORE THE PRESENT WAR BEGAN. ONLY A FEW MONTHS AGO, IRONSIDE BECAME INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF OVERSEAS FORCES, RANKING NEXT UNDER GORT. NOW THAT WAR HAS BEGUN, THE INSPECTOR-GENERAL POST BECOMES THAT OF COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF FIELD FORCES, AND THIS IS IRONSIDE'S ASSIGNMENT.

WD733AED SEP 10 1939

Sept Wx Bc KX

NEW YORK, SEPT 9-(AP)-AN OIL SHORTAGE MAY BE THE DETERMINING FACTOR IN THE EUROPEAN WAR, AND GERMANY WILL BEGIN TO FEEL THE PINCH IN 1940, HUGH GIESON, FORMER UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR TO BELGIUM, SAID LAST NIGHT IN A TALK FROM LONDON BROADCAST BY THE NATIONAL BROADCASTING COMPANY.

"FROM THE GERMAN POINT OF VIEW, THE QUESTION OF OIL IS MORE URGENT THAN THE NEED FOR FOOD AND MORE VITAL THAN IT WAS IN 1914, FOR THE ARMY HAS BEEN MOTORIZED TO AN EXTENT WHICH HAS TO BE SEEN TO BE BELIEVED," GIBSON DECLARED. "THE MINUTE THE GENERAL STAFF HAS TO SACRIFICE MILITARY CONSIDERATIONS TO THE NEED FOR ECONOMIZING ON MOTOR FUEL, THEY WILL BE IN A BAD WAY.

"THOSE WHO ARE QUALIFIED TO KNOW BELIEVE THAT STOCKS OF OIL AND CERTAIN OTHER MATERIALS WILL JUST ABOUT LAST OUT THIS YEAR, AND THAT GERMANY WILL BEGIN TO FEEL THE PINCH EARLY IN 1940."

HE DIVIDED "MAN-IN-THE-STREET" STRATEGISTS INTO TWO SCHOOLS OF THOUGHT: THOSE PREDICTING A SHORT WAR AND THOSE WHO WERE CONVINCED IT WOULD BE A LONG ONE. "THE REASONING OF BOTH IS OPEN TO CRITICISM," HE SAID.

SEP 10 1939

TO THOSE WHOSE BELIEVE THE WAR WILL BE A LONG, DRAWN OUT ONE, BECAUSE GERMANY WILL BE ABLE TO DRAW ON THE OIL FIELDS OF POLAND, RUMANIA, AND RUSSIA, GIBSON HAD THIS TO SAY:

"THE BEST EXPERT OPINION I HAVE BEEN ABLE TO GET INDICATES THAT BY THE BEGINNING OF 1940, GERMANY WILL REQUIRE THE FULL OUTPUT OF THE POLISH AND RUMANIAN OIL FIELDS AND ALSO THE MAXIMUM PRODUCTION OF THE RUSSIAN FIELDS. CAN SHE COUNT ON GETTING IT?

"TO BEGIN WITH, THE GERMANS CAN HARDLY COUNT ON TAPPING THE POLISH

30.24-3229

30.24 3229

FIELDS BEFORE THE WELLS HAVE BEEN PUT OUT OF COMMISSION, AND IT WILL TAKE TIME TO BRING THEM INTO PRODUCTION AGAIN. AND MAY WE BE PERMITTED A CERTAIN DOUBT AS TO WHETHER THE GERMANS WILL BE ABLE TO TAKE OVER THE RUMANIAN OIL FIELDS AND DO AS THEY LIKE WITH THE OUTPUT.

"WHEN WE COME TO THE RUSSIAN SUPPLIES OF OIL THERE IS A WHOLE SERIES OF PROBLEMS TO BE MET. THE MOST IMPORTANT IS THAT THE RUSSIAN OUTPUT IS NOT VERY GREAT."

TRANSPORTATION OF THE OIL FROM RUSSIA, TOO, WOULD BE A SERIOUS PROBLEM, HE SAID.

SEP 10 1939

HF1258PED

NEW YORK, SEPT.9-(AP)-THE NEW YORK TIMES IN A SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM COBH, IRELAND, TODAY SAID THE RESCUED OFFICERS OF THE TORPEDOED FREIGHTER OLIVEGROVE DESCRIBED THEIR SUBMARINE ATTACKER AS BARNACLED AND MOSS-COVERED, WITH AN UNKEMPT, BEARDED CREW.

THE SUBMARINE, THEY SAID, LOOKED AS IF IT HAD BEEN LONG AT SEA. THE FADED HAT RIBBONS OF ITS CREW SHOWED NO INSIGNIA.

THE ARTICLE SAID FIRST OFFICER WILLIAM WILSON OF THE OLIVEGROVE HAD BEEN ON A TORPEDOED SHIP THREE TIMES BEFORE. THREE VESSELS WERE SUNK UNDER HIM IN THE LAST WORLD WAR.

THE 4,060-TON OLIVEGROVE, CARRYING 6,090 TONS OF SUGAR FROM THE PORT OF PADRE AND MAKING FOR LAND'S END, SANK IN SIX MINUTES AFTER SHE WAS TORPEDOED.

THE DISPATCH SAID:-

SEP 10 1939

"FIRST OFFICER WILSON AND CAPTAIN JAMES BARNESTON, WHO, WITH A CREW OF THIRTY-ONE AND A CANARY, WERE RESCUED BY THE UNITED STATES LINER WASHINGTON LAST NIGHT, (SEPT.7) TOLD OF THEIR EXPERIENCES TODAY, MIXING THEIR YARNS WITH PRAISE OF THE SUBMARINE SKIPPER WHO STOOD BY THE OPEN BOATS FOR NINE HOURS UNTIL THE WASHINGTON HOVE IN SIGHT, WHEN IT FIRED A ROCKET AND SUBMERGED. X X X

"IT WAS AFTER MIDNIGHT WHEN THE SUBMARINE ROSE OFF THE PORT BOW OF THE OLIVEGROVE, FIRED A SHOT ACROSS HER BOWS AND ORDERED THE CREW TO ABANDON SHIP. THE OFFICERS AND CREW LEFT IN TWO LIFEBOATS AND THE SUBMARINE THEN SENT A TORPEDO CRASHING THROUGH THE BOILERS. X X X

"THE LIGHTS OF THE WASHINGTON WERE SIGHTED AFTER 9 O'CLOCK. THE SUBMARINE CREW THEN FIXED LIGHTS TO THE LIFEBOAT MASTS AND SENT UP A ROCKET BEFORE SUBMERGING.

"FIRST OFFICER WILSON, WHO IS A RETIRED NAVAL RESERVIST LIEUTENANT, SAID:

SEP 10 1939

"IT WAS THE FIRST TIME THAT I HAVE BEEN WARNED BEFORE A TORPEDOING, AND ST. PETER IS GOING TO LET THAT SUBMARINE CAPTAIN INTO HEAVEN WITHOUT AN ARGUMENT. I EVEN HAD TIME TO SAVE MY BIBLE AND A BOTTLE OF SCOTCH."

B/PS1153AED

UNDATED CENSORSHIP (AMS)

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER. Geo. W. TURNER

THE CENSORSHIP AMONG THE BELLIGERENTS IN EUROPE HAS COMMENCED TO TIGHTEN.

SEP 10 1939

THE POWERS AT WAR EVIDENTLY HAVE BEEN TAKING LEAVES FROM THE BOOK OF EXPERIENCE IN THE WORLD WAR WHEN ALL NEWS WAS RIGOROUSLY CENSORED.

MANY READERS TODAY WILL RECALL THE DIFFICULTIES IN FOLLOWING THE COURSE OF EVENTS IN THAT GIGANTIC CONFLICT; OF TRYING TO RECONCILE CONFLICTING OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUES; OF CLAIMS OF VICTORY AND FLAT DENIALS; OF TRYING TO DISTINGUISH BETWEEN PROPAGANDA AND ACTUALITY.

EVEN AT THIS LATE DAY HISTORIANS WADING THROUGH THE MAZE OF OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS ARE FAR FROM AGREEMENT ON THE PRIMARY QUESTION OF WHO STARTED THE WORLD WAR.

IN THE WORLD WAR THE CENSORSHIP DEVELOPED GRADUALLY. IT WAS THE BRITISH POSTAL CENSORSHIP IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE CABLE CENSORSHIP WHICH ENABLED THE NAVAL BLOCKADE ON GERMANY TO BE DEVELOPED. THESE DEPARTMENTS FURNISHED PRACTICALLY ALL THE EVIDENCE GIVEN BEFORE THE PRIZE COURTS CONCERNING VESSELS WHOSE CARGOES WERE CLAIMED BY THE CROWN AS BEING DESTINED FOR AN ENEMY COUNTRY.

SEP 10 1939

AT THE START, THE BRITISH WAR OFFICE NEVER ANTICIPATED THAT ANY POSTAL CENSORSHIP WOULD BE NECESSARY, OTHER THAN EXAMINATION OF CORRESPONDENCE OF SUSPECTED PERSONS. ONLY A SMALL FORCE WAS EMPLOYED. BUT AS THE WAR DRAGGED ON AND ESPIONAGE DEVELOPED, THE CENSORSHIP FORCE NUMBERED MORE THAN 4,000 PERSONS, INCLUDING EXPERTS OF ALL LANGUAGES; CHEMISTS, WHOSE DUTY IT WAS TO DETECT INVISIBLE INK USED BY THE GERMANS AND WIZARDS AT UNRAVELING COMPLICATED CIPHER CODES.

IN ENGLAND, DURING THE LAST YEARS OF THE WAR, 375,000 LETTERS WERE EXAMINED DAILY. IN 1917, FOR INSTANCE, 180,000,000 POSTAL PACKETS WERE EXAMINED AND 356,000 OF THESE WERE DETAINED AS LIKELY TO BE OF VALUE TO THE ENEMY. THREE HUNDRED CIPHER LETTERS WERE DETECTED. WOMEN WERE FOUND TO BE PARTICULARLY ADEPT IN THIS WORK.

THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE BRITISH SYSTEM WAS SUCH THAT IT WAS COPIED BY HER ALLIES. WHEN AMERICA ENTERED THE WAR THE SYSTEM WAS RELIED UPON TO FURNISH INFORMATION DESIRED. IT IS INTERESTING THAT ONLY ONE BRITISH SUBJECT WAS PROSECUTED ON THE CHARGE OF HIGH TREASON--SIR ROGER CASEMENT.

MESSAGES FROM AUTHORIZED WAR DORRESPONDENTS AT THE FRONT WITH BRITAIN'S ARMIES WERE CENSORED ON THE SPOT BY MILITARY CENSORS. THERE WAS A DOUBLE CHECK ON THIS SYSTEM, TOO, FOR IN THE LAST ANALYSIS, ALL STORES WENT THROUGH THE PRESS BUREAU WHICH EXERCISED A SUPER-CENSORSHIP. THE ENGLISH PRESS,
THE WAR OFFICE AND THE ADMIRALTY GRADUALLY DEVELOPED A VOLUNTARY AGREEMENT TO WITHHOLD FROM PUBLICATION INFORMATION WHICH SEEMED TO BE UNDESIRABLE FOR NATIONAL INTERESTS. THE GOVERNMENT TRUSTED THE PRESS AND THE PRESS--WITH FEW EXCEPTIONS--JUSTIFIED THAT TRUST.

GERMANY HAD DRASTIC METHODS OF CONTROLLING THE PRESS. NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS THAT OFFENDED WERE SUSPENDED. "PREVENTIVE ARRESTS" WERE MADE. RADICAL AND PACIFIST EDITORS WERE THROWN IN JAIL.
THE GERMAN POSTAL CENSORSHIP WAS CONDUCTED WITH GREAT THOROUGHNESS. WRITERS OF LETTERS, WHOSE COMMUNICATIONS HAD BEEN HELD UP, FREQUENTLY WERE SUMMONED TO EXPLAIN INTIMATIONS IN THEIR CORRESPONDENCE OF FOOD SHORTAGES, WAR-WEARINESS OR ANYTHING ELSE THAT ATTRACTED THE WATCHFUL EYES OF THE CENSORS.

SEP 10 1939

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY HAD SEVERE METHODS APPROACHING GERMANY'S. THE RUSIAN CENSORSHIP WAS IRREGULAR. PAPERS IN THE LARGER CITIES WERE CONTROLLED BY THE CENSORS BUT IN THE INTERIOR, WHERE THE GREAT MASS OF PEOPLE WAS ILLITERATE, THE GERMANS CONDUCTED EFFECTIVE PROPAGANDA.

WB851PED

30.24-3231

30.24 3231

(WX)-UNDATED MILITARY STRATEGY (BUDGET)

BY E.E.BOMAR SEPT-9-

SFP 101939

MILITARY MEN VIEWED PESIMISTICALLY LAST NIGHT POLAND'S CHANCES OF HALTING THE ADVANCING GERMAN ARMIES, WHILE DISMISSING FRENCH ATTACKS IN THE WEST AS WITHOUT MAJOR SIGNIFICANCE THUS FAR.

THE NEXT DAY OR TWO PROMISES TO DECIDE WHETHER THE POLES CAN MAKE STAND ON THE NEW AND SHORTER NAREW-VISTULA-SAN RIVER LINE AND DEFEND THE REMAINING TWO-THIRDS OF THEIR COUNTRY, OR WHETHER THEY WILL BE DEFEATED JUST AS THE RUSSIANS WERE ROUTED BY THE GERMAN GENERAL VON MACKENSEN ALONG THE SAME LINE IN 1915.

AS THEN, THE GERMAN PURPOSE SEEMS TO BE TO DESTROY THE POLISH ARMIES AS A MILITARY THREAT ON THE EASTERN FRONT. THE REPORTED CAPTURE OF WARSAW WAS OF SECONDARY IMPORTANCE TO THIS PURPOSE.

ALREADY, ON THE BASIS OF NEUTRAL REPORTS, AS WELL AS GERMAN CLAIMS, THE NORTHERN FLANK OF THE NEW POSITION HAS BEEN TURNED. IF THE FAST-MOVING GERMAN FORCE FROM EAST PRUSSIA PUSHES FURTHER SOUTHWARD BY TOMORROW, THE WHOLE POLISH POSITION WOULD BE UNTENABLE AND THE POLES FACED THE TRAGIC ALTERNATIVES OF FURTHER RETREAT OR DISASTER, ONE AUTHORITY ASSERTED.

FURTHER, A BERLIN COMMUNIQUE REPORTED THAT FROM THE SOUTH FOUR NAZI COLUMNS, FOLLOWING VON MACKENSEN'S ROUTE, HAD REACHED THE VISUTLA SOUTH OF WARSAW AND ONE HAD GAINED A FOOTING EAST OF THE RIVER AT SANDOMIERZ.

A CROSSING BY A SMALL FORCE MIGHT NOT BE DECISIVE, BUT IF IT WERE NOT CHECKED, THE SOUTHERN AS WELL AS NORTHERN FLANKS OF THE POLISH DEFENSES WOULD BE THREATENED.

PUSHED BACK WITHOUT A RESPITE SINCE THE WAR STARTED, THE POLISH ARMY UNDERTOOK TO DIG IN ALONG THE NAREW-VISTULA AND SAN RIVERS AND HOLD THEIR POSITION UNTIL THE FALL RAINS SLOWED DOWN THE INVADERS.

MILITARY MEN SAID FACTORS FAVORING THE POLES WERE THESE:

THE DEFENDERS HAVE MANAGED TO WITHDRAW MOST OF THEIR FORCES INTACT FROM THE WEST POLAND "POCKET" FORMED BY THE JAWS OF A GREAT GERMAN TRAP THAT APPEARS TO HAVE PINCHED OFF ALL POLAND WEST OF WARSAW.

THEIR NEW LINE IS LESS THAN HALF AS LONG AS THE FRONTIERS THEY UNDERTOOK AT FIRST TO DEFEND.

THEY ARE FAVORED FOR THE FIRST TIME BY TERRAIN, SINCE THEY CAN EMPLOY RIVERS AS NATURAL BARRIERS.

GERMAN LINES OF SUPPLY AND COMMUNICATION HAVE BEEN EXTENDED AND THE NAZIS MAY HAVE TO SLOW UP TO CONSOLIDATE BEFORE RENEWING THE ONSLAUGHTS ON A LARGE SCALE.

SEP 10 1939

FALL RAINS AND THE RESULTANT MUD AND HIGH WATER MAY COME IN ANOTHER WEEK OR TWO, HAMPERING THE MOVEMENT OF GERMAN TANKS AND OTHER MODERN ARMS IN WHICH THE POLES ARE RELATIVELY DEFICIENT.

SM514PES

UNDATED MECHANZIED WAR ARE

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

SEP 10 1939

AMS

SWIFT PENETRATION OF THE GERMAN ARMIES INTO THE HEART OF POLAND, WHICH HAS AMAZED MILITARY OBSERVERS, HAS BEEN POSSIBLE THROUGH THE SPECIALIZED DEVELOPMENT OF MECHANIZED UNITS

SINCE THE WORLD WAR.

FAST TANKS, EQUIPPED WITH POWERFUL MACHINE GUNS AND ARMORED MOTOR CARS OF VARIOUS TYPES HAVE TRANSPORTED HITLER'S FORCES AND SUPPLIES AT A PACE UNDREAMED OF IN THE DAYS BEFORE THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE MOTOR.

POLAND'S GOOD ROADS NEAR THE FRONTIERS HAVE AIDED THE GERMANS IN THEIR RAPID ADVANCE. IF THE POLISH PLAN OF DEFENSE EMBRACED STOUT BARRIERS TO THE MARCH OF THE BATTLE CARS THEY OBVIOUSLY BOGGED DOWN.

GENERAL SIR DOUGLAS HAIG OF GREAT BRITAIN SAID THE GENERAL SUPERIORITY OF THE ALLIES IN THE LAST YEARS OF THE WORLD WAR IN TANKS AND OTHER MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT "UNDOUBTFDLY CONTRIBUTED POWERFULLY TO THEIR SUCCESS". HOWEVER, HE ADDED, "EVERY MECHANICAL DEVICE SO FAR PRODUCED IS DEPENDENT FOR ITS MOST EFFECTIVE USE UPON THE CLOSEST POSSIBLE ASSOCIATION WITH OTHER ARMS AND, IN PARTICULAR, WITH INFANTRY AND ARTILLERY."

SEP 10 1939

GERMANY TOOK A LEAF FROM EXPERIENCE IN THE WORLD WAR AND, AFTER HITLER REARMED THE NATION, MUCH ATTENTION WAS DEVOTED TO IMPROVING MECHANIZED UNITS. IN THE MANY MILITARY DISPLAYS IN BERLIN IN RECENT YEARS THE TANKS AND ARMORED CARS RUMBLED OVER THE STREETS IN A SEEMINGLY ENDLESS STREAM

USE OF MECHANIZED DEVICES IN WARFARE IS NOT MODERN. THE ANCIENT ROMANS USED THE TESTUDO, OR TORTOISE, AND THE MEDIEVAL "BELFRY" IN SIEGE OPERATIONS, IN WHICH MISSLES WERE THROWN. BETWEEN 1395 AND 1405 "BATTLE CARS" EQUIPPED WITH LANCES WERE USED.

THE FIRST DEFINITE PROPOSAL FOR A FIGHTING TANK WAS MADE IN ENGLAND IN 1906-1908 BUT THE PROJECT DIED FOR LACK OF SUPPORT.

THE HOLD "CATERPILLAR", DESIGNED IN THE U.S. WAS ADOPTED DURING THE WORLD WAR. THE NAME "TANK" WAS SUGGESTED IN ENGLAND IN 1915 TO INSURE SECRECY DURING THE EXPERIMENTAL STAGES. THE FIRST TRIAL OF THE NEW MACHINE WAS ON FEB. 2, 1916 AND IT WAS SUCCESSFUL, RIPPING THROUGH BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS AND OTHER BARRIERS.

WB906PED

By The Associated Press

UNDATED WAR INTERPRETATION

Sept-9

SEP 10 1939

Europe's war was marked today by Hitler's claim that he had regained in Poland all the territory taken from Germany after the 1914-1918 war. If this be true it means the German war machine in eight days has conquered the Polish Corridor area, Polish Upper Silesia and added them to the already [illegible] Free City of Danzig. These districts comprise about one-eighth of Poland or 17,510 square miles.

The [illegible] world's sentimental interest, however, probably is fixed on Warsaw, Polish capital, where German troops admittedly are at the gates. Germany announced the first forts entered the outskirts yesterday but conflicting radio broadcasts believed to have come from Warsaw raised doubt on the situation. The Poles maintained they still defended the city and called on the population to dig trenches in and around the city. The government several days ago moved to Lublin, 100 miles southeast.

In this conflict between Germany and the [illegible] British-French-Polish allies, the real fighting still seems confined to Poland. There is war on the western front between Germany and France and war at sea between Germany and England and war in the air but [illegible] there is nothing to indicate it is on a large scale.

1939

30.24-3233

30.24 3233

Western Front.

groups of forts

The two great [illegible] along the Rhine are the Vast Maginot Line [illegible] defending France and Germany's "Siegfried" or West Wall facing it across considerable French and German territory at most points. The French army is "clearing out" the space between. It is massing troops at the two ends. What the exact plan is ,does not appear but the French frankly say there is no prospect of big action for several days at least. The present work is cutting intervening barbed wire,rooting out machine-gun nests and pill-boxes,discovering tank traps and searching for hidden mines intended to blow up advancing troops. The French call this "preliminary work".

SEP 10 1939

At Sea.

[illegible] Great Britain,the world's chief sea power,yesterday announced something of the old 1914 blockade methods. This came when the first week a number of and German brought sinkings of [illegible] British/merchant vessels. [illegible] The British submarine government declared Germany is conducting "ruthless/warfare". [illegible]

Britain's answer to the German sea threat is widespread organization of anti-submarine defense with nets,mines,depth bombs,recently developed listening devices and direct fighting with seaplanes and small fast warships. Further,Britain announced search even of neutral vessels suspected here of carrying supplies for Germany.

Air.

In the air there has been little or no fighting. The British "attacks" have been largely propaganda flights of slower planes dropping leaflets on Germany in the hope British arguments would stir Germans to revolt against Hitler.

[illegible]

On the French Front.

It may strike many as strange but it is quite in time for there to be talk of peace when the real war can not be said to have started.

Hitler's announcement he had regained all former German territory German in Poland and the almost passive/tactics toward the French fit in with the often discussed theory that Hitler intends to [illegible] confront Britain and France with capture of [illegible] former German soil in Poland and then ask them,

"That's all the fighting about?"

SEP 10 1939

Many Germans long have believed that Britain and France are reluctant to have a world war over the [illegible] return of former German soil to Germany. The British particularly but also the French have declared "Hitlerism" must be stamped out. By that they mean what they consider Nazi tactics and plans to spread over Europe. They say they don't trust Hitler to be content with Sax what once was Germany's but that Hitler will lead his armies over most of the remainder of Europe.

Warsaw Bombed, but Holds Out

SEP 11 1939

WARSAW BOMBED-

HORROR SCENES DESCRIBED BY BROADCASTER

Capital Bombed, Shelled. 40 Raids By Germans Reported

SEP 12 1939

Radio Tells Of Bearded Spies Being Dropped By Parachute

By ROBERT B. PARKER, JR.
Associated Press Correspondent

Budapest, Monday, Sept. 11—Warsaw was subjected to an all-day airplane, tank and artillery attack Sunday as invading German armies tried to take the capital, the Warsaw radio stated early today.

Capt. Vaclav Lipinski, of the Polish army staff, broadcast that German heavy artillery had bombarded the city from dawn to dusk and that German tanks had attacked the city in droves.

Forty Raids Made

Earlier the radio said forty air raids were made on the city during the day.

Captain Lipinski said Polish anti-aircraft batteries had destroyed fifteen German bombers which fell into the city proper and its suburbs, and declared the defenders had captured many Germans, "including the crews of two tanks which were destroyed."

The attack had been under way for nineteen hours when Captain Lipinski came on the air shortly after midnight.

The first air raid came at 5 A. M. and was followed by a second at 9.14 in which seventy Nazi bombers were reported roaring over the city.

Tanks Attack

"After sunset," said the officer, "German tanks in droves attacked Warsaw from the suburbs, but were driven back. Two of them were destroyed, and their crews taken prisoner."

The Warsaw announcer on the air before the captain said the capital was an inferno of bursting bombs, and that the screams of wounded and dying could be heard between blasts.

The Germans were said to have "parachuted spies into the city who were ragged and bearded."

The long attack came on the third day of the German siege of the capital, and last night Polish announcers at Lwow said that their important south-eastern industrial city, capital of Polish Ukraine, was preparing for a similar siege.

Sirens Heard

Over both the Warsaw and Lwow radios came repeated high-pitched screams of air-raid sirens and sometimes the whines of motors of diving planes could be heard.

Announcers said the civilians of both cities, including aged men and women and little children, were helping their soldiers to fight back the attackers.

Earlier the Polish army general headquarters declared in a radio broadcast that "our soldiers are fighting valiantly and making a great defense on all fronts."

"Warsaw is ready for a long defense," the announcement said. "Our country is in flames. In the West the fight has now really started."

In another broadcast a speaker identified as Mayor Starzinski said the city's population, described as "mostly old people," was beginning to feel the pinch of hunger but nevertheless was working hard to supply food for the soldiers fighting off German attacks at the city's gates.

Boys And Girls Help

Boys and girls, some hardly more than infants, were reported to be struggling with water buckets to put out fires and aiding old men and women to pile up street barricades.

Mayor Starzinski said food would be sold only in small quanties in the shops and that no more refugees will be permitted to enter the city.

"Again the Germans have bombed civilians with a cruelty which is unknown in world history," the speaker said.

He repeated a request which runs like a theme through all Polish broadcasts: "Citizens, keep the streets clean of wreckage; sweep up the wreckage as quickly as it is made."

The speaker read a Government order banning the sale of alcohol henceforth with the comment that "alcohol is poison, so let the Germans have it."

Appeals To Youth

The broadcast touched, unwittingly perhaps, on the great exodus from Warsaw, when the speaker said: "It is a great pity that the young people have fled and mostly we old people are left behind."

With a catch in his voice, he continued: "We need young blood to defend our beloved capital."

Later the Polish Government radio station at Warsaw broadcast a warning that Lwow, principal city of the Polish Ukraine, must prepare for a siege similar to that at Warsaw. Lwow was reported bombed for several hours last night by German aircraft and one section of the city was reported in flames.

Asked To Dig Trenches

The radio announcer called upon Lwow to dig trenches and erect barricades in the streets. He said German troops were rapidly pushing toward Lwow in an attempt to cut Poland's communication with her southern neighbors, Rumania and Hungary.

"Help the soldiers defend the city; remain calm; defend Lwow with bare hands against the German hordes if necessary," he called.

Mothers in both Warsaw and Lwow were told to sew their children's names on their clothes as well as to pin papers to their clothes giving dates of their vaccinations.

The Germans starting intermittently "jamming" both the Warsaw and Lwow radios early this evening, and then broadcasting pro-Nazi news on the same wave lengths.

The Warsaw radio warned citizens of the capital: "Don't pick up wads of banknotes dropped into the streets by German aviators." There was no further explanation.

Driving through Lwow, on our journey out of Warsaw, we saw that city of 350,000 prepared for the worst.

The city was blacked out completely at night, forcing us to crawl through the streets at midnight without lights, feeling our way along the curbstones. We were subjected to frequent questioning.

The only activity was at the railway stations where reservists were boarding trains to meet the German onslaught.

During the day peasants carried on their harvest of corn, pumpkins and sunflowers, along roads packed with refugees fleeing confusion. The main problem facing all southeastern Poland was which direction to go to avoid the invaders.

Rumania Nervous

With war surging toward the borders, Rumania was extremely apprehensive of her neutrality, since the Rumanian oil fields would provide a worthwhile prize for both Poland and Germany.

Rumanians asserted that German, French and British spies and agents were already in the oil fields, prepared to blow up the wells in Rumania should make a move considered favorable to either side.

Rumania, therefore, was protecting her borders and carefully watching every military and diplomatic move, praying she wouldn't be drawn into the struggle.

The Poles, across the border, claimed Warsaw still was holding on grimly, with men and women fighting side by side to defend the capital.

As we were leaving Warsaw, the defenders were rushing preparations for a last-ditch struggle, digging trenches and building barricades throughout the city.

Camouflaged anti-tank guns were pointed across the bridge we traversed, ready to meet expected tank advance across the Vistula river.

All able-bodied men and women were filling sandbags and placing them in strategic spots, planning to hold the city proper, even if the Germans should occupy the Praga district across the river, which was bombed heavily.

Nazis Reported Ready To Thrust Into Ukraine

SEP 11 1939

By LLOYD C. LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Jasina, Hungary, on the Hungarian-Polish Border, Sept. 10 (via Budapest). Strong German forces advancing into Poland from Slovakia were reported today to be planning a thrust across the rich Ukraine, designed to cut that province off from the rest of Poland.

As a prelude to an expected German drive to cut the railway linking Poland and Rumania, German warplanes were heavily bombing and strafing cities and towns along the railways and highways through a large area, including the Ukrainian capital, Lwow (Lemberg).

Soviet Russia and Rumania were rushing troops to their Polish frontiers as a precaution against any eventuality, including internment of any Polish troops cut off and forced across the borders.

Britain Praises the Poles For Defense of Warsaw

Points to Reich's 70 Divisions; Unable to Crack Defenses

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP).—The British Ministry of Information issued a bulletin tonight saying that the Polish army "has shown no sign of cracking," despite Germany's big push to the east.

"By Marshal (Herman Wilhelm) Goering's own confession in his broadcast address yesterday," the communique stated, "Germany has had to mass seventy divisions with whom to prosecute its work of aggression against Poland, and yet in spite of this tremendous weight of men and material the Polish army has shown no sign of cracking under the strain imposed on it but has carried out its withdrawal in an orderly manner and with a steadiness which must excite admiration.

"It is too soon as yet to talk of what will happen to Warsaw during this early stage of the war. What is certain is that the Polish army is firmly in being, and that it is showing qualities which are evoking universal admiration."

Berlin Reports Fall Of Lodz, Poland's Big Textile Center

SEP 11 1939

Communique Also Tells For First Time Of Skirmishes With French On West Front

By LOUIS LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 10 — First reports of skirmishes between German and French outposts of the Siegfried and Maginot lines on the Western front today constituted an outstanding and new feature of the supreme high command's war communiques.

The chief development on the Polish front was a high command announcement that Lodz, Poland's greatest textile center, had been captured and that the Nazis were continuing encirclement of Warsaw as well as Polish army divisions stationed in the neighborhood of Radom, fifty miles south of the Polish capital.

The announcement of the fall of Lodz was included in a statement issued separate from today's army communique. This announcement was expected to be incorporated in tomorrow's communique.

Nazi Claim Explained

The riddle of German claims to having entered Warsaw was explained, at least in part, by a Government spokesman who said motorized forces penetrated to the center of the Polish capital yesterday and then met the difficulty of German troops everywhere in Poland—sniping.

The spokesman said this was a spearhead detachment and it was considered wise to withdraw to the city's outskirts while awaiting main German forces heading toward Warsaw from the north, west and south.

Authorities took the position that once sniping begins a city must be regarded as opened to the invading forces.

The Western front communique confirmed previous reports that an undisclosed number of French planes encountered German aerial fighters. Three French planes were said to have been shot down.

A French vanguard sustained heavy losses in the skirmishes on an unnamed section of the Western front, the high command reported. Nothing was said about how the Nazis fared.

The drive through Poland continued, but German ears already are slightly calloused by continuous reports of victorious operations there. Not even the most sanguine Germans had expected such complete routing of Polish forces as the official statements have claimed.

Army Forming Vise

Apparently the tactics so successfully employed in other parts of Poland are expected by the Germans to prove effective at Warsaw also. There, as elsewhere, they are forming a vise and at the same time endeavoring to cut the enemy off from possible retreat to the east or southeast.

It was apparent from the communique on operations in Poland that the air force again was playing an important part by blocking roads with well-aimed bombs, destroying sections of railroads and blowing to bits such ground organization and plants as the Polish air force still had in the Lomza section.

The disclosure of active fighting between French and Germans gave answer to an anxious question which has been on many German lips these days:

"Do the western powers really mean business or may we yet hope that with Poland defeated they would deem it the better part of wisdom to come to a bloodless arrangement with Germany?"

That hope seemed doomed to disappointment.

Parallel with Germany's drive through Poland, a diplomatic offensive of prime dimensions has been on foot to wean the French away from England.

Premier Mussolini of Italy was understood to be Germany's "honest broker" and in frequent touch with French Premier Daladier.

The rumor continued that Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, was negotiating directly with Paris to keep France out of the war, even though a state of war already exists and the first shots have been fired.

Move Welcomed in Reich

BERLIN, Sept. 10 (AP).—Soviet Russia's call of some reservists to the colors was regarded here as decidedly helping Germany's position, even though no shot be fired by the Russians.

It was held that at least the Soviet border guards would be able to prevent fleeing Polish troops from stepping on Russian soil.

As a sign of the close understanding already existing between the Soviet Union and Germany it was stated that the Russian supreme command had expressed felicitations to the German high command for its strategy and military successes in Poland.

The source disclosing the congratulations from Moscow also expressed the opinion the Russians, in the event they took an active part in the Polish campaign, would claim the Polish Ukraine as their share of the spoils.

He doubted, however, that at present the Russians would go beyond benevolent neutrality and supplying Germany. He also believed that the army would try to re-establish railway connections to Russia on the southeast.

Nazi Airmen Save Crew Of Fallen Craft from Foe

German Agency Tells of Daring Rescue Behind Lines

BERLIN, Sept. 10 (AP).—A German news agency dispatch reported today "extraordinary daring" by a squadron of German bombers which rescued the crew of one plane that had been forced to make a landing behind Polish lines at Dyskow, near Tluscz.

SEP 11 1939

The dispatch said the plane, which developed motor trouble, landed in a field. As the Poles rushed out to seize it other ships in the squadron forced them back with bombs, it was said. One machine then landed beside the disabled plane, and it was set afire, the dispatch said, and then the crew escaped in the rescue plane.

30.24-3235

Germans As War Item To Save Posterity

Requested To Forward Documents And Mementoes For Archives Department Of Party

Berlin, Sept. 10 (AP)—The archives department of the Nazi party appealed to soldiers and Germans at home and abroad today to forward war documents and mementoes.

The purpose is to record for posterity "the spirit and principles of National Socialism, the readiness of the people to serve the Führer and the comradeship of one and all who form our community life."

Desired material included:

Reports from the front and other experiences, impressions and observations, proclamations and announcements, battle poetry, new song lyrics, samples of enemy propaganda, examples of "atrocity" stories revealed through pamphlets and posters, "faked" pictures, caricatures and insignia of German nationals and enemy groups.

Nazi Army Communique

SEP 11 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 10—The German supreme command issued the following communique at noon today:

"German forces continued pursuit of the defeated enemy in an easterly direction between the mountains and the Upper Vistula. A quick, smashing drive of motorized and armored troops paved the way up to the Vistula for great successes in the large Vistula bend between Sandomierz and Kutno.

"Parts of numerous Polish divisions are cut off in the neighborhood of Radom from the Vistula and are encircled on all sides. Similarly, retreat over the Vistula, near Warsaw and south of there, has been cut off for the eastward hurrying enemy leaving the region of Skierniwice - Sochaczew - Kutno.

"Sections of the Polish army, with which heavy fights still are going on, will meet their doom in the next ensuing days.

"German forces advancing in northern Poland along both sides of the Vistula have reached the region west of Wloclawek and Plock (Pwotsk).

"Northeast of Warsaw German troops gained a foothold on the southern shores of the Bug river.

"Fighting still is going on around Lomza and to the east of there.

"The air forces, by attacks, blocked roads and railroads leading back from Warsaw to the east and the southeast and assaulted remnants still existing in their region of Polish military plants.

SEP 11 1939

"Seven Polish planes were shot down during a fight in the course of an undertaking against Lublin by mixed units of fighting and destroyer planes. Eight Polish planes were heavily damaged by bombs striking them on the ground.

"In support of the army, flying units made effective attacks in the region around Radom as well as between the Narew and Bug rivers.

"In the west for the first time French reconnoitering vanguards crossed the German frontier and engaged in fighting our vanguard posted far ahead of the western fortifications. The enemy left numerous dead and wounded, among them one officer.

During the night from the eighth to ninth of September British planes threw down leaflets over several cities in north and western Germany. The crew of one English fighting plane, which crashed near Uberstedt, in Thuringia, was taken prisoner.

"On the Western front three French planes were shot down over German territory. No bomb attacks occurred."

An earlier special report of the German high army command announced:

"The unexpected quick thrust by German troops on Warsaw and entering into the Polish capital as early as the eighth day of the advance not only severely impaired the Polish supreme war command, but also evidently caused great bewilderment within the ranks of the Polish troops.

"The Polish troops standing outside Warsaw now are firing on their own metropolis with artillery. This militarily senseless shelling can only have in its wake the superfluous destruction of non-military objects (Anlagen) and cause unnecessary victims among the Polish civilian population of the capital."

Diplomats Walk, Sleep In Ditches As They Follow Pole Government

U. S. Envoy Biddle, Wife And Step-Daughter Live In Remote Border Village Cottage

SEP 11 1939

By ELMER W. PETERSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Sniatyn, Poland, Sept. 10 (by Courier to the Polish-Rumanian Frontier)—Because they must follow the Government to which they have been assigned, foreign diplomats with their families and staffs have experienced grueling hardship in a 400-mile trek from Warsaw to this tiny village not far from the Russian frontier.

The experiences they have gone through make up one of the most amazing chapters of the fierce, undeclared war in Poland.

Slept In Ditches

I followed the trek of the diplomats. I saw them, utterly exhausted, sleeping in ditches beside their parked automobiles. I have seen them pedaling bicycles or doing more walking in a day than they would ordinarily in a year.

On a lonely road last Friday night a car carrying the French flag catapulted into a ditch as the driver fainted from fatigue.

When the car was righted the wife of a French Embassy official lay unconscious with a deep gash in her head. The wife of another diplomat got out an ordinary needle and thread and stitched up the cut.

The American Embassy here is a small wooden building. Ambassador Anthony J. D. Biddle, Jr., and his wife sleep on mattresses made of canvas sacks filled with newly cut hay.

There is no running water. A street full of peasant carts is the front yard. Food is obtained in a restaurant where you must partly serve yourself.

Biddles Live There

In this new United States Embassy now reside Ambassador and Mrs. Biddle; 18-year-old Peggy Thompson-Schulze, daughter of Mrs. Biddle, and Mary Willes Mackenzie, of Hopkinsville, Ky., private secretary to Mrs. Biddle.

Here also work North Winship, counselor; L. M. Harrison, second secretary, and C. Burke Elbrick, third secretary.

The first move of the Ambassador and his staff was to a quiet spot in south-central Poland called Nalenczow. Twenty-four hours after arrival—while some of the diplomatic parties were still arriving—a new request to move on was given.

In the dead of night the caravan of diplomatic cars started another lengthy drive.

Through villages and towns that slept dark and quiet in fear of air raids the diplomats moved. Occasionally they stopped for gasoline, rationed sparingly. They drank coffee at wayside houses. Often without lights, they drove at a snail's pace along pitch-black roads, caught between military transports and marching soldiers.

Polish Plane Lands

Leaving Warsaw, Secretary Harrison stopped his car as a small Polish training plane landed close beside the road. The pilot ran for cover, signaling to Harrison to do likewise. There was a terrific roar and they saw a German bomber swoop low to demolish the Polish plane with bombs and machine guns.

Dramatic episodes now are becoming almost routine to the diplomats in their new manner of living, far removed from their luxurious homes in Warsaw.

At Nalenczow Biddle sat talking with other diplomats in a darkened garden. There was confusion and shooting overhead. Two planes were battling far above.

Then came a crash at the far end of the garden and a German pilot descended with his parachute—alive, but injured.

Thousands of Russian Reserves Being Sped to Polish Frontier

Trains Packed With Troops and Supplies Leave Moscow; Foodstuffs Are Requisitioned; Press Assails Britain; Baltic Nations Alarmed

SEP 12 1939

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 10.—Thousands of reserve troops poured through Moscow today, bound for the west, after Soviet Russia for the first time disclosed officially that reservists had been called to the colors.

Many regular trains were running late as a result of the westward movement of troops. While most of the reservists were in uniform, some wore civilian clothes as they boarded the trains.

SEP 11 1939

Official confirmation that reserves were being called up coincided with other developments of a preparatory nature. Russia continued strengthening her western frontier. It was understood the government was requisitioning certain supplies in large quantities, especially sugar. Russia already has moved to put her foreign trade on a virtual "cash-and-carry" basis.

War and raw materials were being rushed to the western border, where there appeared the possibility of Germany's establishing a common frontier with the Soviet Union. The two nations had a common frontier before the Polish state was created.

The Soviet press, at the same time, attacked the "unfriendly actions of England in regard to the U. S. S. R.," asserting that Britain had violated friendly trade relations. It was claimed that several British firms had canceled production of lathes and presses ordered by Russia. A Tass (official news agency) statement concluded that "the actions of English firms and British government organs are blowing up trade between the U. S. S. R. and England."

While Russia maintained an outward calm as she watched the war between capitalistic powers of western Europe, there were indications she was getting ready for any emergency.

By CHARLES FOLTZ JR.
(Associated Press Staff Correspondent)

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 11 (Monday) (AP). — Highly trained shock troops of Germany's Westwall, operating under a heavy curtain of fire from their own forts, launched a series of night raids for the second time on positions newly captured by the French in the German Saarland last night and early today.

Reports reaching Switzerland indicated these attacks met with varying successes.

French forces, momentarily stopped by a German counter-offensive, had resumed their attack shortly after daybreak yesterday.

Less than three miles separated the French at some points from the chain of German forts beyond the muggy Saar River, reports here indicated.

Besides the fighting along the Saar and at other points in the Moselle-Rhine sector, it was indicated in reports reaching here from both sides of the frontier that French troops were moving into action in the Vosges foothills just west of the Rhine, where rolling hills bridge the Burgundian gap toward the Haardt range.

Both German and French engineers had dynamited and sealed some coal mine galleries along the Saar, each fearing the other might try to use them in surprise attacks.

SEP 12 1939

The towns of Lauterbach, Bisten and Berus, and the villages of Carlsbrunn, St. Nikolaus and Uberherrn were said to be in French hands with the German salient between Rosel and Bist Creeks, west and south of Saarbrucken, wiped out.

THE LINE NOW APPEARED TO RUN PARALLEL WITH THE SAAR RIVER NORTHWEST FROM THE FORBACH AREA, TURNING WEST NEAR MERZIG TO JOIN THE OLD FRONTIER NEAR APACH.

BASEL-Sept-11 (AP)

SEP 12 1939

NIGHT FIGHTING, BOTH UNDER AND ABOVE GROUND IN THE SAAR AREA, BROUGHT NO ESTIMATES HERE FROM EITHER SIDE AS TO CASUALTIES. HOWEVER, FRENCH LOSSES IN THE FIGHTING IN THE FIRST WEEK OF WAR WERE KNOWN TO BE HIGHER THAN THE GERMAN BECAUSE THE FRENCH WERE ON THE

30.24 3235

OFFENSIVE AGAINST GERMAN DEFENSES OPERATING IN THE SHADOW OF THE SIEGFRIED FORTS.

NEUTRAL OBSERVERS IN SWITZERLAND, BELIEVED GENERAL MAURICE GAMELIN'S FRENCH SOLDIERS IN THE FIRST WEEK OF WAR HAD GAINED AND HELD VALUABLE POSITIONS BOTH IN THE SAAR AND ELSEWHERE FROM WHICH ASSAULTS ON THE SIEGFRIED LINE ITSELF MIGHT BE ATTEMPTED.

ED521 SEP 12 1939

Germans Reported Striking

PARIS, Sept. 10 (AP).—German troops were reported tonight striking into the triangle formed by the junction of the Moselle and Saar Rivers, on the extreme northern flank of the western front, where French troops have advanced farthest into the Saarland.

Fifty miles to the southeast a general staff communique announced that French troops were advancing on a twenty-mile sector between the Saar River, where it cuts across the frontier into French territory, and the foothills of the Vosges Mountains.

SEP 11 1939

Between these two sectors German counter-attacks from the shelter of a maze of coal-mine galleries of the Saar Basin apparently had halted the French advance. Here the French line rested parallel to the Saar River just a few miles within German territory.

The fact that communique No. 14 said the German offensive was in the "region northeast of Sierck" gave the impression the Germans were attacking close to the French frontier. Sierck lies on the Moselle just inside the French border at the Luxembourg and German frontiers.

Apparently the Germans, following French tactics, were using neutral Luxembourg frontier as a cover for their right flank, just as the French did for their left flank in their drive in the direction of the German city of Trier.

Drive From Coal Pits

On the front between the German towns of Merzig and Saarbruecken German counter-attacks from the sheltering maze of coal pits apparently had halted the French. German reinforcements, which had marched for miles along galleries hewn out of coal, sallied from the gaping mine mouths under cover of darkness.

While French advance guards fought off Nazi night raiders, utilizing German blockhouses which had been conquered during the first week of the war, larger French units moved up from the Maginot Line to consolidate the advance positions.

French engineer detachments digging in under fire, strengthened the one-time German fortifications for French use by linking them up with connecting trenches to the rear. Fresh troops from the Maginot fortresses snaked their way forward to join isolated advance party positions, converting French forward resistance into something resembling a continuous line for the first time since their advance started.

Some military observers had the impression that operations on the western front were marking time, awaiting the outcome of a major battle reported in Paris to be under way on the eastern front, with Warsaw as the prize.

Front Line Traced

The best information from strictly unofficial sources indicated that the western-front battle lines swing in a curve from the junction of the Saar and Moselle Rivers, at the northern end of the front, along the Saar through the towns of Saarburg, Saarlouis and Saarbruecken. At Saarbruecken the line was believed to leave the river and swing back to rejoin the Limes Line several miles southeast of Zweibruecken. This curve roughly represented German positions from which the Nazis were counter-attacking.

The French positions were reported to lie on the outside curve which bulges toward the French frontier. It apparently is only in front of the larger towns such as Saarburg, Saarbruecken and Saarlouis that the French had not reached the line of the river which flows through them at these points. Strong German positions, long prepared to protect the towns, kept the French at distances of a mile or two.

The no-man's-land over which the French and Germans are fighting between the Limes and Maginot Lines averages approximately fifteen miles on the northern flank of the western front. It narrows down from twenty-five miles, where it is bordered on the north by the Moselle River, to virtually nothing at the pivot of the front on the Rhine at Lauterbourg, where the two lines of fortifications face one another scarcely more than a hand grenade's throw apart.

Polish recruiting offices were opened in Paris today under an agreement with the French government to form an army for service in France which will fight under its own officers and own flag. Thousands of Polish residents of France crowded into the three recruiting bureaus set up here.

It was difficult to believe that Paris was a wartime capital this hot, late summer Sunday. Promenaders thronged the boulevards and avenues and crowded the sidewalk cafes. The ever-present gas masks, carried dangling across pedestrians' shoulders or parked alongside cafe tables, were about the only sign of war.

U-BOATS SINK THREE MORE BRITISH SHIPS

SEP 11 1939

England Answers By Opening "Unremitting" Campaign On Subs

Admits German Undersea Craft Are Operating "Far Afield"

By ROBERT BUNNELLE
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Sept. 10—Great Britain answered German submarine warfare today by swinging into an "unremitting" campaign of "attacks and counter measures."

The Government made the announcement without giving details in a terse communique asserting, "It appears that German submarines are now operating far afield." At the same time it announced extension of machinery to implement the British "contraband control" through stations at Gibraltar and Alexandria at either end of the Mediterranean and on Ceylon in the Indian Ocean.

U-Boats Claim Three More

Three British vessels were officially reported sunk today, bringing to twelve the total number of British ships which have gone to the bottom in the first eight days of the European war. They were:

Magdapur	8,640 tons
Rio Claro	4,086 tons
Goodwood	2,769 tons

The steamship Magdapur, the Ministry of Information announced late tonight, sank with an undetermined number of casualties. The method of the sinking and the location of the accident were not announced.

Crew Rescued

The crew of the Rio Claro, which was sunk Wednesday, was rescued and landed in the Azores by a Dutch vessel.

The Goodwood, the British Press Association said, was attacked and sunk in the North Sea, and a fishing vessel rescued the crew, although many of them were injured. Further details were lacking.

Sinking of the 5,548-ton Kennebec and the 5,055-ton Winkleigh by submarines was confirmed by the ministry.

The Ministry of Information also reported a submarine attack on the 20,107-ton Union Castle liner Warwick Castle on her way back to England from South Africa, adding jubilantly, however, that "she gallantly eluded her attackers."

The 1,180-ton Chloris also ran away from an attacking submarine, the announcement said.

2 Nazi Ships Ashore

Another Ministry of Information communique reported the German merchantman Baldur, 5,805 tons, and Vegesak, 4,061 tons, had "gone ashore" on the Norwegian coast. There was no explanation.

Britain's navy has been "particularly busy," the Admiralty announced, "in waters about the British Isles and in the Atlantic."

Flotillas of destroyers are active, the Admiralty continued, although no definite results [illegible] counter-measures against the Ger[illegible] undersea craft have been announ[illegible] beyond a possible success against one submarine minelayer."

"While we have incurred the loss of various merchant ships through submarine operations, many more enemy merchantmen have been captured or sunk or driven to take refuge in neutral harbors in many parts of the world," the Admiralty stated.

Convoy System Looked To

The convoy system "will soon be in operation with the result that U-boat sinkings will tend to decrease," the announcement added.

Turning to the Eastern front, the British Ministry of Information issued a bulletin tonight saying that the Polish army "has shown no sign of cracking" despite Germany's big push to the east.

"By Marshal Goering's own confession in his broadcast address yesterday," the communique stated, "Germany has had to mass seventy divisions with whom to prosecute its work of aggression against Poland and yet, in spite of this tremendous weight of men and material, the Polish army has shown no sign of cracking under the strain imposed on it, but has carried out its withdrawal in an orderly manner and with a steadiness which must excite admiration.

Polish Army Intact

"It is too soon as yet to talk of what will happen to Warsaw during this early stage of the war. What is certain is that the Polish army is firmly in being and that it is showing qualities which are evoking universal admiration."

German troops "have not succeeded in entering Warsaw," the ministry declared, citing as proof that the Polish Government's radio bulletins "are still being broadcast from Warsaw itself."

Other announcements through the Ministry of Information tonight included:

Anti-aircraft and coast defenses are now fully prepared for all emergencies.

The Government of Northern Ireland is planning to add 250,000 acres to its fields of wheat, barley and oats.

One thousand of the 4,000 Czechs in England have volunteered for a Czech legion.

The Sultan of Shihr and Mukalla, a territory in Aden protectorate, has given 20,000 rupees ($6,000) toward Britain's war operations, and the Sultan of Lahej in the same protectorate has declared all resources of his domain are at Britain's disposal.

Set For Long War

Meanwhile, Britain entrenched for a long war on the theory that she has no alternative but to "stop Adolf Hitler."

British newspapers took the view that the War Cabinet's decision yesterday to base its policies on assumption that the war would last for three years or more was a sufficiently broad answer to what they described as "German peace feelers."

The British interpretation of the speech of Field Marshal Goering to German munitions workers asserting Germany was "ready for an honorable peace" was that it foreshadowed a peace proposal from the Nazis following the Polish campaign.

Typical of British reaction was an editorial in the Sunday Times reviewing the first week of war.

Peace Bid Expected

"Herr Hitler's calculation has become tolerably clear," said the paper. "He hopes before winter falls to finish off Poland and then to begin a powerful peace drive on the basis of his victory. Poland would be partitioned, Germany taking at least what was hers before 1914 and setting up a nominally independent 'Congress' Poland in the main Warsaw area. Such a peace, no matter how it were camouflaged, would, if sanctioned by us, be a decisive triumph for Herr Hitler and constitute him the ultimate master of Europe.

SEP 11 1939

"It may be that his desire for us to acquiesce in it has been the motive for his abstaining so far from aerial bombardments of Great Britain. If so he is misreckoning.

Envoy's Statement

The editorial included an authorized statement of the British Ambassador in Tokyo, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, that "even if Poland is conquered which is not by any means a certainty this would only strengthen British determination that Hitlerism must be destroyed."

The paper declared "the temper of the nation will welcome those words."

One British commentator put his view of the situation as that there were really two wars: "One, Hitler's war on Poland, and the other our war on Hitlerism."

The British position, he said, is that there can be no real peace or security in Europe as long as the Hitler regime remains in power.

The British clergy took up the theme of Britain's determination in the churches today.

At Turning Point

The Very Rev. W. R. Mathews, dean of St. Paul's, told the congregation "we are evidently living at a turning point in the history of the world. This war is the end of an age and the beginning of a new one." The real issue of this conflict is: What kind of new age should it be—one dominated by the spirit of Hitlerism or one in which the spirit of Christ can live?"

"The past fortnight," added the dean, "has convinced everyone who was in doubt about the rightness of our cause. . . . Now we can see that at the heart of the Nazi system is a ruthless thrust for power and a calculating cynicism which cannot become a part of a peaceful world."

Program Concealed

The first week of war ended with the Government still strictly concealing its military program. So far it has confined communiques to its naval and aerial operations and to civil defense organization.

The average citizen was settling into the new routine imposed by blackouts, restricted transportation and numerous wartime regulations without complaint.

Most made a joke of the difficulties encountered and there was a lessening of the tension that marked the last days of the crisis and the first hours of war. There was "business as usual" almost everywhere in the city.

But sandbagged buildings, marching troops, automobiles with blacked-out headlamps, air-raid shelter signs and crews digging trenches and filling sandbags in the parks told the story that Britain was at war.

Even the brilliant red-and-gold uniforms and shiny breastplates and helmets of the Palace Guards have disappeared. The guards are there but they wear drab khaki now.

1939

30.24-3237

30.24 3237

OFF TARIFA A BRITISH DESTROYER MET THEM AND TOOK THEM ON TO GIBRALTAR.

THE MANAAR LEFT LIVERPOOL SEPTEMBER 2 WITH A GENERAL CARGO FOR ALEXANDRIA AND CALCUTTA. SHE CARRIED A CREW OF 17 EUROPEANS AND 69 MOHAMEDANS.

ED110PED SEP 11 1939

3 Survivors Of Athenia Chorus 'We Were Lucky'

American College Girls' Losses Include Bicycles—One Salvages Rag Doll

Glasgow, Sept. 10 (AP)—Three American college girls, who hurriedly ended a European cycling tour especially to catch the liner Athenia, arrived here today from Galway with 234 other survivors of the sunken ship chorusing, "We were lucky."

The trio, Alberta Wood, 20, of Louisville, Ky.; Joan Outhwaite, 19, of Bennington, Vt., and Barbara Bradfield, of Grand Rapids, Mich., were the gayest of the party, explaining their only loss in the disaster was about $20 each, their clothes, and "three beautiful bicycles."

Alberta exhibited a rag sailor doll salvaged from the Athenia "for luck's sake."

SEP 11 1939

Another American girl in the party was Margaret Little, of New York, who complained she lost her hope chest.

Survivors Say Two Subs Sank Freighter Manaar

SEP 11 1939

Gibraltar, Sept. 10 (AP)—Survivors of the sunken British cargo ship Manaar today graphically described the sinking of their vessel off the Portuguese coast Thursday.

"We heard a gunshot about 5.30 A. M. and rushed on deck," one survivor said. "The wireless aerial had been destroyed and there were two German submarines on the surface about 500 or 600 yards away on our starboard side.

Britain Is Quiet During War's Second Sunday

Fighting Sermons Heard by Children With Gas Masks; Strollers Watch Balloons

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP).—England's second Sunday of the war was featured by gas masks in churches, sermons on war, signs pointing the way for congregations to reach air raid shelters, and sandbags against the church windows.

Men in uniform, children carrying gas masks and mothers with anxious eyes heard the Rev. Pat McCormick, of St. Martin's-In-The-Field, cry "We are a united nation, knowing that there will be no peace—there cannot be a real peace—while one nation is determined to settle everything by force."

Last Sunday the announcement of war interrupted sermons. Today almost every pastor commented on the hostilities. A pastoral letter from Cardinal Hinsley, read in Catholic churches, said "However much one may individually be disposed to give our cheek to the smiter and our body to the persecutor, we cannot stand idly by and allow our neighbor to be enslaved or ruthlessly done to death."

SEP 11 1939

Prayers at Cenotaph

In London, throughout the day, hundreds knelt and prayed at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. At Ramsgate, clergymen conducted prayer meetings at the close of an abbreviated film showing.

The Whipsnade Zoo reopened, and many children, refugees from London, laughed in the sunshine at the clowning of the giant panda, but each carried his gas mask and at hand were two air-raid shelters.

Sunday strollers gazed at the silvery balloon barrage that guards London, missed the nurses and children in "prams," now gone from the city, saw windows crisscrossed with tape and curtained with black, and everywhere signs "to the trenches" and "air raid shelter—50 persons."

In the park, uniformed soldiers lolled on the grass with their girl friends. In the suburbs a man painted the fenders of his car white for safer blackout driving. A "lost gas masks" department opened in a theater. All over England the weather continues perfect—so perfect that the august "London Times" took note of it this week in an editorial.

SEP 11 1939

Italians Praise German Army, Ridicule Allies

Attitude of Press Reflected Among Populace, With Youth Reviving War Talk

ROME, Sept. 10 (AP).—Italy exhibited today increased partiality toward her axis partner, Germany. Although Premier Benito Mussolini kept secret his plans and continued a policy of neutrality in the European conflict, the Fascist Press praised what it described as the efficiency of Germany's invasion of Poland. Admiration and enthusiasm were expressed.

The newspapers tended to ridicule France and Great Britain for the absence of any large-scale offensive on the western front, and charged that Britain had violated the neutrality of Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark. The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, wrote in "La Voce d'Italia" that Britain appeared to be fighting those neutral states rather than Germany, and he warned them to be vigilant.

Populace Also Enthusiastic

The attitude of the press was reflected to a considerable extent among the populace. Since Italians had been told that their military alliance with Germany required them to go to her aid immediately, if the Reich became involved in war, many of them had expected to be plunged into the conflict at once. On learning this was not to be the case their first feeling was one of relief, and an evidence of diminishing ardor i some quarters for the Rome-Berli axis.

In recent days, however, the ex hibition of German prowess i Poland has evoked new enthusiasm and there has been more talk, espe cially among young Fascists, o Italy's eventually joining sides wit Germany to crush France. At th same time there was evidence toda that Italy does not expect to go t war in the near future. The open ing of the Levantine Fair, at Bar took place as scheduled. A numbe of foreign nations are participat ing.

Italian Victories Cited

"Il Popolo di Roma," speaking o the Fascist injunction that a Italians must continue work calml said: "Italy, which has demon strated her war-like efficiency b conquering an empire in six month routing the enemy in Spain an liberating Albania, is ready for an emergency which may present itse in the development of events."

Although Italy is at peace, som scarcities have already appeare The ban on private automobiles ha resulted in a demand for bicycle and dealers have exhausted the supplies. The same is true of elec tric heaters, which have bee bought up by Italians fearing a co shortage. Coffee is unobtainabl and there is little sugar availabl although the government says a adequate sugar supply is assure Two meatless days weekly are a ready in effect.

It was disclosed that the Chancellor has moved his headquarters from the Corridor, where military action is regarded as just about complete, to the army group in Silesia which conducted the offensive against Czestochowa, Kielce and Radom.

The official dispatch observed that Herr Hitler saw part of a region occupied in eight days for which the German Army in the World War fought a full year.

Paris Life Hits War-Time Stride: 'Les Tommies' Are Men of Hour

SEP 11 1939

PARIS, Sept. 10 (AP).—Parisians, never ones to cry over the good old days, are already swinging into the new war-time stride. Many enterprises which were forced to close when their staffs were mobilized are reopening with older men.

The music halls, which locked their doors for the same reason, are calling back retired troupers of yesteryear. They hope to be running full tilt when the soldiers return on their first furloughs. There is a great demand, incidentally, for comedians who can imitate Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

"Les Tommies" are the topic of the hour, now that British soldiers are once again helping France against the common German foe.

"English beer sold he "Roast beef, 10 francs" and "welcome to our valiant allies" are some of the signs which Paris has prepared. One restaurant even named an entree after the British Prime Minister, who is a fisherman, calling it "Trout Chamberlain."

There are few British troops in Paris, however, most of them having gone directly to the Maginot Line forts. Moreover, because of the danger of air raids, it is not certain that the troops will be permitted to congregate in Paris.

The French are getting set anyway—even to the extent of doubling their vocabulary. Some now know a dozen, instead of a half dozen English words.

More taxicabs are appearing on the streets again, since they are not needed for mobilization, but there are fewer places to which to take them. Paris is an 11 o'clock town—all the cafes close at that hour and

Hitler Makes Flight Over Eastern Front; Follows Route of Retreating Polish Force

SEP 11 1939

By The Associated Pre

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—An official German news agency dispatch from the eastern front stated that Chancellor Hitler had made an extended airplane flight over the battlefield today.

His first flight over the eastern front took Herr Hitler over the Radom region, where just west of the Vistula River several Polish divisions were declared surrounded.

Then, rising to an altitude above 3,000 feet, Herr Hitler followed the route of the retreating Polish Army in the direction of Warsaw.

Herr Hitler was especially interested in the territory west of the Vistula, where a number of Polish divisions made a valiant but vain effort to break out of the Germans' swift encirclement movements. He also saw the spot where the Poles, falling back on Warsaw, made a stand which was smashed by German artillery, armored cars and planes.

There was no indication that any Polish fliers or troops were aware of Herr Hitler's flight.

"CAPTAIN CAMPBELL SHAW ORDERED OUR GUN CREW INTO ACTION AND THE AFT GUN WAS FIRED. BUT THE SUBMARINED SUBMERGED AND THE CAPTAIN ORDERED US TO ABANDON SHIP.

SEP 11 1939

"WE LOWERED FOUR BOATS AND AS WE ROWED AWAY FROM THE MANARR ONE OF THE SUBMARINES LOOSED A TORPEDO WHICH HIT THE VESSEL AMIDSHIP.

"LATER, ANOTHER SHOT WAS FIRED FROM THE SUBMARINES AND THE MANAAR SANK IN FRONT OF US IN LESS THAN FIVE MINUTES."

THE SURVIVORS DESCRIBED HOW THEY DRIFTED IN THE ROUGH ATLANTIC SEAS FOR 36 HOURS BEFORE AN ITALIAN STEAMER PICKED THEM UP.

1939

the motion picture theaters must complete their programs by 8:30 p. m.

Parisians do not lack, however, for ways to occupy themselves. Many women have given up cocktail soirees in favor of sock-knitting parties. Those not proficient in that craft can get instructions from the newspapers.

Even the principal couturiers are fitting themselves into a war-time pattern. Many of them are working on uniforms. Others are designing simple "air raid" costumes, quickly zipped together, so that the wearer can arrive at a refuge shelter within five minutes after an alarm sounds and still look smart.

On the less frivolous side of the picture, military tribunals have been set up in the Palace of Justice as a consequence of the martial law now in force throughout the country.

The government began a drive against war profiteering, especially among the wine merchants, who allegedly raised the price of wine sold to troops from three francs, fifteen centimes (about seven cents), to seven francs (about 16 cents).

Some gas mask dealers were accused of making an 85 per cent profit.

The United States liner President Harding, which is turning around at Le Havre to take stranded Americans home, unloaded approximately 12,000 tons of merchandise, most of which had been destined for Hamburg.

Many practical policemen have resurrected tandem bicycles to facilitate the new method of patrolling the war-darkened city in pairs.

On the matrimonial front, there was the traditional rush. The three-day banns regulation has been canceled and couples are being wed on an average of one every three minutes.

the city's fourth alarm of the war and the first since introduction of the new Policy of sounding a warning only when Paris is in "imminent danger of attack."

It could not be learned immediately whether any planes succeeded in reaching the capital or its invirons.

WAR DECLARED ON GERMANY BY CANADIANS

Royal Proclamation Issued 13 Hours After House Of Commons' Vote

SEP 11 1939

Prerogative Of Taking Step Itself Used For First Time By Dominion

[By the Canadian Press]

Ottawa, Canada, Sept. 10—Canada formally declared war on Germany today—following Britain into the conflict by just a week to the day.

It was the first time in history that the senior domain of the British Commonwealth, on its own account and by its own will, exercised this prerogative of nationhood by declaring a state of war. The Government merely published the British war proclamation in 1914.

SEP 12 1939

Royal Proclamation Issued

Thirteen hours after the House of Commons approved the Government's proposal to throw Canadian men and resources into war for the second time in twenty-five years Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General, issued a royal proclamation.

On the authority of King George VI, it announced that a state of war exists with Germany as of and from today.

The declaration was cabled to London for King George's signature, in his capacity as the King of Canada. Tonight he issued a proclamation "on the advice of his Majesty's Privy Council in Canada" that Canada is at war with Germany.

Earlier the King had received Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada.

Sends Copy To Press

At 1.10 P. M. the office of Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King sent a copy of a special edition of the Canadian Official Gazette containing the declaration to the Canadian press.

The Prime Minister's course in following Britain's action was approved by Parliament last night. First the Senate, by a unanimous vote, and later the House of Commons, without a record vote, gave approval to the Government's policy.

During the debate in Commons Saturday only four voices were raised in disapproval of the Government's position.

The special session of Parliament will immediately consider necessary legislation to prosecute the war.

To Consider Taxes

The Prime Minister gave notice that tomorrow the Commons would be asked to meet as a committee of ways and means to consider taxes and as a committee of supply for the appropriation of funds.

A war budget also may be discussed tomorrow.

Three other dominions—New Zealand, Australia and the Union of South Africa—preceded Canada in war declarations. India was considered automatically to be at war with Germany upon England's declaration.

The proclamation was issued in the name of Minister of Justice Ernest Lapointe and over the printed signature of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Opposed By Four

Canada's entry into the war was opposed in Commons by J. S. Woodsworth, veteran leader of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, who broke with his own followers. Three French-speaking members from Quebec also voiced their opposition.

Ligouri Lacombe and Wilfred Lacroix moved and seconded an amendment expressing regret the Government had not seen fit to advise the Governor General that Canada could not participate in the war. Only they supported the amendment when the vote was called. Earlier Maxime Raymond spoke against participation.

1914 Aid Recalled

The declaration recalled that in the World War Canada's man power was an effective aid to the Allies.

A total of 33,000 men sailed from Canada in October, 1914. The Canadian Expeditionary Force eventually reached 450,000. Altogether, Canada enlisted 619,000 men for war service.

In addition, a large number served in the Royal Flying Corps and in the Royal Navy.

Canadian casualties in the World War were 55,634 dead and 149,732 wounded.

Cost Set At Three Billion

Total cost of the World War to Canada was estimated at $3,000,000,000. The dominion entered the struggle with a national debt of only $363,000,000 and came out of it owing $2,248,868,000. Since the war more than $800,000,000 has been paid out in war pensions, $150,000,000 in soldiers' civil reestablishment and $30,000,000 in allowances to needy war veterans.

King Issues Proclamation

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP).—King George VI issued a proclamation tonight "on the advice of his majesty's Privy Council in Canada," that Canada is at war with Germany. Earlier the King had received Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada, in an audience.

In the case of German citizens the inquiry would be more thorough.

Blair said also that there was no change in the customs regulations.

Allied Bloc's Population 5 Times That of Enemies

505,556,000 Face Reich and Slovak 90,600,000

Canada's declaration of war against Germany yesterday, gave the allies a total population of 505,556,000, as compared with their enemies' 90,600,000. The Associated Press noted.

Here's how they lined up in the week-old European war:

Nation	Population
Germany	86,600,000
Slovakia	4,000,000
Versus
Poland	32,348,000
France	43,000,000
Great Britain, including:
United Kingdom	48,000,000
Australia	8,000,000
New Zealand	1,600,000
Union of South Africa	10,000,000
Canada	11,209,000
India	351,399,000

Egypt, treaty-bound to Great Britain, has severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

way to England to join Great Britain's fighting forces.

With a party of friends on his yacht Sans Peur, he declared he would go directly to Vancouver, where both he and his crew would leave the boat to take the fastest route to England.

ADD BERLIN..SEPT. 10

THE SMASHING DRIVE WAS DECLARED SO SWIFT THAT H
TREE POLISH GENERALS, OF THE THIRD, SEVENTH AND NINETHEENTH DIVISIONS, HAD BEEN CAPTURED.

THE PRISON CAMP AT KIELOE WAS REPORTED TO BE FILLED TO OVERFLOWING, WITH A SIGN ON THE GATE READING, "NO ROOM. PLEASE TAKE NEW PRISONERS FARTHER BACK."

DNB SAID 24,000 POLES HAD BEEN CAPTURED TODAY IN THE RADOM SECTOR.

SEP 11 1939

STEINS...839P

Fourth Air Raid Alarm Is Sounded in Paris

PARIS, Sept. 11 (Monday) (AP).—An air raid alarm was sounded here at 4:10 a. m. today (11:10 p. m. Sunday, New York time).

The "all clear" signal followed sixty-seven minutes later. It was

U. S. Tourists May Enter Canada Without Trouble

Only Germans Will Face Close Investigation at Border

OTTAWA, Sept. 10 (CP)—The proclamation declaring Canada in a state of war with Germany will make no difference to persons coming into Canada unless they are German citizens, F. C. Blair, Director of Immigration, said here tonight.

"Citizens of the United States may enter Canada as freely as they ever did," he said. "Our immigration officers ask United States visitors crossing the border where they were born and take their word for it.

"They do not have to produce birth certificates or have passports. Citizens of European countries traveling in the United States and entering Canada would have passports."

Premier Abe Says Tokio Considers a Soviet Pact

Warns Japan That War Will Not Give It Free Hand in China

UJI-YAMADA, Japan, Sept. 10 (AP).—Premier Gen. Nobuyuki Abe warned Japanese today that the belief Japan could force Western powers to retreat from the Far East because of the European war is a "very dangerous idea."

In a full review of Japan's revamped foreign policy, given in an interview with the domestic press, the Premier also disclosed the government was considering methods of adjusting relations between Japan and Soviet Russia.

He said it was taking into consideration "the view which prevails in some quarters for conclusion of a non-aggression pact" with Moscow.

Gen. Abe also strongly reiterated Japan's intention to remain neutral in the European conflict and expressed doubt that the United States would replace Great Britain as the principal nation supporting the regime of Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

SEP 11 1939

Duke of Sutherland Quits Hunting Trip to Join Up

Rushing Back to England, He Arrives at Alaska in Yacht

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Sept. 10 (AP).—Abandoning a Kodiak Island bear-hunting expedition and a New Zealand cruise, the Duke of Sutherland arrived here today on his

THE CAPTURE OF VIMY RIDGE APRIL 9, 1917 WAS CONSIDERED ONE OF THE OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE CANADIAN CORPS. ANOTHER CANADIAN SUCCESS WAS THE CAPTURE OF HILL 70 IN AUGUST, 1917. CANADIANS PLAYED A LARGE PART IN THE BATTLE OF AMIENS A YEAR LATER, AND IN THE BATTLE OF ARRAS IN SEPTEMBER OF 1918. IN THE SAME MONTH THE CANADIANS TOOK CAMBRAI. THEY WERE ACTIVE IN THE GENERAL ALLIED ADVANCE OF THE FALL OF 1918 WHICH ENDED IN THE COLLAPSE OF GERMAN RESISTANCE.

SEP 11 1939

THE DAY THE ARMISTICE WAS SIGNED, NOV. 11, 1918, CANADIAN TROOPS RECAPTURED THE BELGIAN CITY OF MONS WHICH HAD BEEN OCCUPIED CONTINUOUSLY BY THE GERMANS SINCE THE RETREAT OF THE ALLIED FORCES IN THE FIRST FEW WEEKS OF THE WAR.

30.34-3239

3024 — 3239

Bank Wants War Power To Attend Board Sessio

But, Meanwhile, Germany Ha Seized 4,000 More Shares

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 10 (AP)—Officials of the Bank for International Settlements, worrying about how they can get Great Britain, Germany, France and Poland together for the Oct. 1 board meeting announced today Germany has taken over another 4,000 shares of the bank—those held formerly by the Bank of Danzig.

German holdings in the international bank now are 31,700 shares.

Originally Germany had 19,00 shares, the same as Britain, Belgium, France, Italy, Japan and the United States. Germany got the rest of her shares by absorption first of Austria, then Czecho-Slovakia and finally Danzig. Poland also has 4,000 shares. The bank has a total of 200,000 shares.

The directors are puzzled principally about the next meeting. There were indications today they might decide: "Let's call the whole thing off."

SEP 11 1939

More Belgian Reserve Called Up for Instruction

Oslo Group Committee Meet Again in Brussels Today

BRUSSELS, Sept 10 (AP).—Belgium tonight called to the colors an undisclosed number of additional reserves, effective tomorrow, for an instruction period.

The second meeting of the permanent committee of the seven small neutral nations of the Oslo Group will be held here tomorrow. Belgian officials said the meeting would be limited again to discussion of food and raw materials problems.

They said the question of recent air violations of neutrality would not be raised, the interested countries handling each case individually.

The rights of neutral nations are to be discussed, and it was said that contacts with other neutrals, including the United States, might be made in the future.

BELGIUM PROTECTS FOOD

Suspends Import Tax on Cereals and Bars Abnormal Prices

BRUSSELS, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Belgian Government decreed today a temporary suspension of import taxes on cereals, prohibited exports on a speculative basis and ruled against abnormal prices. Fixing of top prices on cereals, flour, sugar and lard was considered imminent, along with confiscation of speculative stocks of these commodities.

Declaring that an increase in coal output was a vital necessity, Professor Fernand Bauduin, a leading Belgian economist, urged the government to re-establish immediately the fory-eight-hour work week, to demobilize colliery workers and engineers and allow other industries to enroll female labor.

CONFERENCE IS HELD ON TURKS' WAR PLANS

Weygand Meets Army Leaders —Decision of Others Awaited

ANGORA, Turkey, Sept. 10 (AP).—General Maxime Weygand, commander of French-British forces in the Near East, conferred with Turkish Army leaders today on joint military plans in case war should spread to the eastern Mediterranean.

SEP 11 1939

The Turkish press stressed that the attitude of this country, which is allied with Britain and France, would depend on whether Italy or Soviet Russia joined Germany in the European war.

General Weygand flew from Beirut last night and is scheduled to return there later today.

Informed quarters expressed the belief that the full National Assembly meeting here tomorrow would define Turkey's attitude as one of "watchful waiting."

The newspaper Cumhuriyet recommended that Turks remain calm while the country was not at war, adding:

"The boundless agitation of certain Turkish warmongers severely damages the country's interests."

Zog In England

London, Sept. 10 (AP)—Former King Zog of Albania arrived here tonight from France.

SEP 11 1939

Lipski Arrives In Estonia

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 10 (AP).—Jozef Lipski, who was Poland's Ambassador at Berlin, arrived here today from Tallinn (Reval), Estonia. He said he was en route to Warsaw.

Rumania Calls More Men

BUCHAREST, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Rumanian government, with more than a million men under arms, has called to the colors "several additional classes," it was learned in official quarters tonight.

The action was taken simultaneously with the calling up of reservists in great numbers in Turkey, Rumania's ally.

Official quarters have expressed fears regarding the "intentions" of Soviet Russia on Rumania's eastern frontier.

Paderewski's Memoirs Cite 1410 Polish Victory

Relate Route Of Teutons At Krakow, Now Claimed By German Forces

London, Sept. 10 (AP)—Ignace Jan Paderewski, the Polish pianist and patriot, cherished a boyhood ambition to build a monument in Krakow to commemorate the Polish victory over the Germans in the Battle of Grunwald in 1410.

SEP 11 1939

The first volume of his memoirs, to be published tomorrow, tells of the battle which he described as "a crashing victory for my country over the Teutonic knights, who were then robbing Poland of her most cherished possession, access to the sea."

In 1910 on the five hundredth anniversary of the battle he accomplished his ambition. Now the Germans claim the battletown of Krakow and control of Poland's Corridor to the sea.

League Told About It

London, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Ministry of Information made public tonight a letter from the Foreign Office to the League of Nations stating that the German Government, "in disregard of obligations they had accepted," had committed an act of aggression against Poland September 1.

The letter stated Germany's action was taken in disregard of its treaty to solve questions with Poland without recourse to force, the Kellogg-Briand treaty for renunciation of war and appeals (by President Roosevelt, Pope Pius and others) to seek solution by pacific means.

Gasoline For Farmers

London, Sept. 10 (AP)—The British Government, taking cognizance of "the urgent necessity" for assuring farmers of motor fuel during the present period of harvest and plowing, announced tonight gasoline and oil rationing would not apply to agricultural machines. Fuel restrictions apply, however, to private motor cars owned by farmers.

SEP 11 1939

War Marriages Made Easier

Berlin, Sept. 10 (AP)—"War weddings," marriages made easier and swifter for soldiers and reserves called to the colors, were legalized today.

A registrar may dispense with posting of the banns, which in Germany ordinarily delays a wedding at least for two weeks. He may marry a couple on the spot providing they take an oath that they are "Aryan" in accordance with the strict Nazi law "for the protection of German blood and earth." And providing there are no other legal barriers.

Cuban President Asks Extraordinary Powers

Fears Economic Difficulties Because of War

HAVANA, Sept. 10 (AP).—President Federico Laredo Bru sent a message last night to the Cuban Congress asking extraordinary powers to deal with any economic difficulties that Cuba may face because of the European war.

The President issued a decree prohibiting radio stations from broadcasting news regarding the arrival and departure of ships from Cuban ports.

SEP 11 1939

A number of grocers, arrested on charges of illegally raising the price of foodstuffs, have been released on bonds of $500 to $2,000 each.

German Freighter Sails

Buenos Aires, Sept. 10 (AP)—The freighter Karsten Miles, flying a German flag, sailed at 10 A. M. today with an 8,000-ton cargo of wheat for the announced destination of Las Palmas, in the Canaries.

SEP 11 1939

Tells Britons to Stay in China

SHANGHAI, Sept. 10 (AP).—Sir Archibald John Kerr Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to China, told Britons today: "You can best serve your country at the present time by remaining at your posts in China." He advised his countrymen not to be in too great haste to enlist in the fighting service, and added that the government at London would decided in the future whether such enlistments were desired.

Quick Dressing for Raids

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP).—Latest style note for London lassies—"the air raid emergency suit." The makers guarantee it can be "stepped into in one minute." It's a one-piece overall affair of strawberry angora wool with a zip fastener and patch pockets.

SEP 11 1939

Draft for Army Ready if U. S. Should Get In

Selective Service System Would Call Up Millions Within Month of Entry

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP).—Within thirty days after the United States declares war—if it ever does—young Johnny Jones, able-bodied, unmarried and about twenty-five years old, will be in the Army, the first man in the country drafted for military service.

Meanwhile, probably 200,000 already will have volunteered to fill peace-time gaps in the regular Army and National Guard.

Three months later more than a million recruits will have followed Johnny into the training camps and half a million more in the Navy.

Back home, some 2,350,000 other potential soldiers and sailors between the ages of twenty-one and thirty, inclusive, will be waiting for the call to arms.

This is the mobilization picture for the first four months of war as envisioned by the joint Army and Navy selective service committee, which has a recruiting plan complete to the last detail.

Formulation of that plan began soon after the first World War, and it has been expanded and improved every year since. This is how it would work:

A selective service law, drafted long ago, would be submitted to Congress, with the expectation that it would be passed immediately.

The President would proclaim a registration day for all men in a certain age group (probably twenty-one to thirty at first). Some 35,000,000 forms would be printed for registering the first 10,000,000 men. About 5,500 local draft boards would be created by Governors.

Eight days after the President's proclamation, men designated in the age group would register at their voting precincts, and regular election officials would deliver their registration cards to the local boards.

After the registration lists were numbered, checked and publicly posted, questionnaires would be sent to all registrants. From the information on those forms, local boards would classify each registrant as follows:

Class I—Those immediately available for service.

SEP 11 1939

Class II—Those whose service would be deferred for a limited period because of the importance of their jobs to the nation.

Class III—Those whose service would be deferred because they have families solely dependent on them.

Class IV—Those whose service, for obvious reasons such as physical disability, would be undesirable.

Those in Class I would be called for medical examination and reclassified as (1) physically fit for unlimited service, (2) fit for limited service or (3) unfit. The order in which they would be enrolled would be determined by lotteries as the Army and Navy called for them.

It is estimated that the nation has 11,000,000 men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty, with 1,000,000 more coming of age each year, and that this reservoir would produce about 4,100,000 Class I fighting men in the original draft.

Inclusion of Classes II and III and extension of the age limit would enlist millions more.

The selective service committee figures it would require thirty days to get the Johnny Joneses into the Army to fill the first quota. Meanwhile, 200,000 men would be needed to bring the Army and National Guard to war-time strength in the first thirty days. Half a million would be needed for Army and Navy in the first two monthss.

Montreal, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press)—Capt. A. Gordon Store of the British flying boat Cabot reported sighting a German submarine yesterday not far from where the liner Athenia was torpedoed.

SEP 11 1939

The Cabot was on a regular air-mail flight from England.

United States and of its citizens and of persons within its territory and jurisdiction and, to enforce its laws and treaties, and in order that all persons, being warned of the general tenor of the laws and treaties of the United States in this behalf, and of the law of nations, may thus be prevented from any violation of the same, do hereby declare and proclaim that all of the provisions of my proclamation of Sept. 5, 1939, proclaiming the neutrality of the United States in a war between Germany and France; Poland; and the United Kingdom, India, Australia and New Zealand apply equally in respect to Canada.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this tenth day of September, in the year of our Lord Nineteen hundred and thirty-nine, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-fourth.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

By the President:
CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State.

Embargo on Arms

By the President of the United States of America
A Proclamation

Whereas Section 1 of the joint resolution of Congress approved May 1, 1937, amending the joint resolution entitled, "Joint resolution providing for the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerent countries; the prohibition of the transportation of

Proclamations Extending Arms Embargo to Canada

SEP 11 1939

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Texts of two proclamations by President Roosevelt in connection with Canada's entry in the war, the first proclaiming the neutrality of the United States under international law and the second imposing the arms embargo on Canada under the Neutrality Act, are as follows:

By the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION

Whereas a state of war unhappily exists between Germany, on the one hand, and Canada, on the other hand;

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, in order to preserve the neutrality of the arms, ammunition and implements of war by vessels of the United States for the use of belligerent States; for the registration and licensing of persons engaged in the business of manufacturing, exporting or importing arms, ammunition or implements of war; and restricting travel by American citizens on belligerent ships during war," approved Aug. 31, 1935, as amended Feb. 29, 1936, provides in part as follows:

"Whenever the President shall find that there exists a state of war between, or among, two or more foreign States, the President shall proclaim such fact, and it shall thereafter be unlawful to export, or attempt to export, or cause to be exported, arms, ammunition, or implements of war from any place in the United States to any belligerent State named in such proclamation, or to any neutral State for transshipment to, or for the use of, any such belligerent State."

And whereas it is further provided by Section 1 of the said joint resolution that

"The President shall, from time to time, by proclamation, extend such embargo upon the export of arms, ammunition, or implements of war to other States as and when they may become involved in such war."

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the said joint resolution, do hereby proclaim that all of the provisions of my proclamation of Sept. 5, 1939, in regard to the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to France, Germany, Poland and the United Kingdom, India, Australia and New Zealand, henceforth apply to Canada.

And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States charged with the execution of the laws thereof the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said joint resolution, and this my proclamation issued thereunder, and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same.

And I do hereby delegate to the Secretary of State the power to exercise any power or authority conferred on me by the said joint resolution, as made effective by this my proclamation issued thereunder, and the power to promulgate such rules and regulations not inconsistent with law as may be necessary and proper to carry out any of its provisions.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this tenth day of September, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-nine, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-fourth.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

By the President:

CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State.

Text of Executive Order

The text of an Executive order concerning the regulations governing enforcement of United States neutrality with reference to Canada follows:

Prescribing Regulations Governing the Enforcement of the Neutrality of the United States:

Whereas, under the treaties of the United States and the law of nations it is the duty of the United States, in any war in which the United States is a neutral, not to permit the commission of unneutral acts within the jurisdiction of the United States;

And whereas, a proclamation was issued by me on the tenth day of September declaring the neutrality of the United States of America in the war now existing between Germany, on the one hand, and Canada, on the other hand:

Now, therefore, in order to make more effective the enforcement of the provisions of said treaties, law of nations, and proclamation, I hereby prescribe that the provisions of my Executive Order No. 8233 of Sept. 5, 1939, prescribing regulations governing the enforcement of the neutrality of the United States, apply equally in respect to Canada.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The White House,
Sept. 10, 1939.

Canadian Proclamation

By The Canadian Press.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—Following is the text of the royal proclamation issued today declaring Canada at war with Germany:

SEP 11 1939

TWEEDSMUIR.
(L. S.)

CANADA

George the Sixth by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come or whom the same may in anywise concern.

Greeting.

A Proclamation

ERNEST LAPOINTE,
Attorney-General, Canada.

Whereas by and with the advice of our Privy Council for Canada we have signified our approval of the issue of a proclamation in The Canada Gazette declaring that a state of war with the German Reich exists and has existed in our Dominion of Canada as and from the tenth day of September, 1939;

Now, therefore, we do hereby declare and proclaim that a state of war with the German Reich exists and has existed in our Dominion of Canada as and from the tenth day of September, 1939.

Of all which our loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and to govern themselves accordingly.

In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our right trusty and well-beloved John, Baron Tweedsmuir of Elsfield, a member of our most honorable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of our most distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Knight Grand Cross of our Royal Victorian Order, Member of our Order of the Companions of Honor, Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of our Dominion of Canada.

At our Government House, in our city of Ottawa, this tenth day of September, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-Nine and in the third year of our reign.

By Command,
W. L. MACKENZIE KING,
Prime Minister of Canada.

U-BOAT SCOURGE CURTAILS SAILINGS

No Transatlantic Liners Leave Or Arrive At New York Port

SEP 11 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 10—The menace of submarine attacks was felt on American shores with double force today.

For the first time since the European war began, a week ago today, not a single transatlantic liner arrived or departed—due mainly to the U-boat scourge.

Simultaneously, restrictions were clamped down on American ships.

With ocean traffic lanes becoming less and less frequented, the lone vessel to venture forth tomorrow will be the American Scantic liner Scanmail, bound for Copenhagen. Line officials said they had received assurances of a British warship convoy through the British mine fields in the North Sea.

Sailings Secret

It become apparent, meanwhile, as the British Ministry of Information warned that German U-boats were roving "far afield," that secrecy hereafter would shroud the sailings and arrivals of ships.

Shipping men here have been informed that schedules for British and French ships no longer would be made known.

Even the United States lines imposed wartime restrictions. Visitors and newspapermen, ordinarily given the run of piers and ships, hereafter may visit piers and vessels only on arrival and for a short period before sailing.

The week-end lull contrasted sharply with the previous 7-day siege of activity in which thousands of American citizens arrived from the war era.

Arrivals Scheduled

Scheduled arrivals tomorrow include the Swedish-American liner Kungsholm, carrying about 1,000 United States citizens on its list of 1,259 passengers; the United States liner American Trader from London, which reached Boston today; the Holland-American liner Noordam from Rotterdam, the Cunard liner Van Dyck carrying 482 passengers from Liverpool, and the Blue Star Line steamer Arandora Star, from Southampton and Cherbourg, with 500 passengers aboard.

Aboard the Kungsholm, officials here said, are Senator Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin; Representative Kent E. Keller, of Illinois, and Wellmar Bostrom, Swedish Minister to the United States.

British Warship To Convoy Scanmail Through Mine Fields

SEP 11 1939

ADVICES RECEIVED IN PARIS INDICATED POLISH TROOPS WERE HOLDING POSITIONS IN FRONT OF WARSAW AND ATTEMPTING TO HAMPER THE MASSIVE GERMAN MOTORIZED COLUMNS WITH FLANKING OPERATIONS OF THE FAMOUS POLISH CAVALRY.

THESE ADVICES GAVE MILITARY OBSERVERS THE IMPRESSION THAT THE ONE PREDICTED WEAKNESS OF MOTORIZED COLUMNS IN WAR--THAT OF MANEUVER--- WAS BEING BORNE OUT IN THE FIRST LARGE SCALE TEST.

WHILE THE GERMANS WERE FORCED TO STAY CLOSE TO GREAT ARTERIES OF COMMUNICATIONS IN ORDER TO BE SURE OF THE ENORMOUS GASOLINE SUPPLIES
NECESSARY FOR THEIR MOTORIZED FORCES, THE POLES WERE MAKING RAPIER-LIKE THRUSTS AND THEN FADING AWAY INTO THE COVERING COUNTRYSIDE.

(MORE)

ED1244PED

SEP 11

IN A 15-MINUTE BROADCAST, MINISTER OF FINANCE PAUL REYNAUD TOLD THE NATION THE WAR WOULD BE WON BY THE POWER WHICH IS STRONGEST ECONOM-ICALLY, AS WELL AS ON THE FIELD OF BATTLE.

"WHEN GERMANY COLLAPSED IN 1918," REYNAUD SAID, "ITS ARMIES STILL OCCUPIED FIVE FRENCH DEPARTMENTS.

"THE ISSUE OF WAR DID NOT HANG ON THE POSITION OF LITTLE FLAGS

1939

30.24-3241

30.24 3241

STUCK ON A MAP. THE GERMAN MORALE WAS BROKEN BECAUSE THE ECONOMY, FINANCES AND MONEY OF THE ENEMY WAS LITERALLY EXHAUSTED."

THE FINANCE MINISTER, IN HIS BROADCAST, GAVE NO INDICATION AT WHAT RATE THE FRANC WOULD BE PEGGED IN RELATION TO FOREIGN CURRENCIES. HE DISCLOSED THAT SEALED INSTRUCTIONS WERE SENT OUT THREE MONTHS AGO TO OFFICIALS THROUGHOUT THE FRENCH EMPIRE.

THEY WERE OPENED THIS MORNING ON TELEGRAPHED INSTRUCTIONS, FOLLOWING A PRE-ARRANGED PLAN WHICH PUT THE NEW REGULATIONS INTO EFFECT THE FIRST SUNDAY AFTER THE DECLARATION OF WAR.

ED508PED

A116

PARIS--THIRD ADD FRENCH (BY HENRY) X X X OF WAR.

FRENCHMEN WILL HAVE TO TIGHTEN THEIR BELTS, REYNAUD TOLD RADIO LISTENERS AND PAY DOUBLE THE SLIDING EXTRAORDINARY SALARY TAX IMPOSED NOV. 12, 1938.

SEP 11 1939

MEN OF MILITARY AGE WHO ARE KEPT BEHIND THE LINES BECAUSE THEY ARE SPECIALISTS MUST PAY 15 PER CENT ON THEIR INCOMES WHICH WILL BE CUT SHARPLY SO THAT NO WAR PROFITEERING CAN TAKE PLACE.

"GERMANY," HE SAID, "ALREADY HAS USED UP A LARGE MEASURE BY THE GIGANTIC EFFORT SHE MADE TO PREPARE FOR WAR. ECONOMICALLY AND FINANCIALLY GERMANY ALREADY IS VERY VULNERABLE. ON THIS FRONT GERMANY HAS NO FRESH TROOPS."

FRANCE, ON THE OTHER HAND, REYNAUD SAID, COMMENCES THE WAR "UNDER ECONOMIC CONDITIONS VERY SUPERIOR TO THE ENEMY."

HE SAID THAT FRANCE'S GOLD STOCK HAD INCREASED 30 PER CENT DURING THE PAST FEW MONTHS AND THAT THE BANKS OF FRANCE TODAY HOLD TWICE THE AMOUNT OF GOLD AS IN 1914.

DURING THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR, HE SAID, THE SPECIAL ARMAMENT BONDS WERE OVERSUBSCRIBED 1,600,000,000 FRANCS ($352,000,000).

THE PEOPLE BEHIND THE LINES, HE DECLARED, HAD TWO DUTIES, TO PRODUCE AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE AND CONSUME AS LITTLE AS POSSIBLE, BUYING NOTHING ABROAD EXCEPT STRICT NECESSITIES.

ED658PED

A DECREE PUBLISHED IN THE OFFICIAL JOURNAL THIS MORNING PROHIBITED THE [illegible] EXPORTS OF CAPITAL EXCEPT WITH SPECIAL AUTHORIZATION OF THE FINANCE MINISTRY.

SEP 11 1939

FOREIGN EXCHANGE DEALINGS WERE ORDERED TO GO THROUGH THE BANK OF FRANCE OR AGENTS AUTHORIZED BY THE FINANCE MINISTRY TO HANDLE SUCH OPERATIONS.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF GOLD WERE FORBIDDEN EXCEPT WITH THE APPROVAL OF THE BANK OF FRANCE, WHICH WAS GIVEN CONTROL OF ALL GOLD TRANSACTIONS.

VIOLATIONS OF THE DECREE WERE MADE PUNISHABLE BY IMPRISONMENT OF FROM ONE TO SIX MONTHS AND A FINE OF FROM 100 TO 100,000 FRANCS (APPROXIMATELY $2,490), OR THE AMOUNT INVOLVED IN THE ILLEGAL TRANSACTIONS IF IT IS GREATER THAN THE MAXIMUM FINE.

A REPETITION OF THE OFFENSE HAS MADE PUNISHABLE BY FRO SIX MONTHS TO FIVE YEARS IMPRISONMENT, AS WELL AS A FINE.
BANKNOTES, CAPITAL OR GOLD WERE MADE SUBJECT TO SEIZURE IMMEDIATELY UPON A SINGLE CHARGE OF FRAUDULENT OPERATION.

A16

WAR ROUNDUP (BUDGET)

SEP 11 1939

BY MILO THOMPSON

COPENHAGEN, SEPT. 10-(AP)-IN ONE WEEK OF A EUROPEAN WAR NOT YET GENERAL, GERMANY HAS SEIZED DANZIG, DRIVEN ACROSS THE POLISH CORRIDOR TO CONNECT EAST PRUSSIA WITH GERMANY PROPER, PUSHED POLAND'S FRONTIER FAR EASTWARD AND REACHED THE GATES OF WARSAW.

BUT SO FAR GERMANY'S MAIN OBJECTIVE---SMASHING THE POLISH ARMY--HAS NOT BEEN ATTAINED.

ADOLF HITLER'S 70 ARMY DIVISIONS ON THE EASTERN FRONT STILL HAVE NOT PENETRATED A LARGE AREA OF WESTERN POLAND BETWEEN POZNAN (POSEN) AND WARSAW WHERE THE POLISH ARMY HAS PUT UP STIFF RESISTANCE.

A GIANT GERMAN PINCER MOVEMENT HAS MADE GAINS, HOWEVER, ON ALL SIDES OF THE WESTERN POLISH FORCES.

DURING THE FIRST WEEK OF WAR POLAND'S ALLIES, FRANCE AND BRITAIN, THOUGH SHROUDING THEIR MOVEMENTS IN SECRECY, HAVE BEEN ACTIVE.

FRENCH TROOPS ON THE WESTERN FRONT PUSHED INTO GERMAN TERRITORY BETWEEN THE GERMAN SIEGFRIED AND FRENCH MAGINOT LINES.

THE BRITISH FLEET SLOWLY DREW A NET TO KEEP SHIPS FROM REACHING GERMANY AND TO BOTTLE UP VESSELS IN THE BALTIC. BRITISH PLANES BOMBED KIEL CANAL DEFENSES AND STRUCK AT GERMANY'S POCKET BATTLESHIPS, BUT IT REMAINED UNCLEAR WHAT SUCCESS ATTENDED THESE ATTACKS.

GERMANY, CAREFULLY MINIMIZING FRENCH EFFORTS TO DIVERT HER ATTENTION TO THE RHINE FRONT, ADMITTED HOWEVER THAT REINFORCEMENTS HAD BEEN SENT TO THE WEST.

SEP 11 1939

EXCEPT IN POLAND, WHERE THE CARNAGE, DESTRUCTION AND PANDEMONIUM OF WAR WERE VERY REAL, A SENSE OF UNREALITY POSSESSED THE REST OF EUROPE REMEMBERING THE LAST WORLD WAR. SO FAR UNCERTAINTY PERSISTED CONCERNING THE SPREAD OF HOSTILITIES TO THE DIMENSIONS OF A WORLDWIDE CONFLICT.

EVEN GERMANY'S AXIS PARTNER, ITALY, WAS MAINTAINING A SPHYNX-LIKE ATTITUDE TOWARD PARTICIPATION.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S TACTICS APPEARED TO BE TO KEEP HIS PEOPLE CALM, BUSILY AT WORK INCREASING DOMESTIC PRODUCTION, PERFECTING PROTECTIVE MEASURES AND LOOKING TOWARD IL DUCE FOR LEADERSHIP.

THE ITALIAN PRESS BEGAN AN APPARENT EFFORT TO WEAKEN THE FRENCH-BRITISH ALLIANCE BY SUGGESTING THAT BRITAIN WAS "READY TO FIGHT TO THE LAST FRENCHMAN" NOW THAT SHE ALREADY WAS FIGHTING TO THE LAST POLE.

A17

THE CHIEF ITALIAN MILITARY ACTIVITY APPEARED TO BE CONSTRUCTION OF DEFENSES ALONG THE FRENCH FRONTIER.

SEP 11 1939

THE REST OF EUROPE LOOKED ON ANXIOUSLY, PARTICULARLY THE LITTLE NATIONS OF SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WHO CLUNG TO A NEUTRALITY WHICH DIPLOMATS SAID THEY BELIEVED WAS EXTREMELY WOBBLY.

HUNGARY, RUMANIA, YUGOSLAVIA, GREECE, BULGARIA AND TURKEY KEPT OUT OF THE FIGHTING BUT THEIR GOVERNMENT SPOKESMEN IN MOMENTS OF FRANKNESS DISCLOSED THE BELIEF THEY MIGHT BE FORCED TO JOIN THE CONFLICT SOONER OR LATER.

EACH MOBILIZED A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER OF RESERVES TO "PROTECT NEUTRALITY." IN REALITY LEADERS ADMITTED THIS ALSO WAS A FIRST STEP

30.24-3243

30.24 3243

TOWARD PREPARING FOR A WAR WHICH SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE FEARS IS INEVITABLE. ALL THESE SMALL NATIONS EMBARGOED SHIPMENTS OF RAW MATERIALS, STRENGTHENED PRESS CENSORSHIP, RESTRICTED USE OF PRIVATE AUTOS AND RATIONED FOOD.

TURKEY WAS THE ONLY ONE TO CALL UP RESERVES OPENLY AND HER MUNITIONS FACTORIES LIKE OTHERS OF SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WERE RUNNING NIGHT AND DAY.

THE BELIEF WAS EXPRESSED AUTHORITATIVELY IN THE SOUTHEAST THAT THE FATE OF THAT PART OF EUROPE DEPENDS ON WHAT SOVIET RUSSIA AND ITALY DO.

THE SOVIET UNION, PLEDGED TO A NONAGGRESSION AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY, CALLED UP RESERVES AND MOBILIZED DOCTORS, NURSES, CHAUFFEURS AND RAILWAY WORKERS.

HEAVY REINFORCEMENTS WERE SENT TOWARD HER WESTERN BORDER. SOME OBSERVERS IN MOSCOW WERE OF THE OPINION THAT RUSSIA DID NOT INTEND TO AID GERMANY BUT WAS GOING TO MAKE CERTAIN THAT RETREATING POLES OR INVADING GERMANS DID NOT PENETRATE SOVIET TERRITORY.

THE LITTLE BALTIC NATIONS PESSIMISTICALLY PREPARED FOR ALL EVENTUALITIES SINCE THEY COULD NOT RESIST ANY STRONG INVADER. FOOD RATIONING AND HOARDING OF RAW MATERIALS PROCEEDED ALONG WITH DEFENSE MEASURES.

SEP 11 1939

THE SCANDINAVIAN NATIONS WERE MORE OPTIMISTIC ABOUT THEIR ABILITY TO STAY NEUTRAL THOUGH THEY WATCHED CLOSELY ALONG THEIR FRONTIERS AND COASTLINES. THERE WERE HOURLY REMINDERS OF THE NEARNESS OF WAR IN THE FORM OF MILITARY BALLOONS WHICH HAD BROKEN FROM THEIR MOORINGS, CAMOUFLAGED SHIPS SLIPPING INTO NEUTRAL PORTS, LOST BELLIGERENT PLANES APPEARING OVER THE BORDERS AND FREQUENT NEWS OF SHIPS GROUNDED OR BLOWN UP BY MINES NEAR THEIR COASTS.

THE SCANDINAVIANS ALSO WERE RESTRICTING IMPORTS AND PREPARING FOR POSSIBLE DIFFICULTIES BY STRENGTHENING THEIR ARMED FORCES AND AIR RAID DEFENSES.

OTHER NEUTRAL NATIONS--BELGIUM, SWITZERLAND AND THE NETHERLANDS--TOOK PROTECTIVE MEASURES CONSISTENT WITH THE MAINTENANCE OF NEUTRALITY.

(MORE)

ED108PED

LONDON [illegible] THE WAR OFFICE ANNOUNCED TONIGHT AN ORDER FORBIDDING PHOTOGRAPHING WITHOUT PERMISSION OF ANY FORTIFICATION ARSENAL AIRCRAFT CASUALTY HOSPITAL AND ACCOMODATIONS FOR EVACUEES REMOVAL OF POPULATIONS.

APNS LONDON 12 STARK

SEP 11 1939

A50

COPENHAGEN--FIRST ADD WAR ROUNDUP (BY THOMPSON)

X X X MAINTENANCE OF NEUTRALITY.

THE FIRST WEEK OF WAR BROUGHT AN UNEXPECTED WAVE OF PROSPERITY TO CIVIL WAR-ENFEEBLED SPAIN WHERE THE PRESS, THOUGH GIVING PROMINENT DISPLAY TO NEWS OF GERMAN VICTORIES, WAS PROHIBITED FROM ANY EXPRESSION OF FAVORITISM AND THE POPULACE IN GENERAL WAS NOT EXCITED.

A GOLDEN HARVEST CAME TO SPAIN FROM THOUSANDS OF FOREIGNERS WHO STREAMED FROM FRANCE EXCHANGING MILLIONS OF FRANCS, POUNDS AND DOLLARS FOR SPANISH MONEY, THEREBY STRENGTHENING SPANISH FINANCES.

MANY WERE PERSONS WHO HAD MOVED INTO FRANCE DURING THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR AND NOW WERE ABLE TO RETURN BECAUSE OF REOPENING OF THE FRENCH-SPANISH FRONTIER. THE TURNOVER IN FRANCS ALONE WAS ESTIMATED AT 8,000,000 ($176,000.) HOTELS AND PENSIONS WERE JAMMED.

SEAPORTS WERE ACTIVE AS MERCHANT SHIPS OF THE BELLIGERENTS SOUGHT REFUGE. FIFTY-FOUR GERMAN COMMERCIAL SHIPS WERE REFUGED IN VIGO ALONE. A HUNDRED FRENCH AND BRITISH VESSELS WERE IN THE VICINITY OF GIBRALTAR.

SEP 11 1939

SPANIARDS WERE BUSY PUSHING RECONSTRUCTION PROJECTS ALTHOUGH GENERALISSIMO FRANCO KEPT AN ARMY OF 400,000 MEN UNDER ARMS TO COPE WITH ANY EMERGENCY. THE SPANISH GOVERNMENT PROHIBITED FOREIGN DIPLOMATS FROM ENLISTING SPANIARDS BUT FRENCH, BRITISH AND GERMAN SUBJECTS WERE PERMITTED TO LEAVE SPAIN.

NEARBY PORTUGAL FOUND LITTLE TO REMIND HER WAR HAS BEEN IN PROGRESS A WEEK. THE GOVERNMENT, AFTER FORMALLY PROCLAIMING NEUTRALITY SEPT. 2, ISSUED DECREES ASSUMING EXTRAORDINARY POWERS TO REGULATE IMPORTS, EXPORTS, SUPERVISE FOOD PRICES AND PENALIZE HOARDING. BUT USE OF THE POWERS HAD NOT BEEN NEEDED YET.

LIKE SPAIN, PORTUGAL WAS REAPING A REFUGEE HARVEST OF NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICANS COMING FROM OTHER PARTS OF EUROPE.

THE WARFARE AT SEA WAS CLOSEST TO PORTUGAL. ACCOUNTS OF THE TORPEDOING OF THE BRITISH FREIGHTERS BOSNIA AND MANAAR IN THE ATLANTIC WERE BROUGHT TO LISBON AND OTHER HARBORS BY SURVIVORS.

AS FOR THE ACTIVITIES OF THE BELLIGERENTS THEMSELVES, THE NEWS AVAILABLE TO THE WORLD HAS BEEN ONE-SIDED. POLAND HAS WASTED LITTLE TIME ON ISSUING COMMUNIQUES WHILE INVADING ARMIES THUNDERED ACROSS HER FRONTIERS.

SEP 11 1939

HER ALLIES, FRANCE AND ENGLAND, DESCRIBED THEIR ACTIVITIES IN THE MOST TERSE, LACONIC FASHION.

ONLY GERMANY HAS BEEN VOLUBLE AND THE OUTPUT OF HER INFORMATION MACHINE HAS BEEN HUGE. GERMANY WAS PREDICTING AT THE END OF THE FIRST WEEK OF HER "LIGHTNING WAR" THAT THE POLISH CAMPAIGN WOULD BE OVER A WEEK HENCE WITH THE DESTRUCTION OF THE POLISH ARMY.

MUCH WAS MADE OF PENETRATION OF WARSAW BY A GERMAN VANGUARD OF ARMORED CARS AND THE DESTRUCTION OF AIRPORTS, RAILWAY STATIONS AND OTHER MILITARY OBJECTIVES BY THE GERMAN AIR FORCE. A GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN ADMITTED, HOWEVER, THAT THE ADVANCE TROOPS HAD BEEN FORCED BY SNIPING TO WITHDRAW AGAIN TO WARSAW'S OUTSKIRTS.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR ACCORDING TO THE GERMANS WAS LIKE THIS:

IN THE FIRST COUPLE OF DAYS DOMINANCE IN THE AIR WAS GAINED BY GERMANY. ON SEPT. 1, WHEN THE GERMAN TROOPS FIRST STARTED TO MOVE, A HARD BLOW WAS STRUCK AT POLAND'S SOUTHERN INDUSTRIAL AREAS IN UPPER SILESIA WHILE NORTHERN FORCES FROM EAST AND WEST PRUSSIA ADVANCED IN AN EFFORT TO CUT OFF POLISH FORCES IN POMORZE, THE POLISH CORRIDOR. THE NEXT DAY THIS MANEUVER WAS SAID TO HAVE SUCCEEDED.

CZESTOCHOWA, A POLISH NATIONAL SHRINE AND INDUSTRIAL CENTER, FELL SEPT. 3, THE DAY ADOLF HITLER TOURED THE EASTERN FRONT AS "FIRST SOLDIER" OF THE REICH.

SEP 11 1939

ON SEPT. 4, GERMANY SAID SHE HAD CAPTURED 15,000 POLES AND THAT THE SEVENTH POLISH ARMY DIVISION HAD BEEN DESTROYED SOUTHWEST OF CZESTOCHOWA WHILE GERMAN TROOPS ADVANCED UP BOTH SIDES OF THE VISTULA ON KRAKOW, THE ANCIENT POLISH CAPITAL.

THE SAME DAY THE GERMANS SAID THEY HAD REPULSED A BRITISH BOMBING SQUADRON WHICH ATTACKED CUXHAVEN AND WILHELMSHAVEN, SEA BASES WEST OF THE KIEL CANAL ENTRANCE. IN THE NORTH THE FAMED POLISH

30.24 -3245

30.24 3245

CAVALRY CENTER OF GRUDZIDZ FELL.

ON SEPT. 5, KATOWICE WAS CAPTURED AND GERMANY GOT CONTROL OF THE UPPER SILESIA INDUSTRIAL DISTRICT.

SEP 11 1939

THE NEXT DAY KRAKOW FELL ANE ON SEPT. 7 GERMAN FORCES, PUSHING FROM THREE SIDES OF THE AGRICULTURAL PROVINCE OF POZNAN, HAD FOUGHT THEIR WAY WITHIN 37 MILES OF WARSAW BY REACHING TOMASZOW ON THE SOUTHWEST.

ON FRIDAY A POLISH GARRISON OF 120 MEN SURRENDERED THE WESTER-PLATTE FORTIFICATIONS IN DANZIG HARBOR AFTER A GALLANT WEEK-LONG STAND.

SATURDAY WAS SPENT IN VAST ENCIRCLING MOVEMENTS OF SUCH IMPORTANT CITIES AS WARSAW AND LODZ. GERMANY ANNOUNCED SUNDAY THAT LODZ HAD BEEN TAKEN. ONE COLUMN WAS REPORTED HEADING TOWARD LUBLIN WHERE THE POLISH GOVERNMENT AT LEAST FOR A WHILE HAD TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS.

FROM POLISH CIRCLES CAME INSISTENT ASSERTIONS THAT THE GERMAN CLAIMS WERE EXAGGERATED AND DENIALS THAT THE STUBBORN POLISH ARMY HAD BROKEN UP OR WAS RETREATING IN DISORDER.

POLES DECLARED MANY OBJECTIVES CLAIMED BY THE GERMANS STILL WERE HOLDING OUT WITH HEROISM LIKE THE DEFENDERS OF THE WESTERPLATTE. IN ADDITION THEY DENIED THAT A LARGE PART OF THE POLISH FORCES WERE BOTTLED UP.

BRITISH REPORTS WERE FEW, THE GOVERNMENT SAYING THAT IT CONSIDERED THEM NEITHER ADVISABLE NOR NECESSARY. IT WAS ANNOUNCED, HOWEVER, THAT THE NAVY AND AIR FORCE HAD STRUCK HARD AT WHAT WAS DESCRIBED OFFICIALLY AS RUTHLESS SUBMARINE WARFARE. BRITISH SAID ENEMY SUB-MARINES WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR SINKING OF THE BRITISH LINER ATHENIA, WITH 128 LIVES LOST, AND SEVERAL BRITISH CARGO SHIPS.

IT WAS PREDICTED OFFICIALLY THAT THE SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN WOULD END AS SOON AS THE BRITISH CONVOY SYSTEM WAS STARTED AND ENEMY SUBMARINES USED UP THEIR SUPPLIES.

THOUGH MOST NAVAL MEASURES WERE KEPT SECRET, IT WAS ANNOUNCED THAT AN AIR FORCE RAID ON CUXHAVEN AND WILHELSHAVEN HAD RESULTED IN TWO IMPORTANT HITS ON GERMAN POCKET-BATTLESHIPS. RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHTS OVER GERMANY WERE SAID TO HAVE DISTRIBUTED 13,000,000 LEAFLETS URGING GERMANS TO DISAVOW THEIR NAZI GOVERNMENT.

TERSE FRENCH MILITARY COMMUNIQUES SAID ONLY THAT CONTACT HAD BEEN ESTABLISHED WITH GERMAN FORCES ON THE RHINELAND FRONTIER. ADVANCE UNITS WERE SAID TO HAVE MOVED FORWARD IN THE TERRITORY BETWEEN THE NORTHERN ENDS OF THEIR FORTIFICATION LINES, PUSHING BACK GERMAN FORCES TOWARD THEIR SIEGFRIED LINE.

THE FIRST WEEK WAS ONE OF BLACKOUTS FOR LONDON AND PARIS. BERLIN, TOO, HAD AN AIR RAID WARNING.

ONE BURST OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE IN BRITAIN WAS DESCRIBED TUESDAY MORNING AS A MISTAKE WHEN BRITISH PLANES HEADED INLAND FROM THE COAST. THE ONLY REPORTED ARRIVAL OF ENEMY PLANES ON THE COAST WAS SAID TO HAVE RESULTED IN THEIR BEING TURNED BACK.

THOUGH ALL THREE CAPITALS HAD SCARES, NO BOMBS WERE DROPPED ON ANY OF THEM.

SEP 11 1939

(5TH PGM FROM END READ "WILHELMSHAVEN" NOT WILHELSHAVEN)

ED308PED

A103

BULLETIN

SEP 11 1939

COPENHAGEN, SEPT. 10-(AP)-A POLISH RADIO BROADCAST, HEARD HERE TODAY, ASSERTED GERMAN TROOPS HAD BEEN DEFEATED IN THE SUBURBS OF WARSAW, NO DETAILS WERE FURNISHED IMMEDIATELY.

1939

COPENHAGEN--FIRST ADD POLISH BROADCAST GERMAN DEFEAT

X X X FURNISHED IMMEDIATELY.

A LATER WARSAW BROADCAST DESCRIBED THE FIGHTING AS CONTINUING, HOWEVER, DESPITE SEVERAL REPULSES ADMINISTERED TO THE GERMANS.

MQ931PED

SEP 11 1939

A11

^^BULLETIN

SEP 11 1939

BUDAPEST, SEPT. 10-(AP)-THE POLISH ARMY GENERAL HEADQUARTERS IN A RADIO BROADCAST HEARD HERE TODAY DECLARED "OUR SOLDIERS ARE FIGHTING VALIANTLY AND MAKING A GREAT STAND ON ALL FRONTS AND WARSAW IS READY FOR A LONG DEFENSE."

THE DECLARATION WAS BROADCAST FROM LWOW, (LEMBERG) IN SOUTHEAST POLAND AT 4 P.M. (10 A.M. EST).

"OUR COUNTRY IS IN FLAMES," THE ANNOUNCER SAID. "IN THE WEST THE FIGHT HAS NOW REALLY SRARTED.

"IN THESE TROUBLED DAYS MANY OF YOU HAVE BEEN FORCED TO FLEE YOUR HOMES. WE APPEAL TO YOU TO REMAIN WHERE YOU ARE, AND PARTICULARLY OUT OF CHOKED TOWNS AND CITIES.

SEP 11 1939

"LET THE CONVICTION BE WITH YOU THE MOMENT OF VICTORY IS NEAR."

ED1238PED

A STATION IDENTIFYING ITSELF AS WARSAW, CAME ON THE AIR AT 6:45 P.M. (12:45 P.M. EST) WITH THE SPEAKER DECLARING THAT THE DEFENSE OF THE CITY WAS "PROCEEDING NORMALLY."

THE ANNOUNCER SAID:

SEP 11 1939

"THE MOST IMPORTANT HISTORIC MOMENT FOR POLAND HAS COME WITH THE SIEGE OF WARSAW. FUTURE GENERATIONS WILL LEARN IN SCHOOL WHAT YOU ARE GOING THROUGH NOW, AND WILL PRAISE YOU FOR YOUR HEROISM. YOUR HEROISM UNDER INCENDIARY BOMBS AND A HAIL OF EXPLOSIVES SHOWS YOU ARE UNAFRAID."

SEP 11 1939

THE SPEAKER DESCRIBED "SUNDAY LIFE IN BESIEGED WARSAW."

"SHOP-KEEPERS ARE SELLING THEIR GOODS, ALTHOUGH THEY WOULD PREFER TO SELL RIFLES AND AMMUNITION TO SHOOT OUR BESIEGERS. INTELLECTUALS ARE DIGGING DITCHES AND ELEGANT WOMEN WITHOUT ROUGE OR NAIL POLISH SWEEP WRECKAGE AND COOK FOR THE SOLDIERS.

"WARSAW IS NOW WELL INTO THE WAR SWING," HE ADDED. "THOSE GOOD, OLD, RED STREET-CARS ARE SERVING WELL AS BARRICADES OVER WHICH THE RICH AND POOR FRATERNIZE.

"WARSAW IS A SOLID BLOCK OF NATIONAL DEFENSE. EVERYONE IS DOING HIS ALLOTTED JOB. OUR AMBITION, DESPITE CONSTANT, TERRIFIC BOMBING, IS TO PURSUE OUR LIVES.

"SLEEPERS ARE SO ACCUSTOMED TO THE NOISE OF EXPLOSIONS NOW THAT THEY WAKE UP WHEN THERE IS A MOMENT OF QUIET. EVERYONE WANTS A PLACE IN THIS HOUR WHICH HISTORY WILL COMMEMORATE FOREVER," THE BROADCASTER DECLARED.

ED504PED

A45

BY ELMER W.PETERSON

SEP 11 1939

SNIATYN, POLAND, ON THE POLISH-RUMANIAN FRONTIER, SEPT. 10-(AP)-(VIA BUDAPEST)--GERMAN WARPLANES CONTINUED DEVASTATING AND WIDESPREAD BOMBING OF POLAND TODAY, WHILE THE POLISH ARMY WORKED TO REORGANIZE ITSELF FURTHER ALONG A NEW DEFENSE LINE SKIRTING THE VISTULA RIVER.

GERMAN AIRCRAFT LAST NIGHT BOMBED LWOW (LEMBERG), THE LEADING CITY OF THE POLISH UKRAINE. FOR SEVERAL HOURS. THIS ACTIVITY

30.24 3247

EMPHASIZED REPORTS THAT GERMANY WAS PLANNING A NEW DRIVE INTO SOUTH-EASTERN POLAND TO BLOCK ANY POSSIBLE ASSISTANCE FROM RUMANIA.

ONE SECTION OF LWOW WAS REPORTED BURNING. REPORTS THROUGH NEUTRAL SOURCES SAID GERMAN AIRCRAFT MACHINE-GUNNED THE STREETS OF THE CITY, CAUSING PANIC AMONG THE CIVILIAN POPULATION.

IT WAS AGREED GENERALLY THAT A CRITICAL MOMENT OF THE GERMAN-POLISH WAR HAS ARRIVED.

SEP 11 1939

POLISH TROOPS WERE MARCHING BY NIGHT AND CONCEALING THEMSELVES BY DAY, IN AN EFFORT TO REORGANIZE AND ESTABLISH A NEW DEFENSIVE AGAINST THE INVADERS.

INFORMATION AS TO THE EXACT SITUATION IN WARSAW CONTINUED CONFUSED. THE SOUND OF HEAVY ARTILLERY WAS CLEARLY AUDIBLE AT VARIOUS POINTS ALONG THE VISTULA RIVER. THIS CORRESPONDENT, ONE OF THE LAST TO REACH THE POLISH FRONTIER, COULD OBTAIN NO ABSOLUTE INFORMATION ON WHAT WAS HAPPENING THERE.

MANY OBSERVERS BELIEVE THAT THE POLISH CAUSE, AS JUDGED BY MEAGER REPORTS WAS NOT LOST. MILITARY EXPERTS SAY THIS DEPENDED IN PART ON WHETHER THE POLISH ARMY, STUNNED BY THE SHOCK OF THE TERRIFIC GERMAN OFFENSIVE, COULD STABILIZE ITSELF IN TIME.

THERE WAS NOT EVEN AN ESTIMATE OF POLISH CASUALTIES.

THERE WAS EVIDENCE THAT THE POLES HAD MANAGED TO SAVE THE BULK OF THEIR MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT. THE FATE OF AN ESTIMATED 100,000 POLISH TROOPS IN POMERANIA, BELIEVED CAUGHT IN A GERMAN PINCER MOVEMENT, WAS UNKNOWN.

SEP 11 1939

AT THE SAME TIME, IT WAS ESTIMATED THAT A MILLION MEN WERE BEING MASSED ON THE EAST BANK OF THE VISTULA, WHILE OTHERS WERE BEING PREPARED FOR A DEFENSIVE STAND ALONG THE BUG RIVER.

30.24 3247

THE FATE OF THE POLISH AIR FORCE WAS QUESTIONABLE. GERMAN AIRCRAFT HAVE BEEN RELENTLESSLY SEARCHING FOR NEW AIRDROMES ESTABLISHED IN EASTERN POLAND.

FROM THE POLISH POINT OF VIEW, THE SITUATION WAS REGARDED AS HOPEFUL. THIS WAS BASED ON THE ASSUMPTION THAT THE POLISH MILI ANTICIPATED A CRUSHING ATTACK WHICH MIGHT TEMPORARILY DISOR ALTHOUGH THE SUCCESS OF THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE ADMITTEDLY BEWILDERING.

SEP 11 1939

EVERYWHERE WAS FOUND THE HOPE THAT A BRITISH-FRENCH OFFENSIVE ON THE WESTERN FRONT WOULD RELIEVE SOON THE PRESSURE ON THE POLISH ARMY.

TYPIFYING THIS HOPE WERE WIDELY CIRCULATED REPORTS IN POLAND THAT THE GERMANS WERE WITHDRAWING SIX DIVISIONS FROM POLAND TO MEET THE FRENCH ATTACK ON THE WEST. (GERMAN DIVISIONS WERE ESTIMATED TO NUMBER FROM 10,000 TO 12,000 MEN.)

THERE WAS NO QUESTION, MEANWHILE, THAT POLAND WAS GOING THROUGH DAYS OF CONFUSION WHICH MIGHT, IF CONTINUED, SEE FURTHER GERMAN GAINS

A TRAINLOAD OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES, WHICH ARRIVED IN SOUTHEASTERN POLAND AFTER FIVE DAYS ON THE ROAD, WAS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN BOMBED ALMOST CONTINUALLY.

THE PASSENGERS SAID THE TRAIN WAS STOPPED AND THEY WERE FORCED TO FLEE FOR COVER REPEATEDLY UNDER AIR ATTACKS. FOUR PERSONS WERE MISSING WHEN THE TRAIN ARRIVED.

SEP 11 1939

NEUTRAL OBSERVERS REPORTED SCENES AROUND WARSAW WERE "TERRIFYING."

1939

THE FIELDS WERE REPORTED BLACK WITH PEOPLE USING ALL MANNER OF CONVEYANCES TO LEAVE THE CITY. LACK OF GASOLINE INTENSIFIED DIFFICULTIES. JEWS WERE ESPECIALLY NUMEROUS IN THE FLOOD OF REFUGEES SWEEPING INTO SOUTHEASTERN POLAND.

ED231PED

SEP 11 1939

A187

STOCKHOLM,SEPT 10-(AP)-AN IN ORDER TO MEET PRESSURE FROM FOREIGN INTERESTS THE SWEDISH GOVERNMENT HAS RESOLVED TO LIMIT EXPORTS, INCLUDING IRON ORE, TIMBER, WOOD PULP AND PAPER. +525

THE MINISTER OF TRADE EMPHASIZED NO ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION OF LICENSES OF EXPORTS HAD BEEN GIVEN BUT THAT THE GOVERNMENT WANTS TO CONTROL THEM BECAUSE OF SWEDEN'S WORLD WAR EXPERIENCES.

(EDS: AT START READ (AP)-IN ORDER TO ETC.)

KA1106PED

HADERSLEV,DENMARK, SEPT. 10-AP-INHABITANTS OF THIS TOWN ON THE SHORES OF A LAKE IN SOUTHERN JUTLAND WERE STARTLED EARLY TODAY BY A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION IN THE DIRECTION OF THE LAKE AND AFTER DAYBREAK THEY SAW AN ISLAND THERE WHERE NONE HAD BEEN BEFORE.

IT WAS THOUGHT POSSIBLE THAT A LOST BOMBER HAD C RASHED WITH A FULL LOAD OF EXPLOSIVES, RAISING A RXXXXOX PORTION OF THE LAKE BOTTOM TO THE SURFACE.

SEP 11 1939

PARIS, SEPT. 10-(SUNDAY)--(AP)-THE TEXT OF THE THREE-SENTENCE WAR MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE NO. 13 FOR THE MORNING OF SEPT. 10 FOLLOWS:

"GERMANS YESTERDAY CARRIED OUT COUNTERATTACKS AGAINST NUMEROUS POINTS ON OUR FRONT.

"DURING THE NIGHT THE SITUATION WAS UNCHANGED.

"THERE WAS NORMAL ACTIVITY OF AERIAL RECONNAISSANCE."

(END TEXT)

ED1205PED

SEP 11 1939

PARIS, SEPT. 10-(AP)-THE TEXT OF FRENCH COMMUNIQUE NO. 14 ISSUED AT 9:50 P.M. TONIGHT (3:50 P.M. E.S.T.):

"ON THE FRONT A SERIES OF METHODICAL ACTIONS PERMITTED ADVANCES BETWEEN THE SAAR AND THE VOSGES.

"THE ENEMY OUTLINED AN OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT EAST OF MOSELLE IN THE REGION NORTHEAST OF SIERCK.

"FRENCH AND ENGLISH NAVAL FORCES SWEPT OUT MINE BARRAGES FROM CERTAIN ZONES IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND THE NORTH SEA.

"OUR AERIAL RECONNAISSANCE CONTINUED DURING THE DAY."

ED538PED

SEP 11 1939

A68WX

FIRST LEAD NEUTRALITY

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 10-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT APPLIED THE NEUTRALITY LAW TO CANADA TODAY AND THEREBY PLACED AN EMBARGO UPON SHIPMENTS OF ARMS AND MUNITIONS TO THE NEIGHBORING COUNTRY.

A PROCLAMATION INVOKING THE ACT WAS ISSUED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT WITHIN A LITTLE MORE THAN AN HOUR AFTER CANADA FORMALLY HAD DECLARED WAR UPON GERMANY. IT MERELY DECREED THAT ALL PROVISIONS OF THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION OF SEPTEMBER 5, APPLYING THE ACT TO THE ORIGINAL BELLIGERENTS IN THE EUROPEAN WAR, SHOULD ALSO APPLY TO CANADA.

SEP 11 1939

EFFECTIVE AT ONCE, THE PROCLAMATION WILL PROHIBIT EXPORTATION FROM THIS COUNTRY TO CANADA OF ANY ARMS, AMMUNITION OR IMPLEMENTS OF WAR. THE STATE DEPARTMENT SAID ITS RECORDS SHOWED THAT CANADA HAD UNFILLED ORDERS IN THIS COUNTRY FOR SEVEN AIRPLANES, DELIVERY OF WHICH WILL BE ILLEGAL WHILE THE PROCLAMATION IS IN EFFECT

30.24-3249

CANADA THUS BECAME THE NINTH NATION AGAINST WHICH THE UNITED STATES HAS INVOKED THE ARMS EMBARGO. THE OTHERS ARE GERMANY, FRANCE GREAT BRITAIN, POLAND, INDIA, AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND AND SOUTH AFRICA.

SEP 11 1939

QS3PES NM

A22

MONDAY AMS - sept-10

UNDATED SHIPS SUNK

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEP 11 1939

THE WEEK-OLD WAR BETWEEN THE THREE-POWER ALLIES AND GERMANY HAS SENT 18 SHIPS TO THE BOTTOM--MANY OF THEM TORPEDOED BY GERMANYS FAR-RANGING SUBMARINES.

THE ALLIES HAVE LOST 11 CRAFT WITH A TOTAL TONNAGE OF 66,683. ON THESE SHIPS, AN ESTIMATED 136 LIVES HAVE BEEN LOST.

GERMANY HAS LOST FIVE SHIPS--TOTAL TONNAGE OF 12,725---AND SEVEN LIVES.

NEUTRAL GREECE LOST ONE SHIP WHICH HIT A GERMAN MINE BUT NO LIVES WERE LOST. A NETHERLANDS MINESWEEPER STRUCK A MINE AND SANK WITH 30 LIVES LOST.

SEVERAL OTHER SHIPS HAVE BEEN REPORTED SUNK OR LOST BUT CONFIRMATION WAS LACKING.

LLOYD'S REGISTER OF JULY, 1939, SHOWED GREAT BRITAIN HAD 6,722 STEAMERS AND MOTORSHIPS WITH A TOTAL TONNAGE OF 17,891,134; FRANCE 1,231 AND 2,933,933; POLAND 63 AND 121,630; GERMANY 2,459 AND 4,482,662.

(EDS--ATTENTION IS CALLED TO CHRONOLOGICAL LIST BEGUN LAST WEEK).

ED117PED

30.24 3249

A123WX

(WX) UNDATED MILITARY STRATEGY (WITH BUDGET)

BY EDWARD E. BOMAR

(ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER)

SEP 11 1939

THE CONTINUED RAPID ADVANCE OF GERMAN FLANKING COLUMNS LED NEUTRAL MILITARY MEN TO THE CONCLUSION LAST NIGHT THAT POLAND'S MAIN DEFENSE LINE, CENTERING AT WARSAW, WAS FAST BECOMING UNTENABLE.

ANOTHER GREAT TURNING MOVEMENT, LIKE THOSE WHICH ALREADY HAVE GIVEN THE INVADERS A THIRD OF POLAND, APPEARED FROM BOTH POLISH AND GERMAN REPORTS TO BE IN PROGRESS.

QUALIFIED OBSERVERS SEEMED AGREED THAT THE POLES FACED THE NECESSITY OF FURTHER RETREAT EASTWARD TOWARD A FRONTIER ON WHICH RUSSIA IS REPORTED TO BE MASSING TROOPS IN A CRYPTIC GESTURE OF DEFENSE, OR MENACE.

OTHERWISE, THE PRIME GERMAN OBJECTIVE OF SMASHING THE MAIN POLISH ARMIES MIGHT BECOME VIRTUALLY ASSURED.

PROFESSIONAL STUDENTS OF WARFARE STILL CENTERED ALMOST THEIR ENTIRE ATTENTION ON THE EASTERN FRONT DRAMA, IN THE CONVICTION THAT DECISIVE MOVES ALONG THE FORTIFIED FRENCH-GERMAN FRONT WERE A MATTER OF THE FUTURE.

TO THESE, THE REPORTS OF THE RELENTLESS ADVANCE OF NAZI FLANKING COLUMNS NORTH AND SOUTH OF WARSAW, WITH WARPLANES AND FAST TANKS PRESUMABLY THE SPEARHEAD, SEEMED TO BE MORE SIGNIFICANT THAN THE ONSLAUGHT ON THE CAPITAL ITSELF.

WITH THEIR MAIN FORCES SEEMINGLY INTACT, THE RETREATING POLES UNDERTOOK TO HALT ON A SHORTENED DEFENSE LINE BEHIND THE NAREW RIVER TO THE NORTH, THE VISTULA IN THE CENTER, AND THE SAN RIVER TO THE SOUTH.

TO THE NORTH, HOWEVER, BERLIN CLAIMED THE NAZIS HAD CROSSED NOT ONLY THE NAREW BUT ALSO THE BUG RIVER BEYOND. FROM THIS LATTER POSITION THEY APPEARED TO THREATEN THE WARSAW-VILNA RAILWAY, ONE OF THE THREE MAIN LINES OF WITHDRAWAL EASTWARD FROM THE CAPITAL.

SEP 11 1939

FURTHER, ABOUT 125 MILES TO THE SOUTH, ONE GERMAN COLUMN WAS REPORTED ACROSS THE VISTULA, AND ANOTHER FORCE BATTLED ITS WAY EASTWARD ALONG THE DEFENDERS' FLANK TOWARD THE SAN RIVER, THE WORLD WAR BATTLEGROUND CITY OF PRZEMSYL, AND TOWARD THE IMPORTANT RAILWAY JUNCTION CITY OF LWOW, OR LEMBERG, THE METROPOLIS OF POLISH UKRAINE.

THIS PARTICULARLY MENACING SOUTHERN FORCE APPEARED HEADED EVENTUALLY, UNLESS HALTED, TOWARD CLOSING THE RUMANIAN FRONTIER AND A JUNCTURE WITH THE RUSSIANS.

NEVERTHELESS THE POLISH ARMIES THUS FAR HAVE ESCAPED FATAL DISASTER, HAVE EXTRICATED THE BULK OF THEIR FORCES FROM WESTERN POLAND, AND RETAIN 50 OR MORE DIVISIONS TO FACE THE 70 WHICH GOERING SAID GERMANY WAS EMPLOYING.

THE LONG EXTENSION OF NAZI LINES OF SUPPLY AND COMMUNICATION, THE SHORTENED DEFENSE LINE AND THE APPROACH OF FALL RAINS REMAINED FACTORS OF SPECULATIVE VALUE FAVORING THE DEFENDERS.

RZ-VX628PES

The Polish troops were said in earlier Polish radio reports to have pushed the Germans from "some suburbs."

[An Associated Press correspondent with the German forces in Western Poland was informed that an invading armored-car force had withdrawn from Warsaw to the city's outskirts because it was desired "to discourage the Poles from bombarding Warsaw."]

A radio announcer who said he was in Warsaw declared last night that the city's defenders had withstood seventeen air raids during the day and had repulsed attacks from German mechanized troops.

On the other side, a German radio announcement heard here said that the annihilation of Polish forces in Warsaw was "nearing the end" and declared that "many encircled troops already are beginning to surrender."

The Warsaw broadcast declared the bombing and shelling of the city had continued all day.

"Warsaw is now a battlefield," the announcer said. "Many houses are aflame in the open city. Women and children have been killed and wounded. Every house is being turned into an invincible fortress. Children also are helping fortifying the houses.

"Warsaw cannot be captured. Warsaw and Poland will score the final victory."

The announcer told of having seen German air raids from a housetop.

Attack by Sixty Planes

He said sixty invading planes had attacked an anti-aircraft battery in the courtyard of a huge apartment house. The bombs ignited the building, and the fleeing occupants were reported by the announcer to have been machine-gunned by low-flying planes. He declared that many had been killed by the bullets and that others had been buried after bomb explosions.

The battery still was intact after the day's raids, the speaker said, although it was surrounded by bodies of women and children and house wreckage.

Two German bombers were shot down in a fight over the capital amid "wild" applause of the citizens, he added. The pilots were saved. A German tank that became lost in the fighting was captured near the main square, the speaker added.

"The capital can hold out," the announcer went on. "On our western front we have repulsed the Germans. We know what the German radio meant when it announced today that their troops had retreated from Warsaw for strategic reasons. Obviously, the Germans thereby meant to make good their false announcement of Warsaw's fall."

The Mayor of Warsaw, Stefan Starzynski, said in a radio address to the capital's citizens that "German bombs have no effect on us; we are accustomed to them."

He ordered barricades removed from certain streets, as they hampered traffic, and ordered all shops to remain open. He expressed approval of the city's defenders, saying that "only one man left his post during the bombing."

"We believe in an ultimate victory," the Mayor added. "The bombing and shelling will not intimidate us. Warsaw with victory will save Europe."

The official Hungarian News Agency reported from Kassa yesterday that Polish planes had appeared along the Slovak-Polish border and machine-gunned Slovak military columns, presumably in an attempt to retard the eastward movement of invading troops. One Polish plane was reported to have crashed

The Lwow station, about 220 miles southeast of Warsaw, said German planes were bombing the heart of Warsaw, but did not estimate the casualties.

SEP 12 1939

A Warsaw broadcast two hours earlier had indicated that the Polish Army still was holding the defense lines of their capital.

The Warsaw radio said German bombs had fallen in Pilsudski Square which is ringed by the War Ministry, Foreign Ministry, Warsaw military headquarters and the Hotel Europjski where many foreigners stayed before war started. The fragmentary report, interrupted by static, said a large number of persons were in the square, but did not mention casualties.

Refugee Highways Bombed.

NAZI PLANES BOMB HEART OF CAPITAL

SEP 12 1939

Explosives Fall on Crowded Pilsudski Square —Foe Is Declared Driven From Some Outskirts—Lwow Faces Onslaught.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—A broadcast from the Polish radio station at Lwow today declared that after four days of bloody fighting the Polish Army had forced German invaders "to retreat from some Warsaw suburbs."

The report was broadcast at 2:10 P. M. (9:10 A. M. New York time).

SEP 12 1939

POLES HALT ENEMY ON WIDE FRONT;

SEP 12 1939

By The Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Tuesday, Sept. 12.—Declaring that the German invaders had been halted "dead in their tracks," the Polish radio station at Warsaw said early today that the city's besiegers had been forced to retreat and that the Poles were resisting attacks "on all fronts."

Warsaw's energetic defense in the fourth day of siege forced the Germans to retreat, the announcer said. He declared this signaled a turn in Poland's war fortunes.

The radio announcement said the Polish Army had established itself in prepared positions along the east bank of the Vistula River. The front of resistance was declared by the announcer to run through Warsaw along the Vistula, south to the San River, thence along that river to a point near the Slovak border.

North of Warsaw the Polish troops were said to be holding on the Vistula, Narew and Bug Rivers in a fanlike spread.

Retreating at an End, He Says

Warsaw, shattered by constant shelling and bombing, was characterized by the announcer as a spearhead of what he said was the beginning of real Polish resistance after more than a week of steady retreating.

30.24-3251

30.24 3251

Poles Shelling Nazis Across City's Roofs

Radio at Warsaw Reports Germans in Retreat; Battle Nearing Climax

Berlin Says Enemy Can Still Surrender

Reich Plans Retaliation for Britain's Blockade; Peace Feelers Still Out

SEP 12 1939

LOCHNER

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 11.—The fall of Warsaw was considered here tonight to be imminent, with the desperately fighting Polish Army hopelessly trapped, it was contended, by the German high command's famous "vise" methods.

Early annihilation of the Polish Army was openly forecast in German communiques. These official statements, however, continued to mention the "stubbornly resisting" Poles.

SEP 12 1939

Army advances said to bridge across the Vistula River to the Modlin fortress, which is eighteen miles northwest of Warsaw, was under heavy artillery fire. In several places between Radom, sixty miles south of Warsaw, and the capital, Polish troops were also reported caught in the "vise."

Official quarters said a major battle for possession of Warsaw was near a decision. The German lines were said to be just west of Warsaw, while the main positions of the Polish Army were at the capital's eastern edge.

Pressure was being exerted from the north by German troops, said to be advancing against little resistance toward the fortress city of Modlin, which defends Warsaw where the Narew River joins the Vistula.

Report Nazis in Retreat

[A Warsaw radio broadcast heard in Budapest early Tuesday asserted that the Germans had been forced to retreat and that the Poles were holding firm on a 250-mile front. North of Warsaw, the radio said, the Poles were halting the Germans along the Vistula, Narew and Bug rivers, and south of Warsaw were holding their own on a line extending to the San River, thence east almost to the Slovak frontier. The Polish radio said that the Modlin fortress had hurled back repeated Nazi attacks.]

The high command communique declared that German troops at Warsaw were "in the western part of the city" and that "Polish artillery of every caliber" was firing from eastern sections of Warsaw on them. This would indicate shells were flying in high arcs directly over the city. Berlin military circles were said to be considering declaring Warsaw a fortified city so as to justify bombardment of it.

Poznan Is Threatened

Army advices reported that the troops advancing from East Prussia had taken Lomza, eighty miles north and east of Warsaw, and had forced their way across the Narew River at near-by Wizna.

Another section of the theater of war where Germans claimed success was in west Poland, where the City of Posen (Poznan), capital of the province of the same name, was reported about to fall to German arms.

Reported successes in the south caused further joy here. The German Army was at Jaroslaw, on the San River, and was reported by informed sources to be virtually at the border of the Polish Ukraine, in the southwest. The Germans felt certain there would be no sniping in this area, such as they have encountered in other parts of Poland. On the contrary, Nazis expected the Ukrainians would hail the Germans as deliverers.

The Polish port of Gdynia, across the harbor from Danzig, was still in Polish hands. How long it would hold out nobody was willing to predict. Its resistance has prevented Germany from gaining complete control of the disputed Corridor.

According to unverified reports reaching Germany, the Polish government has established its new seat at Krzemieniec, twenty miles from the Soviet frontier, in southeast Poland.

There was an "ominous" quiet regarding the western front. Officials said they had no knowledge of military activity there beyond minor skirmishes. They also mentioned attempts by French aviators to bomb the Saarbruecken airdrome, from which the Germans had withdrawn. In the course of these attempts, the Germans said, three French planes were brought down.

To requests for further information, the stock answer was to the effect: "You must decide for yourselves, from our reports or those of the French. We feel certain a comparison of these two shows we are speaking the truth."

Persons close to the Foreign Minister saw in Britain's announced readiness for a war of three years or more not only an answer to the peace offer of Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering last Saturday, but also proof that Britain had been preparing for war for a long time. One authoritative commentator even went so far as to say Britain had encouraged Poland merely to have an excuse for entering, on Poland's side, a war of world dimensions.

Despite Britain's determined attitude, peace feelers seemed to continue. They apparently were directed especially at France, of whom Goering said on Saturday that Germany wants nothing.

There were suggestions in informed quarters that Poland might yet obtain a "decent, sensible peace," if she would "raise the white flag of surrender." This presupposed, however, it was stated emphatically that Britain and France also would call off the war. It was freely admitted that Rome and Berlin, the axis partners, were in constant touch on the situation. This indicated to observers that Premier Benito Mussolini was carrying the main burden of still attempting to localize the conflict.

Plan Blockade Retaliation

One immediate reaction to the British three-year war slogan was an announcement by inspired commentators that Germany would do all possible to prevent articles declared contraband by Britain from reaching that country.

"What they try to cut us off from," one official said, "we will in turn try to prevent reaching England."

Submarines, according to informed quarters, will determinedly sink any ship attempting to carry to England articles on Britain's contraband list. These submarines, it was added, would always proceed strictly according to internationally accepted rules.

The German press directed its attention tonight especially to the British blockade intentions. According to the "Nachtausgabe," "Germany, during the next ensuing days, will publish her own contraband list, placing foodstuffs thereon because of Britain's similar action."

"In other words," the paper continued, "we will declare that we will attempt with all means at our disposal to prevent importation of essential goods and foods into England even by way of neutral states. In no other way can the flagrant violation of the law which England commits by pressure upon neutrals be combated."

"Nachtausgabe" further mentioned that the British government had compiled a blacklist of firms dealing with Germany. The paper commented: "A similar list has been compiled by Germany. Germany is able not only to endure every form of a hunger war forced upon her by England, but to answer it with the same means."

The newspaper "Boersenzeitung" admonished neutral states to "show their teeth" and not submit to "British dictatorship on the seas."

Rather menacingly, it added: "Germany wouldn't understand it if anything were left undone (by neutrals) or if English violations (of neutrality) were overlooked with embarrassed leniency."

Commenting on the failure of high command communiques yesterday and today to mention the capture of Lodz, an official said the map showed German troops already so far beyond that city that it would have seemed outdated military information. A special official announcement yesterday said Lodz, Poland's greatest textile center and situated eighty miles southwest of Warsaw, had been captured.

German radio announcements picked up in Budapest declared that annihilation of Polish forces was "nearing the end" and that "many incircled troops already are beginning to surrender."

SEP 12 1939

Germans announced the continued bombing of highways between Lublin and Lwow on the main route from Warsaw to Rumania. While there probably are some troop movements along these highways, they also are thronged with refugees seeking safety.

German planes, tanks and big guns were reported massing for a concentrated drive on Lwow (Lemberg) in an effort to cut Poland's line of communications with Rumania, its sole avenue for supplies, by capturing the capital of the Polish Ukraine.

The rapid turn of events left the location of the Polish Government in doubt. One report here said headquarters had been moved to Krzemieniec, 250 miles southwest of Warsaw and almost on the border of Soviet Russia. Other reports said the Government had gone from Lublin to Lwow and was moving eastward from there.

As Warsaw dug in for its fourth day of siege by a German force that launched more than forty air raids and countless tank attacks yesterday, the radio station at Lwow instructed the city's defenders to dig trenches and erect street barricades.

Lwow Fears Heavy Attack.

There were indications that the German drive already had started. Throughout the broadcast from Lwow, sirens could be heard sounding air raid alarms. It appeared Lwow, one of the chief industrial centers in southeastern Poland, was to be subjected to the same sort of battering that has taken place at the gates of Warsaw since the German forces reached there last Friday.

The Polish General Staff's communique No. 10, broadcast from Warsaw, last night, reported German air bombing continued relentlessly all around the capital, especially along the line of the Bug River north of the city. Fighting continued without change, the communique said, in the vicinity of Ostrow Mazowieckie, fifty miles northeast of Warsaw.

Fighting Along San River.

The communique aslo reported severe fighting along the San River, which flows from the Carpathian foothills in southern Poland, chiefly at Sanok, south of Przemysl, fifty miles west of Lwow.

In a broadcast from Lwow, the Polish army's general headquarters insisted "Warsaw is ready for a long defense" and stressed that action on the French-German front "has now really started." But the Warsaw station also issued a warning of the impending attack on Lwow.

To the accompaniment of air raid sirens and motors of diving planes, the Warsaw announcer said civilians in both cities were helping in defense, with aged men and women and children doing whatever they could.

Early this morning, Polish Staff Capt. Vaclav Lipinski, in a broadcast from the capital, said that the Polish anti-aircraft batteries had brought down during the day fifteen German bombers over the city and its suburbs.

"After sunset," he said, "German tanks in droves attacked Warsaw from the suburbs, but were driven back. Two of them were destroyed and their crews taken prisoner."

Tells of Artillery Barrage.

Capt. Lipinski said the German air raids and tank movements had been supported by a heavy artillery barrage that lasted from dawn to dusk. The combined assault had been going on nineteen hours when the Polish officer came on the air.

Like the German guns, the German bombers had been active since the first light of dawn. They launched their first raid at 5 A. M. and their biggest of the day some four hours later, when seventy planes were reported over the city. Capt. Lipinski said only, "there is considerable noise." But the announcer who preceded him described the city, its population swelled to 2,000,000 by the arrival of refugees from other sectors, as an inferno, with screams of wounded and dying adding to the horror of roaring planes, bursting bombs and exploding shells.

Says Planes Dropped Spies.

The announcer also said German planes had dropped "ragged and bearded spies" into the city by parachutes.

Hunger was beginning to hit the population, said a speaker identified as Mayor Starsinski of Warsaw. He added that the civilians, mostly old people," were doing their utmost to supply food to the intrenched Polish defenders.

Boys and girls, it was said, were acting as bucket brigades to fight fires started by the German bombardment, and were helping old men and women in constructing barricades. They often were endangered by falling planes, the victims of anti-aircraft guns or aerial dog fights.

Take Up New Defense Line.

Correspondents of several Hungarian newspapers reported today the Polish forces were taking up a new defense line, beginning at Bialystok, about seventy miles northeast of Warsaw; swinging in an arc down to the Vistula River just south of the capital; following the river for 125 miles, and then swinging southeast toward Rumania.

The papers pointed out Polish military tradition always has been to retreat to the Vistula, strengthen the position there and then launch counter-attacks.

The war correspondent of one of the Budapest papers pointed out the Poles were following the defense strategy of retreat and consolidation which won Poland its greatest successes in the past. He said Polish losses so far were not great, with few prisoners taken and little artillery and other equipment captured.

Nazis Drop Placards.

The Warsaw dispatch of the correspondent of the Rome Tribune was printed widely here today. It said that, as German planes strafe Polish machine-gun nests and lines of troops, they invariably drop placards reading "All your resistance is to no avail."

The dispatch added:

"It is possible to destroy the Poles with the weapons of war, but it is impossible to conquer them."

The Poles thought they would reach Berlin in two weeks, the dispatch continued, "but even after this disillusionment the Polish spirit is undampened."

The Polish Army declaration from Lwow yesterday said, "our soldiers are fighting valiantly and making a great stand on all fronts."

"In these troubled days many of you have been forced to flee your homes," the statement added. "We appeal to you to remain where you are, and particularly out of choked towns and cities.

"Let the conviction be with you, the moment of victory is near."

Poland Runs Short of Food.

The breakdown of communication lines and requisitions by the army have made a food shortage in Warsaw a certainty.

When the Associated Press correspondent left the Polish capital the meat shops displayed only sausages. Milk, butter and vegetables were low, because the peasants have stopped going to the city.

There were only temporary supplies of canned goods, for the army requisitioned all surpluses, and the transportation breakdown had made their replenishment impossible.

Throughout the Polish countryside the correspondent saw lines of peasant carts loaded with grain and other food stuffs, but they were unable to run the gantlet of German attackers to reach Warsaw.

Army Communique.

The following communique was issued today by the high command:

"A great battle in Poland is nearing its climax -namely, the destruction of the Polish army west of the Vistula.

"In southern Poland, our doggedly defending opponents have been pushed back over the San River, and a crossing of the river has been forced in the Jaroslaw sector, in connection wherewith Radymno and Jaroslaw were captured and Polish troops encircled in various regions began to surrender.

"Efforts on the part of the surrounded divisions to break out were everywhere prevented. After heavy fighting over Polish fortifications along the Narew River, it became possible to form bridgeheads on the southern shore near Nowgorod and Wizna. Polish artillery of every caliber opened fire from eastern sections of Warsaw against our troops lying in the western part of the city.

"Encirclement of the Polish war harbor of Gdynia continued. Neustadt (Wejherowa) and Putzig (Puck) are in German hands. Marine forces supported the advance of the army by successful firing upon Polish batteries as well as the harbor of Gdynia.

"The air force repeatedly attacked with success roads and railroad lines eastward and southeastward from Warsaw, as well as in regions around Lemberg (Lwow), Lublin and Kulm (Chelmno).

"It also destroyed columns and troop transports in these regions. The west railroad station at Lemberg was destroyed.

"In the west the Saarbruecken airdrome, which previously had been abandoned, was shot at by French artillery. Three French planes were brought down over Reich territory."

When asked what kind of peace Germany might offer Poland an informed source said that depended "on many imponderables."

German spokesmen pointed out that by the terms of her treaty of mutual aid with Britain Poland cannot make peace alone. She must consult London and Paris. The clear implication was that Poland would get better terms if the Western Powers were willing to call off the war on all fronts.

Pressure on Fortress.

Official informants said a major battle for the possession of Warsaw was near a decision. German lines were said to be just west of Warsaw, while the main Polish positions were at the capital's eastern edge.

Pressure was exerted from the north by German troops said to be advancing with little resistance toward the fortress city of Modlin which defends Warsaw where the Narew River joins the Vistula. Modlin is eighteen miles northwest of Warsaw.

Officials reported that many prisoners and quantities of war materials had been taken.

The occupation of Poznan (Posen), great industrial city of 275,000 inhabitants, was said to be near as the result of a great encircling movement. Poznan is in a large pocket of western Polish territory which thus far has escaped occupation. Expecting that the city would fall without a real battle, officials said a reason for the slow tactics was the large number of Germans living in Poznan.

In the East, high command reports indicated that the army advancing from East Prussia had taken Lomza and was forcing its way across the Narew River at Wizna, threatening Warsaw from the northeast.

Sees Poles' Position as Hopeless.

German officialdom regards Poland's position as hopeless; serious long-continued resistance is considered impossible.

The Supreme High Command, however, spoke of the "doggedly defending" Poles and in its communique today said "a great battle" was in progress in Poland. But it asserted this was "nearing its climax—namely, the destruction of the Polish Army west of the Vistula."

[In Britain the Times of London, which usually expresses the Government's views, declared that Field Marshal Goering's Saturday speech was "aimed at pulling the western Powers into a dishonorable peace after the consummation of the crime against Poland." The Times said that Poland's army was "evoking universal admiration," but that it was "too soon as yet to talk of what will happen to Warsaw."

[The official Soviet press regarded further effective Polish resistance as impossible and attributed Poland's difficulties to the "absence of effective aid on the part of England and France."]

Report New Seat of Government.

According to unverified reports reaching Germany the Polish Government has established its new seat at Krzemieniec, twenty miles from the Soviet frontier in southeast Poland.

Commenting on the failure of High Command communiques yesterday and today to mention the capture of Lodz, an official said the map showed German troops already so far beyond that city that it would have seemed outdated military information.

A special official announcement yesterday said Lodz, Poland's greatest textile center eighty miles southwest of Warsaw, had been captured.

Referring to the battle for Warsaw, the High Command communique declared that German troops were "in the western part of the city" and that "Polish artillery of every caliber" was firing from eastern sections of Warsaw on them. This would indicate shells were flying in high arcs directly over the city.

Berlin military circles were said to be considering declaring Warsaw a fortified city so as to justify bombardment of it.

Admit Big Battle Rages.

Meanwhile an earlier Supreme High Command's communique acknowledged for the first time today that a major battle is in progress in Poland.

Until now, resistance by the Poles appeared to have been broken easily. The fight for possession of Warsaw seems only to have begun.

In the West, also, fighting was reported here gradually to be gaining momentum, as demonstrated by the communique's report that an abandoned airdrome at Saarbruecken had been bombarded.

German sources said there seemed to be little doubt that remaining Polish forces west of the Vistula River were being mopped up by the German Army.

Report Poles Fighting Valiantly

In the south, they said, Polish troops appeared to be fighting gallantly over overwhelming odds.

After a lull in Baltic Sea operations, the communique today reported that German land and sea forces had been co-operating since yesterday in what appeared to be an attempt to capture Gdynia, Poland's only outlet to the sea.

With the German navy in control of the Baltic and with northern Pomorze (the Polish Corridor) completely shut off, this harbor is not able to function. Nevertheless, it was pointed out, its seizure would remove the last vestige of opposition in the north.

Although the German Army high command foresaw early collapse of Polish resistance, popular hopes that Germany yet might negotiate peace with France apparently were doomed by the reports of fighting in the west.

A succession of new dispatches from the eastern front told of swift, methodical successes by German divisions smashing into Poland.

SEP 12 1939

Bombers Destroy Bridges.

The air force was reported carrying on operations far beyond Warsaw, destroying bridges and communication lines.

This harassing action, military officials said, was shattering the morale and impeding the retreat of Polish troops.

Meanwhile Germany's new relations with Soviet Russia engaged great attention in official quarters.

News of the mobilization of Russian reservists was welcomed, but even greater stress was placed on plans of military leaders for resuming railway communications between the Reich and the Soviets. Germany has counted on Russia to supply a considerable share of raw materials with which to carry on the war.

The Baltic Sea route now is open and completely in control of the German Navy. With Poland eliminated, in the German viewpoint, as a State which could interfere with land shipments, German strategists laid great weight to the value of the rail connection between Germany and Russia in event the sea route were cut by the British Navy.

Counting on Russia.

The contention of all Government quarters was that with friendly Russia at hand it would be impossible to starve Germany into submission

Canada's decision to enter the war beside Britain occasioned no surprise in Berlin. The German official news agency, DNB, reported the Canadian decision in a brief dispatch to the German press: "Canada on September 10 formally declared war on Germany."

News of continued German success in Poland brought only moderate acclaim from the public, which already is taking the victories along the eastern front largely for granted.

Commenting upon predictions of an early collapse of Polish resistance, one German spokesman said: "Now is the moment for a competent political leader in Poland to arise, bring control to a demoralized situation and come to a realistic, just understanding with Germany. Whether there is such a leader remains to be seen, but should he arise he would be a savior to Poland."

Hitler Flies Over East Front.

Operations on the Polish front, the official news agency reported, were inspected yesterday by Fuehrer Adolph Hitler, who was said to have made an extended airplain flight over the battle area yesterday.

The flight took Hitler over the Kilsz-Radom region just west of the Vistula River, where, the dispatch said, several Polish divisions were surrounded.

Later Hitler's plane followed the route of the retreating Polish Army in the direction of Warsaw.

The German press dwelt heavily on Hitler's airplane flight, asserting he was living up to his self-chosen title of "first soldier of the Reich."

Dispatches disclosed that Der Fuehrer had moved his headquarters from the corridor, where military action is regarded as nearly complete, to the army group in Silesia which conducted the offensive against Czestochawa, Kielce and Radom.

Previous German claims that Nazi troops had entered Warsaw were partly explained by a Government spokesman who said motorized forces had penetrated the capital and then met the difficulties which has been encountered elsewhere in Poland—sniping.

The spokesman said the penetrating force was a spearhead detachment, and it was deemed advisable to withdraw pending arrival of German forces from the north, west and south which are attempting a pincer movement.

Capture By French Of 4 German Towns Reported At Basel

By CHARLES FOLTZ, JR.
Associated Press Correspondent

Basel, Switzerland, Tuesday, Sept. 12—Advancing despite German counter-attacks, French troops were reported in advices reaching Switzerland today to have moved up as much as four miles in one sector and to have captured four German towns.

Small patrols of German troops crossed into French territory for the first time in the present war early today, Swiss reports said, but they retired to their own side of the frontier after a furious clash with the French.

The French, relying on a series of coordinated attacks in the face of the counter-attacks, were said to have taken Brenschelbach, Uttweiler, Peppenkun and Medelsheim, northwest of the French Maginot fortresses of the Bitche area, and west of Volmunster.

The French-German clash on French territory took place just east of Saarguemines and southeast of Saarbrücken.

SEP 13 1939

The German troops apparently were not connected with any large German advance, but were merely small groups which made charges to outflank positions the French had taken.

Keep On Own Side

The German policy so far has been to keep to their own side of the frontier. The frontier at this point is very irregular, however, and observers doubted the sortie tonight meant a change in policy.

The French high command, as if taking German counter-attacks as a cue for its own strategy, was reported tonight to have extended the French battle front eastward from the Saah river into the foothills of the Vosges Mountains.

Almost all the great Maginot Line forts from the Moselle to the Rhine were reported to be operating as bases for an attack, while their big guns pounded the German Siegfried Line.

North Of Bitche Area

The area wherein the French began a series of attacks this afternoon was a sector north and east of the powerful Maginot fortresses of the Bitche area.

The French launched their attacks due west of the French town of Volmunster and due east of the French town of Walschbronn. Volmunster is on the west side and Walschbronn on the east side of a French salient in the border.

Neutral observers said they thought the western action apparently was designed to relieve pressure on the right wing of the Saar drive, where the Germans were reported to have recaptured a number of positions in the last two days.

Struck At Foothills

The left wing struck at the rolling, wooded Vosges foothills opposite the huge army field-artillery proving ground before the Bitche forts.

German reaction to this latest move, it was reported in Basel, was to fall back from the outer forts east of the Saar, but to attack violently in the Hornback sector, opposite Volmunster.

Late in the evening the picture on the active fronts looked as if the French were trying to catch the important city of Saarbrücken, which stands less than a mile from the French frontier, between the arms of two attacks, the one from the west launched today, and the other from the east, launched several days ago to the Saar river.

The only area which apparently had not yet been turned into a battleground was the eastern slope of the Vosges through Wissembourg to the bend of the Rhine at Lauterbourg.

Nazis Await Poles' Surrender; Promise a 'Sensible' Peace

SEP 12 1939

Imply Terms Will Be Better if Allies Drop War—Berlin Says Battle for Warsaw Is Near Decision; Expects Poznan's Fall.

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Germany is waiting for Poland to "raise the white flag of surrender," an authoritative Berlin source said today.

"That will insure a sensible and decent peace," this informant asserted, but added that meanwhile Germany had but one task in the east: "Let arms speak and break the resistance of the Polish Army."

30.24-3253

30.24 3253

ADVANCE SEVERAL MILES, BUT GERMAN DIVISIONS LAUNCH COUNTER-ATTACK

Battle Is Described As Fiercest Thus Far Of War

Reich Believes It Will End In The Surrender Of Warsaw

SEP 12 1939

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the German Army West of Warsaw, Sept. 11—What is described as the war's bloodiest battle, which Germans believe will end by the surrender of Warsaw, is being fought a few miles north of Lodz, sixty miles directly west of the Polish capital.

Three German divisions under Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz early today launched a counter-attack against a force of from 50,000 to 60,000 Poles retreating from Poznan province and the Corridor. A German division is between 10,000 and 12,000 men.

Sought To Force Outlet

Caught in a pocket created by the German pincer thrust on Warsaw, the retreating Polish army attempted Sunday to make an outlet for a retreat to Warsaw.

They advanced several miles in one of the most desperate attempts any part of the Polish army has yet made.

Unaccustomed to losing ground, the Germans at dawn today replied to the surprise Polish move by opening field artillery fire on the Poles, who had made their gains by mass maneuvers.

Murderous Air Attack

At 2 P. M. a murderous air attack was unloosed. I heard cannonading in the direction of Piatek and Leczyca, thirty miles to the north, as I awoke in Lodz this morning.

The German Arrow armored-car division, which had shot straight to Warsaw from Wielun, near the German border, through Piotrkow, Tomaszow and Rawa, has withdrawn from Warsaw to the city's outskirts because Polish artillery was trained on it.

The Germans say the withdrawal was ordered in an effort to discourage the Poles from bombarding Warsaw.

The German headquarters staff had come back to the field headquarters at Lodz at midnight last night after mapping the day's counter-attack. The headquarters of General Blaskowitz were moved forward toward Warsaw at dawn.

All afternoon German bombers flying low made seemingly unending round trips from the direction of the German border to the scene of battle.

Some of them, however, headed for Lublin, where a second action was taking place. Lublin is one hundred miles southeast of Warsaw and about 140 miles east of Lodz.

They unloaded their "eggs" and went back for more.

Outnumbered Five To One

Only five Polish planes, as compared with five times that many German planes, flew over my head during the battle as I drove through one bombed and burned town after another behind the front line.

SEP 12 1939

Close fighting tactics of the Poles was held responsible for heavy casualties, an estimate of which was unobtainable.

The Germans believe that the fate of the five to six Polish divisions may be decided tomorrow.

Trapped In Pocket

The desperate Poles, who collected from various westerly points, found themselve trapped in a pocket with a radius of about twelve miles.

They attacked in a southeasterly direction at a point fifteen miles northeast of Lodz near Strykow. Their object was to get to the main road from Lodz to Warsaw.

This battle was closely connected with the German plan to capture Warsaw with a minimum of damage to the Polish capital.

The Germans cut the all-important rail and road connections in nearly every direction around Warsaw. All the Vistula river bridges either have been bombed or are in German hands, according to reports to German officers.

Seek To Avoid Shelling

The Germans say their tactics with all cities has been to force them to fall without shelling. That is what is happening around Lublin, where the Polish Government fled from Warsaw. That is what happened at Lodz, which fell without a shot being fired within the city of 700,000 population.

A line has been drawn west of Warsaw which the Polish divisions in the Lodz pocket will have to meet should they escape from their present predicament.

This line, or semicircle, extends to the south of the capital.

Troops from East Prussia today fought their way across the Narew river northeast of Warsaw in a drive going on for six days in an effort to close the eastern section of the circle.

Throughout the afternoon I passed troops and supplies moving up on unpaved dusty Polish roads to strengthen the nearly forged iron ring around Warsaw.

Because of the necessity of fording streams where the Poles blew up bridges, as they retreated and because of the heavy troop transport behind the lines, it took twelve hours to go 120 miles in an automobile. Two hours were spent fording a stream at Przyglow, south of Lodz.

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 11—The French general staff announced tonight that French troops, attacking on the Bitche plateau east of the Saar basin, had made important advances into German territory.

A communique from the usually cautious high command strengthened the impression that a major battle was approaching, with the French and Germans fighting along a one hundred-mile sector of the Western front from the Moselle river to the Rhine.

Attacks Show Progress

SEP 12 1939

Communique No. 16 said:

"Despite enemy resistance our attacks continued to show appreciable progress on a front of some twelve miles east of the Saar."

This meant the French fought their way along the Bitche plateau, which lies between the Saar river and the Vosges Mountains, on a front some twelve miles wide—despite German resistance.

The head of the French forces, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, concentrated his attack against the historically strategic heights held by the Germans between Zweibrücken and the Rhine—along the eastern end of the Northern front.

Nazis Push Forward

The Germans, meanwhile, thrust forward along the Moselle Valley, wresting advance positions about a quarter of a mile deep from the French left wing—the extreme western end of the Northern front.

SEP 13 1939

Hand-to-hand fighting, with the French using bayonets to check the Germans, was reported.

The two armies were sparring with an increasing number of men for jumpoff positions, which, at the same time, would afford maximum protection for their permanent lines and fortifications of the enemy succeeded in gaining an advantage.

Reinforcements Pour In

Both sides rushed up heavy reinforcements and hurled fresh troops into fighting which may be known in history as the Battle of the Saar River.

German troops, mostly young Nazi recruits in this sector, dislodged the French from some advance positions.

During the first shock of the German attack the French were believed to have lost several hundred yards of Reich territory they had captured previously. This German advance apparently was limited, however, to not more than a quarter of a mile.

Counter-Attack Blocked

The French immediately threw in more troops and fought the German counter-attack to a standstill. French observers, while admitting the Nazi thrust, described it as "without appreciable success."

Despite the desperate nature of the fighting in the Moselle-Saar triangle, French sources insisted their casualties "had not been high."

There has been no mention either of casualties or prisoners in official communiques thus far.

Few Prisoners Taken

These same French sources said only a few German prisoners had been taken. Apparently these had been confined as usual in advance operations to men captured by special raiding parties in order to find out what enemy units were holding various sectors of the front.

This is the picture of the operations as put together from authoritative French and neutral information available in Paris:

Already fighting has gone beyond the "advance guard" phase of the operation with which the French opened their campaign to relieve pressure on Poland. Units as large as divisions have been sent in the northern flank of the Western front—just south of little Luxembourg.

JOIN ACTION AS FRENCH PUSH GERMANS BACK IN FACE OF HOT RESISTANCE

Paris Communique Indicates Approach Of Majo Battle As Both Sides Spar For Jumpoff Posts In No-Man's-Land

SEP 13 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, Sept. 12—The Ministry of Information tonight announced that British troops have landed in France and taken part in advances on German territory.

The transport of the British expeditionary forces took several days and was accomplished without accident.

No details of the units or their positions in France were given.

Operations Described

The French operations there have reached a stage known in military terminology as "reinforced advance guard action." That means units up to the size of regiments are holding extended positions in the front lines first take by separate platoons and companies.

Behind the lines French troops are moving up in a steady stream. Air scouts have reported that on the German side, too, roads are congested and railroads are bringing up an almost continuous line of troop trains.

French flyers said their attacks against German concentration centers and communication lines were hampering the movement of Nazi reinforcements.

Would Clear Own Soil

The German drive is designed to thrust the French off of German soil—out of the triangle of which the Moselle and Saar rivers form two sides. It opened with an increasing thunder of artillery, shelling the little tree-dotted valleys where in the first week of fighting the French established advance positions.

From the Luxembourg frontier to Saarbrücken—fifty miles to the southeast—the Germans apparently were taking the initiative, attacking across the Saar valley.

Fighting swirled around heavily fortified hills and through little villages that dot the rich Saar coal mining basin. Each crossroad was the scene of hand-to-hand engagements.

Whole Line Active

Where the Germans were not attacking, the French were. There were reports of activity all along the no-man's land from the Moselle to the Rhine between France's Maginot Line and Germany's West Wall.

The French reported "local advances" for their forces between the Saar river and the foothills of the Vosges Mountains.

The historic heights against which the French are moving have been German territory since Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo (although occupied by the Allies after the 1918 armistice).

It was France's present ally, Britain, which insisted in 1815 that the strategic hills in the Zweibrücken, Landau, Speyer section be given to Prussia as a guarantee against what then was regarded as French aggression.

Movements Screened

Because of their position west of the Rhine river, the heights screened troop movements down the Rhine valley in war days before aviation. In 1870, during the Franco-Prussian War, the German General von Moltke used the hills to hide the advance of two full divisions until he was in a position to strike at the French frontier.

Between Two Lines

The fighting in no-man's-land appeared to be almost equidistant between the Maginot and Limes Lines. French observers said that if anything, it appeared to be nearer the German line in the north, where the Germans are attacking, and nearer the Maginot Line farther south, where the French are taking the initiative.

At nightfall—a week and a day after fighting started on the western front—neither army seemed to have gained anything like a decisive advantage. The French have succeeded in carrying the fighting ont German soil, but German counter-attacks in force have come from strong positions well in advance of their west wall fortifications.

French sources said only a few German prisoners had been taken. Apparently these had been confined, as usual in advance operations, to men captured by special raiding parties in order to find out what enemy units were holding various sectors of the front.

Premier Edouard Daladier conferred this afternoon with Andre Francois-Poncet, French Ambassador to Italy. The envoy was understood to have told Daladier that Italy was observing a "strictly correct" neutral attitude despite her pre-war axis alliance with Germany.

FRENCH BLOCK COUNTER-DRIVE ON WEST FRONT

Use Bayonets to Meet Nazi Attack at Saar End of 100-mile Line.

CONTINUE ADVANCE IN SOUTH

Meanwhile French Look for Nazi Financial and Economic Breakdown.

SEP 12 1939

PARIS, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The heavily-entrenched French and German armies struck at opposite ends of a 100-mile sector between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers today as the western front seesawed back and forth.

The morning communique from the French General Staff announced that the front was generally quiet during the night, but that French troops had succeeded in making one "local advance" under cover of darkness.

SEP 12 1939

Their new zone of attack was at the eastern end of a line from the Plateau of Bitche down into Germany's Palatinate, between the Little Saar River and the Vosges Mountains.

The German counter-attacks, which the French were reported to be holding off with bayonets, were directed against the western end of the line from the Saar basin, where French troops made their first advance.

Gaining in Intensity.

Action generally appeared to be gaining in intensity.

The identity of the forces involved remained a military secret, but it was understood that the French division mentioned in a communique on Saturday for a "brilliant attack" was a famous world war infantry unit.

It was believed that by now the British Expeditionary Force also had had time to take up battle positions.

Operations, which were confined largely to contact by advance guards on both sides during the first week of the war, were reported to be involving re-enforced bodies of troops as the second week of the campaign was launched.

Movements Spreading Out.

Movements also were broadening out, with whole woods, heights and villages at stake, where earlier operations were aimed against front line trenches and pill boxes.

Aerial scouts who had been following German movements also brought back reports that German troop movements in the Saar area were "bothered" by French raids on their communication lines.

Reports from the eastern front said that the Polish forces were reforming their lines along the middle portion of the Vistula River. There, French advices said, "the situation seems less grave."

The war came home to Paris again with an early morning air raid alarm, the fourth since operations began a week ago today and the first since the introduction of the new policy of sounding a warning only in "imminent danger of attack." The alarm lasted sixty-seven minutes and was attributed to a German scouting raid in which the planes failed to reach the capital.

Petain May Be Minister.

Premier Daladier, meanwhile, proceeded with the formation of a war-time Cabinet. The Premier conferred at the War Ministry today with Marshal Henri Petain, who returned from his post as Ambassador to Spain.

Political leaders reported that Petain might take the War Ministry, with Mr. Daladier, now its chief, moving out to combine the Foreign Ministry with the Premiership.

In the "no-man's land" between the French Maginot Line and the German Siegfried Line German forces were reported in a strong counter-attack. The brunt of the offensive was at the triangle formed by the junction of the Moselle and Saar rivers, on the extreme northern flank of the western front.

It is here that the French were believed to have made their deepest advance into German territory.

The French forces were reported holding fast at this point, where the Germans were attacking from the shelter of the coal mine shafts of the Saar basin. Fifty miles to the southeast, according to a General Staff communique, they were making a fresh advance. This was in a twenty-mile sector between the Saar, where it cuts into French territory, and the foothills of the Vosges Mountains.

Dangerous Spade Work.

Meanwhile today military experts expressed gratification over the French capture on Saturday of the Warndt Forest. By gaining possession of this piece of high ground, they believed they had removed the threat to railway communications between Metz and the frontier.

At the same time they recognized the dangers to the French campaign that would result from the success of the German counter-attack on the northern flank. Not only would this threaten the Maginot Line at a vital point, but it would block the French drive to win the west bank of the Saar running north from Saarbruecken to Merzig.

All this activity, however, is held to be in the nature of "spade work." The French are not expected to launch a major offensive for at least several days.

Economic Power.

On the economic home front, the big event was the broadcast by Paul Reynaud, the Minister of Finance, explaining the exchange control and other war-time financial measures. Mr. Reynaud told the nation that in 1918 "the issue of war did not hang on the position of little flags stuck on a map. German armies still occupied five French departments. But the German morale was broken because the economy, finances and money of the enemy were literally exhausted."

SEP 12 1939

Says Germany Is Now Broke.

This time, Mr. Reynaud stated, "Germany has already been used up to a large measure by the gigantic effort she made to prepare for war. Economically and financially Germany is already very vulnerable. On this front Germany has no fresh troops."

He said that France, in contrast, has gone into action "under economic conditions very superior to the enemy."

Mr. Reynaud added that France's gold stock had increased by 30 per cent in recent months and that French banks today held twice the amount of gold they had in 1914. He urged the people behind the lines to fulfill two duties: Produce as much as possible; consume as little as possible.

Mr. Reynaud did not say at what rate the franc would be pegged in relation to foreign currencies.

In foreign exchange today the franc was quoted at 43.70 to the dollar and 176.50 to the pound sterling, representing virtually no change from last week's official Bourse closings. This was taken to indicate that the new control would maintain the franc at least temporarily at rates formerly prevailing on the open market.

'Short War' Is Lost.

On the political front, today's newspapers were full of speculation about the war-time Cabinet.

The papers also praised the "heroic" resistance of the Poles, which they compared to the French stand against Germany at Verdun, and spoke in scornful terms of Saturday's speech by Field Marshal Goering, which they interpreted as an attempt to drive a wedge between Great Britain and France.

L'Epoque declared that the Germans have lost their "short war."

Germans Only Partly Succeed.

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The war on the western front was reported to have developed today into determined thrusts and counter-offensives. Reports received in Switzerland, while inconclusive, say that the Germans lashed back at the French offensive.

The German counter-attacks last night were described here as only partly successful, and a number of positions were left in French hands. These reports said that the French and Germans made use of mine shafts and galleries blasted open by shellfire for machine-gun pits.

The no man's land between the main lines became the scene of quick attacks and quick withdrawals.

As the fighting developed, French troops were reported starting their action in the Vosges foothills west of the Rhine stretching toward the Haardt range.

Neither side mentioned casualties, but the French, being on the offensive, were said to have suffered greater losses than the Germans.

German sources said that the Siegfried Line was perfectly prepared to meet any attack on its main links.

The Germans were said to have highly mobile units in readiness at a score of points behind the line—ready to dash anywhere the High Command orders them along a network of military roads screened from attack by air, although exposed to the long range French artillery.

Like the Maginot Line, the Siegfried Line has hangars built underground and filled with planes which have so far been used for little more than observation.

It was learned here that one of the German units was working on plans to broadcast propaganda to the enemy, presumably of the "We want no quarrel with France but will defend ourselves" type already plastered on huge sign boards along the Rhine.

Fuehrer Flies To Polish Front To See Battle

A Few Miles From Lines, He Hears Guns, Looks At Captured Equipment

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (AP).—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler went today to the front where a major battle in the region between Lodz and Warsaw was in progress, to get first-hand knowledge of the fight, the German official news agency announced. The Deutsches Nachrichtenburo, the agency, said the trip took him in the midst of war operations where "trapped Poles" were endeavoring to break out.

SEP 12 1939

After landing at an emergency airfield a few miles behind the front, Der Fuehrer and his staff traveled by car to within a mile of the most advanced German attacking forces enabling him to "hear the staccato chatter of machine gun fire," the D. N. B. said.

He was welcomed at the air force base by the commander, who, by way of a reception, declared his flyers, on the previous day, had destroyed forty-four Polish planes and a number of airports lying far eastward.

The trip led through areas where Polish guns, ammunition wagons, disabled tanks and other equipment lay abandoned, into the zone of the actual battle operations. German heavy artillery protected against air raids by anti-aircraft formations stood ready to fire.

Hitler went beyond the most advanced artillery positions to division staff headquarters, located in a partly-destroyed farmhouse. Here, said the D. N. B., Der Fuehrer was advised that "all efforts of the Poles, who attacked here with the courage of desperation, broke down under German fire, with heavy losses."

As Hitler left in the afternoon to fly back to headquarters, tanks, followed closely by infantry and light field artillery, advanced to the attack.

Goering Joins Air Force On the Eastern Front

Drops Job of Putting Reich on a War Footing

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (AP).—Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering joined on the eastern front last night units of the air force he heads, it was disclosed officially. Goering, second man of the Nazi Reich, had been kept in Berlin, as head of the Cabinet Council for National Defense, to draw up emergency decrees putting the nation on a total war footing.

At the same time, a summary of the work of the German air force in the east since Saturday was released by the Deutsches Nachrichtenburo, official German news agency. The report said fourteen Polish planes were shot down at Lublin and eight were destroyed by bombs dropped on airports.

German planes successfully attacked the Lublin rail junction southeast of Warsaw, stations along the lines between Sambor and Lwow, Chyrow and Przemysl, and Rudnik and Nisko, rail lines running between Rzeszow and Lwow and Sandomierz and Przeworsk, rail crossings at Siedlce and Luckow and airports at Stanislaw and Lwow, the report said.

SEP 12 1939

All these places are in the area west and northwest of Lwow, industrial center in southeastern Poland toward which German forces are driving.

German losses were said to be small. One plane had to make a forced landing behind Polish lines and two, crippled, managed to reach their own territory, the report said.

30.24-3255

30.24 3255

Refugees Pour Into Rumania

Four Girls From American Embassy Cross Polish Border After Wild Drive.

PSTERSON

CERNAUTI, Rumania (Near Polish Frontier), Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Cities and villages in the Rumanian border province of Bukowina were becoming a vast refugee camp today as thousands of Poles, fleeing before the advancing German Army, crossed the frontier in search of safety.

SEP 12 1939

Rumors concerning the progress of the German forces caused confusion among the refugees, who pressed into use every means of transportation.

Germany's lightning assault has delivered a stunning blow to the Polish Army, but many observers believe there has been no knockout punch. Military experts said today that whether or not the Polish cause was lost depended, at least partly, on how well Polish forces had withstood the shock of the terrific onslaught.

Military reports have been meager—there is not even an estimate of Polish casualties—but there is evidence that the Poles have saved the bulk of their mechanized equipment.

American Embassy Girls.

Four American girls, employed at the United States embassy, crossed the Rumanian frontier safely and went on to Bucharest after a dramatic trek from a village near the Russian border. They were listed as the Misses Eugenia McQuatters of Los Angeles, Isabel Pinard of San Diego, Cal.; Iris Saunders of Portland, Ore., and Alice Hillory of Milwaukee.

The girls had joined a caravan traveling to Lublin and then headed toward the Russian border in an embassy station wagon. Miss McQuatters driving twelve hours through the night without lights over strange roads.

Although the girls wished to remain with the embassy staff in Poland, Ambassador Anthony Drexel Biddle Jr. insisted that they cross the border and go on to Bucharest, where they planned to remain temporarily.

400-mile Trek.

The Polish Government offices were striving to reorganize in scattered towns and villages near the Russian border and to untangle the confused situation. The Foreign Office was established in a school house, while diplomats were quartered in all available buildings in [illegible]y villages. Col. Josef Beck, Foreign Minister, has left to join the General Staff.

For foreign diplomats, their families and staffs—who must follow the Polish Government—their 400-mile trek to their tiny village near the Russian frontier has been a nightmare.

The wife of one diplomat took an ordinary needle and thread to sew up a deep gash in the head of a French embassy official's wife. Their automobile toppled into a ditch when the chauffeur fainted from fatigue.

The American embassy here is a small wooden building. The beds of Mr. Biddle and his wife are canvas sacks filled with fresh-mown hay. The front yard is a street filled with peasant carts. The dining room is a nearby self-service restaurant.

The first temporary embassy was in South-Central Poland, but in the dead of night, twenty-four hours after arrival, a new request came to move on, and the caravan of diplomatic cars started another lengthy drive.

Once, while Mr. Biddle sat talking with other diplomats in a darkened garden, shooting sounded overhead. Two airplanes were fighting. Then came a crash at the far end of the garden, and a German pilot floated down injured with a parachute.

Diplomats, far removed from their luxurious surroundings in Warsaw, are pedaling bicycles and walking more miles in a day than they would ordinarily walk in a year.

Poles Are Optimistic.

Although none of the Polish border towns has yet been bombed, all were reported taking extreme precautions against air raids. In some places even the lighting of matches was prohibited after dark.

The Polish authorities along the border remained somewhat more optimistic, however, with reports that Warsaw was still holding out and that the Germans might establish a defense line along the Vistula instead of attempting to cross the river.

Some of the reports said that several German divisions had already been recalled from Poland to the western front.

Thorughout the Ukraine Poles were praying for rain in the belief that the beautiful Indian summer weather, good roads and low rivers had made possible the swift German advance.

One section of Lwow (Lemberg) was reported burning yesterday after an air attack in which, it was reported through neutral sources, German aircraft machine gunned streets, causing panic among the civilian population.

Scenes around Warsaw were described as terrifying." Fields were reported black with people fleeing the city, handicapped by a shortage of gasoline.

The Poles are still hopeful, however, pointing out that the Polish commanders had expected a swift, powerful German drive which might disorganize defenses temporarily, even though they had not looked for such bewildering speed.

German war planes have penetrated eastern Poland in search of new Polish airdromes, but the fate of Poland's air force is still in doubt.

Also unknown is the situation of an estimated 100,000 Polish troops believed caught in a German pincer movement in Pomeraina.

An army of 1,000,000 Poles, however, is being massed for a stand on the east bank of the Vistula. Others are preparing a line of resistance along the Bug River, marching by night and hiding by day from enemy warplanes.

The German air attacks have been widespread and devastating, creating confusion which, if it continues, might see further German gains.

Soviet Holds Poland Beaten

SFP 12 1939

Moves Thousands of Troops to West—Front With Nazis Believed Likely.

MOSCOW, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Further effective resistance by Poland against German forces is regarded by the official Soviet press today as highly improbable. This view was expressed by both Izvestia, the Government organ, and Pravda, the Communist party publication.

Pravda contended that Poland had lost nearly her entire military economic base, and attributed the Polish collapse to the "absence of effective aid on the part of England and France."

The paper also listed as contributing factors Poland's failure to create a sufficient number of fortified areas on its western frontiers; and Germany's superiority in the air and the technical equipment of her land forces, especially in the quality of tanks and heavy artillery.

The assertion that Great Britain and France had failed to give effective aid followed upon yesterday's Soviet press attacks on the "unfriendly actions of England in regard to the U. S. S. R." Great Britain was charged then with violation of friendly relations with the Soviet. A statement by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, asserted that several British firms had canceled production of lathes and presses ordered by Russia.

"The actions of English firms and British Government organs are blowing up trade between the U. S. S. R. and England," Tass said.

Although Russia maintained outward calm, there were indications that she was getting ready for any emergency.

Thousands of reserve troops were moved to the western frontier in connection with what Tass called the "more and more wide and threatening character" of the German-Polish war. It was understood that the Government was requisitioning certain supplies in large quantities, especially sugar.

Garrisons on the west were strengthened as the possibility appeared that Germany—with her armies driving eastward in Poland—might establish a common frontier with the Soviet Union.

Italian Troops Reach Naples; En Route To Libya, Rome Hears

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 11—Reports that Italy is sending troops to Libya were circulated today after long columns of soldiers in olive gray and with khaki sun helmets arrived in Naples.

In diplomatic circles the question at once was raised whether Premier Mussolini might be contemplating a sort of "back-door" war, once France is engaged in a desperate struggle on her Western front, and attempt to seize Tunisia in North Africa.

Officially, however, Italy was still silent as to her intentions in the European war.

Briton Calls On Ciano Again

Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador, made another of his almost daily calls on Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, but observers were left as much in the dark as ever concerning the nature of the talks.

Usually well-informed British circles professed ignorance of the import of the conversations. They said their speculation was divided between guesses that Britain is sounding out Italy on a general European peace settlement or that she is trying to separate Italy from Germany.

The troops arriving at Naples today came in box cars fitted with seats. They marched away toward the docks. Many rank-and-file Italians clung to the belief Mussolini would keep Italy out of the war. Mostly they have no clear idea how, but only a sort of blind faith in il Duce.

Continued calm throughout Italy bolstered these peace hopes.

Diplomats Discuss Possibility That Duce Plans "Back Door" War On France Through Tunisia

'No Turning Back,' Says Eden

Dominion Secretary Asserts War Must Go On Until Nazism Is Destroyed.

SFP 12 1939

LONDON, Sept. 11 (A. P. via Radio).—Anthony Eden, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, said in a radio address tonight: "There can be no peace until Nazism is . . . banished from the earth."

The people of Great Britain, he said, were prosecuting the war with Germany with a clear conscience.

"Before war broke out we did all that words could do," Capt. Eden said.

"For us now there will be no turning back. We have no quarrel with the German people, but there can be no peace until Nazism with its cruelty and persecution has been banished from the earth."

Hitler, he said, had flouted all the lessons of history, preferring "the power of misery and bloodshed."

'Determination Unshaken.'

He reiterated, "Our determination is unshaken," and accused Hitler of "cynical dissimulation" as to Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

"Let there be no question about our determination," he said. "We have decided to fight to show that aggression does not pay and the German people must realize that this does not pay.

"The people of this country are ready to fight a very long war, if need be, to rid the world of Hitlerism."

Great Britain's colonies, the Secretary said, have made the cause their own.

"There must be no second mistake," he continued, referring to the first world war.

Nazism is a passing phase, he said, but in combating it the people must expect bitter suffering and wide devastation.

"Can we rid Europe of the barriers of caste and prejudice and creed?" he asked. "Can we create a true unity in Europe?

"While the Nazi system exists this cannot be. So it must go. By Herr Hitler's decision our new civilization must be built by war. But it will be built for some forces are greater than that (Nazism)."

Retort to Goering.

A communique tonight from the Ministry of Information said that Great Britain considers that the speech which Field Marshal Herman Goering made to German munitions workers on Saturday "has revealed the bankruptcy of German policy."

Devoting its entire 7 P. M. bulletin to the address, which the British regarded as a peace feeler, the ministry asserted:

"Hitler has made many promises to foreign countries; none of them has been kept. It is therefore not surprising that no confidence is felt in any assurance he may give, and Great Britain is therefore justified in requiring that peace should be concluded with a German Government whose word may be trusted."

The British press had expressed editorial scorn for the Goering "peace feeler." Tonight's communique said: "Great Britain is fighting for a return to decency in international relations. Until this is achieved no country is safe."

Eden Pledges No Peace While Nazism Exists

Asserts Hitler and All He Stands For Must Go, Says BritainBars Compromise

SFP 12 1939

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Anthony Eden told the world tonight that "there can be no lasting peace until Nazism, and all that it stands for in oppression, cruelty and broken faith, is banished from the earth." "This," he added, "is an issue that admits no compromise."

The former British Foreign Secretary, brought back into Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's War Cabinet as Dominions Secretary, said in an international radio broadcast that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler "deliberately and with set purpose . . . chose to embark upon a war of naked aggression."

As for Britain, he said: "For us now there will be no turning back." Great Britain's people, he asserted, are "ready to fight a very long war to the bitter end if that must be to rid the world of Hitlerism and all that Hitlerism implies."

Reviewing the diplomatic exchanges that preceded the outbreak of the conflict, Eden asserted: "The German Chancellor carried dissimulation so far as finally to invade Poland because Poland had failed to accept peace proposals which she had never even received from the German government. There has never been a more flagrant mockery of international good faith."

Poland, said Eden, was "always ready to negotiate, as Czecho-Slovakia was ready. Herr Hitler has preferred force. He has made the choice; he must suffer the decision. For us now there will be no turning back." Eden reiterated Great Britain had "no quarrel with the German people."

"Five times in the last eighty years," he said, "the rulers of Germany have embarked with only the slightest pretext upon a war of aggression. Against peaceful Denmark in 1864, against Austria in 1866, against France in 1870, against the whole world in 1914 to 1918, and now against France, Poland and Great Britain in 1939."

With such a record, he went on, Germany's present leaders "might well have thought that they should agree to negotiate," but "they preferred yet once more the path of lawlessness, the path of misery and of bloodshed, the path of anarchy and want."

The text of Eden's broadcast follows:

A week has passed since this country found itself at war with Nazi rule in Germany, and today we are an united people more closely knit one to another in our common resolve than at any time in our history. More united, if that were possible, and certainly no less determined than when, some twenty-five years ago, we pledged ourselves to fight in a good cause. For such a cause we are fighting with one heart and mind today.

How has this come about? What is it that has levelled the internal barriers—the party and political barriers—and brought our people to be of one mind?

First, we have a good conscience. The White Paper which the government recently made public and which disclosed the story of the ten days that preceded the outbreak of war has made it clear beyond a doubt that the government not only strove to keep the peace, but took great risks for peace.

And yet there was this difference between the days which preceded the outbreak of war in 1914 and the period through which we have just passed. It has sometimes been said that if before the last great war we had made our position more plain and clear, peace could have been saved. I am not concerned this evening to argue whether that was a right or a wrong view. Today one fact stands out and it is this, that before war broke out we did all that words could do to make our attitude unequivocably clear to Germany's rulers so that—and here I use the Prime Minister's own words—there should be no 'tragic ambiguity.'

Neither this German government nor any German government in the future will ever have justification for saying that there was doubt as to the action which we must take. Our position was put before the world for all to see long before the German government decided to submit its fate to the dread arbitrament of war.

You may remember the famous story of the Roman envoys who went to Carthage before the first Punic war. Confronted by the Carthaginian Senate their spokesman said "I have here two gifts, peace and war, take which you choose."

No such grim alternative was given to Herr Hitler. Every inducement was offered him to enter the way of peaceful negotiation. The Polish government had accepted this principle of negotiation. Herr Hitler deliberately and with set purpose made negotiation impossible. Instead, he chose to embark upon a war of naked aggression, and this country and France have in consequence fulfilled their undertaking to Poland, an undertaking with which you are all familiar, an undertaking into which we had entered with full publicity before the world as long as last April.

Says Choice Was Hitler's

The German Chancellor carried cynical dissimulation so far as finally to invade Poland because Poland had failed to accept peace proposals which she had never even received from the German government. There has never been a more flagrant mockery of international good faith.

We have always desired to live and let live. We considered that there was no dispute that could not be resolved by peaceful means if once the threat of force were removed, and other nations have shared our point of view. Poland was already to negotiate, as Czecho-Slovakia was ready to negotiate a year ago. Herr Hitler has preferred force. He has made the choice; he must suffer the decision. For now there will be no turning back. We have no quarrel with the German people, but there can be no lasting peace until Nazism and all it stands for, in oppression, cruelty and broken faith, is banished from the earth. This is an issue that admits of no compromise.

First, then, our conscience is clear.

But secondly, our memory is long. Herr Hitler has claimed that his sole aim was to remedy the injustices of the treaty of Versailles, which he contended was the root of all evil. This it was, we are told, which had forced him to build his colossal armaments, to march his legions into Austria, to imprison its Chancellor, to absorb Austria into the German Reich. This it was that compelled him to break faith with the British and French governments, and despite his pledge, so recently and so solemnly reaffirmed, to invade and subdue Czecho-Slovakia and to attempt to reduce her people to the status of hewers of wood and drawers of water. This it was that left Herr Hitler—we are assured—with no alternative but to turn against Poland with whom some five years ago he had solemnly signed a pact which was to run for ten years. And a pact, you will recall, which laid down that the status of Danzig and the Polish Corridor would, by consent of both Poland and Germany, remain unchanged until 1944.

Faced with such a catalogue of broken vows and discarded pledges, how is it possible to escape the conclusion that the treaty of Versailles was not a grievance to redress, but a pretext for the use of force?

Five times in the last eighty years the rulers of Germany have embarked with only the slightest pretext upon a war of aggression. Against peaceful Denmark in 1864, against Austria in 1866, against France in 1870, against the whole world in 1914 to 1918, and now against France, Poland, and Great Britain in 1939.

With such a record her present rulers, had they been honest and sincere, might well have thought that they should accept to negotiate with nations who wanted nothing more than to live at peace with Germany, and who, as the documents which have been published show, excluded no subjects from peaceful discussion.

Herr Hitler and his Nazi associates would have none of it. Flouting all the lessons of history, ignoring or deriding even their own country's experience of British character, they preferred yet once more the path of lawlessness, the path of misery and of bloodshed, the path of anarchy and want. Let the Nazi leaders ask themselves now to what destiny they are leading the German people.

Our conscience then is clear. Our memory is long, and, thirdly, our determination is unshaken.

This war has broken out in circumstances which have no parallel. Herr Hitler is invading Poland with the help of overwhelming numbers and marked air superiority, while he acts on the defensive in the West. These methods are leading to strange illusions among the Nazi leaders, which had best be dispelled at once. Let there be no mistake about this. Our determination to see this war through to the end is unshaken. We must make it clear to the Nazi leaders and if we can to the German people that this country —as the Prime Minister said— has not gone to war about the fate of a far-away city in a foreign land. We have decided to fight to show that aggression does not pay, and the German people must realize that this country means to go on fighting until that goal is reached.

It is already evident that the Nazi government seeks to delude its people into thinking that a quick victory won in Poland will be followed by the indifference or the capitulation of the western democracies. That is not the truth. The people of this country are ready to fight a very long war to the bitter end if that must be to rid the world of Hitlerism and all that Hitlerism implies.

Hails Dominions

In the mean while let the Nazi leaders take heed and let us all take encouragement from what has been happening in the British commonwealth of nations during the last few days.

One by one the free peoples of that great association have been accepting the risks and responsibilities which the United Kingdom has taken upon itself. Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa each in turn have given the answer to the challenge, each in turn has made the cause its own.

And not only these great dominions, but India also. The colonies, too, have offered their aid. From all quarters of the globe have come messages of loyalty to the sovereign and offers of help. Once more, Britain stands armed and resolved with her sister nations at her side.

For some of us the challenge has come a second time in our generation. There must be no second mistake. Out of the welter of suffering to be endured we must fashion a new world that is something better than a stale reflection of the old, bled white.

It had been better could we have set ourselves to the task in a world at peace. Herr Hitler has decided otherwise. Nazism, however, is but a passing phase. Like all systems built upon force it cannot endure—in the long roll of history it will count but as a spasm of acute pain. The suffering will be bitter, the devastation wide.

But what really matters is what follows after. Can we do better this time? Can we finally rid Europe of barriers of castes and creed and prejudice? Can frontiers and faiths, language and commerce serve to unite nations and not divide them? Can we create a true unity in Europe? Can we set before it a common aim of service? Can we inspire it with common ideals of freedom, toleration and mercy? This is what must be. While the Nazi system exists it cannot be. And the Nazi system and all that it implies must go.

By Herr Hitler's own decision our new civilization must be built through a world of war. We would have wished it otherwise. But our new civilization will be built just the same, for soul forces are bigger than men, as in that new civilization will found liberty and opportunity a hope for all.

On Britain's entrance into the first world war in 1914 the Dominion Government merely published the British war proclamation.

Canada Speeds War Supplies

To Set Up Ministry of Munitions—Question of Expeditionary Force Undecided.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian Government today announced new measures to place the Dominion on a war footing as a result of her declaration of war against Germany.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons that a bill would be introduced for the creation of a new Ministry of Munitions and Supply.

Notice was given of a resolution to be introduced authorizing wartime expenditures up to $100,000,000 in the fiscal year which ends March 31, 1940. Funds for naval, military and air operations in or beyond Canada and other war contingencies were covered by the notice.

Major Question Undecided.

The question of sending a major expeditionary force to Europe still remained to be decided.

The Government backed up its declaration of war against Germany by moving today for authorization of wartime expenditures up to $100,000,000 in the fiscal year which ends on March 31, 1940.

The Government gave notice that a resolution would be introduced in Parliament authorizing such expenditures for naval, military and air operations in or beyond Canada and other contingencies of wartime. Among the contingencies covered by the resolution was the need for promoting and protecting trade and industry, whether by means of insurance or indemnity, against war risks.

Less than two hours after Mr. Mackenzie King had sent a copy of the war declaration to the Canadian Official Gazette at 1:10 P. M. yesterday the United States applied the arms embargo restrictions of the neutrality act to Canada.

Canada's first formal war proclamation in history came in three swift steps. Thirteen hours after the House of Commons had approved the Government's war stand Lord Tweedsmuir, the Governor-General, issued a royal proclamation. The proclamation was then cabled to London, where it was quickly approved by King George.

The Dominion followed Great Britain by just a week in going to war with Germany in 1939. Three other dominions—New Zealand, Australia and the Union of South Africa—preceded Canada with war declarations.

India was considered automatically at war with the Reich upon Great Britain's declaration.

To Send Flyers and Munitions.

The Prime Minister said that the Dominion's first contribution to the war will be to safeguard British and French possessions in the North Atlantic, train and send Canadian airmen overseas and dispatch food and munitions to the Allies. The question of sending an infantry expeditionary force to Europe is to be decided, he added.

During the world war Canada enlisted 619,000 men for service and the expeditionary force eventually reached 450,000. The nation's casualties were 55,634 dead and 149,732 wounded. The world war costs to the Dominion were estimated at $3,000,000,000.

The war declaration read in part:

"We do hereby declare and proclaim that a state of war with the German Reich exists and has existed in our Dominion of Canada as and from the 10th day of September, 1939. . . . Our loving subjects and all others . . . are hereby required to take notice and to govern themselves accordingly."

The Director of Immigration, F. C. Blair, said that the declaration would make no difference to American citizens entering Canada unless they were of German origin and that there would be no change in customs regulations.

Chamberlain Thanks Canada.

LONDON, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain thanked Canada today for joining Great Britain in "the common resistance to German aggression."

In a telegram to Prime Minister Mackenzie King Mr. Chamberlain termed Canada's declaration of war a "profound encouragement."

King George received Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada, in audience yesterday and issued a proclamation later "on the advice of his Majesty's Privy Council in Canada" that Canada is at war with Germany.

Man-Power of Canada.

The Statesman's Yearbook for 1939 indicates that Canada could raise a trained military force of 90,000 men for war within a short time.

The Dominion's active militia is listed at only 4,000 officers and enlisted men, But the non-permanent militia totals 7,050 officers and 79,440 men of other ranks who have received some military training.

Censorship regulations in Canada forbid the communication of present military figures.

Perhaps the most effective help the Dominion could give England would be in the air. The permanent active Royal Canadian Air Force totals 525 officers and 4,500 airmen and the non-permanent air force, 220 officers and 2,000 airmen.

The Canadian Navy which will guard Newfoundland and other French and British possessions consists of 137 officers and 1,582 enlisted men who are stationed on six destroyers and seven mine sweepers.

Marler Quits as Canadian Minister to United States

OTTAWA, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The resignation of Sir Herbert Marler, Canadian Minister to the United States, was announced to the House of Commons today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Mr. Mackenzie King said Sir Herbert, who has held the Washington post since 1936, resigned on account of poor health. He said a successor would be appointed shortly.

Britain Hails Entry Of Canada Into War

London, Sept. 11 (AP)—Canada's entry into the European war was hailed tonight by the Ministry of Information as an "event of the greatest importance" which "cannot be minimized either by our friends or our foes."

In a communique, the Ministry said it was another example of the "solidarity of members of the British commonwealth of nations."

30.24-3257

30.24 3257

U. S. Bars Arms to Canada

SEP 12 1939

Neutrality Act Invoked Shortly After Dominion Declares War on Germany.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (A.P.).—This country's arms and airplane factories were closed as a source of supply for Canada today by a presidential proclamation invoking the arms embargo provision of the neutrality act, which President Roosevelt hopes Congress will soon repeal.

Within little more than an hour after the British Dominion had declared war on Germany yesterday, the State Department made public the proclamation banning shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war to her.

The administration wants to limit legislation for the session to revision of the neutrality act and, primarily, to elimination of its provision that the Chief Executive shall forbid arms exports to warring nations.

It was agreed generally in the capital that this provision's operation in the case of Canada would be a factor in congressional controveray over the President's program. Critics of the embargo contend that it handicaps Britain, France and their allies in their struggle with Germany.

Canada May Get Plants.

Some argue also that, if it is not repealed, arms and plane factories will be built up in Canada, take business that otherwise would come to the United States and, when the war is over, turn to peace-time products in competition with plants in this country. Supporters of the embargo argue, on the other hand, that to repeal it would be to take sides in the European conflict and to lead this country eventually into full participation.

There is a possibility that Canada will continue placing orders in the United States, with delivery contingent upon the neutrality act being changed.

Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, a leader of the congressional group which prevented Senate action last session on the President's proposal to revise the statute, ended a vacation in Maine last night and started back to the capital. Beyond a terse, "I'll be there," he declined comment on the forthcoming special session. Previously, he had declared that repeal of the arms embargo would lead the country into war.

Austin is for Repeal.

Support for the President's position came from a number of other Republicans. Senator Austin of Vermont, told reporters he favored repeal. Senator White, Republican, of Maine, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he approved the proposed call for a special session and that he did not want legislation on the statute books to be of "advantage to Hitler and prejudicial to the cause of Britain and France."

Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, who previously had advocated repeal of the arms embargo provision, expressed belief that the United States could keep out of the war if it determined to do so.

Canada was the ninth nation against which the United States invoked the arms embargo since the war began. The others are Germany, France, Great Britain, Poland, India, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

Panama Proclaims Neutrality.

PANAMA, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The Republic of Panama today proclaimed her neutrality in the European war.

BRITISH ACCEPT LONG WAR IDEA

Public Opinion Scornful of Peace After Poland.

NEWSPAPERS BACK CABINET

Satisfied Three Years' Conflict Must Be Counted On.

LONDON, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Great Britain intensified her naval and economic warfare against Germany today, having lost twelve merchantmen in the first eight days of what the Cabinet regards as a war that will last for at least three years.

Public opinion also seemed inclined toward preparations for a long war and scorned what were presumed to be German intentions of offering peace after a lightning conquest of Poland.

The press almost unanimously backed up the Cabinet's decision to base its policy on the premise of a three-year war, regarding the announcement as Great Britain's "withering" answer to a "peace feeler" in Field Marshal Goering's speech of Saturday.

Furthermore, dispatches indicated that the final blows against Poland were not imminent. War correspondents, whose reports are just beginning to reach England, emphasized that Poland's Army is still intact, and that its withdrawal had always been part of the Polish plans.

SEP 12 1939

The British Pattern.

Great Britain's "war effort" at home and afield was adjusted to the Government's plan for a long struggle based on "winning the last battle."

The limited scale of British military operations, except at sea, in the nine days of the war, was considered only a part of the British pattern of moving slowly and methodically at the start and increasing the tempo steadily as the conflict went on.

"Time is on our side," was the typical British explanation of events.

Terse Government announcements indicated that British naval power was getting into its stride against German submarine activity. The Government has been cautious in referring to this, however, explaining that the announcement of a German submarine destroyed might bring a quick replacement. In military circles it was also explained that submarines must soon refuel and that when that time comes there should be a curtailment of their campaign.

British diplomacy has been active on many fronts since the war began. In Italy, Japan and Spain, all anti-Comintern partners of Germany, British diplomats have apparently been making the fullest use of the new Russo-German pact to encourage distrust of the Nazi Government; and in other countries as well the effort to strengthen and add to the Anglo-French front has apparently gone on during the war with even greater vigor.

Submarines Far Afield.

The Government's answer to the ship-sinking problem was twofold. It swung into an "unremitting" campaign of attacks and countermeasures, and extended the machinery for its "contraband control" through stations in Gibraltar and Alexandria, at both ends of the Mediterranean, and on Ceylon in the Indian Ocean.

No details were given in a laconic communique which said: "It appears that German submarines are now operating far afield." But the Ministry of Information said that the Admiralty had received "numerous reports" of operations against German submarines and "probably some have been successful."

Admiration for Poland.

The Government was still concealing its military program, confining most communiques to naval and aerial operations and civil defense.

Admiration for Poland.

The Information Ministry told the nation last night that the Polish Army had shown no sign of crumbling under German pressure in the east.

Despite the massing of seventy German divisions against Poland by Goering's own statement, the announcement said, Poland's Army "has carried out its withdrawal in an orderly manner and with a steadiness which must excite admiration."

It declared that German troops had not succeeded in entering Warsaw, and added: "It is too soon as yet to talk of what will happen to Warsaw during this early stage of the war. What is certain is that the Polish Army is firmly in being and that it is showing qualities which are evoking universal admiration."

The Times called Goering's speech "clumsy and rather uneasy." It said he "aimed at gulling the Western Powers into a dishonorable peace after the consummation of the crime against Poland."

The Government's long-range policy, the Daily Telegraph said, was a "withering answer to Goering's boast that the war in Poland would end in four weeks."

In comparison with 1914, the Times said, British organization plans have "advanced our readiness for war by between one and two years." The Telegraph estimated that the nation was at a point of efficiency reached halfway through the last war, and the Daily Express declared that "Goering knows Germany cannot stand a long war."

The last week end with unlimited gasoline—rationing starts next Saturday—brought out motorists in such numbers that roads and resorts were jammed. Crowds also thronged into the parks, and to movies, football games and the Whipsnade Zoo, where many of the London Zoo's animals have been taken.

London Is Itself Again.

Most eager of all, however, were the "evacuation widowers," who walked, bicycled, thumbed rides, drove and jammed trains to see their wives and children for the first time since they were removed from London. They knew it would be more difficult to hold week-end reunions in the future because all railroads have announced abbreviated schedules, and the gasoline rationing will restrict the use of private automobiles.

The widely proclaimed idea of a "lightning war" had led many persons to believe that German planes would be over London in the first few hours. But the fact that the first week of the war brought no spectacular German drive against the western Powers inspired greater confidence among the public.

London itself took on a more normal appearance today. The digging of trenches continued and other activity served as a reminder that the country was at war, but the whole atmosphere of the city was different from last week.

Complaints increased that the nightly blackouts were too black and could be relaxed. The first rush from the large cities has passed, and persons continuing to work in London go about their duties in much the same manner as before the war started.

SEP 12 1939

Britain Wants War to Get On Hears No News

People Anxious for Action; Lack of Information Is Assailed by Journalists

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A widespread anxiety among the British people to "get on with it"—with reinforced British action to stop Fuehrer Adolf Hitler on land, at sea and in the air—was noted tonight by neutral observers.

The people have been impressed by official declarations that Great Britain must see it through even if it takes three years or more, but there was evidence of a desire for proof of accomplishment. Officials news was sparse, and up to nightfall there had been no new announcement of naval, military or aerial action by British forces.

The national executive council of the National Union of Journalists publishes a resolution expressing its "grave concern at the failure of the Ministry of Information to provide the public with adequate news of the conduct of the war."

The resolution, adopted at the council's meeting in Bristol last Friday, was forwarded to the Minister of Information, Lord MacMilan. The council declared that "it is in the national interest that prompt action should be taken to reorganize the ministry so as to maek it an effective instrument for keeping thee country and neutral nations promptly informed."

Authorized sources vigorously denounced what they said was widespread German propaganda in neutral countries and especially in central and eastern Europe to the effect that "the show is over." They said that every one in Britain was determined that all the government's pledges must be fulfilled.

They declined, however, to define a more definite war goal than that stated by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain when he declared Britain was at war with Germany for "destruction of Hitlerism in Europe."

SEP 12 1939

A Ministry of Information communique tonight said Great Britain considered that the speech Air Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering, made to German munitions workers Saturday, "has revealed the bankruptcy of German policy."

Devoting its entire 7 p. m. bulletin to the address, which British circles regarded as a "peace feeler," the ministry asserted: "Hitler has made many promises to foreign countries; none of them has been kept. It is therefore not surprising that no confidence is felt in any assurance he may give, and Great Britain is therefore justified in requiring that peace should be concluded with a German government whose word may be trusted."

The British press also had editorially expressed scorn for the Goering "peace feeler." Tonight's communique asserted: "Great Britain is fighting for a return to decency in international relations. Until this is achieved no country is safe."

The reappearance of children in London over a quiet sunshiny week end caused the government to warn parents not to bring sons and daughters home from the country.

During the day the Prime Minister sent his thanks to Canada for joining Britain in "the common resistance to German aggression."

King George VI dispatched a message of appreciation to the people and princes of India for their support for "a principle which is vital to the future of mankind."

Late in the day King Geogre and Queen Elizabeth toured civil defense posts on the south side of the Thames where dozens of barrage balloons dot the sky. They cancelled plans for visiting Edinburgh next month.

Plans were discussed for closing London shops before dusk to aid the nightly blackout. This would mean midafternoon when winter comes.

TOKIO ENVOYS CONFER

Pro-Axis Ambassadors Hold Meeting in Rome.

ROME, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, Japanese Ambassador to Germany, came to Rome today to consult his pro-axis colleague, Toshio Shiratori, Ambassador to Italy, before the latter's departure for Tokio.

Both Gen. Oshima and Mr. Shiratori tried hard to bring Japan into a military alliance with Germany and Italy before Germany's signature of the non-agression pact with Soviet Russia caused a drastic change in Japan's foreign policy—away from the Rome-Berlin axis.

With that turn in world diplomacy their efforts collapsed and Mr. Shiratori has been called back to Japan. He will travel by way of the United States, sailing from Naples on the Conte Di Savoia September 13.

SEP 12 1939

Incidents in European Conflict

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (AP).—A mammoth camp for war prisoners, capable of accommodating 12,500 men, is being erected on the outskirts of Goerlitz.

War captives are kept busy digging drainage ditches, laying light and communication wires and otherwise finishing up the new camp. It consists of fifty tents, each with room for 250 persons. A high barbed-wire barricade surrounds the camp, while guards patrol within. Guards also watch from towers equipped with machine guns and floodlights.

SEP 12 1939

1939

Reich Balloon Is Destroyed

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 11 (AP).—A military balloon, drifting from the southeast, struck electric wires over the Island of Laaland today and was destroyed. Laaland, one of the southernmost islands of Denmark, is seventy-five miles north of Germany's Baltic seacoast.

SEP 12 1939

Bars Jews From Streets at Night

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (AP).—The government today ordered all Jews henceforth to be off the streets at 8 P. M. The Jewish community was advised privately of the curfew orders. This meant the Jewish theatre would have to stop giving night performances, it was assumed.

SEP 12 1939

Mexico on Lookout for Warships

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Mexican Navy was ordered today to patrol the Gulf and Pacific coastlines to watch for belligerent warships in Mexican waters. Naval authorities, in accordance with the international code, an announcement said, will permit warships of belligerent nations to touch Mexican ports only to obtain water and foodstuffs. Such vessels must leave within twenty-four hours.

SEP 12 1939

Gibraltar Guns Halt Ship

ALGECIRAS, Spain, Sept. 11 (AP).—Windows shook today with vibration of shots from Gibraltar batteries fired at a Netherland merchantman. The vessel failed to halt when signalled to do so by control ships. The Netherland captain, when finally stopped, was fined costs—the value of the shells fired at him.

SEP 12 1939

Spanish Fishermen Catch Bananas

VIGO, Spain, Sept. 11 (AP).—Vigo's fishermen did not cast their nets today. Instead they picked bananas. They hurried to sea without their nets when they discovered that large areas of the water were covered with bananas. A German ship had thrown overboard 500 tons of them. The fishermen sold the fruit at low prices.

Please Omit Flowers, Is Hitler's Request

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—An official announcement today said that Adolf Hitler would not accept flowers while traveling through areas occupied by his troops.

Donors were directed instead to give the flowers to German soldiers.

SEP 12 1939

Isle of Sylt Abandoned

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 11 (AP).—Inhabitants of the fortified German island of Sylt, subjected to a heavy bombing attack last Friday, left the island today. (Sylt is the site of an important German anti-aircraft defense fortification.)

Reich Has Prison for Poles

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 11 (AP).—The correspondent of the Copenhagen newspaper Ekstrabladet reported today that Germany was establishing a prison for Polish prisoners of war in the barracks town of Itzehoe, South Schleswig. The capacity of the prison, it was said, will be 1,000 men.

Million Under Arms, Rumania Calls More

Uneasy Over Reports Of Russian Troop Movements Along Eastern Border

Bucharest, Sept. 11 (AP)—Rumania's fighting forces, already a million strong, were swelled further today as "several additional classes" were called to duty following reports of troop movements along the eastern frontier.

Official quarters expressed fear of Russia's "intentions."

SEP 12 1939

Rubber 'Bomb' Thrower Of Downing Street Jailed

Pacifist Who Started Stampede of Crowd Gets Four Weeks

LONDON, Sept. 11 (AP).—A thirty-year-old clerk who created a near-panic by hurling a suitcase of slogan-inscribed rubber balls into a Downing Street crowd on Aug. 28 was sentenced today to four weeks at hard labor.

Police said Reginald Hislam prompted Alfred Hislam to toss the black rubber balls which the crowd believed were bombs. The balls carried chalked slogans reading "peace now" and "Britain must not go to war." Scores of persons, including many women and children, were knocked to the pavement in the stampede which followed the ball throwing.

In addition to the four weeks at hard labor, Hislam was fined the equivalent of $1.50 costs.

SEP 12 1939

Venezuela to Fix Food Prices

CARACAS, Venezuela, Sept. 11 (AP).—Government control of food supplies and prices was ordered today in a series of emergency decrees designed to bolster Venezuela's economy against upsets caused by the European war. The decrees, signed by President Eleazar Lopez Contreras, provided heavy fines for profiteering. Committees were appointed to fix prices.

SEP 12 1939

Olympic Games Plans Suspended 3 Months

Finland May Organize Nordic Competition In 1940 Rather Than Abandon Event

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 11 (AP)—Finland's Olympic games organization committee today suspended for three months preparations for the 1940 games, which have not yet officially been canceled.

If possible, at the end of that period, the committee plans to organize a "Nordic Olympiad," for which it will seek entries from North, Central and South America and the central Asiatic states.

SEP 12 1939

King George Declares War Aims to India

SIMLA, India, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—King George VI, in a message thanking the princes and people of India for their support, declared today that "Great Britain is not fighting for selfish ends, but for a principle which is vital to the future of mankind."

The King-Emperor, whose message was read before a joint session of the General Legislature by the Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, defined the principle as follows:

"That relations between civilized States must be regulated not by force, but by reason and law, so that men may live free from the terror of war to pursue that happiness and well-being which should be the destiny of mankind."

SEP 12 1939

'Wrens' on Active Duty Again in England

LONDON, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—About 1,140 members of the Women's Royal Naval Service—the "wrens" of the world war—are employed at England's principal naval ports, the Ministry of Information reported today.

Recruiting stations will be opened soon in several coast cities.

The Information Ministry said that everything was being done to expedite the issue of a "very attractive uniform, expected to help increase the wrens' ranks.

SEP 12 1939

How Manaar Was Sunk

Survivor Tells Of Firing On Submarines Before Ship Was Torpedoed

Gibraltar, Sept. 11 (AP)—This is a survivor's account of the sinking of the 7,242-ton British freighter Manaar off Portugal last Thursday:

"We heard a gunshot about 5.30 A. M. and rushed on deck. The wireless aerial had been destroyed, and there were two German submarines on the surface about 500 or 600 yards away on our starboard side.

"Capt. Campbell Shaw ordered our gun crew into action, and the aft gun was fired. But the submarines submerged, and the captain ordered us to abandon ship.

"We lowered four boats, and as we rowed away from the Manaar one of the submarines loosed a torpedo which hit the vessel amidships.

"Later, another shot was fired from the submarines, and the Manaar sank in front of us in less than five minutes."

U. S. GIRLS' PERIL ON ATHENIA TOLD

SEP 12 1939

17 Texas Collegians Spent 11 Hours in Open Boat.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Mrs. Arthur Strain of Dallas, Tex., related tonight how she escaped in the sinking of the Athenia with seven Texas College girls with whom she had been touring Europe.

"When the ship was torpedoed," she said, "I was at dinner with some of the girls. Others had retired and my first thought was for them."

Those with her at the time were hurried into lifeboats and Mrs. Strain then began a tour of the ship to find the others. Eventually they were all rounded up, some clad only in nightgowns and dressing robes.

Only one of the girls, Helen Hannay of Houston, was in the same boat with Mrs. Strain. They were in the open boat for eleven hours before being rescued and brought to Glasgow. Ten were taken to Galway, Ireland, and the others were taken aboard the Canada-bound steamship City of Flint.

24 Gartavon Survivors at Horta

HORTA, The Azores, Sept. 11 (AP)—Twenty-four survivors of the 1,800-ton British freighter, Gartavon reaching here tonight reported that the ship was sunk by a German submarine which attacked it 300 miles off Ushant, France.

The Gartavon sailed from Gibraltar with a cargo of iron ore. The survivors reported the German submarine appeared on the surface, fired a shot over the ship and ordered the crew to board lifeboats. Then, the survivors reported, the submarine proceeded to fire forty-four shells at the Gartavon, and finally there was a terrific crash, which the survivors said they thought was the explosion of a torpedo. The Gartavon sank.

The survivors remarked on the youthfulness of the submarine commander and crew.

Sailing to Canada Canceled

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11 (AP).—Entry of Canada into the war has caused the 1,934-ton Norwegian freighter Vestland to cancel its sailing for St. Johns, New Brunswick. The Vestland, loaded with coal, was ready to leave yesterday, but the captain said "it's too risky carrying coal to a belligerent country with all those sub losses."

Reich Ship Stranded Off Norway

OSLO, Sept. 11 (AP).—The 10,000-ton German steamship Hugo Stinnes was stranded today off Lofoten, a group of islands off the northwest coast of Norway. The ship had a torn bottom.

(The British Ministry of Information reported yesterday that two German merchantmen, the Baldur, 5,805 tons, and the Vegesack, 4,061 tons, had "gone ashore" on the Norwegian coast. There was no explanation.)

Nazi Freighter at Montevideo

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 11 (AP).—Another German merchantman, the 4,971-ton Kersten Miles, today joined Germany's "food fleet" anchored in the outer harbor here, waiting a chance to slip past British warships and make a dash for Germany. She came from Buenos Aires.

A German passenger vessel, the 13,676-ton Monte Pascoal, which left Buenos Aires on Sept. 9, has not been sighted yet, and some believed she had headed for Germany without calling at Montevideo.

Despite an all-night fog, which was ideal for blockade-running, all the German vessels loaded with wheat and beef were still at anchor this morning. Included in the group of German vessels were the Gonzenheim, 4,574 tons; Patagonia, 5,898 tons, and Anatolia, 2,446 tons.

German Ship Arrives at Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 11 (AP).—The 8,600-ton German freighter Bahia Blanca arrived today from Hamburg after a thirty-two-day voyage. She was camouflaged as a Greek ship.

SEP 12 1939

REICH-ITALIAN TRAFFIC UP

Rail Trade Overflows Into Swiss Route Between Countries

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 11 (AP).—Rail traffic between Germany and Italy has increased so much since the start of the European war that the direct line through the Brenner Pass has proved insufficient.

Many trains are being rerouted over the Mannheim-Basel-Gothard route through Switzerland. Inspections under the Swiss neutrality laws showed Germany shipping coal to Italy and receiving foodstuffs.

SEP 12 1939

Americans Turn Paris Hotel Into Hospital

SuburbanRetreat Prepared for Influx of Wounded

PARIS, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Hotel Gold at Etretat, luxurious summer resort fifteen miles north of Le Havre on the English Channel, was taken over today by the American Hospital of Paris for use as a military hospital for French soldiers.

Dean Frederick W. Beekman, of the American Cathedral, a member of the hospital committee, said the Etretat branch might be developed to include 1,500 beds. The hospital's main plant is in Neuilly, a Paris suburb. Most of the American patients already have been removed.

Forty-five American women residents of Paris met in the Cathedral parish house today to roll bandages for wounded soldiers.

Smuts Says Nazis Aim For Colonies in Africa

Asserts 'Neutrality Would Have Been Dishonorable'

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Sept. 11 (AP).—Gen. Jan Christiaan Smuts, new Prime Minister of British South Africa, which joined England last week in a declaration of war against Germany, said today, "Neutrality would have been dishonorable."

He added that South African troops would be used only for "home defense," and explained: "Germany's declared policy expressly includes her former colonies. The fight for Danzig is but the eve of a fight for southwest Africa." (Germany's colony there was mandated to South Africa after the war.)

BRITISH PROTEST CURB ON WAR NEWS

SEP 12 1939

Journalists Declare Grave Concern Over Situation.

LONDON, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The National Executive Council of the National Union of Journalists has adopted a resolution expressing "grave concern at the failure of the Ministry of Information to provide the public with adequate news of the conduct of the war."

The resolution, adopted at the council's meeting in Bristol last Friday, was forwarded to the Minister of Information, Lord MacMillan.

The council declared: "It is in the national interest that prompt action should be taken to reorganize the Ministry so as to make it an effective instrument for keeping the country and neutral nations promptly informed."

NORWAY BARS FISH EXPORT

Follows Scandinavian Policy—Firm Neutrality Urged

SEP 12 1939

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 11 (AP).—Norway today forbade the export of fresh and canned fish in a continuation of restriction of exports by Scandinavian countries.

SEP 12 1939

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Sept. 11 (AP).—Eljas Erkko, Foreign Minister, broadcast an appeal today to all Finns to help the government safeguard Finland's neutrality, to avoid any word or deed that might be misunderstood abroad. He said that Finland will try to maintain trade relations with warring nations on an identical basis, favoring neither side.

50 Germans Leave Dublin

DUBLIN, Sept. 11 (AP).—Fifty members of Dublin's German colony left for Germany tonight under arrangements to cross England in a sealed train with a military guard. The German Minister, some of his legation and other Germans saw the party off. One person on the pier gave the Nazi salute.

SEP 12 1939

30.24-3259

War Lifts Bermuda Ban On Autos and Suffrage

2 Prohibitions Toppled in England's Emergency

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Sept. 11 (AP).—Two of Bermuda's most widely known prohibitions—one on motorcars, the other on woman suffrage—went toppling today in the wake of the European war.

The Assembly passed a bill breaking the colony's famous rule against motor traffic because of "war conditions." The Governor may now operate motor vehicles of all sorts on Bermuda roads for the duration of the war.

SEP 12 1939

Only last April Governor Sir Reginald Hildyard resigned because, he said, he found it impossible to carry out his duties properly "without the use of a motorcar." The Bermuda Legislature twice refused his requests for a car, so he quit.

It was disclosed also that under the emergency powers act recently passed the Governor, now Maj Gen. Denis Kirwan Bernard, has the power to grant woman suffrage for which the women of Bermuda have fought fruitlessly but steadily for many years.

North Sea Heavily Mined

BRUSSELS, Sept. 11 (AP)—(Passed through British censorship).—Channel boats reported tonight numerous mines were in the North Sea. Belgian frontier observers told of large scale food smuggling into the Netherlands.

SEP 12 1939

So The Nazis Can't Get It

Bucharest, Sept. 11 (AP)—British, French and Netherlands importers today purchased large quantities of barley, wheat and beans in Rumania in a maneuver interpreted here as intended to prevent the supplies being bought by Germans.

Prices on wheat and barley increased sharply.

OSLO POWERS MEET AGAIN

SEP 12 1939

Problem of Obtaining Food Is Discussed by Committee

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 11 (AP).—Committees were named today by the "Oslo States," Northern European neutrals, to study the judicial and economic problems involved in staying out of war.

The problem of obtaining food was discussed by the permanent committee and provision was made for other meetings. No definite action was taken.

Belgium's Foreign Minister, Paul Spaak, presided. Representatives of the Netherlands, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Luxembourg and an observer from Switzerland attended.

Turk Premier Reads Nation Out of Conflict

SEP 12 1939

Fascists Ignored in Talk of RefikSaydam, at National Assembly, LaudingRussia

ANKARA, Turkey, Sept. 11 (AP).—Premier Refik Saydam opened a session of Turkey's National Assembly today with a declaration that Turkey is "out of this war and hopes the conagration will avoid us."

In a speech interpreted as reaffirming Turkey's policy of "watchful waiting" to see what Italy will do in the Mediterranean, the Premier said: "We have no direct political differences with Germany." The Premier, whose country has mutual-assistance treaties with France and Great Britain, failed to mention the Fascists.

"Our relations with Soviet Russia are and will remain friendly," he declared. "There is no change in the friendship between our two countries, and our contacts and consultations are most sincere.

"Turkey's relations with the belligerent countries are based on international law. Turkey has taken precautionary measures, and her line of conduct is vigilant watchfulness."

Back-firing Causes Quebec Air Raid Scare

SEP 12 1939

ST. BENOIT, Que., Sept. 11 (Canadian Press).—Back firing engines which war jittery villagers mistook for an air raid were blamed today for the childrens' colds.

The children were drenched by cold rain Thursday night when ten families fled into fields following a rumor Ottawa had been attacked by air raiders.

The back-firing of engines being used on construction was too realistic an accompaniment for the rumor, and the people of St. Benoit thought they, too, were under attack.

Oslo Group Convenes.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—An undisclosed number of Belgian reservists reported today for training as the Permanent Committee of the seven small neutral nations known as the Oslo Group assembled for its second meeting. Belgian officials said that the meeting would be limited to a discussion of food and raw materials problems.

SEP 12 1939

'Watchful Waiting' at Ankara.

ANKARA, Turkey, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The National Assembly convened today for a session at which Turkey's attitude toward the European war, informed persons said, would probably be defined as one of "watchful waiting." The Turkish press said that the attitude of this country, allied with Great Britain and France, would depend on whether Italy or Russia join Germany in the war.

SEP 12 1939

Lipski on Way to Warsaw.'

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Jozef Lipski, Poland's former Ambassador to Berlin, arrived here yesterday from Talinn, Estonia. He said he was on his way to Warsaw.

Hydro-electric Guard Duty in Canada.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 11 (Canadian Press).—After inspecting the measures taken to protect hydro-electric plants in the Niagara area against sabotage, Attorney-General Gordon Conant said today that the Provincial Government was doing "as well as possible with a police organization," but that he believed it would be better if the patrolling were done by the military authorities.

SEP 12 1939

Sweden Places Curb on Exports.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—The Swedish Government has fixed limits on exports—including iron ore, timber, wood pulp and paper—to meet pressure from foreign interests. The Minister of Trade emphasized, however, that no absolute prohibition of licenses for exports had been given.

U. S. May Play Host if League Leaves Geneva

SEP 12 1939

20 Years After Refusing to Join, Nation Might Offer Refuge From War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—One would scarcely call Uncle Sam a champion of the League of Nations, but it looks as though the European war were going to hand him just such a role.

Ironic as it may seem, in view of America's refusal to join the League twenty years ago, the United States is likely to be its principal supporter for some time to come. The support will be devoted solely to the non-political activities of the Geneva institution, but it will have considerable political value coming at this time.

Dispatches from Switzerland indicate the League will have to close up its Swiss shop during the war because Switzerland fears its presence may involve violation of the nation's neutrality—and Switzerland has taken extraordinary military measures along the German border to protect that neutrality. With Britain, France and Poland among the chief members of the League and Germany outside it, any meetings of that body would take on a partisan aspect, would look like a council of war, no matter what words were spoken or decisions made. Switzerland does not want Germany to use the League as an excuse for invading it in order to get at France behind the Maginot Line. So Switzerland is hinting it might be well for the League to meet elsewhere.

U. S. Plays Active Role

The United States has a far greater participation in league activities than the average American realizes. Many prominent Americans in official or unofficial life are members of the non-political committees of the League dealing with health, social, economic, opium and financial problems. The new Assistant Secretary of State, Henry F. Grady, is chairman of the economic committee. There are permanent government delegates to the League's sister organization, the International Labor Office, and an American, John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire, is its director. The United States maintains a diplomatic staff at Geneva to observe League activities.

If the meetings of these non-political committees can no longer be held in Geneva, then there is a possibility some of them may be held in the United States. More than one one official here is giving it thought.

It would be in line with the warm note the governmentt sent the secretary-general of the League only a few months ago, promising greater collaboration in its non-political work and virtually requesting the League to expand its endeavors. The note said: "The League . . . has been responsible for the development of mutual exchange and discussion of ideas and methods to a greater extent and in more fields of humanitarian and scientific endeavor than any other organization in history. The United States government is keenly aware of the value of this type of general interchange and desires to see it extended. . . .

"The United States government looks forward to the development and expansion of the League's machinery for dealing with the problems in those fields and to the participation by all nations in active efforts to solve them. . . . It will continue to collaborate in those activities and will consider in a sympathetic spirit means of making its collaboration more effective."

Expansion Planned

Encouraged by the American attitude, the League Council had appointed a special committee to study the expansion of non-political activities. The committee was to have reported to this month's council meeting, which now may not be held.

Britain, France and Poland, preoccupied with the war, are expected to lessen their participation in the League. Soviet Russia has become lukewarm toward Geneva since the retirement of Maxim Litvinov, former Commissar for Foreign Affairs. The small neutral states are distrustful of the political and military obligations in the covenant and in recent months have absolved themselves of these bonds. They are beginning to look at the League with somewhat the same eyes as the United States—a very useful organization for carrying on non-political work.

Radio Judges A 'Temperate' War Coverage

SEP 12 1939

3 Major Chains Agree to Avoid 'Undue Excitement' And Use Mature Judgment

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP).—Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, announced tonight that three major radio chains had reached an agreement on conduct of broadcasting during the war in Europe.

Among the provisions were these:

Efforts will be made to avoid "Horror, suspense and undue excitement."

Broadcasters will try to be "temperate, responsible and mature in selecting the manner in which they make the facts of war and its attendant circumstances known to the public."

Radio audiences should be clearly informed whether news is censored.

Broadcasts from Europe should be by Americans as far as possible.

News broadcasts will remain in strict control of the broadcaster regardless of whether sponsored or unsponsored.

Mr. Miller said the agreement was reached in New York last Thursday but had not been made public until James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, had been informed of it.

He added that while the agreement applied primarily to the nation-wide networks, the general principles involved would be presented to the N. A. B. directors at a meeting in Chicago Wednesday.

In a statement, Mr. Fly expressed the opinion that radio "by and large" rendered a public service by broadcasting news and comment about the war.

He added that all parties at today's conference of F. C. C. and networks officials agreed to continue to give consideration "to the most effective means of assuring broadcast operations to promote the public interest."

30.24 3259

OFFICIAL EYES IN WAR ZONES

SEP 12 1939

Army and Navy Observers Report on Conflict.

DAILY SUMMARY PREPARED

Eleven Military Attaches Are in European Posts.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt, the army and the navy are being supplied with detailed information on the progress of the European conflict by a far-flung official reporting system.

Reports from more than threescore military and naval attaches on duty in warring or key neutral countries reach the War and Navy Departments quickly by cable and radio and in greater detail via diplomatic mail pouches.

From a military intelligence officer, Col. John Magruder, the President received a daily summary until he left for a week end visit to Hyde Park. This supplemented State Department and press reports and his own direct telephone contacts with American envoys abroad.

On a big map of Poland in the Chief Executive's oval office, Col. Magruder has pictured by means of colored pins and ribbons the progress of the German campaign.

Where Attaches Are Stationed.

Of the army's 33 military attaches in foreign posts, 11 are in belligerent countries and seven in capitals of bordering nuetral nations.

The navy's official intelligence system is as far reaching. Both are far better prepared than at the outbreak of the world war to advise on strategy and to forward technical reports invaluable to the army and navy high commands.

Major William H. Colbern, attache for Poland, is in much the hottest spot of any of the American observers abroad because of the speedy German advance to Warsaw. He left Warsaw Wednesday night when the capital was almost within German artillery range and was threatened by Nazi motorized columns.

A forty-four-year-old Missourian, Major Colbern was a student in the Polish Cavalry School in 1932-33.

With the Germans are two assistant attaches, Majors Percy G. Black and Arthur W. Vanaman. To take the post of Chief Military Attache and Attache for Air, Col. Bernard A. Peyton sailed from New York two days before the war started. At Berlin likewise are Commander Albert E. Schrader and five assistant naval observers.

Six Observers in Paris.

In Paris the army has Col. Horace H. Fuller and two assistants, and in London Lieut.-Col. Bradford G. Chynoweth and three assistants, while the navy has six observers in Pairs and five in London.

Col. Sherman Miles, soon to be a brigadier general, sailed August 30 to take charge of the London military staff.

The army likewise has one or more observers in Italy, Russia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Belgium, Rumania and Turkey.

When war is in progress, the attaches may get to the front but only under supervision. Their work often is facilitated, however, in recognition of the hospitality extended neutral official observers stationed in the United States.

Received in Washington, their dispatches are studied by officials of the army's "G-2" or military intelligence section, or by the navy's intelligence office.

Both information centers are staffed by veterans. Col. E. R. Warner McCabe, G-2 chief, twice was attache in Rome. Lieut.-Col. Truman Smith, an assistant, recently returned from Berlin.

Rear Admiral Walter S. Anderson recently took charge of the naval intelligence office.

WAR NATIONS UNABLE TO GET LOANS IN U. S.

SEP 12 1939

Treasury Authorities Give Their Opinion of Johnson and Neutrality Acts.

APPLY TO BRITISH COLONIES

Government Alone Could Lend Money, but This Has Not Been Considered.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (A. P.).—Treasury experts said today that the neutrality and Johnson acts forbade any of Europe's warring countries from borrowing any money from any individuals or firms in this country.

The ban also applies to Canada and the other British dominions or possessions which have entered the war.

Both acts prohibit the purchase by "any person within the United States" of the securities of a belligerent nation, in the case of the neutrality act, or of a defaulter on debts arising from the world war, in the case of the Johnson act.

Unofficially, experts interpret this to mean that the United States Government, or one of its corporations, could make such loans, but they indicate strongly that no such loans have been considered.

Only One Exception.

The only exception from the prohibitions is the one invoked last week by President Roosevelt which permits continuation of "normal peace-time commercial transactions." A committee of State, Treasury and Commerce department officials has been set up to determine what comes under this exception.

The Johnson act was passed in 1934 to prevent European countries which had defaulted on their war debts from borrowing more money in this country until they got their old debts in good standing. The latest total of principal and interest owed by European governments to the Treasury is $14,473,478,027. Only peaceful Finland is in good standing.

Other Point Disputed.

Neither act makes any clear definition of how far an English factory, for instance, might borrow in this country, although the English Government itself is banned. Both acts say the ban applies to the Government, sub-division or agent of the Government affected by the prohibition. Some experts have speculated, for instance, that a private English or Canadian firm could borrow money in this country if it could prove it was not an agent of its government. Other experts dispute this loophole interpretation.

The neutrality act not only forbids the purchase of the securities of a warring nation, but also forbids the sale or exchange of existing securities of the belligerent.

LONDON HOLDS TO MEMORIES OF WORLD WAR

"Awntie Rose" Was Given 15 Days For Birth Of Son

Now He's Soldier, She Is Caring For His Child

SEP 12 1939

By Albert W. Wilson

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—German air raiders over England—sand bags piled high in London streets—3,000,000 children, aged persons and invalids moved out of cities—the stock exchange closed—gasoline restricted to essentials—a rush of weddings at registry offices.

And here's a letter from "Awntie Rose" saying her smooth-faced boy has been called up, and that she will take care of his new-born infant while his wife is working. But by now that infant may be taken from her, for its grandmother is strong enough to work.

Was Charwoman

It wasn't very long ago when she was the charwoman who did our housework in London.

Over a cup of tea in the kitchen, she was persuaded easily to talk of air raids, food restrictions and other memories of the last war. In recent years, most British aristocrats considered it bad form to "fight over the last war" in the parlor. But right up to the outbreak of the present war, the last one was the favorite subject of conversation of the laboring and servant class. Constant repetition in pubs and homes kept their memories vivid, and perhaps no people ever were drawn into another war so reluctantly.

During the World War, "Awntie Rose" worked ten to twelve hours daily, with no Sundays or holidays off, in a munitions factory. Her husband was at the front when she knew she was to have a baby. The factory health officer refused to give her time off. But finally, as her strength and efficiency waned, she was allowed just fifteen days to bring into the world the boy who now is going to another war.

Wore Castoffs

That boy for years wore my cast-off shirts and ties, and his mother always took home to him the fat grease from our joint of lamb. Even during peace time, those drippings were his "butter"—spread thick on bread for his evening meal.

The charwoman who preceded "Awntie Rose" was surprised to find our dog was fed a half pound of meat every day.

"Why, and that's all we could get for ourselves for a whole week's time on our ration cards," she said. "And with never a bit of fat on it, what's more."

There were endless tales of air raid experiences — Zeppelins and planes killed nearly 1,400 and wounded 3,000 in England, about half of them in London. Just twenty-two years ago this fall, the worst attacks came. There were five night raids the last week of September, and 1917's death toll alone reached 697.

Zeppelins Raided Often

The last war was nine months old before the first Zep circled over England. For two years, they made twice as many raids as planes. But the British were shooting down too many; the planes were proving more effective. In the last year of war, plane raids were far more frequent.

Despite all the new defense measures, London again will depend greatly on its underground railway system for shelters. The stations are not only cleaner, more commodious and pleasant than those of New York, Paris and other cities, but are far deeper. Nearly all are reached by long escalators and elevators.

But many persons may be caught again aboard the big green busses whose routes interlace London. And when the busses with lights out halt under a tree or building there probably will be women who disobey the rule to sit quiet. Like some of those in the last war, they'll run all the way home—sometimes two miles or more—to see if a baby is all right.

AIR BOMBINGS NOTABLY FEW

Politics Seems to Explain War Phenomenon.

BOTH SIDES WITHHOLD RAIDS

Hitler May Be Figuring on Plea for a Quick Peace.

DEVON-ESSEX

SEP 12 1939

By Associated Press

What appears to be the logical answer to the strangely pacific "war in the air" in western Europe has cropped out in the eight days since France and Great Britain entered the conflict. On both German and British sides, the reason probably is as much political as military. As for the French, the considerations are probably entirely military.

War in the air certainly is going on. Reconnaissance, attack and pursuit planes are aloft and fighting, day and night. But, explosive-laden bombers on long-range missions are conspicuous by their almost complete absence.

For years, the world has waited for the "next war" to begin with mass bombing raids against "military objectives" in and around great cities—as, indeed, the present war did, in Poland. Polish cities are deeply gouged and scarred by aerial bombs.

Germany May Ask Peace.

But t was not Warsaw that men thought of when they pictured the horrors of aerial warfare in a new European conflict. It was London, Berlin and Paris—and Rome too, if Italy were drawn in.

Up to the moment the capitals of Germany, France and England have not been touched by bombs from enemy planes. Why?

From Germany's standpoint, the war at the West Wall has scarcely been mentioned in the official communiques. A bombing raid on war materials manufacturing plants, railroads and highways, docks and military airdromes—all legitimate "military objectives"—in or around Paris or London would bring immediate reprisals in kind. That would bring home to the German people that an enemy was striking in the west.

The German High Command apparently wants to liquidate the Polish campaign quickly at the front and in the minds of the German people. If, as has been rumored, Germany intends to declare itself for peace after, and if, Poland is subdued, a restraining hand on the bombing squadrons meanwhile might put Adolf Hitler in a more strategic position politically than if London and Paris had felt the ravages of bombs.

England Not Fighting a Populace.

As for England, the leaflet "raids" over Germany could hardly go hand in hand with bombing raids. The British profess their friendship for the German people and hope for results from a populace running to shelter.

Nor can Germany, except at the expense of inconsistency express a sympathetic understanding of France's position while German bombs are exploding on French soil far behind the front lines.

On the military side, Germany is no more anxious than Great Britain or France to have its airdromes, Railroads, factories and highways become targets for enemy bombs.

To be considered, however, is the fact that "military objectives" in Great Britain are far more vulnerable than Germany's. So are those in France. Almost since the Nazis came to power in Germany, defensive machinery against air raids have been in the making. It was part and parcel of the tremendous German upsurge in air power.

War materials factories are scattered and hidden. Military airdromes are without easily distinguishable paved runways. Hangars are underground. Anti-aircraft defense has been brought to a high point of perfection.

Allies More Vulnerable.

The same steps were taken in Great Britain and France, but much later. The arts of dispersion and camouflage are not so widely practiced. Great Britain is only now recognizing the weakness of the "shadow factory" system of manufacture, wherein damage to one plant would halt the entire flow of one type of war implement, and is trying to correct it.

Will the "lightning war" from the air, advocated by the famous Italian tactician, Gen. Douhet, come eventually in this conflict? That will depend on a great many factors, political and military.

Poison gas was used in the first world war despite international agreement barring its use. All that military observers will commit themselves to is the statement, "any nation at war, driven to the wall and desperate, will stop at nothing in an effort to snatch victory from defeat."

The lone exception to the absence of long-range bombing raids in Western Europe have been British flights to military objectives near the North Sea outlet of the Kiel Canal, Germany has forgone, as yet, retaliatory visits to England.

BRITAIN PICTURED BADLY PREPARED

Military Expert, in Service Magazine, Sees Lack of Officers

SEP 12 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP).—An English military expert's declaration that his country rarely has been less well prepared for war appears in Army Ordinance, service magazine pubished here.

In an article written just before Great Britain went to war with Germany, Major General J. F. C. Fuller, author and retired army officer, says:

"Though in England the output of weapons is rapidly becoming gigantic, my conviction is that seldom in her history has she been less well prepared for war, not only because trained personnel to use the bulk of these weapons is lacking, but because her traditional peace policy is antagonistic to a rapid changeover to a war policy of twentieth-century form."

Lack of Officers

Within a year, says General Fuller, the British regular army, territorials (national guard) and militiamen (conscripts) were to have numbered 1,000,000 men.

(Undoubtedly, the rate of increase has been accelerated by the declaration of war since General Fuller wrote his article.)

"On paper," he continues, "this looks prodigious but though it is, it is simultaneously fictitious, because practically the whole of the increase in men is minus officers.

"Such an army may be good enough for the Maginot Line, though I doubt it, but for field operations it is obviously impossible."

30.24-3261

30.24 3261

WASHFM SEPT. 11-

THOUGH EXPENDITURES FOR THE AIR FORCE ROSE FROM $655,000,000 IN 1938 TO $1,025,000,000 IN 1939, HE SAYS, ITS PERSONNEL INCREASE WAS ONLY 22,000 MEN. NAVY EXPENDITURES ROSE FROM $639,000,000 TO $745,000,000, WHILE PERSONNEL INCREASED BY 14,000; ARMY OUTLAYS, $575,000,000 TO $865,000,000.

TODAY, GENERAL FULLER SAYS, THE ENGLISH AND PRUSSIAN POLITICAL SYSTEMS "ARE IN A CLINCH" IN EUROPE.

"THE FIRST X X X WAS BASED ON THE ACCUMULATION OF CREDIT WHICH IN PEACE TIME FINANCED TRADE AND DURING WAR BROUGHT UP ALLIES--VIRTUAL MERCENARIES WHO FOUGHT ENGLAND'S BATTLES FOR HER. THE PRUSSIAN SYSTEM SPRANG FROM THE IDEA OF CONSCRIPTION AND, AFTER THE FALL OF NAPOLEON, WAS DEVELOPED BY PRUSSIA INTO THE IDEA OF A NATION-IN-ARMS X X X."

THOUGH LONG SUCCESSFUL IN HER POLICY, ENGLAND WAS EXHAUSTED FINANCIALLY BY THE WORLD WAR, FULLER SAYS, AND THE POST-WAR YEARS DID NOT REESTABLISH HER FINANCIAL PREEMINENCE.

SO, HE ADDS, FACE TO FACE WITH A RESURGENT GERMANY, "SHE WAS IN FACT IN A FAR WORSE POSITION THAN THE ONE IN WHICH SHE FOUND HERSELF IN AUGUST, 1914."

MD14SAESAM

A169

ADD CHRONOLOGICAL UNDATED SHIPS SUNK

SEPT. 11--BRITISH FREIGHTER BLAIRLOGIE, 4,425 TONS, TORPEDOED OFF IRISH COAST. CREW OF 32 SAVED BY UNITED STATES LINER AMERICAN SHIPPER.

KR233PED

SEP 12 1939

A82

ADD CHRONOLOGICAL UNDATED SHIPS SUNK

SEPT. 11--FIRBY (BR) 4,640 GROSS TONS, REPORTED TORPEDOED ABOUT 250 MILES NORTHWEST OF HEBRIDES ISLANDS.

SEPT. 11--GALTAVON (BR)--24 SURVIVORS ARRIVED AT HORTA, THE AZORES, ABOARD SWEDISH SHIP CASTOR.

FD856PED

SEP 12 1939

American Steamer Searched By German Submarine Crew

Master Of Freighter Stopped Off Irish Coast Reports Threat To Fire On Ships Failing To Halt

[By the Associated Press]

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 11—A high official of the Waterman Steamship Corporation said tonight its steamer, Wacosta, had been halted for three hours off the Irish coast by a German submarine and thoroughly searched befor being allowed to proceed on her voyage from Glasgow to New York.

Capt. N. Nicholson, executive vice-president of the company, said Capt. G. Self, of the Wacosta, advised in a cablegram that the submarine crew made certain the ship, a freighter, carried no contraband cargo before she was released.

He said Captain Self advised the company, an American concern which has its headquarters here, that the submarine's commander warned that in the future all American vessels which do not obey orders from German submarines to halt "would be fired upon."

The Waterman Company reported the incident, which occurred Saturday, to the United States Maritime Commission and the State Department.

The Wacosta was equipped to accommodate eight passengers, but it was believed here she carried more than that number due to heavy demand for passage by refugees from Europe.

Twenty-seven ships are in the Waterman Company's transatlantic service.

Reports Seizure By Britain

Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 11 (AP)—Archie S. Mills, manager of the Columbia Naval Stores Company here, said today he had been advised 600 barrels of rosin consigned to Hamburg aboard the Waterman steamship Warrior had been seized as contraband by the British Government in London.

Mills said the cargo was believed covered by war-risk insurance. The Warrior sailed from here about a month ago for United Kingdom and German ports via Mobile.

SEP 12 1939

Three More Survivors Of Athenia Are Found

Long Island Man Is Located in a Glasgow Home

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP).—The State Department announced today the names of three additional survivors of the sunken liner Athenia.

American Minister John Cudahy at Dublin cabled that Daniel Wilkes, of 4401 Skillman Avenue, Sunnyside, Long Island City, was in a private home in Glasgow, where his father, Dr. E. T. Wilkes, had joined him.

The Consul General at Glasgow reported that Mrs. Ellen Hutchinson, wife of William Hutchinson, of Cambridge, Mass., had been located in Glasgow.

The Consul at Le Havre, France, reported that John Youngquist, of Minneapolis, was there.

SEP 12 1939

C122PX

PX OUT

ALTOONA,PA.,SEPT 11-(AP)-THOMAS HOGG, AN EMPLOYE OF THE PENN-SYLVANIA RAILROAD, RECEIVED WORD TODAY FROM THE CUNARD WHITE STAR LINE HIS WIFE, MRS. MARGARET HOGG, 53, A PASSENGER ON THE ILL-FATED LINER ATHENIA, IS REPORTED "AMONG THE MISSING."

MRS. HOGG LEFT ALTOONA LAST JUNE TO VISIT A SISTER IN EDINBURG, SCOTLAND, AND CABLED HER FAMILY SHE WAS LEAVING ON THE ATHENIA.

SHE WAS A BRITISH CITIZEN BUT HAD LIVED IN ALTOONA WITH HER FAMILY SINCE 1924.

1939

BK OUT

BOSTON,SEPT.11-(AP)-THE FISHING SCHOONER FRANCES C. DENENY, DOCKING AT THE FISH PIER TODAY, REPORTED SIGHTING AN UNIDENTIFIED SUBMARINE ON GEORGES BANKS--ABOUT 30 MILES EAST OF CAPE COD--LAST WEDNESDAY.

DECLARING SUBMARINES NEVER BEFORE HAD BEEN SEEN ON THE FISHING GROUNDS, VETERAN FISHERMEN SAID THE SUBMERSIBLE WAS SIGHTED AT 9 A.M. AND AGAIN TWO HOURS LATER. THEY SAID THERE WERE MANY SHOALS ON THE GEORGES WHICH WOULD MAKE UNDER WATER TRAVEL OF A SUBMARINE HAZARDOUS.

SEP 12 1939

A SUBMARINE SIGHTED IN NANTUCKET SOUND BY THE POLLOCK RIP LIGHTSHIP ON THURSDAY WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN AN AMERICAN CRAFT.

NAVY OFFICIALS SAID NO AMERICAN UNDERSEA CRAFT ON TRIAL OFF THE NEW ENGLAND COAST WOULD NORMALLY BE OPERATED ON GEORGES BANKS.

ES11AED NM

FOLO NEW YORK--TORPEDOING

PORTLAND,ME.,SEPT.11-(AP)-THE BRITISH FREIGHTER BLAIRLOGIE, REPORTED TORPEDOED TODAY OFF THE IRISH COAST, SAILED FROM PORTLAND AUG.25 WITH 7,268 TONS OF SCRAP IRON.

HER DESTINATION WAS LAND'S END, ENGLAND, WHERE SHE WAS TO HAVE AWAITED FURTHER ORDERS. PART OF HER CARGO WAS TAKEN ON AT BOSTON BEFORE COMING HERE.

SEP 12 1939

THE BLAIRLOGIE WAS IN COMMAND OF CAPT.D.B.MAC ALPINE.

ES304PED NM

C27PX

PX OUT

ATTN CAN PRESS

SEP 12 1939

PHILADELPHIA,SEPT 11-(AP)-ENTRY OF CANADA INTO THE WAR HAS CAUSED THE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER VESTLAND TO CANCEL ITS SAILING FOR ST.JOHNS, NEWS BRUNSWICK.

THE VESTLAND, LOADED WITH COAL, WAS READY TO LEAVE YESTERDAY BUT THE CAPTAIN SAID "IT'S TOO RISKY CARRYING COAL TO A BELLIGERENT COUNTRY WITH ALL THOSE SUBS LOSSES."

RH1027AED NM

A165WX

SHIPS ROUNDUP

SEP 12 1939

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 11-(AP)-REPORTS THAT AN AMERICAN SHIP HAD BEEN STOPPED BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE AND THAT GOODS ON ANOTHER AMERICAN VESSEL HAD BEEN SEIZED BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT DREW THE ATTENTION OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT TONIGHT.

OFFICIALS DECLINED COMMENT, PENDING REPORTS FROM THIS NATION'S EMBASSIES IN THE COUNTRIES INVOLVED, BUT THEY INDICATED THAT THE INCIDENTS WOULD RECEIVE THE CLOSEST STUDY.

CAPT.N.NICHOLSON, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT OF THE WATERMAN STEAMSHIP CORPORATION, SAID ITS STEAMER, WACOSTA, HAD BEEN HALTED SATURDAY FOR THREE HOURS OFF THE IRISH COAST BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE AND SEARCHED THOROUGHLY BEFORE BEING ALLOWED TO PROCEED ON HER VOYAGE FROM GLASGOW TO NEW YORK.

HE SAID THAT THE MASTER OF THE SHIP, CAPT.G.SELF, ADVISED IN A CABLEGRAM THAT THE SUBMARINE CREW SATISFIED ITSELF THAT THE SHIP, A FREIGHTER, CARRIED NO CONTRABAND. HE ADDED THE

1939

A117EX

BX OUT

BOSTON,SEPT.11-(AP)-THE FISHING SCHOONER FRANCES C. DENEHY, DOCKING AT THE FISH PIER TODAY, REPORTED SIGHTING AN UNIDENTIFIED SUBMARINE ON GEORGES BANKS--ABOUT 90 MILES EAST OF CAPE COD--LAST WEDNESDAY.

DECLARING SUBMARINES NEVER BEFORE HAD BEEN SEEN ON THE FISHING GROUNDS, VETERAN FISHERMEN SAID THE SUBMERSIBLE WAS SIGHTED AT 9 A.M. AND AGAIN TWO HOURS LATER. THEY SAID THERE WERE MANY SHOALS ON THE GEORGES WHICH WOULD MAKE UNDER WATER TRAVEL OF A SUBMARINE HAZARDOUS.

SEP 121939

A SUBMARINE SIGHTED IN NANTUCKET SOUND BY THE POLLOCK RIP LIGHTSHIP ON THURSDAY WAS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN AN AMERICAN CRAFT.

NAVY OFFICIALS SAID NO AMERICAN UNDERSEA CRAFT ON TRIAL OFF THE NEW ENGLAND COAST WOULD NORMALLY BE OPERATED ON GEORGES BANKS.

ES11AED NM

FOLO NEW YORK--TORPEDOING

PORTLAND,ME.,SEPT.11-(AP)-THE BRITISH FREIGHTER BLAIRLOGIE, REPORTED TORPEDOED TODAY OFF THE IRISH COAST, SAILED FROM PORTLAND AUG.25 WITH 7,268 TONS OF SCRAP IRON.

HER DESTINATION WAS LAND'S END, ENGLAND, WHERE SHE WAS TO HAVE AWAITED FURTHER ORDERS. PART OF HER CARGO WAS TAKEN ON AT BOSTON BEFORE COMING HERE.

SEP 121939

THE BLAIRLOGIE WAS IN COMMAND OF CAPT.D.B.MAC ALPINE.

ES304PED NM

C27PX

FX OUT

ATTN CAN PRESS

SEP 121939

PHILADELPHIA,SEPT 11-(AP)-ENTRY OF CANADA INTO THE WAR HAS CAUSED THE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER VESTLAND TO CANCEL ITS SAILING FOR ST.JOHNS, NEWS BRUNSWICK.

THE VESTLAND, LOADED WITH COAL, WAS READY TO LEAVE YESTERDAY BUT THE CAPTAIN SAID "IT'S TOO RISKY CARRYING COAL TO A BELLIGERENT COUNTRY WITH ALL THOSE SUBS LOSSES."

RH1027AED NM

A165WX

SHIPS ROUNDUP

SEP 121939

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 11-(AP)-REPORTS THAT AN AMERICAN SHIP HAD BEEN STOPPED BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE AND THAT GOODS ON ANOTHER AMERICAN VESSEL HAD BEEN SEIZED BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT DREW THE ATTENTION OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT TONIGHT.

OFFICIALS DECLINED COMMENT, PENDING REPORTS FROM THIS NATION'S EMBASSIES IN THE COUNTRIES INVOLVED, BUT THEY INDICATED THAT THE INCIDENTS WOULD RECEIVE THE CLOSEST STUDY.

CAPT.N.NICHOLSON, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT OF THE WATERMAN STEAMSHIP CORPORATION, SAID ITS STEAMER, WACOSTA, HAD BEEN HALTED SATURDAY FOR THREE HOURS OFF THE IRISH COAST BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE AND SEARCHED THOROUGHLY BEFORE BEING ALLOWED TO PROCEED ON HER VOYAGE FROM GLASGOW TO NEW YORK.

HE SAID THAT THE MASTER OF THE SHIP, CAPT.G.SELF, ADVISED IN A CABLEGRAM THAT THE SUBMARINE CREW SATISFIED ITSELF THAT THE SHIP, A FREIGHTER, CARRIED NO CONTRABAND. HE ADDED THE

30.24-3263 30.24 3263

SUBMARINE'S COMMANDER WARNED THAT IN THE FUTURE ALL AMERICAN VESSELS WHICH DID NOT OBEY ORDERS FROM GERMAN SUBMARINES TO HALT "WOULD BE FIRED UPON."

ARCHIE S.MILLS, MANAGER OF THE COLUMBIA NAVAL STORES COMPANY, IN PENSACOLA,FLA., ALSO REPORTED THAT HE HAD BEEN ADVISED THAT 600 BARRELS OF ROSIN CONSIGNED TO HAMBURG ABOARD ANOTHER WATERMAN STEAMSHIP, THE WARRIOR, HAD BEEN SEIZED AS CONTRABAND BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT IN LONDON.

MILLS SAID HE BELIEVED THE CARGO WAS COVERED BY WAR RISK INSURANCE. THE WARRIOR SAILED FROM PENSACOLA ABOUT A MONTH AGO FOR UNITED KINGDOM AND GERMAN PORTS, VIA MOBILE.

FROM BERLIN, MEANWHILE, CAME REPORTS FROM INFORMED QUARTERS THAT GERMAN SUBMARINES WOULD SINK ANY SHIP ATTEMPTING TO CARRY TO ENGLAND ANY ARTICLES ON BRITAIN'S CONTRABAND LIST. THE SUBMARINES, IT WAS ADDED, WOULD ALWAYS PROCEED STRICTLY ACCORDING TO INTERNATIONALLY ACCEPTED RULES.

"WHAT THEY TRY TO CUT US OFF FROM, WE WILL IN TURN TRY TO PREVENT REACHING ENGLAND," SAID ONE OFFICIAL, RECALLING BRITAIN'S ANNOUNCEMENT LAST WEEK OF AN EXTENSIVE LIST OF ARTICLES IT WOULD REGARD AS CONTRABAND OF WAR. SEP 12 1939

A166WX

THE GERMAN PRESS DIRECTED ITS ATTENTION ESPECIALLY TO THE BRITISH BLOCKADE INTENTIONS. ACCORDING TO NACHTAUSGABE, "GERMANY DURING THE NEXT ENSUING DAYS WILL PUBLISH HER OWN CONTRABAND LIST, PLACING FOODSTUFFS THEREON BECAUSE OF BRITAIN'S SIMILAR ACTION."

"IN OTHER WORDS," THE PAPER CONTINUED, "WE WILL DECLARE THAT WE WILL ATTEMPT WITH ALL MEANS AT OUR DISPOSAL TO PREVENT IMPORTATION OF ESSENTIAL GOODS AND FOODS INTO ENGLAND EVEN BY WAY OF NEUTRAL STATES. IN NO OTHER WAY CAN THE FLAGRANT VIOLATION OF THE LAW WHICH ENGLAND COMMITS BY PRESSURE UPON NEUTRALS BE COMBATTED."

EXPERTS ON INTERNATIONAL LAW HERE SAID THAT A BELLIGERENT HAS A LEGAL RIGHT TO SINK A NEUTRAL VESSEL WHICH IS CARRYING ABSOLUTE CONTRABAND. SUCH CONTRABAND CONSISTS OF WAR MATERIALS, AS DISTINGUISHED FROM CONDITIONAL CONTRABAND, WHICH INCLUDES ARTICLES SUCH AS FOOD. SEP 12 1939

THE EXPERTS POINTED OUT, HOWEVER, THAT BEFORE SUCH A SHIP IS SUNK, THE ENEMY WARSHIP IS REQUIRED TO GIVE THE CREW WARNING IN TIME FOR IT TO ABANDON SHIP. THEY ALSO POINTED OUT THAT ANY AMERICAN SHIPS CARRYING ABSOLUTE CONTRABAND WOULD BE VIOLATING THIS COUNTRY'S EMBARGO, IMPOSED UNDER THE NEUTRALITY ACT, AGAINST THE SHIPPING OF ARMS, AMMUNITION AND IMPLEMENTS OF WAR.

IF THE SHIP IS CARRYING CONDITIONAL CONTRABAND, THE INTERNATIONAL LAW EXPERTS SAY, IT CANNOT BE SUNK LEGALLY, BUT IT CAN BE STOPPED AND ITS CARGO DESTROYED OR SEIZED. IN SUCH A CASE, THE CONTRABAND MUST BE PAID FOR BY THE POWER SEIZING OR DESTROYING IT.

ADD GERMANY

A137 SEP 12 193

LONDON--SECOND ADD SECOND NIGHT LEAD BRITISH X X X FRANCE WERE GIVEN.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF BRITISH TROOP ACTIVITIES ON THE CONTINENT CAME AS IF IN ANSWER TO WHAT NEUTRAL OBSERVERS SAID WAS WIDESPREAD ANXIETY AMONG THE PEOPLE AT HOME TO "GET ON WITH IT." ALTHOUGH THEY HAVE BEEN IMPRESSED BY REPEATED OFFICIAL DECLARATIONS THAT BRITAIN MUST SEE THE WAR THROUGH EVEN IF IT TAKES THREE YEARS OR MORE, THERE

1939

HAS BEEN EVIDENCE THAT THE PEOPLE WANTED ACTION.

THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION, COMMENTING ON FIELD MARSHAL WILHELM GOERING'S SPEECH TO GERMAN MUNITIONS WORKERS SATURDAY, SAID HITLER HAS MADE MANY PROMISES TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES, NONE OF THEM HAS BEEN KEPT, AND THEREFORE GREAT BRITAIN IS JUSTIFIED IN REQUIRING THAT PEACE SHOULD BE CONCLUDED WITH A GERMAN GOVERNMENT "WHOSE WORD MAY BE TRUSTED."

GOERING'S ADDRESS WAS INTERPRETED HERE AS A PEACE-FEELER. BRITAIN'S DETERMINATION TO SEE THE WAR THROUGH ALSO WAS VOICED BY ANTHONY EDEN, FORMER FOREIGN SECRETARY NOW IN THE WAR CABINET AS DOMINIONS SECRETARY, WHO DECLARED IN AN ADDRESS LAST NIGHT "THERE CAN BE NO LASTING PEACE UNTIL NAZIISM, AND ALL THAT IT STANDS FOR I OPPRESSION, CRUELTY AND BROKEN FAITH, IS BANISHED FROM THE EARTH."

AT THE CLOSE ETC., FOURTH GRAPH PREVIOUS.

FD1132PED SFP 12 1939

MEN APPOINTED TO IMPORTANT MILITARY POSTS IN THE 1937 SHAKEUP OF THE HIGH ARMY COMMAND.

AT THE CLOSE X X X 4TH GRAF AS BEFORE.

AISA

LONDON--FIRST ADD CANADA WAR SEPARATE X X X COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS."

SFP 12 1939

THE MINISTRY DECLARED "WHILE AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND HAVE TO RELY ON THE UNITED KINGDOM FOR EXTERNAL DEFENSE AGAINST AGGRESSION, THE SAME DOES NOT APPLY SO FULLY TO CANADA.

"THE MONROE DOCTRINE AS EXTENDED OR INTERPRETED BY THE STATEMENT MADE LAST YEAR AT KINGSTON BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ON THE INTEREST OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE PRESERVATION OF THE INTEGRITY OF CANADA FROM INVASION PLACES CANADA IN A SPECIAL POSITION."

(PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, IN AN ADDRESS AT KINGSTON, ONT., ON AUGUST 18, 1938, ASSERTED AMERICANS WOULD NOT STAND "IDLY BY" IF DOMINATION OF CANADIAN SOIL WERE THREATENED BY A FOREIGN AGGRESSOR.

JM1214AED

A150

LONDON--THIRD ADD SECOND MIGHT LEAD BRITISH X X X THE EARTH."

IN CONNECTION WITH THE LANDING OF BRITISH TROOPS IN FRANCE AND THEIR PARTICIPATION IN THE WESTERN FRONT OFFENSIVE, IT WAS RECALLED THE LONDON GAZETTE RECENTLY PUBLISHED THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT LORD GORT WAS APPOINTED COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE. SFP 12 1939

LORD GORT, WHOSE NICKNAME IS TIGER, IS 53 YEARS OLD, A LIEUTENANT GENERAL AND CHIEF OF THE IMPERIAL STAFF.

DURING THE WORLD WAR, HE WAS WOUNDED THREE TIMES, DECORATED THREE TIMES AND CITED IN DISPATCHES NINE TIMES. HE WAS ONE OF THE YOUNGER

SIXTH 1253 STARES THE QUOTE WAR EFFORT UNQUOTE AT HOME HAS BROUGHT MANY RESTRICTIONS ON THE ORDINARY CITIZEN AND ON BUSINESS STOP THE BIG STORES AND LITTLE SHOPS ALL HAVE BEEN AFFECTED STOP THEY TRY TO MAINTAIN QUOTE BUSINESS AS USUAL UNQUOTE BUT FEW ARE ABLE TO DO SO PARAGRAPH THOSE DEALING IN GOODS AND MATERIALS REQUIRED FOR MILITARY AND CIVIL DEFENSE MEASURES ARE DOING THE MOST BUSINESS PARAGRAPH AS THE WAR ENTERED ITS SECOND WEEK ITS EFFECTS ON THE BRITISH STILL WERE CONFINED CHIEFLY TO

SFP 12 1939

30.24-3265

30.24 3265

SACRIFICES AT HOME PARAGRAPH THE PUBLIC WAS TOLD TO PREPARE FOR STILL MORE FOR THE CABINET DECIDED TO PLAN ON AT LEAST A THREE YEAR WAR PARAGRAPH BRITAIN WAS THINKING AGAIN ABOUT THE LAST UNTIL YES MARK

LONDON, SEPT 11-(AP)-SIR NOTON BARCLAY, CHAIRMAN OF LONDON'S EMERGENCY COMMITTEE, APPEALED TONIGHT TO DRIVERS TO USE THEIR CARS AS LITTLE AS POSSIBLE AT NIGHT AND WARNED THOSE WHO WALK: "IT IS UP TO THE PEDESTRIAN TO PROTECT HIMSELF." SEP 12 1939

THE NUMBER OF ACCIDENTS AND SEVERAL FATALITIES HAVE LED TO PLEAS FOR RELAXATION OF BLACKOUT RESTRICTIONS.

FD700PED

ASS

-9-

COMMUNIQUE SEP 12 1939

PARIS,SEPT.11-(AP)-COMMUNIQUE NO.15 FOR THE MORNING OF SEPT. 11, ISSUED BY THE WAR MINISTRY, SAID:

"THE NIGHT WAS CALM THROUGHOUT. OUR TROOPS WERE ABLE TO EFFECT A LOCAL ADVANCE." (END COMMUNIQUE)

WD640AED

BASEL-SEPT-11

A NUMBER OF FRENCH TROOPS FROM DIVISIONS WHICH REINFORCED THE ITALIAN FRONTIER BEFORE THE CRISIS BECAME WAR ARRIVED IN THE MACINOT ZONE, IT WAS REPORTED HERE. SEP 12 1939

THEY WERE TRAINED FORTRESS TROOPS WHO AS A ROUTINE MOVE PRIOR TO FRENCH GENERAL MOBILIZATION WERE SENT DOWN TO THE ITALIAN BORDER.

AS MOBILIZATION ROGRESSED THEY WERE RELIEVED BY NEWLY COMPLETED DIVISIONS AND SENT NORTHEAST.

FRENCH SOURCES DECLARED THE MOVEMENT IN NO WAY REDUCED OR INCREASED THE EFFECTIVE FIGHTING STRENGTH ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER BUT WAS A SIMPLE EXCHANGE.

FAMED ALPINE CHASSEURS REMAINED ON DUTY ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER WHERE THEY HAVE BEEN TRAINED HIGHLY AS SHOCK TROOPS FOR MOUNTAIN WORK.

FD913PED

A132

SECOND NIGHT LEAD CANADIAN SEP 12 1939

OTTAWA,ONT.,SEPT.11-(CANADIAN PRESS)-CANADA'S PARLIAMENT SPEEDILY PLACED A $100,000,000 WAR CHEST AT THE DOMINION'S DISPOSAL TONIGHT AFTER FORESTALLING AMENDMENTS THAT WOULD HAVE PREVENTED USE OF THE MONEY BY AN OVERSEAS EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN EUROPE'S WAR.

A FEW MINUTES AFTER THE COMMONS HAD GIVEN THE BILL THIRD AND FINAL READING, THE SENATE WAS CALLED TO THE UPPER HOUSE, WHERE IT PASSED THE APPROPRIATION MEASURE ON FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD READINGS IN SHORT ORDER.

THERE WAS ONLY ONE RIPPLE IN CANADA'S APPEARANCE OF UNANIMITY TO STAND BY GREAT BRITAIN.

SIX MEMBERS X X X ETC., 2ND GRAF NIGHT LEAD.

JM212AED

SIX MEMBERS OF COOPERATIVE COMMONWEALTH FEDERATION AND A GROUP OF 10 QUEBEC LIBERAL MEMBERS SOUGHT TO AMEND THE MONEY BILL TO PREVENT CANADIAN TROOPS GOING TO EUROPE BUT THE ATTEMPT WAS DEFEATED BY A 151-16 VOTE. SEP 12 1939

PRIME MINISTER MACKENZIE KING SAID THE HOUSE COULD ASSUME AN EXPEDI-

1939

TIONARY FORCE WAS NOT BEING CONSIDERED AT PRESENT. HE ADDED, HOWEVER, THAT ADOPTION OF THE AMENDMENT WOULD HALT THE GOVERNMENT FROM CARRYINGIOUT MEASURES OF AIR AND NAVAL COOPERATION WITH GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE. WHETHER AN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE WILL BE SENT OVERSEAS IS EXPECTED TO DEPEND UPON FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS.

CANADA OFFICIALLY ENTERED THE EUROPEAN WAR YESTERDAY. WORKING WITHOUT DELAY, REVENUE MINISTER J.L.ILSLEY INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE TODAY A BILL WHICH WOULD GIVE THE GOVERNMENT NOT MORE THAN $100,000,000 FOR WAR EXPENDITURES "IN OR BEYOND CANADA."

AN INDICATION THAT CANADA WAS PREPARING FOR ECONOMIC COOPERATION WITH THE ALLIES WAS SEEN IN A CLAUSE AUTHORIZING THE GOVERNMENT TO ACT AS THE AGENT FOR ANY BRITISH OR ALLIED COUNTRY FOR ANY PURPOSE DIRECTLY CONNECTED WITH THE WAR. THIS WOULD MAKE POSSIBLE THE PURCHASE OF MUNITIONS IN CANADA FOR OTHER GOVERNMENTS.

THE IMMEDIATE PROHIBITION OF ALL TRADING WITH THE ENEMEY DURING THE WAR AND THE VESTING OF ALL ENEMEY PROPERTY IN AN OFFICIAL CUSTODIAN WERE DECREED IN A SPECIAL ORDER IN COUNCIL PRESENTED TO THE HOUSE BY MACKENZIE KING. THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND A NEWLY-CREATED OFFICIAL, THE CUSTODIAN OF ENEMY PROPERTY, WILL ENFORCE THE NEW REGULATIONS.

SEP 12 1939

FD919PED

A133

NIGHT LEAD PANAMA

SEP 12 1939

PANAMA, SEPT. 11-(AP)-THE REPUBLIC OF PANAMA OFFICIALLY DECLARED HER NEUTRALITY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR TODAY IN A DECREE BY WHICH SHIPS OF BELLIGERENT POWERS WILL BE PROHIBITED FROM "SHUTTLING" BETWEEN THE CANAL ZONE AND PANAMANIAN WATERS DURING THE CONFLICT.

THE REPUBLIC DECLARED THAT SHIPS OF NATIONS AT WAR COULD NOT REMAIN IN TERRITORIAL WATERS DURING THE THREE-MONTH PERIOD USUALLQ ACCORDED UNDER INTERNATIONAL LAW, IF THE SHIPS ALREADY HAD BEEN IN CANAL ZONE WATERS UNDER UNITED STATES JURISDICTION FOR THREE MONTHS.

IT WAS EXPLAINED THE REGULATION WAS INTENDED TO PREVENT VESSELS FROM TAKING REFUGE IN PANAMA WATERS FOR THREE MONTHS, THEN PASSING TO CANAL ZONE WATERS FOR ANOTHER THREE MONTHS WITH THE LIKELIHOOD OF RETURNING TO PANAMANIAN WATERS IN AN INDEFINITE "SHUTTLE."

IN ANOTHER STEP TOWARD MAINTAINING NEUTRALITY, PANAMA ORDERED FOREIGNERS WITHIN HER BORDERS TO REGISTER WITH POLICE WITHIN 30 DAYS AND SUBSEQUENTLY KEEP THE AUTHORITIES INFORMED OF ANY CHANGE OF RESIDENCE.

SEP 12 1939

FD1115PED

A122

PRECEDE NIGHT LEAD TURKEY

ANKARA, TURKEY, SEPT. 11-(AP)-(PASSED THROUGH BRITISH CENSORSHIP)-DOCTOR REFIK SAYDAM, PRIME MINISTER OF TURKEY, SAID TODAY TALKS WITH ENGLAND AND FRANCE WERE CONTINUING IN A FRIENDLY MANNER. HE TOLD THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY THAT TURKEY WOULD REMAIN FAITHFUL TO HER ENGAGEMENTS AND FRIENDSHIPS.

SEP 12 1939

FD1050PED

B95KX

AP WX

WAR-SHIPPING

SEP 12 1939

MANILA, SEPT.11-(AP)-THE CANADIAN PACIFIC LINER

30.24 3267

30.24 3267

EMPRESS OF ASIA SAILED TODAY FOR VICTORIA, B.C., UNDER ORDERS OF THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY.

CAPT. G.GOOLD SAID THE SHIP WOULD MAKE THE USUAL CALLS IN CHINA, JAPAN AND HONOLULU UNLESS THE OTHERWISE INSTRUCTED. SHE IS DUE AT VANCOUVER, B.C., OCT. 6.

OFFICERS EXPRESSED BELIEF THE EMPRESS OF ASIA MIGHT BE USED AS A BRITISH TROOP TRANSPORT TO EUROPE, AS SHE WAS DURING THE WORLD WAR. SHE CARRIES GUN MOUNTINGS AND CAN BE CONVERTED INTO AN AUXILIARY CRUISER.

ONLY 25 PASSENGERS LEFT ON THE VESSEL, THE LIGHTEST LIST EVER CARRIED FROM MANILA BY A MAJOR LINER.

XA124PCS SEP 121939

A130

COPENHAGEN, SEPT. 11-(AP)-THE COPENHAGEN NEWSPAPER BERLINGSKE AFTENAVIS REPORTED TODAY THAT A GERMAN TORPEDO BOAT EXPLODED IN A GERMAN MINE FIELD OFF TRELLEBORG, SWEDEN, YESTERDAY, WITH AN ESTIMATED LOSS OF 10 LIVES. SEP 121939

THE PAPER SAID THE EXPLOSION WAS SEEN BY A SWEDISH STEAMER WHICH WAS UPABLE TO GO TO THE RESCUE BECAUSE OF THE MINES. A GERMAN TRAWLER RESCUED SOME OF THE CREW, THE DISPATCH ADDED.

THE MASTER OF THE SWEDISH VESSEL SAID 10 PERISHED IN THE WATER.

AN EXPLOSION WAS HEARD IN TRELLEBORG YESTERDAY, BUT THE CAUSE WAS UNKNOWN UNTIL THE SWEDISH STEAMER REACHED PORT.

THE GENERAL DIRECTOR OF DANISH RAILROADS DECREED A REDUCTION OF 25 PERCENT IN PASSENGER TRAFFIC AND TEN PERCENT IN SPEED OF TRAINS AND FERRIES IN A MOVE TO CONSERVE ELECTRICITY, OIL AND COAL. DENMARK IMPORTS ALL HER OIL AND COAL.

A PREVIOUS DECREE BANNED AUTOMOBILE TRAFFIC TO SAVE GASOLINE. THE ORDERS GO INTO FORCE SEPT 20.

N1139AED SEP 121939

A73

COPENHAGEN,SEPT.11-(AP)-THE CAPTAIN AND CREW OF THE 1,514-TON NETHERLANDS STEAMER MARK, WHICH BLEW UP IN THE NORTH SEA, LANDED IN LIFEBOATS AT VORUPUER, DENMARK, TODAY AFTER HAVING BEEN ON THE WATER 36 HOURS.

THE 22 SURVIVORS SAID THEIR SHIP, WHICH WAS ON ITS WAY FROM FINLAND, HIT A MINE 120 MILES SOUTHWEST OF VORUPUER. THE CAPTAIN WAS INJURED.

SEP 121939

WD722AED

A76 SEP 121939

COPENHAGEN,SEPT.11-(AP)-EFFECTIVE TODAY, WOMEN REPLACED MEN AS STREET CAR CONDUCTORS IN FLENSBURG, GERMAN CITY ON THE DANISH BORDER.

TRAVELERS REPORTED THIS WAS GENERAL IN GERMAN CITIES, WITH THE MEN CONTINUING AS MOTORMEN.

A83 SEP 121939

COPENHAGEN,SEPT.11-(AP)-TWO HUNDRED AMERICANS HAVE BOOKED PASSAGE FROM COPENHAGEN TO NEW YORK ON THE MOORE-MCCORMACK SHIP NORMACWREN, 9,000 TONS, WHICH WILL SAIL THURSDAY.

WD624AED

C35

BRUSSELS, SEPT 11-(AP)-THE PROBLEM OF OBTAINING FOOD SUPPLIES IN WARTIME WAS DISCUSSED TODAY AT A MEETING OF THE PERMANENT COMMITTEE OF THE "OSLO STATES," NORTHERN EUROPEAN NEUTRALS.

THE MEETING, PRESIDED OVER BY BELGIUM'S FOREIGN MINISTER PAUL SPAAK, WAS ATTENDED BY REPRESENTATIVES OF THE NETHERLANDS, FINLAND, NORWAY, SWEDEN, DENMARK AND LUXEMBURG. SWITZERLAND WAS REPRESENTED BY AN OBSERVER.

JUDICIAL AND ECONOMIC SUBCOMMITTEES WERE NAMED AND ECONOMIC PROBLEMS FACED BY NEUTRAL NATIONS WERE GENERALLY DISCUSSED, INCLUDING PROTECTION OF NEUTRAL SHIPPING.

NO DEFINITE ACTION WAS TAKEN AT THIS PRELIMINARY MEETING. FURTHER SESSIONS WERE TO FOLLOW.

WY1131AED

A52

WAR BRIEFS

RIGA, SEPT 11-(AP)-LATVIA HAS ORDERED PARTIAL MOBILIZATION OF THREE CLASSES OF MILITARY RESERVES, BEGINNING TOMORROW.

-30-

AA2

NIGHT LEAD RUSSIAN (BJT)

MOSCOW, SEP 11-(AP)-A RUSH ON FOOD STORES AND SAVINGS BANKS CONTINUED TODAY AS THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT MUUTERED MEN AND MATERIALS ON ITS WESTERN BORDER NEAR POLAND.

INDICATIONS THAT LARGE NUMBERS OF RESERVES WERE BEING CALLED UP WAS SEEN IN TODAY'S ISSUE OF THE NEWSPAPER RED STAR, WHICH SAID, "OUR TERMS OF MILITARY PREPAREDNESS ARE TREMENDOUSLY INCREASED BY THE READINESS OF THE RED ARMY . . . IT IS ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT DEFENSE MEASURES OF OUR STATE."

AT THE SAME TIME IT WAS REPORTED RELIABLY BUT UNOFFICIALLY THAT MAXIM LITVINOFF, FORMER COMMISSAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS, NOW IS LIVING AT SPIRIDONOVKA HOUSE, WHICH IS THE OFFICIAL RESIDENCE OF VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF, COMMISSAR FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND PREMIER.

COMMENTING ON THE WAR IN POLAND BOTH IZVESTIA, THE GOVERNMENT ORGAN, AND PRAVDA, COMMUNIST PARTY PUBLICATION, REFLECTED THE OFFICIAL SOVIET VIEW THAT POLAND CANNOT BE EXPECTED TO PRESENT FURTHER EFFECTIVE RESISTANCE TO INVADING GERMAN ARMIES.

THE OFFICIAL PUBLICATIONS INSISTED FRANCE AND ENGLAND HAD FAILED TO GIVE EFFECTIVE AID TO POLAND.

YESTERDAY'S SOVIET PRESS REFERENCES TO "UNFRIENDLY ACTIONS OF ENGLAND IN REGARD TO THE U.S.S.R." WERE FOLLOWED TODAY BY AN ASSERTION BY TASS, OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY, THAT ENGLAND HAD VIOLATED FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH THE SOVIET.

DECLARING BRITISH FIRMS HAD CANCELLED PRODUCTION OF LATHES AND PRESSES ORDERED BY RUSSIA, TASS ADDED, "THE ACTIONS OF ENGLISH FIRMS AND BRITISH GOVERNMENT ORGANS ARE BLOWING UP TRADE BETWEEN THE U.S.S.R. AND ENGLAND."

SW627PED

1939

A101

30.24-3269

30.24 3269

UNDATED WAR INTERPRETATION

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

SEP 121939

ASSOCIATED PRESS FOREIGN AFFAIRS WRITER

VASTLY OUTNUMBERED POLISH TROOPS TODAY WERE CONTINUING TO DEFEND THE HEART OF WARSAW AGAINST THE INVADING GERMANS, THREE DAYS AFTER BERLIN READ WITH JUBILATION AN ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE NAZI HIGH COMMAND THAT ONE OF ITS UNITS HAD FORCED AN ENTRY INTO THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE CAPITAL.

IT WAS A BLOOD-STIRRING DEFENSE, AND ONE WHICH MEANS MUCH TO THE MORALE OF THIS COMPARATIVELY SMALL NATION WHICH IS TRYING TO STAND UP AGAINST THE MIGHT OF GERMANY--A TERRIER AGAINST A MASTIFF.

OVER IN THE WESTERN THEATRE OF WAR THE FRENCH AND GERMANS CONTINUED TO THRUST AT EACH OTHER, AS THE FRENCH MANEUVERED FOR POSITION FROM WHICH THEY COULD MAKE AN ASSAULT AGAINST THE POWERFUL SIEGFRIED LINE.

A GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACK FROM THE SAAR BASIN PRODUCED HAND TO HAND FIGHTING.

BUT WHILE THESE THRUSTS AND COUNTER-THRUSTS, AND THE BAYONET WORK, ARE SPECTACULAR THEY ARE ONLY PRELIMINARY TO THE "REAL THING." ALL THIS IS MERELY "SPADE WORK."

A FAR MORE SERIOUS THREAT TO THE POLES THAN THE LOSS OF THEIR CAPITAL WAS DEVELOPING FAST IN SOUTHEAST POLAND, DOWN IN THE CORNER NEAR THE RUMANIAN AND RUSSIAN BORDERS.

HERE THE GERMANS WERE JAMMING FORWARD TOWARD THE STRATEGIC CITY OF LWOW (THAT'S OUR OLD WORLD WAR FRIEND "LEMBERG"), AND WERE CLAIMING PROGRESS. IT WAS REPORTED THEY WERE MASSING FOR A HEAVY ASSAULT ON LWOW.

THE POINT OF THIS IS THAT LWOW IS THE GATEWAY TO RUMANIA, UPON WHICH FRIENDLY STATE POLAND HAS BEEN BANKING FOR HER SUPPLIES OF ALL SORTS.

CUTTING OFF OF THESE SUPPLIES WOULD BE A MAJOR DISASTER FOR THE POLES.

SEP 121939

AN EVEN MORE IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT CONCERNS THE UNEXPLAINED MOBILIZATION OF RUSSIAN RESERVISTS, AND THE ANNOUNCEMENT IN BERLIN THAT THE PLANS OF THE GERMAN MILITARY LEADERS CONTEMPLATED A RESUMPTION OF RAILWAY COMMUNICATIONS BETWN TH REICH AND THE SOVIET UNION.

SUCH A RESUMPTION, OF COURSE, WOULD BE PREMISED ON THE SMASHING OF THE POLISH FORCES BY THE NAZIS SO AS TO FREE THE RAILWAYS RUNNING ACROSS THE COUNTRY FROM GERMANY TO RUSSIA.

GERMANY HAS BEEN BANKING ON RUSSIA TO PROVIDE HER WITH FOOD AND THE SINEWS OF WAR, AND THE NAZI AUTHORITIES DECLARE THAT WITH SOVIET SUPPLIES AVAILABLE THE ALLIES CANNOT STARVE THE FATHERLAND OUT.

CERTAINLY THE OPENING UP OF THE WEALTH OF RUSSIAN SUPPLIES TO GERMANY LIKELY WOULD ALTER THE ENTIRE COMPLEXION OF THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT.

COINCIDENT WITH THIS DEVELOPMENT, THE BRITISH CABINET LET IT BE KNOWN THAT IT WAS PREPARING FOR A THREE-YEAR WAR AS A MINIMUM.

THIS WOULD SPIKE THE GERMAN HOPES OF GETTING PEACE FROM THE ALLIES IF AND WHEN POLAND HAS BEEN CRUSHED.

BRITAIN HAS MADE IT CLEAR THAT THERE WILL BE NO PEACE MADE OVER THE BODY OF POLAND--THAT THE ALLIES ARE OUT TO SMASH HITLERISM.

ALL THIS WOULD TEND TO INDICATE THAT THIS WAR ISN'T GOING TO BE A SHORT ONE--UNLESS THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD SUCCEEDS IN ITS EFFORTS TO PERSUADE THE GERMAN PEOPLE TO REVOLT AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

WE KEEP HEARING THAT THE POLES HAVE YET TO MAKE THEIR BIG STAND AGAINST THE INVADERS. POLISH FIELD MARSHAL SMIGLY-RYDZ'S STRATEGY HASN'T BEEN REVEALED, BUT IT IS REPORTED HE HAS DRAWN UP AN ARMY OF ABOUT A MILLION MEN ALONG THE DEFENSES EAST OF THE GREAT VISTULA RIVER WHICH PASSES THROUGH WARSAW AND BISECTS THE COUNTRY TO THE SOUTH.

THE MARSHAL'S IDEA, IT WOULD SEEM, WAS NOT TO MAKE A MAJOR RESISTANCE IN THE EARLY STAGES OF THE INVASION BUT TO CONSERVE HIS RESOURCES FOR A LATER STAND. MEANTIME THE ALLIES IN THE WEST MIGHT BE ABLE TO APPLY ENOUGH PRESSURE TO THE SIEGFRIED LINE TO DRAW GERMAN TROOPS AWAY FROM POLAND.

THE SENSATIONAL DEFENSE OF WARSAW IS OF GREATER SENTIMENTAL THAN STRATEGICAL VALUE, AS HAS BEEN POINTED OUT BEFORE. ITS LOSS NATURALLY WOULD HAVE AN ADVERSE EFFECT ON THE MORALE OF MANY POLES.

HOWEVER, THE LOSS OF THE STRONG MILITARY DEFENSES ABOUT WARSAW IS MOST SERIOUS FOR THE POLES. THESE FORM PART OF THE VISTULA DEFENSES BEHIND WHICH THE POLES REPORTEDLY INTEND TO MAKE THEIR MAJOR STAND.

SEP 12 1939

THE GERMAN CAPTURE OF LODZ, JUST SOUTHWEST OF WARSAW, WAS A BAD BLOW TO THE HARD-PRESSED POLES. LODZ WAS ONE OF THE CHIEF DEFENSES OF THE CAPITAL, A CITY WHICH HAS SEEN MUCH FIGHTING IN DAYS GONE BY.

IF THE GERMANS ARE ABLE TO SMASH THROUGH THE VISTULA LINE AND INFLICT A DECISIVE DEFEAT ON THE POLES, THAT WILL OPEN UP THE RUSSIAN SUPPLIES TO GERMANY, IF THE GERMANS ARE CORRECT IN THEIR ASSUMPTION THAT THE SOVIET UNION IS GOING TO FURNISH THE REICH WITH THE NECESSARY SINEWS.

THE LATEST GERMAN COMMUNIQUE REPORTS PROGRESS DOWN IN THE LWOW SECTOR AGAINST "OUR DOGGEDLY DEFENDING OPPONENTS" WHO "HAVE BEEN PUSHED BACK OVER THE SAN RIVER." THE SAN IS A BRANCH OF THE VISTULA, AND IT RUNS ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE VISTULA--THE WRONG SIDE FROM THE STANDPOINT OF THE POLISH DEFENSE.

CROSSING OF THE SAN WOULD BRING THE GERMANS WITHIN PERHAPS 75 MILES OF LWOW. AND LWOW, IT HAS BEEN INDICATED, IS THE HEART OF POLAND'S LIFE-LINE INTO RUMANIA. SEP 12 1939

THIS MIGHT BE A GOOD TIME TO MENTION THE CHARGES OF ATROCITIES WHICH ALREADY ARE BEING HURLED BY BOTH SIDES IN THE EUROPEAN WAR. ALL SORTS OF NASTY STORIES ARE BEING BANDIED ABOUT.

ATROCITIES DO CROP UP IN THE HEAT AND BITTERNESS OF CONFLICT. WE EVEN GET SOME COLD-BLOODED ATROCITIES, SUCH AS THE SINKING OF DEFENSELESS PASSENGER SHIPS WITHOUT WARNING, OR DELIBERATE MURDERS.

WHAT THE WRITER HAS TO SAY HERE IS NOT DIRECTED AT ANY ONE OF THE CLAIMS WHICH ARE NOW BEING MADE. IT JUST HAS TO DO WITH THE GENERAL RUN OF SO-CALLED ATROCITIES.

FROM LONG EXPERIENCE ON THE BATTLE FRONTS OF THE WORLD WAR I AM CONVINCED THAT NINETY PERCENT OF THE ATROCITY STORIES ARE PURE PROPAGANDA MANUFACTURED FROM WHOLE CLOTH. I ENCOUNTERED INNUMERABLE INSTANCES OF THIS DURING THE LAST CONFLICT.

IT ISN'T ALWAYS EASY TO DETECT SUCH PROPAGANDA, BUT A GOOD

1939

3024-3271

30.24 3271

RULE TO GO BY IS TO TAKE ALL SUCH STORIES WITH A BIG GRAIN OF SALT UNLESS THEY ARE ACCOMPANIED BY ABSOLUTE PROOF OF THEIR TRUTH.

WHEN YOU READ STORIES ABOUT SOLDIERS CUTTING OFF BABIES' HANDS--SUCH AS WERE TOLD DURING THE WORLD WAR--JUST STOP AND THINK THAT THE AVERAGE SOLDIER IS JUST ANOTHER FAMILY MAN WHO HAS BEEN UNFORTUNATE ENOUGH TO BE DRAGGED INTO WAR. HE DOESN'T CUT OFF BABIES' HANDS.

A HISTORIC CASE OF PROPAGANDA WAS THE STORY OF GERMAN "KADAVER FACTORIES" DURING THE WORLD WAR. THIS TALE, WHICH CAME OUT THROUGH THE BRITISH FRONT, WAS TO THE EFFECT THAT THE GERMANS WERE SO SHORT OF FATS THEY WERE USING THE BODIES OF SOLDIERS KILLED IN ACTION FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF SOAP.

THIS HORRIBLE STORY WAS SPREAD ALL OVER THE WORLD. IT WAS BOLSTERED UP BY WHAT PURPORTED TO BE AUTHORITATIVE INFORMATION OBTAINED FROM GERMAN PRISONERS. IT WASN'T UNTIL AFTER THE WAR WAS OVER THAT IT BECAME GENERALLY KNOWN THE STORY WAS QUITE UNTRUE AND WAS THE PRODUCT OF SOMEONE'S IMAGINATION.

IN DECEMBER, 1925, THE LATE SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY, ANNOUNCED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THAT THIS REPORT HAD BEEN DENIED BY GERMAN CHANCELLOR LUTHER, AND THAT HE (SIR AUSTEN) ACCEPTED THIS DENIAL ON BEHALF OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

SEP 12 1939

N1038AED

IMPORTANT MILL CENTER 75 MILES FROM WARSAW IS REPORTED RECAPTURED

Check To Germans In Advance On Eastern Frontier Is Termed Apparent—Nazis Succeed In Crossing Narew River

SEP 14 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Wednesday, Sept. 13—A Reuters (British) news agency dispatch today quoted a "reliable source" as saying Lodz had been recaptured by the Poles from the Germans.

DALADIER AND GAMELIN MEET BRITAIN'S PREMIER SECRETLY

Allied War Council Agrees to Devote All Resources to Aiding Poles.

FRENCH DRIVE WEDGE IN SAAR

Penetrate Outer Fortifications of West Wall—German Artillery Answers Vigorously.

SEP 14 1939

PARIS, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain met Premier Daladier "somewhere in France" today at a meeting of the Supreme Franco-British War Council.

A communique issued by M. Daladier's office said that two other members of the council also attended, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, Commander-in-Chief of the Franco-British armies, and Lord Chatfield, the British Minister for the Co-ordination of Defense.

The French Premier left the War Ministry in Paris shortly after luncheon, accompanied by military aids. They traveled in a powerful military car.

Gen. Gamelin joined M. Daladier, who is National Defense Minister as well as Premier, on the way to the secret meeting place.

The communique said that the War Council "confirmed completely" a firm Franco-British resolution to "consecrate all their forces and all their resources" to aid Poland, which is resisting a "brutal invasion of its territory with so much bravery."

M. Daladier was back in his office at the War Office at 6 P. M. (1 P. M., New York time), where he conferred immediately with Edouard Herriot, President of the Chamber of Deputies.

Travels in Air Force Plane.

[In London the Ministry of Information announced tonight that the purpose of the Chamberlain-Daladier meeting in France was to make possible a direct personal exchange of views on the situation and on measures to be taken in the immediate future.

["The meeting," said a communique, "has fully confirmed the firm resolve of Great Britain and France to devote their entire strength and resources to the waging of the conflict which has been forced upon them and to give all possible assistance to their Polish ally, who is resisting with so much gallantry the ruthless invasion of her territory."

[Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Chatfield, Minister for Co-ordination of Defense, made the trip in a Royal Air Force plane. They both returned to London tonight.

LODZ RETAKEN

SEP 14 1939

1939

TANKS AND ARMORED CARS DRIVE INTO SUBURBS OF KEY TO SIEGFRIED LINE

Motor Units Roar Forward As Big Guns Shell Nazi Troops—Wedge Pounded Into West Wall's Advance Defenses

SEP 13 1939

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 12—French motorized units were reported tonight driving into the suburbs of the German industrial city of Saarbrücken.

The city of the German Saar is regarded as the key to the advance positions of Germany's Siegfried Line on the one hundred-mile northern flank, between the Moselle and Rhine rivers, of the Western front.

The French general staff's communique No. 18 for tonight reported:

"Continuation of progress on the same front as yesterday. Strong reaction from the enemy, notably by his artillery."

Nazi Advance Posts Split

The French drive on Saarbrücken put a wedge into the advance fortifications of the main German Siegfried Line at their strongest point east of this capital of the rich Saar mining basin.

French artillery pounded German lines surrounding the city from heights in the forest of Warndt, region to the southwest captured by the French last week, and the French were reported to have "slightly turned" the defenses of Saarbrücken during the day.

[Editor's Note—Dispatches from the Swiss border last night said the French had advanced toward Saarbrücken from the east in a pinching movement.]

Secret Meeting Held

SEP 13 1939

Behind the lines, Edouard Daladier, French Premier, met Neville Chamberlain, British Prime Minister, for a secret meeting of the French-British Supreme War Council.

Chamberlain, accompanied by Lord Chatfield, British Minister for Coordination of Defense, flew to France this afternoon in a special military plane for the surprise session "somewhere in France."

With Daladier was Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin, supreme commander of the French and British armies.

The meeting was understood to have taken place at the field headquarters of the French general staff.

Strategy Discussed

This first meeting of the Supreme War Council, whose four members from the high command of the French and British allied forces not only was concerned with the immediate political and military situation, but with the next moves of their general strategy.

Apparently the French drive was concentrated on Saarbrücken for two reasons:

1. Capture of the city and bridgehead across the Saar river would force a wide breach in the advance system of blockhouses and machine-gun nests covering the Nazi west wall through which the French could drive toward their main objective—the Siegfried Line. As a result of the collapse of this center key all the German positions in the no man's land between the Siegfried and Maginot lines would have to be abandoned or risk being crushed by a simultaneous attack from the front and flank.
2. The city's fall would give the French possession of the rich Saar mining basin, which for its size is one of the most productive coal areas in the world.

Tanks Sweep Forward

French motorized units of fleet tanks and armored cars swept toward Saarbrücken over rough country on either side of the little Roselie river after the whole area had been blasted by heavy French field batteries from the Warndt forest, no more than five miles away.

The French shells pounded at a two-mile front through the eastern suburbs of the city to the aviation field, which the Germans used as a military port before the fighting began.

The village of St. Arnual, midway between Saarbrücken and the airfield, was caught in the heaviest part of the bombardment.

Barrage Laid Down

From the main Siegfried line positions some seven miles behind Saarbrücken the heavy fortress artillery for which the Germans are famous laid down a heavy barrage to cut the advancing French troops.

On this sector of the front the Maginot Line itself was unaffected by the battle as the French advance guard positions have been pushed ten miles in front of the permanent fortifications from which the Poilus jumped off.

The French tactics in the drive against Saarbrücken were typical of those they have used up to date.

First, French scouting and fighting planes roared out over the German positions fighting the air clear.

Armored Cars Follow

Armored units followed rolling down on the German concrete pillboxes and crashing through barbed-wire entanglements.

Behind these came fighting engineers who mopped up German "suicide squads" which the tanks and squad cars had left behind.

One of the most important jobs of these soldiers, whose spades are almost as vital as their rifles, is to feel out concealed mines and explode them before the main bodies begin moving in to establish and fill the lines.

These lines tonight were in the form of a pincers slowing closing in on Saarbrücken.

War Theater Pictured

For full understanding of the new phase of the Western front operations it is necessary to picture the German Siegfried fortifications as lying about

---

[Today's flight was the first the seventy-year-old Prime Minister had made since he flew to Munich nearly a year ago during the Czecho-Slovak crisis.]

The French General Staff's communique No. 18 for the night of September 12 reported:

"Continuation of progress on the same front as yesterday. Strong reaction from the enemy, notably by his artillery."

Thrust Near Siegfried Line.

Meanwhile earlier this evening French dispatches said that French advance guards had driven a wedge into the advance fortifications of Germany's Siegfried Line east of Saarbruecken.

One section of the attacking forces was asserted to have "slightly turned" the defenses of the great industrial city.

Artillery pounded German lines surrounding the city from heights in the forest of Warndt.

These reports followed the War Ministry's earlier communique No. 17 which said merely: "A calm night along the entire front."

The Army was reported to have maneuvered into a position to threaten Saarbruecken after having hurled back the German counter-thrusts to the east of that industrial center.

Fighting on a 100-mile sector of the western front between the Moselle and Rhine rivers strengthened the impression that a major battle was shaping up—an engagement which history may record as the battle of the Saar.

British troops were reported moving up into positions already established by the French.

Serious Progress.

"Despite enemy resistance our attacks continued to show serious progress on a front of some twelve miles east of the Saar," said last night's communique.

This was taken to mean that the French were gaining at a point some distance north of the French border town of Saareguemines in the German area between the Saar and Blies rivers. The Saar runs north from Sarreguemines through Saarbruecken, chief German city in the rich Saar basin.

Saarbruecken was emptied of civilians days ago. French military sources believed that the German army soon would fall back into defensive positions behind the industrial capital.

Bitter fighting also was reported in the area north of Sierck, further west, where the Saar River shifts its course northward to parallel the Moselle River along the neutral principality of Luxemburg.

Fleets of Tanks.

Germans and French fought hand-to-hand in that wooded area between the two rivers.

The pincher movement against Saarbruecken and the penetration of formidable advance posts of the Siegfried Line were accomplished in the beginning by small sorties of infantrymen supported by tank fleets.

The German lines were said to be young reservists because older soldiers were engaged in the Polish offensive on the other side of Germany. However, several divisions were said to have been diverted already to the western front to meet the Franco-British threat.

Standstill Around Warsaw.

In Polish quarters it was said that the German Army of the East had been fought to a standstill around Warsaw. The diversion of German pressure from Poland is one of the cardinal aims of Franco-British strategy.

Although less seasoned Nazi troops were said to hold positions near the Luxemburg frontier, their positions were strong because of the nature of the land.

The French had to make their pecarious way over hilly roads topped by machine-gun and mortar nests. They had to encircle their foe to wipe out threats of cross-fire ahead.

The High Command would not name places involved in this extreme northern flanking movement in the belief that publication would endanger progress of the operations.

The French described their losses as slight as compared with the advances achieved. They said that some German prisoners had been taken, that gas had not been used, and that much of the fighting was under cover of night.

Poles and Czechs Joining Up.

On the home and diplomatic fronts, Premier Daladier was still working to fuse a "War Cabinet" for a balanced representation of the French political parties while watching developments in Rumania and Italy.

Andre Francois-Poncet, the French Ambassador to Rome, was understood to have told M. Daladier yesterday afternoon that Italy was observing a "strictly correct" neutral attitude despite her military alliance with Germany.

Rumania's week end call to reservists, increasing her army to 1,200,000 men, interested the French because of her status as Poland's neighbor.

Thousands of men were still flocking to the French side for military service. Stephan Osusky, who was Czecho-Slovakia's Minister to Paris, said that he expected 50,000 Czechs to fight under the Czech flag.

Poles also were enlisting by the thousands for service on the Western front under French command.

At Lille, Jeane Poulle, a fugitive from Devil's Island, appeared to join the French Army. He had been living in Belgium after his escape through Brazil and French Guiana thirteen years ago.

French Drive Expected.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Reports of a German troop movement from Baden northwest toward the Haardt Hills on the west side of the Rhine were taken by Bordern observers today as an indication that the Germans are expecting a big French drive soon.

Baden is near the point where French territory elbows into Germany, ninety miles north of Basle. The development eased the Swiss fears that French or Germans might try to cut through a corner of Switzerland to outflank the other.

Thousands of Swiss soldiers, it was learned today, have returned temporarily at least to civil life—the first official sign of Switzerland's growing conviction that her neutrality will be respected by her two warring neighbors.

It was estimated that the first contingent of soldiers to get leaves numbered 15,000, mostly dairy and agricultural workers. Nevertheless, well over 400,000 Swiss soldiers are still guarding every one of the confederation's many railroad tunnels and bridges.

Ready for Something Fast.

Another indication that the French are about to open an offensive against main forts of the Siegfried Line was seen in reports of a concentration of mobile equipment at certain points of the Maginot Line.

Such fast equipment has been of little use to the French so far in the slow, methodical maneuvering for position which has marked the war thus far. It would play a major role when and if the French broke through the main Siegfried forts.

In preliminary thrusts and counter-thrusts, as pictured in advices reaching Switzerland, the French moved up as much as four miles and captured four German towns—Brenschelbach, Uttweiler, Peppenkum and Medelsheim, northwest of Bitche—while small German patrols crossed into French territory for the first time.

Germans Clear Out.

The German penetration of French territory, however, was said to have been short-lived, the Germans retiring to their own side of the frontier after furious clashes. This action occurred just east of Saarguemines and southeast of Saarbruecken.

The French were reported to have taken about five miles of the Saarguemines-Zweibruecken Railway in German territory, from which to threaten German forts along the northeastern bank of the Saar River.

The French thrusts appear to have changed from mere local incursions to highly co-ordinated operations, extending a smooth line from the Moselle River to the Vosges foothills.

With the left flank pinned on the great Moselle forts of the Maginot Line and the right flank supported by the huge Bitche fortifications, the French forces struck out all along the northern section of the western front, meeting German counter-attacks.

Traffic was increased on the German railroad between Freiburg and Offenburg, although the railroad is in plain sight from the Maginot Line at many points along its fifty-mile length. All rail traffic along the French side of the Rhine frontier had stopped, however.

30.24-3273

30.24—3273

seven and one-half miles behind Saarbrücken, capital of the Saar mining area.

The city is thirty airline miles southeast of the Moselle and sixty miles west of the Rhine. Close to Saarbrücken the Saar river enters Germany from France and parallels the frontier a few miles on the German side.

Because of its importance industrially and as a bridgehead, the Germans have constructed at Saarbrücken what are are believed to be the strongest advance positions of the Siegfried Line.

Counter-Attacks Halted

Activity in this sector and seven miles to the southeast in the Bitche plateau overshadowed German counter-attacks along the Moselle Valley farther north.

Although Germans attacked in strength and at first retook advance positions several hundred yards in depth, the French reported they had halted the German attack.

The German action appeared to be designed for two purposes—first, to divert French attention from Saarbrücken, and second, to strengthen the German flank along the Luxembourg frontier where the French attack had weakened it.

Major Battle Expected

The Saar battle is developing slowly into what apparently is the first major operation of the Western front, although the French, who have carried the attack to German territory, have not made contact with Germany's main "west wall."

The French used caution in moving forward among German block-houses and reinforced steel machine-gun nests that dot the Saar no-man's land.

There seemed no doubt, however, that the operations hourly were assuming more serious proportions.

French general staff communiques, which thus far have been the only official source of information, have given only one indication of the size of the forces involved. They mentioned one division, but that is capable of several interpretations. Modern French divisions are generally about 10,000 men, but vary according to the terrain and their allotted task.

Terrific Artillery Duel Reported On West Front

By CHARLES FOLTZ, JR.

Associated Press Correspondent

Basel, Switzerland, Wednesday, Sept. 13—Reports reaching Switzerland early today indicated one of the greatest artillery duels in history began during the night in the Eastern Moselle Valley between Germany's Siegfried and France's Maginot lines.

Shells shrieked high over the border hills.

The Moselle Valley has been converted into one of the heaviest fortified regions in the world, with the great Sierck forts on the French side and the strong Trassen area on the other line.

Assault On Line Expected

Swiss observers expressed the opinion the British and French staffs were building up an actual assault on the Siegfried Line itself [illegible] near future.

SEP 13 1939

The German town of Hornbach, less than two miles from the tip of the Bitche frontier salient of the Western front, was described in dispatches reaching Switzerland last night as a no-man's-land which for two days has been pounded by both Maginot and Siegfried Line guns.

The population had moved out, as well as from the Bavarian towns of Zwiebrücken, whose two bridges carry the vital rail supply line behind the Siegfried Line, and Pirmasens, manufacturing town behind the eastern section of the line.

Hold Previous Gains

Despite concentrated gunfire and stabbing counter-attacks of German shock troops which apparently had halted the French drive between the Saar river and the Vosges Mountains, the French were reported still in possession of the greater part of their yesterday's gains on both sides of the Bitche frontier salient.

More than a week of calm reportedly relaxed tension along the southern French-German border. Frenchmen whose comrades were engaging in bitter battles just around the frontier bend on the Western front swam in the Rhine in plain view of the opposite forts.

German trains, headed for Italy with thousands of tons of coal, rolled south clearly visible to the naked eyes of French artillerymen sitting behind the powerful Maginot forts across the river.

Saarbrücken Returned To Reich After '35 Poll

Saarbrücken, situated on the Saar river in a district which has been called the "powder keg of Europe," was returned to Germany March 1, 1935, after tabulation of the votes in a plebiscite held in the entire Saar area.

It is a city of 126,000 people, surrounded by rich coal mines purchased in 1934 from France, and lying almost in the middle of an international highroad for armies and trade. Romans and Gauls once contested the territory, French troops under Napoleon have marched through the city, as did German forces in the Franco-Prussian War and the Allies during the World War.

Area Demilitarized

Under the restoration agreement, however, Saarbrücken and the surrounding area was to become part of the demilitarized border zone. France insisted on this clause and Germany agreed.

Germans Attack on 3 Fronts In Attempt to Crush Poland

Nazis Tell Reporter With Hitler's Army 4 Polish Divisions Have Begun to Surrender —He Finds Widespread Devastation.

SEP 13 1939

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY WEST OF WARSAW, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—German headquarters announced that the German forces this morning launched a three-front offensive which it expected to be the final push to break Polish resistance.

The fronts were given as: East of Radom, north of Lodz and northeast of Warsaw.

Four Polish divisions fighting in the Radom sector south of Warsaw with their backs to the Vistula River were reported beginning to surrender. Germans also said that a bitter struggle north of Lodz appeared to be ending, with heavy Polish losses.

On the third front, German troops were reported at the gates of Warsaw.

The Germans, officers asserted, used the air arm effectively on all fronts. Bombers again were flying steadily to and from German bases.

This correspondent observed the preparations for today's offensive on the Radom front yesterday afternoon. Heavy re-enforcements clogged all roads leading to the sector.

The battle north of Lodz was in its third day. In the first twenty-four hours of that struggle Germans estimated 2,000 Poles were killed and 5,000 wounded, and since that first day the attack has been even fiercer.

The Germans were trying to force surrender of what remained of the Polish Army of the West—from 50,000 to 60,000 men.

Poles Fighting Desperately.

Armored cars, tanks and light artillery were used in today's counter-offensive against the Poles. The Polish forces were said to be fighting a desperate uphill battle in close formation.

Fuehrer Hitler, "first soldier" of Germany, spent yesterday in this region. I followed him by two hours along one road.

The German High Command was confident Warsaw, caught in a pincer attack, would fall within twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

A few miles north of Lodz, important textile center, one German division was battering five or six encircled Polish divisions in the hope of capturing 50,000 to 60,000 men, which would be the largest body yet taken. (A German division numbers 10,000 to 12,000 men.)

This Polish Army, consisting of troops retreating from Poznan province and the corridor, on Sunday staged the first big offensive made by any Polish force so far in an attempt to break out and fall back on Warsaw. They were halted Sunday night after advancing several miles, and yesterday morning a German counter-attack was started.

But even if the Polish divisions should escape their twelve-mile-wide pocket near Lodz, they would have to encounter another German line drawn up west of Warsaw and between them and the capital. This line, which received heavy re-enforcements this morning, extends south of the city.

Another German force was closing down the vise on the Polish capital by driving toward Warsaw from the northeast. It had crossed the Narew River in its advance out of East Prussia.

A third Germany army, meanwhile, was tightening its hold on Lublin, railway post 100 miles southeast of Warsaw and approximately 140 miles east of Lodz.

Anxious for Surrender.

The Germans want both cities to surrender without siege. An armored car division which entered Warsaw a few days ago after driving up from Silesia has withdrawn to the outskirts of the city and is awaiting the outcome of the battle near Lodz. This maneuver was made, the Germans said, to discourage the Poles from bombarding their capital.

I have just completed two days of roaming about with the first group of foreign correspondents permitted at the front by the German High Command.

Everywhere I found the Poles had been fighting harder than I had imagined from reading the German Army communiques.

Every inch of the Polish retreat, despite its swiftness, has been contested, but the fighting for the most part has been individual. No general plan seems to have existed. Or, if it did exist, it was disregarded.

Polish To[illegible] in Ruins.

SEP 13 1939

Each time the Poles assembled and tried to make a stand they found themselves surrounded. German officers expressed the opinion that the Polish general staff had made a big mistake in not withdrawing its troops—thus preventing their capture—from the virtually undefendable western sections, and then using them for a well organized stand on some line west of Warsaw.

Fighting took place in almost every town and village from the German border to the line which now is just west of the capital. Today these towns are largely in ruins—either destroyed by bombs from the air, burned down, or both.

The destruction in the area through which I passed, and it was typical of all of western Poland, resembled northern France after the world war. The few walls still standing showed the gouges of machine gun bullets. Hundreds of farmhouses were burned so thoroughly that scarcely any debris remained, and only the chimneys stood gaunt in the saddened landscape.

Trenches in a Graveyard.

I entered Poland at Ketno in Silesia and there, six miles from the border, found the first trenches. They had been dug in a graveyard. Beyond this first line of defense virtually no trenches had been dug, for the Poles had retreated too fast to dig in.

Further on I encountered my first weird sight. The town of Lieruszow, which had had 6,000 inhabitants, about half of them Jews. In the Sunday evening twilight it looked like the ruins of Pompeii.

After the Polish Army had left Lieruszow, snipers killed twenty-one German soldiers, and the penalty they paid was a terrible sight. The Germans said machines guns had been placed in various buildings which commanded the road leading into town, including the Jewish temple.

Endless Line of Refugees.

Then I met the first of a seemingly endless line of tattered refugees. Such a line is to be found today on almost any road in Poland.

I counted 180 V-shaped hay wagons of the type used throughout central Europe within one twenty-mile stretch on the road to Sieradz. They were loaded with bedding and represented about the only earthly belongings of their owners. One had a baby goat lying on a bed tick.

I estimated there were 500 refugees in the wagons in those twenty miles and that, in all, I had seen 1,500 persons being hauled along by slowly-starving horses and had passed 500 more on foot, some of them driving cattle and goats. There were at least 500 head of cattle.

These refugees had fled before the oncoming German army, but had been overtaken and had been told by the Germans to go back home.

Grandmother Walks Fifty Miles.

I talked with a grandmother who, with her daughter and son-in-law, had walked fifty miles between Friday and Sunday nights. Their bare feet were bleeding. The daughter carried her baby. The grandmother carried a sheet, stuffed with clothes, over her back.

They had driven their three cows off with them, but the cows had died of exhaustion along the way, they said.

I passed farmhouse after farmhouse where refugees had reached home only to find nothing left but a brick chimney. They were camping out beside the ruins.

As I rode along the road to Lodz, odors occasionally indicated bodies had not yet been buried and made the driver step on the gas.

The town of Lask was heavily damaged, but practically no fighting had taken place in the twenty miles between there and Lodz.

SEP 13 1939

Lodz Brilliantly Lighted.

Lodz, a city of 700,000, was an unbelievable sight for a point so near the front lines. It was fully illuminated, although it is the headquarters for Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz who is commanding the effort to capture the trapped Poles to the north of the city.

It was the first time in ten days that I had seen a city lighted at night.

German troops took over Lodz on Friday, after the Polish forces had withdrawn without a shot being fired. The streets now are patrolled by local Germans, of whom there are 13,000, in civilian clothes and wearing arm bands.

Taking On German Appearance.

Yesterday truckloads of Jews were seen in the streets, being taken out to do manual labor. In another section I also saw bearded Jews carrying stones, one by one, to help troops reconstruct dynamited bridges.

Lodz was fast taking on a German appearance yesterday, with radio trucks driving through the streets pouring out German music. Food was scarce, for the city has been cut off from all sides for several days.

Ninety per cent of the stores were closed. Long lines, some of them stretching for half a mile, stood in front of the shops hoping they would open. There was no butter, coffee, milk, eggs or bacon, and very little meat.

Both German and Polish money is being used in the occupied area at the rate of two Polish zlotys to one mark. (A mark nominally is worth 40 cents.)

Nazis Assert They'll Go to Soviet Border

Berlin Reports 3 Armies Drawing Noose Tight Around Polish Capital

SEP 13 1939

Hitler and Goering Both at the Front

Warsaw Fights Fiercely, Calls Aid From South, Reports Lodz Retaken

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—The German Army, pounding at the defenders of Warsaw on three fronts, drew tighter tonight an iron ring which its high command declared was threatening to choke off the besieged Polish capital.

From the west, the northeast and the southeast the armies of the Reich struck today at the Poles simultaneously. The vanguard of the northeastern force was reported to have crossed a railway due east of Warsaw. The Germans said the resistance of a Polish force of four divisions was broken and an inestimable number of men and a large amount of war supplies were captured in an area southeast of Warsaw. (A division normally is between 10,000 and 12,000 men.) The third active spot was a triangular area south of the Vistula River and above Lodz, to the west of Warsaw, where between 50,000 and 60,000 Poles were said to be endeavoring to break a German circle.

Hitler and Goering at Front

Both the German Fuehrer and his ranking lieutenant, Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, were on the Polish front, personally supervising the land and air movements of their forces. Goering visited Hitler at the latter's front-line headquarters and gave him a two-hour report on activities of the air force, which is directly under Goering, as well as national defense measures taken here in Hitler's absence. Later Goering continued his air tour of the units operating in the area between Warsaw and the Carpathian Mountains, decorating a number of crews with the Iron Cross for outstanding achievements.

[The United Press reported from Berlin that Goering had appointed Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo, or secret political police, as "Deputy Plenipotentiary for the Reich Administration."]

While reports of intense activity flooded in from the Eastern Front, German sources remained strangely quiet about developments on the French border, although they said civilians were being sent away from the western fortification zone.

Skirmishes in West

This morning's army communique said merely: "In the west, there were local skirmishes with vanguards between Saargemuend (Saargueminesi) and Harnbach." Later today D. N. B., official German news agency, said two French planes had been destroyed by anti-aircraft guns and a third in an air battle wherein a French captain was forced to land and was captured.

Officials said no measures, such as interment and confiscation of property, were being taken at present against French citizens still in Germany. They added they had no information about English subjects. From private sources, however, it was learned a number of Englishmen had been taken for questioning to Alexanderplatz police headquarters.

Word spread through Berlin that Hitler's partner in the Rome-Berlin axis, Premier Benito Mussolini, was ready to make new peace efforts now with virtually all Polish territory which was in Germany before 1914 retaken by the eastern army. German sources said the Reich troops had pushed far beyond those 1914 limits in their drive to subdue Poland, but Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen said they knew nothing officially of the Mussolini offer proposal.

SEP 13 1939

Sweep Through Posen

The German high command said the cities of Posen (Poznan), Thorn (Torun), Hohensalza (Inowroclaw), Gniezno and numerous others had been captured in the provinces of Posen and West Prussia. Poles have continued to hold out in long loops in this western territory long after German armies had passed on eastward to the north and south of them. Today's advance was reported to have swept the Poles to a front running roughly from Gniezno to the north of Wloclawek, Plock and Modlin, fortress cities guarding the approach to Warsaw from the northwest.

Heavy fighting was reported by the Germans from the triangle formed by Kutno, Piatek and Leczyca, above captured Lodz and almost directly west of Warsaw. German officials said the Polish army had suffered heavy losses, and they expressed confidence the enemy would capitulate soon under the German vise. A German victory here would open the way for a mass advance on Warsaw from the west, reinforcing motorized troops which reached Warsaw last Friday, but which since withdrew to await the main German column. The advance force was said to have met heavy Polish artillery fire from the eastern side of the city.

Fight Way Across Rivers

Northeast of Warsaw the Germans were reported to have fought their way across the Narew and Bug Rivers. They were said officially to have crossed the main railway line leading from Warsaw northeast to Bialystok, and their advance guards were declared to have reached the railway between Warsaw and Siedlce, fifty miles east of Warsaw. The German communique said the railroad station at Bialystok, 114 miles northeast of Warsaw, had been destroyed but did not reveal what point of the Warsaw-Siedlce line was touched.

It was announced officially that the resistance of Polish forces in the section of Radom, southeast of Warsaw, had been broken. The number of prisoners and the amount of war material captured were said to be impossible to estimate.

German troops also were reported advancing rapidly on Lemberg (Lwow), 210 miles southeast of Warsaw. Southeast of the Przemysl Mountain the troops were said to have captured the Polish city of Sambor, thereby reaching the headwaters of the Dniester River. To the northeast of Sambor, Przemysl and Krakowiec were reported captured, bringing the Germans within forty miles of Lemberg. In the Corridor, Grossendorf, on the western part of the Hel Peninsula in Danzig Bay, was reported taken by German naval forces.

Army Communique

The communique issued this morning by the supreme army command said:

"A big battle in Poland west of the Vistula River is nearing its end. In a forced march, German troops from the south are approaching and crossing the river.

"Mountain troops of the extreme southern wing are reaching Chyrow, south of Przemysl.

"The enemy put down its arms in the region between Zwolen, Radom and the Lysa Gora Mountains. There is a prospect of capturing the guns and war materials of at least four divisions. The number of captives taken cannot yet be estimated.

"Armored troops on the eastern shore of the Vistula south of Warsaw captured numerous heavy guns, among which were four 21-centimeter mortars.

"Desperate attempts of strong enemy forces encircled near Kutno to break through southward were prevented. The circle around this enemy group is closed.

"North of the Vistula German troops are nearing the stronghold of Modlin.

"After a fierce fight the enemy also has been defeated northeast of Warsaw. Advancing in pursuit, the main body of German troops crossed the Warsaw-Siedlce rail line.

"Air force units, as yesterday, supported with good success the army near Kutno, disturbing the rear communications of the opponent east of the Vistula. A group of five bombers shut off the eastern outlets of Warsaw. The Bialystok Station was destroyed.

"Grossendorf, on the western part of the Hel Peninsula and narbor buildings were taken over by light naval forces.

"In the west there were local skirmishes with vanguards between Saargemuend (Sarreguemines) and Harnbach.

"Air attacks on the Reich's territory occurred nowhere yesterday."

Later announcements by the high command included the capture of Posen (Poznan), Hohensalza (Inowroclaw), Thorn (Torun) and Gniezno in western Poland and of Przemysl, Sambor and Krakowiec, in the south.

Nazis Ready To Fight All Across Poland To Border Of Russia

SEP 13 1939

By MELVIN WHITELEATHER

Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 12—Germany, authoritative sources said tonight, intends to fight across Poland all the way to the Russian border, if this should be necessary, to render the entire Polish army harmless.

Entrance of France and Britain into the war has changed the picture, it was said, so that the high command wants to eliminate completely the possibility of having to fight for long on two fronts at the same time.

Seek Occupation Of All Poland

Hence the present plan is to fight until all Poland is occupied and the Polish military so scattered that it would be impossible for it to reassemble and make trouble.

Adolf Hitler originally announced his intention of fighting until the present Polish Government should fall or a new one be formed that would accept his peace terms.

Nothing was said about the amount of territory desired nor about the necessity of disabling the whole Polish army.

Determined To Clean Out Poles

I returned to Berlin tonight from the Lodz and Radom fronts in Poland, west and south of Warsaw, respectively. No concern over the Western front was discernible among Germans there. The only purpose seemed to be a determination to clean out the Poles.

30.24-3275

30.24—3275

The troops were still moving up to participate in the first phase of hard fighting which the war has produced.

The Poles have accepted battle on three fronts—north of Lodz, east of Radom and just northeast of the capital itself. The Germans said they were confident their superior equipment would wear down the thickly massed Polish forces.

The German high command said the cities of Poznan, Torun (Thorn), Hohensalza, Gniezno and numerous others had been captured in the provinces of Poznan and West Prussia.

This advance was reported to have swept the Poles out of the north on a front running roughly from Gniezno to the north of Wloclawek, Plock and Modlin, fortress cities guarding the approach to Warsaw from the northwest.

SEP 13 1939

Snipers have been one of the German army's greatest problems, all the way from the German frontier to Warsaw. The snipers have paid dearly, but the practice still is kept up.

They are to the Germans one of the most annoying factors in the present effort to capture Warsaw. The Polish capital's "civilian force"—snipers—shooting from buildings, has disturbed the advance guard of Germans trying to gain a foothold in the city.

Shot In Warsaw Streets

A wounded courier arriving at the German border tonight told a story of two comrades being shot in Warsaw's streets. He had four bullet wounds but nevertheless he rode a motorcycle from Warsaw with dispatches.

The Germans have left the countryside relatively thinly occupied with troops. Soldiers have been kept moving close to the fast-advancing fronts.

Thousands of "auxiliary troops" have been rushed into the conquered territory nearest the German border to assist in rebuilding bridges and filling in the ruts on dirt roads.

Commandeer Wagons

They commandeered thousands of wagons and teams. They wear dust-colored washable uniforms. Among them are 18-year-old youths of the labor service. These auxiliary troops form the only visible signs of occupation in some areas.

No rain of any importance has fallen in western Poland since the invasion began September 1.

Bad roads have been so pounded by heavy trucks that the dust is so thick in some spots auxiliary troops have been kept busy watering roads. Otherwise it would be impossible for drivers to see the next truck ahead.

Despite the bad roads—which the Poles calculated would be a good defense weapon against motorized German divisions—no broken down German vehicles were observed along the highway.

Move Along Swiftly

Germany's army moved along as though on concrete highways like those in Germany. I saw but two German armored cars out of commission, evidently rendered so by hand grenades.

I passed two Polish cars battered to pieces. Alongside each was a mound of fresh dirt with a cross and a helmet hung over the cross.

Motors carried the entire German army into the campaign. Railways were useless as the Poles dynamited all bridges and railway switches when retreating. I saw only one rail line in operation and that was just inside Poland in Silesia.

The German army, which was organized to the minutest detail, apparently clicked without a hitch.

Have High Morale

The troops appeared to be enthusiastic and to have a high morale.

The German army west of Warsaw pitted armored cars, tanks and light artillery against a trapped force of 50,000 Polish troops in a fierce counter-attack west of Warsaw beginning at dawn today.

The Poles—said by the Germans to be the remainder of the Polish army of the west—were reported fighting a desperate uphill battle in close formation against their better-equipped foe.

This battle, north of Lodz and about sixty miles west of Warsaw, was in its third day. It began Sunday with a fierce Polish offensive against the encircling German forces, the first of the war.

Germans estimated that 2,000 Poles were killed and 5,000 wounded the first day. Casualties for the later fighting were not estimated, but were believed even heavier.

Launched At Dawn

The counter-attack was launched at dawn in the region of Kutno, Piatek and Leczyca.

The Polish forces were believed to be five or six divisions strong—between 50,000 and 60,000 men. One German division was said to be opposing them. A German division normally has between 10,000 and 12,000 men.

German officers expected the battle would be decided within the next two days.

A two-day tour about with the German army disclosed that the Poles had been fighting harder than this writer had supposed from reading the German army communiques.

Every Inch Contested

Every inch of the Polish retreat has been contested. But each time the Poles assembled and tried to make a stand they found themselves surrounded.

Fighting occurred in almost every village through which I passed, and the communities today are largely in ruins, having been either bombed or burned or both.

The destruction which I saw, and it was typical of all western Poland, resembled northern France after the World War. A few walls stood, and these showed the gouges of machine gun bullets.

I estimated that more than half the population of western Poland left their homes before the German army arrived.

Inhabitants Returning

The inhabitants now are coming back on foot or on wagons to finish their harvesting. Many of them carry bundles on their backs.

I encountered 180 hay wagons loaded with 500 Polish refugees in one twenty-mile stretch on the road to Sieradz. There were at least 500 on foot driving their hungry cattle.

These refugees had been overtaken by the German army and told to return home. But many of them found their homes burned when they reached them.

Among the refugees I saw barefooted women, their feet bleeding from their long trek.

WARSAW FORCES GERMANS FURTHER BACK INTO SUBURBS

Polish Re-enforcements Aid in Pushing Foe 6 Miles From City's Center.

SEP 13 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Polish Army general headquarters asserted today that Warsaw's German besiegers had been pushed back "far into the outskirts of the capital."

A communique broadcast from the radio station at Lwow said the nearest German troops now were six miles from the center of the city. It said the push was "developing" with the aid of heavy Polish re-enforcements which were rushed to Warsaw from the south.

It was reported from Cernauti, Rumania, that 7,000 Polish refugees crossed the frontier there.

Polish Communique.

The Polish General Staff's communique No. 11, broadcast today, declared stout Polish resistance had brought the German plane, tank and artillery attacks at least to a temporary stalemate throughout a widespread battle zone.

The communique announced severe fighting was continuing along the Bug River without major change, with the Germans throwing vast numbers of tanks into the struggle. The Bug River flows from east to west, joining the Narew at a point twenty miles due north of Warsaw.

The official Hungarian News Agency reported the Polish radio station at Lublin said that Gen. Felicjan Slawoj Skladkowski, the Polish Premier, had presided over a ministry council which decreed measures providing for the purchase and distribution of foodstuffs for civilians forced to flee from the battle zones.

The radio station of Lwow (Lemberg), capital of the Polish Ukraine, reported volunteers were digging trenches and air-raid shelters and preparing to defend the city with the intention of carrying on until the last, and had no idea of withdrawing. Lublin is ninety-five miles southeast of Warsaw, about halfway to Lwow.

The Germans were reported continuing their attacks in the Modlin sector without achieving any gains. Modlin is at the juncture of the Narew and Vistula rivers, only twenty miles northwest of Warsaw.

San River Attacks Continue.

German attacks were reported continuing along the San River, but it was said there were no indications the Germans were making much progress toward Lwow.

German mechanized units were reported moving eastward in the Kutno sector, with the German air force continuing to bombard communication lines and centers far behind the battle lines. Kutno is seventy miles west of Warsaw.

The General Staff communique reported Warsaw's defenders had won a brief breathing spell by forcing the enemy to withdraw from several sectors in the outskirts of the city.

In an early morning broadcast Polish troops were said by the Warsaw radio announcer to have stopped the invading German forces "dead in their tracks" and had forced them to retreat from the beleaguered Polish capital.

Called Turning Point.

The announcer hailed the German withdrawal as the turning point for Poland. He said that the Polish Army, making Warsaw the symbolic key point of its defense, had established itself in prepared positions on the east bank of the river.

The line of defense, the Warsaw announcer said, ran through bomb-torn Warsaw and south along the Vistula to its junction with the San, 120 miles away, then followed the east bank of the San almost to the Slovak border.

The announcer reported that the Poles had just been subjected to seventeen air raids, in one of which sixty planes concentrated on an anti-aircraft battery set up in the courtyard of an apartment house.

Though incendiary bombs set fire to the building and low-flying planes strafed the fleeing occupants, he said, the battery was still carrying on from amidst a mass of wreckage when the last air raid of the day had ended.

Women and children were among the chief casualties of the raids, the announcer said, but added that children were still helping to fortify the houses and that "every house is being turned into an invincible fortress."

SEP 13 1939

Report Rail Line Cut.

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—German forces in Poland, driving around and toward Warsaw, were announced officially today to have crossed a railway northeast of the Polish capital and to have captured a number of cities in the west.

A communique issued by the supreme army command pictured a gradually tightening ring of steel around the besieged capital with the first announcement that German soldiers were east of it.

The communique said the Poles had been defeated northeast of Warsaw and added:

"Advancing in pursuit, the main body of German troops crossed the Warsaw-Bialystok railway line running northeast of the capital, and a vanguard detachment reached the Warsaw-Siedlce line running east of the capital."

Siedlce is approximately fifty miles east of Warsaw.

Simultaneously the Supreme High Command announced occupation of Poznan, Torun, Gniezno, Inowroclaw (Hohensalza) and "other cities" west and northwest of Warsaw.

Tells of New Victories.

This announcement, which was separate from the communique, said:

"Thanks to the advance of our troops in the provinces of Poznan and western Prussia, Poznan, Torun, Gniezno, Hohensalza and other cities were occupied. Thereby in this region, too, territory formerly German is now almost without exception in German hands."

Poznan is approximately forty miles airline east of the Polish-German frontier and some 170 miles west of Warsaw. Torun is 110 miles northwest of Warsaw and about 80 miles northeast of Poznan.

The two other cities named lie between Poznan and Torun. Gniezno is almost thirty miles northeast of Poznan; Hohensalza, or Inowrocław in Polish, is twenty miles southwest of Torun.

The army communique reported "a big battle in Poland west of the Vistula River is nearing its end," told of advances in southern Poland toward Lwow, and said that in central Poland "there is a prospect of capturing the guns and war materials of at least four divisions."

Reports Circle Is Closed.

In a reference to operations southeast of Poznan and west of Warsaw, the communique said:

"Desperate attempts of strong enemy forces encircled near Kutno to break through southward were prevented. The circle around this enemy group is closed."

"North of the Vistula," it added, "German troops are nearing the stronghold of Modlin." (Modlin is less than twenty miles northwest of Warsaw.)

There was a brief mention of air force activity, including the announcement that "a group of five bombers shut off the eastern outlets of Warsaw," and that the Bialystok Station, 114 miles northeast of Warsaw, had been destroyed.

Elaborating on this phase of the communique, DNB, German official news agency, reported successful attacks on Polish troop concentrations in the Kutno area and numerous damaging raids on railways.

"Several units," it said, "attacked the railway triangle of Praga as well as rail lines leading from Warsaw to Radyzmin, Tluszcz, Siedlce and Deblin. Burning stations, interrupted rail tracks, seriously damaged railway bridges, destroyed road crossings and road bridges, blown up munitions transports and disrupted marching columns and truck columns are the result of these attacks."

The railways mentioned radiate to the north, east and southeast from Warsaw. Praga is the section of Warsaw which lies on the right—east—bank of the Vistula.

DNB also said that the Polish aerial counter-defense was "growing steadily weaker" and that the Germans destroyed thirty-four Polish planes on runways in raids on airdromes and two in an air battle.

Meanwhile the expectation was expressed in Berlin that Warsaw would fall at almost any hour.

Exponents of the "Blitzkrieg" (lightning war) theory emphasized the moral effect of conquering Warsaw promptly so as to hearten the German population for the more menacing prospect of a stiff fight on the western front.

Three circumstances dampened slightly the expectation that, after smashing initial successes in the Polish Corridor and western Poland, Warsaw would capitulate easily.

They were:

1. The admission that a spearhead of armored troops which reached Warsaw's suburbs had withdrawn to escape heavy Polish artillery fire.

2. Well-substantiated reports that Polish resistance was greater than the Germans at first believed, and that German losses were higher than it was thought originally.

Goering Rushes to Poland.

3. The decision of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering to go to the Polish front. Field Marshal Goering, who is supreme commander of the air force, leader on the economic front, chairman of the Cabinet Council for Defense and holds many other high offices, rushed to Poland last night to take personal charge of aviation operations.

With Adolf Hitler already on the front—close enough, it was said, to "hear the staccato chatter of machine-gun fire"—Marshal Goering's departure meant the leader and the second in command of Nazidom were engaged actively in the offensive in Poland.

Germans interpreted this to mean the highest importance had been placed on a quick cleanup, and that Marshal Goering felt he was needed to provide more drive.

But the utmost confidence prevailed that the stubborn Polish army, caught between Lodz and Warsaw, soon would be brought to terms. Then infantry, artillery and planes will be released to turn the full force of the eastern army onto the Polish capital.

SEP 13 1939

Talk of Surrender.

It was admitted that, even with Warsaw occupied, much of Poland still would remain to be conquered, but the impression of German civil and military leaders was that, with Warsaw captured, Poland might be dismissed as a major consideration, and the Reich then would be ready to devote its full attention to England and France. Officials, meanwhile, reported only minor skirmishes on the western front.

In the fields of diplomacy and propaganda Germany took an increasingly firm attitude, warning England that Marshal Goering's speech last Saturday was not an offer to come to peace by compromise.

Statements by political leaders and the press were interpreted as forceful suggestions to the small neutral States that it might be expedient for them to resist "violations of their neutrality by Britain" and the English blockade, which hits their trade.

German Invaders Now 'On The Run,' Warsaw Declares

By LLOYD C. LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Budapest, (Wednesday) Sept. 13—An official Warsaw radio broadcast said early today nine German divisions had been diverted from the Warsaw siege to the Western European and Vistula fronts and that the Nazi invaders now are definitely "on the run."

Warsaw began the fifth day of siege with the announcer's statement that the invaders had been stopped and hurled back.

The official announcements said German pressure on the city probably had been decreased because of the withdrawal of the divisions, and that the Germans had been driven back about six miles.

SEP 14 1939

Music Reveals Defense

Martial music blared from the Warsaw station last night to tell Europe the dogged defenders of Poland's capital clung to their heavily shelled positions.

Yesterday's losses were said to be insignificant for the first time since the siege began—only sixteen army casualties being listed.

Only three air raids were reported in the city.

Polish staff Capt. Vaclav Lipinski in an announcement said the German onslaughts with tanks and motorized corps had failed and air raids no longer were a danger to the morale of the people.

Thousands Returning

Thousands who fled the city were said to be returning and volunteering for defense duty.

Meantime, meager reports from announcers and Polish army headquarters at Lwow (Lemberg) indicated that:

German attack has intensified pressure of the giant nut-cracker around Warsaw, while the direct drive from the west continues.

Warsaw's defenders are holding grimly to the gains they reported in pushing German advance troops back from the city's suburbs.

Reinforcements determined not to lose their beloved capital are being rushed to the defense through a narrowing lane from the southeast.

Capital Quieter

The Warsaw radio, at 9 P. M., in a review of the day's fighting, said the capital was quieter than yesterday. Shelling of the city continued, but there were no serious fires resulting. Only three enemy air raids were reported. Polish losses in Warsaw, it was declared, had been but one colonel, two other officers and thirteen soldiers.

Thirty minutes later Mayor Starzinski declared many who had fled the city had returned today to aid in defending their homes.

He warned the population to stay at home at night, as otherwise they would be arrested. Civil courts will resume their work tomorrow, he added, trying minor cases exempted from martial law.

"Many thousands" of young Poles, he related, volunteered today to defend the capital, but the army could not accept them all.

Attack Held Failure

Capt. Vaclav Lipinski, Polish staff officer, in a broadcast declared the German plan to run down Warsaw with tanks and motorized troops "has definitely failed."

The captain said the Germans failed to reckon with Warsaw's "valorous" defenders.

"We will change a mobile war into stationary warfare," he said. "We are accustomed now to air raids. German bombs are badly aimed. Our cellars are safe. If the Germans bring larger forces here, we will do likewise."

Little Change Seen

Failure of the Warsaw radio station to continue news announcements was interpreted by listeners at Budapest as indicating the fifth day's fighting at the capital had brought little change in the bitter siege.

The music told its own story. Translated, the words that accompanied one military march were:

How beautiful is war;
When the Uhlan falls from his horse
His comrades ride gallantly on.
Sleep, comrade, in the dark grave and dream of Poland.

An announcement from an unidentified radio station said two Polish divisions that had been cut off in fighting along Poland's western boundary were marching eastward in an effort to fight their way through to join the the Warsaw defense. Their location was not given.

Others Rush To Aid

Other reinforcements, an announcement from the station at Lwow said, were being rushed into the city. The Warsaw announcer said earlier the defenders, aided by citizen-soldiers, were in fighting positions along the east bank of the Vistula river, which runs through the capital.

The Polish army headquarters declared that the besiegers had been thrust "far into the outskirts of the city" and the nearest German troops were six miles from the center of Warsaw.

Severe fighting was reported around Modlin, where the Bug and Narew rivers join the Vistula. That is nearly twenty miles north of Warsaw. There, it was said, the attack was supported by intensive artillery fire and many tanks.

Ruins Of Old Fort Used

The Polish line at Modlin is hinged to the half-buried ruin of an old fort which was part of the defense works the Russians used in efforts to hold Warsaw during the World War.

A German radio station reported the invaders had forced their way from the northwest to a position east of Warsaw. That would mean they had crossed the Bug river, which runs from east to west, joining the Narew twenty miles north of Warsaw. Observers said, too, such a spearhead narrowed the lane of communication from Warsaw back to Lublin and Lwow in southeastern Poland.

The Warsaw radio said a commission had been set up to check all food supplies remaining in shops and homes in the city. The commission was instructed to supervise equitable distribution.

The radio also became a missing persons service. It announced ten children had become lost during the confusion of an air raid and asked for help in locating their parents.

Government Aids Quit London

7000 Civil Service Workers Moved Out, but Cabinet and Bureau Heads Stay.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The British Government announced today that it was taking steps to remove between 7,000 and 8,000 members of the staffs of governmental departments from London, but stressed that the Government itself was not moving from the capital.

"There is no question of the Government as a whole being evacuated," said a spokesman. "Not a single minister is leaving and none concerned in the wartime activities of the Government is being evacuated.

SEP 13 1939

"The Government itself will not evacuate London if it can possibly remain without loss of efficiency."

The plan for the removal of the Government workers was described as a sectional one, prompted by a desire for some degree of decentralization. It was explained that no Government department was being removed entirely.

Which departments were affected and where the employees were to be taken remained official secrets.

Tommy Atkins in France.

Meanwhile today the British people, ten days at war and prepared for long years of it, seized avivdly on the first trickle of news to tell them that their men, guns and planes were once more in France to fight Germany on the western front.

Official disclosure that the British Expeditionary Force had crossed to France was made in a communique which said that the troops have landed, but "are not yet in action."

French dispatches last week had already reported that British troops had reached French soil.

A communique from the British Information Ministry said:

"For some days past rumors have been current in this country and abroad that British troops have landed in France. The Ministry of Information is now permitted to announce officially that this is so. The troops are not yet in action and no further details can meantime be furnished.

"It is, however, the intention of military authorities to furnish further information from time to time."

The communique was at variance with the ministry's announcement of last night that troops were already taking part in advances on German soil. No explanation was offered concerning today's contradictory statement.

The British newspapers burst out with big headlines declaring that British troops were in action, and giving vivid accounts of the troops' arrival with scenes reminiscent of 1914.

What Newspapers Say.

Though official news was lacking, the papers asserted that these were some of the recent happenings in France:

British contingents marched through French villages singing "Tipperary" and "Here We Are Again" as their fathers had sung them in 1914, and the French cheered again and again, crying "Voila les Tommies! Voila les Anglais!" as they caught sight of the long columns in khaki battle dress.

Artillery and motorized units accompanied the British.

The British have been operating on German soil in thrusts at the Siegfried Line, repulsing several German counter-attacks and consolidating their positions.

Royal Air Force squadrons have flown over the German positions in the face of heavy fire on reconnaisance and photographic flights and fighter planes from British and French squadrons have driven off German planes which attempted to reconnoiter over the Allied lines.

British and French anti-aircraft batteries have been in action side by side.

To Smash Nazidom.

Meanwhile, today the British Government placed new emphasis on its pledge that Great Britain will fight until the Nazi regime in Germany is smashed.

Said a communique of the Ministry of Information: "No confidence is felt in any assurance he (Hitler) may give, and Great Britain is therefore justified in requiring that peace should be concluded with a German Government whose word may be trusted."

Said Capt. Anthony Eden, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs: "There can be no peace until Nazism is banished from the earth. The people of this country are ready to fight a very long war if need be to rid the world of Hitlerism."

Neutral observers have noted widespread anxiety among the British people to get on with reinforced action to stop Hitler on land, at sea and in the air after nine days of the Anglo-German state-of-war.

Authorized persons had denounced vigorously what they called German propaganda in neutral countries to the effect that with developments in Poland "the show is over."

The Ministry of Information devoted an entire bulletin last night to the Saturday address of Field Marshall Goering which had been characterized here as a German "peace feeler." The bulletin declared that Hitler had kept none of his "many promises" to foreign countries, and that Great Britain was justified in insisting "peace should be concluded with a German Government whose word may be trusted."

1914 Record Beaten.

The press commented with satisfaction upon the empire's response to the war.

"In Canada and everywhere throughout the empire, the challenge of Hitlerism is being met with a unanimity and a determination even more impressive than in 1914," said the London Times.

The Daily Telegraph observed: "The resources of a fifth of the world, on Field Marshal Goering's estimate, are now devoted irrevocably to the overthrow of Naziism. That should cause a sad searching of heart in German councils."

Official secrecy over the early movements of British troops had a 1914 parallel, but the Tommies of 1939 went into action much more promptly than did those of twenty-five years ago. In 1914, Great Britain declared war on Germany on August 4 and British troops were ready for action in France seventeen days later. This time Great Britain declared war on Germany on September 3 and the official announcement that the Tommies were in action followed on the ninth succeeding day.

BLACKOUT IRKS MANY BRITONS

SEP 13 1939

Lord Hugh Cecil Demands End of Stringent Rules.

CALLS SAFETY WRONG IDEA

London Express Also Urges That the Town Be Lighted Up.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The stringency of Great Britain's air raid precautions was strongly criticized today by Lord Hugh Cecil, world war aviator and brother of Vscount Cecil, the noted worker for peace.

These precautions have kept most theaters and other entertainment centers closed through ten days of war and have turned the night hours into complete blackness.

Urging a general reopening of theaters, Lord Hugh suggested in a letter to the Times that the measures against air raids "sometimes remind one of the precautions that the White Knight took against mice and sharks."

[The White Knight, in "Alice Through the Looking Glass," carried a mouse trap and put anklets on his horse for protection against shark bites. When Alice remarked that he was not likely to ride through sharks or to find mice on a horse's back, he replied that the precautions were "just in case."]

SEP 13 1939

For Lighting Up the Town.

Lord Hugh added:

"It is not desirable, especially in wartime, to encourage individuals . . . to think too much about their own safety. Every one should be encouraged to say, 'After all, it does not matter if I am killed.' It surely is a community that has a high martial spirit, indifferent to danger, which wins a war, rather than one in which everyone is thinking how to be safe."

A Daily Express editorial was all for lighting up the town, saying that it would show the enemy nothing he doesn't already know.

London's blackout, as a matter of fact, is so black that the people still tumble into curbs, buildings and each other, and the Government is considering letting out a few more chinks of light.

The Londoners, on the other hand, have discovered one way to beat the blackout and get a little light: A lily-shiped piece of white paper will reflect the glow of a cigarette.

Censorship.

Britain is clamping the tightest sort of restrictions on the movement of printed matter to and from the United Kingdom, with exceptions only by permission of the Chief Censor. For a week, the country has forbidden any one to bring in newspapers, books, maps or photographs except by mail.

Beginning on September 25, the prohibition will apply to mailing such matter out of Great Britain as well as to taking it out. This second rule applies to twenty-seven countries, not including the United States, France or Germany.

The highly influential Yorkshire Post, in an editorial captioned "Chaotic Censorship," said today:

"We do urge that there should be introduced some power of imagination in dealing with news and, at the very least, uniformity. But the censorship as at present applied is not only operating to some disadvantage in this country, it is having a most unfortunate effect in countries yet neutral.

"We believe it to be the case that some newspapers in such countries hitherto consistently friendly to this country and France, have given instructions to suspend their own services to London because the information available to their representatives here is either so meager as not to be worth the cost of transmission at all, or else it is so long delayed as to be worthless when it is received."

The editorial at another point said that "a censorship which allows one newspaper to announce the destruction of one particular submarine whose activities have been widely heralded, and refuses to allow other newspapers to present the same news, is not censorship at all. It is simply chaos."

Submarine—Menace Past?

Citing the handling of still another sea incident last Sunday, the editorial continued:

"These inconsistencies are liable to be all the more disturbing because for a long time before the war the public had been given to understand that the submarine menace was no longer considered by our authorities as very serious, in view of the development of means for meeting it. There is no doubt that this confident anticipation will be realized in due course, but in the meantime public morale is not assisted by the application regarding shipping news of a censorship which acts in some cases with incomprehensible rigidity and is entirely absent in others."

CENSORS SLOW FLOW OF NEWS FROM BRITAIN

Plans Made In Advance Have Failed To Work Out In Practice

Press And Radio Of England And Other Nations Get Only Trickle

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 12 (Passed by censor). Censorship, imposed to guard military secrets, has cut the flow of war news to a trickle for the English and slowed transmission to the press and radio of other countries.

The difficulties—delay and limited information—continuing into the second week of the war, are attributed in part by officials to the problem of organization involved in setting up censorship and to the short time for preparation.

One difficulty appears to be that plans made in advance have not worked out in practice.

Delayed Eight Hours

This is attributed chiefly to lack of agreement between ministry officials and military authorities.

The following section was delayed eight and a half hours by the British censorship:

Under the front-page heading, "Why the morning papers were late," the London Star recounted in detail the censorship muddle over news of British troops in France.

Here is the Star's story:

Many London morning newspapers were delivered late or not at all today owing to the action of the censorship.

Withdrew Authority

Late last night authority was given by the Ministry of Information to an announcement that British troops were fighting side by side with the French.

At 11.33 P. M. the ministry withdrew their authority.

Some newspapers had received the censor's sanction to print the facts at an earlier hour and the story was already in the early editions, being given great prominence on the front page at 1.45 A. M. Tuesday.

Meanwhile other editions of the newspaper were being prepared without the banned stories.

Finally Authorized

Then at 2.25 A. M. came a final announcement from the Ministry of Information authorizing the release of the news after all, the Star related.

Today the Ministry of Information issued a communique saying British troops were in France, but had not yet been in action. It did not explain this contradiction with the earlier story.

Apparently because of the small amount of news officially released for publication, radio broadcasts, including those through American networks, also have been curtailed.

Radio script must be submitted to a censor at the British Broadcasting Company. He reads it, then listens to the broadcast to make sure any changes he suggests are carried out.

Reports to King George

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP).—At a half-hour audinece with King George late today Prime Minister Chamberlain gave an account of his surprise trip to France. It was believed the Prime Minister would mention his important discussions with French leaders when he gives his second "war bulletin" to the House of Commons tomorrow afternoon. Chamberlain gave his first review of the war situation to the House last Thursday and such statements are expected periodically.

It was announced today that steps were being taken to transfer between 7,000 and 8,000 government employees to secret points in the country. A spokesman emphasized: "There is no question of the government as a whole being evacuated." He added that "not a single minister" nor any one concerned with the war-time activities of the government was leaving the capital.

"The government itself will not evvacuate London if it can possibly remain without loss of efficiency," the spokesman said.

The plan for removal of government workers was described as a sectional on eprompted by a desire for some degree of decentralization. It was explained that no government department was being removed entirely. Which departments were affected and where the employees were to be taken remained official secret.

Learn Troops Are in France

The announcement followed by some hours final censorial authorization for publication in Great Britain for the first time of news of the arrival of British troops, planes and equipment in France. (French dispatches last week reported that British troops had landed on French soil.)

The outhorization came after a night of confusion. The government first allowed the news to be published, then rescinded the permission, and finally, early this morning, reinstated the original decision.

The original version said British troops were participating in advances on German soil. A Ministry of Information version issued today said they had not yet seen action. The contradiction was not explained.

On the basis of the first account London afternoon newspapers published under big headlines reports of the Tommies fighting once more beside the French on the western front.

REICH ANSWER TO BLOCKADE IS 'EYE FOR EYE'

Berlin Says Subs Will Be Used To Keep Contraband From England

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 12—Informed sources were emphatic today in saying Germany would always let Great Britain set the pace in a blockade, but that the Reich would match "an eye for an eye."

They declared submarines and other craft would be used for preventing contraband goods from reaching England only to the extent that Britain herself blockades Germany.

It was pointed out, too, that American steamers carrying contraband might not be immune from German submarines.

To Be Warned And Sunk

Since Germany is not likely to have warships in the open sea capable of towing neutral contraband-bearing vessels into port, such ships, if sighted by submarines, probably will be warned and then sunk, these informants said.

The supreme navy command was preparing a communique so that the public would learn just how the Reich intended to combat Britain's blockade. Until this communique has been issued, Government spokesmen were unwilling to commit themselves as to how the submarine warfare would be conducted except that it would be waged in accordance with international law.

As an example of "correct" submarine warfare the sinking of the British ship Olivegrove was cited. Similarly, it was pointed out, a different set of war rules applies when a submarine is fired at. As a case in point the British steamer Manaar was cited.

Allowed To Leave In Boats

The Olivegrove was sunk off Ireland september 7 after the crew of thirty-three was allowed to leave in lifeboats. All members were picked up by the United States liner Washington. The Manaar was sunk the same day off Portugal. She tried to fight back with a deck gun. Of eighty-eight in the crew, two were known to be dead, three were wounded and seventeen missing.

Informed sources declared the Reich would let Britain take the initiative regarding the designation of contraband goods. If England is willing that neutral shipments of food reach Germany, then Germany will not do anything to interfere with shipment of similar goods to England, they said.

But if, for instance, butter is on the contraband list and a Finnish steamer tries to carry some to England, Germany certainly will seize or sink the vessel—more likely seize her, as the Reich's navy is master of the Baltic.

"It's eye for an eye, tooth for a tooth and butter for butter," one spokesman observed.

Asked whether a neutral vessel halted in the Atlantic might be given the opportunity to turn around and go back home, one informed source replied:

"Certainly not. Then it would simply look around for some other way of reaching England. So there is nothing left for us to do in such a case except sink it."

Ready to Beat Blockade.

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The general impression in Government circles was that Britain's calculation on a war of at least three years' duration meant the British would attempt a hunger blockade as their chief weapon.

"In other words," said the well-informed Dienst Aus Deutschland, "England admits it is not to be a war against Nazi leaders, as advertised, but another [illegible] war against German women and children."

But leaders said that, with access to large and small neutral States which was lacking in 1914, the blockade now was less likely to succeed. Other quarters indicated German submarines would sink any ship carrying to Britain articles labelled contraband by Britain. These quarters said the submarines would proceed by international rules of submarine warfare.

"What they try to cut us off from," said one official, "we will in turn try to prevent reaching England."

Official quarters also expressed considerable hope the conference of the Oslo Powers at Brussels would take a firm stand against any English blockade which would have an adverse effect on normal trade of neutral States.

Moreover, it was stated in informed circles, the British blockade might force such countries as Yugoslavia, Rumania, Russia, Denmark and the Netherlands to deal with Germany more extensively than normally would be the case.

REICH GIVES WARNING TO NEUTRAL NATIONS

Says Countries Not at War Must Remain Fair

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (AP)—A hint was dropped in semi-official quarters today that Germany might be obliged to change its attitude toward neutral States that are not scrupulously fair and objective toward nations now at war.

The Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, which reflects Foreign Office opinion, said Germany intends as far as possible to maintain normal relations with all neutrals. But the paper warned that Germany expected neutrals to do their utmost to maintain normal political relations with Germany.

The Korrespondenz said Germany had indicated it intended to carry on normal trade with Scandinavian and other neutrals and had informed these States there would be no German objection to their continuing normal relations with nations opposing the Reich in war.

"Germany would regret the necessity of changing its attitude toward neutral nations," the Korrespondenz continued, "but the responsibility would rest first of all on England and secondly on such neutral States as permit England to force them to adopt an unneutral attitude."

'Polonaise' Means Warsaw Still Stands

BUDAPEST, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Eleven tinkling notes, the opening bars of Chopin's "Polonaise," that were sounded every thirty seconds by a xylophone in the Warsaw radio station, let Europe know that Poland's capital still was Polish today even after the station had shut down early this morning.

The screech of air alarms at dawn, drowning out the melody, served as the city's alarm clock.

Chopin, who died and was buried in Warsaw, considers himself a Pole and one of many noted composers to use the polonaise—a stately dance usually in three-quarter time. It is believed to have grown from music used in the processional at Krakow, in 1573, when Henry, Duke of Anjou, came to the throne of Poland.

Turkish Minister's Visit To Moscow Watched

BUDAPEST, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The contemplated visit to Moscow by the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, caused speculation throughout eastern Europe today as to its effect on the line-up of the neutral nations.

Dispatches to the Magyar Nemzet, Budapest newspaper, said that Mr. Saracoglu was likely to attempt to act as a mediator between Great Britain and Russia. They pointed out that Tevfik Rüstü Aras, the Turkish Ambassador to London, recently made a hurried trip home to Ankara for conferences which were followed by Mr. Saracoglu's decision to make the trip to Moscow.

Germans Hear Mussolini Plans New Peace Efforts

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 12—Word spread through Berlin tonight that Chancellor Hitler's partner in the Rome-Berlin Axis, Premier Mussolini, was ready to make new peace efforts now with virtually all Polish territory that was in Germany before 1914 retaken by the Eastern army.

German sources said the Reich troops had pushed far beyond those 1914 limits in their drive to subdue Poland, but Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen said they knew nothing officially of a Mussolini peace proposal.

NAZIS TELL OF RITE

Say They Buried French Flyers Slain Over Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Der Fuehrer, a newspaper published in Karlsruhe, just across the Rhine from the Franco-German border, reported today that two French Air Force officers who were killed in a battle over German territory last Friday were buried in the local cemetery yesterday afternoon with full military honors.

An army detachment carried the coffins to the graves, the newspaper said, and a Catholic priest conducted the service.

The Karlsruhe army commander, the newspaper added, deposited a wreath while his soldiers fired three salvos over the graves.

1939

Ration Cards Published

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (AP).—The German official gazette published facsimiles today of new-food rationing cards which will take effect late this month. Cigar smokers were limited in their purchases to five at a time.

Separate cards were provided for bread, flour, meat, fats, marmalade, sugar and general provisions. One card also provided for produce, such as eggs, rice, grain and other articles which will be determined by food officials.

There will be special bread, meat and fat cards for children up to six years and between six and fourteen.

Work was reported continuing as usual at Fallersleben, seat of Germany's huge Volkswagen, or People's Car, industry. With the rationing of gasoline, however, most workers have been unable to operate automobiles.

Similarly, it was said that construction was uninterrupted on the huge workers' resort being built to accommodate 20,000 on Rugen Island, off the north coast of Germany.

Foreign Office officials revealed that, although Germany is at war, work on the Adolf Hitler superhighways was continuing at the same pace as before hostilities started.

SFP 13 1939

These broad highways, crisscrossing Germany, are considered of military importance because of the speed with which the army may move its motorized equipment.

The extent to which Germany was fortifying herself on the home front was revealed further today. The "Deutsche Handelsdienst" said Germany would soon be in a position, if necessary, to guarantee by chemical methods her vegetable and animal fats and replace fats for industrial purposes with domestic natural or synthetic substitutes.

DIPLOMATS SAY DUCE IS IN KEY SPOT FOR SPOILS

Generally Scout Idea Of Peace If Germans Conquer Poland

SFP 13 1939

Nazi Offers So Far Surpass Those Of English And French

SFP 13 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 12—Diplomatic circles expressed belief tonight that the outcome of the European war and the future of Europe hinged on diplomatic conversations now under way between Great Britain and Italy.

The deepest secrecy shrouds the repeated conferences between Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, and the British Ambassador, Sir Percy Loraine.

The British-Italian conservations follow by a week talks between the French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, and Count Ciano, after which the French envoy returned to Paris to report.

Meanwhile, a Japanese military mission which has been visiting Italian arms factories at Turin since the signature of the German-Soviet Russian non-aggression pact caused it to cancel a trip to Germany, now is said to be considering a trip to London. Japanese sources said a decision would be made after the mission returns to Rome next Friday.

Move Of Importance

No diplomat of any other country pretends to have precise information on what is being discussed among the French and British allies and Italy, but most of the diplomatic corps believe a move of the greatest importance is afoot.

Some shrewd analysts in the corps have ideas about the conversations, however.

These quarters now generally scout the idea of peace after Germany conquers Poland—if she does. They believe Britain and France will not give in, for it would be a defeat by default. Likewise, they believe Mussolini realizes Great Britain and France are determined to fight the German Führer, Adolf Hitler, for years, if necessary.

In Key Position

The analysts express the belief that Mussolini is in a key position—his entrance into the war on either side might decide it.

Should he join Germany and should the combination win, they said, he would have the choice of picking British and French properties around the Mediterranean and in Africa.

But he would be faced with a terrific offensive from France, the possible closing of the Suez Canal and the immediate loss of Ethiopia, and attacks on Libya from both Tunisia and Egypt.

If Mussolini joins Britain and France, the diplomatic quarters hold, the position would be reversed.

With 250 miles of frontier with Germany protected by Alpine peaks, Mussolini would have little to fear from a Reich occupied on two other fronts.

Provide New Frontier

On the other hand, he could provide Britain and France with a new frontier to harass Germany and could cut off Germany's supplies from the south.

It was widely believed in the diplomatic corps that Italy's entrance into the war on the side of Great Britain and France would galvanize the recently formed neutral bloc in southeastern Europe into action against Germany.

The chief obstacle, in the opinion of these diplomats, is that at present Great Britain and France have offered no price approaching the spoils Italy would reap on Germany's side.

Meanwhile, the Italian press has become more circumspect than ever since the war began, refraining from attacking either Britain or France while indicating, however, their continued sympathy with the Germans.

Might Pierce Line

Italian military experts, in published comments on war operations, recognized for the first time today that the French and British might succeed in piercing Germany's Siegfried Line, which hitherto has been described as impregnable.

The papers advised their readers against further ridicule relative to inactivity on the German-French front with the comment that the French offensive required long and careful preparation, which probably would produce a terrific battle.

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF WINDSOR HOME

SFP 13 1939

Ex-King and Wife Reach England From France.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The British Ministry of Information announced tonight that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor have arrived in England.

The Ministry did not immediately disclose where the Duke and his Duchess had taken up residence in England.

The Duke came to England for the first time since he gave up the throne on December 10, 1936, to marry American-born Wallis Warfield.

When the Duke and Duchess left Antibes, France, for England after the outbreak of war, it was understood here that they would quietly take up residence at the former King's old residence, Fort Belvedere, outside London.

Some thought the Duke might enter active service with the armed forces. However, there was no immediate announcement as to what duties would be assigned him.

Duke And Duchess Of Windsor Return To England Once More

Public Learns They Are Back Again, But No Details When And How Are Given

SFP 13 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 12—The Duke of Windsor and his American-born Duchess, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, have come "home" after nearly three years on alien soil.

Expectant Britons learned from a terse announcement by the British ministry of information tonight that their former King Edward VIII and the woman for whom he renounced his imperial throne December 10, 1936, are now in England.

The two-line communique read: "Mention may now be made of the arrival of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor in England and where they are staying."

But where the Duke and Duchess are not even high officials of the Royal household knew. Fort Belvedere, favorite residence of the former king has been kept ready by a skeleton staff against the day of his eventual return, which every Briton has expected. Darkening war clouds over Europe brought a fresh press campaign for his return.

Final arrangements for the boat trip from France were completed, it was authoritatively learned, during the week end. The Duchess' known dislike for flying was believed to have been a deciding factor in favor of the channel crossing by boat.

Complete secrecy surrounded the journey of the romantic couple from southern France, although their return had been expected almost from day to day since the outbreak of war. They were met at a Channel port and whisked away in a motor car—perhaps to the home of his friend and former aide de camp, Major Edward Dudley Metcalfe.

The Duke, who celebrated his forty-fifth birthday in June, is a field marshal on the active list and is colonel in chief of the Welsh Guards. Some thought the Duke might enter active service with the armed forces, but there was no immediate announcement.

A119

EDITORS

SFP 13 1939

TO COVER DEVELOPMENTS THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER

THIRD GRAF LONDON NIGHT LEAD WINDSORS XXX ARE STAYING."

LATER THE BRITISH PRESS ASSOCIATION SAID THE DUKE AND HIS DUCHESS

WERE MET AT PORTSMOUTH BY MAJOR EDWARD DUDLEY METCALFE, FORMER

AIDE DE CAMP AND FRIEND, AND LADY ALEXANDER METCALFE, WITH WHOM THEY WILL STAY FOR A FEW WEEKS. THE METCALFES HAVE A COUNTRY HOME IN SUSSEX.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS XXX 5TH GRAF ELIMINATING 4TH GRAF

BEGINNING "BUT WHERE THE DUKE XXX ENDING XXX HIS RETURN." AND

REFERENCE TO MAJOR METCALFE IN 5TH PGH

WE113SPED

1939

30.24—3279

30.24—3279

KING WEARS UNIFORM

Has Put Away Civilian Garb —Queen's Days Busy.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—King George VI, working an average of sixteen hours a day, has put away his civilian clothes and worn only service uniforms since the war started.

The King and Queen Elizabeth, who canceled all social engagements at the outset of hostilities, have new date books to record the round of official visits that keep them busy.

While the Queen visits hospitals, air raid precaution organizations and nursing centers, the King studies the latest reports from the fighting forces. Outside the chiefs of staff he is the best informed man in the empire on military matters. He has the only key to the red dispatch case that arrives from Whitehall.

But like all other Londoners, the King and Queen obeyed the A. R. P. wardens and took shelter during London's three air raid warnings.

SEP 13 1939

BALKANS FIGURE IN TRADE FIGHT

Warring Powers Seek Vital Supplies From Neutrals.

NAZIS DEMAND OIL AND FOOD

But Britain and France Offer Gold in Place of Promises.

SEP 13 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Europe's warring Powers are engaged in a trade struggle for vital supplies from the southeastern corner of the Continent.

Britain's blockade of German ports, threatening to cut off the flow of materials from overseas, and German attacks on British shipping have put three questions to the neutral nations of the southeast.

They are whether to:

1. Fulfill old German contracts or enter into new contracts to ship goods to the Reich with the possibility they never may be paid;

2. Sell to England and France for gold; or

3. Accept offers from Rome to barter their products for Italian goods.

Just how to answer these questions was reported reliably today to have been the main issue at a conference of railroad officials from Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Bulgaria at Belgrade. There a list of German demands was said to have been read.

Germans Insist on Trade.

The Germans were insistent that all old contracts be kept and all normal trade channels with the Reich be kept open.

French and English buyers appeared with large orders for grain, metals and other wartime necessities, for which they offered to pay in gold.

The Italians also made an unprecedented bid for trade with neutral countries.

Reaction of the southeastern nations to these rival trade demands appeared divided. The first concrete answer, however, came today with the announcement in Bucharest that large quantities of cereals had been sold to British, French and Netherlands importers.

The sales sent prices upward in some cases as much as 50 per cent.

Demand Reich Gold.

Yugoslavia also took a stand with the announcement that if Germany wishes goods, she must send her own freight cars and pay in gold.

What the situation means to Germany is indicated by recent import statistics. One of the Reich's prime wartime needs is oil, but if the blockade cuts off overseas sources, Germany must look to Rumania, the only big oil-producing neutral on the Continent, for her supply.

Germany's peacetime oil imports totaled about 4,095,000 metric tons annually. Her war needs are estimated at 8,000,000 tons, yet Rumania has been exporting only 5,577,000 tons, and that figure constantly is decreasing.

Other goods that Germany wants from this area include beef, pork, corn, milk, eggs, butter, cheese, iron ore, copper, lead and antimony. The total output of these products in Southeastern Europe, however, could not meet Germany's peacetime needs, much less her wartime demands.

SEP 13 1939

RUSSIA LIQUIDATES BORDER VIOLATORS

Moscow Newspaper Reports Execution of Spy.

MOSCOW, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The "liquidation" of six violators of Soviet Russia's "southern frontier" was reported today in the newspaper Red Star.

The country from which the six crossed the frontier was not specified. Possibly it was Rumania or Turkey. The report said that two were shot while trying to escape and that the other four were formally "liquidated."

The same newspaper said that a spy named Ignat was arrested within the western frontier and after a trial at Smolensk was "given what he deserved." The report indicated that he was charged with espionage on behalf of Poland and Great Britain. He was tried by a special military tribunal.

An article in the Government newspaper Izvestia said today that "more than 200 spies and diversionists who attempted to cross the border" had been captured by the family of a railway guard near the Soviet-Polish frontier. It was unofficially reported that numerous refugees from Poland had already flocked across the Soviet border.

Izvestia also said that 250,000 wives of railway workers were beginning to learn their husbands' jobs in case of war.

Many anxious housewives formed lines at stores to purchase supplies and foodstuffs, especially sugar. The demand has been greatly increased by mobilization measures on the western frontier.

Every Rubber Tire In Reich Confiscated For State Use

Seizure Ordered In Conjunction With Decree Which Virtually Bans Use Of Autos After Sept. 20

SEP 13 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 12—Adopting a stringent economy measure, Germany tonight anounced the confiscation by the state of every privately owned rubber tire in the Reich.

The confiscation order, issued by the Federal Bureau for Rubber and Asbestos with the approval of the Ministry of Economics, was in conjunction with a decree which virtually prohibits the use of automobiles after September 20.

Collection stations to which citizens will be obliged to bring new, partly used and worn-out tires are being established. Tires in dealers' stock and reserve tires owned by individuals but not actually on cars or spare wheels must be delivered to the collection agencies at once.

Tires now in use may be held by the owner, who is required, however, to keep them in good condition until he is notified to deliver them to the state.

SEP 13 1939

The announcement said owners would be paid on the basis of appraisals which fall into five degrees of value, depending on the mileage of the tires.

The decree regarding automobiles, published yesterday, practically abolished the private use of automobiles by revoking permits to buy gasoline unless the driver is able to prove the use of his car is in the state's interest. The confiscation of tires indicated not only gasoline, but rubber was regarded as an urgent war necessity.

It was recalled that during the World War Germany did not confiscate tires until the war was almost over.

Persons with permits enabling them to buy gasoline after September 20 may keep tires, but must get special permission to buy replacements.

The order affected tires of automobiles, trucks, trailers, sport planes, bicycles, motorcycles and wagons.

The German official gazette today published facsimiles of new food rationing cards which will take effect late this month—and cigar smokers were limited in their purchases to five at a time.

cations, will be limited to five. This was attributed to the rationing of paper.

Some churches have been closed. These are in outlying sections and it was explained that the worshipers there could not reach bomb shelters in time in case of emergency.

Shortage of Skilled Men.

The Labor Front announced that the teaching of apprentices was being speeded. It was said that Germany feels a shortage of skilled workers.

Work was reported continuing as usual at Fallersleben, seat of Germany's huge people's car industry. With the rationing of gasoline, however, most workers have been unable to operate automobiles.

Similarly, it was said, construction was uninterrupted on the huge workers' resort being built to accommodate 20,000 on Rugen Island, off the north coast of Germany.

Motor Ban Due September 20.

Meanwhile Germany took additional restrictive measures in the matter of consumption of materials. A decree was issued forbidding the use of automobiles after September 20, except in the interests of the State. Private use of cars will be permitted only by special permit issued upon proof of necessity.

Berlin's street car and omnibus service, which was limited a week ago, was reduced further by the shortening of service on many lines.

Berlin newspapers displayed prominently a dispatch saying that Russian ships en route to England with cargoes of lumber had been ordered to return to their home ports. The item was another of the increasing number of hints that Germany expects substantial aid from Russia.

Nazis Curb Church Services

Protestants and Catholics Alike Feel Effect of War-time Restrictions.

SEP 13 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—It was officially disclosed today that Catholic and Protestant churches had been placed under war-time restrictions, but spokesmen said that the measures were made necessary by the war and did not constitute an attempt to interfere with the church.

Under the restrictions the number of Catholic church publications, such as diocesan organs and scientific and religious research publi-

AUSTRIAN UNIT MAY AID ALLIES

Paris Paper Urges Exiles Be Allowed to Fight.

SEP 13 1939

NO FOOD SCARCITY IN CAPITAL

Most Animals Are Removed to Provinces From City Zoos.

PARIS, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—War notes from the French capital:

Large groups of agitated women gather daily outside the Collombes Stadium, where their husbands and sons are housed in a concentration camp for interned Germans and Austrians

Newspapers have urged the Government to allow Austrians who wished to fight for France to form a legion, asserting that such a move "would have a demoralizing effect on the German Army."

No food scarcity has been apparent yet, but restaurants have apologetically reduced the variety of their menus.

Five and ten franc paper notes are in wide use in the wake of an order calling in all coin.

The authorities have disposed of all snakes in the Paris zoos and moved most of the animals to the provinces. The sea lions, however, remain in their cages, showing complete indifference to the wail of air-raid sirens.

Most American places of business are remaining open with skeleton staffs.

Hundreds of volunteers, including many women, have filed into St. Antoine Hospital to give blood for wounded poilus. The blood is tested, catalogued and placed in refrigeration for emergency use.

Before the war, the hospital paid 500 francs (about $10) a liter. Now there is no question of remuneration.

First British Casualty.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—War notes from the British capital:

All merchants are asked to maintain their current prices.

Temporary rates of payment for the use of requisitioned vehicles have been published. Taxicabs, for example, bring the equivalent of $10 a week.

Sergt. Leslie Robert Ward, 26 years old, may be Great Britain's first war casualty. His wife, an expectant mother, has been informed that he is missing.

Hundreds of motorists summoned to court for minor traffic offenses were told that the cases would be dropped.

BRITAIN ASKS MORE GRAIN

Demands Farmers Cultivate 1,500,000 Acres Coming Year

London, Sept. 12 (AP)—Britain urged her farmers today to push work on fall cultivations, demanding another 1,500,000 acres be put under the plough this coming year to insure against failing food supplies in the event of a long war.

Describing this program as "ambitious," the Information Ministry told the country's farmers they would be required this time to do in one year what "it took four years to attain in the last war."

SEP 13 1939

LUXEMBURG ACTS TO KEEP WAR AWAY

SEP 13 1939

Bars All Aliens From Town at Franco-German Line.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The little Duchy of Luxemburg, attempting to keep the war from its eastern frontier, today prohibited the presence of foreigners a Schengen, which borders the French village of Apach and is separated from Perl, Germany, by the Moselle River, only 100 feet wide at this point.

The most considerable actions of the war in the west have occurred near the duchy's frontier.

Luxemburgers at the border reported that until Sunday French and German sentries patrolled opposite banks of the Moselle without shooting at each other. Since then occasional shots have been exchanged, a number of spent bullets falling in Luxemburg territory.

Machine gunners, separated by 400 feet of no man's land, sit facing each other awaiting the order to fire. Overhead war planes circulate undisturbed.

WELLS LOOKS TO AMERICA

Writer Sees Main Hope Here for Better Post-War World

SEP 13 1939

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12 (AP).—H. G. Wells, surveying Europe's war, declared today that he saw "an outcome less hopeful than in 1914"—with America perhaps the likeliest originator of an improved world.

"For me it is not merely winning the war, only whether the world will know better times after it is ended," the British writer said in an interview. "I know my people, and if they say they are ready to fight three years, then they are ready."

Russia's biggest problem is in the Far East, and she will not "effectively mix into European affairs," he said. He viewed a neutral Italy as "less welcome in the present situation than as an antagonist."

This is not a "new war," but a continuation of the conflict of 1914 and its unsolved problems, Mr. Wells declared.

Scandinavian Countries Plan Joint War Talks

High Officials Set Sept. 18-19 for Copenhagen Meeting

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Danish Foreign Office announced tonight that the Premiers and Foreign Ministers of Sweden, Norway, Finland and Denmark would meet Sept. 18-19 in Copenhagen to discuss the war situation. Problems of neutrality especially, it said, would be discussed.

SEP 13 1939

(The Oslo powers committee, representing the Scandinavian countries and Finland, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxemburg, meanwhile adjourned sine die after meeting for two days in Brussels. A communique said the committee had noted "the complete identity of attitude among the represented countries" on problems of commercial exchanges arising from the war.)

War to Stop Winter Olympic.

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—War is expected to halt preparations for the winter Olympics at Garmisch-Patenkirschen. The organizing committee has asked the Reich Government for definite instructions and informed sources said they expected preparations would cease.

Naval Blockades Stop Belgium Food Exports

British and German Orders Force Canceling of Licenses

BRUSSELS, Sept. 12 (AP).—Belgium prohibited food exports tonight, canceling existing licenses and withholding others, in consequence of British and German blockade instructions.

His $950 Nap Makes Danes Forget the War

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 12 (AP).—The costly drowsiness of a well fed Bogense Village restaurant keeper almost pushed war news off Copenhagen front pages today.

The restaurant keeper had bet 5,000 crowns (about $950) he could walk around the outside of Denmark in three months, pulling the nation's oldest car.

With one day to spare and only three miles to go he stopped at an inn and enjoyed a pre-victory feast. Then he overslept and lost the bet by an hour.

SEP 13 1939

BULLETINS

Chamberlain to Report on War Tomorrow.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain will give his second report on the war with Germany tomorrow afternoon before Parliament, it was disclosed tonight. He gave his first review of the situation last Thursday.

It was explained that such statements would be made periodically in fulfillment of his undertaking to give the House of Commons all information compatible with the national interest.

SEP 13 1939

Egyptian King at Italian Border.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—King Farouk left today to inspect the Egyptian, British and Indian troops stationed in the western desert which borders on Italian Libya. He will return on Thursday.

Spain Interning Belligerent Ships.

MADRID, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Spain, in seeking to keep ships moving in line with her neutrality policy, has ordered internment for all belligerent vessels failing to leave port on twenty-four hours' notice. Eighty-three merchantmen have taken refuge at Algeciras and nearly fifty at Vigo, where thirty German vessels were interned after twenty-four had sailed. A score of ships were scattered through northern Mediterranean ports.

Helping to relieve harbor congestion at Gibraltar, British destroyers are convoying groups of refugee merchantmen, but sixty-seven vessels remained there.

Trinidad Backs War Declaration.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, B. W. I., Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The Trinidad Legislature has unanimously adopted a resolution pledging fullest co-operation with the British Government in the war.

SEP 13 1939

British Woman Killed in Warsaw.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Information announced today that the wife of the British passport officer in Warsaw, Mrs. J. Shelley, was killed in an air raid last week.

Liege Fair Closing.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The Liege International Fair is closing prematurely because of the war, and officials suggested today that the buildings might be converted into barracks, hospitals or refugee quarters.

Aga Khan Rallies Moslems for Allies.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Information today said the Aga Khan had, "as in 1914," placed his personal services at the disposal of the Government of India in addition to making an appeal to his millions of Moslem followers to serve the British cause.

Swiss Bar Women as Army Truck Drivers.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The general staff informed woman automobile drivers today that despite Switzerland's general mobilization the Swiss Army trucks and cars would continue to be driven by men. Women volunteers were told, however, that they might drive ambulances for auxiliary services such as the Red Cross.

SEP 13 1939

Finnish Ship Is Blown Up.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Fourteen men were killed today when the Finnish bark Olivebank was blown up about 105 miles southwest of Esbjerg, southwestern Denmark. Seven men, picked up by a Danish fishing boat said that the ship had struck a mine. The Olivebank was a 2,795-ton sailing vessel out of Mariehamn, Finland.

Radio Station WMCA Accused Of Violating Foreign Secrets

FCC Says It Intercepted and Broadcast British and German Military Orders—License May Be Revoked.

SEP 13 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The Federal Communications Commission accused the Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company, Inc., licensee of radio station WMCA, New York city, today of illegally intercepting and broadcasting secret radio communications sent by the governments of Germany and Great Britain.

"The FCC ordered the company to show cause by September 15 why its license should not be revoked "for violation of and failure to observe the provisions of the communications act of 1934 . . . constituting conduct by said licensee contrary to the public interest."

The FCC said that it had "information in its possession tending to establish" that WMCA "caused the interception of secret radio communications sent by the governments of Germany and Great Britain, respectively, containing orders to the naval or military forces of said governments to govern the movement of said forces in time of war, and thereafter cause said messages to be decoded and broadcast over the facilities of station WMCA, all without authority of the respective senders of said communications."

Bad Time to Do It.

The commission added that "during the period of tense international relations" public interest requires "strict observance by the licensees of radio broadcast stations in this country of all international undertakings and Federal legislation relating to the secrecy of international communications."

This country, the FCC added, has agreements with governments, including Germany and Great Britain, to take the necessary measures to prohibit unauthorized interception and disclosure of radio communications not intended for the general public.

The FCC said that Donald Flamm was the sole owner of WMCA. He is listed in the commission's records as president, treasurer and director of the company. Two other officers also are listed. They are Sidney Flamm, secretary and director, and William Weisman, vice-president and director.

Flamm Says 'No Statement.'

Donald Flamm, president of radio station WMCA, issued a statement this afternoon denying that the station had violated any regulations. His statement follows:

"In the absence of any notification from the Federal Communications Commission, we have no statement to make regarding this matter. However, on the basis of information furnished to us by the newspapers, we wish to emphasize that WMCA has committed no violation of regulations and that its broadcasting of news was done only through wholly accredited and responsible news-gathering agencies."

NO COMPULSION IN RADIO PACT

White House Denies Part in War News Policy.

HORROR BROADCASTS BANNED

Three Major Chains in Agreement on Self-censorship.

SEP 13 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—The agreement of the three major radio chains to attempt to avoid "undue suspense" in broadcasting war news was said at the White House today to have been undertaken without Government prompting.

Stephen Early, press secretary, said the policy decision, announced last night by Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, "was not prompted by Government suggestion."

The broadcasters—National, Columbia and Mutual—asserted they would be "temperate, responsible and mature" in their dissemination of war news and seek to prevent "horror, suspense and undue excitement."

The White House secretary said the administration would like very much to see "parity" between press and radio in the collection and distribution of war news. He reiterated that the administration wanted no censorship of either press or radio.

Announcement of the broadcasting policy came after a conference of radio officials with Chairman James Lawrence Fly and other Federal Communications Commission authorities.

Sources to Be Identified.

An earnest attempt to distinguish between fact, official statement, responsible reports, rumors and propaganda will be made, and under the terms of the agreement the public will be kept fully informed as to the sources of these various reports. European broadcasts of news and news commentary is left to the individual chains, but the agreement suggests that "it is advisable that these broadcasts be by Americans as far as possible."

30.24 -3281

30.24—3281

In case broadcasts become available from the scenes of battle, bomb shelters, refugee camps, &c., the chains agree to use good taste and judgment in preventing these programs from being unduly harrowing. Rebroadcasting of propaganda picked up on European stations shall be clearly identified as to source sufficiently often to keep listeners aware of it.

The same general principles will apply to the broadcast of domestic news, according to the agreement. All news broadcasts, whether sponsored or unsponsored, are to remain in strict control of the broadcaster and news analysts are to be confined strictly to explaining and evaluating facts without expression of personal editorial judgment.

"Nothing in this," says the agreement, "is intended to forbid any news broadcaster from attempting to evaluate the news as it develops, provided he substantiates his evaluation with facts and attendant circumstances. His basis for evaluation should be, of course, impersonal, sincere and honest."

No propaganda in connection with the war will be allowed in commercial announcements or the context of commercial programs, except as provided in news broadcasts.

"The safeguards of fairness and program balance now applied in the handling of speeches on controversial issues," concludes the agreement, "will continue to be applied, and, in order to make this effective, every effort will be made to obtain the text of speeches before they are scheduled."

SEP 13 1939

Fewer European Programs.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—American broadcasting companies have curtailed their trans-Atlantic broadcasts from London of European war developments during the last week. Apparently this is partly due to the small amount of news officially released for publication.

Fewer commentators are heard on the international broadcasts.

The script for news or comment must be submitted to a censor at the British Broadcasting Company—usually a regular member of the BBC staff assigned as a censor. He reads and returns it to the speaker with any suggested changes, then listens to the broadcast.

The radio censors look mainly for military information which might be useful to the enemy.

U. S. Men Seek Arms Cache on Western Coast

$5,000,000 Deal to Sell Guns Believed Blocked by Neutrality Measures

SEP 13 1939

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—"The Chronicle" said tonight four Federal agencies were conducting an investigation of an armaments ring which had offered arms and munitions valued at between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000 for sale illegally in the San Francisco Bay area.

The newspaper's story recounted: The armaments were cached in this area, but the investigation was being pressed also in New York, Mexico and Los Angeles. The war materials reputedly were offered to belligerents in the present war and to revolutionary parties in Central and South America.

The Federal Bure[illegible] of Investigation, Army and [illegible] intelligence departments and [illegible]ustoms service are engaged in tracing down the armaments, as well as the ringleaders.

The F. B. I. listed the following materials: 100,000 Mauser rifles, caliber 7.92 at $35.50 each; 20,000 military rifles, caliber .303, at $[illegible] each; hand and rifle grenades at $1.60 and $1.55 each; trench mortar shells of various sizes; 300,000,000 cartridges, caliber 7.92 at $37 a thousand; 500,000,000 cartridges .303 caliber at $26 a thousand, and new type small airplane drop bombs at $1.25 each. Gas masks in lots of 10,000 for $4.75 each also were offered for sale.

The armaments were shipped here over a period of several months apparently as part of a plan which failed to get them in the hands of prospective buyers before the European war started. Emergency regulations initiated to preserve American neutrality have made delivery impossible.

No comment was available from agencies reported involved in the investigation.

Mystery Plane Seen Off Boston

Trawler Seaman Says It Bore Swastika on Wings—Coast Guard Begins Inquiry.

SEP 13 1939

BOSTON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—A mysterious "swastika-marked" airplane, flying over the same general area where an unidentified submarine has been in operation, was reported today by a group of American trawlers fishing approximately 190 miles off this port.

Capt. Michael Shea of the trawler Storm, in a radio message to the Associated Press, said one of his seamen had seen the German swastika on the wings of the gray-painted, single-motored bi-plane as it twice circled the fishing fleet at a low altitude yesterday before heading off on the Great Circle route that would lead to Europe.

At the same time, however, Capt. Shea reported that another of the fishermen argued that the plane's markings more closely resembled a star than a swastika.

Coast Guard Inquiry.

Coast Guard officials here promptly reported that they were starting an investigation, but would hazard no immediate official opinion as to whether the plane was of German origin.

Simultaneously, the trawler Delaware reported that it had been informed by the trawler Shawmut on Georges Banks that a submarine had come up close beside it on Sunday night. Further details were not immediately available.

This was the fourth report of a submarine off the New England coast. The first came to the Coast Guard last week from the Pollock Rip lightship, followed by another from the fishing schooner Frances C. Denehy, which said a strange undersea craft had been sighted last Wednesday and Thursday on Georges Bank, in an area where United States Navy officials said no American submarine was in operation. Still another report of a submarine—this time off Nantucket lightship—came today from officers of the British Arandora Star, which docked safely in New York.

Plane Possibly Canadian.

The Boston water front was stirred with conflicting discussion about the strange plane. Some argued the craft might have been of Canadian origin, assigned to investigate the submarine reports. A slight variance of the course on which it left the fishing fleet would have carried the plane to Newfoundland.

Capt. Morton Selig of the trawler Delaware first reported Capt. Shea as saying a "big plane flew over the Storm," but Shea himself indicated the craft was not large.

Shea was quoted by Capt. Selig as saying the plane halted its flight temporarily to circle above the trawler, as though to identify the craft and its nationality.

Canada Gets War Budget

SEP 13 1939

Pay-as-you-go Policy Advanced at Ottawa—Roosevelt Speech Recalled.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 12 (Canadian Press)—Canada will follow a "pay-as-you-go" policy as far as practicable in financing her war costs, J. L. Ilsley, Revenue Minister, told the House of Commons today when he presented the war budget.

He said the Government, believing that every citizen should be ready to share the cost of the war, would "insist on the principle of equality of sacrifice on the basis of the ability to pay."

Parliament last night voted $100,000,000 for war expenditures "in or beyond Canada," but left undecided whether the Dominion would send an expeditionary force to Europe.

Warning that war costs would increase as the struggle continued, Mr. Ilsley forecast a deficit of $156,000,000 on the current fiscal year. He estimated the revenue at $495,000,000.

Expeditionary Force.

In the last budget, expenditures were estimated at $551,000,000. With the $100,000,00 war appropriation added, the total rises to $651,000,000.

Mr. Ilsley said he believed that any borrowing could be done within Canada at interest rates comparable with peace time levels.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, addressing the House in debate on the appropriation measure last night, said it could be assumed an expeditionary force was not being considered at the present time.

Parliament left the door open for possible action, however, by voting down a rider which would have prohibited sending Canadian troops overseas before it passed the bill.

America's Part.

While Parliament was acting, Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia told a Canadian-American audience at Victoria he favored conscription and suggested that if Canada and the United States sent 2,000,000 men abroad the war would soon be over.

Addressing a Kiwanis convention, Mr. Pattullo asserted that Canada is "at war and liable to be attacked," and asked:

"What will the United States do? Will they wait, or carry out the policy of the President?"

He recalled an address by President Roosevelt at Kingston, Ont., on August 18, 1938, in which the President said Americans would not stand idly by if the soil of the Dominion of Canada were threatened by an aggressor.

A reference to the same address came simultaneously from London, where the Ministry of Information, hailing Canada's entry into the war, said:

"While Australia and New Zealand have to rely primarily on the United Kingdom for external defense against aggression, the same does not apply so fully to Canada.

"The Monroe Doctrine, as extended or interpreted last year at Kingston by President Roosevelt on the interests of the United States in the preservation of the integrity of Canada from invasion, places Canada in a special position."

CANADA SPEEDS STIFF WAR TAX PLANS INTO LAW

Drastic Pay-As-You-Go Program Given Speedy Approval In House

Every Citizen Should Share Cost Of Conflict, Ministers Say

SEP 13 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Sept. 12—The Government's war-tax proposals were enacted into law tonight by the House of Commons with unusual parliamentary speed.

The "pay-as-you-go" program for increased taxes on incomes, luxuries and excess profits got quick approval.

In presenting the budget, J. L. Ilsley, Revenue Minister, told the House the Government believed every citizen should be ready to share the cost of the war. Parliament already has voted $100,000,000 for war purposes.

Income Tax Increased

Income taxes are increased twenty per cent. and the higher rate will be paid on the current year's income. Present exemptions and graduations of personal income taxes remain unchanged.

With an estimated deficit for the present financial year, including war costs up to March 31, 1940, of $156,000,000, the Minister said he planned to meet a large portion of it out of increased taxes on luxuries and excess profits.

All Business Hit

All businesses will pay a tax ranging from 10 per cent. to 60 per cent. of profits ranging in excess of 5 per cent. to 25 per cent. of capital, or an alternative tax of 50 per cent. on all profits in excess of the average for the last four years.

Domestic and imported spirits will be taxed an additional $3 per gallon excise duty, the excise tax on imported beers is increased by 9 cents a gallon.

Duties To Be Boosted

The excise duties on cigarettes will be increased by $1 per 1,000 and on tobacco by 5 cents a pound.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King told the House he was opposed to any extension of the regular term of his Government, which is to expire in 1940. He said the House would be summoned again in January and Parliament then could decide what should be done about the next election.

HULL HAS DATA ON THREATS TO U. S. SHIPPING

State Department to Make Position Clear on Acts of Belligerents.

SEP 13 1939

BLOCKADE BECOMES TIGHTER

Berlin Declares Submarines Will Sink Any Craft With Contraband for England.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today the State Department was assembling the full facts behind British and German blockades and the stopping of American ships.

He said he hoped to be able soon to make a statement regarding the department's conclusions.

He made this announcement after having received a telegram from the Waterman Steamship Corporation of Mobile, Ala., informing him that its steamship Wacosta had been stopped by a German submarine Saturday afternoon and searched.

Mr. Hull said he had not received any contraband list from the German Government. One has come from the British.

Statement Studied.

State Department officials studied in silence today a report that a German submarine commander had served notice that all American ships which disregarded commands to halt would be fired upon.

They considered as well a statement that Great Britain had seized as contraband a cargo of resin consigned to Hamburg, Germany, on an American vessel.

Officials declined any immediate comment on these reported incidents, which recalled to some persons the shipping troubles that kept this country's diplomats busy writing notes and protests during the early years of the world war.

American Ship Searched.

Capt. N. Nicolson, executive vice-president of the Waterman Steamship Corporation, reported that its steamship Wacosta had been halted Saturday for three hours off the Irish coast by a German submarine. After a thorough search, the ship was permitted to proceed on her voyage from Glasgow to New York, he added.

Capt. Nicolson said the ship's master, Capt. G. Self, cabled that the submarine commander warned him American ships would be fired upon in the future if they disregarded orders to halt.

The Wacosta is equipped to carry eight passengers, but it was believed she carried more due to the heavy demand for passage by refugees from Europe.

Informed quarters in Berlin, meanwhile, reported that Germany would sink any ship attempting to carry to Great Britain any of the articles on the British contraband list.

The British list, issued last week, included virtually all war materials on a list of absolute contraband. Food and clothing were listed as conditional contraband.

Similar to American List.

Experts on international law pointed out that the British list was almost word for word the list issued by the United States when it went to war in 1917.

They said that a belligerent had a legal right to sink a neutral vessel carrying absolute contraband. If the craft carried conditional contraband, a belligerent had no right to sink it, they added, but might destroy or seize the cargo. In such a case, international law requires that the cargo must be paid for by the country destroying or taking it.

The experts said that before a ship carrying contraband could be sunk legally, the enemy vessel must give the crew time to abandon ship.

The reports from Germany said that submarines from that country would proceed strictly according to internationally accepted rules.

Seize Resin as Contraband.

It was the Columbia Naval Stores Company, Pensacola, Fla., which reported that Britain had seized as contraband 600 barrels of resin consigned to Hamburg aboard another Waterman ship, the Warrior.

Archie S. Mills, manager of the Columbia company, said he believed the cargo was covered by insurance. The Warrior sailed from the United States about a month ago for United Kingdom and German ports.

Officials said meanwhile that a German submarine could refuel in an American port, subject to restrictions contained in President Roosevelt's first neutrality proclamation, but could not use the port as a base of supplies.

The President has not proclaimed Section 8 of the neutrality act, which states that when he shall find that special restrictions placed on the use of American ports by the submarines or armed merchantmen of a foreign state will serve to maintain peace, he may make it unlawful for any submarine or armed merchantman to enter or depart from an American port.

Fuel Is Restricted.

Presumably, the President could proclaim this section after a submarine had entered an American port, which would prevent it from departing.

In the first neutrality proclamation, based on international law, Mr. Roosevelt made it "unfriendly and offensive" for any warship to use an American port as a base for hostile operations. A submarine could get only enough fuel to carry it to the nearest port of its country, and it could get no more fuel for three months. It would also have to leave the American port within twenty-four hours after arriving.

GERMANY HOLDS 8 TO 1 ADVANTAGE IN SINKING SHIPS

17 Allied Craft and 4 Neutral Vessels Lost in Submarine War

SEP 13 1939

By the Associated Press

Germany, pushing her submarine drive against Great Britain to choke off shipments of food and war supplies, held an 8-to-1 advantage today over the Allies in merchant tonnage destroyed in sea warfare.

Nazi submarines in nine days have sunk seventeen Allied ships with a total tonnage of 96,584. The Germans have lost five ships totaling 12,725 tons and a destroyer sunk by accident. In addition four neutral craft have been sent to the bottom.

Sixteen of the allied ships destroyed were British; one, French. The Allied death toll was 136 to at least seven known German dead.

Fourteen men were killed today when the 2,795-Finnish bark Olivebank was blown up about 105 miles southwest of Esbjerg, Southwestern Denmark. Seven men, picked up by a Danish fishing boat, said their ship struck a mine.

The latest casualty, according to the British Ministry of Information, was the British steamship Inverliffey, 9,546 tons, sunk by a submarine. Its crew was reported rescued by the American freighter R. G. Stewart.

POLICY OF U-BOATS TO BE RETALIATION

Berlin Says They'll Merely Parallel Blockade.

SEP 13 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Germany will use submarines and other craft for preventing contraband goods from reaching England only to the extent that Britain herself blockades Germany, it was said here today.

"It's eye for eye, tooth for tooth and butter for butter," one spokesman observed.

American steamships carrying contraband may fall prey to German submarines, it was said.

In the open sea Germany is not likely to have warships which could seize and tow into port any vessels carrying contraband. Hence, such ships if sighted by submarines will in all likelihood be warned, then sunk, said the informants.

Until the Supreme Navy Command issues a communique on just how the Reich intends to combat Britain's blockade, spokesmen were unwilling to commit themselves further except to say that international law would be observed.

SEP 13 1939

Neutrality: As It Is Now And as Roosevelt Wants

Present and Proposed Policies Compared in Detail

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP).—Here, in brief, is a comparison of existing United States policy under the neutrality act with that which the Roosevelt administration has advocated in proposing revision of the neutrality statute:

EXPORTS TO WARRING NATIONS

Present—Shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war (including airplanes) prohibited. Shipments of other goods permitted.

Proposed—No ban against shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war. Exports of all goods to belligerents to be preceded by the transfer of title to the foreign purchasers.

UNITED STATES SHIPPING

Present—American ships free to go wherever international law permits.

Proposed—American ships prohibited from entering combat areas.

TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS

Present—Americans forbidden to travel on ships of belligerents in North Atlantic area adjacent to Europe. Persons returning to this country within ninety days after the outbreak of war excepted. Americans permitted to travel to Europe on United States ships, but only if their business is deemed "imperative."

Proposed——Trvael by Americans restricted in combat areas.

LOANS AND CREDITS

Present—Law prohibits "any person within the United States" to purchase securities of a belligerent nation, but permits ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations in aid of legal transactions.

Proposed—The same.

SOLICITATION OF FUNDS

Present—Solicitation of funds for belligerent governments prohibited, but persons who are not agents of such governments may collect money for relief of human suffering in warring countries if they register with the State Department and make regular reports of their activities.

Proposed—The same.

EXPORT LICENSES

Present—National Munitions Control Board oversees importation and exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war through a licensing system.

Proposed—The same.

SEP 13 1939

Europe Stops Air Service to Latin America

U. S. Holds All of Business, Both in Running Lines and in Aircraft Sales

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP).—Stoppage of air transportation and aircraft exports from Europe to Latin America has created new commerce problems for the neutral nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Aviation experts said today the war in Europe had left the United States alone in air transportation and aircraft sales to Latin America.

Only the Royal Dutch Airlines, they said, continued operating to Latin America from Netherlands West Indies. They do not compete with the United States Lines.

German and French air lines suspended operation from Africa, over the South Atlantic to Brazil then south to Uruguay, Argentina and Chile.

The postal director in Argentina announced this week this had forced him to make arrangements with the Pan American Airways to carry mail to New York and from there to Europe, instead of over the more direct European routes.

Diplomats said delegates to the Inter-American Neutrality Conference in Panama might discuss measures to protect air lines in South American countries from the effects of the European war.

There has been a halt in supplying new airplanes and replacements for German-operated air lines in South America. There is also a possibility that the drain on the Reich's economic resources may mark the end of subsidies to German-owned and operated lines.

U. S. Purchase Suggested

Air transportation is vital to many of the American republics because of vast stretches of mountains, waterfalls and uninhabited lands.

In some diplomatic quarters it was suggested that the American governments could buy the foreign-held shares of the lines operating in their respective countries. Part of the necessary financing might be done in this country, informed persons said, recalling this government's plans to co-operate in inter-American aviation expansion.

In Colombia, the government has already taken steps to merge the German-operated Scadta Air Service with the National Saco Airline.

Pan American Airways, meanwhile, planned to expand its international service in South America, where it also operates numerous subsidiary companies.

Company officials were reported considering filing an application with the civil aeronautics authority to add two Boeing stratosphere planes to their present service.

How Latin America Is Covered

The Pan American Airways, by the end of last year, operated 21,738 miles of regular air service in Latin America.

The German Deutsche Lufthansa covered 3,738 miles and air France, 3,409.

In addition, air lines under varying degrees of German and other foreign control were reported as follows:

Corporacion sud Americana de Servicios, of Argentina, from Buenos Aires to Uruguay, largely Italian, but organized under Argentina law.

Aeroposta Argentina, influenced to some extent by Germany because of credits extended by the German Junkers.

Lloyd Aero Boliviano, partly German owned and operated, using German personnel.

The huge Condor syndicate, in Brazil, operating to many other South American countries, under German ownership, flown and operated by German personnel.

The Iguassu Lloyd, also in Brazil, German and Brazilian ownership.

Scadta, of Colombia, German managed, was German owned until Pan American Airways bought a reported 65 per cent interest.

Italy Abandons Its Plans

Italy, which had planned to inaugurate a service over the south Atlantic to Argentina, then up through Brazil, was reported to have suspended the project, at least temporarily.

In aircraft sales, experts said, Britain, Germany and France were concentrating on their own war needs.

Italy, the other leading competitor, was reported unofficially to have placed an embargo on airplane shipments.

The Netherlands, another exporting nation, was engaged exclusively in filling the requirements of its army and navy.

In the United States, aircraft factories, forced to cancel shipments to France and Britain because of the arms embargo, were reported continuing production of the planes ordered, to be turned over to the United States Army and Navy.

This would fill part of the huge government order for Air Corps expansion.

Officials pointed out this measure would leave aircraft factories here keyed up to be in a condition to fulfill any emergency demand, expected to come in part from Latin-American nations which had previously been buying German and other foreign airplanes and parts.

SAYS POLISH FIGHT IS JUST BEGINNING

SEP 13 1939

Envoy Expects Rain to Help Slow Up Nazi Tanks.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador, said today that "the main Polish Army will now begin its real fight."

Just before conferring with Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State, Count Potocki said that with new lines on the east bank of the Vistula River the Poles would strive to stem the German advance. Warsaw, he declared, would be defended to the last.

"We now expect to be helped by the weather," he said. "The rains have begun and should slow up the German tanks."

The ambassador, who disclosed he was not in direct communication with Warsaw, said the Polish air force was not comparable in strength with the German force, and this contributed to the German advance. No British or French planes have come to Poland's assistance, he commented.

He said he was unable to explain Soviet troop movements along the eastern Polish border, but observed, "I do not think Russia has any aggressive intentions toward Poland."

SEP 13 1939

LONDON, SEPT. 12—(AP)—THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION ANNOUNCED TONIGHT THE PURPOSE OF THE CHAMBERLAIN-DALADIER MEETING IN FRANCE WAS TO MAKE POSSIBLE A DIRECT PERSONAL EXCHANGE OF VIEWS ON THE SITUATION

FOLO PARIS CHAMBERLAIN

AGO 23

30.24 -3283

AND ON MEASURES TO BE TAKEN IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE.

"THE MEETING," SAID A COMMUNIQUE, "HAS FULLY CONFIRMED THE FIRM RESOLVE OF GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO DEVOTE THEIR ENTIRE STRENGTH AND RESOURCES TO THE WAGING OF THE CONFLICT WHICH HAS BEEN FORCED UPON THEM AND TO GIVE ALL POSSIBLE ASSISTANCE TO THEIR POLISH ALLY, WHO IS RESISTING WITH SO MUCH GALLANTRY THE RUTHLESS INVASION OF HER TERRITORY.

CHAMBERLAIN AND LORD CHATFIELD, MINISTER FOR COORDINATION OF DEFENSE, MADE THE TRIP IN A ROYAL AIRFORCE PLANE.

CHAMBERLAIN AND LORD CHATFIELD RETURNED TO LONDON TONIGHT.

TODAY'S FLIGHT WAS THE FIRST THE 70-YEAR-OLD PRIME MINISTER HAD MADE SINCE HE FLEW TO MUNICH NEARLY A YEAR AGO DURING THE CZECHO-SLOVAK CRISIS.

SEP 13 1939

EZ/WN25APED

A130

LONDON--FIRST ADD INVERLIFFEY SUNK XXX R.G.STEWART.

POSITION OF THE SUNKEN SHIP WAS NOT DISCLOSED.

IT WAS ALSO ANNOUNCED THAT FOUR OTHER BRITISH MERCHANT SHIPS HAD REPORTED UNSUCCESSFUL ATTACKS BY SUBMARINES.

(THE INVERLIFFEY, A 9456 TON TANKER, 503 FEET LONG, IS REGISTERED AT DUBLIN AND CARRIES OIL BETWEEN THE GULF STATES AND ENGLAND.)

(THE R.G.STEWART, ALSO A TANKER, IS A 9,229-TON SHIP REGISTERED AT WILMINGTON,DEL., AND OPERATED BY THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF NEW JERSEY).

SEP 13 1939

EZ110SAED

3024—3283

A128 SEP 13 1939

95

LONDON,SEPT 12-(AP)-THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION ANNOUNCED TODAY THE BRITISH STEAMER INVERLIFFEY HAD BEEN SUNK BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE AND THE CREW RESCUED BY THE AMERICAN STEAMER R.G.STEWART.

EZ110SAED

C74 (REU DNB HVS OUT)

ROME,SEPT 12-(AP)-THE BITTER PLIGHT OF POLISH TROOPS NORTH OF LODZ WAS DESCRIBED TODAY IN A DISPATCH FROM IL GIORNALE D'ITALIA'S CORRESPONDENT ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

CAUGHT BETWEEN THREE FRONTS THOSE POLES HAVE BEEN HAMMERED INCESSANTLY FROM THE AIR, THE CORRESPONDENT REPORTED, AND HAVE BEEN MEETING MOTORIZED GERMAN TROOPS UNDER MOST UNFAVORABLE CONDITIONS.

SEP 13 1939

THE FIGHTING IN THAT AREA WAS DESCRIBED TO BE CHARACTERIZED BY THE EMPLOYMENT OF MASSES OF GERMAN INFANTRY, INCLUDING MANY INEXPERIENCED TROOPS. HEAVY FIGHTING WAS REPORTED ON IRREGULARLY WOODED SLOPES CROSSED BY MANY STREAMS AND DOTTED WITH NUMEROUS PONDS.

THE CORRESPONDENT WROTE THAT ONE COLUMN OF FIELD ARTILLERY WAS CAUGHT BY GERMAN AIRMEN, "EVIDENTLY BY SURPRISE." MEN, CANNONS AND WAGONS REMAINED IN A TANGLED MASS FROM AN AIR ATTACK CARRIED OUT WITH "FRIGHTFUL DESTRUCTIVE POWER."

ALL ITALIAN DISPATCHES SPEAK PROMINENTLY OF THE ACTION OF SHARP-SHOOTERS WHO ROVE IN BANDS AT NIGHT. ONE DISPATCH FROM BERLIN SAID THEY KILLED "SEVERAL THOUSAND" GERMANS IN ONE NIGHT.

THE CORRESPONDENT FOR IL GIORNALE D'ITALIA REPORTED "ENERGETIC

ACTION OF GERMAN AVIATORS AGAINST VILLAGES WHERE SHARPSHOOTERS HAVE HIDDEN AND WHERE ATTACKS AGAINST GERMAN SOLDIERS AND GERMAN MINORITIES HAVE OCCURRED."

LIFE IN A GERMAN CAMP FOR POLISH PRISONERS AT NASIELSK BETWEEN WARSAW AND PULTSK WAS DESCRIBED IN A DISPATCH FROM IL LAVORO FACISTA'S EASTERN FRONT CORRESPONDENT.

POLES WHO EXPECTED TO BE SHOT IMMEDIATELY NOW ARE RECOVERING THEIR APPETITES AND GOOD HUMOR, THE CORRESPONDENT WROTE AFTER VISITING THE CAMP.

SEP 13 1939

SN023PED

BERLIN, SEPT 12-(AP)-THE GERMAN RED CROSS PROTESTED TO THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE AT GENEVA TODAY AGAINST WHAT IT TERMED BRUTALITY BY POLES AGAINST GERMAN NATIONALS AND ASKED THE COMMITTEE TO SEND A REPRESENTATIVE TO SEE THE EVIDENCE.

SEP 13 1939

SN1023PED

A24

BERLIN-2ND ADD NIGHT LEAD GERMAN X X X POLAND. HIGHWAYS EAST AND SOUTHEAST OF WARSAW ALSO WERE SUBJECTED TO BOMBINGS.

OFFICIALS SAID NO MEASURES, SUCH AS INTERNMENT AND CONFISCATION OF PROPERTY, WERE BEING TAKEN AT PRESENT AGAINST FRENCH CITIZENS STILL IN GERMANY.

SEP 13 1939

THEY ADDED THEY HAD NO INFORMATION ABOUT ENGLISH SUBJECTS. FROM PRIVATE SOURCES, HOWEVER, IT WAS LEARNED A NUMBER OF ENGLISHMEN HAD BEEN TAKEN FOR QUESTIONING TO ALEXANDER PLATZ POLICE HEADQUARTERS

A112

BUDAPEST, SEPT. 13-(WEDNESDAY)-(AP)-FIVE MEN CONVICTED OF SPREADING ALARMING REPORTS WERE SENTENCED TO CONCENTRATION CAMPS TODAY AND A HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT IN TODAY'S NEWSPAPERS SAID IN THE FUTURE IT WOULD PROCEED SEVERELY AGAINST "MALICIOUS GOSSIPERS."

THE CONVICTED MEN WERE ARRESTED IN FRONT OF NEWSPAPER BULLETIN BOARDS.

ALL ARRESTED ON A CHARGE OF GOSSIPING WILL HAVE THEIR NAMES PUBLISHED IN THE PRESS, THE GOVERNMENT DECLARED.

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF BILLBOARDS ALL OVER THE CITY READ:

"BEWARE OF SPIES! WHOEVER SPREADS ALARMING REPORTS IS A TRAITOR."

WE1116PED

A89

SECOND NIGHT LEAD RUSSIAN

MOSCOW, SEPT. 12-(AP)-SOVIET RUSSIA TODAY STARTED A CRACK-DOWN CAMPAIGN ON FOOD HOARDERS AND SPECULATORS FOLLOWING A RUN ON CONSUMERS' STOCKS WHICH WAS SET OFF BY MOBILIZATION OF RESERVES FOR SERVICE ON THE POLISH BORDER.

SEP 13 1939

THE GOVERNMENT NEWSPAPER IZVESTIA ANNOUNCED A DECREE ORDERING COURTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY TO BRING SPECULATORS TO TRIAL, SOME OF THEM WITHIN FOUR OR FIVE DAYS.

THE DEFENDANTS WERE TO BE PRESENTED AS "EXAMPLES" TO THE REST OF THE COUNTRY.

UNDER LAW, SPECULATORS GET AT LEAST FIVE YEARS IMPRISONMENT.

A SOVIET RADIO BROADCAST TONIGHT ESPECIALLY MENTIONED ONE PERSON ACCUSED OF HOARDING KEROSENE AND TWO OF HOARDING FLOUR WHO WOULD BE PLACED ON TRIAL. KEROSENE IS ESPECIALLY VALUABLE IN THE SOVIET SINCE MANY PEOPLE USE IT FOR COOKING FUEL.

30.24 -3285

30.24—3285

MEANWHILE, RUSSIA'S MOBILIZATION OF RESERVES APPEARED TO HAVE BEEN COMPLETED WITH NO FURTHER CLASSES CALLED UP TODAY.

OFFICIAL NEWSPAPERS X X X 1ST GRAF NIGHT LEAD

SEP 13 1939

WE1020PED

A186

AMS

SEP 13 1939

BY DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON,SEPT 12-(AP)-SIDELIGHTS ON ONE COUNTRY'S WAR:

THE FIRST PLAY OF THE WAR WILL HAVE ITS FIRST "NIGHT" MONDAY AFTERNOON.

"HIS WIFE'S CASTLE," WHICH REHEARSED FOR THREE WEEKS ONLY TO HAVE WAR CANCEL ITS LONDON OPENING, WILL BE SHOWN AT WINDSOR DAILY AT 4:30 STARTING MONDAY.

THE NATIONAL FEDERATION OF GROCERS AND PROVISION DEALERS COMPLAINED THAT, WHETHER DUE TO "THOUGHTLESSNESS OR IN SOME CASES THAT CUSTOMERS WERE RUNNING SHORT OF MONEY," ACCOUNTS WERE GOING UNPAID AND WARNED THAT "THERE IS A LITTLE TOO MUCH OF 'MAKE THE GROCER AND THE BUTCHER WAIT.'"

THE BROMLEY KENT AUXILIARY FIRE SERVICE WAS HARD PRESSED FOR HURRICANE LAMPS. SOMEONE GOT HOLD OF SOME JUST BEFORE WAR STARTED. THEY'RE GERMAN LAMPS AND WORK FINE.

A MAN DIGGING AN AIR RAID SHELTER AT PITSEA, ESSEX, DISCOVERED AN UNEXPLODED SHELL WHICH HAD BEEN FIRED FROM A BRITISH GUN IN A TEST MORE THAN 20 YEARS AGO.

GENERAL SIR HUBERT GOUGH, WHO COMMANDED THE FIFTH ARMY IN THE WORLD WAR, IS COMMANDING AN AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS DEPOT AT CHELSEA.

HIS FIRST JOB WAS REMOVING WOMEN AND CHILDREN TO RURAL HAVENS. "I AM PROMOTED. I AM PLEASED," SAID THE GENERAL.

ONE WOMAN WRITER OBSERVES THAT SINCE ALL STORES ARE CLOSING EARLIER HUSBANDS GET A BETTER DINNER AND A WARMER WELCOME ON THEIR RETURN HOME.

THE BLACKOUT'S SILVER LINING: THE EDINBURGH (SCOTLAND) CORPORATION WILL SAVE £4,000 MONTHLY IN LIGHTING CHARGES, A CITY OFFICIAL ANNOUNCED.

SEP 13 1939

LONDON'S BLACKOUT IS SO BLACK THE PEOPLE STILL TUMBLED INTO CURBS, BUILDINGS AND EACH OTHER, AND THE GOVERNMENT IS CONSIDERING LETTING OUT A FEW MORE CHINKS OF LIGHT.

A DAILY EXPRESS EDITORIAL WAS ALL FOR LIGHTING UP THE TOWN, SAYING IT WOULD SHOW THE ENEMY NOTHING HE DOESN'T ALREADY KNOW.

THE LATEST WAY TO BEAT THE BLACKOUT AND GET A LITTLE LIGHT: A LILY-SHAPED PIECE OF WHITE PAPER TO REFLECT THE GLOW OF A CIGARETTE.

JH554AED

SEP 13 1939

SIR GERALD DODSON, EMPANELLING A JURY OF SEVEN, INCLUDING TWO WOMEN, INSTEAD OF THE USUAL TWELVE, EXPLAINED THE ACTION WAS TAKEN UNDER EMERGENCY POWERS RECENTLY GRANTED AND ADDED:

"YOU NEED NOT THINK THIS IS AN ENCROACHMENT ON THE ORDINARY PRINCIPLE OF TRIAL BY JURY.

"IT IS ONLY TO MEET SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES AND THERE IS IN NO SENSE A WHITTLING AWAY OF THE RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES OF ANYBODY."

W523PED

KC92 (REU HVS DNB OUT)

ALGECIRAS,SPAIN,SEPT 12-(AP)-AUTHORITIES ESTIMATED TODAY THAT 7,000 PERSONS OF VARIOUS NATIONALITIES FLEEING FRANCE HAVE LEFT ALGECIRAS AND GIBRALTAR SINCE SEPT. 1 BOUND FOR CUETA AND TANGIER IN NORTH AFRICA. AT BURGOS THE GOVERNMENT ORDERED CONSULS IN FRANCE TO FACILITATE REPATRIATION OF SPANISH REFUGEES AND PROMISED GENEROUS TREATMENT OF FORMER ENEMY SOLDIERS.

SN1017PED

SEP 13 1939

C10

(AGENCIES OUT)

FP 13 1939

AMSTERDAM,SEPT. 12-(AP)-THE NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM WERE SAID TODAY TO BE IN CLOSE CONSULTATION ON THEIR COMMON PROBLEM OF MAINTAINING NEUTRALITY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

THE TWO NEIGHBORS WERE UNDERSTOOD TO BE INFORMING EACH OTHER ON EACH INCIDENT OF FOREIGN PLANES CROSSING NEUTRAL AREAS AND TO BE CONSULTING ON ECONOMIC QUESTIONS.

ROTTERDAM AND ANTWERP PORTS IN PEACETIME HANDLED A LARGE SHARE OF SHIPPING TO GERMANY VIA THE RHINE. AN EFFORT WAS BEING MADE TO DECIDE WHAT PROCEDURE SHOULD BE ADOPTED FOR WARTIME.

HOLLAND ALSO HAD STARTED A STUDY OF AVAILABLE AREAS TO CARE FOR POSSIBLE WAR REFUGEES, AS SHE DID DURING THE WORLD WAR. MAYORS OF A NUMBER OF TOWNS WERE ASKED TO MAKE A SURVEY. IT WAS UNDERSTOOD A GROUP OF SMALL ISLANDS OFF THE SOUTHWESTERN MAINLAND MIGHT BE DESIGNATED FOR REFUGEES.

NEWSREELS OF THE GERMAN-POLISH WAR ACTIVITY HAD BEEN BANNED IN HOLLAND.

WA30PED

ATHENIA VICTIMS NEARING HALIFAX

City Of Flint Due In Port Before Noon Today—110 Americans Aboard

U. S. And Canadian Officials Ready To Rush Survivors To Their Homes

SEP 13 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 12—In an atmosphere made tense by a mixture of joy, bewilderment and hope, this outpost port of a Canada at war tonight awaited arrival of the cargo ship City of Flint tomorrow with the first survivors of the sunken British liner Athenia to reach North America.

Clinton E. MacEachran, United States Consul, announced late today the last report from the American freighter, timed at 11 A. M., placed her about 180 miles from Halifax and said she would reach here probably before noon tomorrow.

110 Of Them Americans

Waiting here, anxious relatives and friends of persons on the ill-fated Athenia closely watched last-minute revisions in the "tentative" list of the 200-odd survivors the City of Flint was reported carrying, 110 of them Americans.

The freighter had regular accommodations for only six passengers and many were asking, "How could they live for nine days?"

Only meager reports have come from the City of Flint since she picked up the war victims after the Athenia sank from an outside explosion off the coast of Scotland the night of September 3—the day England and France declared war on Germany.

Preparing For Emergency

Meanwhile, the water front bustled with activity as Canadian and American Government officials prepared to meet any emergency and to rush the survivors to their homes. Two United States Coast Guard cutters escorting the City of Flint were available for any desiring to enter the United States via water.

Provisions to feed, clothe and bathe the survivors have been set up in the large immigration building at the pier. Near by, a special train with a hospital car waited to speed some of the survivors to Montreal.

ANKARA, TURKEY, SEPT 12-(AP)-TURKISH SHIPPING IN THE MEDITERRANEAN WAS RESUMED TODAY AFTER A FORTNIGHT'S SUSPENSION BECAUSE OF THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR.

FP 13 1939

TODAY

SEP 13 1939

FOLLOWING THE NEW RUSSIAN-GERMAN ORIENTATION,

BERLIN, SEPT 12-(AP)-[redacted] 19 SOVIET RUSSIANS FROM CHURCH FOR FOREIGNERS.

IN GERMAN AT BERLIN UNIVERSITY'S INSTITUTE FOR

B12S (RU HV DNB OUT)

FX CD WX BA CT

RIGA,SEPT 12-(AP)-LATVIA TODAY ABANDONED THE BRITISH POUND AS A BASE FOR ITS CURRENCY. THE GOVERNMENT ISSUED A DECREE EMPOWERING THE BANK OF LATVIA TO MAINTAIN AN EXCHANGE RATE BASED ON THE DOLLAR OR THE SWEDISH CROWN WHEN STERLING FALLS BELOW A SPECIFIED POINT.

THE GOVERNMENT CHARGED THE TREASURY WITH THE FUNCTION OF ASSUMING

30.24-3287

30.24—3287

INSURANCE AGAINST WAR RISK, CHIEFLY IN CONNECTION WITH LATVIAN MERCHANT SHIPPING.

SEP 13 1939

N1220AED

LINER WASHINGTON CROWDED TO RAILS

SEP 13 1939

Sails for New York Today With 1700 to 2000.

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A. P.).—United State Senator Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina and Donald Budge, the professional tennis player, will be among passengers crowding the United States liner Washington when it sails for New York today.

The ship is expected to carry 1,700 to 2,000 persons.

Others to be aboard include John Cunningham of Knoedler & Co.; T. Walter Williams, shipping editor of the New York Times; Princess Serge Mdvani, Claire Carleton, Ethel Remey and Katherine Doucet of the cast of "The Women"; Warren Lee Pearson, president of the United States Export-Import Bank; Lester Stoefen, William Tilden and Ellsworth Vines, tennis players; three children of the Chinese Ambassador to France; Ben Goetz and Richard Thorpe, movie executives, and June Clyde, actress.

Ten thousand Americans are still in the United Kingdom and Ireland, the American embassy disclosed today.

Seven thousand are in England, Scotland and Wales and 4,000 of this number do not have passage to the United States.

The other 3,000 are in Ireland.

These figures include Americans working in the British Isles.

Five ships are en route to help bring home the remainder of the Americans. But one embassy official said: "They are too small; we need big boats and lots of them."

GLASGOW, SEPT. 12-(AP)-RECOVERING FROM EXPOSURE AFTER EIGHT HOURS IN A LIFEBOAT, MRS. IDA MOWRY OF PROVIDENCE, R.I., AND HER DAUGHTERS, ELEANOR AND PEGGY MOWRY, SURVIVORS OF THE SINKING OF THE ATHENIA, ARE STAYING WITH FRIENDS AT ARDNACRAGGAN, CALLENDER, NEAR HERE.

SEP 13 1939

THE RESCUE SHIP WHICH PICKED UP THE SURVIVORS IN THEIR BOAT BROUGHT THEM TO GREENOCK, SCOTLAND.

"I NEVER EXPERIENCED ANYTHING LIKE IT," ELEANOR MOWRY SAID. ~~"WHEN THE TORPEDO STRUCK MY SISTER AND I RUSHED TO OUR BOAT STATION. THEN~~ WE WERE SHEPHERDED INTO ONE OF THE LIFEBOATS AND AFTER DRIFTING FOR WHAT WAS LATER LEARNED TO BE EIGHT HOURS, WE THOUGHT WE WERE ALL LOST. SUDDENLY, HOWEVER, A RESCUE SHIP APPEARED AND WE WERE TAKEN ABOARD, PRACTICALLY IN A STATE OF COLLAPSE."

SOUTHAMPTON, ENG., SEPT. 12—(AP)—L. H. BUCHAN OF MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE, WAS SO GLAD TO CATCH AN AMERICAN LINER TO TAKE HIM HOME FROM WARRING EUROPE THAT HE GAVE HIS AUTOMOBILE TO A BAGGAGE HANDLER FOR A TIP.

SEP 13 1939

ALFRED BLUNDELL, THE STEVEDORE, WHO HELPED L. H. BUCHAN GET ABOARD THE SHIP, TOLD THE STORY TODAY.

"WHEN I GOT HIS STUFF ABOARD," SAID BLUNDELL, "HE GAVE ME [illegible] THE CAR AND I SAID 'NO,' HE SAID, 'IT'S QUITE ALL RIGHT. ALL I WANT TO 'YOU'RE JOKING, GUV'NOR.'

KNOW IS HOW MUCH YOU GET FOR IT .'"

SEP 13 1939

THE STEVENSONS ADDED THAT HE COULD NOT DRIVE AND SO WAS GOING TO SELL THE CAR.

A152WX

SEP 12 1939

ATHENIA

WASHINGTON,SEPT.11-(AP)-THE STATE DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCED TODAY THE NAMES OF THREE ADDITIONAL SURVIVORS OF THE SUNKEN LINER ATHENIA.

AMERICAN MINISTER CUDAHY AT DUBLIN CABLED THAT DANIEL WILKES, 4401 SKILLMAN AVENUE, SUNNYSIDE, LONG ISLAND CITY, WAS IN A PRIVATE HOME IN GLASGOW, WHERE HIS FATHER, E.T.WILKES, HAD JOINED HIM.

THE CONSUL GENERAL AT GLASGOW REPORTED THAT MRS.ELLEN HUTCHINSON, WIFE OF WILLIAM HUTCHINSON, 118 CHILTON STREET, CAMBRIDGE, MASS., HAD BEEN LOCATED IN THAT CITY.

THE CONSUL AT HAVRE, FRANCE, REPORTED THAT JOHN YOUNGQUIST, 1809 SOUTH FREMONT AVENUE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., WAS THERE.

GEORGE S.MESSERSMITH, ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE, AND REAR ADMIRAL EMORY LAND, CHAIRMAN OF THE MARITIME COMMISSION, DISCUSSED TODAY THE POSSIBILITY OF CHARTERING ADDITIONAL SHIPS IN WHICH TO BRING BACK AMERICANS FROM EUROPE.

FIVE SUCH VESSELS HAVE ALREADY BEEN CHARTERED.

AJ1229PES

C55PX

PX OUT

PHILADELPHIA, SEPT. 12-(AP)-FUNERAL SERVICES WERE ARRANGED TONIGHT FOR MRS. ELLEN SWAN DUBBIN HOWLAND, GIVEN UP BY HER FAMILY AS LOST IN THE TORPEDOING OF THE LINER ATHENIA

MRS. HOWLAND'S BODY HAS NOT BEEN RECOVERED, BUT MRS. GEORGE BROOKE A DAUGHTER, SAID A CAREFUL CHECK HAD CONVINCED RELATIVES HERE AND IN ENGLAND THAT MRS. HOWLAND WAS NOT LANDED AT ANY PORT OR ABOARD ANY OF THE RESCUE SHIPS. MRS. HOWLAND, REGISTERED ON THE ATHENIA'S PASSENGER LIST AS FROM ELDRIDGE, MD., HER BIRTHPLACE, LIVED IN PHILADELPHIA FOR MANY YEARS AFTER THE DEATH IN 1916 OF HER HUSBAND, FREDERICK H.HOWLAND, FORMER EDITOR OF THE PHILADELPHIA PRESS.

THE SERVICES HERE SATURDAY WILL BE THE RITUAL THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH USES FOR PERSONS LOST AT SEA.

SEP 13 1939

IZ754PED

C54PX PX OUT

SEP 13 1939

PHILADELPHIA,SEPT 12-(AP)-INFORMATION ON THE ENTRANCE AND CLEARANCE OF ALL SHIPS OF NATIONS AT WAR IN EUROPE WILL NO LONGER BE PUBLISHED HERE, A.RAYMOND RAFF, COLLECTOR OF THE PORT OF PHILADELPHIA, ANNOUNCED TODAY.

RAFF SAID THE ENTRANCE AND CLEARANCE OF NEUTRAL SHIPS WOULD BE PUBLISHED BUT THE NATURE OF THEIR OUTGOING CARGOES WOULD BE WITHHELD. THE ACTION, RAFF SAID, IS IN LINE WITH SIMILAR ACTION AT OTHER UNITED STATES PORTS UNDER THE GOVERNMENT'S NEUTRALITY POLICY.

RH108PED NM

30.24-3289

30.24—3289

A68AX

NEW ORLEANS,SEPT 12-(AP)-ONLY PERSONS ON LEGITIMATE BUSINESS WILL BE ALLOWED ON THE WHARVES AND OTHER PROPERTY OF THE PORT OF NEW ORLEANS DURING THE EUROPEAN WAR.

THE DOCK BOARD, A STATE BODY WHICH ADOPTED THE REGULATION YESTERDAY, ALSO DECIDED NO SKIFF, MOTORBOAT OR SIMILAR CRAFT WOULD BE PERMITTED WITHIN 200 FEET OF THE DOCKS OR OF SHIPS MOORED TO THE DOCKS.

SEP 13 1939

BECAUSE OF EUROPEAN WAR CONDITIONS," THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, "EXTRAORDINARY MEASURES ARE NECESSARY FOR THE PROTECTION OF ALL PROPERTIES OF THE PORT AND OF SHIPPING USING THE PORT."

SF547ACD

A149

ADD CHRONOLOGICAL UNDATED SHIPS SUNK

SEPT.11--INVERLIFFEY (BR), OIL TANKER, 9,456 GROSS TONS, TOR[illegible]ED NEAR HAVRE, FRANCE, "ENTIRE CREW" RESCUED BY AMERICAN TANKER R.G.STEWART.

SEP 12 1939

SEPT.12--OLIVEBANK (FIN) FISHING BARK, 2,795 GROSS TONS, STRUCK MINE 105 MILES SOUTHWEST OF ESBJERG, DENMARK, 14 KILLED, 7 SAVED.

(EDS: IN FIRBY SINKING, SEPT.11, ADD CREW RESCUED.)

EZ1221PED

A45WX (BJT)

NIGHT LEAD NEUTRALITY (BUDGET)

BY RICHARD L.TURNER

SEP 13 1939

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 12-(AP)-INDIRECTLY BUT DEFINITELY, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SERVED NOTICE TODAY THAT GERMANY WOULD NOT BE PERMITTED TO SEIZE ANY BRITISH OR FRENCH TERRITORY ON THIS SIDE OF THE ATLANTIC.

RESTATING THE MONROE DOCTRINE, MR.ROOSEVELT MADE IT PLAIN TO A PRESS CONFERENCE THAT THE UNITED STATES FOR ITS OWN PROTECTION WOULD BE BOUND TO RESIST SUCH A MOVE.

AT THE SAME TIME, MR.ROOSEVELT SAID HE WOULD HAVE AN ANNOUNCEMENT "SOON," ON THE CALLING OF A SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS TO REVISE THE NEUTRALITY ACT. ALTHOUGH CHAIRMAN SABATH (D-ILL) OF THE HOUSE RULES COMMITTEE LEFT THE PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE A FEW HOURS EARLIER PREDICTING THE SESSION WOULD CONVENE ABOUT OCT. 1, MR.ROOSEVELT DID NOT SET A DATE. HE MERELY SAID THAT SABATH'S GUESS WAS AS GOOD AS THAT OF ANY OF THE REPORTERS PRESENT.

SEP 13 1939

THE DISCUSSION OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE AROSE WHEN A CORRESPONDENT BEGAN QUESTIONING THE PRESIDENT ABOUT HIS SPEECH MADE AT KINGSTON, ONT., LAST YEAR SAYING THAT "THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES WILL NOT STAND IDLY BY IF DOMINATION OF CANADIAN SOIL IS THREATENED BY ANY OTHER EMPIRE (THAN THE BRITISH EMPIRE.)"

THE POSITION OF THE UNITED STATES TOWARD CANADA, IN THE LIGHT OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE AND OF THAT STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT, HAS BEEN THE SUBJECT OF MUCH CONVERSATION AND SPECULATION HERE, SINCE CANADA JOINED THE REST OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN DECLARING WAR ON GERMANY.

BUT EVEN MORE INTENSIVELY SOME CONVERSATIONS HAVE DEALT WITH WHAT THE UNITED STATES WOULD DO SHOULD A VICTORIOUS GERMANY SEIZE BRITISH AND FRENCH HOLDINGS NEAR THE PANAMA CANAL, AND THEREBY

ENABLE THEMSELVES TO CONSTRUCT NAVAL AND AIR BASES CLOSE TO THE VITAL PASSAGEWAY.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE WAS ENUNCIATED, MR.ROOSEVELT SAID, AT A TIME WHEN A NUMBER OF PORTIONS OF CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA HAD WON THEIR INDEPENDENCE FROM EUROPEAN SOVEREIGNTIES AND HAD SET UP REPUBLICS. AT THAT TIME THERE WAS TALK IN EUROPE OF FORMING A COALITION OF POWERS TO RESTORE EUROPEAN SOVEREIGNTY OVER CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA, MR.ROOSEVELT ADDED.

A109WX

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 12-(AP)-THE MARITIME COMMISSION TODAY RULED THAT AMERICAN FLAG SHIPS MUST NOT BE CHARTERED TO ANY-ONE NOT A CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES, WITHOUT FIRST OB-TAINING ITS APPROVAL.

SEP 13 1939

A COMMISSION OFFICIAL SAID THIS WAS INTENDED TO AVOID "COMPLI-CATIONS" AS A RESULT OF THE EUROPEAN WAR.

RK1010PES

A64WX

CONTRABAND INTERPRETIVE (WITH BUDGET)

BY ANDRUE BERDING

SEP 13 1939

WASHINGTON,SEPT 12-(AP)-IF GERMANY STOPS AMERICAN SHIPMENTS OF CONTRABAND ARTICLES TO BRITAIN, AS DISPATCHES FROM BERLIN SAY SHE INTENDS TO DO, UNCLE SAM'S VOICE PROBABLY WILL NOT BE RAISED IN ANGER.

THE REASON GIVEN BY RESPONSIBLE PERSONS HERE IS THAT THE ANNOUNCE-MENT FROM BERLIN SAYS GERMANY WILL USE THE SAME CONTRABAND LIST AS BRITAIN, AND THE BRITISH LIST IS, ALMOST WORD FOR WORD, THE SAME LIST THE UNITED STATES ANNOUNCED AFTER IT ENTERED THE WORLD WAR IN 1917.

MOREOVER, INTERNATIONAL LAW PERMITS A WARSHIP (INCLUDING A SUBMARINE) TO STOP A MERCHANTMAN IF IT IS CARRYING CONTRABAND TO A BELLIGERENT AND TO TAKE OFF THE CONTRABAND.

NO GIDESPATCHEROMPBERLIN--ECHOED BY A WAR
OF THE GERMAN SUBMARINE WHICH ST

SEP 13 1939

A BELLIGERENT AND TO TAKE OFF THE CONTRABAND.

A DISPATCH FROM BERLIN--ECHOED BY A WARRING GIVEN BY THE CAPTAIN OF THE GERMAN SUBMARINE WHICH STOPPED THE AMERICAN MERCHANTMAN WACOSTA SATURDAY AFTERNOON--STATED THAT GERMAN SUBMARINES WOULD SINK AMERICAN SHIPS IF THEY DID NOT STOP ON BEING SIGNALLED TO DO S

BUT THIS, TOO, IS PERMITTED BY INTERNATIONAL LAW. A NEU-TRAL MERCHANTMAN IS REQUIRED TO STOP ON BEING SIGNALLED BY A WAR-SHIP. IF SHE TRIES TO ESCAPE, THE WARSHIP MAY FIRE UPON HER. IF SHE THEN STOPS, THE WARSHIP MUST CEASE FIRING. IF SHE CON-TINUES FLIGHT THE WARSHIP MAY CONTINUE FIRING, AND IF THE SHELLS SINK THE MERCHANT SHIP THE WARSHIP IS NOT LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE.

OFFICIALS HERE FOUND NOTHING UNUSUAL TODAY IN THE STOPPING OF THE WACOSTA BY THE GERMAN SUBMARINE. THE UNDERWATER CRAFT EXAMINED THE SHIP'S PAPERS AND SEARCHED HER CARGO FOR THREE HOURS AND THEN PERMITTED HER TO PROCEED ON HER WAY FROM GLASGOW TO NEW YORK.

THE UNITED STATES ACKNOWLEDGES THE RIGHT OF A BELLIGERENT WAR-SHIP TO STOP AN AMERICAN VESSEL ANYWHERE, BY GIVING THE RECOGNIZED SIGNAL, WHICH IS GENERALLY THE FIRING OF A BLANK CHARGE. IN THE

1939

30.24-3091

30 24—3291

INSTRUCTIONS ISSUED BY THE NAVY DEPARTMENT TO THE AMERICAN FLEET AFTER THE UNITED STATES ENTERED THE WAR, A REGULAR PROCEDURE WAS PRESCRIBED IN ACCORDANCE WITH INTERNATIONAL LAW.

BEFORE SUMMONING A MERCHANTMAN TO LIE TO, A WARSHIP MUST HOIST HER OWN NATIONAL FLAG, THEN FIRE THE BLANK CHARGE. WHEN THE MERCHANTMAN IS BROUGHT TO, THE WARSHIP SENDS A BOAT WITH AN OFFICER TO CONDUCT THE VISIT AND SEARCH. THE SMALL BOAT MAY CARRY ARMS BUT THE BOAT'S CREW MUST NOT HAVE ANY ON THEIR PERSONS.

THE OFFICER (THERE MAY BE TWO OF THEM, WARING SIDE ARMS) MAY BE ACCOMPANIED ON BOARD THE MERCHANTMAN BY NOT MORE THAN TWO UNARMED MEN.

SEP 13 1939

THE OFFICER FIRST EXAMINES THE SHIP'S PAPER, TO ASCERTAIN HER NATIONALITY, PORTS OF DEPARTURE AND DESTINATION, THE CHARACTER OF HER CARGO AND OTHER ESSENTIAL FACTS. IF THE PAPERS FURNISH CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE OF THE SHIP'S INNOCENCE, SHE IS RELEASED. IF THEY FURNISH PROBABLE CAUSE FOR CAPTURE SHE MAY BE SEIZED.

IF THE PAPERS ARE NOT CONCLUSIVE, THE BOARDING OFFICER CONTINUES HIS EXAMINATION BY QUESTIONING THE PERSONNEL OR BY SEARCHING THE VESSEL AND EXAMINING HER CARGO. IF SEARCH ESTABLISHES HER INNOCENCE SHE MUST BE RELEASED. OTHERWISE SHE MAY BE SEIZED.

ONLY UNDER EXTREME CIRCUMSTANCES MAY AN AMERICAN SHIP BE SUNK. IF SHE IS CARRYING ARMS TO A BELLIGERENT--WHICH, AT ANY RATE, WOULD BE A VIOLATION OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT AND WOULD PREVENT HER FROM CLAIMING AMERICAN DIPLOMATIC PROTECTION--SHE COULD BE SENT TO THE BOTTOM. UNDER CERTAIN OTHER GRAVE CIRCUMSTANCES THIS IS PERMITTED, AS WHEN THE WARSHIP FINDS SHE CARRIES CONTRABAND AND IS NOT ABLE TO SEND HER INTO PORT AS A PRIZE. BUT IN CASES OF SINKING-EXCEPT WHEN THE SHIP IS TRYING TO ESCAPE--DEFINITE MEASURES MUST BE TAKEN FOR THE SAFETY OF THE CREW AND PASSENGER.

THIS GOVERNMENT DOES NOT REGARD A SHIP'S OWN LIFE BOATS AS A MEANS OF SAFETY IF THE SHIP IS FAR FROM LAND, IF THE WIND IS STRONG, THE SEA ROUGH, THE WEATHER THICK OR VERY COLD, OR THE LIFE BOATS ARE OVERCROWDED, UNSEAWORTHY OR INSUFFICIENTLY MANNED.

UNDER THOSE CIRCUMSTANCES, UNLESS ANOTHER SHIP WERE NEARBY PREPARED TO TAKE OFF THE CREW AND PASSENGERS, THE AMERICAN SHIP COULD NOT LEGALLY BE SUNK, IS IS SAID HERE.

GG747PES NM ASK

1109

UNDATED WAR ~~INTERPRETIVE~~

SEP 13 1939

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE SECOND AND ANXIOUSLY AWAITED PHASE OF THE GERMAN INVASION OF POLAND HAS GOT UNDER WAY WITH THE POLES BEGINNING THE CONCERTED DEFENSE--THEIR BIG AND PERHAPS DECISIVE STAND--WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN PROMISING TO STAGE ALONG THE PREPARED LINE OF THE VISTULA RIVER THROUGH THE HEART OF POLAND.

MEANTIME IN THE WESTERN THEATER OF WAR A ONE-LINE FRENCH COMMUNIQUE REPORTED "A CALM NIGHT ALONG THE ENTIRE FRONT."

THE GERMANS CONTINUE TO CLAIM THAT THE COLLAPSE OF POLAND IS NEAR, AND THERE IS NO GAINSAYING THAT THE POLES ARE TERRIBLY HARD-PRESSED BY THE GREAT NAZI WAR-MACHINE.

BUT THE FIGHTING SPIRIT OF THIRTY GENERATIONS OF LIBERTY-LOVING

1939

POLES IS STANDING IN THE WAY OF THE GERMAN ONRUSH, AND THE INVADERS MUST DEFEAT THIS SPIRIT AS WELL AS SMASH MATERIAL DEFENSES.

THE FIERCE BATTLE CONTINUED FOR THE POSSESSION OF THE CITY OF WARSAW WHICH LIES WITHIN THE NORTHERN ZONE OF THE MAIN POLISH DEFENSES.

HERE THE POLES MADE A DETERMINED COUNTER-ATTACK AND CLAIM NOT ONLY TO HAVE STOPPED THE GERMANS "DEAD IN THEIR TRACKS" BUT TO HAVE THRUST THE INVADERS BACK.

THE GERMANS ADMIT TO HAVING WITPDRAWN A MOTORIZED COLUMN FROM THE EDGE OF WARSAW FOR TACTICAL REASONS--AND DECLARE THE CITY WILL FALL WITHIN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS.

SEP 13 1939

THE POLES ARE MAKING WARSAW THE SYMBOLIC KEYSTONE OF THEIR NEW DEFENSE. THIS IS LARGELY A MATTER OF SENTIMENT AND NOT BECAUSE OF THE STRATEGIC VALUE OF THE CITY PROPER. THE DEFENSES FLUNG ABOUT WARSAW, HOWEVER, ARE OF VAST IMPORTANCE IN THE GENERAL SCHEME OF DEFENSE.

A119

FIRST ADD MACKENZIE'S UNDATED WAR INTERPRETIVE XXX OF DEFENSE.

HARD FIGHTING CONTINUED CLOSE TO WARSAW, AND THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND CLAIMED TO HAVE SWEPT ROUND TO THE EAST SIDE OF THE BELEAGUERED CITY, THEREBY VIRTUALLY SURROUNDING IT AND RENDERING ITS POSITION MUCH MORE PRECARIOUS.

THE MAIN ENGAGEMENT OF THE MOMENT, HOWEVER, WAS BEING WAGED ALMOST SIXTY MILES DUE WEST OF THE CAPITAL, JUST NORTH OF THE STRATEGIC CITY OF LODZ WHICH IS IN GERMAN HANDS.

SOME FIFTY THOUSAND DOGGEDLY FIGHTING POLES WERE REPORTED INVOLVED IN THIS BATTLE ABOVE LODZ, AND THE GERMANS WERE MAKING EVERY EFFORT TO FORCE THEIR SURRENDER.

THE OUTCOME OF THE ENGAGEMENT IS OF GREAT IMPORTANCE, SINCE THE REMOVAL OF THIS ARMY OF DEFENSE WOULD VASTLY INCREASE THE GERMAN THREAT AGAINST THE POLISH PREPARED POSITIONS IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF WARSAW.

IN OTHER WORDS, THE NORTH WING OF THE PREPARED POLISH LINE OF DEFENSE IS IN JEOPARDY.

ON THE ALLIED-GERMAN FRONT THE FRENCH ARE CONTINUING PREPARATIONS FOR A MAJOR ASSAULT, AND SOME HARD FIGHTING HAS DEVELOPED IN SPOTS.

ON THE NORTH END OF THE LINE, NEXT TO THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER, THE GERMANS MADE A COUNTER-THRUST AGAINST THE FRENCH WHO HAD ACHIEVED A CONSIDERABLE ADVANCE TOWARD THE SIEGFRIED LINE. FARTHER DOWN THE LINE THE FRENCH DROVE INTO GERMAN TERRITORY JUST EAST OF THE SAAR RIVER.

SEP 13 1939

THESE OPERATIONS, HOWEVER, ALL LIE WITHIN THE INHOSPITABLE ZONE OF THE NO-MAN'S LAND BETWEEN THE FRENCH MAGINOT AND THE GERMAN SIEGFRIED LINES. THE TWO FORCES ARE SPARRING FOR POSITION.

THERE ARE SOME TOWNS WITHIN THIS ZONE, TO BE SURE. HOWEVER, THERE IS NO GREAT SIGNIFICANCE TO BE ATTACHED TO ADVANCE OR RETREAT WITHIN THIS NO-MAN'S LAND OF PILL-BOXES, MINES AND BARBED WIRE.

WE SHALL GET ACTION WHEN THERE IS A CONCERTED ATTACK MADE AGAINST EITHER ONE OF THE TWO GREAT LINES OF DEFENSE. THAT WILL SIGNAL THE REAL START OF HOSTILITIES IN THIS THEATER OF WAR.

F21225AFD

1939

30.24-3293

30.24—3293

A131

SECOND ADD MACKENZIE'S UNDATED WAR INTERPRATIVE XXX THEATER OF WAR.

SEP 13 1939

POLISH FIELD MARSHAL SMIGLY-RYDZ WOULD APPEAR NOT TO HAVE BEEN CRITICISED THUS FAR FOR REFUSING TO THROW HIS ENTIRE ARMED FORCE UNDER THE GERMAN WAR-CHARIOT IN AN EFFORT TO STOP IT AT THE OUTSET, INSTEAD OF WAITING UNTIL THE PRESENT MOMENT FOR HIS MAIN DEFENSE.

THE GERMANS THEMSELVES SAY HE SHOULDN'T HAVE OFFERED AS MUCH DEFENSE AS HE HAS DURING THE EARLY STAGES OF THE INVASION, BUT SHOULD HAVE CONSERVED HIS RESOURCES.

HOWEVER, SMIGLY-RYDZ HAS BEEN FROM THE OUTSET IN AS DIFFICULT POSITION AS A COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF WOULD CARE TO FIND HIMSELF.

THE POLES HAVE THE TOUGH END OF THE FIGHTING, AT LEAST IN THE INITIAL STAGES, IN THE ANGLO-FRENCH-POLISH ALLIANCE. POLAND FEELS MIGHTY LONESOME, OVER THERE IN EASTERN EUROPE, CUT OFF FROM HER ALLIES EXCEPT BY AIR--AND THAT ROUTE CALLS FOR A BIG QUESTION MARK.

ENGLAND CLAIMS TO RULE THE WAVES IN THIS CRISIS, AND SHE DOES RULE A LOT, BUT NOT THE BALTIC. GERMANY AND RUSSIA RULE THE BALTIC AND THE BRITISH NAVY CAN'T GET IN THERE TO CARRY AID TO POLAND.

THERE IS NO LAND ROUTE OVER WHICH ENGLAND AND FRANCE CAN SEND SUPPLIES OR MEN TO THEIR HARD-PRESSED ALLY. THE NEAREST THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD CAN GET TO POLAND BY WATER IS THROUGH THE DARDANELLES INTO THE BLACK SEA.

BUT THE ONLY BLACK SEA COUNTRIES TOUCHING POLAND ARE RUMANIA AND RUSSIA, AND NEITHER OF THESE COULD PASS TROOPS THROUGH TO POLAND WITHOUT INVOKING WAR WITH GERMANY. POLAND HAS BEEN BANKING ON PURCHASING SUPPLIES FROM NEIGHBORING RUMANIA, BUT TROOPS FALL OUTSIDE THE PALE.

RUMANIA'S POSITION THEREFORE IS HIGHLY IMPORTANT TO BOTH THE ALLIES AND GERMANY. IT ALSO IS MOST PRECARIOUS, SINCE SHE SITS VIRTUALLY UNDER GERMANY'S BIG GUNS. HER INDEPENDENCE HAS BEEN GUARANTEED BY BRITAIN, BUT NAZIDOM IS NOT LIKELY TO PERMIT RUMANIA TO MAKE A HOSTILE MOVE.

SEP 13 1939

AT THIS READING, RUMANIA IS PURSUING A POLICY OF UNEASY NEUTRALITY. SHE IS FORTIFYING HER NERVES WITH A STANDING ARMY OF A MILLION MEN, TO WHICH SHE IS JUST ADDING A COUPLE OF HUNDRED THOUSAND MORE BECAUSE OF RUSSIA'S MOBILIZATION ALONG THE SOVIET'S WESTERN BORDER.

RUMANIA'S POSITION HAS, OF COURSE, BEEN A MATTER OF EARNEST DEBATE IN LONDON AND PARIS EVER SINCE THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD STARTED TO FORM THE "HALT HITLER" BLOC OF NATIONS TO WHICH THE NAZI FUEHRER FINALLY THREW DOWN THE GAGE.

A132

THE ALLIES WOULD GIVE MUCH WERE IT FEASIBLE FOR RUMANIA TO COME IN ON THEIR SIDE AS SHE DID IN THE WORLD WAR. THEY ALSO COVET THE SERVICES OF TURKEY AND GREECE, TWO OTHER COUNTRIES WHOSE INDEPENDENCE HAS BEEN GUARANTEED BY BRITAIN. HOWEVER, THE ONLY REASONABLE COURSE THESE THREE COUNTRIES CAN PURSUE AT THIS STAGE IS ONE OF ABSOLUTE NEUTRALITY.

SEP 13 1939

UNLESS THE SIGNS READ WRONG, RUMANIA'S HEART IS WITH HER FORMER ALLIES, AND OBSERVERS BELIEVE SHE WOULD JOIN THEM AGAIN IF THE DANGER FROM GERMANY SHOULD LESSEN FOR ANY REASON.

THE READER WILL RECALL THAT RUMANIA DIDN'T COME INTO THE WORLD WAR UNTIL THE LATE SUMMER OF 1916, ALMOST TWO YEARS AFTER ITS OUTBREAK.

BUT THE BIG QUESTION IS WHAT HAPPENS TO POLAND PENDING MATERIAL AID FROM HER ALLIES. IT WILL BE A MIRACLE IF SHE CAN HOLD OUT.

IT WOULD BE HARD TO FIND A MORE STRIKING COMMENTARY ON THE LIFE AND DEATH STRUGGLE BEING WAGED BY POLAND THAN IS CONTAINED IN ONE LITTLE SENTENCE REPORTED BY AN A.P. WAR CORRESPONDENT:

"COLONEL JOZEF BECK THE FOREIGN MINISTER, HAS LEFT TO JOIN THE GENERAL STAFF."

SEP 13 1939

POLAND DOESN'T NEED A FOREIGN MINISTER MUCH THESE DARK DAYS, BUT EXPERIENCED MILITARY LEADERS. SO THE GENERAL STAFF GETS BECK--CALLED POLAND'S STRONG-MAN BY HIS ADMIRERS, FORMER ARTILLERY OFFICER WHO FOUGHT FOR LIBERTY UNDER THE GREAT PILSUDSKI AND WAS A CLOSE DISCIPLE OF THE POLISH HERO.

I CAN'T RESIST ADDING THAT WHEN I WAS IN WARSAW LAST FALL THEY TOLD ME THAT BECK'S MARRIAGE TO ONE OF THE LOVELIEST WOMEN OF THE COUNTRY REPRESENTED ONE OF THE REALLY GREAT ROMANCES OF PRESENT-DAY POLAND. THEY ARE A COUPLE SAID TO BE MUCH IN LOVE, AND CONSEQUENTLY BELOVED BY THE PUBLIC.

EZ1119AED

A127

POLISH PRONUNCIATIONS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEP 13 1939

PRONUNCIATIONS OF SOME POLISH NAMES IN TODAY'S WAR NEWS:

PRZEMYSL - PZHE-MISH-L

POZNAN - POZ-NAN

RADOM - RAH-DAWM

KUTNO - KOOT-NAW

MODLIN - MAWD-LIN

BIALYSTOK - BYAW-LI-STALK

LODZ - WOODZH

LWOW - L-VUF

TORUN - TO-ROON

GNIEZNO - GNYEZ-NAW

WROMBOCLAW - I-NAW-RAW-CWAV

EZ1049AED

SEP 13 1939

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS LANDED UNHAMPERED BY SUB OR PLANE, FRENCH SAY

Allied Fleets Reported Pressing Blockade And War On U-Boats

Troops In Saarbrücken Area Described As Improving Positions

SEP 14 1939

By ROY PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 13—Several hundred thousand British troops have landed in France unhampered either by submarines or aerial attack, it was announced tonight.

Announcement of the achievement was made in authorized quarters shortly after Premier Edouard Daladier had reformed his Cabinent for "win-the-war" purposes, with himself as Premier, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Minister of War and National Defense.

It also followed an official communique stating that French troops fighting their way forward in the Saarbrücken area of Germany again had bettered their positions after having previously gained a mile.

"Clearing Seas Of Submarines"

The official communique of war operations said significantly that French naval forces had "reacted vigorously against enemy submarines."

Going more into detail, semi-official explanations released for publication in morning newspapers said: "The most delicate of operations—embarkation and landing of large bodies of troops—has been accomplished without incident such as submarine or aerial attacks. This refers to the passage to France of several hundreds of thousands of British soldiers.

"The English and French fleets—ten days at sea—continued in silence the complex task of blockading Germany and clearing the seas of submarines."

Heavy Toll On German Shipping

The explanations said the results to date were 1,105,000 tons of German shipping swept from the seas—"sunk after the crews had been placed in safety" or driven into neutral ports.

Allied maritime traffic is being less and less troubled by submarines after the losses coincident with the beginning of the war, the statement added.

It declared that no German armed merchant ships or warships, with the exception of submarines, had been able to get through the British-French blockade into the North Sea or the English Channel.

At the initial stage of the last war, it was pointed out, the situation was quite different, with a number of German warships raiding on the high seas.

Many Saved By Zigzagging

Tactics evolved in the last war—that of zigzagging when there was danger of being torpedoed—have saved many merchant ships, semi-official sources said.

Only one of five ships attacked yesterday actually was hit by a torpedo, it was disclosed.

The arming of merchantmen with guns both forward and rear was said to be proceeding rapidly. This armament, together with the fact that merchant ships now are equipped with improved wireless, was expected to make the large-scale use of the convoy system unnecessary.

Carrying the war to the submarines themselves, meanwhile, is bringing "important results," French spokesmen said, although they declined to give details of the work of British and French warships engaged in running down the enemy undersea craft.

The French advance, under cover of artillery and aviation, was characterized by military dispatches as "substantial" both east of Sarreguemines and west of Saarbrücken. Near the Warndt Forest the French were declared to have seized "one or two farms."

Planes In First Major Battle

As the ground forces felt their way slowly across no-man's land between the Maginot and Siegfried Lines, allied air forces engaged the enemy in the first major battles of the new war.

30.24-3295

30.24 3295

[Associated Press Editor's Note—A British statement to Parliament acknowledged that the Royal Air Force had a number of squadrons operating from French soil, but declared British troops had not yet seen action.]

Pursuit ships of both sides blazed into action. Dog fights over frontier zones resulted, French sources said, in destruction of three German planes and "one or two" French. The air engagements were reported to be slowing down late in the day after French reinforcements soared eastward from the central region.

Military dispatches said the French advance had almost removed the French frontier town of Sarreguemines from the range of German artillery.

SEP 14 1939

No German "On Soil of France"

French artillery bombardments were said to have caused the Nazi army to begin removal from its Saar headquarters at Saarbrücken.

Informed French comments on Western front activities said: "Not a single German is actually on French soil."

Two conservative afternoon newspapers, Le Temps and Le Journal des Debats, described yesterday's meeting of the French-British Supreme War Council as a complete answer to German efforts to separate France and Britain from Poland.

Complete Unity Reported

Le Journal des Debats said "there will be neither waste of forces nor loss of effort; complete unity is established which is marked as much by general direction as by execution of all decisions which will be taken."

Le Temps said in an editorial that two facts—the landing of British troops and the meeting of the Supreme War Council—"in present circumstances speak eloquently for themselves as much from a point of view of political action as from a point of view of military action."

French sources reported that "of fifty-eight submarines in the German fleet, twenty-five are on the seas." British-French defenses against submarines were described as satisfactorily begun.

Rectification Of Lines

Military writers said a methodical rectification of French lines along the banks of the Rosselle river was eliminating danger of a German attack cutting off the exposed point of a salient directed toward Saarbrücken.

Basing their comments in "indications" from the General Staff, the writers declared the consolidation of positions was proceeding along a thirty-mile sector.

Paris War Regime Relaxed

Some relaxation of the war regime in Paris was announced. A certain number of moving picture theaters will be allowed to operate until 10 P. M., provided the number of spectators does not exceed the capacity of nearby bombproof shelters. Heretofore, all theaters closed at 8.30.

School children who for various reasons have been forced to remain in Paris were notified official registration at schools must be completed before September 28.

Major Drive To Crack Line Seems In Progress

SEP 14 1939

By CHARLES S. HALTZ, JR.
Associated Press Correspondent

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 13—Two powerful French army forces were reported tonight to be folding like wings on the German city of Saarbrücken.

More troops were engaged in the drive on the rich center of the Saar mining basin, according to reports reaching Switzerland, than in any action since the war began.

Frontier Railroads Shattered

It appeared a major drive to crack the first line of the German Siegfried fortifications was in progress.

The accurate marksmanship of Maginot Line gunners who for years had been taught the exact range of main objectives on the other side of the frontier shattered railroads at many points.

The French laid down barrages on rail lines and highways leading into Saarbrücken and at the great Tiller bluff overlooking the city on the south. Just on the other side of this bluff, which the Germans were reported to have turned into a stronghold with several batteries of guns, stands the Saarbrücken Chateau, restored after the French destroyed it in 1793.

German defenders were reported to have staged bitter counter-attacks against both the Warndt Forest wing of the French advance southwest of the city and against the line creeping up from the other side.

French tanks were used in sectors where the terrain permitted, Basel reports said, and they frequently were stopped by modern German anti-tank guns with which the Siegfried forts are supplied plentifully.

The day's fighting extended across rough, barren mining land east of the Warndt Forest, already pitted with great shell holes, many of which opened a way into the mines below.

During the day local attacks were reported along the Moselle Valley, where the French tried to recapture positions which the Germans won back in yesterday's counter-attacks.

Daladier Forms War Cabinet

French Army Reports Its Positions Bettered —Says Navy Is Combatting Submarines.

SEP 14 1939

PARIS, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Premier Daladier announced tonight that he had formed a new Cabinet to prosecute the war against Germany.

After consulting with leading statesmen of France throughout the day, the Premier left the War Ministry at 8:30 P. M., Paris time, for the Elysee Palace, where he said he would present the new ministry immediately to President Albert Lebrun.

The change of government, which ordinarily would be called a Cabinet crisis, was carried out on the Premier's own initiative and at his own chosen time.

Since France announced war against Germany on September 3 M. Daladier had been picking his men carefully with a view to forming a national Cabinet. His former coalition government had lasted since April 10.

The French General Staff communique tonight said:

"Our troops as a whole bettered the positions taken during preceding days.

"Our naval forces reacted vigorously against enemy submarines.

"Reduced activity of aviation because of bad weather."

British Soldiers Reach Front.

British troops were reported in French military dispatches this afternoon to have entered action with the French against the Germans on the western front for the first time in the 1939 European war.

French advices said a "great number of well-equipped British troops are participating in combat."

This news was displayed prominently by Paris evening newspapers.

The creation of a Polish army in France was under way with recruiting offices opened throughout the country to receive Polish volunteers.

French Edging Forward.

French infantrymen were reported in dispatches reaching Paris earlier today as continuing to edge forward into German territory, toward the Siegfried Line, at several points along a 100-mile front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers.

While rival flyers clashed in the air and the big guns of both sides pounded enemy territory, military advices said that the French forces east of Saarbruecken had made a "substantial" advance.

[Reports received in Brussels from the Luxemburg frontier tonight said the Germans had blown up the bridge on the railway between Metz, France, and Trier, Germany, which crosses the Moselle River near the Luxemburg village of Schengen. Border observers attributed this to German fears of a French offensive in this region.]

[At Berlin today the German Supreme Army Command issued a communique in the course of which it declared: "In the West the Birnberg (Birn Hill), about four miles southeast of Saarbruechen, where the enemy gained a foothold with two companies, was taken back by the German vanguards in a counter-attack. Otherwise there were only minor vanguard skirmishes. There were no air attacks on the territory of the German Reich."]

Swiftly moving French tanks and armored cars were earlier reported to have reached the outskirts of Saarbruecken, railroad junction and industrial heart of the rich Saar Basin, and to have thrust immediately into the suburbs yesterday.

In the Warndt Forest west of Saarbruecken, where the Germans have been counter-attacking, the French asserted that they still held two-thirds of the woods and that the situation was unchanged since they first advanced.

Air Forces In Combat.

Military observers commented that in the second week of operations the campaign still nevertheless remained in the preliminary phase.

The War Ministry's Communique No. 19 today reported a "continuation of reaction of the artillery in the course of the night." The communique referred briefly to "great activity here and there" by the air forces of both sides.

A concentration of armies was reported continuing on a large scale with the landing of the first British expeditionary force said to have been completed.

French reports said that the sky skirmishes were continuing today, and that three German planes were brought down, while the French suffered "very small losses."

German artillery meanwhile pounded the villages held by the French near Saarbruecken.

The aerial battle began yesterday when German planes raced over the border to scout Allied troop movements. French planes roared up under the low-hanging clouds and tangled in dog-fights. French reports said that the enemy forces broke apart after several planes from both sides had come spinning out of the sky to crash to earth.

A fresh squadron of French pursuit planes flew low over Paris this morning, racing east apparently to carry on combat.

SEP 14 1939

One of Greatest Duels.

A dispatch from Basle, Switzerland, described the artillery warfare near Luxemburg as one of the greatest duels in history. The Moselle Valley had been converted into one of the most heavily fortified regions of the world with the great Sierck forts, on the French side, facing the German Trassen area.

Yesterday's first meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council was considered in Paris, meanwhile, to be the forerunner of a big offensive of the combined French and British land forces. It followed a steady pouring of British troops into France.

Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain again pledged the use of all Franco-British resources for the relief of Poland.

French leaders said that the Supreme Council's "Big Four"—Mr. Chamberlain, M. Daladier, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin and Admiral Lord Chatfield, the British Minister for Co-ordination of Defense—"covered lots of ground in their discussions."

They were gratified particularly, it was said, by the early beginning of council sessions in this war in contrast with first world war days.

A joint communique said that the council "confirmed completely" British and French determination to "consecrate all their forces and all their resources" to the aid of Poland.

Between the opposing guns in the region about Saarbruecken lay stubble fields—the harvest has been gathered. The land was domed and pitted with pillboxes and machine gun nests, vulnerable only to direct hits from mortars. That was the scene as described in advices through Basel.

French sources said that their army had advanced only a few thousand yards a day in some sectors, where violent fighting marked every action. Roads shattered by German mines and artillery had to be repaired. Advance units often had to wait for nightfall to fortify their positions for the protection of troops moving up behind them.

The advance on Saarbruecken was said to have hammered a wedge in the Siegfried Line at its strongest point. The fall of the city would give the French control of the rich Saar mining basin, one of the world's most productive coal fields.

Saarbruecken, an important railroad junction, lies about midway on a 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine on France's northeastern boundary—northern wing of the western front.

East of Saarbruecken the French reported cutting important German communications and shutting off re-enforcements with an artillery barrage. To the northwest of the city, in a pocket formed by the Luxemburg and German borders, the French were said to be meeting fierce resistance.

French and German infantrymen clashed in bayonet fighting. Comparatively unseason German reservists in that sector were said to have been replaced by veterans.

The main Siegfried Line positions lie some seven miles behind Saarbruecken, and apparently the heavy German shellfire came from them. The French fire in this district was laid down along a two-mile front through the eastern suburbs of the city to the aviation field, which had been a German military air base.

Method of Fighting.

The village of St. Arnual, midway between Saarbruecken and the airfield, caught the heaviest part of the French bombardment.

The French tactics in the drive on Saarbruecken were said to have been typical of most operations thus far in the eleven-day-old war. First scouting and fighting planes roared over the German positions to keep the air clear of a German counter-attack, then armored, motorized units rolled upon the German positions, ripping through barbed wire entanglements.

Behind the tanks and armored cars went the combat engineers with the double duty of mopping up German "suicide squads" which the army on wheels had missed and of finding land mines and exploding them before the main bodies of troops followed in to fill out the lines of advance.

By such tactics the French, now backed in the field by British troops, were said to be closing pincer-like on Saarbruecken.

Meanwhile, today, in commenting on yesterday's meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council, Pertinax, writing in L'Ordre, declared that the communique definitely scuttled German statements that "the western front hostilities are only a vain manifestation designed to save the face of Paris and London Ministers."

French leaders and the press insisted that both nations intend to "crush Hitlerism" regardless of the immediate fate of Poland.

L'Ordre summarized this attitude when it said: "Germany will be beaten without pity."

Premier Daladier conferred today with Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, Commander-in-Chief of the British and French armies in the west, on the general progress of operations. Marshal Henri Petain, Ambassador to Burgos, whom M. Daladier has consulted several times on the formation of a War Cabinet, left yesterday for the Spanish capital apparently to close his mission as the first French Ambassador to Nationalist Spain.

In political circles it was expected that he would return to Paris by Saturday to take a place in the Daladier ministry. Marshal Petain led the defense of Verdun during the first world war.

ATTACKS BY 21 GERMAN PLANES ARE DESCRIBED; POLES RENEW RETREAT

Nazi Columns Move On Lublin And Seek To Cut Off Warsaw

Conditions Behind Front Lines Are Described As Chaotic

SEP 14 1939

By VANNIE HIGGINS
Associated Press Correspondent

Lwow, Poland, Sept. 13 (via Courier to the Rumanian Frontier)—Poland's battered army resumed its steady retreat to the east today after momentarily holding Germany's smashing land and air attack along the San and Vistula rivers.

Early this morning the front, as nearl yas could be told from fragmentary information reaching this bombed and famished city, had been broken by Nazi Germany's forces in four places:

Thirty miles northeast of Warsaw at Wyzskow.

Seventy miles south of Warsaw at Deblin on the east side of the Vistula.

Forty-five miles south of Deblin at Krasnik.

Fifty miles west of Lwow between Jaroslaw and Przemysl on the San river front.

Planes Attack Refineries

As I write, twenty-one German bombers are raining heavy bombs on the oil and alcohol refineries.

The table under my hand is shaking like something alive.

In this infernal din set up by screaming sirens, barking anti-aircraft guns and the roar of bursting bombs, I can't take my mind off the shivering of the wall of this ancient hotel.

If it holds together until I can get this off to Rumania then I will believe in miracles.

Even the sidewalks, or what I can see of them out of the grimy window, seem to dance.

Smoke Rises Jerkily

Heavy black smoke over the buildings opposite seems to rise jerkily to the tune of the explosions.

This has been going on nearly all the time since I arrived here. Only at night does the shaking cease. Then it is a case of blind groping through a pitch black city made eerie by the flickering light of a dozen buildings fired by Nazi bombs.

At night you bump into spy-conscious policemen and discuss the war in hushed tones with people whose faces you can't see. You hope that with daylight the first bombers somehow will fail to arrive.

The days are made up of bad coffee, soggy food, reluctant dashes into smelly cellars when air raid sirens sound and queer pauses, hat in hand, as peasant carts go by with air raid victims piled like so many animals.

Helpless Feeling

One quickly gets a helpless feeling that he can't escape the Nazi bombs, that they've got your number.

On the way up here from Hungary shortly after the war began I left the stalled train nearly twenty times with the rest of the passengers to seek refuge in apple orchards, cemeteries, tunnels, or just ditches from the bombing, machine-gunning Nazi planes.

The first bombardment of Lwow came the morning of September 1, just when Hitler was telling the Reichstag his decision to invade Poland.

Germans Advancing Swiftly

So fast is the German advance moving that none can tell where they will be at the end of the afternoon, but at this hour the front can be described roughly as running from the East Prussian frontier south to Lomza and to Wyszkow.

Then it bends in a long finger west by Modlin, Plock, Honensalza (Inowroclaw) and Cniezno, curving a few miles east of Pozna to run back east to the south of Klodawa south of Zyrardow to the gates of Warsaw. Then it runs south along the Vistula to the San river and down the San to a point five miles east of Jaroslaw.

From there the front goes through Przemysl, Chyrow and thence south to the Slovak frontier.

Heavy German air raids were reported over Bialystok and Lublin, while Germany's armored columns plowed steadily ahead.

Seek To Cut Off Warsaw

One column is advancing southward from Wyszkow to close off Warsaw from the east.

From the Vistula's east bank the Nazi forces are advancing on Lublin. Another column is moving toward this city from Jaroslaw.

Behind the front conditions are chaotic.

SEP 14 1939

German bombs have smashed the Lwow aqueduct and nearly half a million residents of this city get water only through ancient hand pumps.

Physicians fear a plague.

From the time I awake at dawn until dusk German planes are over the city.

Many Fires Burning

Fires are burning in many parts of the city.

Similar descriptions are brought from nearly every city and town in Poland by road-weary, dusty refugees who are disregarding police orders and stampeding from their homes in wild hopes of reaching Rumania and safety.

The roads are so choked with panic-stricken civilians afoot, on bicycles, in peasant carts drawn by emaciated horses, that the military is hampered severely in the movement of supplies.

As fast as the Poles repair railway lines, German airplanes smash them up again.

Resigned To Advance

By now most Poles seem resigned to the steady German advance. They seem to seek only some means of flight.

To repair railway lines only to have them smashed again by German air raiders, to sweep the streets only to have another air raid five minutes later—it seems like trying to hold back the ocean with the palm of one's hand.

The German drive is coming closer and closer to this city, and the Poles fear that soon the railway line into Rumania will be cut, thereby ending all hopes of getting gasoline for their small amount of mechanized equipment.

Despite vigilance of military police who jail grumblers, the Polish man on the street is prone to blame the military situation on its leaders.

A storekeeper, after peering up and down the street to see if any police were nearby, whispered in my ear, "All this is the fault of the leaders. They talk too much and do too little."

Until Monday—eleven days after the start of the war—Lwow lacked anti-aircraft guns. The same is true of other Polish cities with the exception of Warsaw. All guns were at the front.

Even now smaller towns lack anti-aircraft protection and German flyers often swoop within 200 feet of the ground.

Prays For Rain

"Unless heavy rains come," says the man in the street with a resigned air, "it will be over in another ten days."

He believes heavy rains quickly would bog down Germany's mechanized forces in the mud.

Neutral military observers express doubt, however, that even rain could make much difference because Poland's supply system is breaking down even faster.

Transport of any kind is virtually impossible during the day because Germany's warplanes seem to be watching every road, every railway, hunting Polish supply trains and columns with unerring instinct.

Possibly the Polish army may be forced to make a stand in the eastern marshes backed up against the unfriendly Russian frontier, foreign observers say.

Lwow housewives line up early each morning with basins and tin pails waiting their turn at a rusty hand pump that hasn't been used for years.

The sewer system is damaged badly by German bombs.

Despite general mobilization there seem to be many men of military age still left on the streets of Lwow and other cities because the army lacks equipment for them.

The British an French military missions are moving constantly around Poland.

So efficient is German intelligence that the missions' newest headquarters always is bombed a few hours after it is established. Members of the mission maintain contact with the Polish general staff by couriers.

BRITISH INSIST WAR MUST END HITLER'S RULE

Parliament Gets Second Report on Hostilities From Chamberlain.

TELLS OF VISIT TO FRANCE

Says That English and French Opinion Is Completely In Accord

SEP 14 1939

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The British Government advised Parliament today that both Great Britain and France were convinced that "there can be no peace until the menace of Hitlerism has been finally removed."

The Allies' stand was set forth in a joint statement read in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Chamberlain and in the House of Lords by Earl Stanhope, Lord President of the Council, in the Government's second report on the war.

Referring to yesterday's meeting of the Supreme War Council in France, which Mr. Chamberlain attended, the statement said:

"I am glad to be able to assure the House that it is evident that public opinion on the two sides of the channel is completely in accord."

Bombing Civilians.

A stern warning was given at the sitting which heard the report that Britain would not tie her hands on aerial bombing if Hitler breaks his pledge on that score.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax told the House of Lords that Great Britain's pledges of restraint in bombing operations were based on conditions of similar restraint by Germany.

He said that the British would "hold themselves completely free to take such action as they may deem appropriate" if Nazi planes are turned loose without discrimination on Polish civilians.

High Points of Fighting.

Further meetings of the Supreme War Council will be held when necessary, the report said.

Reviewing the military operations so far the statement said that:

1. Germany so far has directed most of her activities against Poland, but she has been "frustrated" by the "indomitable spirit of the Poles."

2. On the western front, France has begun a "methodical advance" which has been "completely successful."

3. British troops are in France, but have not gone into action yet. (French military dispatches received in Paris shortly before the British Parliament met said that a "great number of well-equipped British troops are participating in combat.")

4. The Royal Air Force already has a number of squadrons operating from French soil.

5. The British merchant fleet has suffered "somewhat severe" losses as a result of German submarine attacks, but "submarines are constantly being attacked" and "successes have been achieved."

6. The British fleet has been joined by three Polish destroyers which "proved to be very efficient and were taking part in the strenuous life of our light forces."

7. Practically all German shipping has been cleared off the high seas.

SEP 14 1939

Regulating Shipping

In the question period before the statement was read, Mr. Chamberlain said that the Government intended to establish a Ministry of Shipping at an early date, but that at present he believed greater efficiency would be attained by keeping shipping problems within the Board of Trade.

Leslie Burgin, Minister of Supply, said that all firms and Government factories manufacturing munitions had been asked to operate at full capacity.

He said that steps were being taken to expedite the construction of additional plants.

Mr. Burgin told the House also that eventually a very large percentage of semi-skilled work would be done by women.

Of yesterday's meeting of Mr. Chamberlain and Premier Daladier of France, the joint statement said:

"The present situation was fully examined and the measures to be taken in the immediate future were discussed. Further meetings will be arranged as and when necessary in order to insure that the closest possible contact is maintained between our two countries on all major aspects of the conduct of the war. . . .

Nations Determined.

"I am glad to be able to assure the House that it was evident that public opinion on the two sides of the Channel was completely in accord.

"The people of France and the people of Great Britain are alike determined not only to honor to the full their obligations to Poland, but also to put an end once for all to the intolerable strain of living under the perpetual threat of Nazi aggression.

"Our French allies are, like ourselves, a peace-loving people, but they are no less convinced than we are that there can be no peace until the menace of Hitlerism has been finally removed."

Mr. Chamberlain rendered his first report on progress of the war last Thursday.

Warns Germany on Bombs.

Lord Halifax warned Germany today that if she resorted to civilian bombings the British Government "must hold themselves completely free . . . to take such action as they may deem appropriate."

His declaration was made in the House of Lords when he took cognizance of an announcement directed at Poland today by the German Supreme Army Command.

[This announcement said that as Poles turned open towns, markets or villages into a battle area by sniping "the German Army from now on will break resistance in such places with all means at its disposal."]

The Foreign Secretary said that if that announcement meant indiscriminate bombing of open Polish cities it would seem to be in direct contradiction of Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech of September 1, "when he disclaimed any desire to make war on women and children."

"There can be no sort of justification for what must be indiscriminate bombardment whether from the sea or the air of the civilian population," he said.

The Foreign Secretary also referred to British-French assent to President Roosevelt's plea to abstain from civilian bombing and said:

"The restrictions that his Majesty's Government have imposed upon their own forces were based on a condition of similar restraint being observed by their opponents and his Majesty's Government must hold themselves completely free, if such restraint is not in fact observed, to take such action as they may deem appropriate."

Lord Strabolgi, a naval officer in the world war, said that if the British civilian population were to be bombed, "surely, we were not going to tie our hands to attacking only those objects of military importance in Germany that lay so far from civilian habitation that there was no danger to civilians."

30.24 3297

30.24 3297

Awaits Premier's War Review

Parliament Meets to Hear Chamberlain Make Second Report on Progress.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The House of Commons met today to hear Prime Minister Chamberlain, fresh from a hurried trip to France in a Royal Air Force bomber, deliver his second report on the progress of the war.

The House began sitting at 2:45 P. M. (9:45 A. M., New York time), and Mr. Chamberlain was expected to begin his address about 4 P. M.

It was believed he would have plenty to tell the nation. England has moved quickly since he gave his first "war review" last Thursday, and it was expected that the Prime Minister also would report on his conference with Premier Daadier and other members of the allied Supreme War Council "somewhere in France" yesterday.

In the question period prior to Mr. Chamberlain's speech, Parliament was to hear complaints from various members against censorship and the Ministry of Information.

The Government's change of mind over permission to print the news of English soldiers already in France drew angry editorials against "muddling," and the Labor opposition was expected to question the Government about what had been done to permit the publication of more news.

These questions appeared particularly timely, since the second batch of youths, 20 and 21 years old, were due to be called up under the compulsory service begun early this summer.

60,000 Farm Tractors.

One of Great Britain's chief steps since Mr. Chamberlain first reviewed the war situation was the organization of the convoy system that was finally made successful in the first world war. Put into force as Britain's answer to Germany's smashing submarine attack against British shipping, all details regarding its operation were lacking beyond a statement by the Ministry of Information that it was not yet operating completely.

Another answer to Germany's threat to cut off Great Britain's food supply—a threat that brought the sinking yesterday of the 9,456-ton British tanker Inverliffey—came from the home front. With Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard crying "Dig for Victory," 60,000 tractors were sent out to pull plows through the English countryside and thus effect an increase of food production.

The Ministry of Agriculture said that the country's position was far better than at the end of 1918. It was estimated that a miniature farm of 100 square yards would feed a family of five for 212 days.

Blockade of Germany.

Faith in the economic value of the British blockade of Germany was unshaken in high quarters.

A Times editorial commented that, in the first world war Germany started with more territory than it has now and succumbed to the blockade.

"They are starting this war in an economic position not greatly superior to that reached in 1918, when the utmost exploitation of available resources failed to compensate for the loss of power to purchase abroad," the editorial said.

Meanwhile, the rush of new laws and regulations poured out by Parliament reached deeply into habits of every Englishman. In one of its latest moves, the Government took preliminary steps to shift part of the governmental machinery, and from 7,000 to 8,000 employees to secret points in the country. A Government spokesman asserted, however, that "not a single Minister" nor any one connected with the Government's wartime activities would leave the capital.

Among those most affected by recent measures were mothers and children hurriedly dispatched from London. Many of these didn't like the new way of country life, and it was officially disclosed that "a certain number" had returned to the city.

Death Lurks in Blackout.

The blackout, ordered on advice of the Royal Air Force, has taken its toll of dead and wounded in traffic accidents. The many letters of protest, and the realization that the transport of supplies might be hindered, brought assurances from the Government that measures to make night travel easier were under consideration.

The major diversion still left in the black, cheerless evenings also was in danger of curtailment, should two leads be followed. The price of whisky was raised 10 per cent, and Glasgow ordered all its taverns to close at 8 P. M. instead of 10 P. M.

However, appeals for more gaiety appeared in the newspapers, one of which said: "Too much safety-first is not good."

Food was still being purchased freely, but in a few weeks the first ration cards for meat, bacon, ham, butter, margarine, cooking fats and sugar will be issued. Special allowances will be made for children and manual workers.

Probably the best vignette of the moment was supplied by a prisoner who escaped from Wandsworth Jail by scrambling over a wall—he remembered to take his gas mask.

'Row Over Censorship.

The London News Chronicle, under the heading "Neutrals Cannot Get Our News," published today an article by its diplomatic correspondent which said in part:

"Neutral countries are still without much news from London, although news, feature articles and photographs are pouring out of Germany.

"Here are a few of the most recent examples of what has happened:

"An Italian journalist attempted yesterday to send by mail an article to his paper, one of the most influential and important in the country. Because the article was written in German he was not allowed to send it. . . .

"A news agency two days ago issued a statement concerning the possible activities of the head of a neutral State. The censor passed it. Later, for good reasons, permission to publish was withdrawn, and a private and confidential memorandum to British editors was issued to this effect.

Americans Have Difficulty.

"Instead of circulating this private memorandum, it was read out publicly over the loud speaker in the Ministry of Information and in the hearing of certain foreign journalists most intimately concerned.

"One of these, at least, lost no time in informing his embassy of both the original message and the censors' broadcast private memorandum. . . .

"That the tremendous importance of foreign opinion is still underestimated by the Government is evidenced by the treatment of foreign journalists whose words are as important as the Government's deeds.

"American journalists, for instance, who went to the Ministry of Mines to ask if they might have extra gasoline rations in order to perform their tasks, were blandly asked why they could not use buses, London being full of them.

"If this incident seems trivial, it is in fact not so, for upon the good will of neutral correspondents largely depends the popular feeling in the countries they represent."

Parliament Statement, in Part

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—A partial text of the joint statement on the war, read today by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in the House of Commons and Earl Stanhope, Lord President of the Council, in the House of Lords, follows:

The Eastern theater of war is still the main center of operations. The Germans appear to be endeavoring to force a decision in this theater before they are compelled to transfer formations to the West to meet the threat of allied intervention.

With this object in view, they have continued their relentless pressure on the Polish Army, hoping thereby to break the resistance and to turn a hard-contested withdrawal into a rout. That these hopes have so far been frustrated is due to the indomitable spirit of the Poles, who refuse to be intimidated by the weight of material brought against them or by the overwhelming superiority of the German air force.

In the West, the French armies have begun a methodical advance. Hitherto, these operations have been local, with the object of straightening out the line and gaining contact with the main enemy positions. This is an essential and important preliminary phase, about which the French are naturally reticent, but it is sufficient to say that it has been completely successful.

Cetrtain statements have been made to the effect that the British expeditionary force has already been engaged in France. These statements are not strictly accurate, and are principally the result of the highly imaginative reports of foreign correspondents, over whose activities we unfortunately have no control. Nevertheless, it is true that British troops are already in France, although they have not been in action. When this happens, as full information as the exigencies of the military situation permit will at once be issued.

In the air, the normal work of reconnaissance and patrol has been continuous and a number of Royal Air Force squadrons are now operating from French soil. Further successful reconnaissance flights over Germany have been carried out by the bomber command in this country, and much useful information has been gained in the course of these flights of activities behind the German frontier.

Defense patrols proceed continuously, and the fighter command remains in a state of instant readiness. The coastal command has continued to carry out extended reconnaissance and anti-submarine patrols, and a number of attacks have been carried out against enemy submarines.

On the sea, the outbreak of the war found the active fleet fully prepared and the reserve fleet mobilized, but that did not include the whole of the very numerous auxiliaries which, when war begins, have to be brought forward to complete our sea power. . .

A certain number of British merchant ships have been sunk, and our losses have been undoubtedly somewhat severe. This is only what was to be expected, for the reason that war came at a moment when large numbers of our merchant fleet were scattered over the seven seas, moving under peace conditions. It was impossible to apply the convoy system while many of the ships to be convoyed are still on the high seas. We are, however, pressing on with putting that system into force, and it is daily operating with ever increasing efficiency.

. . . The convoy system is being applied immediately, and as soon as it is in full working order I have no reason to suppose that it will prove to be less decisive than it was twenty years ago. Meanwhile, I can assure the House that submarines are being constantly attacked and successes are being achieved.

. . . The fleet has been joined by three destroyers of the Polish navy, which have proved to be very efficient and are taking part in the strenuous life of our light forces.

. . . At the outbreak of war, the total German tonnage of ships at sea or in neutral or Allied ports, Baltic ports excluded, was in the neighborhood of 1,105,000. Practically all that shipping has now been cleared off the high seas. Some has been captured, and much of it has interned itself in neutral ports.

Moreover, the supply to Germany of vital war materials carried under neutral flags has been and will increasingly be limited by the contraband control imposed by the power of our fleet.

repeatedly attacked U-boats with "some successes."

He admitted the British merchant fleet has suffered "somewhat severe" losses but said the Government's plans for convoys are being pressed vigorously.

Britain Warns That Reich May Try to Build Submarine and Air Bases in Latin America

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Sept. 13—The official British belief that Germany may attempt to establish submarine and air bases in South and Central America was expressed tonight, while the British Government made it clear that its bombing operations in Germany depend on whether the Reich's high command carries out its threat to bomb unfortified Polish cities.

In a brief communique, the Ministry of Information said the Government had reason to believe that Germany might try to build bases in Central and South America and had instructed England's envoys to be on the watch.

The communique said the British representatives in the possibly affected countries had been told to "invite the Governments to which they are accredited to take all steps which may be necessary to prevent any breaches of their neutrality."

Prime Minister Chamberlain and Earl Stanhope, Lord President of the Council, in a report on the war told the two Houses of Parliament that Britain and France are determined to end German aggression "once and for all."

The Prime Minister's statement, which was read by Lord Stanhope, reviewed the activity of the armies, navies and air forces of the warring countries and gave a general report on the defense situation of the Allied powers.

Chamberlain, referring briefly to his flight to France yesterday for a meeting of the Allied supreme war council, emphasized the complete unanimity of Britain and France and declared they would fight until they had banished "the intolerable strain of living under the perpetual threat of Nazi aggression."

He said British troops are now in France and that the British navy virtually has swept the German merchant marine off the seas.

Losses Admitted

Other air force units, he declared have attacked German submarines off the British coast and the navy has

As for land fighting, he said that Germany has been concentrating mainly on Poland but that plans for a lightning victory have been frustrated by Poland's "indomitabe spirit." On the Western front he said France was advancing methodically.

Meanwhile, the Ministry of Information in an official statement said the German Government has suppressed British declarations that Britain and France are determined to fight until the Nazi regime is crushed.

The statement said that reports continue to come from various quarters that offers of peace might be made but that the British and French Governments have made their position clear. That is that they could only negotiate peace with a government in Germany whose word can be trusted so that there would be certainty for the future," the communique said.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Informed of a British statement that Germany might attempt to establish bases in South and Central America, State Department officials said today that that problem would receive consideration at the coming Pan-American Conference in Panama.

They pointed to one item on the agenda for that meeting, called to consider the effect of the war upon the Americas. The item read:

"Consideration of measures to preserve the American continent free from conflict, whether on land, in the air, within the territorial waters, or within the area of the primary defense of the Western Hemisphere."

Nazis Report Vise Is Closing on Warsaw---Claim Capture of Huge Number of Poles.

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The German High Command today reported a rapid thrust deep into southeastern Poland, the tightening of a vise closing on Warsaw and the wiping out of Polish resistance near Radom.

The High Command's communique told of the capture of an "enormous number" of prisoners in the Radom sector, about sixty miles south of Warsaw.

The communique gave this German picture of the rapidly shifting Polish campaign:

Strong forces east of Warsaw pushed doggedly southward in an effort to complete a circle around the Polish capital.

Five Polish divisions and two cavalry brigades in a pocket above Lodz, the third front, continued stubborn resistance against Germans slowly closing in. The Poles have been fighting bitterly for three days to edge their way out of the trap.

Farther southeast, German vanguards reached Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, while the main body of troops in that region took the towns of Jaworow, on the Szklo River, and Sambor, on the Dniester. Both towns are west of Lwow in Carpathian foothills.

Striking for Rumanian Frontier.

The advancing Germans fighting through the valleys are attempting to reach the Rumanian frontier and cut off Poland's southeastern outlet.

The German circle around Warsaw has not been completely closed, but troop detachments seemed to be in position to join each other. The forces east of the capital have had the toughest struggle.

The Warsaw-Siedlce Railway was crossed yesterday. Advance guards had reached it the previous day.

German informants said the campaign to encircle Warsaw was being carried out with tactics such as have been used on important towns of western Poland in the hope that Warsaw would capitulate without a long siege.

On the Radom front four Polish divisions, totaling about 40,000 men, were believed to have been facing the Germans in an attempt to halt them before reaching the Vistula.

Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, German commander-in-chief, was at the front to watch the Radom fighting yesterday. Success there would open the way for main German forces to move toward Lublin, 108 miles southeast of Warsaw. Advance troops already were reported in Lublin.

Eastern Railroads Bombed.

Extensive German air raids disrupting eastern Polish rail lines to Soviet Russia were reported by the German news agency.

Despite unfavorable weather, the agency said the main Warsaw-Moscow line had been broken at several points near Bialystok and Baranowicze and the south line from Bialystok to Brzesc also damaged.

A secondary line to Soviet Russia was said to have been broken between Brzesc and Pinsk.

The agency reported two Polish planes were shot down at Radymno, near Przemysl in southern Poland. Railway stations at Wlodawa and Oleszyce-Horniec were reported damaged badly by German bombs.

Warsaw Declared Crumbling.

Warsaw remained in the hands of Polish troops today after a night of bitter fighting, but German military leaders asserted that the capital's outlying defenses were crumbling under steady pounding of ground and air forces and that the city was virtually encircled.

Apparently confident that the fall of the city is a mere question of time, the high command already was concentrating its attention on the next phase of operations.

This was reported in reliable quarters to involve a determination to drive through Poland to the Russian border if necessary to crush the Polish Army.

Official German Statement.

The German supreme army command issued the following communique this morning:

"On September 12 the German eastern army continued impetuous pursuit of the enemy with its southern and northern wings, respectively, pushing forward on both sides of Przemysl. Sambor and Jaworow were taken and Lwow (Lemberg) was reached by vanguard detachments.

"The Polish group encircled south of Radom has been wiped out.

"The enormous number of war prisoners and the booty of guns and fighting equipment of all kinds still are being sorted and stock is being taken.

"All attempts of five Polish divisions and two cavalry brigades around Kutno to break through southward failed.

"The concentrated counter attack of our divisions is in full swing. Eastward and southeastward of Warsaw strong forces crossed the Warsaw-Siedlce Road and rail line.

"On the extreme eastern wing motorized troops are twenty-five miles north of Brest (Brzesc Nad Begiem).

"Far behind the front the Eighteenth Polish Division, retreating too late from Lomza southward, was stopped north of the Bug River.

"The air force yesterday also successfully attacked roads, bridges and railways east of the Vistula River. Three trains were burning at the Krystynopol station. The airport of Luck was severely damaged. An airplane factory at Biala Podalski was set afire by bombs. Fourteen enemy planes were destroyed, two of them in an air fight. Aerial reconnoitering yielded excellent results. Valuable for army leadership."

"In the west the Birnberg (Birn Hill), about four miles southeast of Saarbruecken, where the enemy gained a foothold with two companies, was taken back by the German vanguards in a counter-attack. Otherwise there were only minor vanguard skirmishes.

"There were no air attacks on the territory of the German Reich."

There was no official comment on German casualties during the thirteen days of fighting since the beginning of the war, but informed quarters ridiculed British press reports placing the Nazi dead at 25,000.

Although there appeared to be an increasing belief that the conquest of Poland would prove a stern task, Germans showed no lack of confidence that the army, and particularly the air force, could carry out any assignment in prospect.

Territory Thinly Occupied.

Behind the fast moving German armies, conquered Polish territory is relatively thinly occupied by troops.

Near the German border, however, thousands of "auxiliary troops" have been rushed into the area to assist in rebuilding bridges and repairing roads. In many areas these troops, many of them eighteen-year-old youths from the labor service, provide the only visable signs of occupation.

Since the campaign began September 1 no rain of any consequence has fallen in western Poland to impede the swift advance of the highly mechanized German forces. Dust on some of the highways has been so heavy that auxiliary troops have been kept busy watering the surface to facilitate movement of motorized columns.

There was every indication that the German Army, organized to the most minute detail, has been clicking without a hitch. Despite poor highway conditions, few disabled German vehicles were to be found in the wake of the advance.

Villages behind the front were desolate, many having been burned as well as heavily bombed. However, many of the inhabitants are returning afoot or in wagons to finish their harvesting.

Framing U-boat Policy.

While large scale operations in Poland occupied the attention of Fuehrer Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann Goering, who conferred at the front yesterday, the admiralty was formulating a policy on submarine warfare to meet the challenge of a British blockade.

There was obvious anxiety to avoid repetition of the charges of ruthless submarine warfare heaped upon Germany during the world war. Informed persons said the Reich would let Britain set the pace in a blockade, but that Germany would match "an eye for an eye."

A Government spokesman indicated that German submarines would attempt to sink ships of any nationality seeking to deliver to England products which Britain has declared contraband in dealing with the Reich.

The spokesman said some sort of communique would be issued soon explaining what steps Germany would take to combat the British blockade. Meanwhile, officials were unwilling to commit themselves except to say Germany has no intention of violating international agreements on submarine warfare.

Attitude Toward Neutrals.

From semi-official quarters there were veiled hints that neutral States may have cause for regret if they permit England to persuade them to discriminate against Germany.

The Reich proposes to maintain trade relations with neutrals as nearly normal as possible. Informed circles, however, implied today that Germany might "revise her attitude" toward neutrals who, for instance, withhold essentials from normal trade or refuse to sell certain commodities merely because they were declared contraband by Britain.

German officials seemed unworried by the prospect of a sea boycott.

They pointed out that in any event the German Navy controls the Baltic, which is the sea route to several neutrals with large supplies of necessary materials.

Moreover, land connections with the Balkans are open and there are prospects that the land route to Soviet Russia will be opened as soon as Poland is subjugated.

Conserving Materials.

Despite statements that there is little to fear from a sea blockade, Germany took steps last night to conserve materials of which there is a chronic shortage.

Sweeping orders confiscated all rubber tires in the Reich and forbade gasoline consumption for private use. Many tires will be delivered to the Government at once, while owners of automobiles, bicycles and other vehicles were ordered to keep their tires in good condition and give them up on demand.

Stricter limitations also were placed on food rations. The meat consumption per person was reduced from 700 to 500 grammes weekly—slightly more than a pound.

Distribution of other foods was complicated by a variety of ration cards. Different food allowances were provided for children, expectant mothers and heavy laborers.

POLISH CAPITAL IS ENCIRCLED, NAZIS DECLARE

Warsaw Resistance Is Reported Cut Off On One Front

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 13—A German army report tonight said that Warsaw was completely encircled.

A dispatch from the German army in the field tonight said German troops had surrounded the Polish fortress of Modlin at the conjunction of the Narew and Vistula rivers, less than twenty miles northwest of Warsaw.

Prisoners Captured

A high command communique declared "enormous numbers" of prisoners were captured in a battle ending Polish resistance south of Radom, about sixty miles south of Warsaw.

Although the army report did not elaborate on Warsaw's encirclement, two German forces, one advancing from the south and one from the north, previously had reported they crossed the Siedlce rail line due east of Warsaw. Other German forces are pressing on Warsaw from the north and west.

The vanguard of German forces in south Poland was reported at Lwow, 220 miles southeast of the capital, in a drive to cut Poland's contact with Rumania.

Reach Lwow Highway

Swiftly moving German motorized units, closing in on Lwow, were reported to have reached the main highway connecting the city, Poland's second largest, with Lublin, one hundred miles to the north.

Both cities are the objectives of hard German drives. The Germans said they had gained the road at Rawa Ruska and at Tomaszow.

Germany apparently was attempting to prepare foreign opinion for aerial bombardment and artillery shelling of Warsaw on the grounds that it no longer is an open, or unfortified, city.

Civilians Enlisted

Newspapermen of neutral nations had read to them tonight excerpts from a purported British radio announcement that Warsaw's civilian population was being enlisted for the city's defense.

An authoritative source said the implications should be obvious in view of an announcement earlier today from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters that the German army will break Polish resistance in open towns and villages "with all means at its disposal." The Polish Government was accused of encouraging Poles to resort to sniping.

[Editor's Note—In London, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax gave warning that the British consider themselves "completely free to take such action as they may deem appropriate if Nazi planes are turned loose indiscriminately on Polish civilians."]

German leaders expressed belief the fall of Warsaw was imminent, although they also professed surprise at the strength of Polish resistance to the invasion which started September 1.

Artillery Troops Thanked

The reported German victory near Radom seemed to be the result chiefly of strategy by Artillery General Walther von Riechenau. The German commander in chief, Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, visited von Riechenau and his troops today to thank them for their work.

In addition to the Warsaw and Radom forces, one mainstay of Polish defenses has been five divisions and two cavalry brigades, who are in a pocket north of Lodz. Their stubborn resistance continued in the third day, but Germans said they were closing in slowly.

The Nazi air force was said to have proved effective in destroying Polish airdromes and communications lines during the day's fighting.

Germany reported little of importance on the Western front, but said German troops had recaptured Birnberg (Birn Hill), four miles southeast of Saarbrücken.

Support Peace Efforts

Paralleling military operations were German diplomatic efforts to support Premier Mussolini's reported peace efforts and to persuade neutral nations that they must insist on their rights to trade with warring parties.

Officials reported Bernardo Attolico, Italian Ambassador, whose car was outside the Foreign Ministry yesterday, was back in Italy. The official attitude indicated he had been charged with an important mission.

The Dienst Aus Deutschland news service reported that Arthur Greiser, president of the Danzig Senate before Germany annexed the free city, would head the civil administration of Poznan, the western Polish province which has had its German name of Posen restored.

The military is still in control of the province.

"Liberation" Asked

Under a Warsaw dateline, Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff reported that three men and two women representing themselves as spokesmen for Warsaw had asked that German troops "liberate" the Polish capital from "armed bands."

Der Angriff published pictures of Polish prisoners at work rebuilding bridges and repairing other war damage.

The official German news agency pointed proudly to the fact that most German movies are open, while reports from France and England report theaters are dark.

30.24 -3299

30.24 3299

Air Force Still Active

The German news agency, D. N. B., announced that the air force continued effective work of hindering the retreat of the Poles by crippling their communications network to the rear. Weather conditions were described as "favorable."

The agency said the rail lines between Wolko-Wysk and Czeremcha, Pulawy and Lubin, and Lubin and Lwow had been interrupted at many places by bombing, and transport brought to a virtual stop on these lines.

The railway stations at Kowel, Siedlce, Lukow and Wlodawa were reported heavily damaged by direct hits and the station at Osowiecz destroyed.

Troop Movement Halted

On a greater part of the rail lines lying east of the Vistula and behind the Poles, the movement of transport no longer is possible, D. N. B. said.

A chain of German transport planes were said to have carried gasoline and munitions to an armored division advancing toward Kaluszyn.

The news agency said German observation planes were making daily flights over the entire area of military operatoins to observe enemy movements.

Polish anti-aircraft defenses were described as "extraordinarily weak."

Although German planes at times attacked from low heights, D. N. B. said they failed to meet any strong Polish air resistance.

SEP 14 1939

GERMANY HITS BACK AT FOE'S SEA BLOCKADE

Contraband Law Aimed At British "Avowal To Starve" Reich

SEP 14 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 13—The German Government tonight published a contraband law which authoritative sources said was designed as a "defense measure against the English blockade."

A decree was issued changing prisal regulations.

Explaining the necessity of such measures, the semi-official Dienst aus Deutschland information service, which is close to the Foreign Office, said:

"By breaking legal international obligations and usage, England has opened an economic war against Germany, which, according to English avowal, was to starve the German people.

"But this battle affects at least in the same measure neutral countries which are intended to be forced to renounce trade with Germany by genuine terroristic methods.

"If they do not bend to the English dictate then, just as Germany, they are to be starved out and cut off from their vital trade connections.

"In view of this open proclamation of the English fight, the Reichs Government was left no other choice but to act on the principle of retaliation and meet English fighting methods by all necessary means."

List Of Contraband Goods

The German list of contraband goods, if intended for enemy territory or enemy forces, follows:

Weapons of all kinds, their parts or accessories.

Munitions and munitions parts, bombs, torpedoes, mines and other kinds of shells.

Contrivances for shooting such shells, powder explosives, including igniting materials, and explosive caps.

All types of warships, their parts or accessories.

War trucks of all kinds, their parts or accessories.

Airplane motors.

Armorplate of all kinds.

Armored trains, automobiles and tanks.

Chemical battle materials and apparatus or machines used to throw or blow such chemicals.

Military uniforms and equipment.

Signal communication and military lighting mediums together with their apparatus.

Transport and communication equipment and parts.

Horses for riding and pulling loads.

Lubricants, fuel of all kinds.

Gold, silver, currency and debt documents.

Tools, instruments, machines and materials used to make or to use the above named products or objects.

The list was described as "unconditional contraband" in the law which was signed by Adolf Hitler, Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command of the armed forces and member of the Führer's war-time Ministerial Cabinet; Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Justice Minister Franz Gürtner at Hitler's headquarters at the front.

The law goes into effect immediately.

The introduction of the law pointed out that in German prisal regulations issued August 28 "only those objects and materials destined for enemy territory or enemy forces are declared unconditional contraband which directly serve land, sea or air armament.

"Because the British Government, however, set up a list of unconditional contraband which goes far beyond this sphere, the Reich's Government sees itself forced likewise to enlarge its scope of unconditional contraband."

As a result, the law said the definition of contraband under the prisal law of August 28 was broadened by the present act.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Prisal is the seizure under legal or customary privilege of anything taken as a prize.]

"Conditional Contraband"

At the same time notice was issued defining goods which the German Government now regards as "conditional contraband."

Listed are all foodstuffs, including live animals; feed, clothes and objects and materials used for their manufacture.

The "conditional contraband" regulations become effective September 14.

Earlier Dienst Aus Deutschland summed up Germany's position on the matter of neutral trade in five points.

"First," it said, "Germany regards it as an essential part of economic neutrality that the normal volume of exchange and transit of goods continue. In this Germany considers she is backed by the League of Nations constitution.

SEP 14 1939

To Continue Normal Trade

"Second—In accordance with this principle, Germany is ready, and has given assurances to that effect, to continue its normal exports to neutral nations and accept normal exports from those nations into Germany.

"Third—Germany offers no objection against neutral nations continuing their normal exports, even to such countries as are in conflict with Germany.

"Fourth—She would regard as incompatible with economic neutrality any limitation or formal control which neutrals might permit other states to force on them.

"Fifth—Germany is ready to enter into negotiations looking toward bilateral agreements with neutral countries to adjust the normal exchange of goods in the new circumstances which have arisen."

U. S. Studies Contraband List

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP).—Germany's action in publishing a contraband list means that she will try to prevent the ships of neutral nations from carrying the enumerated goods to her foes.

It was pointed out here that under international law a German warship could stop an American merchantman carrying absolute contraband to Great Britain, for instance, and take the ship as its prize. However, the view was expressed that the American ship could not legally be sunk, except under extreme circumstances. If she were carrying arms to belligerents (a violation of the American neutrality law) or if her captor found she was carrying contraband but was unable to send her to port as a prize, she could be sunk, but only after definite steps were taken to safeguard the lives of passengers and crew.

A State Department official said tonight that Germany's contraband list would be included in the study now going on at the State Department to determine America's position with regard to contraband, blockade, stopping of American ships and various other problems likely to rise in the next few months.

Officials met with Secretary Hull during most of today for this purpose. A detailed statement of the government's position was expected soon. In the statement, an official said, the government would probably enumerate what it was willing to accept as contraband and what procedure it expected belligerent warships to follow with respect to American merchantmen.

Poles to Make Unified Stand.

Polish Staff Capt. Vaclav Lipinski, speaking from Warsaw, indicated the Polish forces all along the line were prepared to make a unified stand.

Asserting that German attempts to storm Warsaw with tanks and motorized units had failed, Capt. Lipinski said the Poles now were ready to "change a mobile war into a stationary war."

"If the Germans bring larger forces here," he said, "we will do likewise. We are accustomed now to air raids, and German bombs are badly aimed."

Warsaw, under varying degrees of bombardment since the German advance columns reached the outskirts of the city last Friday, yesterday had what radio reports said amounted almost to a breathing spell.

SEP 14 1939

German bombing planes appeared over the city only three times; artillery fire continued, but the damage was comparatively light, and Polish military casualties, the radio reported, numbered only one colonel, two other officers and thirteen soldiers, although the number of wounded was considerably larger.

Other Polish Bulletins.

Through the night, until the announcement early this morning that the Germans had been thrown back, the Warsaw station came on the air infrequently with news bulletins, but musically it appeared to be setting the keynote for the Polish defense with a series of military marches.

An unidentified station, meanwhile, reported an actual march in progress in the west. The announcer said two Polish divisions which had been cut off near the German-Polish border were fighting a running battle in an effort to break through the German lines and relieve Warsaw.

From the station at Lwow (Lemberg), where Polish Army headquarters is located 220 miles southeast of the national capital, came the report of re-enforcements on their way from the southeast and of a major battle in the vicinity of Modlin, twenty miles northeast of Warsaw.

Here, at the juncture of the Narew and Vistula rivers, the Polish forces were said to be concentrating their defense around an ancient Russian-built fort half buried beneath the ground.

A broadcast from a German radio station said troops coming out of the northwest were drawing closer to Warsaw. The report said this army had forced its way to a position east of the capital, indicating that the Germans had crossed the Bug River, which joins the Narew twenty miles north of Warsaw, at least in one point and, might, according to military observers, be in position to strike at Polish communication links with Lublin, Lwow and other cities in the southwest.

Polish Military Commanders Prepare to Make a Unified Stand and Now Expect a 'Stationary War.'

SEP 14 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—German armies attacking Warsaw were reported by the Poles today to have been hurled back six miles in action which definitely put the invaders "on the run."

The defenders of the Polish capital, an official broadcast from Warsaw declared, were manning new defense positions with fresh vigor wherever the Germans had been ousted.

Official Polish broadcasts said the defenders' stand, based on lines set up along the east bank of the Vistula, was aided by:

1. The withdrawal of nine German divisions from the lines before Warsaw to other sections of the front.

2. The arrival of thousands of young volunteers, more than could be accepted into the army, from among the civilians pouring back into the city.

3. The news of re-enforcements en route from the southeast through the gap between the jaws with which the Germans are trying to encircle the city.

SEP 14 1939

Nazi Parachute Corps in Poland

Germans Reported Introducing Technic on a Wholesale Scale.

SEP 14 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—A German "suicide corps," dropping silently from the skies by parachute, is making desperate efforts over a widespread territory to expedite the Nazi advance across Poland, it was reported here today.

Poles reported that several of the Germans, after being captured, revealed that they had been assigned to discover the locations of Polish headquarters, air ports, war supplies, factories and warehouses, and to cut the communication lines ahead of the advancing German columns.

The number captured indicated that the Germans were introducing the technic on a wholesale basis far exceeding similar experimental efforts in the first world war.

In each instance Polish soldiers and peasants rushed to seize the parachute jumper.

Confirmation of the parachute descents and the capture of the Germans was given by several foreigners.

Peasants on Guard.

The Warsaw radio broadcast a warning that scores of men were believed to have been dropped with parachutes, and instructed the townspeople and peasants to keep the closest watch, especially at night. It asked that every effort be made to capture the men alive and to detain all suspicious characters since, it said, some of those dropped wore Polish uniforms and others were disguised as Polish peasants.

SEP 14 1939

In addition to operating alone, it was reported, the parachute jumpers carry instructions to co-operate with the pro-Nazi German minority in Poland. Many of these are still undiscovered, it was said and are aiding the invaders secretly, as the "fifth column" did in Spain.

Suicide in Air.

One misjudged his jump outside Warsaw, it was reported, and landed in one of the main streets where he was almost mobbed before the police could rescue him and turned him over to the military authorities.

Another, coming down outside Warsaw, was declared to have pulled out a revolver and killed himself while he was still dangling over a squad of Polish soldiers rushing to surround his landing spot. Still another was said to have landed and been captured in a garden near the temporary American embassy, close to the Russian border.

While driving from Warsaw to the Rumanian border, the writer heard of four others who, it was alleged, had been captured near various Polish villages, but it was impossible to confirm this.

POLISH JEWS HELP STEM NAZI DRIVE

SEP 14 1939

Anti-Semitic Policies as Great a Fear as War.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—To more than 3,000,000 Jews in Poland war has come as a new fear that goes beyond the danger of loss of homes and property and the normal risks of war.

They flee not only the German army but the anti-Semitic policies that they believe will come with any German occupation. Today they were crowding into the entire area of southeastern Poland—but their way was difficult if not impossible.

The Rumanian border was blocked to them and the Soviet frontiers also apparently were closed.

Among the refugees Jews were prominent, from well-dressed business men to black-gowned Orthodox Jews with skull caps and side curls.

The German drive has struck into areas which long were regarded as the stronghold of Eastern European Jewry — villages and schools where the customs have not changed for centuries. Among the buildings abandoned were schools for rabbis where life and instruction had no modern note.

Among the Jews who fled such cities as Krakow and Katowice were thousands who escaped from Germany during the last year. Homeless to begin with, the new flight was only a continuation.

Meanwhile Jews were fighting in Polish uniforms in an effort to stem the German drive. Thousands of Jews were among the reserve officers called up.

Everywhere the Polish Jews, constituting Poland's second largest minority, were directly involved in the war.

EMBASSY STAFF IN POLAND WELL

Bucharest Legation Gets Word of Americans.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The American embassy in Poland reported all was well today in a brief telephone conversation with the American legation here. The Warsaw embassy was re-established several days ago at Sniatyn, a tiny village near the Russian frontier, following its removal from Warsaw.

C. B. Elbrick, third secretary of the embassy, said that communication with Warsaw had been cut off for three days, but the officials were keeping in touch with other unconquered portions of Poland.

The Polish Foreign Office was reported reorganizing at a new undisclosed location somewhere near the Russian border. Foreign embassies and legations again were operating under difficult conditions in crude accommodations.

Polish refugees continued to flee across the frontier into Rumania, where they were directed to a concentration camp near Cernauti. Most of the refugees were elderly men and women and children. No Jewish refugees are being granted permits to enter Rumania at the present time, officials said.

The only foreigners admitted from Poland in the last few days have been clerks and other employees attached to the French and British embassies. Several American and British correspondents are still waiting at the border, unable to re-enter Poland.

Havas (the French news agency) today reported the situation around Warsaw was "comparatively calm." The dispatches said the major action involved a Polish counter-attack, in which three German armored cars were destroyed.

NAZIS THREATEN TO 'STRAFE' POLES

Promise to Bombard Towns Where Sniping Goes On.

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The German Supreme Army Command, in council at the "Headquarters of the Fuehrer," decided today upon grim retaliation on Polish civilian snipers. The location of the Fuehrer's headquarters was not disclosed.

The announcement said that this military measure was necessary because the Polish population had been encouraged to resort to sniping as a means of resisting the German Army through broadcasts, leaflets and appeals by the Polish Government; and that the German Army hereafter would retaliate "by every means calculated to break Polish resistance."

The army announcement read:

"The excessive considerateness of German artillery and German flyers for open towns, markets or villages is based on a precondition: namely, that these should not be declared or turned into a battle area by the opponent himself.

"As the Pole, without regard for his own population, declines this principle, the German Army from now on will break resistance in such places with all means at its disposal.

"The German air force, in conjunction with heavy artillery, will apply those military measures which are apt to make clear to such places in the shortest possible time the uselessness of their resistance.

"The reponsibility for the consequences arising therefrom for the hard-hit population falls exclusively upon the Polish Government and its incompetent as well as reckless army leaders."

Poles Say Nazis Bombed 30 Towns Prior To Sept. 3

London, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Polish Embassy stated tonight that up to September 3, the day on which Britain and France declared the war, German planes had bombed thirty cities and open towns in Poland.

Casualties among civilians, women and children totaled more than 1,500 killed on September 2 and 3.

Since then scores of Polish towns and villages have been raided and "suffered grievously from deliberate bombing," the statement added.

Eleven Polish Officials Flee

Budapest, Sept. 13 (AP)—Eleven Polish officials, headed by Eugene Kwiatkowski, Vice-Premier and Finance Minister, were reported tonight to have crossed the southern Polish border into Rumania.

One of the party was identified as the head of the Polszka Bank (Bank of Poland).

The Polish officials were reported to have arrived at Cernauti, Rumanian city south of the Rumanian-Polish border.

The Rumanian Ambassador to Warsaw and his staff also entered Rumania at Cernauti.

POLISH OFFICIALS NOW ARRIVING AT RUMANIAN CITY

Warsaw Army Command Reports Heavy Fighting Between Two Rivers.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 1 (A. P.).—A dispatch from Cernauti, Rumania, at the Polish frontier, said tonight that Eugene Kwiatkowski, Polish Finance Minister, and ten other Polish officials had arrived there.

The Rumanian Ambassador to Warsaw and his staff also entered Rumania at Cernauti.

The dispatch said that during the day fourteen planes flew out of Poland and landed at Cernauti, bringing forty-eight passengers, mostly members of the families of Polish commercial air lines pilots.

Charges Bombing of Civilians.

LWOW, Poland, Sept. 1 (Polish Telegraphic Agency, Via Stockholm).—Today's Polish General Staff communique follows:

"Enemy airplanes continued to bombard our army, communication lines, cities and civilian population on the roads.

"No change on the Suwalki front. Our troops along the Narew and Bug rivers are in the midst of heavy fighting. The enemy is using a large number of bombing air planes.

"On the Modlin front no changes.

"On the Warsaw front the population of the capital is repelling German attacks with a great spirit of sacrifice and heroism.

"In the Kutno region our divisions are marching eastward in heavy fights with the enemy. On the San River front the fighting continues."

The Polish Telegraphic Agency also reported that the Germans continued bombarding the civilian population and evacuation trains. German air planes bombed Lwow yesterday twelve times, alarms sounding without interruption for eight hours. The Germans dropped bombs also on Luck and Lublin, doing great damage in the latter city. An evacuation train running from Warsaw to Lwow had to stop seventy-two times to permit the passengers to get off to avoid bombing.

Ambassador Lipski arrived in Wilno via Sweden, Finland and Latvia. Col. Koc has been appointed Assistant Minister of the Treasury.

Despite German radio announcements to the contrary, Gdynia remains in Polish hands.

Report Women Captured Tank.

WARSAW, Sept. 13 (Polish Telegraphic Agency, Via Stockholm).—The army and the civilian population of Warsaw are repelling with indomitable heroism the concentric attacks of overwhelming enemy forces. Anti-aircraft artillery dispersed German bombers who attacked the city yesterday fourteen times.

A German tank which succeeded in penetrating one of Warsaw's suburbs was captured and disarmed by the civilian defenders, mostly women and children.

The Warsaw radio station is working as usual. The radio listeners were greatly amused by an announcement broadcast by the German radio stating that "because of strategical reasons the German armies were compelled to retreat from Warsaw."

Crowds Greet Hitler 'Respectfully' As He Visits City Of Lodz

Half of Warsaw Reported Razed in Siege; Polish Radio Says People Refuse to Yield

By The Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 13—A picture of Warsaw under land and air bombardment, "which destroyed half of the city," was given over the Warsaw radio tonight by Captain Wladyslaw Polanski of the Polish Air Corps.

"The Germans constantly are bombing the capital from planes and with heavy guns," he said. "The Praga district is in ruins. A few days ago citizens still were there cheering as the first German plane crashed in flames. Now everything is in ruins. There are many unburied corpses. Many of them are women and children.

"Hospitals were pitiful sights during air raids. Patients crawled out on all-fours toward the gate. The operating room was blown up with patients on the operating table.

"The Germans first used incendiary bombs, then shelled and machine-gunned panicky crowds who had taken refuge in fields outside the city limits.

"Many people were killed inside churches, where they had sought safety. Others died in cemeteries, where tombstones were smashed and bodies scattered about.

"People appeared in tattered clothes looking for their dead. It is a heartbreaking sight.

"They ask me, 'What's new on the front?' They who have lost their homes and families forget all for their country.

"'Don't yield even a furrow of our sacred Polish soil!' these bereaved women, children and old men exclaimed."

Mayor Stefan Starzynski of Warsaw delivered his daily appeal to the populace of the besieged capital to remain steadfast.

"New barbarism instead of the old chivalrous spirit characterizes war today," he said. "The Germans are trying vainly to poison the Polish population's soul with pamphlets."

He said Warsaw's defenders were "all heroes whose nerves remain excellent, with few exceptions."

"Only one plate of food a day is being allowed in Warsaw," he added. "There is no cake in these hard times."

The Warsaw announcer said that "last night and today our troops repulsed Germans from many positions about the capital." He declared that "there were many air raids this afternoon in the north and center of Warsaw and three German planes were shot down."

A staff officer broadcast a picture of the fighting in suburban Warsaw.

"Roads are blocked with smashed lorries, carts, dead soldiers, women and children," he said. "Bombs explode constantly amid crowds of people running away. Courageous volunteer ambulance corps pick up the injured.

"Geysers of water spurt skyward when mains are damaged by the earth-shaking explosions. Repair teams rush to repair them. Everybody helps.

"Tanks rumble into view, spitting fire. Soldiers and women attack the modern monsters with bunched hand-grenades. Some tanks are ruined, their crews captured. Few escape."

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP)—Adolf Hitler, continuing his tour of the Polish war area, today visited Lodz, Poland's second largest city and a textile center seventy-five miles southwest of beleaguered Warsaw.

The Führer drove through crowded streets to German military headquarters. D. N. B., official German news agency, reported he was "respectfully greeted" by crowds who recognized him instantly.

At the same time, Field Marshal Hermann Goering, chief of the Nazi Air Corps, continued his inspection of air force units on the front. It was reported he checked especially on bombing power of squadrons along the Vistula river, scene of heavy fighting. He decorated a number of men with the Iron Cross for Bravery.

Soviet Reports Capture Of Four Polish Planes

Moscow, Sept. 13 (AP)—Tass, Soviet official news agency, reported that a number of Polish bombing planes today had flown over the Russian frontier and that four were forced down by Soviet planes and their crews detained.

Three planes crossed the frontier, near Mozyr, White Russia, and their crews totaling twelve men were held.

The fourth ship forced down by Soviet fighters was among a group which flew over the border in the Ukraine. The twin-motored craft and its three crewmen were seized.

Tass said that similar cases of border violations had "become more frequent and the violators have endeavored to penetrate far into Soviet territory."

30.24-3301

30.24 3301

GERMAN OFFICIALS DECLARED HITLER SAW IN THE LODZ AREA A REGION WHICH SUFFERED LITTLE MATERIAL DAMAGE AS A RESULT OF THE OCCUPATION BY THE GERMANS. STREET CAR SERVICE WAS REPORTED UNDER WAY AGAIN AND SHOPS WERE OPEN.

THE FACTORIES OF THE CITY, OFTEN CALLED THE "POLISH MANCHESTER," ALSO ARE REPORTED RESUMING OPERATION WHILE IN THE COUNTRY THE PEASANTS, MANY OF WHOM FLED ONLY TO BE OVERTAKEN BY THE ARMY, WERE SAID TO HAVE RETURNED TO FINISH THE HARVEST.

GERMAN SOURCES SAID LODZ AND THE SURROUNDING TERRITORY WAS FORTUNATE IN THAT "THE RETREATING POLES DID- NOT SET FIRE TO THE BUILDINGS."

SFP 14 1939

WE1033PED

(THE NAZI ANNOUNCEMENT SAID THE SHOOTING DOWN OF THE NETHERLANDS PLANE WAS A CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY AND THAT A GERMAN PLANE WHICH ALIGHTED TO HELP RESCUE THE INJURED [redacted] CREW MEMBERS WAS SWAMPED BY THE SEA AND HAD TO BE BEACHED ON AMELAND ISLAND.)

THIS WAS, ETC., PICKING UP 2ND GRAPH PVS,

SEP 14 1939

ARCA 00115 -EDB-1055PED

FIRST LEAD GERMAN-SEAPLANE

THE HAGUE, SEPT. 13-(AP)-NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT [redacted] SOURCES TONIGHT NEITHER CONFIRMED NOR DENIED A GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCEMENT IN BERLIN THAT A NETHERLANDS PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN TODAY OFF THE LITTLE KINGDOM'S AMELAND ISLAND.

THE ONLY INFORMATION OFFICIALLY GIVEN OUT BY THE GOVERNMENT [redacted] WAS THAT THE NETHERLANDS COAST GUARD SEIZED A GERMAN SEAPLANE NEAR [redacted] AMELAND FOR ENTERING NETHERLANDS TERRITORIAL WATERS IN VIOLATION OF HER NEUTRALITY.

SEP 14 1939

Holland Plane Shot Down By Nazi Flyers Off Coast

German Command Lays Clash To Mistake — Says Craft Aided Victims

SEP 14 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 13—The German high command reported tonight a German reconnaissance seaplane today shot down a Netherlands airplane, whose identity was mistaken, off the Netherlands island of Ameland.

The plane crashed to the water outside the Netherlands' territorial waters near the little island which is off her northern coast, the statement said.

After the shooting, the German plane was said to have recognized the nationality of the disabled craft and to have come down beside it, rescuing four slightly injured members of its crew despite rough seas.

Second Plane Swamped

The high command's report said another Nazi plane alighted to help in the rescue, but was swamped by the sea and had to be beached on Ameland Island.

According to the German version, the Netherlands pilot was blinded by the sun and was headed directly toward the German plane. The German crew, believing they were being attacked, fired.

German Seaplane Seized By Holland Coast Guard

The Hague, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Netherlands Coast Guard today seized a German seaplane off the north coast of Netherlands for entering the country's territorial waters and violating its neutrality, the Government announced.

This was the first time a plane has been seized by a neutral in Europe's war. One foreign plane was fired upon near Amsterdam last week for flying over neutral soil.

SEP 14 1939

ITALY TO MAKE OWN DECISION ON WAR ROLE

SEP 14 1939

Gayda Asserts Attitude Will Be Determined By "Balanced View"

SEP 14 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 13—Italy let it be known today that she would make her own decision on her role in the European war and would define it gradually.

The Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, often regarded as Premier Mussolini's press spokesman, wrote in Il Giornale D'Italia that Italy's attitude would be determined "by Italian will alone and according to a balanced view of essential Italian interests and supreme European interests."

Gayda's statement came after repeated conferences of British and French ambassadors with Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano had quickened speculation on the course Italy would take.

At the same time, authoritative Italians said Italian neutrality could be expected to continue for some time. They said careful examination of events since last spring would indicate Mussolini did not approve of Hitler's resort to force to get Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

They stressed that in his Turin speech, May 14, il Duce said "there are not presently in Europe problems big enough or acute enough to justify war."

This observation was made in response to suggestions that Italian neutrality was in contrast to Italian statements at the time the Italo-German military alliance was signed in May to the effect that if Germany became involved in war for any reason Italy would give her immediate military assistance.

While Mussolini might consider Italy now lacked any reason to go to war on Germany's side, it was said in Fascist quarters that such circumstances by no means meant Italy would enter the war on the side of Britain and France.

ITALY'S INTERESTS TO RULE ITS ACTS

Gayda Says War Policy Will Be Slowly Defined.

SEP 14 1939

ROME, Sept. 13 (A.P.).—Virginio Gayda, Fascist [illegible] who frequently expresses Premier Mussolini's ideas, said today that Italy's attitude toward the European war would be "gradually defined."

Signor Gayda's editorial in Il Giornale d'Italia was the first authoritative comment on Italy's position since the Cabinet communique of September 1 announcing that the nation would take no military initiative.

The writer attacked the post-world war settlement of Versailles, but gave no clear indication of Italy's course.

The country's attitude, he said, would be determined by Italian will alone and according to a balanced view essential to Italian interests and supreme European interests.

"This war," he said, "does not directly involve Italian interests, but in its remote and obvious causes as well as in its fated outcome it raises an abundance of problems in which essential Italian interests are intermingled. Such general problems are those of the foremost nations of Europe and the distribution of an equilibrium of its forces.

"Such problems are relations between their rights and their means of life and labor which are synthesized in the general problem of European order and justice which were destroyed by the Versailles Treaty."

Signor Gayda said that Italian interests "cannot remain apart from developments of the outcome of the conflict." The Government, he said, was "devoting its daily political action" to the defense of these interests.

Duce Orders Construction Of Rome Fair Continued

ROME, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini today ordered preparations for Rome's 1942 International Exposition to proceed despite the war in Europe. He told Senator Vittorio Cini, Commissioner-General of the exposition, that he desired construction of the fair grounds, new subways, hotels and other auxiliary projects to continue as scheduled.

Last April Il Duce cited the exposition plans as an indication that Italy did not expect to be involved in war at least for three years.

The self-created ability of man to destroy man efficiently. You watch soldiers going off to the front lines and you watch their families standing huddled in fear from air attacks. This war can strike anywhere. The same high explosive that blasts life out of uniformed soldiers can spread death among civilians. Gone are the days when only the front line troops shared in the real suffering, hardship and danger.

You see the initial panic, desperation and anger of war. You watch civilian refugees haul a dog from an automobile and kill it violently. Why should a dog's life be spared when women and children are in danger? Why should cats and birds be given space in automobiles?

Separated Families.

Today you can see the bewilderment of separated families, the suffering of wives and mothers who do not know whether their soldier husbands and sons are alive or not. In a war like this it is impossible to keep track of individuals. The final list of the missing and unaccounted for will be staggering.

As in Spain and China, it is the children who affect the emotions of the neutral observer. In bombed cities, towns and villages you see them huddled in fear—an uncomprehending fear. In places which the war has not touched you see them playing happily, not comprehending.

Everywhere the amazing contrasts. In Warsaw the endless sound of guns as the city is defended from behind barricades. In the quiet countryside in deep southeast Poland a peasant works in his fields in peaceful sunshine. Across the frontier lights shine and people live normally. On the Polish side a hand smashes at an uncovered flashlight. It may be a signal.

Hope of Poland.

Everywhere is the hope that Great Britain and France are punishing Germany. "Have you heard?" asks one man, "They have bombed Berlin, destroyed the Krupps munitions plant at Essen. Six hundred planes. Now Germans know what it is like to be bombed."

He is a Polish mechanic in a small town in South Poland. He speaks to you in a street so dark he is barely visible, but his pathetically eager voice, carries the hope of Poland.

These stories of what Great Britain and France are doing to Germany have been magnified. Hope and wishful thinking are responsible. You are told that the Siegfried Line has been penetrated and that German war vessels have been sunk. A suffering Poland wants a smashing blow at Germany in the west and cannot comprehend deliberate war.

Have Faith in Poland.

"Why don't they hurry?" asks a simple peasant. "What are Great Britain and France doing?" asks a Government official.

And here you have one of the pathetic sides to war in Poland. Not only are millions of Poles unaware of what is really going on in their own country, but they have only a confused, bewildered knowledge of what is happening outside. They live in a vacuum created by disrupted communications and censorship. They hear German broadcasts in Polish detailing German successes. German propaganda over war-torn Poland is, at the moment, far more efficient than Polish broadcasts.

There are efforts to combat this. In towns and villages I saw civic leaders addressing crowds in squares and market places, urging them to have faith." The crowds are told: "Poland is not defeated. Do not believe the tremendous lies you hear." And peasants who have sons at the front go back to their carts wearily, trying to understand.

This Is What the War's Like

Associated Press Correspondent Sums Up the Things He Saw in Poland.

By ELMER W. PETERSON

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHEASTERN POLAND, By Courier to Budapest, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Modern war does almost unbelievable destruction to the normal order of civilian life. Bodies hauled out of the ruins of what was a home. Stunned grief of homeless refugees. The limit of all that is terrible in war—a dead child.

LIGHTNING WAR SHOWS ITSELF IN CITIES' RUINS

Factor Of Personal Courage In Battle Is Minimized

Efficiency Of Airplane Attack Is Again Demonstrated

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Associated Press Correspondent

Somewhere in Southeastern Poland, By Courier to Budapest, Sept. 13—There has been talk for years of a lightning war. Poland now offers evidence of what such a war can do.

Pathos, misery, death, suffering and war again have been wrapped up into one package and this time it is labeled "Poland."

It has brought its lessons, this lightning war which many believed impossible in a Europe so armed and ready.

Air Efficiency Shown

It has minimized the factor of personal courage and demonstrated the remarkable efficiency of airplane attack when such an attack is inadequately opposed. It has shown that only when defending troops are properly dug-in can they resist heavy mechanized units.

In the defense of Warsaw personal courage is being demonstrated. There is something to hold on to and fighting is in close quarters. But willingness to die or risk death means little when the enemy cannot be reached with rifle, machine-gun or hand grenade.

Why has the Polish army, so large in numbers, been thrown back? Because of a long unwieldy front in which penetrations forced retreat all along the line. Because of the effective use of airplanes laying down a barrage of high explosives so rapidly that Polish forces could not dig in. Because of an insufficient defense against superior mechanical equipment, tanks, armored cars, highly mobile artillery. Because the Poles, overpowered in the air, were denied the advantages of aerial observation.

Spot Concentrations

German planes were able to spot Polish concentrations and guide every advance, favored by perfect weather for observation. The Polish army had to depend largely on ordinary field wireless communications along the long, unwieldy front.

Poland relied on horse-drawn artillery for mobility against the smashing attack of the German mechanized equipment. Polish supply lines consisted of tens of thousands of peasant carts, which, on the dusty roads, made easy targets.

The Polish cavalry apparently has had little chance to operate, although there were reports that it was sent against the Germans in several places in last-minute desperate efforts—affording a spectacle of men and horses crashing into guns and scientific fighting machines. Countless horses are among the victims of the war.

There is every evidence the Polish army anticipated the necessity of retreat and shortening of defense lines, but no one expected such a hurried retreat.

Little Word Of Air Force

There still is no information regarding the Polish air force, how many planes and flyers have been saved or whether safe temporary airfields have been established. There is an indication that an effort will be made, after initial attempts to meet the Germans in the air, to salvage as many as possible of the estimated 500 first line planes to assist in a reorganized defense.

I saw individual Polish training planes traveling only a few hundred feet high ready to land at a moment's notice in order to escape attack from German planes.

Favorable to Poland is the approaching rainy season when the roads will be mired; when murky, cloudy weather will handicap air attacks and partly restore fighting to a basis where the undoubted courage of the Polish soldiers will have a chance.

Unfavorable is the loss of munitions manufacturing centers and arsenals and the retreat to a position where supplying the army may be most difficult.

WANTS BRITISH NEWS OF WAR

Commons Told Censorship Is in Mess and Muddle.

GREENWOOD WARNS OF CRISIS

Declares Plundering Is Going On Upon a Large Scale.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Arthur Greenwood, acting Labor leader, demanded in the House of Commons today that the British public and the world at large be told more fully about the progress of the war.

In vigorous criticism of news and censorship methods which he said had resulted in "mess and muddle," Mr. Greenwood declared "this is creating a situation which is undermining the confidence of the people in the Government. . . .

"The truth is that there is no real effective co-ordination between the fighting services and the Ministry of Information." Mr. Greenwood also said that there must be "no profiteering in this war" and asserted "at this moment plundering is going on upon a large scale."

Predicts National Crisis.

He voiced the feeling that unless swift and courageous action were taken "the Government might find itself faced with a crisis like the shell crisis of the last great war.

"One of the great industries of this country is the machine tool industry. That industry today is making profits which are a national crime. Steps must be taken immediately to end any possibility of this kind of crime."

Mr. Greenwood spoke in a debate on the Ministry of Information which followed the reading by Prime Minister Chamberlain of a statement on the progress of the war.

Mr. Chamberlain in advance of the debate said "I feel that in these early days I am entitled to ask the House and the country for patience and toleration while we are endeavoring to correct what has gone wrong and to build up a satisfactory and efficient service."

Calls Work Difficult.

The ministry, he said, has "the most difficult type of work that can be assigned to a Government department. Such a ministry must continually seek to steer between giving information which might help the enemy to defeat and destroy our own troops and withholding information with the risk of creating an impression that terrible things may be happening of which the public has no knowledge."

Mr. Greenwood declared that "all this absurdity of Monday night" when the Ministry of Information released, then withdrew and then again released news about British troops in France "was really due to one person, the Secretary of State for War (Leslie Hore-Belisha). I say he has no right to override the Minister of Information."

Speaking of the lack of news after an air raid warning last week, Mr. Greenwood said he had heard stories about air raids over various cities "as though half Britain had been bombed that day; yet no German bomb has been dropped to this moment."

The former King Edward VIII is at Portsmouth while a handful of a Field Marshal on the active list and Colonel-in-Chief of the Welch Guards.

His Old Regiment.

Today's terse announcement did not say what the "war employment" would be, but understood Duke will be given an army commission, probably with the Grenadier Guards, with which he served during the first world war.

He returned secretly from France on a destroyer last night. With him came the American-born woman for whom he gave up the throne.

They stepped onto a red carpet at Portsmouth and officials cheered. It was the former Mrs. Simpson's first step on British soil as Duchess of Windsor. They were married in France.

It was stated authoritatively that the Duke and Duchess spent last night at the residence of the Naval Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth before proceeding today to the Ashdown Forest home of his former aid, Major Edward Dudley Metcalfe.

The Windsors were met at Portsmouth by Major Metcalfe and Lady Alexandra Metcalfe.

Duke of Windsor Is Home

'Awaits Assignment to War Duty at Estate of Friends Outside London.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—At the secluded home of a friend in Sussex today, the Duke of Windsor spent his first day home after a self-imposed exile of nearly three years, and this afternoon it was announced that he would take up a war appointment.

1939

30.24-3303

30.24 3303

He gave quick evidence today that he would not seek seclusion. With his American-born Duchess he posed for photographs. He avoided questions about what kind of war job he would take, but the smiles of Duke and Duchess made it obvious that they were glad to be back in England.

The Duchess wore a high-necked light blue wool dress and a black-and-white check tweed coat. The Duke wore a striped flannel lounge suit with a bright-figured tie.

It was said that no plans had been made as yet for them to visit London.

Newspapers' Welcome.

Most London papers put the homecoming on their front pages, but only two gave it headlines comparing in size with those for the war news.

It was the Channel harbor of Portsmouth where the Duke last saw England early on the morning of December 12, 1936. The night before, in his historic farewell address, broadcast from Windsor Castle, he had said: "It may be some time before I return to my native land."

The homecoming recalled another passage from the memorable broadcast: "If at any time in the future I can be found of service to his Majesty in a private station, I shall not fail."

The London Daily Express gave the Duke an editorial cheer, saying, "The nation will welcome the news of his return. Here is the place where he should dwell. In peace, for it is his home. In war, for duty calls him here as it does every man of British blood.

"He returns as a private citizen and also as a soldier remembered by soldiers. He brings qualities which can be of high service to his country's cause at this hour."

One wing of Major Metcalfe's home has been set aside for the Duke and Duchess. Lady Metcalfe is a daughter of the late Marchioness Curzon, the former Mary Leiter of Chicago.

sor temporarily are making their home said the Duke was "taking up a war appointment."

It was generally understood this meant a commission in the army.

There was speculation that he probably would return to his old World War regiment—the Grenadier Guards. The Duke is a field marshal on the active list. He is also colonel in chief of the Welsh Guards and holds naval and air force commissions.

First Day In England

Both the Duke and Duchess, spending their first day in England since Windsor began his voluntary exile almost three years ago, looked happy. Both smiled broadly when they received newsmen and the Duke accepted their congratulations upon his return with a smiling "thank you."

The American-born Duchess, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, was wearing one of her usual severe, smart outfits—a pale blue wool dress with high neck and a tailored black and white houndstooth check coat. The Duke appeared in a chalkstripe gray flannel lounge suit and wore with it a bright dotted foulard tie.

Established for the time in a wing of the Sussex home of the Duke's friend, Major Edward Metcalfe, the Duke and Duchess gave no hit of further plans.

Besides the announcement that the Duke would take up a war appointment, the only information supplied officially about the couple was that no plans for the Duke to visit London had yet been made.

One of the Duke's first callers was his friend, Sir Walter Monckton.

Windsor during the World War—as Prince of Wales—served as a staff officer, but was irked by restrictions that kept him off the firing line.

Windsor, His "Exile" At End, Expected To Serve In Army

May Return To Old World War Regiment—Happy At Being Home Once More

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—A terse announcement tonight from the country estate where the Duke and Duchess of Wind-

URGE BORDER LIGHTS

Swiss Want Neutrals to Mark Frontiers.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—A suggestion that neutral countries mark their borders so war pilots may see them plainly day and night was advanced today in the authoritative newspaper Der Bund.

An article in Der Bund proposed that white markers thirty feet square be placed one kilometer (⅝ of a mile) apart along neutral frontiers; that they be floodlighted at night, and that radio beacons be installed to flash signals which belligerent bombers could recognize easily. It suggested that Switzerland present the plan to a meeting of the seven neutral Oslo Powers.

In the world war several Swiss towns near the French-German frontier were bombed by mistake, with serious damage. Thus far in the European war bombs from a straying British bomber have fallen on a Danish town, and a Belgian pursuit plane has been brought down in a battle with two British bombers which apparently unknowingly trespassed on Belgian territory.

CANADIAN WAR SESSION ENDED

Parliament Adjourns After Passing Cabinet Bills.

HUGE TAX INCREASES VOTED

Income Levy Up 20 P. C. and Every Business to Pay Heavily.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13 (Canadian Press).—The special session of the Canadian Parliament which met on September 7 to approve Canada's declaration of war on Germany, was formally prorogued today by Lord Tweedsmuir, the Governor-General. The end of the session came soon after the Senate had given its approval to the last of the Government's war measures.

The House, moving at a pace reminiscent of 1914, passed the last of the measures last night.

Income Tax Up 20 P. C.

The program will increase income taxes by 20 per cent. Present exemptions and graduations of personal income taxes remain unchanged.

All businesses will pay taxes ranging from 10 to 60 per cent of profits in excess of 5 per cent of their capital, or an alternative tax of 50 per cent on all profits in excess of the average for the past four years.

Domestic and imported spirits will be taxed an additional $3 a gallon. The excise tax on wine will be doubled and the tax on imported beers increased by nine cents a gallon.

Excise duties on cigarettes will be increased by $1 per 1,000, and on tobacco by five cents a pound.

Munitions and Supplies.

In addition to these measures, the House passed a bill providing for a Department of Munitions and Supplies with sweeping powers to mobilize industry for Government service.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King announced that until it is deemed necessary to set up the department, all war purchases will be handled by a War Supply Board.

Parliament had previously approved a $100,000,000 war supply and borrowing measure.

The objection of the Conservative leader, Arthur Meighen, to the "rush" to complete the special war session delayed the Senate's approval of the program last night. Declaring that the bills "come over here at the rate of one a minute," Mr. Meighen urged the Senate to take time to study the measures.

The only delay in the House occurred when Social Credit members sought to force through an amendment to provide for conscription of wealth. Their measure was quickly voted down, 190 to 8.

ENVOY ASSAILS RUTHLESSNESS OF AIR ATTACK

Says a Defenseless Open Village Was Showered by Four Airplanes.

THE EMBASSY ALMOST HIT

Refugee and Hospital Trains Plainly Marked With Red Damaged.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The State Department made public today a telegram from Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr. in Poland that German air forces were "taking advantage of every opportunity, without regard to the danger to the civilian population which may be involved."

The telegram, dated September 8, added: "It is also evident that the German bombers are releasing their bombs they carry even when they are in doubt as to the identity of their objectives."

Ambassador Biddle cited a number of instances:

"The attacks made on my villa and that of my neighbors; a heavy attack on modern apartment buildings in the suburbs of Warsaw situated one kilometer from military barracks; the destruction of a sanitorium, involving the death of ten children in the woods near Otwock; the bombing of a refugee train on its way from Kutno; damage done to a hospital train carrying a party of wounded soldiers, which was plainly marked with a Red Cross on the roof and drawn up at the uncovered east station of Warsaw, and the destruction of a girl guide hut in which twelve girls were killed."

It was recalled here that President Roosevelt, immediately on the outbreak of German-Polish hostilities, addressed an appeal to all likely belligerents, urging them not to bomb civilian populations, and favorable replies were received from all.

Mr. Biddle sent to the State Department another telegram received this morning from the Polish town where the embassy is now located, and which the department refused to name. The telegram described a bombing raid by German planes in which bombs fell within 300 yards of the embassy. It read:

"This place, a defenseless open village, was bombed at 11 A. M. today, by flight of four German planes which dropped at least twelve bombs not only on outskirts but also along main street 300 yards from this embassy and within even closer proximity of other missions as well as the Foreign Office now located here. Verified casualties include eleven killed, forty seriously injured and many business properties. Population terrorized by suddenness and unexpectedness of the raid."

The American embassy is believed to be situated in the extreme southeastern corner of Poland, near the Rumanian border.

The First Telegram.

In his first telegram Mr. Biddle stated:

"Although they are ostensibly appearing to follow the principle of limiting bombardments from the air to objectives of a military character, in my opinion the German forces are taking advantage of every opportunity, without regard to the danger to the civilian population which may be involved."

The Germans, he reported, were bombing military objectives extensively.

"Aerial bombardments by German aviation," he said, "definitely include industrial establishments which are engaged in war production (the bombardment of which endangers surrounding communities); railroads (the bombardment of which frequently endangers hospital and refugee trains); bridges, and the general public crossing them, and populations residing near bridges, airport and troop centers throughout the country. The Polish army, in making its defensive retreat, is billeting military forces in civilian communities, there being hardly any community that does not house some troops. In addition, there are barracks in practically every smaller center and in all cities."

ROOSEVELT CALLS EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS SEPT. 21

President Summons Both Houses to Meet Week From Thursday.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt today called Congress to meet in special session at noon, September 21.

Text of Proclamation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The proclamation convening Congress follows:

"Whereas, public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon, on Thursday, the 21st day of September, 1939, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive;

"Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol in the City of Washington, on Thursday, the 21st day of September, 1939, at 12 o'clock, noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members thereof are hereby required to take notice."

The President advised the leaders invited to the advance conference that after a careful study of the whole situation he had decided to call a special session.

He expressed the hope that each of them could arrive in Washington a day early for the informal meeting with him.

Van Nuys Is Pivotal.

While the Chief Executive is anxious not only to limit the legislative scope of the session to neutrality revision, but also would like the session to end as quickly as possible, many Senators, including Borah, Republican, of Idaho; Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, and Nye, Republican, of Indiana have declared they would insist on full debate, although without any effort to fillibuster.

President Roosevelt appeared assured today of majority support within the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for some form of his proposal to permit the sale of arms to belligerent nations.

In a letter to an unnamed constituent, Senator Van Nuys announced he would support a cash-and-carry plan for arms sales, if it were properly safeguarded.

Senator Van Nuys is one of the committee members who, by a vote of 12 to 11 at the last session of Congress, delayed consideration of proposals to repeal the arms embargo provision of the neutrality act and otherwise revise that statute.

His announcement today was regarded generally as assuring that the committee would place the issue before the Senate at the forthcoming special session.

"My sympathies, of course, are with the democracies of Europe," Mr. Van Nuys wrote. "I anticipate that the chief point of discussion will be a cash-and-carry plan. I shall study all such proposals with a sympathetic interest.

"I shall not support any legislation or alliances which may result in again sending American soldiers overseas, but I will favor a cash-and-carry plan properly safeguarded."

The President said recently that he favored a plan laid down by Secretary of State Hull to the effect that a section of the present law prohibiting sales of arms to warring nations be replaced with a provision permitting such nations to make purchases here upon which they acquired title to the goods before they were shipped. The Secretary suggested also that American ships be forbidden to enter combat zones.

Opponents of repeal contend that it would constitute taking sides in the war and ultimately lead this country into the conflict.

This program is aimed chiefly at permitting the sale of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents under certain restrictions. It is generally believed that its adoption would aid Britain and France.

The present Neutrality Act, invoked last week by the President against the nations involved in the European war, prohibits such sales.

Requirements of the Bloom Bill

As approved by the House, the Bloom bill would not permit warring nations to purchase arms or ammunition from this country. It was amended, however, to exclude "implements of war" from this category, sponsors of the amendment contending that this would permit the sale of airplanes, trucks and similar articles.

The Bloom bill would require warring nations to obtain title in this country to supplies purchased here, as recommended in the Hull program, but would not bar their shipment on American vessels as was done under the "cash and carry" section, which expired last Spring.

Under this bill, Americans could travel on belligerent vessels only at their own risk, submarines and other warships could be barred from American ports, and financial transactions with warring countries would be limited to short term credits.

As suggested by Mr. Hull, the present munitions control board set-up would be retained. Mr. Hull also urged that American ships be barred and travel restricted in combat zones.

Similar in many respects to the Bloom bill, a measure introduced by Chairman Pittman of the Foreign Relations Committee, would bar American shipping to belligerents.

It would, however, permit nations engaged in war to buy supplies, including arms, ammunition and implements of war, in this country if they obtained title here and transported the supplies on foreign ships. The Pittman measure would authorize the President to designate combat zones from which American shipping and American travelers would be barred.

Under the bill, arming of American merchant vessels would be prohibited. Other sections dealing with financial transactions, closing of ports to submarines and retention of the munitions board are similar to those in the Bloom bill.

The combat zone idea would be carried even further in a bill by Senator Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, which would give the President wide powers to regulate shipping, but permit the sale of arms to belligerents.

Opposed to these measures, however, is a proposal by Senators Nye, Republican, of North Dakota; Bone, Democrat, of Washington, and Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, to strengthen the present Neutrality Law and to strip the President of some of the powers it now gives him.

This bill would place an absolute embargo on sales of arms, ammunition and implements of war to those engaged in hostilities and would put into effect a cash and carry policy for all other supplies.

Vandenberg Measure Pending

Pending also is a bill by Senator Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, simple re-enactment of the expired cash-and-carry clause.

Representing still another viewpoint is a bill by Senator King, Democrat, of Utah for flat repeal of the Neutrality Act. Another bill, by the late Senator Lewis, Democrat, of Illinois, would repeal the Neutrality Act and authorize the President to formulate policies by Executive order.

The President would receive even greater powers under a bill by Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Utah, authorizing the Chief Executive to ban exports of war and other materials to a nation engaged in hostilities in violation of a treaty to which it was co-signer with the United States, while permitting such exports to the victim of the other's aggressive tactics.

Included in the list also is a bill by Senator Nye to ban arms shipments at all times to all nations except American governments engaged in war with non-American states.

The four measures dealing with the Sino-Japanese war include bills by Senator Pittman and by Senator Schwellenbach, Democrat, of Washington to restrict exports to Japan because of her alleged violation of the Nine-Power Treaty pledging respect of territorial integrity and of the rights of foreigners in China.

Nine Neutrality Bills on Docket For Congress' Special Session

These and Four Proposals for Possible Curb On Exports to Japan Await Senate Committee—Bloom Plan to Fore

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—Nine proposals for revision of the Neutrality Act, none of which coincide exactly with the Roosevelt-Hull suggestions, will be before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for consideration in the special session of Congress.

In addition, the committee has on its docket four bills dealing with the possible restriction of exports to Japan in the latter country's undeclared war on China, and a resolution by Senator Sheppard, Democrat of Texas, urging world action on disarmament.

The House-approved Bloom bill generally is expected to form the basis of Senate committee action, although it fails in some respects to meet the requirements of the program advanced by Secretary Hull, with the approval of President Roosevelt.

Freighter Arrives At Halifax With Survivors And Tales Of Courage And Hysteria After Torpedo Struck Liner Off Hebrides

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 13—British belief that a German submarine torpedoed the liner Athenia and then was destroyed itself by a British warship was reported today by the first Athenia survivor to reach New York.

Damon Boynton, 31-year-old Cornell University agriculture professor, who fled from the dinner table on the Athenia to a lifeboat after "a muffled explosion" and drifted all night, said that with the dawn there appeared two British destroyers.

He Believes It

Taken aboard one of them, the Electra, he was told by a crew member that the other destroyer had sunk the submarine, Boynton said, "and I believe it."

"Those boys were right on the job, and with their submarine detector equipment probably located the submarine and dropped depth bombs," Boynton said.

"I was told the destroyers had reached us in the middle of the night, and after finding that we were all safe in lifeboats, or mostly all, went looking for the submarine while waiting for daylight to pick us up."

Two Saw Periscope

He said two other survivors told him they saw a periscope near the Athenia just before the blast.

Boynton was taken to England and caught the liner Cameronia, which arrived today.

He had on the same clothes in which he was rescued—slacks, a slip-on sweater and a green jacket.

Survivors Tell Tales Of Hysteria On Vessel

By JAMES F. KING
Associated Press Correspondent

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 13—More than 200 ill-clad and shaken survivors of the liner Athenia were moved swiftly toward their homes tonight after telling of a nightmare at sea—of a "torpedo" streaking toward their ship of a periscope slipping past a crowded lifeboat, of survivors screaming in fear of another "explosion."

Some still clutched their life preservers as they came ashore from the rusty American freighter City of Flint, where for ten days they had lived in accommodations built only for a small crew. Dozens were treated in a hastily erected hospital by a staff of doctors and twenty-six nurses.

Many Take Special Train

Scattering for their homes, many took advantage of a special train for Montreal equipped with a hospital car. It departed at 4.12 P. M. (E.S.T.). Others reboarded the City of Flint for a slower trip to American ports. A few left by automobile, at least two flew down to New England, and one man accepted passage on an American Coast Guard cutter for New York.

The tales told here today revealed both courage and hysteria, hardship and lighthearted ingenuity as counterparts of the war's worst sea tragedy.

Tall, pretty Mary Lee Humlong, San Angelo (Texas) college student, who had sailed from Glasgow aboard the City of Flint, told reporters:

"When the sea became rough, especially the first night after the survivors came on board, some of those in the holds began screaming and became hysterical at every noise. Some shouted, 'We're being torpedoed.'"

Franklin Dexter, of Boston, kissed his bride of a month good-by and placed her in a lifeboat, remaining aboard the Athenia to see that there were enough boats for the women and children. He was picked up later.

Mrs. Dexter, the former Mianne Palfrey of the well-known tennis family, wearing men's shoes and borrowed clothing, hated to talk of her experience.

"We felt just a jolt when the explosion came," she said. "Oh, it was terrible. I can't describe it."

"We almost hit the submarine," said Mary Katherine Underwood, of Athens, Texas. "We were in a boat with thirty-eight women and only three men. A little while after we left the Athenia's side we saw the periscope of the submarine and nearly hit it. I didn't see her come to the surface."

Miss Caroline Stuart, of Plainfield, N. J., said:

"I rowed for eight continuous hours. Look at these hands."

They still were covered with blisters.

Saw Periscope

Wearing a borrowed chef's hat, Mrs. McMillan Wallace, of Hamilton, Ont., told of seeing a periscope just before the Athenia was struck.

"The boy in the crow's nest was the first to sight it," she said. "He shouted down, and I could see a periscope sticking out of the water about an eighth of a mile away. I didn't see the torpedo but I saw a white streak of foam running out from the submarine. Then I heard the crash."

The lifeboat of Elizabeth Brown, of Houston, Texas, capsized just after she removed her life preserver. Tersely, she said: "I saw one man gasp for breath and die. It was horrible."

G. W. Dow, of Lone Pine, Cal., almost strangled by oil scum as he clung to the side of a lifeboat, gave credit for his life to an elderly lady "who kept reaching over the side and patting me on the head saying, 'Hang on a little longer.'"

Capt. Joseph Gainard of the City of Flint said he was sure in his own mind the Athenia was torpedoed. On the lighter side, he told how "beds" were made from rough tarpaulins, stretched in rows, with each row "named after a street." Debutantes and coeds washed dishes and helped run the ship, he said, even putting on a "style show" to calm the more excited.

Girl Died At Sea

But there was tragedy, too. Mrs John Hayworth, of Hamilton, Ont. had to be helped from the ship. Her 10-year-old daughter, Margaret, died as sea from a brain injury suffered in the Athenia explosion.

Besides officials and newspapermen only one other person was permitted to board the freighter.

He was John Hayworth, who came to meet his wife and dead daughter.

Hayworth, who came from Hamilton, Ont., as soon as it was announced the Athenia survivors would be brought here, was standing on the dock as the freighter approached, convoyed by the Coast Guard cutters Bibb and Campbell.

Custom officers led him across the deck to a cabin where his sobbing wife waited. They embraced and he helped her to the gangplank. They spoke few words.

Arrangements were made to take ashore the body of the girl.

Two Submarines Seen

The Flint sailed at 7.30 P. M. for New York, a forty-eight-hour run, with Janet Olsen, of Honolulu, apparently keynoting for the other five survivors who continued with the rescue ship.

"I still like voyages," she said. "I'm not superstitious. I would not mind sailing back to England right now."

Officials estimated it would take twenty-odd hours for the refugee train to reach Montreal.

Three of the survivors, Adolph John Leocha, of Claremont, N. H., and Mr. and Mrs. John Z. Pringle, of Lawrence, Mass., maintained the Athenia was attacked by two submarines.

Leocha said while one fired a torpedo and shell, a second shot up her periscope seven feet to watch.

"We saw her periscope making a white wake on the starboard side of the liner as we were rowing away in our lifeboat," he said. "At the same time, those on the port side of the Athenia reported seeing a cloud of white smoke from the other submarine's guns." Mr. and Mrs. Pringle agreed with Leocha's statement.

Professor Hurries

The only outgoing passenger on the two Coast Guard cutters, which brought six of the Athenia's injured ashore after a transfer from the City of Flint at sea, was Prof. J. W.

DEPTH BOMBS GOT SUB, ENGLISH SAILOR TOLD HIM

30.24-3305

Gowan, of Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa. He said he had to make a speech at Atlantic City and was in a hurry.

Among those who were aboard the hospital car of the special train that carried many of the survivors to Montreal were Mrs. A. West Park, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Alice Pockington, of Dearborn, Mich. Neither was injured critically.

Captain Gainard said that as the ship neared the Nova Scotia coast a plane flew overhead.

"That damned plane caused a stampede," he added. "The people aboard thought they were going to be bombed."

It was identified as a photographer's plane.

Haggard and worn after ten days without sleep, Captain Gainard told how they stowed 216 passengers with accommodations for only six.

Gave Up Cabin

"I haven't been in this room for days," he said, referring to his own cabin. "I haven't had a chance to sleep. I've had ten girls quartered in here."

Mrs. Margaret Tay, of Brockville, Ont., clad in a blanket, said she was in the cabin ill when the Athenia began sinking.

"I lost everything. We slept on mattresses on the floor in a hold in the ship which wasn't filled with cargo."

Youngest of the survivors of the Athenia torpedoing was 10-month-old Nicola Lubitsch, daughter of the Hollywood motion picture director, Ernst Lubitsch.

The child, with a smear of candy around her face, "cooed" at onlookers as she was taken off the rescue ship.

OSPREY SEARCHED AND THEN RELEASED

British Information Bureau Reports On Seized American Freighter

None Of Cargo Confiscated. Dutch Steamer Groenlo Did Not Fare So Well

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 13—The British Information Ministry disclosed tonight the American steamship Black Osprey was taken into Weymouth September 6, but was allowed to proceed after its cargo was examined for contraband.

The communique said:

"Some delay in her examination was inevitable as her manifest contained some 400 separate items. Some of her cargo consisted of goods covered by the contraband proclamation, about which inquiry had to be made, but as it was not fully established that Germany was the destination and as the items themselves were proved to be unimportant in quantity, none of the cargo was stopped, and the ship was allowed to proceed on her voyage."

Length Of Delay Undisclosed

How long the Black Osprey was delayed was not disclosed.

This was the first American ship stopped and searched for contraband.

The ministry later announced the cargo of the Dutch steamer, Groenlo, had been seized September 4 as contraband. The cargo consigned to Dusseldorf, Germany, will be sold as a prize of war and the ship will be released.

27 SHIPS ARE SUNK IN 11 DAYS OF WAR

181 Lives Lost and 131,259 Tonnage Destroyed.

By Associated Press.

Torpedo, mine and shell have sunk twenty-seven ships of six nations in eleven days of sea combat, with Britain suffering more than half the losses.

At least 181 persons were known to have perished in attempts by belligerents to clear the seas of enemy shipping.

The casualties to date:

Belligerents—Britain, 16 ships; France 1, Germany 6. Three other German vessels were reported to have run aground. Their exact fate is unreported.

Neutrals—Netherlands, 2 ships, Greece 1, Finland 1.

The recent sinking of the British oil tanker Inverliffey by a torpedo near Havre and the Finnish bark Olivebank, which struck a mine, raised the loss in sea warfare to 131,259 tons, exclusive of cargoes.

The toll still was less than the figures for a similar period in the first days of unrestricted German submarine warfare in the world war. Ten days after the German High Command gave the order for unlimited submarine battle in 1917 the loss was eighty-two ships and known tonnage of ships sunk, 172,902.

U.S. and Britain Seek Way to Bar Shipping Strife

Advance Accord to Avoid Disputes of 1914 and to Insure Friendship Sought

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP).—Quiet conversations are under way between the United States and Great Britain to eliminate—in advance—as many as possible of the maritime causes of friction that arose between them in the World War.

Officials hope thereby to save themselves the preparation of such a constant stream of protests as went from Washington to London in the first two years of the last war. They also want to avoid the widespread criticism that welled up against Great Britain in Congress and among the people in 1915-'16.

They are acting on the thought of President Wilson, expressed at the end of 1914 as this government became exasperated by repeated British actions against American commerce. Mr. Wilson said he believed it should be possible for two governments "so genuinely friendly and so nearly of one mind with regard to the principles involved" to agree upon methods "by which good faith and entire compliance with the proper restrictions of a time of war and of national defense" could be achieved.

If anything, the two governments seem to be today even more than in 1914, "genuinely friendly" and "nearly of one mind with regard to the principles involved."

The points of possible collision are much the same as those which produced so much sweat on the diplomatic brow in the World War. For instance:

The United States admitted the right of Great Britain to search American ships if they were suspected of carrying contraband to Germany. But it insisted the search should be made on the high seas and if the vessel's cargo and its papers were found in order, it should be permitted to proceed. Great Britain instead hauled American ships into British ports, searched them there, delayed the ships and charged them port, wharfage, warehouse and other fees.

The State Department said the destination of a ship's cargo should be determined from the ship's papers, but the British detained American ships while searching for other evidence which might throw a different light on the destination of the cargo.

The department sharply objected to the use of the American flag by British merchantmen in order to escape attack by German submarines and raiders.

Secretary of State Lansing viewed "with surprise and concern" Britain's action in giving her prize court jurisdiction over American shipping. He protested Britain's interference with American mails and would not consent to Britain's placing some American firms on her blacklist.

It is not yet known what working agreement can be arrived at with Great Britain and France to remove causes of friction. Its principal point however, will probably take the form of some examination of cargo by United States authorities before ships leave American ports. The nature of the cargo and its destination may thus be certified by American officials and a document bearing this information consigned to the ship's captain. If he is stopped by a British warship he can exhibit the document as proof of what he carries and where it's going.

The other side of the agreement, of course, would call for British warships to honor this special document and permit the American ship to proceed.

Italy Denies Intention To Acquire Liner Bremen

Rotterdam Newspaper Had Reported Fascist Nation Had Planned Purchase

Rome, Sept. 13 (AP)—It was authoritatively denied tonight that Italy had acquired or intends to acquire the German liner Bremen.

A Rotterdam newspaper had asserted that the Bremen, which sailed from New York August 30 and has not been officially reported since, had become an Italian ship and was bound for an Italian port.

30.24-3305

DISCLOSED

(AT THAT TIME THERE WAS SPECULATION IN BERLIN THAT SHE MIGHT HAVE REACHED SOME FAR NORTHERN RUSSIAN PORT, POSSIBLY MURMANSK.)

AUG 30

LONDON - 1ST ADD BREMEN X X X

(AN ICELAND TELEGRAPH AGENCY DISPATCH FROM REYJAVIK, ICELAND, IN COPENHAGEN SAID THE BREMEN HAD NOT BEEN SEEN IN ICELANDIC WATERS. THERE HAVE BEEN SUGGESTIONS THE LINER MIGHT HAVE TAKEN REFUGE AT REKJAVIK.)

QUIASPED

30.24 3305

Aldi

LONDON, SEPT 13-(AP)-THE BRITISH INFORMATION MINISTRY TODAY ISSUED A NOTICE PERMITTING PUBLICATION HERE OF A REPORT APPEARING IN A ROTTERDAM NEWSPAPER THAT THE GERMAN LINER BREMEN HAD ACQUIRED STATUS AS AN ITALIAN VESSEL AND WAS HEADING FOR AN ITALIAN

Incidents on European Conflict

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP)—A small green caterpillar caused the police lace of Swinton, Lancashire, to scurry to cover today. It crawled into the control box of an air-raid siren, causing a thirty-second alarm.

Rajah and Pensioner Aid

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Two gifts to Britain's war chest: The Maharajah of Morvi contributed £37,500 and an old-age pensioner offered his three acres for food production.

Paintings Removed From Louvre

PARIS, Sept. 13 (AP)—A hundred and fifty heavy trucks have spent the past ten days, according to official announcement, removing from the Louvre and other museums paintings and statues that might be damaged in air raids. About 1,300 cases containing 60,000 documents were removed before general mobilization from the National and other libraries, the Conservatory of Music and the Opera House.

Rumania Repaints Trolleys

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Rumanian Air Ministry today ordered all motor buses and trolley cars, which now are a bright yellow, repainted ash gray as a protection against air raids.

Geneva Debates Blackout

GENEVA, Sept. 13, (AP)—Geneva's City Council battled furiously today over the question of whether to light the city at night in view of the European war—but wound up with a compromise.

Champions of a complete blackout argued that it was better for belligerent airmen to see no city at all than a city they might think to be belligerent territory. Defenders of the floodlight idea contended that since French border towns were darkened Geneva would be unmistakable if brilliantly lighted throughout each night. For the present it was decided to compromise by having normal lights until midnight and then normal darkness for the sleeping city.

French Jail More "Alarmists"

PARIS, Sept. 13 (AP)—Three more persons rounded up by detectives have been condemned to prison for alarmist talk. A 31-year-old Pole and a 42-year-old Frenchman each got a year's sentence. A 42-year-old Hungarian received a two-year sentence. A detective had overheard the Frenchman telling neighbors on a bus he would refuse to go to war if called up.

Germans 41 to 55 Are Called

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Ministry of Information, in a bulletin today, said it had been reported that Germany "already" had drafted into her Landwehr (second-line troops for home defense) men from forty-one to fifty-five years old.

Moselle Bridge Blown Up

BRUSSELS, Sept. 13 (AP).—Report from the Luxemburg frontier said tonight that the Germans had blown up the bridge on the railroad between Metz, France, and Trier (Treves), Germany, which crosses the Moselle River near the Luxemburg village of Schengen. Border observers attributed this action to German fears of a French offensive in the region.

SHIP SURVIVOR WED

Bride Is Kin of Woman Who Escaped Shooting in 1914.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A. P.)—A quiet wedding was held in wartime England yesterday at the Church of St. Oswald, Aldershot.

The bridgeroom was Lieut. John F. G. Crichton and the bride Miss Joan St. Clair Stobart, rescued from the sunken liner Athenia by the same luck which saved her grandmother from being shot as a spy by the Germans in Belguim during the first world war.

The bride's grandmother, known as "the Lady of the Black Horse" for her work on the Bulgarian front as the first woman to command a field hospital in wartime, is Mrs M. A. St. Clair Stobart. She was imprisoned for six days while organizing hospitals in Belgium, and condemned as a spy, but set free at the last minute with two companions.

When the Athenia was sunk Joan was on her way to British Columbia, with her sister, expecting to be married when she returned to England at Christmas. After the rescue she asked: "Why wait?"

250 to Sail on Tuesday.

GLASGOW, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Two hundred and fifty American survivors of the sunken liner Athenia will sail for New York on the United States liner Orizaba next Tuesday.

An appeal for all survivors to register at the consulate in Glasgow was issued today.

The Orizaba will not be convoyed by United States Navy vessels as demanded by many of the survivors last week when Jack Kennedy, son of the American Ambassador, visited them.

NEGOTIATE FOR BEE

England and France Want 200,000 More Tons.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The National Meat Board had under consideration today negotiations with England and France to buy 200,000 tons of beef above the regular export quotas from Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil. Daily sessions have been held with packing company executives.

England, it was reported wants 170,000 tons and France the rest.

The meat board was said to be asking about thirteen cents a kilogram (equivalent to approximately $5.90 a hundred pounds).

The order was estimated to represent 600,000 steers.

Packing executives said Argentina alone probably could supply 250,000 tons by the end of this year.

Renounce World Court Arbitration Provision

Britain, France And Australia Say They Regard It Inoperative In Present War.

Geneva, Sept. 13—(AP)—Britain, France and Australia, in separate notes to the League of Nations, said today the special clause in the World Court statute which calls for compulsory arbitration in any conflict, which they signed with thirty-five other nations, no longer was valid so far as their war with Germany was concerned.

The British note said: "All present machinery to maintain peace has broken up. The conditions under which the British Government agreed to sign the optional article of the World Court's statute no longer exist."

The French and Australian notes were similar.

Pro-Nazi Editorial Stirs Danish Protest

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Asking the question: "Shall we allow this to stand?" the Copenhagen newspaper Nationaltidende today quoted the German language Nordschleswigsche Zeitung, published at Aabenraa, which proclaimed that:

"We are neutral in all things except what affects our people. We shall still be found where Germans are."

AAbenraa is fifteen miles from the German border.

BRITISH CARTOONS

German Leaders Pictured as Huge Gorillas.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—British cartoonists have turned to their world war files for inspiration in caricaturing German leaders as gorillas, usually clutching a fistful of children's bodies.

There's only one difference in technic. When Raemaker, the Dutch cartoonist, set the fashion in 1914 the Germans always were crowned with the spiked helmets of the old imperial army. Today the "gorillas" wear the flat fatigue caps of Nazi officials.

Hitler is almost always a gorilla in the less restrained sheets, although the Evening Standard continues to picture him as an ineffectual little fellow with enormous feet.

Goebbels sometimes is pictured as a snake, and Goering appears as a pig. Other cartoonists's standbys are the snarling British lion, the heroic French Marianne sending troops to war and screaming Polish eagles.

Plan Submarine Defense

Four Scandinavian Premiers to Meet on Protection of Shipping

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13 (AP).—Premiers of Sweden, Norway, Finland and Denmark will meet here Sept. 18, informed sources said today, to discuss measures to be employed in event of unrestricted submarine warfare threatening northern trade.

The Copenhagen "Berlingske Tidende" said editorially it "expected northern statesmen would ask belligerents to clarify what constitutes contraband and establish some kind of international law in these lawless times."

French Near East Chief Quits Ankara for Beirut

Weygand Planned Defense of Warsaw After World War

PARIS, Sept. 13 (AP).—Gen Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, was reported in French advices today to have departed from Ankara, Turkey, yesterday for Beirut, Lebanon.

Weygand planned Poland's successful defense of Warsaw against Soviet Russian armies after the World War. He is a former chief of the French army staff and was named to his present post Sept. 3. He has been on a tour of the Near East.

COPENHAGEN Sept. 13 (AP)—The German Government, through its legation here, today expressed regret for violation of the Danish frontier yesterday by a German warplane. It was explained that the pilot was inspecting a mine field and apparently flew over Danish territory by mistake. A Danish Coast Guard ship fired warning shots and the plane disappeared.

It was recalled that the British Government recently expressed regret for a bombing of Esbjerg, Danish seaport, on Sept. 4, when one woman was killed.

SCHAFFHAUSEN, Switzerland, Sept. 13 (AP)—Swiss anti-aircraft batteries fired warning shots today to turn away an unidentified plane that twice circled high over this region and then flew toward German territory.

Belgium Stands To Profit by This War

BRUSSELS, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—(Passed Through British Censorship)—Neutral Belgium, largely overrun by German armies in the first world war twenty-five years ago, was in a position today to benefit economically from the new war.

Traders were reported disposing of large stocks of cereals and cotton bought at low prices. An influx of gold into the country continued. Belgium's favorable trade balance for the first seven months of 1939 was estimated at $7,000,000 as against a deficit of $50,000,000 for the same period of 1938.

Nazis Look for Hitler To Return From Poland

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Dr. Otto Dietrich, Germany's press chief, asserted today that he was so convinced that the eastern campaign would be ended shortly that he expected Reichsfuehrer Hitler to be able to return to Berlin in a few days.

Dr. Dietrich, back from ten days at the front with Hitler, said that the Fuehrer wanted to impress upon the rank and file that he was one of them and was among them from early to late.

Hitler today took a second trip to the Polish war front north of Lodz, where according to German accounts between 50,000 and 60,000 Poles have been trapped for four days to break through German encirclement.

VISITS SIEGFRIED LINE

Belgian Says There Was No Ban on Camera.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The newspaper La Libre Belgique today published a dispatch from a correspondent who said that he had crossed into Germany at Gemund and had been permitted to visit and even photograph parts of Germany's Siegfried Line.

He quoted a Major von Mullers as saying: "Photograph all you want. My works are above criticism and are open to French air photographers. Our instructions are not to shoot until a direct attack has been made against the Siegfried Line."

"The French advance into the Warndt forest (in the Saar River sector) occurred outside our resistance zone," the Major was quoted as saying further.

The correspondent, however, said that he noted several thousand workers occupied Sunday in the completion of fortification works.

Troops Pass Gibraltar

ALGECIRAS, Spain, Sept. 13 (AP)—Ten British troopships escorted by destroyers passed Gibraltar today en route to France. Two ships arrived at Gibraltar from England, one disembarking several thousand soldiers to reinforce the garrison, the other unloading war supplies.

BARBARA HUTTON FLEES FROM WAR

Visits U. S. Embassy in Paris on the Way.

PARIS, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, left Paris today by automobile.

She was believed to be en route to Belgium to escape France's war dangers. It was understood that she planned to sail for the United States in October.

The Countess, who gave up her United States citizenship and became a Danish subject before her separation from the Danish Count who was her second husband, arrived unexpectedly in Paris from Italy, where she had been for the summer.

She spent several hours at the American embassy here before driving northeast toward the Belgian border.

TWO LINERS OVERDUE

No Word From Pennland and Nieuw Amsterdam.

ROTTERDAM, the Netherlands, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The Holland-America passenger liner Nieuw Amsterdam and the Red Star liner Pennland were a day overdue today on voyages from New York, causing speculation here as to whether they might have been halted in the English Channel by British warships for search.

Officials of the Holland-America Line, which also controls the Red Star Company, said no reports had been received from either ship.

The Nieuw Amsterdam was due at Rotterdam yesterday and the Pennland at Antwerp. Company officials said their delay in reaching port made it uncertain when the two ships would begin return voyages to New York. The Nieuw Amsterdam is booked to sail with 1,200 passengers from Rotterdam on September 15 and the Pennland to take 700 from Antwerp on September 16.

30.24-3307

30.24 3307

Toscanini Sailing for U.S. Saturday on Washington

'Not a War Refugee,' He Says; 'I'm Just Going to Work'

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 13 (AP).—Arturo Toscanini, the orchestra conductor, and his wife left Lucerne today for France en route to the United States.

"I am not a war refugee," he said, "I am just going to work."

He explained that he must be in New York for the beginning of the musical season, "submarines or no submarines."

The Toscaninis were bound for Bordeaux, where, it was disclosed after their departure, they planned to board the liner Washington, which is scheduled to sail next Saturday for New York.

Polish Women Join In Slaying Germans

Two Killed While Taking Turns At Machine Gun From Snipers' Post

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP)—Polish women have been among snipers taking pot shots at German soldiers pressing on toward Warsaw, quarters close to the German general staff said tonight.

A 70-year-old Pole was caught up a tree desperately operating a machine gun perched in the branches.

Among a number of instances of sniping it was cited that near the community of Leliwa two women were killed while taking turns at a machine gun which suddenly raked German troops passing a corn field.

Norway Votes Defense Fund

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Norwegian Parliament appropriated $10,000,000 today to guard its neutrality and authorized the Government to make loans up to $40,000,000 measures to combat any crisis.

Nazis Accused of Killing 1,500 Civilians in a Day

30 Cities and Open Towns in Poland Reported Bombed

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Polish Embassy charged tonight that up to Sept. 3, the day on which Great Britain and France entered the war, German planes had bombed thirty cities and open towns in Poland.

Casualties among civilians, women and children totaled more than 1,500 killed between Sept. 2 and 3, the embassy said. Since then scores of Polish towns and villages have been raided and "suffered grievously from deliberate bombing," the statement added.

English Motorists Cut 'Gas' to Ration Quota

Drivers Limited by Coupons to 200 Miles a Month

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—British motorists tinkered with carburetors today to wean their cars down to the lowest possible gasoline consumption in preparation for the government rationing which goes into effect Saturday.

From postoffices car owners obtained books of coupons good at filling stations for approximately enough gasoline to run a car 200 miles a month. The government urged motorists to use the fuel for pleasure driving.

It was announced that the coupon books are subject to cancellation without notice, and that the government does not guarantee any minimum quantity of gasoline to holders of books. Motorists were advised that by adjusting carburetors they could get increased mileage.

Oil Boom in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—President Lazaro Cardenas took steps today to increase oil production by ordering the Government-controlled Administration of Petroleos Mexicanos to drill ten new wells in the Poza Rica region. In reliable quarters Mexico was said to have received large orders from European firms.

Greek Steamship Hits a Mine.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The Greek steamship Katingo Hadjipatera, 3,661 tons, reported today that she had struck a mine off Falsterbo, Sweden, and was proceeding to Copenhagen escorted by a Swedish minesweeper. The report made no mention of casualties.

Curfew for German Children.

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Boys and girls under 16 years of age must show good reason in at least two German cities, Chemnitz and Emden, to be found on the public streets after 9 P. M. They should stay home, the police assert, during blackouts. It was expected that these measures would be followed by other cities.

Hungary Requires Visa.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 13 (A. P.).—The Government announced today that, effective immediately, citizens of Germany, Switzerland and Liechtenstein would need visas for entrance into Hungary, and that the same rule would apply to citizens of all other countries beginning on Friday. Previously Hungary admitted citizens of a long list of nations without visa.

—LEADERS: THEN AND NOW—

By Albert W. Wilson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Death and senility have almost wiped the slate clean of the old familiar names as men of action and few words, with swords at their sides, again take over the task of remaking Europe.

Into spots filled in the last war by Foch, Petain and Joffre, Kitchener, French and Haig, Falkenhayn, von Hindenburg and Ludendorff have stepped a gallery of comparative unknowns. They will become heroes or scape-goats of their countries—depending on the fortunes of war.

Weygand And Gourand

Only two prominent generals from the World War—both Frenchmen in their early 70s—are still physically able. One is Maxine Weygand, who was assistant to the late Marshal Ferdinand Foch and who now is in Turkey on a secret mission. He may be the Allies' generalissimo in the Near East if war spreads there.

The other is Henri Gouraud, who was military governor in Paris and a former commander-in-chief in the Near East.

Outstanding among the new faces on the Allies' side is Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin who has stepped into the Western front command for the French—the post held, in order, by the late "Papa" Joffre, Henri Petain, now Ambassador to Spain, and Foch, who became leader of all Allied armies.

Petain Is 83

Marshals Petain and Louis Franchet d'Esperey, another former Near East commander-in-chief, are both too old, 83. Gone to their graves are Marshal Louis Hubert Lyautey, Gen. Maurice Sarrail, who held Verdun despite orders to retire, and then succeeded Gouraud in the Near East, and Gen. Joseph Gallieni, "savior of Paris."

In Germany, a corporal from the last war, Adolf Hitler, took over command of all armed forces in the army purge of 1938. All the other German generals in the news today are men in their 50's.

Son Of Ex-General

Walter von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the army, is the son of one of the Kaiser's former generals. Wilhelm Keitel, tall and courtly chief of the high command, is a "mystery man" and another product of the Prussian school. Baron Werner von Fritsch, who ranked ahead of both the before the purge, has been called back by Hitler to lead an army in Poland.

Only two years ago Germany lost its outstanding military genius of the World War, Gen. Erich Ludendorff, who died at 72 after spending his later years denouncing Christianity, advocating paganism and running a losing race against von Hindenburg for President.

Von Mackensen Now 90

Germany has left only 90-year-old Marshal August von Mackensen, former Eastern front commander, unless the former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm is counted. Perhaps he should be, as this Hohenzollern, now 57, lost an army in the west.

Along with von Moltke, Falkenhayn, von Hindenburg and Ludendorff, the successive Western front commanders, are gone—Alexander von Kluck, who almost captured Paris; von Linsingen, a commander in the east; Wilhelm Hoffman, the commander when Russia surrendered to Germany; Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria and even Hans von Seeckt, who headed the armies of the republic.

For England

Top commanders for England now are Sir Edmond Ironside, chief of the imperial staff, and Viscount Gort, commander-in-chief of field forces, both in their fifties. Only two of the old war leaders are left, 86-year-old Sir Ian Hamilton and Sir Archibald Murray, who is nearly 80.

Hamilton, a grandson of a former Viscount Gort and cousin of the present one, led the disastrous British-French Dardanelles expedition of 1915. In recent years he frequently expressed hope that England would fight the next war on Germany's side.

Among The Dead

Lord Kitchener, who went down on the warship Hampshire when it struck a German mine; Lord Haig and Sir John French, the Western front commanders; Viscount Allenby, Viscount Byng, General Townshend and Sir William Robertson, who preceded Murray as chief of the imperial staff, are dead.

This is the seventy-ninth birthday of Gen. John J. Pershing, who commanded America's Expeditionary Force. Of the commanders of his three American armies, only Robert Lee Bullard, now 77, survives. The others were Hunter Liggett and Joseph T. Dickman.

95 SEP 14 1939

LEAD DAY CABINET

PARIS, SEPT. 13-(AP)-PREMIER DALADIER HAND-PICKED THE MEMBERS OF A NEW "WIN THE WAR" CABINET TODAY, ASSUMING THE FOREIGN MINISTRY FOR HIMSELF TO BOLSTER THE GOVERNMENT BEHIND THE LINES OF THE FRENCH ARMY SLOWLY ADVANCING INTO THE FRINGES OF GERMANY.

HE CREATED TWO NEW MINISTRIES--BLOCKADE AND ARMAMENT--ESTABLISHED AN UNDERSECRETARYSHIP OF NATIONAL DEFENSE AND AN UNDERSECRETARYSHIP OF STATE. THE FUNCTIONS OF THE LATTER POST WERE NOT IMMEDIATELY MADE CLEAR.

SEP 14 1939

GEORGES BONNET, WHO HAS BEEN DALADIER'S FOREIGN MINISTER, WAS MADE MINISTER OF JUSTICE. HE REPLACES PAUL MARCHANDEAU WHO RESIGNED TO GIVE HIS ENTIRE TIME TO HIS DUTIES AS MAYOR OF REIMS.

C62

AGENCIES OUT

PARIS--FIRST ADD FIRST NIGHT LEAD (CORRECT) FRENCH X X X SEPTEMBER 28.

SEP 14 1939

IN THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE CABINET CHANGES, IT WAS SAID CHAMPETIER DE RIBES, MINISTER OF PENSIONS IN THE FORMER CABINET, WOULD BE UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OR VIRTUALLY FOREIGN MINISTER UNDER DALADIER'S GUIDANCE.

DEPUTY RENE BESSE, WHO BELONGS TO THE LEFT INDEPENDENT GROUP AND WAS MINISTER OF PENSIONS IN THE SECOND SARRAUT GOVERNMENT IN 1936, WAS MADE MINISTER OF PENSIONS AGAIN.

DALADIER MADE IT KNOWN HE WOULD APPOINT ROBERT COULONDRE, AMBASSADOR TO BERLIN UNTIL THE WAR BEGAN, TO HEAD HIS STAFF AT THE DIPLOMATIC SECTION OF THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

THE PREMIER ALSO ESTABLISHED AN UNDERSECRETARYSHIP OF NATIONAL DEFENSE AND WAR AND GAVE THAT POST TO THE RADICAL SOCIALIST DEPUTY HIPPOLYTE DUCOS, WHO WAS MINISTER OF PENSIONS IN THE FIRST SARRAUT GOVERNMENT AS WELL AS IN THE SUCCEEDING CABINETS OF CHAUTEMPS IN 1933 AND 1934 AND DALADIER IN 1934.

LOUIS DE CHAPPEDELAINE RESIGNED THE MINISTRY OF MERCHANT MARINE, IT WAS SAID, FOR REASONS OF HEALTH, AND WAS SUCCEEDED BY SENATOR ALPHONSE RIO, A MEMBER OF THE LEFT DEMOCRATIC FACTION OF THE RADICAL SOCIALIST PARTY WHO HEADED A MISSION TO THE UNITED STATES IN 1917 TO SPEED UP THE WAR-TIME PROVISIONING OF FRANCE.

FORMER FOREIGN MINISTER YVON DELBOS WAS GIVEN THE MINISTRY OF EDUCATION TO REPLACE JEAN ZAY, WHO RESIGNED TO TAKE HIS PLACE IN THE ARMY. DELBOS, A RADICAL SOCIALIST, HAS SERVED AS MINISTER OF EDUCATION AND JUSTICE IN PREVIOUS CABINETS AND WAS WOUNDED DURING THE WORLD WAR.

DALADIER ANNOUNCED THE RESIGNATION OF RAYMOND PATENOTRE, MINISTER OF NATIONAL ECONOMY AND PRODUCTION, WHO HAS JOINED THE ARMY. INFORMED SOURCES SAID PATENOTRE'S RESIGNATION MIGHT BE CONSIDERED AS ABOLISHING THE DEPARTMENT HE HEADED.

THE NEW MINISTER OF JUSTICE, BONNET, REPLACED PAUL MARCHANDEAU, WHO RESIGNED TO GIVE HIS ENTIRE TIME TO HIS DUTIES AS MAYOR OF REIMS.

SEP 14 1939

ALL OTHER MINISTERS REMAINED IN THEIR FORMER POSITIONS.

NORMALLY PARLIAMENT WOULD BE SUMMONED IMMEDIATELY TO PASS ON THE STATEMENT OF POLICY BY THE NEW GOVERNMENT.

SOURCES CLOSE TO DALADIER, HOWEVER, INDICATED HE CONSIDERED THE NEW CABINET'S POLICY COULD ONLY BE "WIN THE WAR" AND IT WOULD NOT BE NECESSARY TO CALL THE SENATE AND THE CHAMBER FOR THE PRESENT.

THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE EMPHASIZED THE PREMIER FOUND IT PREFERABLE NOT TO EFFECT AN EXTREME REORGANIZATION OF HIS GOVERNMENT SINCE THE STATE OF WAR DEMANDS THE CONTINUANCE OF STATE SERVICES AND THE MAINTENANCE IN THEIR PRESENT POSITIONS OF MANY IN THE CABINET.

30.24-3309

30.24 3309

THE OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT SAID THE PREMIER THANKED HIS COLLEAGUES FOR THE CONFIDENT COLLABORATION GIVEN HIM IN THE LAST 16 MONTHS. HIS FORMER CABINET WAS FORMED APRIL 10, 1938.

C44 (AGENCIES OUT)

PARIS, SEPT.13-(AP)-OFFICERS OF "THE FRIENDS OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC" SAID TODAY NEARLY 10,000 PERSONS OF MANY NATIONALITIES HAD OFFERED THEIR SERVICES TO FRANCE AT THE SOCIETY'S HEADQUARTERS DURING THE LAST 10 DAYS.

IT WAS ESTIMATED ABOUT 1,000 PERSONS A DAY VISITED A HUGE CONVERTED AUTO SHOWROOM ON THE CHAMPS ELYSEES TO REGISTER. WHILE CROWDS SEEKING ENTRANCE MADE EXTRA POLICE DETAILS NECESSARY, OUTSIDE VOLUNTEERS WORKED UNDER SIGNS DESIGNATING DIFFERENT COUNTRIES.

THE SOCIETY CLASSIFIES THE APPLICANTS ACCORDING TO THE TYPE OF WORK THEY ARE BEST SUITED FOR. THEN THE LISTS ARE MADE AVAILABLE TO THE FRENCH LABOR MINISTRY.

THE SOCIETY, ORGANIZED LAST JANUARY TO AID FOREIGNERS IN FRANCE, OPENED A SPECIAL OFFICE WHEN WAR WAS DECLARED. APPLICANTS WERE SAID TO BE AUSTRIAN, INDIAN, RUSSIAN, CHINESE, AFRICAN AND LATIN AMERICAN, AMONG OTHERS.

SEP 14 1939

EVEN THE GERMANS HAVE A SECTION RESERVED FOR THEM. THAT WINDOW WAS REPORTED "BUSY."

OFFICIALS OF THE SOCIETY SAID THEIR GREATEST PROBLEM WAS APPLICANTS WHO "WANT TO GO TO THE FRONT IMMEDIATELY." THEY HAVE TO EXPLAIN THERE IS OTHER WORK TO BE DONE BESIDES FIGHTING.

AMONG OCCUPATIONAL GROUPS CLASSIFIED WERE NURSES, STENOGRAPHERS, CHAUFFEURS, BAKERS, COOKS, MACHINISTS AND MUSICIANS. REGISTRATION AMONG WOMEN WAS REPORTED "HEAVY."

WD735PED

PARIS-SEPT. 13

SEP 14 1939

THEY LISTED THE PRESENT NUMBER OF GERMAN SUBMARINES AT NOT MORE THAN 60, OF WHICH THEY SAID ONLY FIVE WERE CAPABLE OF LONG DISTANCE OCEAN CRUISES.

BERLIN, SEPT.13-(AP)-CANADA'S DECLARATION OF WAR ON GERMANY PLACES PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN AN AWKWARD POSITION IN CONNECTION WITH HIS STATEMENT THAT THE UNITED STATES WOULD NOT WATCH INDIFFERENTLY IF SOME NON-AMERICAN POWER ATTACKED CANADA, DEUTSCHE DIPLOMATISCH-POLITISCHE KORRESPONDENZ SAID TODAY.

IN EFFECT ROOSEVELT IS SAYING, KORRESPONDENZ, AN AGENCY USUALLY PRESENTING FOREIGN OFFICE OPINION, OBSERVED, THAT CANADA MAY ATTACK A EUROPEAN POWER BUT THAT POWER MAY NOT STRIKE BACK AT CANADA.

SUCH AN ATTITUDE, THE AGENCY CONTINUED, IS "UNFAIR, UNCHIVALROUS TO SAY NOTHING OF BEING UNNEUTRAL."

KORRESPONDENZ ARGUED THAT IMPOARTIAL APPLICATION OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE WOULD IMPOSE ON THE UNITED STATES RESPONSIBILITY TO SEE THAT AMERICAN COUNTRIES DO NOT ATTACK NON-AMERICAN COUNTRIES IF THE UNITED STATES EXPECTS THE REST OF THE WORLD TO KEEP HANDS OFF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

SEP 14 1939

KORRESPONDENZ ADDED GERMANY HAS NO INTEREST IN CHANGING THE SOVEREIGNTY OF ANY AMERICAN TERRITORY.

FH138AED

1939

BERLIN, SEPT.13-(AP)-THE SUPREME ARMY COMMAND ISSUED THE FOLLOWING COMMUNIQUE THIS MORNING: (7 A.M.--1 A.M. E.S.T.)

"IN GALICIA THE PURSUIT OF THE ENEMY WAS CONTINUED. SAMBOR AND KRAKOWIEC WERE TAKEN. ADVANCE GUARDS REACHED THE WESTERN EDGE OF LWOW. EAST OF WARSAW, THE FORCES FROM THE SOUTH CROSSED THE WARSAW-SIEDLCE ROAD."

(END TEXT)

FIRSCARED

SEP 14 1939

ROME- SEPT. 13

THE GOVERNMENT INCREASED THE PAY OF THE SOME 1,800,000 SOLDIERS UNDER ARMS FROM 40 CENTESMI (ABOUT TWO CENTS) TO ONE LIRA (5 1/4 CENTS) A DAY.

THE NEW RATE ALSO APPLIES TO BLACKSHIRTS AND MILITIAMEN WHO, AFTER HAVING DONE REGULAR MILITARY SERVICE AT SOLDIER'S PAY, HAVE BEEN RECEIVING 8 OR 12 LIRE PER DAY DEPENDING UPON THEIR DUTIES. WHILE RECEIVING ONLY ONE LIRA UNDER THE NEW REGULATION, THEIR WIVES, LIKE THOSE OF REGULAR ARMY MEN, ARE ENTITLED TO SIX LIRE DAILY AND TWO LIRE FOR EACH CHILD.

THE PLACING OF THE MILITIA AND THE ARMY ON AN EQUAL PAY BASIS WAS REGARDED AS A FURTHER MOVE TO UNIFY THE COUNTRY AND ELIMINATE ANY REASON OF POSSIBLE ANIMOSITY BETWEEN THEM.

SN&WE736PED

A136

SEP 14 1939

BUDAPEST, SEPT.13-(AP)-HUNGARY'S PREMIER, COUNT PAUL TELEKI, APPARENTLY REFERRING TO PUBLIC SPECULATION ON HIS NATION'S TERRITORIAL CLAIMS ON RUMANIA, DECLARED TONIGHT HUNGARY COULD NOT ENTER INTO "ADVENTURES" WHILE IN HER PRESENT "DIFFICULT GEOGRAPHIC POSITION."

ADDRESSING MEMBERS OF HIS GOVERNMENT PARTY, COUNT TELEKI STRESSED HIS NATION'S DETERMINATION TO REMAIN NEUTRAL IN THE EUROPEAN WAR. THEN HE SAID:

"HUNGARY CANNOT BE RASH UNDER PRESSURE OF THE MOMENT."

ON THE EUROPEAN WAR, HE SAID "GERMANY AND THE WARRING NATIONS IN GENERAL CONSIDER IT IN THEIR INTEREST TO HAVE PEACE AND QUIET AND PRODUCTIVE WORK IN THE DANUBE BASIN."

HE SAID "HUNGARY GOVERNS HERSELF," AND ASSERTED "I MUST EXPRESSLY HINT OUT THAT WE SERVE ONLY HUNGARIAN INTERESTS."

SEP 14 1939

FWI201AED

ALSO

OTTAWA, SEPT.13-(CANADIAN PRESS)-GERMAN CONSUL GENERAL ERICH WINDELS AND HIS WIFE WERE DISCLOSED TODAY TO HAVE BEEN ISSUED SPECIAL PASSES TO ENABLE THEM TO LEAVE CANADA.

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THEY PLANNED TO GO TO THE UNITED STATES.

PASSES ALSO ARE BEING ISSUED TO GERMAN CONSULS IN VARIOUS CANADIAN CITIES.

SEP 14 1939

CRIESPED

EDITORS: THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER THIRD GRAPH, BUDAPEST, RIGHT LEAD POLISH X X X ON RUMANIA.

SEP 14 1939

A POLISH STAFF OFFICER BROADCASTING LATER FROM WARSAW SAID MORE THAN 50 [redacted] NAZI PLANES [redacted] RAIDED [redacted] THE CITY DURING THE MORNING.

30.24 -3311

30.24 3311

OTHER WARSAW BROADCASTS DESCRIBED THE POLES AS STILL FIGHTING OFF THE GERMAN SIEGE.

HE REPORTED SEVERAL [redacted] FIRES STARTED BY [redacted] INCENDIARY BOMBS AND [redacted] HOUSES WRECKED.

A MAJOR OF THE POLISH AIR CORPS AND WARSAW'S MAYOR DESCRIBED THE [redacted] SIEGE OF THE POLISH CAPITAL, DECLARING THE GERMAN LAND AND AIR BOMBARDMENT HAD DESTROYED HALF THE CITY AND WAS CONTINUING WITHOUT LET-UP.

SEP 14 1939

THE POLISH OFFICIALS, ETC., PICKING UP FOURTH GRAF[illegible] PVS.

#

[redacted] READING, ENGLAND, SEPT 13-(AP)-

01401 KLINES DATE READING CORONER INQUIRING INTO DEATH TWO WOMEN STRUCK BY BUS SAID QUOTE THIS CATASTROPHE IS ONE OF MANY WHICH ARE BOUND TO HAPPEN UNDER THE PRESENT LIGHTING REGULATIONS BRACKET (AIR RAID PRECAUTION AND BLACKOUT UNBRACKET UNQUOTE REQUOTE IT MAY BE FOUND POSSIBLE FOR THEM BRACKET RESPONSIBLE AUTHORITIES TO RELAX SOME OF THE STRINGENT REGULATIONS PROVIDING THAT IF A WARNING IS RECEIVED A TOTAL BLACKOUT CAN BE PUT INTO EFFECT IMMEDIATELY UNQUOTE CORONER SAID PARAGRAPH BUS DRIVER EXONERATED BY VERDICT ACCIDENTAL DEATH

STARK

SEP 14 1939

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN, SEPT. 13--(AP)--(PASSED THROUGH BRITISH CENSORSHIP)--A POLISH PLANE CARRYING AN OFFICER AND A CIVILIAN FROM THE POLISH PORT OF GDYNIA LANDED TODAY NEAR [redacted] VISBY ISLAND. IT WAS EN ROUTE TO POLAND BY WAY OF LITHUANIA, BUT LOST ITS ROUTE AND EXHAUSTED ITS GASOLINE.

(GDYNIA IS [redacted] STILL HOLDING OUT DESPITE A GERMAN SIEGE THAT BEGAN SEPT. 1.)

SEP 14 1939

BERLIN, SEPT. 13--(AP)--THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED TONIGHT FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN [redacted] GOERING, THE REICH'S NO. 2 LEADER, HADRECEIVED THE RUMANIAN MINISTER TO GERMANY WHO SUBMITTED HIS GOVERNMENT'S DECLARATION OF [redacted] NEUTRALITY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

SEP 14 1939

THE ANNOUNCEMENT DID NOT GIVE THE DATE OF THE RECEPTION.

[redacted] NOW IS [redacted] INSPECTING AIR UNITS ON THE POLISH FRONT.

FWR 955PED SCHILLBACHS 0019D

LONDON, SEPT. 13-(AP)-THE COMBINED CAMPAIGN OF THE BRITISH NAVY AND AIR FORCE AGAINST GERMAN U-BOATS HAVE BEEN MEETING WITH "SOME SUCCESS," PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN TOLD PARLIAMENT TODAY.

SEP 14 1939

1939

THE PRIME MINISTER, "REPORTING" ON THE WAR'S PROGRESS, SAID AIR UNITS HAD ATTACKED GERMAN SUBMARINES OFF THE BRITISH COAST AND THAT THE NAVY HAD MADE REPEATED ASSAULTS ON ENEMY SUBMARINES.-

WE858PED

LONDON, SEPT 13-(AP)-THE LONDON METAL MARKET WAS CLOSED TODAY AND WILL NOT REOPEN UNTIL SEPT. 18.

QQ811AED

AE?

LONDON, SEPT 13-(AP)-MRS.JOSEPH P.KENNEDY, WIFE OF THE UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR, AND THREE OF THEIR CHILDREN ARE AMONG MORE THAN 1,700 AMERICANS WHO FOUND PLACES ABOARD THE UNITED STATES LINER WASHINGTON, IT WAS LEARNED TODAY.

(IN NEW YORK, THE WASHINGTON WAS REPORTED DUE MONDAY, SEPT. 18. THE LINER CALLED AT ENGLAND AFTER SAILING FROM LE HAVRE MONDAY.)

KATHLEEN KENNEDY, WHO IS 19; EUNICE, 17, AND ROBERT, 12, ACCOMPANIED THEIR MOTHER.

THE KENNEDYS HAVE FIVE GIRLS AND FOUR BOYS. THE TWO ELDEST CHILDREN, JOSEPH,JR., 23, AND JOHN, 21, ARE ASSISTING THEIR FATHER AT THE EMBASSY.

THE OTHER KENNEDYS STILL IN ENGLAND ARE ROSEMARY, 20; PATRICIA, 14; JEAN, 11, AND EDWARD, 7. PLANS FOR THEM ARE UNCERTAIN.

JACK STILL HAS ANOTHER YEAR AT HARVARD. THE YOUNGER CHILDREN HAD BEEN DAY PUPILS IN CONVENT SCHOOLS, BUT THE OPERATION OF THESE SCHOOLS DURING WARTIME IS PROBLEMATICAL.

QQ522AED

MOSCOW, SEPT.13-(AP)-REPORTS CIRCULATED IN MOSCOW TODAY THAT TURKEY WOULD SEND HER FOREIGN MINISTER, SUKRU SARACOGLU, HERE SHORTLY TO COORDINATE SOVIET-TURKISH RELATIONS IN VIEW OF THE SHATTERING OF EUROPE'S OLD DIPLOMATIC LINEUP.

THE TWO COUNTRIES SIGNED A NON-AGGRESSION PACT IN 1939, BUT MAY WANT TO "STRIKE A BALANCE" IN VIEW OF THEIR NEUTRALITY.

(END BRIEFS.)

QQ1043AED

ATHENS, SEPT 13-(AP)-NICHOLAS MAVROUDIS, PERMANENT SECRETARY OF STATE IN THE GREEK FOREIGN OFFICE, LEFT BY AIRPLANE FOR ROME TODAY TO TALK TO ITALIAN OFFICIALS. IT WAS BELIEVED THE DISCUSSIONS WOULD CONCERN GREEK-ITALIAN RELATIONS IN CONNECTION WITH THE EUROPEAN WAR.

--DASH--

BRUSSELS, SEPT.13-(AP)-THE LUXEMBOURG GOVERNMENT TODAY ASKED FRONTIER COMMUNITIES TO MAINTAIN NORMAL LIGHTING AND EVENTUALLY TO AUGMENT IT IN AN EFFORT TO AVOID INVOLUNTARY VIOLATION OF NEUTRAL TERRITORY BY BELLIGERENT FLIERS BECAUSE OF POOR VISIBILITY. DENMARK ALREADY HAS TAKEN SIMILAR ACTION.

--DASH--

COPENHAGEN, SEPT.13-(AP)-DANISH POLICE REPORTED TODAY THEY HAD FINED HOARDERS OF GASOLINE, CONSERVES, COFFEE, SUGAR AND RICE. SOME PERSONS WERE FOUND TO HAVE SEVERAL YEARS' SUPPLY.

--DASH--

30.24 -3313

30.24 3313

A134

ADD BRIEFS

COPENHAGEN, SEPT 13-(AP)-BRITISH AUTHORITIES ADVISED DANISH FIRMS THAT, EFFECTIVE TODAY, NEUTRAL COUNTRIES BUYING BRITISH GOODS MUST SIGN A DECLARATION THAT THE GOODS ARE NOT FOR SUBSEQUENT RESALE TO GERMANY.

--DASH--

SEP 14 1939

A146

BERLIN, SEPT.13-(AP)-HIGH-POWERED EXECUTIVES AND MANY OF LESSER POWER--BOTH GERMAN AND FOREIGN--ARE BUYING BICYCLES WHEN THEY CAN GET THEM.

AUTOMOBILES, EXCEPT TINY ONES, HAVE BEEN FORBIDDEN AND BICYCLES ARE TAKING THEIR PLACE.

ONE AMERICAN, HEAD OF A LARGE BUSINESS CONCERN, CAN BE SEEN CYCLING TO HIS OFFICE DAILY.

00110PED

SEP 14 1939

BUDAPEST, SEPT.13-(AP)-DESPITE THE WAR, THE SOCCER TEAMS OF GERMANY AND HUNGARY WILL MEET HERE IN THEIR ANNUAL MATCH SEPT. 24. A TELEGRAM FROM BERLIN SAID THE TEAM WAS COMING "IN ANY EVENT."

--DASH--

C94 (AGENCIES OUT)

SEP 14 1939

HELSINKI, FINLAND, SEPT 13-(AP)-THE HELSINKI CITY COUNCIL TODAY AUTHORIZED THE EXPENDITURE OF 3,700,000 MARKS (ABOUT $69,375) FOR CONSTRUCTION WORK IN CONNECTION WITH THE 1940 OLYMPIC GAMES.

KA1030PED

GENEVA, SEPT. 13 (AP)--THE INTERNATIONAL LABOR OFFICE TODAY INFORMED MEMBER NATIONS THAT THE MEETING OF THE GOVERNING BODY SCHEDULED FOR OCT. 4 AT OSLO WOULD N O T BE HELD IN VIEW OF TRANSPORTATION DIFFICULTIES.

A MEETING OF A SPECIAL WAR EMERGENCY COMMITTEE SERVING IN PLACE OF THE GOVERNING BODY WILL BE HELD AT GENEVA ON THE SAME DATE.

SEP 14 1939

C78 (AGENCIES OUT)

GENOA, ITALY, SEPT.13-(AP)-TWO UNITED STATES PASSENGER SHIPS, THE PRESIDENT ADAMS AND THE EXPRESS, SAILED TONIGHT WITH PASSENGERS FLEEING THE EUROPEAN WAR ZONE.

THE PRESIDENT ADAMS CARRIED 50 ROUND-THE-WORLD TRAVELERS. SHE WAS EXPECTED TO STOP AT MARSEILLE, FRANCE, FOR FIFTY MORE AMERICANS.

THE EXPRESS DEPARTED WITH 12 AMERICANS.

BOTH SHIPS HAD LARGE UNITED STATES FLAGS PAINTED ON THEIR SIDES.

WD948PED

SEP 1 1939

C27

SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA, SEPT 13-(AP)-THE COSTA RICAN GOVERNMENT SENT A MESSAGE TO CONGRESS TODAY ASKING ENACTMENT OF A LAW TO PROHIBIT FURTHER TRADE IN ASKIMARKS WITH GERMANY.

THE MESSAGE ASSERTED THAT IT HAD BECOME IMPOSSIBLE TO MAKE ASKIMARK COLLECTIONS IN COSTA RICAN CURRENCY, WHICH IMPLIED THE BREAKDOWN OF THE ASKIMARK SYSTEM. THE ASKIMARK IS A GERMAN MARK GIVEN A SPECIAL VALUE BY THE BERLIN GOVERNMENT FOR FOREIGN TRADE PURPOSES.

THE GOVERNMENT BILL WOULD REQUIRE ALL FOREIGN TRADE TRANSACTIONS TO BE MADE THROUGH BANKS IN NORMAL FASHION. IT ALSO WOULD PROVIDE FOR LIQUIDATION OF DEBTS FOR IMPORTS FROM GERMANY UNDER GOVERNMENT REGULATION.

HVRdcPED

SEP 14 1939

A3

ITALIAN (PMS BUDGET)

ROME, SEPT.13-(AP)-BRITISH AND ITALIAN DIPLOMATS ARE ENGAGED IN CLOSELY-GUARDED TALKS WHICH OBSERVERS BELIEVE MAY AFFECT THE COURSE OF THE WAR AND THE EVENTUAL BALANCE OF POWER IN EUROPE.

THERE WAS SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE TODAY THE TALKS WHICH BEGAN A WEEK AGO BETWEEN BRITISH AMBASSADOR SIR PERCY LORAINE AND ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER COUNT GALEAZZO CIANO WOULD CONTINUE WITHOUT INTERRUPTION.

THIS INDICATION STRENGTHENED GENERAL BELIEF BRITAIN IS MAKING A SERIOUS EFFORT TO GAIN ITALIAN FRIENDSHIP.

WHAT CONCESSIONS BRITAIN MAY BE OFFERING AND WHAT PREMIER MUSSOLINI MAY BE DEMANDING COULD ONLY BE CONJECTURED.

INFORMED OBSERVERS ASSUMED, HOWEVER, FRENCH AMBASSADOR ANDRE FRANCOIS-PONCET, WHO RETURNED TO PARIS LAST WEEK AFTER CONVERSATIONS WITH COUNT CIANO, WAS A PARTY TO THE BRITISH ADVANCES.

IN SOME DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS THE AID WHICH ITALY MIGHT BRING TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE WAS ENVISIONED AS FAR EXCEEDING HER OWN MILITARY STRENGTH AND STRATEGIC GEOGRAPHICAL POSITION.

THESE QUARTERS POINTED OUT ITALY'S INFLUENCE WITH RUMANIA, YUGOSLAVIA AND EVEN HUNGARY MIGHT BE SUFFICIENT TO BRING THESE BALKAN NATIONS INTO A FAIRLY COMPACT UNIT IN OPPOSITION TO GERMANY.

THEY RECALLED THAT IN THE MONTHS IMMEDIATELY PRECEDING THE WAR GERMANY AND ITALY WERE ENGAGED IN SHARP TRADE RIVALRY IN THE BALKAN STATES DESPITE POLITICAL HARMONY.

GERMANY'S DEFEAT AT THE HANDS OF FRANCE AND BRITAIN WITH ITALIAN SUPPORT, IT WAS REASONED MIGHT GIVE ITALY CERTAIN IMPORTANT ECONOMIC ADVANTAGES IN THE BALKANS IN ADDITION TO WHATEVER OUTRIGHT CONCESSIONS WERE MADE HER BY PARIS AND LONDON.

IN CONNECTION WITH THE ITALIAN-BRITISH CONVERSATIONS IT WAS CONSIDERED SIGNIFICANT THE ITALIAN PRESS HAD ALTERED SOMEWHAT THE TREATMENT OF WAR NEWS.

A LONG DISPATCH TO IL LAVORO FASCISTA, UNDER A PARIS DATELINE, SPOKE WITH RESPECT AND EVEN ADMIRATION OF THE FRENCH OFFENSIVE ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

DIPL

WESTERN FRONT.

SEP 14 1939

DIPLOMATIC CORPS ANALYSTS BELIEVE MUSSOLINI IS IN A KEY POSITION--HIS ENTRANCE INTO THE WAR ON EITHER SIDE MIGHT DECIDE IT.

THEY SAID THAT SHOULD HE JOIN GERMANY, HE MIGHT HAVE THE CHOICE OF BRITISH AND FRENCH POSSESSIONS AROUND THE MEDITERRANEAN AND IN AFRICA IN EVENT OF VICTORY.

ON THE OTHER HAND, HE WOULD FACE THE IMMEDIATE PROSPECT OF A TERRIFIC OFFENSIVE FROM FRANCE, THE POSSIBLE CLOSING OF THE SUEZ CANAL, THE LOSS OF ETHIOPIA AND ATTACKS ON LIBYA FROM TUNISIA AND EGYPT.

IF MUSSOLINI JOINS BRITAIN AND FRANCE, DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS HELD, HE WILL HAVE LITTLE TO FEAR FROM A REICH ALREADY OCCUPIED ON TWO FRONTS.

30.24 3315

30.24 3315

AR

THE CHIEF OBSTACLE TO AN ITALIAN-BRITISH-FRENCH ALLIANCE, IT WAS BELIEVED, IS THAT AT PRESENT MUSSOLINI HAS BEEN OFFERED NO PRICE TO COMPARE WITH THE REWARD ITALY MIGHT WIN BY FIGHTING BESIDE GERMANY.

WHILE THE ITALIAN-BRITISH TALKS PROGRESSED, A JAPANESE MILITARY MISSION WHICH HAS BEEN VISITING ITALIAN ARMS FACTORIES AT TURIN WAS SAID TO BE CONSIDERING A TRIP TO LONDON.

JAPANESE SOURCES SAID A DECISION WOULD BE REACHED AFTER THE MISSION RETURNS TO ROME FRIDAY.

FH230AED

A103

NOTE TO EDITORS:

THERE WILL BE NO SUBSTITUTE FOR ROME, ITALIAN (PMS BUDGET). THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT DISAVOWS SUCH INTERPRETATION OF PRESENT DIPLOMATIC ACTIVITY AND SAYS THAT IN VIEW OF THE DELICACY OF THE SITUATION DISCUSSION IS UNWARRANTED.

(THE AP).

GO904AED

SEP 14 1939

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

SEP 14 1939

THE POLES STILL HOLD WARSAW.

THOSE FIVE WORDS TELL ONE OF THE EPICS OF WAR-HISTORY. AT THE END OF SIX DAYS OF BITTER FIGHTING BENEATH A DELUGE OF SHATTERING STEEL, THE POLES STILL HOLD THEIR CAPITAL ALTHOUGH IT IS LARGELY ENCIRCLED BY A RING OF GERMAN BAYONETS.

ONE OFTEN REFERS TO A MAN OF UNLIMITED COURAGE IN COMBAT AS A "FIGHTING FOOL." IT IS A COMPLIMENTARY TERM.

THE POLES ARE "FIGHTING FOOLS," AND ALWAYS HAVE BEEN. THE STURDY WOMEN-FOLK HAVE IN MANY PLACES BEEN HELPING OUT THEIR MEN IN BATTLE. AND EVEN THE SMALL HANDS OF CHILDREN HAVE BEEN BUILDING BARRICADES AND DIGGING TRENCHES FOR FATHERS AND BROTHERS.

THIS DEFENSE OF WARSAW REPRESENTS A SECTION OF THE BIG STAND WHICH THE POLES FINALLY ARE MAKING THROUGH THE HEART OF POLAND, AT THE END OF THEIR PLANNED RETREAT FROM THE GERMAN BORDER. THEY ARE FIGHTING AGAINST TIME -- HANGING ON TO GIVE THEIR ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES A CHANCE TO TAKE ACTION WHICH WILL RELIEVE THE AWFUL PRESSURE OF THAT VAST GERMAN WAR-MACHINE.

A BIT MORE AND POLAND MAY GET HELP FROM NATURE. COME THE FALL RAINS AND MANY OF THE ROADS WILL BECOME BOGS. NOW THE COUNTRY HIGHWAYS ARE REPORTED DEEP IN DUST, CHURNED UP BY THE ENDLESS LINE OF TRAFFIC. ADD WATER TO THAT MESS AND YOU GET A MIXTURE OF THE CONSISTENCY OF GLUE -- EXTREMELY DIFFICULT FOR TRAFFIC OF ANY KIND.

THIS NECESSARILY WILL SLOW THE GERMAN ADVANCE AND GIVE THE POLES A BREATHING SPACE. I KNOW THE WATER-LOGGED ROADS OF EASTERN EUROPE IN THE FALL, AND THEY ARE TERRIBLE.

ONLY A MIRACLE CAN SAVE WARSAW FROM CAPTURE, OF COURSE, BUT EVERY DAY OF DELAY IS GOOD FOR POLAND.

SEP 14 1939

THE DESPERATE BATTLE CONTINUES JUST NORTH OF LODZ, SIXTY MILES WEST OF WARSAW, WHERE THE GERMANS HAVE SURROUNDED FIFTY OR SIXTY THOUSAND POLES. IT LOOKS LIKE SURRENDER OR DEATH FOR THE DEFENDERS.

DOWN IN THE SOUTHEAST CORNER OF POLAND, THE GERMANS ARE TRYING TO SMASH THROUGH THE POLISH LINE AND REACH THE RUSSIAN BORDER, SO TO OPEN RAIL COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE SOVIET FOR SUPPLIES. THE NAZIS

CLAIM TO HAVE REACHED THE STRATEGIC CENTER REPRESENTED BY THE INDUSTRIAL CITY OF LWOW (LEMBERG)--GATEWAY TO RUMANIA, TO WHICH POLAND HAS BEEN LOOKING FOR HER SUPPLIES. THE CAPTURE OF LWOW WILL REPRESENT A MAJOR LOSS TO THE POLES.

AND NOW FOR THE MYSTERY-FRONT IN THE WESTERN THEATRE OF WAR. A DOZEN TIMES A DAY ONE IS ASKED WHETHER THE ANGLO-FRENCH FORCES REALLY ARE MAKING A SERIOUS DRIVE AGAINST THE GERMANS.

SURE THEY ARE. BUT DON'T FORGET THAT THE NAZI SIEGFRIED LINE AN'T BE POPPED OPEN LIKE A PEANUT. IT TAKES TIME.

THIS GREAT LINE OF UNDERGROUND FORTIFICATIONS IS, APART FROM THE FRENCH MAGINOT LINE, THE STRONGEST BULWARK OF ITS KIND EVER DEVISED. NOT ONLY IS IT THEORETICALLY ALMOST IMPREGNABLE, BUT IT IS FURTHER PROTECTED BY A NO-MAN'S-LAND SEVERAL MILES DEEP AND FILLED WITH PILL-BOXES, MACHINE-GUN NESTS, MINES, BARBED-WIRE -- AND EVERY OTHER OBSTRUCTIVE DEVICE.

SEP 14 1939

IT MIGHT EASILY COST THE LIVES OF A QUARTER MILLION FRENCH AND BRITISH SOLDIERS TO BREACH THE SIEGFRIED LINE IN ONE PLACE.

STILL, THE ALLIES ARE SAID TO BE GETTING READY FOR JUST SUCH A BLOOD JOB. THAT'S THE MEANING OF THE FRENCH DRIVES INTO THE NO-MAN'S-LAND BETWEEN THE LINES IN THE REGION OF GERMANY'S RICH SAAR MINING FIELDS.

THE FRENCH ARE SAID TO HAVE REACHED THE INDUSTRIAL CITY OF SAARBRUECKEN, ABOUT TEN MILES INSIDE THE GERMAN BORDER, AFTER FIGHTIN THEIR WAY THROUGH THE PERILS OF THE MYRIAD GERMAN ADVANCE DEFENSES. THIS HAS DRAWN FIERCE OPPOSITION FROM THE GERMANS.

A LITTLE FARTHER TO THE NORTHWEST, NEAR THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER, WHERE THE FRENCH ALSO HAD PUSHED THROUGH, THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN MAKING HEAVY COUNTER-ATTACKS.

ALL THIS ACTIVITY IS SUPPOSEDLY PRELIMINARY TO A MAJOR ALLIED ASSAULT ON THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

MEANTIME, OF COURSE, THE BRITISH ARE CONCENTRATING ON THEIR CAMPAIGN TO SWEEP THE SEAS AND STARVE THE GERMANS OUT. THAT, AND THEIR CONTINUED EFFORTS TO CREATE A REVOLT AMONG THE GERMAN PEOPLE. THE ALLIES ARE BANKING MUCH ON THESE WEAPONS.

GERMANY SEEMS TO CONTINUE TO WIG-WAG FOR PEACE AS SOON AS IT HAS FINISHED SMASHING POLAND.

BUT PEACE AS ENVISAGED BY DER FUEHRER, AND PEACE AS ENVISAGED BY HIS PET AVERSION OF THE MOMENT--BRITISH PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN--ARE TWO VERY DIFFERENT THINGS. THE APPROACH TO THE SUBJECT BY THESE TWO MAJOR FIGURES OF THE EUROPEAN WAR IS BOTH INTERESTING AND ILLUMINATING.

HITLER STILL IS PURSUING HIS POLICY OF TRYING TO GAIN FRANCE'S GOOD-WILL BY REFUSING TO TAKE THE OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE FRENCH ON THE WESTERN FRONT. THE ONLY FIGHTING THE GERMANS HAVE DONE THUS FAR IN THIS THEATER HAS BEEN FORCED ON THEM BY THE FRENCH THEMSELVES.

TOWARD ENGLAND, HOWEVER, GERMANY EXPRESSES NOTHING BUT BITTERNESS. THE GERMANS CHARGE BRITAIN WITH HAVING EGGED THE POLES ON TO MAKE WAR.

AS FOR POLAND, GERMAN SPOKESMEN HAVE INTIMATED CLEARLY THAT SHE WOULD GET BETTER PEACE TERMS IF THE WESTERN POWERS WERE WILLING TO CALL OFF THE WAR ON ALL FRONTS. IT IS NOTED, OF COURSE, THAT POLAND CAN'T MAKE PEACE ALONE, BECAUSE OF HER MUTUAL-AID PACT WITH ENGLAND.

1939

30.24 -3317

30.24 3317

THERE IS SOME DISCUSSION THAT GERMANY IS TRYING TO GET POLAND TO SURRENDER AND BEG HER ALLIES TO ACCEPT A GERMAN-DICTATED PEACE. THIS WOULD PUT THE ANGLO-FRENCH TEAM IN THE POSITION OF CONTINUING THE CONFLICT AGAINST POLAND'S WISHES.

SO, WHAT! WELL, PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN HAS MADE IT CLEAR THAT HE IS OUT TO SMASH HITLER AND THE NAZI REGIME.

BRITAIN HASN'T SAID SHE WOULDN'T MAKE PEACE WITH SOME OTHER FORM OF GERMAN GOVERNMENT BESIDES NAZIISM. WE THEN SEE THAT THIS FITS IN PERFECTLY WITH THE UNCONCEALED ALLIED EFFORTS TO CAUSE A REVOLT OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE AGAINST THEIR GOVERNMENT.

ENGLAND IN EFFECT IS INVITING THE GERMAN PUBLIC TO THROW HITLER AND HIS DOCTRINES OUT AND ESTABLISH A GOVERNMENT WITH WHICH THE ALLIES CAN TREAT. TO THIS FIELD MARSHAL GOERING SAYS TO CHAMBERLAIN:

"YOU CAN HAVE WAR IF YOU WANT IT AND IN ANY FORM YOU WANT. WE WANT PEACE, BUT GIVING UP THE FUEHRER, AS OTHERS THINK WE MIGHT, IS TOO BIG A PRICE TO PAY FOR PEACE."

SEP 14 1939

ME/00949AED

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels, Sept. 14—Reports from Luxembourg tonight said French forces had occupied the villages of Apach and Maimuhlen at the foot of ridges on the eastern bank of the Moselle river.

Inhabitants were said to have left the villages previously.

SEP 15 1939

Operations along the Moselle opposite Schengen were reported to be easily visible from Luxembourg. The danger from shrapnel caused most inhabitants on the Luxembourg side to clear from the danger zone.

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 14—Reports reaching here tonight said the first units of British troops had marched into the French Maginot forts amid the cheers of French troops. It was believed the British had taken positions somewhere between the Moselle and the Rhine.

SEP 15 1939

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 14—A strong French drive which forced the Germans into retreat before Saarbrücken and gave the French many prisoners was reported tonight from the Western front.

French forces were reported pressing the Germans hard, taking prisoners as they penetrated the advance key positions of the Siegfried Line and the rich Saar industrial valley.

Prisoners Taken Before

Prisoners were known to have been taken before this, but they had been considered only isolated units captured by raiding parties for the purpose of questioning—the usual preliminary to a major drive.

When big German guns started pounding French lines late yesterday, corps commanders reportedly took immediate measures to brace their troops for a possible German attack in force to drive the French back before Saarbrücken.

After the heavy shelling continued throughout last night and today without a German attack, it apparently became obvious to French commanders that the barrage was to cover a retreat of Nazi troops falling back slowly on the main Siegfried Line positions.

Ordered To Advance

It was reported that despite the rain of projectiles hampering their main lines of communications, French divisions were ordered to advance and occupy German positions as fast as the Nazis pulled out.

The pounding from great Krupp mortars blasted the only two highroads running from France to Saarbrücken and dug great gashes into railroad lines which parallel them, said unofficial advices.

It was on the heights, two miles south and southeast of Saarbrücken, that the main French line apparently

BIG PUSH LAUNCHED BY FRENCH ON WEST FRONT; NAZIS FORCED BACK; PRISONERS ARE CAPTURED

GERMAN TROOPS RETREAT IN SAARBRUCKEN BATTLE

Advancing Allied Forces Pounded By Krupp Mortars—First British Units March Into Maginot Forts To Cheers Of Poilus

It was apparent the Germans were retreating under cover of a barrage of tons of high-explosive shells fired by their heavy batteries on the line of hills south of Saarbrücken.

SEP 15 1939

Motor Units Lead Push

French motorized columns were in the van of the push. Tonight's official French communique telling of the action reported:

"Local advances during the course of which we took prisoners."

An intense German bombardment was reported tonight to have destroyed main highways and railroads along which the French troops were moving to the attack on Saarbrücken. The population of the rich industrial city long since had been moved out.

Today's operations against Saarbrücken were the first in which sufficient prisoners were taken to merit announcement in an official communique of the French general staff.

1939

CAPTURE OF GERMANS ANNOUNCED BY PARIS

Germans Reported Retreating in Front of Saarbruecken, Pursued by Motorized Units Taking Prisoners.

PARIS, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The French Army's official communique for tonight reads as follows:

"Local advances during the course of which we took prisoners."

German troops were reported tonight to be retreating from their advance positions which the French already had penetrated in front of the German industrial city of Saarbruecken, central key to the northern flank of the western front.

Motorized French advance guards were reported following hard on the heels of the withdrawing Germans, taking prisoners as they advanced.

Reports from Brussels via the Associated Press said the French forces late today passed the Moselle River close to the Luxemburg frontier north of Sierck, using tanks in attacking the German fortifications opposite Luxemburg territory. Heavy machine gun fire was said to be accompanying the French advance.

was being formed behind advance guards which already had penetrated the suburbs of the city. The oval-shaped hills rise some 300 yards and command the lowlands north to Saarbrücken as well as those stretching back of the French lines south to the town of Sarreguemines.

Hills Skirt Frontier

These hills follow the line of the frontier through the little cities of Schöneck, Stiring-Wendel, Spencheren and Fechingen, all of which have been taking a pounding from German heavy guns for two days.

The Germans withheld artillery fire on these hills during the early stages of battle to avoid hitting their own advance troops which were then in hand-to-hand combat with the French.

The French troops were said to have begun slowly edging forward under the heavy bombardment after having been delayed by the first rains of the autumn. Reports from the front said the weather had improved somewhat today.

SEP 15 1939

Roads Slippery

Narrow side roads were slippery with mud, however, slowing down the progress of the French motorized units. Swollen streams increased the infantry's task of feeling its way through the broken countryside which already was pockmarked with gaping shell craters.

Only the central section of the northern flank appeared to be active as the French developed their feeler operations designed to bring them into contact with the main Siegfried Line. The reports indicated that seizure of Saarbrücken was essential to give the French a jumping-off point for a wider attack on the Siegfried fortifications.

Saarbrücken, which lies almost midway of this one-hundred-mile northern flank, between the Moselle and Rhine rivers, forms a keystone of strong German fortifications in advance of the German line. Except for a sector just east of Saarbrücken, where the French drove a narrow wedge into Nazi outposts, the German advance line of fortifications has effectively kept the French advance at a comfortable distance from the main West Wall.

Progress Concealed

The French general staff has concealed its troops' exact progress in an effort to prevent the enemy from learning details of the advance. At first glance, this might seem a useless precaution, since Germans would be expected to know from their losses what the French gains are.

The fact, however, that for the last day and night weather has kept German observation craft out of the air has given the French a chance to sneak forward on their lines. Also, there are many points on the line where the French and Germans are not in direct contact.

Nevertheless, from the location of the French and German fortifications and a study of the operations maps it is possible to get an approximate picture of the situation in the Saarbrücken sector.

Circled To East

In front of Saarbrücken the French advance guards have circled slightly to the east, are in front of the town to the south and are approaching along the west bank of the little Moselle river to the west of the city where it would be possible to pinch off the Saarbrücken fortifications.

The French main line is being established along the hills south and southeast of the town, with reinforcements moving up along the two highways and railroads. One highway runs from Forbach, which is five miles south and slightly west of Saarbrücken. The other is from Sarreguemines, which is nine miles south and west. The railroads parallel the highways.

"Long Rifles" Hidden

Behind this main line the positions of the French artillery—famous French 75's and lean-looking 155-milimeter cannon known as "long rifles"—are concealed in the Warndt forest east of Saarbrücken.

French guns answering the heavy German shelling are pounding the Nazi advance lines that run through Saarbrücken suburbs from Gersviller, one and a half miles west, around to Saint Jean, an equal distance to the east.

At least, that is the French picture.

The German picture shows a strong line of permanent fortifications of reinforced concrete blockhouses linked up by pillboxes and machine-gun nests. Where this line has been penetrated by the French advance to the east the Nazi troops have retired into the outskirts of Saarbrücken proper, where secondary defenses were thrown up before the first line was forced to fall back.

Bridgehead Protected

The fortifications bulged out around Saarbrücken to protect the bridgehead where the two highroads from France meet. In the heart of the city they cross the river over a sixteenth century bridge known as "Alte Bruecke." A statue of Emperor Wilhelm I stands guard over the bridge.

Pockets of the hills behind Saarbrücken, such as at Dudweiler, Saint Ingbert and Friedrichstha, provided ideal positions for German mortars to point their wide mouths skyward and lob heavy shells over the advance lines onto the hills south of Saarbrücken.

These pockets lie about midway of the advance fortifications and the main Siegfried Line. The big guns permanently in place in these fortifications added their roar to that of the tractor-drawn artillery which the Germans moved up in front of West Wall.

The line of heights south of Saarbrücken is the historic scene of a conflict between the French and Germans on August 17, 1870, when the Prussians, under von Moltke, defeated the French General Frossard and forced him to retreat across the plains southeast to Sarreguemines. It was one of the first engagements of the Franco-Prussian War.

Even under heavy bombardment the French troops were said to have begun slowly edging forward after having been delayed by the first rains of the Autumn. Narrow side roads were slippery with mud, slowing down the progress of the French motorized units. Swollen streams increased the infantry's task of feeling its way through the broken countryside, which already was pockmarked with shell craters.

[Dispatches from Basle, in neutral Switzerland, where reports were received from both sides of the French-German border, said the French had found hand grenades more useful than rifles in the close fighting, since the positions fought for frequently were concrete pillboxes, whose defenders exposed only their rifles through the firing slits.

[Most of these pillboxes were described as having steel doors for rear entrances, which were blasted off by grenades, and in such cases the occupants were often captured.

[The Germans were reported to have concentrated armor-piercing anti-tank guns for use against French tanks. French tanks also were said to have been used in new stabs at the German lines in the Vosges foothills, northeast of the Bitche fortresses, and in attacks toward the German manufacturing town of Pirmasens. Here the French were said to have scored new advances beyond the village of Vinningen, partly flanking the line of Westwall defenses to the southeast.]

[Reports reaching Basle said the first units of British troops had marched into the French Maginot forts amid the cheers of French troops. It was believed the British had taken positions somewhere between the Moselle and the Rhine.]

Extremely Violent.

The German troops previously were reported to be moving heavy, long-range guns into the battle areas. The positions of the firing batteries and the intensity of the shelling were not disclosed.

German re-enforcements were reported massing behind Saarbruecken to forestall a direct French attack and occupation of the Saar capital.

The German artillery bombardment was described as "extremely violent," resulting in the destruction of some roads leading to Saarbruecken from the French positions. The advancing French troops who have been feeling their way slowly eastward reported that forces from both sides were obliged to fall back at times during both infantry and artillery actions.

Close In on Saarbruecken.

Military dispatches received here earlier in the day reported that the French forces, supported by thousands of newly landed British troops, were closing in on Saarbruecken from three sides.

The seizure of the city, the reports indicated, was considered vital to give the French a jumping off point for a wider attack against the heavily fortified Siegfried Line.

Indications that the Poilus were being hard pressed by concentrated German artillery fire came in an earlier official War Office communique: "Strong action by heavy enemy artillery on heights south of Saarbruecken."

Heavy fighting was reported near Hornbach also as the French troops there pushed eastward in an attempted encircling movement.

[A Berlin communique telling of operations on the western front said that "stronger French forces than hitherto" advanced toward German outposts between Saarbruecken and Hornback, but were "stopped by mine fields and German defense fire."]

Rain hampered all the operations along the 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine, but military dispatches still spoke of "substantial" gains. Saarbruecken is midway on the front, not far from the French border.

German Re-enforcements.

German re-enforcements were reported pouring into the areas behind Saarbruecken and opposite the city of Strassbourg in northeastern France.

The French Government declared officially that there were already "several hundred thousand" British troops in France. Officials said, however, that the British had not yet engaged in active fighting out that it would take some time to concentrate supplies and dispose the units along the front.

The crossing of the Channel was effected without incident by the British forces, the announcement said.

French officials contrasted the appearance of the new troops with what they described as "the handful of heroes" who were thrown into the breach in the early days of the first world war in an effort to stem the German advance from Belgium.

[A dispatch from Aigeciras, Spain, reported that ten English troop transports had passed Gibraltar en route to France. Two British ships stopped at Gibraltar, one to disembark several thousand soldiers to reinforce the garrison there and the other to unload war supplies.]

Plans for the reception of the British re-enforcements in France had apparently been worked out in great detail. Loaded down with war kits, the troops were barracked without obvious delay.

Units of the British Army were observed moving toward the front. There was little of the public rejoicing that greeted the arrival of the British in 1914, and the French peasants, stolidly watching the khaki-clad columns moving through their villages, seemed to take the coming of their allies for granted.

Poilus mingled with the troops as they halted for brief rest periods. Many of the Britons were veterans of the last war, and adopted the attitude that "we're just picking up where we left off last time."

In the Saar Sector.

Reports of the fighting in the Saar Basin said that the advance had almost removed the French frontier town of Sarreguemines from the range of the German artillery. The dispatches said French shellfire had caused the German Army to start the removal of its Saar headquarters from Saarbruecken.

The latest advances were said to have been accompanied by the heaviest aerial fighting on the western front to date. Dog-fights over the lines, French persons said, resulted in the destruction of three German planes and "one or two" French.

[Swiss observers, watching the progress of the fighting from across the border, said that the Germans appeared to have demonstrated marked superiority in artillery mobility. On the other hand, these observers said, French machine-gunners had proved more effective than the Nazi. The heavy fixed guns in the Maginot Line, they declared, also had proved superior in range and destructive power to the guns installed on the Siegfried Line. Alterations in the Maginot fortresses while the Siegfried fortifications were being completed, the Swiss observers said, had given the French advance posts a firing power which in some spots overmatched the German.]

Meanwhile today there were reports in Paris that Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of the French forces in the Near East, was en route to Poland to assist in the Polish defense. A conflicting report, however, said that he had left Ankara, Turkey, by airplane and was returning to Beirut, Lebanon.

Behind the lines Premier Daladier shuffled his Cabinet for what the French termed "a fight to the finish with Nazidom." Changes in the Cabinet, which M. Daladier announced yesterday, did not affect the political aspect of the Government to any great degree, however.

Georges Bonnet, who has been Foreign Minister, was appointed Minister of Justice, while M. Daladier himself took over the portfolio of Foreign Affairs in addition to his duties as Premier and Minister of National Defense.

Two new ministeries — Blockade and Armament—were created. Senator Georges Pernot, a member of the Radical Union group, took the Blockade post, and Raoul Dautry, former Director of the French National Railways, was made Armament Minister. The numerically strong Socialist group, headed by former Premier Leon Blum, declined to participate in the new Government.

30.24-3319

30.24—3319

Nazis Capture Gdynia After 13-Day Siege

Germans Report Lublin-Lwow Road Is Severed, Barring Flight to South

Defenders Fighting Fiercely Near Lodz

Berlin Calls Roosevelt's Extension of Monroe Doctrine 'Unchivalrous'

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—German communiques tonight reported the Reich's armies forging ahead in the east, although meeting strong Polish resistance north of Lodz. In another theater of action, Gdynia, Poland's only port city, was reported by the Germans to have surrendered after a thirteen-day siege.

Gdynia, at the extreme northern tip of the disputed Polish Corridor, had been under fire of German warships and land batteries since the war started on Sept. 1. The inhabitants of the sandy, low-lying city, into which Poland poured money, converting a rowboat dock into a modern port, surrendered at 8:10 a. m. (2:10 a. m., New York daylight time), it was announced. German troops entered the city two hours later, after the Mayor and ninety-nine inhabitants had been taken as hostages against sniping.

The wharves and port establishment were reported only slightly damaged, despite the almost constant bombardment. German reports quoted Polish soldiers as saying the city had been without bread for two days. The largest part of the population had fled. Virtually the entire Gdynia hinterland was long ago taken by Nazi troops. A small stretch of the northern port, however, where Polish batteries were situated, was still reported holding out this morning even after the rest of the city had given in.

Lwow-Lublin Line Cut

With the surrounding territory gone, the port was regarded by the Germans as having little strategic value as far as the war's progress was concerned. Of greater importance was a high command announcement that the circle around Warsaw had been closed, and communications severed between Lublin and Lwow.

(Lwow is about 225 miles southeast of Warsaw, and Lublin is about midway between the two cities.)

Polish divisions north of Lodz, seventy miles southwest of the capital, were reported waging a stubborn fight against capture in what was regarded here as the biggest battle of the war. Now in its fifth day, this engagement was upsetting German predictions that these Polish legions would be destroyed within three days.

A communique which told of the advances showed the eastern forces to be centering on three maneuvers—encircling Warsaw completely; cutting off Lublin from Lwow to prevent such government officials as may still be at Lublin from reaching the south, and advancing with East Prussian divisions upon Brzesc (Brest-Litovsk), 110 miles east of Warsaw.

"60,000 Prisoners Taken"

It added that near Radom, fifty miles south of Warsaw, "60,000 prisoners were taken, among whom were many generals," after a "destructive" battle.

"The 18th Polish Division, including the divisional general staff, surrendered yesterday north of Ostrow-Mazowieka," the communique stated. "Six thousand prisoners and thirty cannon were captured."

Ostrow-Mazowieka is fifty-five miles northeast of Warsaw.

Besides pursuing three main strategic tasks on the eastern front, the army was said to have gained ground rapidly against almost no resistance in southern Poland, paving the way for cutting off Poland from Rumania and all foreign supplies. The road leading from Lublin to Lwow, which is 220 miles southeast of Warsaw, was said to have been reached near Rawa Ruska, eighty-five air miles southeast of Lublin. An attack on Warsaw from many sides was expected soon by military observers.

With the capture of Osowiec by East Prussian troops, the last Polish frontier fortifications were in German hands. Whether German forces would attempt encirclement of Brzesc was not clear, but the communique said that "forces assigned to take Brzesc are rapidly approaching the city."

The air force was said to have "successfully attacked the eastern outskirts of Warsaw and Polish connecting roads lying farther back" to cut off retreat from the capital.

Weather Is "Unfavorable"

The only disquieting note in the army communiques from Poland were occasional references to "unfavorable weather." Thoughtful Germans were wondering whether rains at last were going to soften Poland's notoriously bad roads and bog down the motorized equipment which had enabled the Germans to make their swift thrusts. The high command discounted this prospect, a spokesman saying, "no matter what the weather we advance."

Of operations on the western front, the high command had little comment except that "stronger French forces than hitherto" advanced toward German outposts between Saarbruecken and Hornbach but were "stopped by mine fields and German defense fire."

In Berlin, another appeal was issued tonight to women and mothers to go to the country and assist in harvesting potatoes and beets.

"Always in the decisive hours of the country, German women have shown the greatness of their souls and the strength of their bodies," the appeal said. Twenty-five years ago the women showed what they could do, it continued, and "this heroic willingness is an example for you to use your energies in this struggle."

Hundreds of thousands of girls between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five have been ordered into fields and farmhouses already.

The State Secretary of the Finance Ministry, Walter Reinhardt, assured the nation meanwhile that the "financing of the war is certain," and that "no measures will be taken that might lead to a weakening of the reichsmark value."

The prosecution of persons not obeying rigid war-time measures began with the fining of a restaurant proprietor $400 for offering guests a choice between two warm meat dishes. At the same time, an order was issued forbidding the serving of hot food between certain afternoon and evening hours.

Goering Visits Industrial Area Of Upper Silesia

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—D. N. B., official German news agency, reported Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering today visited the upper Silesian industrial area newly won from Poland "in order to convince himself of the switch-over of Silesian industry to war economy."

D. N. B. said Goering remained for some time in a big munitions factory where bombs are being manufactured for the air force. Other plants apparently are producing German armaments also, little more than a week after their occupation.

Thanks Workers

He thanked the workers, who greeted him "joyfully," the news agency said.

According to a German survey, Poland has now lost all her hard coal mines, her most important iron ore, lead and zinc deposits, oil wells and steel producing plants.

Polish hard-coal production last year, including the Olsa area, according to German figures, was 45,000,000 tons, or about one quarter of the German yield.

Took Rich Iron Mines

Germany obtained Poland's producing iron mines. The all-Polish steel production of approximately 2,000,000 tons, said by the German estimate the pig iron yield can be increased at least 700,000 tons annually.

Iron ore is located principally near Wielum, in Eastern Upper Silesia, in the Olsa district, at Kielce and Czestochowa, all of which now are in German hands.

A 100,000 tons of raw zinc is produced by Upper Silesia smelters, more than half the German production.

Important for German war economy is the acquisition of Poland's nitrogen, its most important sulphuric acid and benzine producing centers.

WARSAW SAYS RAIN IS FALLING HEAVILY THERE

Capital, Still Holding Out, Hopes Storms Will Bog Invaders Down.

SEAPORT ON BALTIC FALLS

German Soldiers March In and Take 100 Hostages—Battle Continues North of City.

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Surrender of the Polish port of Gdynia after a two weeks' siege was announced today and Germany's eastern army was reported to have made new advances in drives against Warsaw and two other key Polish objectives.

A communique telling of fall of Gdynia, which had been cut off almost since the outbreak of hostilities September 1, said German troops entered the city at 10:15 A. M. (5:15 A. M. New York time).

"The Polish Commandant surrendered the city," it continued. "North of Gdynia fighting is still going on."

The city president (Mayor) was said to have accepted conditions imposed by the Germans—including surrender of 100 hostages, among them the President.

First troops to enter the city, which held out despite encirclement since the early days of Germany's drive into Poland, were alleged to have reported finding "a large part of the civilian population was armed."

Meanwhile army communiques telling of fighting on the Eastern front made occasional references to "unfavorable weather."

[Warsaw reported that heavy autumn rains had begun falling in that region.]

Fear Affect on Campaign.

Thoughtful Germans were wondering whether rains at last were going to soften Poland's notoriously bad roads and bog down the militarized equipment which has enabled the Germans to make quick thrusts. The High Command discounted this prospect, however, a spokesman saying: "No matter what weather, we advance."

A communique which told of advances in Poland said 66,000 prisoners had been captured and showed the eastern forces to be centering on three main manuevers.

1. Encircling Warsaw completely;
2. Cutting off Lublin from Lwow to prevent such Government officials as may still be at Lublin from reaching the South; and
3. Advancing with East Prussian divisions upon Brzesc (Brest-Litovsk) 110 miles east of Warsaw.

On the eastern front, the communique said, German armies yesterday closed their ring about Warsaw through advances east of the city.

Reports Generals Captured.

It added that near Radom, some fifty miles south of Warsaw, "60,000 prisoners were taken, among whom were many generals," after a "destructive" battle.

"The Eighteenth Polish Division, including the divisional general staff, surrendered yesterday north of Ostrow-Mazowieka," the communique stated. "Six thousand prisoners and thirty cannon were captured. Ostrow-Mazowieka is fifty-five miles northeast of Warsaw.

Besides pursuing three main strategic tasks in the eastern front the army was said to have gained ground rapidly against almost no resistance in southern Poland, paving the way for cutting off Poland from Rumania and all foreign supplies.

The road leading from Lublin to Lwow, which is 220 miles southeast of Warsaw, was said to have been reached near Rawa Ruska, eighty-five air miles southeast of Lublin.

Claim Fort Is Encircled.

An attack on Warsaw from many sides was expected soon by military observers. Modlin Fortress, twelve miles northwest of Warsaw, was said to be encircled.

With the capture of Ossowiec by East Prussian troops the last Polish frontier fortifications were in German hands. Whether German forces would attempt encirclement of Brzesc was not clear, but the communique said that "forces assigned to take Brzesc are rapidly approaching the city."

The air force was said to have "successfully attacked the eastern outskirts of Warsaw and Polish connecting roads lying further back" to cut off possibilities of retreat of Poles from the capital. The aim of the German forces apparently was to compel Warsaw to capitulate.

Rains Come to Warsaw.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Heavy autumn rains, for which all Poland has been praying in the hope they would hamper Germany's motorized forces, were reported today to have begun falling in the vicinity of Warsaw during the night.

The Warsaw correspondent of the Pesti Hirlap wrote today that there was much rejoicing among people in the besieged city.

Warsaw, still holding out against repeated German thrusts, was a city half in ruins today, its plight rendered serious by growing food shortages and severed communication lines.

Radio broadcasts, virtually the only source of news from the beleaguered city, pictured scenes of death and desolation as a prolonged bombardment by land and air forces continued unabated.

Most of the Polish Government officials long since have fled the city. Eleven of them, headed by Eugen Kwiatkowski, Vice-Premier and Finance Minister, were reported last night to have crossed the southern Polish border into Rumania. One was identified as the head of the Polszka (bank of Poland).

Says Many Died in Churches.

Describing the situation in Warsaw in a broadcast from the capital, Capt. Wladyslaw Polenski of the Polish Air Force said that the entire Praga district was in ruins and that many bodies—some of women and children—lay in the shell-scarred streets.

"Many people were killed inside churches, where they had sought safety," he said. "Others died in cemeteries, where tombstones were smashed and bodies scattered about."

Capt. Polenski declared that the Germans had used incendiary bombs and had "shelled and machine-gunned panicky crowds who had taken refuge in fields outside the city limits."

"Hospitals were pitiful sights during the air raids," the broadcaster said.

Women Join in Fight on Tanks.

A staff officer who broadcast a description of fighting in the suburbs said that roads were "blocked with smashed lorries, carts, dead soldiers, women and children."

"Bombs explode constantly amid crowds of people running away," he said. "Geysers of water spura skyward when mains are damaged by earth-shaking explosions. Tanks rumble into view spitting fire. Soldiers and women attack modern monsters with bunches and grenades."

Major Starzynski, Mayor of the capital, who delivered his daily appeal to the Warsaw populace to stand fast, declared that the city's defenders are "all heroes whose nerves remain excellent, with few exceptions."

He disclosed that "only one plate of food is being allowed a day in Warsaw and there is no cake these hard times."

BERLIN - Sept 14-39

German High Command's Communique

The German Supreme Army Command today issued the following communique:

Operations in southern Poland now are meeting with little resistance, and our army is quickly gaining ground eastward. The Lublin-Lwow road was reached near Rawa-Ruska and Tomaszow by strong forces. The Vistula north of Sandomierz was crossed at several points.

As a temporary result of a destructive battle near Radom, 60,000 prisoners were taken, among whom were many generals, 143 cannon and 38 armored cars.

A comprehensive attack on encircled Polish divisions around Kutno is progressing.

The Eighteenth Polish division, including the divisional general staff, surrendered yesterday north of Ostrow-Mazawieka. Six thousand prisoners and thirty cannon were captured.

Forces assigned to take Brzesc (Grest-Litowsk) are rapidly approaching the city.

Successes "Despite Unfavorable Weather"

The ring around the Polish capital was closed yesterday in the east. Also, German troops proceeding east of Modlin across the Narew river are now approaching the city from the northwest. Some sections of the German forces which advance via the Warsaw-Siedlce road have turned and are headed southwest and west.

Ossowiec, last of the Polish frontier fortifications, was taken yesterday by East Prussian troops. Despite unfavorable weather the air force successfully attacked the eastern outskirts of Warsaw and Polish connecting roads lying farther back. Two enemy planes were shot down.

SEP 15 1939

In the west, stronger French forces than hitherto advanced toward our outposts in that section of German territory which protrudes from the western fortifications toward France between Saarbrücken and Hornbach. They were stopped by mine fields and German defense fire.

BERLIN ORGAN OPENS ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT

SEP 15

Denounces His Protection of Canada Statement as Unneutral.

SUBMARINE RULES ISSUED

Campaign Not to Be 'Ruthless,' but All Neutral Ships Are to Be Searched

SEP 15 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—A commentary which usually presents the German Foreign Office opinion today attributed to President Roosevelt, in his interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, an attitude "unfair and unchivalrous, to say nothing of being unneutral."

The commentary argued that the impartial application of the Monroe Doctrine would impose on the United States the responsibility of seeing that American countries do not attack non-American countries if the United States expects the rest of the world to keep hands off the Western Hemisphere.

Germany, however, has no interest in changing the sovereignty of any American territory, "most certainly not to its own benefit," the Korrespondenz declared, and said that the only two occasions when German troops ever fought in the Western Hemisphere were to help the Canadians throw out French rule and to help Washington throw off British depotism.

At the same time observers saw in the publication of a German contraband law a warning to the world that German submarines and sea raiders would do their utmost legitimately to prevent war materials and food from reaching Great Britain and France.

The comment on President Roosevelt's attitude appeared in the Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz as part of the German reaction to Canada's declaration of war last Sunday, by which the Dominion threw her resources to the side of Great Britain against Germany. Canada's declaration, it said, placed the American President in an "awkward" position.

Submarine Campaign.

The proclamation of a long list of contraband articles, which ships of all nations may deliver to Germany's enemies only under peril of destruction, was seen as the answer to the British blockade.

Bitter warfare at sea seemed in prospect. Officials emphasized, however, that there was to be no "unrestricted submarine campaign"—that is, they said, German submarines would not sail all the seas ruthlessly sinking every ship falling within the vision of their periscopes.

Germany proposed to abide by the recognized rules of sea warfare. The presumption was that neutral ships suspected of heading for enemy ports would be stopped, searched and permitted to proceed if they carried no contraband, but on findings to the contrary and after appropriate warnings they would be torpedoed.

SEP 15 1939

Roosevelt's Utterances.

The Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz referred to President Roosevelt's press conference of last Tuesday, in which he made it plain that he interpreted the Monroe Doctrine to mean that the United States would protect by force if necessary all the Americas, including Canada.

The Korrespondenz also referred to the President's speech of last year at Kingston, Ont., in which he said that the United States would not "stand idly by" if Canada were threatened.

The commentary observed that Mr. Roosevelt, in effect, was saying that Canada may attack a European Power but that Power may not strike back at Canada. It held such an attitude to be "unfair and unchivalrous, to say nothing of being unneutral."

The commentary argued that the impartial application of the Monroe Doctrine would impose on the United States the responsibility of seeing that American countries do not attack non-American countries if the United States expects the rest of the world to keep hands off the Western Hemisphere.

Germany, however, has no interest in changing the sovereignty of any American territory, "most certainly not to its own benefit," the Korrespondenz declared, and said that the only two occasions when German troops ever fought in the Western Hemisphere were to help the Canadians throw out French rule and to help Washington throw off British depotism.

Accuses England.

The semi-official Dienst aus Deutschland, an information service also close to the Foreign Office, said of the new contraband decree:

"By breaking legal international obligations and usage, England has opened an economic war against Germany, which according to English avowal was to starve the German people.

"But this battle affects at least in the same measure neutral countries which are intended to be forced to renounce trade with Germany by genuine terroristic methods.

"If they do not bend to the English dictate then, just as Germany, they are to be starved out and cut off from their vital trade connections.

"In view of this open proclamation of the English fight, the Reich's Government was left no other choice but to act on the principle of retaliation and to meet English fighting methods by all necessary means."

SEP 15 1939

Serious Sea Problems.

The technical procedure by which Germany took up the challenge of the British blockade was an amendment to laws relating to the seizure of prizes of war. Lists of "unconditional" and "conditional" contraband were drawn up and today, before legal experts had interpreted the definitions, there was still some uncertainty respecting the manner in which the Reich would conduct its sea campaign.

"Unconditional" contraband which was to be destroyed or seized without formality included munitions, chemicals, guns, fuel and innumerable other commodities designed primarily or directly for use in battle. "Conditional" contraband included food, live animals, clothing and machinery.

Such products were listed as "conditional" contraband, it was stated, authoritatively, because they will be treated as contraband only if, and when, evidence is produced that Great Britain has actually begun to do so.

One suggestion advanced but not officially confirmed was that "unconditional" contraband would be fair game for any submarine or raider, but that vessels loaded with "conditional" contraband consigned to the enemy would be taken either to a German port or given a chance to turn about and go home.

The practical difficulty seemed to be that the German sea force could not hope to take any prize vessel to a German port through the British naval guard in the North Sea. Moreover, no German raider could be sure that ships carrying conditional contraband would turn back to their ports of departure just because they were ordered to do so. How Germany would avoid destroying even conditional cargoes remained a knotty, unanswered question.

REICH PAPER CALLS ROOSEVELT UNFAIR

Semi-Official Korrespondenz Asserts He Says Canada May Attack, Not Be Attacked

CALLS THIS 'UNNEUTRAL'

Argues Monroe Doctrine Imposes Duty on Us to Bar War on Europeans

SEP 15 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP)—A commentary which usually presents the German Foreign Office opinion attributed today to President Roosevelt in his interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine with regard to Canada, an attitude "unfair and unchivalrous, to say nothing of being unneutral."

The comment appeared in the Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz and referred to the President's Tuesday press conference, in which he made plain that he interpreted the Monroe Doctrine to mean the United States should protect by force, if necessary, all the Americas, including Canada. It appeared as part of the German reaction to Canada's declaration of war on Sunday. Canada's declaration, it was said, placed President Roosevelt in an "awkward" position.

The Korrespondenz also referred to the President's Kingston, Ont., speech of last year in which he said the United States would not "stand idly by" if Canada were threatened.

The commentary asserted that Mr. Roosevelt, in effect, was saying that Canada may attack a European power but that power may not strike back at Canada.

It argued that impartial application of the Monroe Doctrine would impose on the United States the responsibility of seeing that American countries do not attack non-American countries if the United States expects the rest of the world to keep hands off the Western Hemisphere.

Germany has no interest in changing the sovereignty of any American territory, "most certainly not to its own benefit," the Korrespondenz declared. It said the only two occasions German troops ever fought in the Western Hemisphere were to help the Canadians throw off French rule and to help Washington throw off British despotism.

In a discussion of President Roosevelt's interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, Boersen Zeitung said that "Canada is no victim of German aggression [illegible] Germany is nominated as the knight of intended Canadian aggression."

It added that the President "worries needlessly" and that Germany did not dream of taking possession, for example, of Bermuda or Jamaica, but:

"Should these lands fall into the possession of Germany by an unimaginable miracle, the Reich would immediately turn around and hand them to the United States of America."

GERMANS CLAIM ADVANCE INTO POLISH UKRAINE

Lublin-Lwow Road Reported Cut In Area Often Before Hit By Wars

SEP 15 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 14—A Polish broadcast from Baranowicze tonight declared thirty persons were killed and four big fires were started today in the first air bombing of that city of 30,000 population 200 miles north-

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Budapest, Sept. 14—The Ukraine, which suffered severely in every war and every peace treaty in recent years, again was turned into a bloody battlefield today as Polish troops began slowly to fall back across southeastern Poland under the German attack.

German assault units claimed to have cut the main highway between Lublin and Lwow, thus beginning amputation of the Ukraine from the rest of unconquered Poland while German-Slovak motorized columns opened a direct attack on Lwow.

[Editor's Note—Lublin is about a hundred miles southeast of Warsaw and Lwow about 225 in the same direction.]

Nazi Tanks Repulsed

Despite disorganization resulting from repeated bombings, Lwow's Polish defenders claimed to have beaten off a motorized attack. They were reported continuing to "dig in" in emulation of their countrymen's heroic defense of Warsaw, where the first heavy autumnal rains were said to have fallen, much to the joy of the city's defenders, who felt the rain would bog down Germany's motorized forces.

Following is the text of Polish staff communique No. 14 broadcast from Warsaw tonight:

"The German air force was very active today. They bombed Dubno, Wlodzimierz and Ra[illegible]

SEP 15 1939

"Our aviators bombed German motorized units and shot down two planes.

Germans Crossed Border

"In the Suwalszczyzna region the Germans crossed our border. In the direction of Lowicz and Skierniewice there were wild battles with the Germans.

"The Germans occupied Zamosc. We repulsed attacks on Lwow and Warsaw."

It was believed certain meanwhile that the German drive against Lublin caused the Polish Government to move farther east after only a short stopover at Nalenczow, in south-central Poland. It also appeared the invaders by this move were slowly closing a tank encirclement around Warsaw, leaving the only avenue of retreat directly eastward through Brzesc Nad Bugiem (Brest Litovsk).

Newest Battlefield

The swift German attack makes the main highway between Warsaw and the Rumanian border the newest battlefield, again bringing the scourge of war to the townspeople and peasants of a beautiful countryside still dotted with the year's harvest making. It again imperils picturesque Chelm, Zamosc, Rawaruska and Tomaszow, all of which were reduced to ruins and ashes when the Russians, Austrians and Germans fought over the same area during the World War.

1939

30.24—3321

The invaders now are in position to attack Lwow, the Ukraine's capital, down the highway from the north and from directly eastward, driving a tank furrow halfway across the remaining free section of Poland.

Speeding Up Attacks

Information was received here that German motorized columns from Slovakia were accelerating their attacks in a plan to smash through as soon as possible to the Russian border, thus separating Poland from Rumania.

If the Nazis do that, the question remains how many Poles would be able to maneuver northward to escape the dragnet and how many would be forced to cross the Rumanian and Russian borders and face internment.

The Germans' drive into the Ukraine spotlights the long unsolved Ukrainian problem involving Poland, Soviet Russia, Hungary and Rumania.

Ukraine Split Up

While other nationalities emerged from the World War as separate states, the Ukrainians alone came out divided among different lands. The major portion of the land and population was incorporated within Soviet Russia and others within Poland, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia.

Hungary entered the picture when she seized Ruthenia, easternmost part of Czecho-Slovakia, last March.

If the Germans complete occupation of the Polish Ukraine, more questions will be posed. What will be the ultimate fate of the Ukraine peoples? Will Soviet Russia reabsorb them as a price of the new Russo-German pact? Will Hungary's Ruthenia become involved? Will Rumania's Ukrainian-populated Bukowina and Bessarabia become entangled in the net again?

The fighting sweeping southeastern Poland may soon provide the answers.

Germany Denies Seeking American U-Boat Bases

British Charge Called 'Clumsy Attempt to Create Panic'

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP).—British charges that Germany was trying or intended trying to find submarine bases in Central and South America were denounced in a communique today as a "clumsy attempt to create panic among Latin-American nations." The communique, issued through DNB, German official news agency, referred to the British Ministry of Information as the "misinformation ministry."

(The ministry said Wednesday night that the British government had "reason to believe the enemy may attempt to establish submarine and air bases on the coasts of South and Central America".)

The German communique said that the British statement "cannot be considered as other than an attempt to poison the good, confidential relations between Germany and Latin-American nations and as a conscious step to [illegible] the American public.

"We must be stated once again that Germany has no political or military ambitions of any nature in North, Central or South America," it said.

Bombings Stir Chamberlain

He Tells Commons They Will Increase British Resolve to Remove Nazi Menace.

LONDON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that if Germany bombed civilians in Poland it would strengthen the resolve of Britain and her allies to "insure that the menace we are now fighting is finally removed."

The Prime Minister reiterated the statement yesterday by Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax that Britain would claim a free hand to take "appropriate action" if Germany bombed civilians.

Referring to an official German statement that severe measures would be taken to crush civilian resistance in Poland, he said:

"His Majesty's Government have noted this announcement, which in the face of it is in flat contradiction of the German Chancellor's recent statement to the Reichstag when he disclaimed any desire to make war on women and children.

"The restrictions we—like the French—have imposed on the operations of our own forces were based upon the condition of similar restraint being observed by our opponents, and His Majesty's Government must, of course, hold themselves free, if such restraint is not in fact observed, to take such action as they may deem appropriate.

Britain Bars 'Mere Terrorism.'

"But I wish to add that whatever be the lengths to which others may go, his Majesty's Government will never resort to deliberate attack on women, children and other civilians for purposes of mere terrorism.

"In the meantime it must be remembered that our strategy and tactics must at all stages be governed by one consideration and one only—namely, the most effective prosecution of the war.

"I will add that if action of the kind suggested in the German announcement is taken it will inevitably further strengthen the resolve of ourselves and our allies so to conduct our policy and so to prosecute the war as to ensure that the menace which we are fighting—of which this may be another manifestation—is finally removed."

Lord Halifax announced in the House of Lords that the German Government had notified Great Britain that it would observe for the duration of the war the prohibitions concerning the use of poisonous gases laid down in the Geneva protocol of June, 1925. He said, however, that Germany reserved full liberty of action in the event an enemy power infringed provisions of the protocol.

The Foreign Secretary recalled that Hitler said in his reply to President Roosevelt's recent appeal that there should be no bombing of unfortified towns.

Britain May Answer Air Raids.

Great Britain moved cautiously toward releasing the full power of her war machine upon Germany following Lord Halifax's announcement yesterday that any German bombing of undefended cities would "free Great Britain's hands."

Lord Halifax told the House of Lords then:

"The restrictions which his Majesty's Government have imposed on their forces were based on the condition of similar restraint being observed by their opponents. His Majesty's Government must hold themselves completely free, if such restraint is not in fact observed, to take such action as they may deem appropriate."

[An announcement from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters yesterday said that the German Army would break Polish resistance in open towns and villages by "all means at its disposal."

The Polish Government was accused in the statement of encouraging Poles to resort to sniping.]

The London Times, which often reflects Government opinion, commented that the British Government had received no official confirmation of any German intention to bomb undefended cities, but added:

"At any rate, whether the proclamation is authentic or not, the German airmen have not yet been set to this work of murder. Until the proposed atrocities are actually committed the British Government with the French will certainly not depart from the assurance that both have given to the President of the United States."

Other newspapers featured prominently a statement from the Polish embassy that up to September 13 German planes had bombed thirty cities and open towns in Poland, killing more than 1,500 civilians including women and children. Since then, the embassy said, scores of Polish towns and villages have been raided.

A Healthy Fear.

The papers also gave prominent place to the report of the American Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, that the Germans in Poland were bombing without regard to the safety of civilians.

The London Daily Telegraph wrote: "The very [illegible]tion that British forces might one day be compelled to bomb open towns is enough to make soldier and civilian alike recoil; but Lord Halifax was right to point out that a policy of restraint is based on reciprocation. A healthy fear of reprisals and their effect on the morale of the German population may well prove a deterrent where considerations of humanity have failed."

No one doubted that if England retaliated, London and Paris, still unbombed, would receive a German counter-attack. Yet the blackout restrictions which plunged the city into complete darkness with the outbreak of war are just beginning to ease up.

Pedestrians and automobiles will be allowed to carry a little more light and the opening of more movie houses was considered. In the West End, London's combination of Broadway and Park avenue, fashionable night clubs and hotels announced that they would resume dancing and entertainment.

The authorities also considered putting the clock ahead another hour to use more daylight.

England Moves To Curb Germans' War Supplies

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—The British Government today intensified its drive to halt the flow of war supplies to Germany, declaring that "already large quantities of contraband have been stopped and prevented from reaching the enemy."

The Admiralty disclosed that the Nieuw Amsterdam, flagship of the Holland American Line, was examined yesterday for contraband and that more than a score of ships were detained off the southeast coast today for searching.

Previously the Ministry of Economic Warfare had announced seizure of the cargo of the Netherlands steamer Groenlo as suspected contraband and the searching of an American ship, the Black Osprey.

The Nieuw Amsterdam and the Black Osprey were released after search.

To Sell War Prize Cargo

The first public notice of a war prize cargo published today said that approximately 5,900 tons of phosphate from the American freighter Warrior were now lying in barges at Purfleet to be sold by order of the Marshal of the Admiralty.

When the cargo was seized and other details were not given.

[Editor's Note—The Phosphate Export Association in New York said the Warrior's cargo had been paid for in cash by a German buyer prior to the ship's departure and that the association had no further interest in it. Officials added they had received no direct word of the seizure.]

A Ministry of Information communique tonight assured neutral powers that Britain had no intention of preventing them from importing foodstuffs and other material for their own use.

"The German wireless has distorted the purpose of the British contraband policy as setting out to strangle neutral trade and bringing starvation and death to old people, women and children in neutral countries," the communique said.

Will Aid Neutral Trade

"Britain does not seek to dictate to any neutral government. She has already categorically declared that she will do all in her power to facilitate bona fide neutral trade. . . .

"What Britain is endeavoring to do is to prevent the German Government from importing goods and material which will enable them to prolong the war."

The Government continued to relax the rigid precautionary measures put into effect at the outbreak of war. It was announced that all movies, theaters and other places of entertainment in England, Scotland and Wales would be reopened tomorrow.

Some To Close At 6 P. M.

Motion-picture theaters except for an area in central London will be permitted to remain open from 10 A. M. until 10 P. M. Those in the restricted area of the city must close at 6 P. M.

FLIGHT LEADER GIVES ACCOUNT OF TRIUMPH

Missiles Dropped 100 Feet From Three Planes At Wilhelmshaven

First Eyewitness Story Given Out by Ministry Of Information

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 14—The Ministry of Information disclosed today what it said was the first eyewitness account of the Royal Air Force bombing of German battleships at Wilhelmshaven September 4 by the leader of the first flight.

The flight leader's name was not announced. His navigator was a Canadian, whose name was not disclosed.

The account, as given out by the Information Ministry, follows:

"We started for Wilhelmshaven at 4 P. M., on September 4," said the leader. "When we left, the afternoon was fine, but as we flew we ran into foul weather with heavy continuous rain. We reached Wilhelmshaven after two hours of flying. As we turned on our last course, five minutes away from Wilhelmshaven, the weather cleared for a few minutes.

They Fly Singly

"Breaking the flight formation, we flew singly into the Schilling Roads.

"We could see a German warship taking on stores from two tenders at her stern. We could even see some washing hanging on a line. Undaunted by the washing, we proceeded to bomb the battleship.

"Flying at 100 feet above mast height, all three aircraft in the flight converged on her. I flew straight ahead. The pilot of the second aircraft came across from one side, and the third crossed from the other side.

Saw Crews Running

"When we flew on top of the battleship we could see the crews running fast to their stations. We dropped our bombs. The second pilot, flying behind, saw two hit. We came 'round, and the ship's pompom guns began to fire as we headed for home. My navigator saw shells bursting almost on the tail of the aircraft.

"The second pilot, swooping across, took a photograph, which was subsequently found to be very blurred owing to the weather conditions at the time just before he dropped his first bomb.

"By now the sky had clouded over again. The aircraft were driving through blinding rain. As this bomber turned on the homeward course the navigator noticed machine-gun tracer bullets nipping past their port wing tip. They looked like small blue electric sparks."

Got "Hot Stuff," He Says

The pilot of the third aircraft who saw the first bomb drop from the second bomber said:

"To me it appeared to drop dead amidship. By now the battleship's crew were all at action stations and I got some hot stuff."

He dropped his bombs and made a half circuit 'round the battleship. Wheeling, he noticed three bursts of anti-aircraft fire at the leader's machine.

During the whole action only one German aircraft was seen. This was a German biplane, which flew past and disappeared.

By 7.30 P. M. the flyers were back at their station.

Another Account Given

Another vivid account was given by the officers and crew of aircraft from another squadron which took part in the raids in the Kiel area.

One of the aircraft was hit several times both by shells and bullets but returned home safely, although two of the petrol tanks were punctured. The remaining two bombers were not hit.

"We set out in fine weather," said the leader of this attack, "but we soon ran into a thick mist. One pilot became separated from the others, but he took up station again after ten minutes or so. We were near the German coast when half a dozen enemy fighters came out to engage us. A game of hide-and-seek in the clouds followed and our craft were successful in eluding their pursuers and left them behind.

Heavy Rain For Hour

"Conditions grew worse and there was heavy rain for an hour. Then the weather improved and my bombers gained height, giving a wide berth to all the islands along the German coast. We observed considerable activity by enemy merchant shipping. We made our landfall accurately and flew up the Elbe estuary until we sighted a number of German naval vessels. We were then flying at 6,000 feet under a thin layer of cloud.

"The enemy held his fire until we were almost over our target. Then suddenly he opened with every gun he could bring to bear on us; it was terrific, especially the firing from the big ships, which seemed to carry seven anti-aircraft guns on either beam. You could watch the tracer shells rising after the flash of the gun in spirals and follow the whole of their course.

All Return Safely

"We made our aircraft as difficult targets as we could by maneuvering. We then straightened out and dropped our bombs. At once we rose up into the clouds with the shells bursting 'round us and made for home, after an effective smack at the enemy. All returned home safely."

Two of the returning pilots reported they sighted a submarine making for Germany on the surface at high speed. At sight of the British airplanes she dived precipitately. All the bombs had been dropped on the objectives in Germany, the pilots added, otherwise she would have been an easy victim. Another bomber passed over Heligoland fortifications but was unmolested either by fighters or anti-aircraft fire, the crew reported.

Refugees Fleeing From Poland Under Fire of German Planes

Reporter Tells of Blasted Homes, Burning Factories and Dead Civilians—Says Lwow, Ablaze, Is Doomed City.

By DANIEL DE LUCE.

[The following dispatch was sent to Budapest and filed from there at 11:56 A. M. today (6:56 A. M., New York time). The time it was written was not given.]

SNIATYN, Poland (at the Rumanian border), Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Weary refugees, trudging along the main highways of southeastern Poland today, reported they were under continual fire of German planes using bombs and machine guns. They said every train, railroad station, bridge and automobile in the area was an actual or potential target of the swarming aerial invaders.

It was estimated that at least 100,000 Poles, moving mostly afoot toward the Rumanian frontier, were fleeing Poland's war-swept zones.

With communications disrupted, making accuracy impossible, it was estimated in foreign circles that civilian casualties in scattered towns and byways averaged at least a hundred daily.

Persons coming through the countryside as I did could see blasted homes, burning factories, shattered railroad lines—and tangled bodies of men, women and children.

The frontier itself was not safe until one actually crossed into Rumania. Zaleszczyki, on the Polish side, already has been raked with aerial fire and the Smiatyn Railway station on the front was photographed by two low-flying bombers which dove within 500 feet of the ground, calmly ignoring rifle fire from the station roof.

Five Polish fighting planes based in a woods somewhere in the vicinity were attempting to protect the rail lines against bombers.

Polish Communications Poor.

The Poles say the German onslaught has been speeded by a vast network of spies using hidden short-wave radio to inform the Nazi military of Polish "secrets."

Poles on the other hand are severely handicapped in maintaining connections between staff headquarters at Lwow and the front lines, frequently meeting with delays as much as six hours. Virtually the only means of communication now existing is by courier planes hedge-hopping and sneaking back between German raids.

I was able to leave the besieged city of Lwow through the kindness of British Consul Middleton when the consulate departed. I perched on a baggage truck piled high with parcels from the British and French consulates.

(Lwow is about 150 miles northeast of Sniatyn by railroad.)

We were subjected to air raids all day along the dusty chuck-holed road toward Sniatyn. Nearly every village we passed through had been bombed. Outside the picturesque village of Trembowla we dove into the shelter of an apple orchard while two German bombers swooped over the railway station.

Two bombs fell with ear-shattering explosives. Five minutes later when we passed through the main street of the town we saw bombs had struck peasant houses on each side, missing the railroad station by 100 yards. Five bodies were lying under a shattered tree.

Frightened Girl.

Later after a German bomber had flown over a hill behind a small barn where we had taken shelter, I noticed a barefoot peasant girl huddled into a corner, shaking with fear. I gave an imitation of a grin and waved my hands in a motion used by baseball umpires to call a runner safe.

The girl, ignorant of baseball, got the idea and her face brightened.

All quiet again, we went on our way.

[The following dispatch from Mr. De Luce was sent by courier and telegraphed to Budapest and filed from Budapest at 6:55 A. M. (1:55 A. M., New York time.)]

LWOW, Poland, Sept. 14—5 A. M. (Midnight, New York Time), Sept. 13 (A. P.).—Regardless of whether the slowly retreating Polish Army is able to stem the German advance, the city of 316,000 population is doomed.

Bombed from the air for fourteen days and battered by artillery during the last week, Lwow is a giant torch. A red glow, cast over the city by flames from burning oil refineries, makes a grim mockery of air raid precautions.

Other fires are burning in many sections of the city. Shattered aqueducts have emptied the reservoir from which Lwow draws its water supply and efforts to quench the flames with sand are pitifully ineffectual.

An acute food shortage, the danger of plague and the horror of bombing attacks have reduced the remaining residents to a state of panic. Over all hovers the fear that the Germans may enter the city at any moment.

The panic is particularly acute among the Jewish community, which numbers approximately 100,000. In shell-scarred synagogues the Jews began their New Year celebration by offering up prayers for rain, which they hoped might halt the march of the German Army.

Train Travel Disrupted.

All railroad junction terminals in the city have been wrecked by bombs, disrupting train travel. As fast as the Poles can repair vital rail lines they are destroyed by German bombers. Many passenger trains derailed by the bombs lie along the tracks.

Not only military caravans, but private cars have been machine-gunned from the air as well as bombed. I saw frequently along the highways automobiles and peasant carts whose occupants had been killed by machine-gun fire.

Military headquarters in Lwow have been established in low wooden buildings in the center of the city on the theory the Germans might consider them not worth bombing.

Until Monday [illegible] aircraft guns were available here to combat the air raids. When they arrived they were manned by inexperienced crews which were unable to score hits even when the enemy planes flew over so low I could almost count the rivets in their fuselages.

Hotels of Lwow were crowded, mostly with staff officers. Most cars now being used were to take officers' families to the frontier.

The hotels are serving only one-plate meals because of a shortage of supplies. Hard liquor is not permitted anywhere in Poland because it has been turned over to the military for medical use.

Newspapers are limited to one sheet printed on both sides.

Terror is almost as great in the countryside as in the cities. Observers charged that German planes make constant attacks, not only on lines of fleeing refugees but also on small villages which have no anti-aircraft protection or long range guns.

Everywhere I go I hear criticism from the man in the street of the Poles' leadership and examples of alleged lack of preparation. For instance, a woman medical expert from Warsaw told me that the first trainload of wounded was sidetracked for a full hour before any of the seriously wounded and dying men received any attention.

Many Ignore Defense Appeals.

The Lwow radio is constantly broadcasting appeals to citizens capable of bearing arms not to leave, as "a definite defense will be made." Nevertheless, refugees have been pouring out of the city in a steady stream since the first bombardment on September 1, many of them of military age.

Most of the Polish air force—or what remains of it—has been stationed near the Rumanian frontier in the hope of fighting off German attempts to smash Poland's lifeline railway bringing oil and other supplies from Rumania.

But it is a good bet that German flyers could spot the Polish planes for bomb attacks and before you read this that may have happened.

For days the weather has continued beautifully clear and sunny with the sort of sky in which bombs, seen from afar, look like silver darts. They seem to float lazily down to earth. But close at hand, here in Lwow, it is different.

German bombers, even as I write this, are raining explosives on the oil and alcohol refineries. The table quivers under my hand as the earth trembles. Outside there is the din of sirens, anti-aircraft batteries and the thunder of bombardment on the edge of the city.

Report Shrapnel Bombs Used.

The Germans are using shrapnel bombs, I am told, and also some sort of concussion bombs. One of the latter dropped into a three-story building. The building collapsed as though the mortar had been pulled out from between the bricks.

The shrapnel bombs are used against concentrations of soldiers—and sometimes civilians also are hit. Flying metal from the explosions kills persons a block away from the blast.

I am told that the first bombardment of Lwow came on September 1, just as Adolf Hitler was telling the Berlin Reichstag of his decision to go to war with Poland.

I came here on a train from Hungary—a passenger train, but it was made up of freight cars, flat ones at that. My seat was a soapbox. Every few miles of the 150 we traveled the train stopped and took on a load of newly mobilized soldiers.

The soldiers and their peasant wives and children wept as the train pulled away from each little station.

Passing us, on the southbound track, were crowded trains whose passengers laughed and called out to us. They had reason for cheer—they were refugees bound for Rumania and peace.

Our locomotive wheezed to a halt about twenty miles outside Lwow and the conductor pointed to flames lighting the night sky. "The station," he said. The train went no further.

We walked several miles along a pitch-dark country road and then took an unlighted street car into the city. Next to me sat a little girl who said nothing. On her knees there sat a parrot cage with a cackling bird inside.

Polish Stand Broken.

The Polish warfront is in flux again after the Poles momentarily stopped the Germans along the San and Vistula rivers. The Polish stand has been broken by the Germans in four places as nearly as could be told from the fragmentary information reaching Lwow.

One of the breaks is said to be fifty miles west of Lwow. Behind the Polish lines, here in Lwow, at least, conditions are chaotic. Due to the fact that bombs have smashed the aqueduct, nearly half a million residents of this city must draw water through old hand pumps. The sewage disposal system also has been damaged Physicians fear great outbreaks of disease.

Fires are burning in many parts of the city. The roads hereabouts are filled with dusty, weary refugees. Disregarding police orders, they have stampeded from their homes, trying to reach Rumania and safety. The more fortunate refugees transport their belongings in carts drawn by horses. Some have bicycles. The roads are choked so as to hamper movement of military supplies.

The French and British military missions to Poland are kept constantly on the move, remaining in contact with the Polish General Staff through couriers. So efficient is German intelligence that the British and French headquarters invariably become bomb tarkets a few hours after establishment.

Many Poles are frankly disappointed, some angry, over the failure of Britain and France to send planes to Poland. But the British tell you, "It would be throwing away planes, for Poland has no repair shops and no protected hangars."

Life is extremely difficult for foreigners of any nationality and is becoming worse.

Despite the small American flag in my buttonhole I have been stopped, searched and questioned many times. Once I spoke inadvertently in German in a Lwow shop and within a few seconds there were two threatening policemen at my shoulder.

Even the British Consul here was arrested for a short while when he attempted to photograph ruins of a bombed building.

Declares Italy Stands by Axis

Important Fascist Organ Announces Prizes to Be Given Rome at Close of War.

ROME, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The Bologna newspaper Il Resto del Carlino asserted today that Italy in her present neutrality was pursuing the policy of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The newspaper, regarded as an important Fascist organ, predicted passage of power between the Italy has not entered the war because Il Duce sees further than any one and is very jealous of our blood and our gold."

Il Resto del Carlino recalled that Hitler, in a message to Mussolini at the start of the conflict, said that he had no need of Italian military aid.

Tunisia, Jibuti, Suez.

Italy was described as armed and ready to defend herself. The newspaper said that no foreign Power would dare attack because "Italian force is enormous and can be thrown on the balance if and when Il Duce wishes."

"Italy has changed nothing of the foreign policy which is that of the axis," the newspaper said, "and if he maintains a certain reserved-ness, it is due to international duties which she wants to observe in the capacity of a non-belligerent State.

1939

30.24-3323

30.24—3323

The newspaper declared that Mussolini a year and a half ago guaranteed the efficiency of Italy's armed force, asserting that she could mobilize 9,000,000 men and place half of them in the front lines and that she had the largest submarine fleet, one of the best air forces in the world and enough munitions and fuel for a long period.

Since then Italy has "burned the road" in speeding her war preparations, the newspaper said.

"Italy disdains the waltz," the article continued, "and marches straight ahead. War will end with a German victory."

The newspaper recalled that Mussolini had assured Italy she would reach her goals. It added that among these goals were Tunisia, Jibuti and Suez.

NORTH EUROPE GUARDING FOOD

Oslo States Protect Their Winter Supplies.

FINLAND TO BE IMPARTIAL

Hopes to Maintain Trade Contact With All Belligerents.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Europe's neutral northern States, faced with the pressing necessity of protecting winter supplies, are seeking a means to maintain import and export trade without dangerously offending the belligerents.

What the neutrals would like to do already has been expressed by Finland's Foreign Minister, Rolf Erkko, who said his country would try to maintain trade relations with warring nations on an identical basis, favoring neither side.

The Premiers of Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland will meet here on Monday to discuss the situation. On the agenda is the question of what measures the Baltic States would take in the event of unrestricted submarine warfare.

Several of the Northern States already have initiated steps designed to assure adequate winter supplies of food, fuel and raw materials.

Export Embargo by Norway.

Norway has issued a general export embargo, from which were excluded only iron ore and fish. The order recently was extended to include fish products.

At the same time orders were rushed through for foodstuffs and raw materials from neutral nations. These orders included 21,000 tons of sugar from Cuba, 20,000 tons of coal from the United States and 60,000 tons of gasoline and 20,000 tons of oil from the United States and Persia.

Large supplies of grain were ordered from the United States and Argentina. Flour was rationed at ten kilograms (about twenty pounds) per person monthly and the private use of gasoline was forbidden.

Norway also halted the domestic sale of coal and coke pending fixing or ration quotas.

Meanwhile the Norwegian navy was mobilized to patrol the coasts, where a number of German freighters were trying to evade British warships.

SEP 15 1939

Regulations in Sweden.

Sweden has regulated strictly all import and export trade, requiring permits for each transaction. Approximately 60,000 men have been called to the colors.

Denmark has called up five classes of reservists and has laid mines protecting the waters near Copenhagen. The nation has found its fishing fleets demoralized and commercial navigation crippled by near-by German and British mine fields, whence come almost daily reports of sinkings.

Finland, its Baltic outlet practically closed, is considering immediate extension of a railroad to the Arctic Ocean. The Government is supervising trade, but export restrictions are few and imports are practically free from restraint.

There has been no food rationing yet in Finland, but there has been a rush to buy sugar, salt, coffee and soap.

Latvia Tightens Frontier.

Latvia has tightened supervision of its Polish frontier and has called up three classes of reservists. Embargoes have been placed on exports of metals, cotton and rubber goods, fuels and wool. No food rationing has been decreed, but a shopping rush in the first days of the war resulted in certain restrictions on retail trade.

Lithuania already is feeling an acute shortage of fuel, which is serious in view of the usually severe winters. Food supplies are ample and no rationing is expected.

Throughout the Northern and Baltic countries private automobiling virtually has ceased.

Copenhagen, which a fortnight ago was brilliantly lighted, has become almost as gloomy as the belligerent capitals, largely to conserve fuel.

BALKANS FEAR SPREAD OF WAR

Little Nations Eye Russia, Germany and Italy.

HUNGARY WANTS NEUTRALITY

But High Personages Hold One False Move May Set Spark.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Neutral nations in southeastern Europe watched Italy, Russia and Germany today for any move which might draw them into the war now raging at the Balkans' front door.

Many Government leaders feel that a continuation of southeastern Europe's aloofness from the conflict and peace among the Balkan States depend on what courses are pursued within the next few weeks by the three Powers.

Important political persons pointed out that any attempt on the part of Russia to take Bessarabia from Rumania or Germany from Poland, any German effort to use the Hungarian railroads for troop movements against southeastern Poland or any warlike gestures by Italy would be enough to ignite the war flames in this corner of Europe.

SEP 15 1939

Hungary, with German troops along her northern border and the Polish war just 150 miles from her capital, appeared to be in the most precarious position.

Hungary Wants Neutrality.

On the other hand, the most recent trip to Berlin of the Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Stefan Csaky, was quickly followed by the Premier's speech emphasizing again Hungary's determination to stay neutral.

The Premier, Count Paul Teleki, apparently referring to public speculation on his nation's territorial claims on Rumania, declared last night that Hungary could not enter into "adventures" while in her present "difficult geographic position."

Addressing members of his Government party, Count Teleki said: "Hungary cannot be rash under pressure of the moment."

On the European war, he said: "Germany and the warring nations in general consider it in their interest to have peace and quiet and productive work in the Danube Basin.

"Hungary governs herself . . . and I must expressly point out that we serve only Hungarian interests."

But all the southeastern countries are watching Germany for indications of what she might do to make certain this "quiet productive work" is carried on for her benefit—that supplies from this area will be shipped her and not to the Allies.

Great Britain and France have been sending buyers into the little Danube nations with offers in gold for their products. Some circles reported many of these offers have been accepted.

The first indication of Nazi reaction was a public protest from Berlin yesterday in which Great Britain was charged with "interfering with the economic neutrality" of small nations. This was followed by an announcement from Rumania that Dr. Claudius, chief of the German Finance Ministry's economic department, was going to Rumania tomorrow to discuss exports to the Reich, chiefly oil, and a payment plan, now that war makes barter difficult.

Significantly, this flying trip to Bucharest follows closely upon the announcement that Rumania has accepted large orders from Great Britain, France and Poland.

Observers said that perhaps the greatest threat to Balkan neutrality is the possibility that Germany may use "pressure" to corner the oil, grain, metals and other products of what she calls her Lebensraum—living space.

Rumanians Feverish.

Reports—wholly unconfirmed—that Russia has a secret agreement with Germany whereby the Soviet would be given a free hand to take Bessarabia from Rumania have caused great alarm in Bucharest and spurred war preparations.

On the peaceful side, news from Albania indicating that Italy has been withdrawing troops from her recently acquired territory has eased the tension.

Greece and Turkey, observers point out, are especially interested in Italy's remaining out of the war because of the feeling in diplomatic circles that growing Italian influence in the Mediterranean already threatens their positions. Dispatches from Istanbul quoted Government officials as saying that Turkey would remain neutral if Italy did.

Diplomatic Headache.

Similar expressions have come from Athens. Nivholas Mavroudis, head of the Greek Foreign Office, is in Rome to discuss Greco-Italian relations.

Responsible persons reported that Greece and Turkey regard the preservation of present Mediterranean and Balkan relations as depending on Italian neutrality.

Diplomatic persons said that other rumors of a secret agreement between Russia and Germany to give the Galicia section of Poland to Russia left the Hungarian capital with a diplomatic headache. Such a "territorial readjustment" would give Hungary and Russia a common frontier. Intense anti-communist feeling here, dating back to Hungary's Red revolution and short-lived communist regime, would make such a redrawing of borders extremely unpopular.

Another trouble spot is indicated between Rumania-Hungarian relations. Rumania, which received a rich southern section of Hungary after the world war, is keeping a watchful eye on German-Hungarian developments in fear of some agreement whereby Budapest might be given Nazi approval in reclaiming Transylvania.

SEP 15 1939

LATIN REPUBLICS WATCH COAST LINE

To Take "Every Necessary Step" To Keep War Bases Out Of New World

Their Stand Applies To England And France As Well As To Germany

SEP 15 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 14—Government spokesmen in Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay declared emphatically today "every necessary step" has been taken to prevent either side in the European war from establishing air or naval bases on the South American Atlantic coast.

The assertions followed upon an announcement from London that Germany might attempt to base operations here.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—A communique issued in Berlin characterized the London announcement as a "clumsy attempt to create panic among Latin-American nations."]

The navies of Argentina and Brazil are patrolling the coast line vigilantly for any sign of violation of their neutrality. Uruguay promised a close watch.

Applies To All Outsiders

High officials declined to discuss in detail the report from London which was called to their attention by British Ambassadors. They said, however, their neutrality included sparing no efforts to prevent German as well as British and French armed forces from using their territorial lands or waters as bases. All three nations quickly discounted the possibility submarine bases had been or might be established.

British circles had expressed concern that Germany might attempt to operate bases along or off the rugged coast line of Patagonia, in southern Argentina. That section has a heavy German population.

SEP 15 1939

World-War Bases Recalled

It was recalled that after the World War the German Admiralty disclosed that bases in the Western Hemisphere had been used extensively.

Britain has a naval air base in the Falkland Islands, 300 miles off the southern Argentine coast. Argentina has several naval bases along its southern coast line.

Argentina To Dispatch Warships To Patagonia

Bahia Blanca, Argentina, Sept. 14 (AP). Two Argentine battle ships and four destroyers are expected to sail Saturday to partol the Patagonian coast of South Argentina.

Rear Admiral Jose Guisasola, commander-in-chief, flew to Buenos Aires today to receive instructions from the Navy Minister on assuring Argentine neutrality in Europe's war. The fleet returned from Rio de Janeiro after war was declared.

The fleet movement was announced after Great Britain warned South and Central American countries that Germany might attempt to establish air or naval bases in their territory.

Fear Bases in America.

LONDON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—In reporting a belief of the British Government that Germany would try to establish submarine and air bases on the coasts of South and Central America, the Ministry of Information said today:

"The Government has instructed his Majesty's representatives in those countries to invite the Governments to which they are accredited to take all steps which may be necessary to prevent any breaches of their neutrality."

A new scale of war risk insurance for overseas shipping was announced, reducing rates for the Mediterranean and Black Sea. A special deduction was offered for cargo carried by neutral ships. It was the second schedule announced since the war began.

An American and two Dutch British blockaders, it was announced.

The Black Osprey, American, was allowed to proceed with its cargo, but the Dutch Gorenlo lost her freight consigned to Duesseldorf, Germany.

The British Admiralty announced today the eastbound liner Nieuw Amsterdam was examined for contraband and released yesterday.

Due to the examination incident and other difficulties, the eastbound liner omitted any call at Southampton or Plymouth. Passengers wishing to come to Britain, therefore, will have to come via Rotterdam.

The westbound sailing originally scheduled from Rotterdam tonight has been postponed at least twenty-four hours, but agents said they expected normal calls from British ports westbound by September 16 or 17.

MOSCOW CHARGES POLES TERRORIZE RUSSIAN MINORITY

Pravda Likens Warsaw's 'Policies of Oppression' to Those of Czarism.

SEP 15 1939

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The Communist party newspaper Pravda today criticized Poland for failure to take care of her national minorities in Ukrainian since Russian troops declared the resultant Polish disunity was the cause of "military defeat."

At the same time Soviet Russia, through a communique, charged Polish warplanes with "frequent violations" of her western frontier, to which a vast number of Soviet reservists have been dispatched.

Pravda's criticism was contained in an editorial analyzing "the inner causes of Poland's military defeat" which, it said, has entailed the loss for Poland of "practically all her political and economic centers."

"One finds it difficult," it asserted, "to explain such a quick defeat only by superiority of German military technic and military organization and by lack of effective assistance to Poland on the part of Great Britain and France."

The editorial then declared that the causes of defeat "are rooted in the first place in the inner weaknesses and contradictions of the Polish State."

Pravda said that in Poland "the Ukrainian and Byelo-Russian (white Russian) population was doomed to cultural degredation" and added:

"A multi-national State, not knit together by ties of friendship and equality of the peoples inhabiting it but on the contrary based on oppression and inequality of national minorities, cannot constitute a strong military force. This is the root of weakness of the Polish and the inner cause of its military defeat."

The Pravda article said that Poles constituted only about 60 per cent of the population of Poland while the remaining 40 per cent was made up of national minorities, chiefly Ukrainians, white Russians and Jews.

"Suffice it to say that Poland is inhabited by no less than 8,000,000 Ukrainians and about 3,000,000 Byelo-Russians," Pravda continued.

"To give an idea of the specific gravity of the Ukrainian and Byelo-Russian population of Poland we should point out that their total exceeds the population of Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania taken together.

"It would appear that the Polish ruling classes should have established normal relations with such important national minorities, secure them national rights, give them—if not political—at least administrative autonomy, and give them national schools and cultural institutions.

Scores Polish Tactics.

"It is clear that without such and similar rights for national minorities it is impossible to preserve a multi-national state and assure its inner unity and vital power.

"Yet the Polish ruling classes proved incapable of grasping this or making any practical step to bring about this condition. More, Polish ruling circles did everything possible to aggravate relations with national minorities and bring them to a state of extreme tension.

"The national policy of ruling circles in Poland is characterized by suppression and oppression of national minorities, particularly Ukrainians and Byelo-Russians. In western Ukraine and western Byelo-Russia—regions where Ukranians and Byelo-Russians form the majority of the population—they are subject to extremely rude and unscrupulous exploitation by Polish landlords.

"Ukrainians and Byelo-Russians are subject to a regime of national oppression and deprivation of rights.

Likened to Czardom.

"Ruling circles in Poland, who boast of their alleged love for freedom, did everything to convert Western Ukraine and Western Byelo-Russia into a colony deprived of any rights and delivered for plunder to the Polish gentry. In this respect Polish policy differs in no way from the policy of oppression pursued by Russian czardom. . . .

"Lands in western Ukraine and Byelo-Russia are given over for settlement to Polish military colonists—so-called "Osadiks." Poles who form here an infinitesimal percentage of the population constitute the dominating force, holding in their hands the entire machinery of power. . . .

"Polish language dominates all rungs of the administrative ladder. Officials and judges are Poles who recognize no language but Polish. . . . Poland's ruling circles maintain their domination over national minorities by punitive expeditions, field tribunals, white terror and fanning national discord."

Border Violations Charged.

Pravda said that schools of the minorities were reduced "almost to naught," and that their literature and arts were in the same position.

"These are the reasons," it said, "why Poland did not and could not create the inner unity and consolidation of forces of the multi-national State which could raise a high patriotic wave and unite the Polish Army, consisting not only of Poles but also of Ukrainians and Byelo-Russians, in a single endeavor to offer a rebuff to an armed opponent." ☆

SOVIET FLYERS FORCE DOWN POLES

Seize Airmen on Charges of Violating Frontier

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia accused Polish war planes today of "frequent violations" of her western frontier, to which Moscow has dispatched vast numbers of reservists.

A Tass (official news agency) communique said that Soviet flyers had forced down two Polish planes and that their crews, totaling fifteen men, were being detained. The communique accused "the violators of trying to penetrate our territory."

Previous Tass reports said that three planes had been forced down after crossing the frontier near Mozyr, in White Russia, and that a fourth was compelled to land in the Ukraine.

Soviet officials indicated that they were considering the question of how to deal with Polish refugees trying to cross the frontier. Moscow has not yet defined its attitude toward refugees.

NAZIS IN ROW OVER YUGOSLAV RAILROAD CARS

Refuse to Release Planes Till Wheat Shipments Are Released.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—It was reported reliably here today that a consignment of German airplanes for Yugoslavia was stopped by the German authorities at the Yugoslav frontier in a sharp dispute over transportation facilities.

The stoppage of the shipment was attributed to Yugoslavia's refusal to let several trainloads of wheat through to Germany until Germany had returned 400 railroad cars and more than 100 Danube River barges.

Yugoslavia was said to have refused to send any goods into Germany until the cars and barges already held were sent back.

The frontier authorities were reported to have refused a German suggestion that shipments be dumped at the border where they could be picked up by German cars.

Polish Grain In: Half Billion Bushels

LWOW, Poland (By Courier to Rumanian Frontier), Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Poland has finally completed the harvesting and has stored away about 500,000,000 bushels of grain to feed her besieged people as the German army of the Nazis continue to sweep across the country.

Poland is one of Europe's major producers of rye and oats, a large grower of wheat and some corn and barley. Her normal potato crop is about 1,000,000,000 bushels.

WMCA Denies Pirating Secret War Messages

Tells F. C. C. It Merely Put Contents on Air, but Didn't Pick Up or Decode Them

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company, licensee of radio station WMCA at New York City, formally denied today that it had violated the communications act in its handling of war news.

The Federal Communications Commission, saying it had "information in its possession tending to establish" that the station "caused the interception of secret radio communications sent by the governments of Germany and Great Britain," called upon the Knickerbocker Company Tuesday to show cause why its license should not be revoked.

William Weisman, vice-president of the company filed an affidavit with the commission today in which he said WMCA "neither directly nor indirectly intercepted or caused the interception" of secret radio communications by the governments of Germany and Great Britain "or any other government."

Mr. Weisman's affidavit said he was aware of an advertisement which appeared in the Sept. 6 issue of a radio paper reproducing excerpts from columns of New York newspapers in which it was stated that WMCA had decoded secret orders of the governments of Germany and Great Britain.

"The Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company does not control, directly or indirectly, in any manner, either the said publications or any of the writers of said columns," Mr. Weisman said.

"The Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company used the said items in the advertisement only as an indication of the fact that WMCA did broadcast the news items in advance of other radio stations or in advance of their publication in the daily newspapers in New York City, but not for the purpose of advertising that WMCA had in fact intercepted or decoded any of the secret orders of Germany, Great Britain or any other government."

First Reich Ship Seized Was in Dock at London

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 14—A story of how the British Army captured the first German ship during the war was disclosed today. The seizure was announced as made by a battalion of territorials—corresponding to United States National Guardsmen—stationed at a London dock.

The ship was unloading cargo when a captain of the territorials heard Prime Minister Chamberlain's words, "We are in a state of war with Germany," over the radio on Sept. 3.

With fixed bayonets the territorials boarded the craft and put her crew under guard. Few hours later the ship began sinking and investigation showed that her seacocks had been opened.

The territorial captain ordered the ship's master on deck and made him tell how to close them. The sinking was stopped, but a short time later fire broke out on the ship. It was extinguished and the captain and crew were marched off to jail.

Mayor and 99 Held As Hostages in Gdynia

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—The Gydnia Mayor was said to have accepted conditions imposed by Gen. Mascus Eberhardt of the German forces, including surrender of 99 hostages, the Mayor among them.

German troops to enter the city, which held out despite encirclement since the early dasy of Germany's drive into Poland, were alleged to have reported finding "a large part of the civilian population was armed."

POPE STILL HOPES FOR EARLY PEACE

Says He Is Watching Every Chance for Settlement.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII told the new Belgian Ambassador to the Holy See today that he would continue to seek every occasion to conclude "a peace honorable to everyone."

The Pontiff declared his intention in replying to Ambassador Adrien Nievenhuys after receiving the latter's credentials.

The Pope said that he had done everything possible to avert war "by negotiation based on justice and love." But now, he said, "the weapons of war drowned out every other sound." Nevertheless, he said, he would "continue to pray to God that He could shorten the trials and show peoples a new way to peace before events degenerate into a worldwide conflagration."

"To this end," the Holy Father said, "we are watching for every opportunity to seek to conclude a peace honorable to everyone."

Until this opportunity should present itself, the Pope said, he would seek to alleviate the grief of war by urging belligerents to observe the international rules of warfare, spare civilian populations, refrain from using poison gas and insure decent treatment and the comfort of religion to all prisoners of war.

Berlin Source Reports Bremen Is at Murmansk

Liner Said to Have Sailed to Soviet Port Through Arctic

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP).—A man with an excellent connection with the German Navy reported today that the liner Bremen, Germany's most costly passenger vessel, had been sailed to Murmansk, Russia.

He said the $20,000,000 ship, after leaving New York without passengers about thirty-six hours before Germany started her campaign in Poland, took the most northerly course possible, entering the Arctic Ocean from the Atlantic and then proceeding to Kola Bay, where Murmansk is situated.

(It was reported without official confirmation in Berlin on Sept. 7 that the Bremen had reached an unidentified neutral port. Several days later Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering said in a radio address that Great Britain's attempt to capture the liner had "missed fire."

(The British Ministry of Information circulated on Wednesday a report, taken from a Netherlands newspaper, that the Bremen had reached an Italian port and become an Italian vessel. This was authoritatively denied at Rome, however.)

Reported at Yucatan Port

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14 (AP).—Passengers and crew of a Pan American Clipper arriving today from Mexico City said there was a widespread rumor in Mexico that the liner Bremen was hiding at Progreso, a remote Mexican port at the northern end of the Yucatan peninsula, on the Gulf of Mexico.

Finland to Substitute Wood Burners for 'Gas'

Fuel Shortage Brings Action to Change All Types of Motors

HELSINGFORS, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Finnish government announced today it was starting the manufacture of woodburners for all types of motors because of a threatened shortage of motor fuel.

Experiments since August with a wood-burning omnibus, it was said, proved that wood gas can be made an efficient and economic substitute for gasoline.

It was asserted that the woodburners can be easily applied to stationary motors and that developments may even permit them to be used on airplanes.

RETURNING TO U. S.

Luise Rainer Will Leave Switzerland Soon.

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 14. (A. P.).—Vladimir Horowitz, son-in-law of Arturo Toscanini, and Luise Rainer, film actress, will join the refugee exodus from Europe.

Mr. Horowitz announced that he would leave tomorrow for Italy to sail on the Italian liner Vulcania for New York. He holds an international refugee passport. His wife, Mr. Toscanini's daughter, left today for Bordeaux where she will talke the United States liner Washington.

Miss Rainer, who has been staying at Lucerne, said she plans to return to the United States on the liner Manhattan from Bordeaux.

Racing in England Abandoned for Year

LONDON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Racing in England, on the flat and over the jumps, was canceled today for the remainder of the year. The race meets, like theaters and other places of entertainment, had been closed temporarily under Great Britain's war time air raid precautions program.

Not a Raid, Just Short Circuit

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP).—An air-raid siren was sounded today at Southend-on-Sea, at the mouth of the Thames, but the Ministry of Information said it was a false larm "due to an electrical defect."

30,24-3325

30 24 — 3325

First Norway Bookings Oct. 17

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Norwegian-American Line announced today no passages to the United States would be available until Oct. 17. Under regulations intended to conserve the food supply, Sweden limits foreigners sailing from there to five days in the country. All immediate passages from Sweden were reported taken.

Paris Paper Publishes First Obituary of War

London 'Times' Reports Death of Two Naval Officers

PARIS, Sept. 14 (AP).—The newspaper "L'Intransigeant" published today the first account of a French soldier's death in the 1939 war. Headlined "Our First Death," the account did not give the soldier's name. He was understood to have been a member of the paper's photographic staff.

5 Reich Universities Will Hold Classes

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Five of Germany's twenty universities—Berlin, Leipzig, Jena, Munich and Vienna—will conduct classes during the winter semester, it was announced today.

The other fifteen, including Heidelberg, Bonn, Freiburg and Goettingen, will remain closed indefinitely.

The five were deemed sufficient to handle the number of students during war time.

Flights Over Canal Zone Under Strict Regulations

Permits Required, Rules Set, Use of Cameras Barred

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP).—President Roosevelt decreed today stringent regulations for aircraft flights over the Panama Canal Zone.

An executive order created the "Canal Zone military airspace reservation," which includes territorial waters within the three-mile limit off both entrances of the waterway.

The order barred all flights unless specifically authorized by either the Civil Aeronautics Authority or the Department of State. It prescribed detailed routes which must be followed, and directed that cameras be sealed. Foreign planes must be escorted by warplanes of the canal garrison.

President Roosevelt put the canal under military rule last week, when the War Department ordered troop reinforcements for the garrison. Maj. Gen. David L. Stone, Army commander, received full authority and already has put guards on all ships making the transit and instituted increased safety measures at such vulnerable points as locks.

South Africa Fight Profiteers

CAPETOWN, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Union of South Africa published emergency regulations against hoarding and profiteering today. The manifesto empowered the government to requisition goods and land, to prohibit meetings and processions, restrict liquor sales and stamp out subversive activities. It provided for safeguarding of jobs of employees enlisting for service and extended the government's powers of search. Profiteering was made punishable by fine or two years' imprisonment.

War Brings New Hair Styles

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP)—The exigencies of war calling for coiffures that can be worn under the uniform caps of the women's auxiliary forces are establishing new styles in dressing here. One style has short curls at the back in Astrakhan effect and inch baby curls in front. Another, called the "terrier," after the Territorial Army, has the back of the head cropped short with the front hair left long and swept up in off the face curls.

87-Year-Old Veteran Totters In To Answer Mobilization Order

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Ministry of Information, under the label of "amusing incident," issued the following story today of an occurrence at the depot of a Lancashire regiment:

"A taxi drove up to the gates and an old gentleman with a row of medals on his chest tottered out.

"He was ushered into the officers' mess and asked to see the commanding officer.

"'Good morning, sir,' said the O. C. 'What can I do for you?'

"'Do?' queried the old gentleman. 'I'm 87 and they've called me up as a reservist! I left the army thirty years ago !You must be hard up for soldiers! I served with your grandfather at Poona in '86.'

"It was later discovered that he had received mobilization papers which should have been sent to his grandson."

WANTS WAR KEPT IN EUROPE

Official Says Cuba Favors Collective Neutrality

Havana, Sept. 14 (AP)—Manuel A. Campa, Secretary of State, said today Cuba would favor any program for keeping the European war "out of American waters." He spoke at a Pan-American peace conference called by Panama.

He said Cuba was for collective neutrality for the western hemisphere and would back measures for "respect for neutral commerce."

Airplanes Carry Polish Refugees To Rumania

Women And Children Warned They Must Leave Country Within 48 Hours

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 14 (AP)—Seven Polish planes landed here today carrying twenty passengers, mostly elderly women and children and including the families of two Polish generals.

The Poles desired to continue their journey by air, but Rumanian authorities declined permission, insisting upon internment of the planes and warning that unless they departed within forty-eight hours it would be necessary to place them in an internment camp.

The refugees were understood to be departing by train for Paris.

SEEKS TO REMOVE GOLD

Polish Minister Tries To Make Arrangements In Poland

Bucharest, Sept. 14 (AP)—Diplomatic circles reported today that Eugene Kwiatkowski, Polish Finance Minister, had arrived here and was negotiating with the Rumanian Government concerning the removal of Poland's gold reserve through Rumanian territory to London.

It was reported here that the gold reserves were hidden at present in a Polish village near the Rumanian border.

ASKS PRISONER EXCHANGE

Germany Is Said to Have Met a Rebuff From Poland

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP)—The German Government asked the Swedish Embassy, which represents Polish interests in Berlin, suggested today the exchange of several thousand German civilians being held in Polish camps for an equal number of Polish war prisoners.

The Polish Government was reported here to have declined.

Grain Exporters Insist On Payment In Gold

Abolishment Of Present Clearing System Asked Of Rumanian National Bank

Bucharest, Sept. 14 (AP)—Grain exporters of Galati and Braila submitted a memorandum today to the Rumanian National Bank asking the present clearing system be abolished.

They said that because of the war, banks are refusing to make advances on shipments to Germany, claiming there is insufficient security on the safe arrival of the goods, and, besides, there might be a depreciation in the value of the German mark.

Exporters are insisting on payment in gold or currency.

NAZIS SEARCH DANISH SHIP

Passenger Steamer Proceeds After Hunt For Contraband

Copenhagen, Sept. 14 (AP)—The Danish passenger steamer Jonsboro, en route from the Danish island of Bornholm to Copenhagen, reported today she was stopped by a German warship but allowed to proceed after a search for contraband. The ship plies between the two points in a ferry-like service.

Spain to Pay Interest on Debt

MADRID, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Bank of Spain announced today that it would begin interest payments tomorrow on the 8,500,000,000 national debt.

Slovakian Government Liberates 23 Magyars

Acts on Appeal of Hungarian Minority Leader

KASSA, Hungary, Sept. 14 (AP).—Through the intervention of Count Jenos Esterhazy, Hungarian minority leader, the Slovak government today liberated twenty-three leading Magyars arrested last week. Many others remain in the Illavia prison.

The Slovak government is reported here to have established a concentration camp for Jews at Podolin where hundreds already are housed.

Slovak authorities have been reported confiscating radio sets owned by persons alleged to have listened to programs from "hostile" countries.

Slovakia, occupied by German troops, has declared herself at war with Poland.

Berlin Bans Taxis

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—All the taxicabs were removed from service today as a gasoline conservation measure. With omnibus and street car service already curtailed, night transportation became a tough problem.

CZECHS HONOR MASARYK

More Than 2,000 Make Pilgrimage To His Tomb

Prague, Sept. 14 (AP)—More than 2,000 Czechs made a pilgrimage today to the grave of Thomas Masaryk, first President of Germany's Czecho-Slovak Republic, on the second anniversary of his death.

Dr. Emil Hacha, President of Bohemia and Moravia, placed a wreath on the grave in the name of the National Unity party, the only legal political group in the protectorate.

France Fights Profiteers With Taxes Up to 100%

Only Exporters Are Exempted From Strict Limit on Gains

PARIS, Sept. 14 (AP).—The French government announced tonight that it would levy taxes as high as 100 per cent on business gains to prevent war profiteering.

A decree which appeared in the official journal today applied to virtually all businesses in France the same standard regulations invoked previously against firms working for national defense.

Semi-official sources frankly explained that the decree was designed to prevent private individuals from taking advantage of supply shortages and transportation difficulties to "roll up scandalous profits like those made in the last war."

The decree permits the head of a business—an individual or stockholders—to take out only "normal remuneration for service." On profits above that a heavy sliding-scale excess profits tax goes in force which may reach 100 per cent.

Only exporters are exempt. It was explained that everything would be done to stimulate exports, as by that means France hopes to pile up credits abroad with which to import necessities for national defense without sacrificing war gold reserves.

London Mothers Warned Not to Let Children Return

Air Raids May Yet Become 'Grim Reality,' Says Official

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP).—Earl De La Warr, president of the Board of Education, defending removal of children from danger areas, asserted in a broadcast tonight "the time may come when air raids are a grim reality."

"Don't take your children back just because nothing has happened during the first few days of the war," De La Warr told mothers.

Some of those removed have been drifting back to their homes, their fears allayed by London's freedom from air raids so far.

Denmark Bars Foreign Actors

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14 (AP).—Denmark moved today to [illegible] room and board. Part-owners of [illegible] retaining from other countries because of war. No foreign entertainers [illegible] to hold jobs after Oct. 1st, it announced. Artists already here will be permitted to remain six months.

Zog Leaves London for France

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Former King Zog of Albania, who came to London Sunday, returned today to France.

War Reported Stopping Nazi Strife With Church

Confessional Synod Says Both Sides Seek National Unity

BERLIN, Sept. 14 (AP).—The war has quieted Nazi strife with the church. Protestant Confessional [illegible] quarters said today. Anti-church agitation has ceased, according to these sources, and church authorities are striving to eliminate it completely for the sake of national unity.

Politics in sermons were now excluded, it was said, and most sermons were built on the theme that the war was the "punishment of God for falling away from Christ."

Confesional church sources said that services, despite the war, were "only slightly better attended" than in peace time, contrasted with 1914 when churches were overfilled. This was attributed by these sources to government anti-church activity. War prayer hours have been gradually introduced.

Great numbers of evangelical ministers either are fighting in the war or have been mustered for service.

Visas Needed By Aliens Going To British Areas

Can Only Be Issued In Four Cities Of United States, Embassy Announced

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—The British Embassy announced today that "all aliens traveling to British colonies, protectorates and mandated territories, as well as to India, Burma, Southern Rhodesia and Newfoundland, now require visas."

Applications for these, it was explained, may be filed with any British consul but visas can be issued only by the British passport control officer in New York or British consuls general at Boston, Chicago and San Francisco.

Recognize German Rule

Rome, Sept. 14 (AP)—Formal recognition of German sovereignty over Czechoslovakia appeared today with publication of a royal decree eliminating the Italian Legation in Prague. A consulate general was established to replace the legation.

Stale Bread For Greeks

Athens, Sept. 14 (AP) — Greece banned fresh bread today as a food conservation measure. Officials decided the citizenry would eat less if it had only stale bread.

Meanwhile, Government officers and police started searching homes for hoarded foodstuffs. Quantities in excess of wartime limits are to be seized and owners prosecuted.

Duke of Windsor Calls on King.

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor, who abdicated the throne nearly three years ago, spent half an hour with his brother, King George VI, today. It was their first meeting since the former King left the country.

The Duke, who returned to England to aid his country, called earlier in the day on Sir Philip Game, Commissioner of Police, at Scotland Yard. What war-time assignment the Duke will be given has not been disclosed. Some have said he might serve as a soldier.

Envoy's Son Starts for U. S.

LONDON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., eldest son of the American Ambassador, left London today for the United States. He will resume his studies at Harvard Law School this fall.

SEP 15 1939

Germans to Pay Indemnity.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The German envoy to The Hague, Count Zech von Burkersroda, told Netherlands Foreign Minister Eelco N. Van Kleffens today the German Government would pay indemnity for a Netherlands naval plane shot down off the North Sea coast. Berlin accounts of the shooting said it was a case of mistaken identity. The flyers were rescued by a German war plane and landed at the German island of Norderney.

SEP 15 1939

Argentina Curbs Food Prices.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Agriculture fixed maximum prices today on essential foodstuffs in a move to block war-time profiteering. A ceiling was placed on prices for milk, butter, bread, meat potatoes, fish and sugar to hold them at approximately the level of August 1 to 15.

SEP 15 1939

C39 (REU HVS DNB OUT)

MADRID, SEPT 14-(AP)-THE MADRID PUBLIC SCHOOLS WILL REOPEN TOMORROW FOR FULL-TIME OPERATION.

SOME 200,000 CHILDREN ATTEND SCHOOL IN MADRID AND ABOUT 2,125,000 THROUGHOUT THE NATION.

ALL GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS ARE EXPECTED TO BE IN OPERATION HERE ON SEPT.20. THE OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT BULLETIN WILL BE PUBLISHED IN MADRID STARTING TOMORROW.

SEP 15 1939

P720PED

BRUSSELS, SEPT.14-(AP)-REPORTS REACHING HERE SAID THE FRENCH FORCES LATE TODAY PASSED THE MOSELLE RIVER CLOSE TO THE LUXEMBOURG FRONTIER NORTH OF SIERCK, USING TANKS IN ATTACKING THE GERMAN FORTIFICATIONS OPPOSITE LUXEMBOURG TERRITORY.

SEP 15 1939

HEAVY MACHINE GUN FIRE WAS SAID TO BE ACCOMPANYING THE FRENCH ADVANCE.

COPENHAGEN, SEPT 14-(AP)-THE WAR WAS FRUGAL DANISH HOUSEWIVES FRETTING. WITH THE HEAVIEST FRUIT HARVEST IN RECENT YEARS, IMPORT RESTRICTIONS MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE TO OBTAIN ENOUGH SUGAR FOR MAKING PRESERVES. MUCH OF THE FRUIT IS ROTTING.

-0-

BRITISH SENT ARMY BY NIGHT

Transfer of Force to France Is Called a Triumph

SEP 15 1939

SEP 18 1939

EVERY MOVE WAS PLANNED

Divisions 50 Miles Long Even Marched to Ships After Dark.

SEP 15 1939

LONDON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The movement of the British Expeditionary Force to France was described by the military correspondent of the Yorkshire Post as a "triumph of [illegible] organization."

"The provision of vessels was the great problem with a modern army which is thirty times heavier in bulk weight, owing to mechanization," the correspondent wrote.

"Here the shipping companies and the mercantile marine played their part by dismantling their ships' hold to take the giant machines."

"German calculations up to a year ago were that even if the short Channel crossing might not be preventable, it was possible to make long sea transportation a dangerous hazard and that submarines and aircraft could prevent the overseas possessions from being re-enforced with speed," he added.

"We countered that by placing our overseas forces in accessible positions during the months of peace and so limited transportation to the troops destined for France."

Reservoir in India.

This was an obvious reference to official announcements of last August to the effect that the British, using India as a reservoir for men, had made certain dispositions of re-enforcements for Singapore and Egypt.

Returning to the subject of the movement of the expeditionary force to France, the correspondent continued:

"As far as is known, the enemy gleaned no knowledge of the long columns that passed in recent nights through the dark country lanes to British harbors. As the heavy columns arrived . . . dockers made short work of stowing armored fighting vehicles on shipboard. Steam was up and the ships were quickly away, shadowed by the escorts of the Royal Navy.

"Brigade after brigade, division after division, were thus transported. The work went on and some idea of the enormous nature of the task may be gathered from the fact that a division with its vehicles [illegible] single road stretches for [illegible] miles."

SEP 15 1939

One correspondent at a seaport in the south of England estimated that at one time three trains arrived every hour day and night from the interior of England for the dispatch of those troops which did not come to the embarkation point overland.

The Greenwood Speech.

The Manchester Guardian today gave conspicuous attention to the problem of adequate munitions for Great Britain's war effort.

The London News Chronicle in a boldface front-page box displayed the attack on war profiteering made in the House of Commons by Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the Labor party, and his expressed fear of a "crisis like the shell shortage of the last war."

Munitions Supply.

Both of these newspapers and the Laborite London Daily Herald reemphasized the main points of the Greenwood speech: That the expansion of industrial [illegible] for war purposes is "the most gigantic problems this country has ever faced"; that the coordinating Ministry of Supply is twelve months behind with its census of machinery and "I have a feeling that it [the industrial problem] is not being faced with vigor"; that the Minister of Supply, Leslie Burgin, would make a great mistake if he did not consult the trade unions in pursuing the desired industrial expansion as to hours and conditions of work, and that the trade union movement "has got to come in on the ground floor. It cannot be treated as a poor relation in the discussion of these problems. It is an equal."

SEP 15 1939

The Manchester Guardian said editorially: "One point that must have occurred to anyone who reads Mr. Chamberlain's two 'Progress Reports' is the absence of any reference to the supply of munitions.

"It was a remarkable omission. It is true that Mr. Burgin permitted himself to say in reply to a question yesterday that all firms on munitions have been asked 'to proceed on the basis of the utilization of full capacity' (one would think so, indeed!), but it may be gravely wondered whether the Government has yet realized the extent to which our whole industrial life must be transformed if we are to overcome Germany's totalitarian organization for w[illegible]

SEP 15 1939

"Mr. Greenwood's warning was none too strong. We have hardly made a beginning in the mobilization of our engineering reserves or in the planning of our labor resources to meet the indefinite increases of production that a long war involves. And the Government gives no lead."

HOW AVERAGE LONDONER LIVES

Train and Bus Schedules Are Out of Joint.

BEEF IS GETTING SCARCE

Office Buildings Are Piled High With Sandbags.

SEP 15 1939

LONDON, Sept. [illegible] (A. P.).—Life wartime in London, and day by day the number of Government controls is growing, while the long arm of Whitehall reaches into the simplest homes as Great Britain arrays her food, gasoline and a score of other necessities for war. Here is an average day in the life of an average Londoner:

He gets up early, mainly because the nightly blackout sends him to bed early. He sees his children off to school before he leaves for work, their gas masks slung over their shoulders. He lives in the suburbs and so his wife used to drive him to the train in their tiny car each morning. Gasoline rationing has not started yet, but even so they aren't using their car. "Gas," about forty cents a gallon in peace time, will be even higher in war time.

30.24-3327

30 24—3327

So the average Londoner walks to the train, his gas mask bumping against his hip. The train service, once the pride of loyal suburbanites, is uncertain. He waits thirteen minutes for the 8:25.

In town, he walks from the station to the office. He used to take a bus or the subway. But now the service is restricted.

At the Office.

His business day isn't the same either. He's an air raid warden for his building, and he has to attend a conference with other wardens in the vicinity.

Even the building has changed. Sandbags are piled up to the second story and the windows are covered with cellophane or crisscrossed with tape to prevent shattering.

This average man used to get a big luncheon each day at a Strand restaurant. The retail price is the same, but restaurateurs, buying wholesale now have to pay 10 per cent more. The luncheon is light.

Most of the beef is going to the army and so our average Londoner compromises on salmon.

"Salmon is up, too. We haven't been able to buy any," says the waiter.

The order is changed to [illegible] omelet.

Blackout Continues.

When the Londoner gets home his wife is putting curtains over the windows for the blackout. It's an expensive job. Ten yards of the black cloth costs the equivalent of $3.

While his wife prepares supper our Londoner works in the garden. His evening newspaper tells him, "Dig for victory!" He dutifully plants vegetables in his handkerchief-sized plot.

He comes in to dinner. No beef. His wife found she had to order it before 9 o'clock in the morning and didn't make it. She goes down the list. Tongue is up. Ham is up. Eggs are up. The grocer says it isn't his fault. He has to pay more, too.

Our man sits up after his wife has gone to bed and figures things out: Food costs more, gas mask containers for four cost a bit, new winter clothes for the wife and children, more materials to black out his little house so that the aid raid warden won't find cause for complaint—or a stiff fine.

Moreover our Londoner may soon be called to the colors.

He looks out at the searchlights stabbing the sky and then goes to bed—in the dark.

LINER ATHENIA'S SURVIVORS PART

200 to Go to Their Homes From Halifax.

MISSING AMERICANS LISTED

Kennedy Reports Washington May Identify 30 by Name.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 14 (A. P.).—With vivid memories of narrow escapes at sea still fresh in their minds, more than 200 survivors of the British liner Athenia, brought here yesterday by the American freighter City of Flint, scattered joyfully toward their homes today.

Ill-clad and [illegible]ed, some survivors left this Canadian port by train, some by train, and others by plane and automobile. Some re-boarded the City of Flint for a forty-eight-hour run to New York at 8:30 P. M. New York time yesterday. One man sped toward New York on a Coast Guard cutter to keep a speaking engagement.

Tales of hysteria were set off by stories of high courage as the survivors, many of them Americans, reached port on the crowded freighter.

Almost all of those interviewed were certain the Athenia had been torpedoed. Miss Mary Katherine Underwood of Athens, Tex., said "we almost hit the submarine" which sent the torpedo crashing into the liner's vitals only a few hours after Britain and France entered the European war.

Three survivors, Adolph John Leocha of Claremont, N. H., and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Pringle of Lawrence, Mass., even contended the Athenia had been attacked by two submarines.

Other survivors told of long hours in lifeboats before being picked up and stood on the dock and in the improvised hospital in makeshift clothing to tell of countless nightmarish events of the long hours on the open sea.

To Identify Americans.

LONDON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy said today the list of "Americans known missing," now placed at thirty by London shipping circles, in the sinking of the liner Athenia probably would be issued from Washington.

The London shipping figure was considerably higher than first estimates. (The last report of the total number missing was 128 Americans and foreigners. This was given on September 7.)

Mr. Kennedy said a rigidly checked list of those proved to be on the sailing list and not on any survivors list already had been sent to Washington.

"I think the list will be released there," he said. "After all, the City of Flint landed over there and they have the means to make a final check of her survivors."

The City of Flint is [illegible] several rescue ships picking up survivors of the disaster. It landed at Halifax yesterday.

Mr. Kennedy emphasized difficulties of checking passenger and survivor lists and said "about eight or ten names still are doubtful."

The American steamship Orizaba was to pick up Athenia survivors for return to America, Mr. Kennedy said, adding:

"But according to our latest information she has not yet sailed. We were promised five ships, but as far as I can learn none of them has sailed yet."

000 ARRIVE IN TWO WEEKS FROM EUROPE

Facilities Ready For More To Come To U. S. In Next Seven Days

One Ship Is Due in England Soon To Pick Up Survivors Of Athenia

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 14—The State Department estimated today that over 20,000 Americans returned to the United States from war-stricken Europe in the two weeks ended September 7.

Officials said 9,900 passengers were known to have arrived at Atlantic ports during the week ended September 7. In addition, two ships of foreign registry, with an unreported passenger list, but having a total capacity of 2,350 passengers, arrived in New York. The department assumed, therefore, that the total was at least 12,000.

10,500 In Previous Week

In the preceding week, 9,300 passengers arrived from Europe at Atlantic ports and 1,200 at Canadian ports.

"Additional facilities for the transportation next week (week ending September 23) of a greater number of passengers will be available," the department said.

It made no estimate of how many Americans still were in Europe and wished to return.

Every operator of a freight steamer carrying the American flag has been requested to make his vessels available to American citizens at any port of call in Europe, and American consular officials have been authorized to issue emergency certificates enabling such ships to carry extra passengers.

To Get Athenia Survivors

The department said the Orizaba, especially chartered to bring Americans home from Europe, was due shortly at an English port and would pick up survivors of the Athenia, sunk while en route from Glasgow to New York. Another specially chartered vessel, the Shawnee, has sailed for a French port, and three other passenger vessels recently chartered are about to sail. The five ships have a combined passenger capacity of 3,520.

"Certain neutral flag ships are resuming their services," the department said, "and affording accommodations to the United States. It is understood that Netherlands ports and the Mediterranean area, in particular, are covered by these neutral services.

"In addition to the special ship facilities which have been arranged, the regular North Atlantic passenger ships of United States registry are continuing to make quick passages to and from Europe, and quick turn-arounds."

Aquitania Is Expected To Arrive Today With 1,633

New York, Sept. 14 (A)—Britain's big four-stacker liner Aquitania, carrying 1,633 passengers from war areas, apparently was approaching New York tonight after a dash across the submarine-stalked Atlantic.

Although the Cunard-White Star Line declined to disclose the exact arrival time, it was indicated the ship would dock tomorrow morning.

The Aquitania was the only ship of a belligerent nation expected to bring American passengers home during the twenty-four-hour period ending tomorrow morning.

Radio Silenced

She was in a blackout with radio silenced and exact position undisclosed. Whether she was being convoyed was not [illegible].

The Italian liner [illegible] is scheduled to arrive Saturday with 1,431 Americans among her 1,779 passengers. She sailed from Genoa and Naples, on the first westbound voyage of an Italian ship since war was declared.

The United States liners American Traveller and American Trader will sail tomorrow afternoon to remove Americans from Europe.

REICH ATTACK CENTERED NEAR BRITISH ISLES

Total Tonnage Sunk Hits 144,645, Plus Cargo Worth Millions

Tanker and Motor Freighter Are Destroyed By Nazi Torpedoes

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 14 — Germany's submarines, apparently concentrating their attack around the British Isles, struck twice at English merchantmen today, raising the known count of British losses to eighteen.

Known German losses since the war began amounted to nine, but only three were attributed to attacks by British ships. Three struck mines and three ran aground in Norway after changing courses to avoid mines and enemy warships.

Total gross tonnage lost mounted to at least 144,645, excluding cargo worth several millions of dollars. An unidentified German destroyer was also excluded from the tonnage recapitulation.

32 Ships Sunk In War

The total number of ships lost in the war so far reached thirty-two, including one French and four neutrals.

Latest victims of Nazi subs were the British Influence, a tanker built this year for the English-Arabian oil trade, and the British motor freighter Vancouver City, employed in the South Pacific-Eng[illegible] trade and owned by the Reardo[illegible] Line.

The 4,955-ton Vancouver City was torpedoed off the south coast of Ireland and her crew rescued by an unnamed Dutch tanker with the assistance of planes, according to a message from the United States liner President Roosevelt, which had been steaming to the rescue.

Off Coast Of Ireland

The 8,431-ton British Influence, owned by the British Tanker Company, Ltd., of London, was sunk about 300 miles off the coast of Ireland. Her crew was rescued by the Norwegian freighter Ida Bakke, the United States liner Manhattan reported.

Sea warfare was causing serious delay in the return of Americans from Europe. The Holland America Line announced that 1,700 Americans at Rotterdam and Antwerp would be delayed in sailing for home because the British held the liners Nieuw Amsterdam and Pennland for a contraband search.

The Norwegian American Line announced in Norway that all passenger space had been sold up to October 17. The United States Maritime Commission planned to relieve the situation by sending additional American ships to Europe.

U. S. Ships Are Mercy Craft

Ships of the United States lines, meanwhile, were rapidly becoming the "mercy" ships of the sea. The American Shipper rescued the crew of thirty-two of the British freighter Blairlogie September 11, and the Washington saved thirty-three from the British Olivegrove when she sank after being torpedoed September 7.

Reports of German submarines in the vicinity of St. John, N. B., Canada, continued to pour in. A radio warning was dispatched from St. John today advising ships to proceed with caution in the Bay of Fundy.

Navy Settles Question Of "Belligerent" Plane

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—Charles Edison, Acting Secretary, said today that the navy investigated a report that a belligerent tri-motor airplane had been seen in American waters and "found it had a right to be there."

Edison said the Atlantic Coast patrol established last week to safeguard American neutrality was "taking very seriously" all reports from fishermen or other sources.

Fishermen Saw Plane

A Navy Department spokesman said the plane to which Edison referred was one reported sighted by fishermen approximately 190 miles off Boston on Wednesday.

The fishermen related that they had seen the airplane flying over the same general [illegible] and identified submarines [illegible] reported in operation. No statement about submarine operation was made by the Navy Department nor was there any further detail on the nature of the plane's activities.

No details as to the location or identity of the plane were given.

Edison made the disclosure at a press conference at which he said the navy would put more emphasis on research.

Bowen Appointed

He announced appointment of Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, until recently the navy's engineer-in-chief, as director of the Bellevue Naval Research Laboratory here.

Work is being speeded to the utmost, he said, in reconditioning old destroyers to be added to the coastal patrol. The construction of new ships has been so accelerated that in some cases six months have been cut from the time required to complete destroyers, he added.

U. S. TO STAND ON ALL RIGHTS AS A NEUTRAL

Government Serves Notice in Formal Statement to Warring Nations.

HULL OUTLINES POSITION

Says Restrictions on Nationals Do Not Modify Principles of International Law.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (A. P.).—The American Government served notice on the warring nations today that it reserves all rights of the United States and its nationals under international law and will take appropriate measures when these rights are violated.

Secretary Hull issued a formal statement declaring: "The Government of the United States has not abandoned any of its rights as a neutral under international law."

He detailed the various steps taken through American legislation such as restriction of travel on belligerent vessels, loans and credits to belligerents, but said:

"These restrictive measures do not and cannot constitute a modification of the principles of international law but rather they require nationals of the United States to forgo, until the Congress shall decide otherwise, the exercise of certain rights under those principles."

Secretary Hull's Statement.

The text of Mr. Hull's statement follows:

The Government of the United States has not abandoned any of its rights as a neutral under international law.

It has, however, for the time being prescribed, by domestic legislation, certain restrictions for its nationals which have the effect of requiring them to refrain from the exercise of privileges which but for such legislation they would have the right to exercise under international law, such as the right to travel on belligerent vessels, to make loans and extend credits to belligerent governments, &c.

These restrictive measures do not and cannot constitute a modification of the principles of international law, but rather they require nationals of the United States to forego, until the Congress shall decide otherwise, the exercise of certain rights under those principles. Furthermore, this Government gives the widest possible notice to American shipping regarding danger areas as the information is acquired by it. This Government also warns American nationals and American shipping against actual danger in any other respect as situations involving such danger are brought to its attention, whether those situations result from lawful or unlawful activities of the belligerents. It endeavors to exercise all due diligence in the protection of American lives and property and of course must expect American nationals likewise to exercise due diligence in keeping clear of danger—actual or potential.

In the letters which I addressed to Senator Pittman and Representative Bloom on May 27, 1939, I stated the situation as follows:

". . . The rights of our nationals under international law may properly be restricted by our own legislation along certain lines for the purpose of avoiding incidents which might involve us in a conflict. In indicating certain restrictions upon the exercise of our rights as a neutral, I do not wish to be considered as advocating the abandonment of these, or indeed of any, neutral rights; but there is reasonable ground for restricting at this time the exercise of these rights."

The principles of international law as regards neutrals and belligerents have been evolved through the centuries. While belligerents have frequently departed from these principles on one pretext or another, and have endeavored to justify their action on various grounds, the principles still subsist.

This Government, adhering as it does to these principles, reserves all rights of the United States and its nationals under international law and will adopt such measures as may seem most practical and prudent when those rights are violated by any of the belligerents.

Stopping of Ships Not Unusual.

Before issuing the statement Secretary Hull said he saw nothing seriously unusual in the recent stopping of American ships by belligerents on both sides.

These incidents, he said, did not signify anything unusual under international law, at least not to any serious extent so far as he was advised.

The full facts are being assembled with regard to these incidents in cases that might call for action, he reported.

Recalling that one vessel which was run into port by the British—the Wacosta—had been released, he commented that some cases adjust themselves if given time.

ENGLAND TO SEND WAR-BUYING GROUP

Commission Likely To Set Up Headquarters In Canada, Branches In U. S.

Morgan Firm Not To Be Asked To Serve In Similar Capacity This Time

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 14—Authoritative banking sources here with English connections said today it was understood the British Government will shortly send a British war-supplies purchasing commission.

The commission, it was reported, would establish headquarters in Canada. Subsequently, perhaps depending on domestic political developments, it might establish branch offices in New York and Washington.

All To Be British Subjects

All the members of the commission will be British subjects, it was said.

Later, it was suggested a similar commission would be sent to Canada by the French Government.

In the World War, J. P. Morgan & Co. acted as purchasing agent of American-made war supplies for both the British and French governments from early in 1915 until the end of the war. Orders exceeding a total of $3,000,000,000 cleared through the Morgan banking house. Subsequently Morgan partners were questioned by Congressional committee members about their wartime activities.

The Morgan firm, it was said, does not expect to act in a similar capacity in this war.

Not Asked To Do So

It has not been asked to do so, and has not solicited such an appointment, it was said. Moreover, it was understood to be the firm's attitude that it would be much better for English and French war orders to be placed by commissions consisting of nationals of those countries.

However, it was considered possible that a member of the British commission in Canada might possibly be Lord Catto, a director of Morgan, Grenfell & Co. J. P. Morgan, senior partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., is a director of Morgan, Grenfell & Co., London affiliate of the New York banking house.

During the last war Lord Catto had a British post of responsibility in this country supervising British purchases of wartime food supplies.

Text of Hull Statement

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP).—The text of the statement on United States neutrality made today by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, follows:

The government of the United States has not abandoned any of its rights as a neutral under international law.

It has, however, for the time being, prescribed, by domestic legislation, certain restrictions for its nationals which have the effect of requiring them to refrain from the exercise of privileges which but for such legislation they would have the right to exercise under international law, such as the right to travel on belligerent vessels, to make loans and extend credits to belligerent governments, et cetera.

These restrictive measures do and can not constitute a modification of the principles of international law, but rather they require nationals of the United States to forego, until the Congress shall decide otherwise, the exercise of certain rights under those principles. Furthermore, this government gives the widest possible notice to American shipping regarding danger areas as the information is acquired by it. This government also warns American nationals and American shipping against actual danger in any other respect as situations involving such danger are brought to its attention, whether those situations result from lawful or unlawful activities of the belligerents. It endeavors to exercise all due diligence in the protection of American lives and property and, of course, must expect American nationals likewise to exercise due diligence in keeping clear of danger—actual or potential.

In the letters which I addressed to Senator Pittman and Representative Bloom on May 27, 1939, I stated the situation as follows:

". . . The rights of our nationals under international law may properly be restricted by our own legislation along certain lines for the purpose of avoiding incidents which might involve us in a conflict. In indicating certain restrictions upon the exercise of our rights as a neutral I do not wish to be considered as advocating the abandonment of these, or indeed of any, neutral rights; but there is reasonable ground for restricting at this time the exercise of these rights."

The principles of international law as regards neutrals and belligerents have been evolved through the centuries. While belligerents have frequently departed from these principles on one pretext or another, and have endeavored to justify their action on various grounds, the principles still subsist.

This government, adhering as it does to these principles, reserves all rights of the United States and its nationals under international law and will adopt such measures as may seem most practical and prudent when those rights are violated by any of the belligerents.

SIEGFRIED LINE NO NEW PUZZLE

Parallels Are Drawn With the Hindenburg.

TACTICS FROM WORLD WAR

Long Artillery Fire Prelude to St. Quentin Victory.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (A. P.) Barbed wire generals who ask if the German West Wall can be broken will find material to carry on the discussion in the fate of the Hindenburg Line during the world war.

The Hindenburg Line was smashed and the tactics used in piercing it provided a lesson for the allied commanders of the present day.

There are similarities between the fortifications. Both were built to take advantage of protective terrain—rivers, ravines, hills and woods—and both were designed as a series of positions rather than as a solid, straight line. Of the two, the West Wall is wider, stretching back twenty-five miles in some spots.

Hastily built under war conditions, the Hindenburg Line had less concrete to bulwark its ramparts than has the West Wall. Rather than nearly impregnable underground passages, it had open trenches to connect most of its pill boxes, dugouts, gun emplacements and outposts.

On one sector, though, the Hindenburg Line resembles the Siegfried Line more closely.

St. Quentin Canal Tunnel.

In the St. Quentin Canal tunnel between Bellicourt and Bony, the Germans installed barracks and storehouses. Chambers in the walls were equipped as kitchens, offices, dressing stations and stables and barges stranded in the dry canal were used for barracks.

In that tunnel, nearly four miles long, German soldiers were safe from the heaviest bombardment, with electric lights, heat and artificial ventilation.

Underground passages led to the defenses above, just as in the West Wall. In front of the tunnel were two trench systems connected by communicating trenches and guarded by barbed wire.

In middle September, 1918, the British began to attack the outpost zone, just as the French have been feeling out West Wall advance positions recently. The Thirtieth and Twenty-seventh American divisions were with the British, and an idea of the tediousness of the preparations is given by the fact that a 300-yard gain by the Thirtieth was considered vital.

Two Days of Artillery Fire.

Preparations for the big attack, British artillery pounded for two days against the German defenses. Then, on the misty morning of September 29, the Americans jumped off behind a heavy rolling barrage, accompanied by tanks.

In the fog, they pushed across the Hindenburg Line, captured Bellicourt, and closed the mouth of the tunnel. Behind them, though, hidden Germans spewed from the underground passages to re-man machine gun nests.

Only by extreme daring, for which several soldiers later were decorated, was the area cleared. The effort cost the 107th Infantry regiment 337 men killed and 658 wounded, the heaviest loss on a single day for any American regiment.

That was the expensive way the 1918 counterpart of the West Wall was broken.

HERE IS BRITISH WAR LEAFLET

Copy of the Propaganda Dropped Over Germany.

NY SUN

IT CHARGES HITLER LIED

Tells Germans Nazis Have Led Them Blindly to Catastrophe.

SEP 15 1939

In response to many requests from readers, The Sun is reprinting the text of the propaganda leaflet which the British Royal Air Force has been dropping over Germany. It follows:

A WARNING

Great Britain to the German People:

With cold deliberation the Government of the Reich has forced Great Britain into war. The Reich Government knew quite well that the consequences of its action would mean a greater catastrophe for mankind than 1914 did. In April the Chancellor of the Reich assured you and the rest of the world of his peaceful intentions; this assurance proved to be just as worthless as his announcement in September of last year in the Sportpalast:

"We have no further territorial demands in Europe."

Never before did a Government send its subjects to their deaths under weaker pretenses. This war is entirely unnecessary. From no quarter were either German territory or German rights threatened. Nobody stood in the way of the reoccupation of the Rhineland, of the consummation of Anschluss (with Austria) and the bloodless incorporation of the Sudeten into the Reich. Neither we nor any other country ever tried to place any obstacles against the expansion of the Reich—as long as such actions did not threaten the independence of non-German people.

All aspirations of Germany—as long as they were just to [illegible] received [illegible] deliberation.

President Roosevelt offered you peace with honor as well as prospects for your material welfare. Instead your Government has condemned you to mass murder, misery and the privations of a war that you cannot even hope to win. They (your Government) have not deceived us but you. For years an iron censorship has kept from you truths which are known even to uncivilized people. This censorship holds the spirit of the German people imprisoned in a concentration camp.

How otherwise could they (your Government) dare to represent the co-operation of peace-loving peoples for the preservation of peace as hostile encirclement? We hold no enmity for you, the German people.

The Nazi censorship has kept from you the fact that you have not the material means to hold out in a long war. Despite oppressive taxes you are on the brink of bankruptcy. We and our allies have at our command incalculable reserve in man power.

30.24-3329

armaments and supplies. We are too strong to be beaten by blows and can fight you without quarter to the point of complete exhaustion.

You, the German people, have the right to insist upon peace now and at all times. We, too, wish for peace and are ready to make it with your honestly peaceful German Government.

through in good faith upon the part of the government and with effectiveness upon the part of the people, will not only shelter our homes from mass murder, our people from poverty and premature graves, but will also go far toward guaranteeing anew the blessing of free institutions.

It is an effort worthy of a great and free people.

European system. But Washington said we will be neutral as to these European conflicts. And, had he not so declared and made good, does any one doubt the devastating effect upon freedom, upon liberty, upon this republic?

Therefore, I repeat, if we have no alternative, if it is in effect declared, after these

Text of Senator Borah's Neutrality Speech

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP).—The text of Senator William E. Borah's radio address tonight on neutrality follows:

Ladies and gentlemen:

Europe is again in the midst of war. The President of the United States has issued proclamations to the effect that in this war this nation shall stand neutral. But we all realize that laws and statutes and proclamations are not, and will not, be sufficient to maintain successfully a policy of neutrality. Only the united will of the people can accomplish this difficult task.

It is highly proper, therefore, that we openly and frankly discuss all phases of this question, which bears, and will bear, so heavily upon the great body of the people. I want to associate myself tonight with [illegible] who believe [illegible] can and ought to remain [illegible]. I want to resolve, with you, that we will in good faith put forth our best thoughts and our best efforts to accomplish that great aim.

If we can succeed as a people, especially in the midst of conditions such as they now are, in establishing here upon this western continent a great neutral power, a power standing not for force, not for cruelty and injustice, but for peace, for fair dealing among nations, for reason and justice, we will not only have added honor to our own nation, happiness to our own people, but we will have rendered to all nations and all peoples a service far greater than it will ever be possible for us to render by joining any nation, or nations, in carrying on war.

Force is gradually undermining and destroying freedom everywhere. If we are not going to wholly surrender to a world governed by force, then we must establish somewhere a great power which speaks for, and represents in act and deed, the things which make for reason and justice. Whatever may be the discouragements and however great may be the obstacles thrown in our way, let us make the effort, let us unite behind a policy which, if carried

Is Europe Near?

We are set on the threshold of all debate, of all consideration, of this subject of neutrality with the statement often delivered and with an air of finality that we cannot be neutral, that Europe is now so near to the United States, owing to modern inventions and the mingling of business affairs, that neutrality is impracticable, if not impossible. This seems to me a spineless doctrine.

It is not the doctrine inherited from our forebears. If true, we would be the most ill-fated nation on the earth instead of being, as we had long supposed, the most favorably circumstanced of any, or all, nations.

How near was Europe smotheringly near when the European system [illegible] Washington announced his policy of neutrality and published it to an astonished and enraged Europe? He thought neutrality both wise and practicable, in fact, he believed that such a policy was indispensable to a free America. Yes, how close was Europe to the United States at that time?

The United States was really looked upon by European powers as a part of the European system. Brazil at that time belonged to Portugal. Practically, if not all, the balance of South America was owned, or controlled, by the Spanish crown. The West Indies belonged to England, France and Spain combined. European countries owned, or controlled, Central America, Mexico, also what was later known as Texas, Arizona, California, Florida, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Alaska. In fact, this continent might be said to have been at this time geographically a European-controlled continent. Our entire northern frontier was heavily garrisoned by European regulars. The Indians were being used by European powers to harass our people and all Europe mocked at the idea that this young republic would long remain an independent government.

We were in actual contact, physical, political and spiritual—if I may use such a term in this connection—every day of our lives with Europe, and affected likewise daily by the domination of the one hundred fifty years of self-government, we must go in some way or other into all these controversies, broils and wars of Europe. It is useless, we are told, to try to avoid this fate.

Though these wars are not our wars, though they are wars brought on through the manipulation and unconscionable schemes of remorseless rulers, though their national policies are not our policies, though their crimes are not our crimes, still, we have no alternative, so it is urged, but to sacrifice the wealth, the homes, the savings, and the lives of our own people whenever the conflicts arise.

Although our people have sought peace and now seek peace, still we must make war because European governments maintain an eternal saturnalia of human sacrifices. Though the law of our land banishes racial and religious persecution from our common country, still, because Europe is "near," we must join in the racial and religious conflicts and sacrifice our people over conditions which our forebears long since rejected. Though we seek no people's territory, nevertheless, because Europe is "near," we must sacrifice the savings of our people and the sons of our mothers in this endless imperialistic strife. Though we would take no part of the loot which was divided up at the close of the World War, we are now [illegible]led upon to make sure the title [illegible] a cast amount of this loot. What fateful doctrine to propose! Let us renounce it and make the effort at least to establish freedom from the European system.

But friends, the problem of maintaining neutrality under present conditions lies closer home. Let's go direct to its discussion. It is presented by this proposal to repeal the arms embargo act. To those who are advocating repeal, I submit this question: Is it not your main purpose in securing repeal to enable us to furnish arms, munitions and implements of war to one group of nations and to deny them to another group of nations, which groups are now in mortal combat? Is not this laying the foundation for intervention—in fact, is it not intervention—in the present European war? Is it not your purpose to take sides through the authority which will be available when the embargo law is repealed?

And if the purpose of repeal is to do these things, and we do them, is not neutrality broken down, destroyed, and are we not thenceforth by every rule of international law, by every dictate of common sense and common honesty, parties to a European conflict? I further submit to those who hear me: Do you think the time has come when for reasons of humanity, or of national defense, we should take our place in another European war?

I feel we are really considering in this debate the broad question of whether we are justified as a people in intervening in this conflict and meet the issues as they [illegible] on the battlefields of Europe, for we cannot escape that destination if we move along the lines now proposed.

Act Is Two Years Old

Let me review a brief and recent piece of history. Four years ago there began an earnest discussion in this country of the subject of neutrality. It was taken up in Congress and fully debated. Every phase of it was presented. It was discussed in the open arena of the nation. Learned men in all walks of life brought their contribution to the consideration of the subject. Our people wanted, above all things, to cut out the sale of arms to warring nations. It was felt it would help to keep us out of foreign wars.

Finally, in 1937, we passed a law which prohibited the sale of arms, munitions and the implements of war to any nation or nations engaged in war. This law met the approval of the Executive department. It met the approval, overwhelmingly, of the great majority of the American people. At the time this law was passed and this policy of neutrality established there was no war of any moment anywhere. Germany and Britain were upon comparatively friendly terms. Both as a matter of morals and as a matter of international law, as a sovereign right, we had the undoubted right to establish this policy of declining the sale of arms, munitions and implements of war to any nation engaged in war.

It is now proposed to repeal entirely this provision of the law. It is proposed to repeal it to enable this government to furnish arms to one side and to withhold them from the other. The proposal for repeal is based upon the program of taking sides in the furnishing of arms. Undoubtedly, as I say, we had a right to pass the law, and undoubtedly, we have a right to repeal the law. But when we couple the repeal with the announced and declared program of furnishing arms and munitions to one side and withholding them from the other, such program will unquestionably constitute intervention in the present conflict in Europe.

It may be said to repeal the law is not unneutral. I think under the circumstances it is. However, let's not discuss technicalities. But when it is said to me as a Senator: I want you to carry through a program, the first step of which is repeal, the second step of which is the furnishing of arms and munitions to one side, openly, persistently and continually declared, then I know I am voting for intervention. I am helping to take this nation into a European war. I cannot hide behind the fact that they are to [illegible] different acts because [illegible] a part of one plan, and that plan includes the furnishing of arms, which is beyond question intervention. All any one need to do to know that this is the real, the controlling purpose of repeal is to read the literature on repeal down to the last forty-eight hours.

The talk here in Washington is no longer that of merely furnishing arms. It is said: We must prepare to fight. One of my colleagues, a most able and sincere Senator, declared a few nights ago publicly: "Let us give up this 'dream of impartiality,' therefore, of neutrality. It is better," said he, "to take sides and fight." He was speaking out boldly what is now heard from the same sources from which came the agitation of furnishing arms. And if, in a few months, we can tear up the law which a nation almost universally approved, how long do you think it will take to put across the proposition of sending our young men into the trenches once we have intervened? They may say to me: You cannot be sure that intervention will send our young men to Europe. Of course, I cannot be sure. But I cannot be sure that it will not. I say that would be the logic of the movement.

But suppose I cannot be sure, I ask: Why risk it? Why trifle with foreign wars? Why bring the American boys to the precipice where any incident of war may kick them over?

The plan now presented by the advocates of repeal is that the democracies of Europe are imperiled, that we must go to their rescue, that civilization is threatened; that we cannot ignore the problem presented. But, if the war continues and the imperiling of democracies and the threatening of civilization increases, what can we say, having once put our hand to the plow? Will we turn our backs to the whole situation?

I repeat, as I stated a moment ago, what we are really considering these days is the broad question: Has the time come when the United States must take part in this European conflict? Why deceive ourselves as to what will happen once we enter the conflict? Why shut our eyes to the inevitable consequences which must follow?

Time will not permit a detailed discussion of what is known as the cash-and-carry plan. It is based upon the principle that those who want our arms and munitions or raw material shall come and get them, pay cash, and carry them away. While I cannot discuss it in detail, I want to take time to say that this plan does not change the situation, as I understand it, with reference to neutrality.

The cash-and-carry plan repeals the embargo law and enables our government to direct the arms and munitions to one side and withhold them from the other. Whatever merits, or demerits, this plan may have, it does not seem to me to bear, only most indirectly, upon the question which I have sought to have you consider this evening.

I am concerned at this time with one proposition, that of avoiding any act, or acts, which will embroil us in a European war. I do not believe the cash-and-carry plan has any considerable bearing upon that point, and I shall therefore content myself with this brief reference.

Upholds Democratic Ideals

Friends, I know how deep-seated is the feeling in this country against certain creeds and ideologies prevailing in Europe. I have had ample proof of this feeling in recent weeks. I would not want any of our people to think less of these creeds and ideologies than they do.

They are in conflict with every tenet and teaching of our American civilization. But it is not hatred of another country but love of our own which makes for wisdom and justice in the formation of national policies. What we are all interested in, I am sure, is what course will most likely bring peace to the United States and contentment and happiness to the American people.

Where the welfare of an entire nation and the health and the lives of the people are involved, we can afford to be patient, to be tolerant, and, at the same time, determined in our effort to find the right way.

The democratic processes should at all times be kept intact. Free speech, free press, uncontrolled consideration in debate are essential to right conclusions and sound judgments in a democracy.

We can all afford to trust our cause to the democratic processes, and, when the final judgment is made up according to those processes, we can rest in the belief that the judgment will be a wise judgment.

Twenty years ago we went into Europe to take part in a European war. We went with high hopes and, in my opinion, for ample cause. But even so, how futile the sacrifice we made. Scarcely had the heroic story of our soldiers been written before the so-called peace treaties had set at naught the principles for which our soldiers fought.

Every move in that direction, therefore, should be subjected to the test of the best thought and the high motives of the entire American people. If the worst should come, and for any reason we should be involved in another European struggle, [illegible] should be taken for granted as to why the sacrifice must be made.

In conclusion: The President has called a special session of Congress for the purpose of removing the embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war. There are some of us who want to keep the old law—who insist that the sale of arms to all nations engaged in war shall continue to be prohibited.

The only question in controversy, the only matter of difference that I know of, is the sole question of whether we shall sell arms or not sell arms.

We see that the supporters of repeal are anxious to put an embargo on ships going to war zones, on loans to all nations engaged in war, anxious to prohibit our citizens from traveling in war areas; all this and more is to be done in the name of neutrality in the effort to keep us out of war. We most heartily support this entire program. We say in the name of peace: do these things. Maintain neutrality as to all these matters.

But we observe here that there is a sudden break in the embargo, —the most threatening and disturbing of all factors, the most calculated to get us into trouble—arms, munitions and implements of war are to be let through. Embargo is not to apply. What is the significance? We feel sincerely that this is an error. We stand where we stood two years ago, where Congress stood, where the Executive stood and where the people stood.

What is the significance? Why prohibit loans in the name of peace and for the protection of our people but not prohibit arms? Why place an embargo on all these other things mentioned but repeal it as to arms? That is the sole matter of controversy. What we did two years ago we did in the name of humanity, in the name of peace, to protect our homes, our sons and daughters, and to help keep us out of war. Blame us not therefore if we are slow to surrender our convictions.

1939

What we who oppose repeal are contending for is now the law of the land. It has been and is being enforced under the proclamation of the President. No arms, munitions and implements of war are being sold. In what possible way can the United States be benefited by permitting the sale? Who is it that is to be benefited? In what respect is this country threatened by reason of the fact that no sale of arms is being made? In what respect are the safety and security of the people imperiled? This is the sole matter of controversy.

We urge that the same rule, the same principle, be applied to the most deadly of all weapons, arms, along with the other things prohibited.

SEP 15 1939

2 Strikes in Reich Reported

LONDON, Sept. 14 (UP).—The Ministry of Information announced today that two strikes were reported last week in the great German industrial Opel Works at Ruesselheim. Arrests followed the strikes, it was said.

SEP 15 1939

CONTROL OF EMPLOYMENT BILL WHICH IS DESIGNED TO PREVENT EMPLOYERS FROM COMPETING FOR WORKERS IN CASE OF A LABOR SHORTAGE.

PARLIAMENT WILL MEET AGAIN TOMORROW.

-95-

BERLIN, SEPT 14-(AP)-INFORMED SOURCES SAID TODAY WORD WAS RECEIVED THAT THE PRESIDENT OF THE POLISH PORT OF GDYNIA MET GENERAL MAGNUS EBERHARDT, COMMANDER OF GERMAN FORCES BESIEGING THE CITY, AT 5:10 A.M. (2:10 A.M., E.S.T.) TO NEGOTIATE SURRENDER.

GERMAN TROOPS WERE REPORTED TO HAVE ENTERED THE CITY, TEN MILES FROM DANZIG, A SHORT TIME LATER.

SEP 15 1939

LONDON-SEPT-14

FURTHER CRITICISMS OF THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION WERE MADE IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS WHERE LORD CAMROSE, OWNER OF THE DAILY TELEGRAPH, SAID CENSORSHIP "WAS BEING CONDUCTED IN SUCH A WAY AS TO CAUSE MUCH UNNECESSARY TROUBLE TO THE GREAT INTERNATIONAL NEWS AGENCIES, THEREBY SERIOUSLY INJURING THE PROPER FLOW OF NEWS FROM THIS COUNTRY AND OPENING THE WAY TO ENEMY PROPAGANDA."

LORD MACMILLAN, MINISTER OF INFORMATION MAKING HIS FIRST STATEMENT SINCE ASSUMING HIS POST SAID HE AGREED IN GENERAL WITH THE CRITICISMS AS TO THE TRUE FUNCTIONS OF THE DEPARTMENT.

"IT IS A MINISTRY OF EXPRESSION, NOT A MINISTRY OF REPRESSION AND LEAST OF ALL A MINISTRY OF DEPRESSION," HE SAID.

"ONE CAN UNDERSTAND THAT THOSE WHO ARE ENGAGED IN THE ACTUAL WORK OF WAR ARE RELUCTANT TO TALK ABOUT IT."

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS AFTER SEVERAL HOURS OF DEBATE PASSED THE

SEP 15 1939

BERLIN, SEPT. 14-(AP)-A STATEMENT WAS ISSUED TONIGHT BY DNB (OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY,) DENYING THAT A GERMAN SUBMARINE COMMANDER HAD WARNED THE CAPTAIN OF AN AMERICAN VESSEL HALTED OFF THE BRITISH COAST THAT THEREAFTER FIRE WOULD BE OPENED ON ANY AMERICAN SHIP REFUSING TO HALT WHEN COMMANDED.

(CAPT;G.SELF, MASTER OF THE WATERMAN STEAMSHIP LI

SEP 15 1939

(CAPT.G.SELF, MASTER OF THE WATERMAN STEAMSHIP LINE FREIGHTER, WACOSTA, HALTED OFF THE IRISH COAST, REPORTED THE SUBMARINE COMMANDER HAD SAID HIS ORDERS WERE TO FIRE UPON ANY VESSEL THAT REFUSED TO HALT FOR A SEARCH FOR CONTRABAND.

(THE WACOSTA WAS DETAINED FOR THREE HOURS AND SEARCHED BEFORE SHE WAS PERMITTED TO RESUME HER VOYAGE FROM GLASGOW TO NEW YORK.)

WD1137PED

3024-3331

A120

BERLIN,SEPT.14-(AP)-A DNB (OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY) DISPATCH FROM BUCHAREST TONIGHT SAID THE POLISH GOVERNMENT HAD MOVED FROM KRZEMIENECZ, TO ZALESZEZYKI, A SMALL COMMUNITY NEAR THE RUMANIAN BORDER.

SEP 15 1939

(KRZEMIENECZ IS ABOUT 250 MILES SOUTHEAST OF WARSAW. ZALESZEZYKI IS ABOUT 100 MILES DIRECTLY SOUTH OF KRZEMIENECZ.)

THE GOVERNMENT WAS REPORTED FORCED TO LEAVE KRZEMIENECZ BY REPEATED GERMAN AIR RAIDS ON THE OBSCURE EMERGENCY CAPITAL.

GERMANS REPORT

BERLIN, SEPT. 14--(AP)--POLAND'S BATTLEFIELDS ARE

AS CLEAN OF SHELLS AS NEWLY-HOED CORNFIELDS ARE CLEAN OF WEEDS.

EMPTY CARTRIDGE CLIPS, SHELLS, STEEL HELMETS AND OTHER METAL IS GATHERED UP AFTER THE FIGHTING ENDS AND TAKEN BACK TO GERMANY FOR MELTING AND FURTHER USE.

SEP 15 1939

THIS IS PART OF THE NAZI SUPREME EFFORT TO SALVAGE EVERYTHING POSSIBLE IN THE FIGHT AGAINST SHORTAGES OF RAW MATERIALS

THE ARMY HAS A SPECIAL UNIT TO MOP UP . HENCE NAZI BATTLEFIELDS WILL BE A DISAPPOINTMENT TO SOUVENIER HUNTERS.

AEW-610P

WHITEFEATHERS 02010

30.24—3331

C122 (E-G-S)

(AGENCIES OUT)

BUDAPEST, SEPT.14-(AP)-SPECULATION ON HUNGARY'S TERRITORIAL CLAIMS ON RUMANIA WAS INTENSIFIED TONIGHT WITH A STATEMENT BY FOREIGN MINISTER COUNT CSAKY WHO DECLARED THE SITUATION OF THE HUNGARIAN MINORITY IN RUMANIA WAS CONSIDERED "SERIOUS."

COUNT CSAKY TOLD THE PARLIAMENTARY FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE THAT HUNGARY CONSIDERS A DECLARATION OF NEUTRALITY IN THE PRESENT EUROPEAN CONFLICT "NEEDLESS", SINCE "ANY DECLARATION OF THAT SORT ONLY COULD COMPLICATE OUR NATION LIFE IN CASE OF A LONG-TERM WAR."

SEP 15 1939

HIS REMARKS FOLLOWED THOSE YESTERDAY OF COUNT PAUL TELEKI, HUNGARY'S PRIME MINISTER, WHO DECLARED HIS NATION COULD NOT ENTER INTO Z "ADVENTURES IN HER PRESENT DIFFICULT GEOGRAPHIC POSITION."

COUNT CSAKY TOLD THE FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE THAT "THE ANSWER IS STILL DELAYED FROM RUMANIA REGARDING HUNGARY'S PROPOSALS" FOR A PACT GIVING HUNGARIAN MINORITIES GREATER RIGHTS.

"BEHIND THE MORAL FORCES AND UNSHAKABLE DETERMINED WILL OF OUR LEADING STATESMEN IS THE HUNGARIAN ARMY, DAILY INCREASING BOTH BY WEAPONS AND IN DETERMINATION TO PROTECT THE SOIL OF WORKING HUNGARIAN PEOPLE," THE COUNT SAID.

TURNING TO YUGOSLAVIA, COUNT CSAKY SAID THAT HUNGARY'S "POSITION IS EASIER SO WE CAN LEAVE IT TO HER (YUGOSLAVIA'S) GOVERNMENT TO DECIDE WHETHER IT IS INCLINED TO AGREE WITH US IN MATTERS OF MINORITY AGREEMENT."

CSAKY LAUDED BOTH REICHSFUEHRER HITLER AND PREMIER MUSSOLINI.

HE SAID HE HAD TO "THINK WITH SENTIMENTS OF DEEP EMOTION OF CHANCELLOR HITLER."

FH1247AED

SEP 15 1939

A14

NIGHT LEAD RUSSIAN (BUDGET)

MOSCOW,SEPT.14-(AP)-THE COMMUNIST PARTY NEWSPAPER PRAVDA DECLARED TODAY THAT THE POLISH STATE "BEGAN TO CRUMBLE WITH THE FIRST MILITARY SETBACKS" BECAUSE OF DISUNITY THROUGH ITS "OPPRESSION" OF NATIONAL MINORITIES IN ONCE-RUSSIAN TERRITORY.

SEP 15 1939

IN AN ANALYSIS OF POLAND'S "QUICK MILITARY DEFEAT," THE NEWSPAPER SAID THE "MULTI-NATIONAL STATE" CRUMBLED FROM WITHIN FROM "DEEP-ROOTED WEAKNESSES."

THESE WERE PICTURED AS THE OUTGROWTH OF THE "RUDE AND UNSCRUPULOUS EXPLOITATION" OF 40 PERCENT OF POLAND'S PEOPLE--MINORITY GROUPS INCLUDING UKRAINIANS, WHITE RUSSIANS AND JEWS--BY "POLISH RULING CLASSES."

MEANWHILE, A COMMUNIQUE FROM THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT CHARGED POLISH FLIERS WITH "FREQUENT VIOLATIONS" OF THE RUSSIAN-POLISH BORDER, WHERE FRESH RUSSIAN RESERVISTS AUGMENT THE FRONTIER GUARD.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED TWO POLISH WAR PLANES HAD BEEN FORCED DOWN EAST OF THE BORDER BY SOVIET AIRMEN AND THEIR CREWS TOTALING 15 MEN DETAINED.

IN ITS ANALYSIS, PRAVDA SAID:

"IN THE COURSE OF GERMAN-POLISH HOSTILITIES ONE CANNOT CITE AS FACTS ANY SERIOUS RESISTANCE BY POLISH TROOPS TO THE ADVANCE OF THE GERMAN ARMY, OR ANY PARTIAL POLISH SUCCESS IN ANY DIRECTION OF OPERATIONS.

"ALL REPORTS ON THE SITUATION IN POLAND SHOW THAT DISORGANIZATION OF THE ENTIRE POLISH STATE MACHINE IS CONSTANTLY GROWING."

ASSERTING THAT POLAND'S EASTERN MINORITIES HAD BEEN "DOOMED TO CULTURAL DEGRADATION," AND THAT THEY REPRESENTED A PEOPLE "NOT KNIT TOGETHER BY TIES OF FRIENDSHIP AND EQUALITY," PRAVDA ADDED:

"ONE FINDS IT DIFFICULT TO EXPLAIN SUCH A QUICK DEFEAT ONLY BY SUPERIORITY OF GERMAN MILITARY TECHNIQUE AND MILITARY ORGANIZATION AND BY LACK OF EFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE TO POLAND ON THE PART OF GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE."

SEP 15 1939

A "MULTI-NATIONAL" STATE IN WHICH MINORITIES ARE NOT TAKEN CARE OF, PRAVDA SAID, "CANNOT CONSTITUTE A STRONG MILITARY FORCE. THIS IS THE ROOT OF WEAKNESS OF THE POLISH STATE, AND THE INNER CAUSE OF ITS MILITARY DEFEAT."

AMONG POLAND'S PEOPLE THE NEWSPAPER LISTED AT LEAST 8,000,000 UKRAINIANS AND ABOUT 3,000,000 WHITE RUSSIANS--GROUPS IT TERMED LARGER THAN THE ENTIRE POPULATION OF FINLAND, ESTHONIA, LATVIA AND LITHUANIA.

"IT WOULD APPEAR THAT THE POLISH RULING CLASSES SHOULD HAVE ESTABLISHED NORMAL RELATIONS WITH SUCH IMPORTANT NATIONAL MINORITIES, SECURED THEM NATIONAL RIGHTS, GIVEN THEM X X X ADMINISTRATIVE AUTONOMY AND NATIONAL SCHOOLS AND CULTURAL INSTITUTIONS," THE PAPER SAID.

"YET THE POLISH RULING CLASSES PROVED INCAPABLE OF GRAPSING THIS X X X. MORE, POLISH RULING CIRCLES DID EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO AGGRAVATE RELATIONS WITH NATIONAL MINORITIES AND BRING THEM TO A STATE OF EXTREME TENSION.

30.24-3333

30.24 — 3333

"THE NATIONAL POLICY OF RULING CIRCLES IN POLAND IS CHARACTERIZED BY SUPPRESSION AND OPPRESSION OF NATIONAL MINORITIES X X X. THEY ARE SUBJECT TO EXTREMELY RUDE AND UNSCRUPULOUS EXPLOITATION BY POLISH LANDLORDS.

"RULING CIRCLES IN POLAND WHO BOAST OF THEIR ALLEGED LOVE FOR FREEDOM DID EVERYTHING TO CONVERT WESTERN UKRAINE AND WESTERN BYELO-RUSSIA (WHITE RUSSIA) INTO A COLONY DEPRIVED OF ANY RIGHTS AND DELIVERED FOR PLUNDER TO THE POLISH GENTRY."

WD&DB449PED

C47 (RU HV DNB OUT)

MOSCOW--FIRST ADD NIGHT LEAD RUSSIAN

XXX POLISH GENTRY."

THE EDITORIAL AROUSED CONSIDERABLE INTEREST IN DIPLOMATIC CIRCLES.

THERE WAS A MARKED DECREASE, MEANWHILE, IN RUSSIA'S MOVES TO STRENGTHEN HER FORCES ON HER WESTERN BORDER.

THERE APPEARED TO BE NO MORE CALLING OF RESERVISTS AND MOSCOW'S POPULATION SEEMED GREATLY RELIEVED.

BUILDINGS WHICH HAD BEEN TAKEN OVER TEMPORARILY BY THE ARMY HAVE BEEN RELEASED. THESE INCLUDED MOSCOW'S LARGE NATIONAL HOTEL.

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD, HOWEVER, THAT THE ARMY HAD REQUISITIONED TEMPORARILY AUTOMOBILES AND TYPEWRITERS FROM SOME PLANTS.

NEWSPAPERS PRINTED NEWS MOSTLY FROM GERMAN SOURCES IN REPORTING THE NEW EUROPEAN WAR, ALTHOUGH SOME REPORTS FROM THE ALLIES AND NEUTRAL CAPITALS WERE INCLUDED.

P759PED

A80

NIGHT LEAD SUBMARINE

ST.JOHN,N.B.,SEPT.14-(CANADIAN PRESS)-NAVAL AUTHORITIES TONIGHT SAID THEY DOUBTED THAT A LOW-LYING CRAFT SIGHTED IN THE BAY OF FUNDY LAST NIGHT WAS A SUBMARINE.

FISHERMEN HAD ADVISED MARINE AGENT H.F.MORRISEY THEY SAW A "LONG, LOW VESSEL WITH TWO MASTS WHICH MIGHT HAVE BEEN A SUBMARINE" TWO MILES OFF GRAND MANAN, ABOUT 50 MILES SOUTHWEST OF HERE.

AFTER RECEIPT OF THE REPORT A RADIO WARNING WENT OUT TO ALL SHIPPING IN THE BAY OF FUNDY.

NAVAL OFFICIALS COMMENDED THE FISHERMEN FOR THEIR ALERTNESS, BUT SAID PRESENT SHIPPING IN AND OUT OF ST.JOHN HARDLY WOULD RATE THE ATTENTION FROM THE ENEMY.

WD930PED

A103KX

MORAGA,CALIF., SEPT. 14-(AP)-DR.HENRY J.NEWSOM RECEIVED WORD TODAY HIS SISTER, DR.FLORENCE NEWSOM, A BRITISH RED CROSS WORKER, HAD BEEN KILLED W[illegible]N A PLANE IN WHICH SHE WAS A PASSENGER WAS SHOT DOWN WHILE FLYING OVER GERMAN LINES TOWARD POLAND.

NEWS OF THE CASUALTY WAS CABLED TO BROTHER ALBERT, PRESIDENT OF ST.MARY'S, BY THE BRITISH WAR OFFICE, WITH THE REQUEST THAT HE INFORM DR.NEWSOM, HEAD OF THE COLLEGE ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT.

DR.FLORENCE NEWSOM WAS A MEMBER OF A BRITISH VOLUNTEER RED CROSS UNIT EN ROUTE TO POLAND TO HELP CARE FOR WOUNDED POLISH SOLDIERS. THE WAR OFFICE CABLE INDICATED ALL ABOARD THE PLANE WERE KILLED.

RA845PCS

1939

STOCKHOLM

SEPT. 14-(AP)-A POLISH AIRPLANE CARRYING ONE OFFICER AND A CIVILIAN FROM GDYNIA TO THE WAR FRONT WAS FORCED DOWN LAST NIGHT AT VISBY ON THE SWEDISH ISLAND OF GOTLAND IN THE BALTIC SEA.

THE FLIERS REPORTED THEIR GASOLINE RAN OUT AS THEY REACHED VISBY.

SEP 15 1939

KX

A160 (NEW ENG OUT)

LONDON, SEPT 14-(AP)-THE BRITISH BROADCASTING COMPANY ANNOUNCED TODAY IT HAD ARRANGED FOR BROADCASTING AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE THE NAMES OF GERMAN PRISONERS AND THE NAMES OF GERMAN DEAD AND WOUNDED WHOSE IDENTIFIES ARE DEFINITELY ESTABLISHED.

"WE SHALL BE PUBLISHING THE INFORMATION FOR THE BENEFIT OF FRIENDS AND RELATIVES," THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.

"SOME TIME MAY YET ELAPSE, HOWEVER, UNTIL WE ARE ABLE TO PUBLISH THE FIRST CASUALTY LIST. SO FAR NO NAMES HAVE BEEN RECEIVED FROM POLAND, ALTHOUGH IT IS KNOWN THAT THE VIENNESE DIVISION HAS SUFFERED CASUALTIES."

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THE NAMES WOULD BE BROADCAST IN GERMAN.

WF116PED

ADD CHRONOLOGICAL SHIPS SUNK

SEPT. 14--FREIGHTER VANCOUVER CITY (BR), 4,955 TONS. TORPEDOED OFF SOUTHERN COAST OF IRELAND.

WF836AED

A133

WAR BRIEFS

LONDON, SEPT 14-(AP)-THE ROPNER SHIPPING COMPANY ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT A MESSAGE FROM ITS 4,869-TON STEAMER FIRBY, WHICH WAS TORPEDOED, SAID THE CREW HAD LANDED SAFELY.

-0-

A123

LONDON, SEPT. 14-(AP)-HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF LONDON CHILDREN ARE HAVING A "HOLIDAY" IN THE COUNTRY AT THE GOVERNMENT'S EXPENSE.

THEIR REMOVAL FROM THE CITY AS BRITAIN WAS ABOUT TO ENTER THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY WAS A PART OF THE VAST AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS PLAN WORKED OUT BEFORE THE CONFLICT CAME.

EACH RURAL HOUSEHOLDER HOUSING CHILDREN RECEIVES A WEEKLY GRANT OF TEN SHILLINGS SIXPENCE (ABOUT $2.10) FOR THE FIRST CHILD AND EIGHT SHILLINGS SIXPENCE (ABOUT $1.70) FOR EACH ADDITIONAL CHILD.

THIS COVERS LODGING, FULL BOARD AND ALL CARE NEEDED TO GIVE THE CHILD A HOME.

IF THE CHILDREN ARE ACCOMPANIED BY AN ADULT THE HOUSEHOLDERS RECEIVE FIVE SHILLINGS (ABOUT $1) WEEKLY FOR EACH ADULT AND THREE SHILLINGS (ABOUT 60 CENTS) FOR EACH CHILD. IN SUCH CASES THE HOUSEHOLDER HAS NO OBLIGATION TO CARE FOR THE CHILDREN. THE FEE COVERS SHELTER AND ACCESS TO COOKING, WATER AND SANITARY FACILITIES.

WD114OPED

BASLE, SWITZERLAND, SEP 15 1939 14--AP-THE FRENCH RESUMED OPERATION TODAY OF CERTAIN FACTORIES ENGAGED IN WAR INDUSTRIES ALONG THE RHINE THE "QUIET SECTOR" OF THE WAR.

THE FRENCH APPARENTLY WERE NOT EXPECTING A GERMAN ATTACK ALONG THE SCETOR, AND THE GERMANS APPARENTLY WERE NOT EXPECTING A FRENCH ATTACK.

30.24—3335

30.24—3333

THERE ARE NOT MANY WAR INDUSTRIES ALONG THE RHINE, AS THE FRENCH TOOK STEPS IN RECEN YEARS TO MOVE THEM OUT OF A POSSIBLE WAR ZONE BUT THE FEW LEFT AGAIN WERE BUSY.

BY THOMAS HAWKINS

AMSTERDAM, SEPT. 14-AP-THE NETHERLANDS WAS FINDING THE PATH OF PEACE A ROCKY ONE TODAY WITH NEW INCIDENTS OCCURING WHICH INVOLVE THE QUESTION OF THE TINY NATION'S NEUTRALITY.

THE NEHERLANDS' OBJECTIVE IS TO REMAIN AT PEACE AND TO PREVENT INCIDENTS THAT MIGHT HAVE GRAVE CONSEQUENCES, WHILE AT THE SAME TIME MAINTAINING HER INTERNATIONAL TRADE.

THIS OBJECTIVE HAS BEEN BOTH DIFFICULT AND EXPENSIVE. THE NATION OF 8,000,000 PEOPLE HAS MOBILIZED ABOUT 420,000 TROOPS TO SUPPLEMENT THE REGULAR ARMY OF 30,000 LARGELY FOR A POLICE JOB TO KEEP THE LAND OF DIKES AND TULIPS OUT OF TH EUROPEAN CONFLICT.

A FULL INVESTIGATION HAS BEEN ORDERED OF THE SHOOTING DOWN OF A NETHERLANDS NAVAL PLANE YESTERDAY BY A GERMAN WARPLANE.

THE GERMAN PLANE AND ITS CREW, WHICH OFFICIALS ANNOUNCED WAS SEIZED IN TERRITORIAL WATERS OFF THE NORTHERN COAST, WERE DETAINED.

IN ADDITION, NETHERLANDS AUTHORITIES [illegible] ACED WITH ANOTHER PROBLEM IN THE STOPPING OF THE MODERN [illegible] TLANTIC LINER NIEUW AMSTERDAM BY BRITISH MEN-OF-WAR IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

(THE BRITISH ADMIRALITY ANNOUNCED THE SHIP WAS EXAMINED FOR CONTRABAND AND RELEASED.)

THESE TWO INCIDENTS WERE IN ADDITION TO OTHERS REPORTED OF FOREIGN AIRCRAFT FLYING OVER THE NETHERLANDS. IN ONE INSTANCE, PLANESXXXX WERE FIRED UPON IN THE AMSTERDAM AREA.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS MADE NO STATEMENT ON THE STOPPING OF THE NIEUW AMSTERDAM, BUT THE INCIDENT EMPHAZIZED ONE PHASE OF THE DIFFICULTIES CONFRONTING THIS NATOON.

THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT, THROUGH ITS ENVOY TO THE HAGUE, OFFERED TO PAY IDEMNITY FOR THE NETHERLANDS NAVAL PLANE. THE GERMAN VERSION WAS THAT THE NAZI WARPLANE CREW THOUGHT THEY WERE BEING ATTACKED AND COULD NOT IDENTIFY THE NETHERLANDS' CRAFT IN TIME TO AVOID CONFLICT.

OFFICIALS HERE SAID THEIR PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN IN NETHERLAND TERRITORIAL WATERS. THEY XXXX WERE AWAITING THE RETURN OF THE NETHERLANDS CREW OF FOUR WHICH THE GERMANS RESCUED AND TOOK TO THE ISLAND OF NORNEY IN THE NORTH SEA BEFORE CONTINUING THE INVESTIGATION.

THE NETHERLANDS' POSITOON, OFFICIALS HAVE REPEATEDLY EMPHASIZED, IS ONE OF STRICTEST NEUTRALITY. WARNINGS HAVE BEEN SENT TO COMBATTANT NATIONS THAT NO BELLIGERENT FIGHTING CRAFT WILL BE PERMITTED TO ENTER NETHERLANDS TERRITORIAL WATERS OR FLY OVER THE COUNTRY.

FOREIGN PLANES, UNDER A RECENT RULING, WILL BE SIGNALLED TO LAND, IF THEY DO NOT COMPLY THEY MAY BE FIRED UPON.

THE BRIGHTEST LIGHTS OF HOLLAND BURN IN SMALL VILLAGES TO DEFINE THE 150-MILE FRONTIER WITH GERMANY--DARKENED AGAINST THE DANGER OF NIGHT AIR RAIDS.

THE DUTCH TRICOLOR FLIES FROM CHURCH STEEPLES AS WELL AS FROM GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS. A DAY AND NIGHT WATCH IS KEPT FOR TREPASSING PLANES. MINESWEEPERS PATROL ADJACENT WATERS FOR FLOATING MINES, SEVERAL OF WHICH HAVE BEEN FOUND OFF THE COAST. THIRTY DUTCH NAVY MEN WERE KILLED WHEN A

SEP 15 1939

SWEEPER STRUCK A NETHERLANDS' PROTECTIVE MINE LAST WEEK.

THE LEGENDARY LITTLE DUTCH BOY WHO SAVED HOLLAND FROM THE SEA BY PLUGGING A KIKE WITH HIS FINGER HAS DRAWN THAT FINGER OUT A LITTLE WAY--FLOODING A SMALL PORTION OF UTRECHT PROVINCE, SOUTHEAST OF AMSTERDAM.

OFFICIALS EMPHAZIZED THIS WAS A PRECAUTIONARY EXPERIMENT TO DETERMINE DEFENSIVE FLOOD POSSIBILITIES IN RELATION TO PRESENT WATER LEVELS.

ABOUT ONE FOURTH OF THE NATOON'S 13,000 SQUARE MILES IS PROTECTED BY MORE THAN 1,500 MILES OF KX DIKES.

A NUMBER OF GOVERNMENT BUREAUS HAVE BEEN ESTABLISHED TO HANDLE THE ADMINISTRATION OF NEUTRALITY PROBLEMS, INCLUDING AN AIR RAID PROTECTION DIVISION.

SEP 15 1939

THE EFFECT OF WAR UPON BUSINESS IS DIFFICULT TO ASCERTAIN. THE KLM(ROYAL DUTCH) AIRLINE SERVICE HAS BEEN CURTAILED. SHIPPING STOCKS ARE ENJOYING A BOOM MARKET. THIS THEORY THAT A NEUTRAL COUNTRY WILL DRAW MORE SHIPPING CONSIGNMENTS AND THAT A 50 TO 60 PERCENT INCREASE IN RATES WILL BRING GOOD PROFITS, DESPITE HIGHER INSURANCE COSTS.

THE FLOWER BULB BUSINESS, WHICH LAST YEAR AGGREGATED ABOUT $16,000,000, HAS SHARPLY DIMINSHED OPERATIONS EXPECT AT LEAST A 50 PERSENT REQUCTIONS.

THE AMSTERDAM STOCK EXCHANGE HAS BEEN DOING A BIG BUSINESS, BX ESPECIALLY IN AMERICAN AND DUTCH "WAR BABIES"--STEELS, AVIATION, COPPER, RUBBER AND SIMILAR ISSUES.

THERE HAVE BEEN NO SHARE TURNOVER FIGURES ANNOUNCED. BUT THE EXCHANGE IS CROWED.

CSH--240

A112

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE POSITION OF POLAND'S BADLY HAMMERED ARMIES TODAY MUST BE DESCRIBED ADVISEDLY AS DESPERATE.

THE POLISH MAIN LINE OF DEFENSE, WHICH ROUGHLY BISECTS THE COUNTRY FROM NORTH TO SOUTH AND DEPENDS GREATLY FOR ITS STRENGTH ON THE

SEP 15 1939

VISTULA RIVER AND ITS TRIBUTARIES, APPEARED FROM INCOMPLETE AND SOMETIMES CONTRADICTORY CLAIMS TO BE CRUMBLING FAST IN SEVERAL VITAL SPOTS.

THIS IS THE STRATEGIC LINE UPON WHICH THE POLES HAVE BEEN BANKING CHIEFLY TO STEM THE ONRUSH OF THE GERMANS. ITS COLLAPSE WOULD MEAN DISASTER, BARRING MIRACLES.

THE EPIC DEFENSE OF WARSAW WAS CONTINUING AFTER A SOLID WEEK OF BLOODY BATTLE WITH AN ADVANCING FORCE WHICH WAS WELL-NIGH OVERWHELMING IN ALL DEPARTMENTS EXCEPTING COURAGE AND THE WILLINGNESS TO DIE FOR COUNTRY.

BUT THE GERMANS ANNOUNCED THAT THEY HAD SWEPT DOWN ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE CAPITAL AND SURROUNDED THE BELEAGUERED CITY. THIS MEANT A DEFINITE SMASHING OF THE POLISH MAIN DEFENSES TO THE NORTHEAST.

THE LINE ALSO WAS REPORTED PENETRATED SOME SEVENTY MILES SOUTHEAST OF WARSAW ON THE VISTULA NEAR DEBLIN AND 45 MILES BELOW THAT POINT IN THE KRASNIK REGION, WHILE THE GERMAN DRIVE IN THE LWOW (LEMBERG) AREA WAS PROCEEDING LIKE A STEAM ROLLER.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR CORRESPONDENT REPORTED YESTERDAY FROM LWOW THAT "SO FAST IS THE GERMAN ADVANCE MOVING THAT NONE CAL TELL WHERE IT WILL BE AT THE END OF THE AFTERNOON. BEHIND THE FRONT CONDITIONS ARE CHAOTIC."

THE PLIGHT OF THE POLES IN THIS REGION WOULD SEEM REMINISCENT OF THE GREAT GERMAN PUSH AGAINST THE BRITISH FRONT IN THE WORLD WAR IN THE SPRING OF 1918. THERE WAS ONE TIME WHEN THE GERMANS WERE COMING THROUGH SO FAST ON THE SOMME THAT EVEN THE BRITISH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS COULDN'T KEEP TRACK OF ITS RETREATING TROOPS AT ALL TIMES.

THE DEFENSE OF LWOW IS OF VITAL IMPORTANCE. NOT ONLY IS IT OF GREAT STRATEGIC VALUE, BUT IT IS THE GATEWAY TO RUMANIA AND THUS THE LIFELINE OF POLAND WHICH HAS BEEN BANKING ON GETTING SUPPLIES FROM ITS NEIGHBOR.

IN THE WESTERN THEATRE THERE HAS BEEN LITTLE CHANGE. THE FRENCH CONTINUE TO MANEUVER FOR WHAT PRESUMABLY PRESAGES AN ATTACK ON THE SIEGFRIED LINE PROPER. THE GERMANS THIS MORNING WERE TURNING THEIR HEAVY ARTILLERY ON THE FRENCH.

THE REALLY OUTSTANDING NEWS FROM THIS FRONT WAS THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT SEVERAL HUNDRED THOUSAND BRITISH TROOPS HAD BEEN LANDED SAFELY IN FRANCE AND WERE ON THEIR WAY TO THE FIGHTING LINE.

AND NOW ABOUT THIS MUCH DEBATED QUESTION AS TO WHY NEITHER THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD NOR THE GERMANS HAVE EMPLOYED THEIR WIDELY ADVERTISED BOMBING PLANES AGAINST EACH OTHER TO ANY GREAT EXTENT.

ONE CONSTANTLY WEARS EXPRESSIONS OF SURPRISE BECAUSE THE BRITISH AND FRENCH IN PARTICULAR HAVEN'T USED THESE DEVASTATING INSTRUMENTS OF WAR AGAINST GERMANY, SO TO BRING QUICK SUPPORT TO THEIR LITTLE POLISH ALLY WHICH IS ENDURING THE BRUNT OF THE NAZI LAND ATTACK.

THAT'S A LEGITIMATE QUESTION, BUT THE THING REALLY ISN'T SO EASILY DISPOSED OF. THERE ARE SEVERAL REASONS FOR THE HESITATION.

FROM THE GERMAN STANDPOINT THE PARAMOUNT REASON FOR NOT RAIDING EITHER ENGLAND OR FRANCE PRESUMABLY IS HITLER'S POLICY OF REFUSING TO ASSUME THE OFFENSIVE AGAINST THEM. HE INSISTS THAT HIS WAR IS WITH POLAND, AND INDICATES THAT HE HOPES FOR PEACE WHEN HE HAS SETTLED ACCOUNTS WITH THE POLES.

THEN THERE IS ANOTHER ASPECT. IT IS VIRTUALLY IMPOSSIBLE TO CARRY OUT EXTENSIVE RAIDS AGAINST MILITARY OBJECTIVES WITHOUT

30.24—3337

ENDANGERING THE LIVES OF CIVILIANS. IT IS ONLY A FEW DAYS AGO, AT THE OUTBREAK OF WAR, THAT ALL THE COUNTRIES INVOLVED AGREED NOT TO BOMB CIVILIANS. THIS WAS IN RESPONSE TO THE APPEAL BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

ONE HOPES AND BELIEVES THAT THE HUMANITARIAN ANGLE DOES IN TRUTH RESTRAIN MOST COMBATTANTS FROM BOMBING TO THE DANGER OF CIVILIANS. HAVING WRITTEN THIS, I REACH OVER AND PICK UP A STATEMENT BY ANTHONY J.DREXEL BIDDLE, JR., AMERICAN AMBASSADOR IN POLAND.

MR.BIDDLE SAYS THE GERMAN AIR-FORCES HAVE BEEN "TAKING ADVANTAGE OF EVERY OPPORTUNITY, WITHOUT REGARD TO THE DANGER TO THE CIVILIAN POPULATION WHICH MAY BE INVOLVED."

THAT TAKES SOME EXPLAINING, BUT THE GERMAN REPLY IS THAT BOMBING OF CIVILIANS WAS UNAVOIDABLE BECAUSE THEY WERE WITHIN THE AREA OF MILITARY ADVANCE. THERE HAS, OF COURSE, BEEN MUCH DEBATE OVER THE QUESTION OF HOW FAR AN ARMY SHOULD CARRY BOMBINGS AGAINST LEGITIMATE MILITARY OBJECTIVES WHEN CIVILIANS WERE ENDANGERED. WE CAN'T SETTLE THAT ARGUMENT HERE.

HOWEVER THAT MAY BE, THE BOMBING OF CIVILIANS IN TERRITORY WHERE ACTUAL FIGHTING WASN'T IN PROGRESS CERTAINLY WOULD RAISE A MIGHTY ROAR OF PROTEST FROM THE WORLD AT LARGE. THE BOMBING OF LONDON OR PARIS OR BERLIN, FOR INSTANCE, ASSUREDLY WOULD BRING A THROATY CRY OF "ATROCITY" FROM MANY QUARTERS.

30.24—3337

RUSSO-JAPANESE TRUCE DISCLOSED; FRENCH ROUT NAZIS IN AIR FIGHT; BRITISH SINK ENEMY SUBMARINES

NON-AGGRESSION ACCORD HELD LIKELY TO FOLLOW CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES

Forces To Start Armistice Today, Holding Positions Occupied Yesterday—Joint Commission Will Meet To Set New Frontiers

By WITT WHITAKER

[By the Associated Press]

SEP 16 1939

Moscow, Sept. 15—Soviet Russia and Japan today agreed to an armistice in their "vestpocket" war on the troubled Manchoukuo-Outer Mongolia border in a move which some diplomatic quarters saw as a possible forerunner to a non-aggression pact.

The agreement to end hostilities between Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo and Sovietized Outer Mongolia was announced through Tass, Soviet official news agency. Japanese-Manchoukuan and Soviet-Mongolian forces had been fighting intermittently on the disputed frontier since May 11.

New Envoy To Tokyo Named

The appointment of Constantin Smetanin as Soviet Ambassador to Tokyo was announced a short time later.

Smetanin has been serving as charge d'affaires in Tokyo, where Russia has been without an Ambassador since June 5, 1938, when Mikhail Mikhailovitch Slavutsky went back to Moscow.

The earlier announcement said that the armistice would begin at 2 P. M. (6 A. M., E.S.T.) tomorrow.

SEP 16 19

To Keep Earlier Positions

The respective forces, under the agreement, will maintain their positions held at 1 P. M. today.

A commission of two Japanese-Manchoukuan and two Soviet-Mongolian representatives will be organized "at the earliest possible date" to establish a frontier line between the two states.

1939

The agreement was reached following negotiations between Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo and Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar.

Announcement of the agreement came after predictions by some observers that it might be the forerunner to a non-aggression pact.

One quarter, unofficial, but usually reliable, expressed belief that some sort of non-aggression pact between the two nations already had been signed and might be announced tomorrow.

Effect On China War

A patching of the quarrel between the two nations probably would have a tremendous effect upon Japan's campaign in China. The Soviets have been more or less openly supporting the Chinese with materials.

A Russo-Japanese agreement also would deal a blow at the British foothold in Asia and might possibly affect United States interests in the Far East, observers here said.

As a result of today's developments, much deeper significance is now attached to a communique issued yesterday by Tass, which said Russia had not taken any Manchoukuo territory and had no intention of doing so.

Seeking Reconciliation

Ever since the signing of the German-Soviet non-aggression pact August 24, Germany has been trying to promote a reconciliation between Moscow and Tokyo.

It was learned that Ambassador Togo has had four conferences with Molotoff in the last four days, although there were few details of the possibility of momentus meetings.

The signing of a non-aggression pact between Russia and Japan would be considered another diplomatic triumph for Adolf Hitler.

Feared Compact With Japan

There have been intense efforts among Nazi officials to stave off what was feared might be British efforts toward some understanding with Japan.

Japanese troops garrisoned in Manchoukuo have had repeated border clashes with Soviet-Mongolian troops along the winding 1,000-mile frontier. Reports of these skirmishes have been vague except for occasional communiques from Moscow or Tokyo or journeys to the isolated front by neutral correspondents.

Outer Mongolia, under Soviet protection, has long disputed her boundary with Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo. The most recent series of border clashes started last May 11 and has continued intermittently.

Some of the engagements were reported so extensively that planes, tanks and mechanized forces took part. Bombing raids were engaged in by both sides.

New Triumph for Hitler.

Agreement would mark an end to several years of border fighting in the Far East of which few details have become public except through an occasional communique from Tokio or Moscow or trips to the front by neutral correspondents.

Should Russia and Japan sign a non-aggression pact it would be considered as another diplomatic triumph for Adolf Hitler, observers said.

The Reich has been working hastily to stave off what it feared would be British efforts toward an understanding with Japan.

The newest series of Soviet-Japanese border clashes in the Far East started May 11 and continued intermittently through the summer.

Outer Mongolia, under the protection of Soviet Russia, disputed her boundary with Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo.

In some of the engagements, along the Khalka River, planes, tanks, and motorized forces were involved. Each side engaged in occasional bombing raids deep in the other's territory. Last year Japanese and Soviet Russian forces clashed intermittently from July 11 to August 11, at Changkufeng Hill, at the junction of Siberian, Manchoukuan and Korean borders.

Soviet Summons Million Men.

About 1,000,000 recruits under the regular annual draft were being called to the colors throughout the Soviet Union today, according to unofficial estimates.

The draft under the recently adopted universal military service law affects citizens born during the second half of 1918 and in 1919 as well as all high school graduates born in 1920 and 1921. The latter group totals 145,000 persons who are to receive special training as future Red Army officers.

Pravda, Communist party organ asserted today there was not a single illiterate among this year's recruits.

It also was estimated unofficially that approximately 1,500,000 reserves were called up in the course of the partial mobilization announced last Sunday.

An editorial in Pravda today stressed the necessity of military measures because "the capitalist world is caught by war fever.

"The flame of war is already enveloping many countries. The Soviet Union and her armed forces must be in full military preparedness so that stormily developing events do not catch us unawares."

SEP 16 1939

Paris Keeping Eye on Russia.

PARIS, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia's eventual role in the new world war was regarded anxiously here today because of the widespread conviction that Moscow might try to regain eastern Poland in conjunction with the German attack in western Poland. About 43,800 square miles of Poland's post-world-war territory came from Russia, 30,500 from Austria and 18,000 from Germany.

Trotsky Detects Secret Terms.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Leon Trotsky, exiled former Commissar of War in the Soviet Russian revolution, says he sees evidence of "secret articles" in the Russian-German non-aggression pact.

SEP 16 1939

In a statement published today Trotsky referred to reports that Russian ships en route to England with cargoes of lumber had been ordered back to their home ports. (Berlin newspapers displayed such reports on Tuesday.)

Trotsky argued that the order to the ships have been "only upon Berlin's demand."

Trotsky asked, "What could this demand be based upon. Evidently upon secret articles in the German-Soviet pact. We cannot find any other explanation."

The statement also referred to Soviet charges that Polish planes had violated the Russian border.

"What interest does the Kremlin have in raising an international uproar about these incidents?

"An attempt to prove its loyalty to Hitler? Undoubtedly. But possibly something more. It is possible that the Kremlin, at Hitler's request, has begun to seek and publish pretexts for a closer and more open cooperation with Hitler."

SEP 16 1939

RUSS-JAPANESE ARMISTICE DECLARED REACHED IN FAR EAST

Non-aggression Accord Between Moscow and Tokio Expected Immediately, Giving Hitler New Triumph.

SEP 16 1939

MOSCOW, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia and Japan were reported to have reached an armistice today in their undeclared war on the Manchoukuo-Mongolian border. Some observers expected the move to lead immediately to the signing of a non-aggression pact between them.

Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo and Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov were said by usually unimpeachable informants to have agreed upon an "immediate cessation of hostilities" in a four-hour conference.

They will meet again tomorrow, after which a communique will be issued, it was said.

Germany has been trying to effect a reconciliation between Moscow and Tokio since the signing of the German-Soviet non-aggression pact of August 24.

Only a few details were available on the possibly momentous conference today between the Japanese and Russian representatives.

the troublous bloody event which has befallen Europe, Turkish and Soviet Russia's good relations are closer today than ever before and the Turkish nation is happy to acknowledge this friendship."

WASHINGTON FEARS TOKYO-MOSCOW PACT

New Threat From Dictatorships Seen in Truce

SEP 16 1939

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—Some members of Congress expressed concern today over the reported Russo-Japanese truce, saying that it might mean a new alignment of "dictatorial" powers that would threaten other nations.

At the State Department, the development occasioned no surprise. Although the department had received no official notification, it was pointed out that the situation in Manchoukuo had indicated an armistice. Fighting on the border ceased week's ago. Attacks by both sides in an effort to feel each other out had left the situation in a stalemate.

The armistice would free a large Japanese army on the Manchoukuo border for continuance of the war against China. Tokyo officials said several days ago that this war would be speedily pushed to a conclusion.

May Move On Poland

In the west the armistice would permit the Soviets to act toward Poland, if they so desired, without fear of a diversion along the Manchoukuoan border.

Commenting on the reported armistice, Representative Starnes (Dem., Ala.) said that if it is carried through "it is evidence of a realignment of the world's dictatorial and totalitarian governments that would constitute the most positive threat to every truly democratic government that the world has yet seen. I am fearful not only that there may be non-aggression pacts among the dictatorships but also that a secret understanding, if not a military alliance, exists."

Representative Izac (Dem., Cal.), member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said that "If Russia and Japan ever get together it will bring the war closer to our shores. I view this development with considerable alarm."

Representative Bloom (Dem., N. Y.), chairman of the committee, declared that there is so much "war propaganda" that the reported armistice "might be just a feeler to test world reaction."

Afraid Of This

"I have been afraid of this development," said Representative Voorhis (Dem., Cal.), "but I have hoped against hope that the democratic powers of the world would be capable of making moves to bring to an end the conflict between Japan and China on a reasonable basis. I have felt that a conclusion of the trouble in China could be reached if all nations including Japan would agree to the withdrawal of all foreign troops from China. If that chance is lost it means that the power of the dictatorships is greatly increased."

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, talked for nearly an hour today with the Japanese Ambassador, Kensuke Horinouchi, and went over the general situation in the Far East with him.

It was reported their talk dealt mostly with Japan's intentions in China now that war is raging in Europe. Japan has asked Britain and France to withdraw their troops from China, which would leave the United States the only Western power having any sizable force there.

TURKS HAIL SOVIET TIE

Istanbul Press Sees Bonds With Russia Tightened.

ISTANBUL, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Officially inspired Turkish newspapers today applauded the friendship of Turkey and Soviet Russia for the first time since Russia signed her non-aggression pact with Germany.

Despite Turkey's mutual assistance treaties with France and Great Britain the influential newspaper Dan said "Turkey is more faithful to the maintenance of good relations with Soviet Russia than with any other country in the world."

The newspaper Daumuriyad in an editorial written by its owner, an influential member of the Turkish Parliament, said: "Because of

SEP 16 1939

30.24-3339

30.24 — 3339

FRENCH WIN AIR FIGHT OVER WESTERN FRONT

SEP 16 1939

Army Says Chasers Drove Off Nazi Planes Attacking Advanced Lines—Germans Said to Be Retreating on Moselle.

PARIS, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The French High Command announced tonight that a German air fleet had been defeated in a battle low over the front lines of the western front.

A staff communique said that German planes had attacked French advance lines driving into German territory. French chaser planes roared out and gave battle, driving off the German planes, it added.

The French were said to be consolidating advances despite continued heavy shelling from German guns and counter-attacks by the Nazi rear guard.

Night Communique.

The following is the text of the General Staff's night communique:

"We consolidated the positions conquered during the preceding days and repulsed a counter-attack, inflicting losses on the enemy.

"There was strong reaction from enemy artillery and his aviation on part of the front.

"Our pursuit planes repulsed enemy planes delivering an attack against our first lines at a low altitude."

German troops were reported earlier in the day to be retreating slowly down the Moselle Valley in the face of persistent French pressure. Unofficial French advices said the Germans were leaving their advance positions before the Siegfried Line, ripping up railroad tracks which follow the course of the river.

The Germans apparently feared a French attack in force toward their base at Trier, which is only a few thousand yards in front of the Siegfried Line.

French said that German authorities had removed all civilians from the region between the frontier and the Siegfriend Line along the entire northern flank of the western front.

German artillery laid down a screen of shells on a forty-mile front extending from the Moselle, on the extreme north, to a point beyond Saarbruecken.

French forces seesawed fiercely at Saarbruecken's defenses today, alternating attacks from three sides, it was reported.

Saarbruecken, major goal of the operations, lies in Germany's rich industrial Saar valley.

The General Staff reported that in their offensive toward Trier they had established strong positions near the junction of the French, German and Luxemburg borders. Trier lies about twenty-five miles within Germany.

Gain Strong Positions.

The advance in the Trier sector, the communique said, gave the French assured positions after five days of fighting touched off in that sector by a "German offensive movement."

The communique also indicated the French line facing Saarbruecken was moving slowly toward that rich prize "despite strong enemy reactions, notably by his artillery."

The text of the War Ministry morning communique follows:

"Operations of these last few days have permitted us to assure for ourselves possession of an area in the region northeast of Sierck, which has been disputed since a German offensive movement was reported in the evening communique of September 10.

"We have, besides, advanced beyond this region.

"During the night, local improvements in our front line were made despite strong enemy reactions, notably by his artillery."

The violence of the fighting for Trier caused Luxemburg authorities to remove residents from the border region close by, although the fighting was said to have been confined strictly to German soil.

The French were reported to have fallen back about 500 yards at one point in the battle when heavy artillery poured shells onto their advancing lines. Later, however, the French regained the same ground and pushed on for an undisclosed distance.

The German defenders of Saarbruecken were reported giving ground under steady French encirclement of the city which Germany lost in the world war and regained by plebiscite only four years ago. Although Saarbruecken is seven miles in front of the main fortifications of the Siegfried Line, its capture would give the French attackers their first big "prestige" victory.

French military dispatches said the French Army commanded heights to the west and south of Saarbruecken and that other units had slogged through mud between there and Hornbach on the east.

[Reports received in Brussels from Luxemburg said French forces had occupied the villages of Apach and Maimuhlen, from which the roads lead to Perl, ten miles from the Saar River.]

French Casualties 'Slight.'

The French disclosed officially they had taken German prisoners as they pressed their advance and declared their own casualties had been slight.

Saarbruecken still was occupied by German units, the French declared, but was reported to have been deserted by its civilian population and to have ceased functioning industrially.

The French shelled all roads from the rear of the city and German artillery bombarded French positions immediately to the south of it.

Because of weather conditions preventing accurate aerial surveys, the German artillery was reported hard pressed in trying to locate French positions to the west and east of the city. The German retreat was reported, nevertheless, to be proceeding under cover of tons of high explosive shells fired from heavy batteries on the range of hills south of Saarbruecken.

Some French observers expressed belief that any German withdrawal was merely for tactical purposes. They said there were many indications that the Germans were preparing a heavy counteroffensive with re-enforcements and artillery moved up to the northern side of Saarbruecken.

Mire in Battle Zone.

A heavy rain fell in the battle zone and dirt roads were thick mires in many places. The slippery, narrow side roads slowed down the progress of the French motorized units and swollen streams increased the infantry's task of feeling its way through the broken, shell-pocked countryside.

The French strategy, reports said, consisted in varying the pressure on the German defenses from each of the three sides of the approach to Saarbruecken. French guns held some elevated positions, and one French unit was reported to have occupied a road and railroad leading indirectly to the main Siegfried Line behind the city.

See War Spreading.

Meanwhile, advices from Poland indicated to French observers that the German campaign in the east was aimed at sealing Poland's frontiers with Hungary and Rumania.

Some French sources said such a development would give the Nazis a diplomatic lever with which to exert pressure on those two southern neighbors. Many Frenchmen considered it likely that later stages of the war would involve many countries now preserving neutrality.

The heavy rain which slowed down the French machine was not altogether bad news to the French, however, as it was said also to have bogged down the German advance in Poland in some places.

The Polish position was not regarded by observers here as critical, but the great power of the German forces fighting toward Warsaw and south toward Lwow caused apprehension over how long the Poles might hold out. Dispatches published here quoted German sources as saying Warsaw now was menaced from three sides.

As for Italy's ultimate part, the French have been relatively quiet lately.

Press comment on Italy has been confined to displays of Italian newspaper accounts favoring France. One, printed today, was a report in the Italian newspaper Il Lavoro Fascista which paid tribute to the "excellent morale" of the French Army in the action against Germany in the Saar Basin.

Fighting in Mundat Forest.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Action broke out on a new sector of the western front today, according to reports reaching here, when a fierce German attack in the Mundat Forest north of Wissembourg flung back French patrols slowly penetrating the area.

Wissembourg is just within the French border, twelve miles east of Lauterbourg, where the French Maginot line elbows sharply from west-east direction to follow the Rhine south. It is forty-five miles east of Saarbruecken, goal of the chief French drive.

The German action apparently was an effort to prevent a repetition of the infiltrating process by which the French gained their foothold in the Saar area. It is from these positions that they now are threatening the city of Saarbruecken.

The nature of the Mundat Forest lands on the eastern slopes of the Vosges foothills enabled the troops of both sides, reports indicated, to engage in comparatively open fighting, with guns from the opposing lines of forts firing over them.

Should the French action in this sector develop into a full-fledged drive despite the present setback it was believed the objective would be Bergzabern. One of the big forts in the German Siegfried Line crowns a high hill in the town, which was founded by the Romans.

The region around Wissembourg was the scene of one of the decisive battles of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870. The French lost the battle and were forced back toward Metz. Both the French and German troops moving to the attack passed the graves of their forefathers who were killed fighting each other seventy years ago.

In the action in the Moselle River valley, west of Saarbruecken, it was reported that Germany's new type low-speed tanks, armed with long-barreled light anti-tank guns, appeared for the first time in counter-attacks against French tanks. The Swiss press was aroused by the fact that pictures of certain of these German tanks showed them labeled with a white cross, similar to that which appears on the Swiss flag, on a dark field.

The Swiss have a vital interest in the economic side of the war. While they depend for imported foodstuffs and other supplies on their neighbors, the belligerent nations already are reported complaining that some shipments sent to Switzerland eventually find their way across the enemy's frontiers.

STETTINIUS

Nazis Put Poland to Work.

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—While the German high command reported new successes on the Eastern front today, the Government began to draw on already conquered regions of Poland for supplies with which to wage war against France and Britain in the west.

Field Marshal Hermann Goering, director of the Reich's four-year plan, returned from a tour of the Silesian industrial area to report that factories which a week ago were manufacturing Polish munitions now were turning out bombs for German war planes.

Goering's report closely followed an announcement that the high command had ordered German submarines and warships to begin an immediate "counter-blockade" in answer to Britain's determination to intercept foodstuffs intended for the Reich.

SEP 16 1939

Poles Fighting Desperately.

A communique issued this morning by the high command describing operations on the western front said French forces which launched an attack September 12 near Schweig (a border point south of Pirmasens) had been driven back across the frontier under a heavy artillery barrage.

Successes were reported at widely separated points on the Polish front.

Near Kutno, approximately seventy miles west of Warsaw, the communique said, "very strong and desperately defending Polish forces" were thwarted in an attempt to drive southward through encircling German troops.

DNB, official German agency, said Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of staff, arrived in Lodz, today to confer with members of the general staff in charge of operations around Kutno. He also went to the front lines in the Kutno sector to study the war in detail, and gave a number of orders, DNB said.

Despite bad weather, the air force was said to have supported the fight against the encircled troops with bombs and "low attacks."

The navy was reported to have sunk an unstated number of Polish war vessels lying in the harbor of Heisternest.

In the south, troops pressing into the Ukraine were said to have crossed the Lwow-Lublin road and to be "progressing toward the Bug River."

In the Warsaw sector, German forces were reported to have crossed the Narew River east of Modlin and seized Jabiona, about ten miles northwest of the capital. The communique said these troops were approaching the Warsaw suburb of Praga, which Polish broadcasts yesterday described as in ruins.

Northeast Poland Invaded.

Approximately 100 miles east of Warsaw, forces advancing against the fortress of Brest-Litovsk "have invaded the north and northeastern zone of fortification," the communique declared.

Warsaw was reported still in Polish hands, but the communique said "five important railway lines were attacked and interrupted" east of the city.

German military circles declined to predict when the fall of the capital might be expected, but they indicated a belief it might be a matter of only a few days or even hours.

A General Staff spokesman asserted "the army's schedule for occupation of Poland is being preserved."

Government leaders, voicing confidence the campaign "to establish order in Poland" is nearing a triumphant conclusion, apparently were more concerned with a new problem—how best to exploit the portions of the country already under German domination.

They made no secret of their belief that materials and resources now available to the Reich in Poland would be of great assistance in prosecuting the war in the west.

Goering's report on his tour of inspection was calculated to reassure the High Command.

He said he found German mining engineers already making plans to step up the production of Polish coal mines, which last year produced about forty-five million tons of anthracite alone.

Other production figures were not immediately available. Resources in the conquered area include minerals and metals necessary for manufacture of war supplies.

By a twist of fate, coal from the Silesian fields will be transported to Baltic ports for Germany over a railroad built by French capital.

Between 500 and 600 million French francs (about $10,750,000) went into construction of rail connections between Katowice and the port of Gdynia. Occupation of Gdynia was announced yesterday by the German Army.

German military leaders said minor damages to the line inflicted by the retreating Polish army would be repaired in a short time.

Informed German quarters said operations in the east were progressing so well that Fuehrer Hitler, who has been following the advance closely, might be expected to return to Berlin to devote his attention to the western front.

A Chance to Trade Coal.

The Polish coal supplies now controlled by the Reich fit neatly into German plans to meet trade demands with Sweden and other Baltic countries.

Sweden's chief need is coal, and to obtain Swedish iron ore, lumber and foodstuffs, Germany has been preparing to export large quantities of her own sorely needed coal reserve.

Petroleum obtained from Poland also may figure in German trade with the Baltic States.

German authorities estimate the occupied Polish territory produces about 6 per cent of Europe's petroleum. Army engineers already have set about introducing high pressure production methods in the rich oil fields between Drohobycx and Boryslaw.

There is every appearance of confidence here that Germany's Baltic trade will not be interrupted by the British blockade. This confidence apparently was shared by the German insurance companies, which today announced reduced rates.

While still obviously incensed by the British blockade, German spokesmen insisted it would not seriously affect the Reich. They said German counter-measures—including a humane submarine campaign—would be much more damaging to Britain.

See Neutral States Affected Most.

The German viewpoint was that the British blockade would most directly hit neutral States wishing to trade with Germany. No stone is being left unturned in the diplomatic field here to arouse neutrals to oppose what is termed a British effort to dictate what "neutrals may buy, wear, eat and ship."

The conservative economic news service Volkswirtschaftliche Korrespondez predicted that Great Britain would regret having taken steps which it described as inviting sea war on commerce.

The service intimated that submarines and surface raiders would be able to make serious inroads on the British food supply.

The news service said Britain produces only one-fourth the food she needs and has only a six to eight months' store of supplies. The British wheat supply was said to be sufficient for only three months, the meat supply for six months, sugar and fruits three months, and butter six weeks.

Germany, it was contended, can hold out indefinitely with trade routes to the north, east and south open.

Peace Rumors Revive as Nazis Push On in East

Berlin Again Hears Duce Is Planning Overture; Battle at Lodz Enters 7th Day

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—German army communiques told today of new Nazi successes in Poland while diplomatic quarters renewed talk of peace prospects.

The communiques said Nazi forces continued pounding at two of three mainstays of Polish defense, Warsaw and Kutno. The third of these mainstays, at Radom, was reported annihilated. The armies also were said to have entered Polish fortifications at Brzesc (Brest-Litovsk), 100 miles east of Warsaw, after fierce bombing activity by the air force, despite unfavorable weather, had paved the way. The fortifications were reported partly blown up and nine enemy armored cars destroyed.

SEP 16 1939

"Polish war vessels still lying in the harbor of Heisternest were sunk by bombs," the communique asserted.

Talk of peace efforts by Premier Benito Mussolini persisted with the return from Italy of the Italian Ambassador, Bernardo Attolico. The Ambassador made a flying visit to his homeland after conferring with Nazi State Secretary Ernst von Weizsaecker early in the week.

Official quarters were silent but the informed news service, Dienst aus Deutschland, wrote that "Berlin political circles are noting with interest the fact that the international press is again discussing the possibility of peace." Some diplomats said they believed "something was in the wind," but added that they had small hope for its success.

Poles, reported surrounded by the Germans north of Lodz, eighty miles southwest of Warsaw, were said to have made another attempt to break through toward the capital, but the high command communique said the effort failed.

The sixth day of what was described as the biggest battle of the war ended with Polish troops still fighting fiercely against surrender north of the German-occupied city of Lodz. Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, army chief of staff arrived in the Lodz area during the day to direct the battle in person, while Fuehrer Adolf Hitler continued his shuttling among the front lines.

Near Kutno, approximately seventy miles west of Warsaw, the communique said, "very strong and desperately defending Polish forces" were thwarted in an attempt to drive southward through encircling German troops. Despite bad weather, the air force was said to have supported the fight against the encircled troops with bombs and "low attacks."

In the Warsaw sector, German forces were reported to have crossed the Narew River east of Modlin and seized Jablona, about ten miles northwest of the capital. The communique said that these troops were approaching the Warsaw suburb of Praga, which Polish broadcasts yesterday described as in ruins.

Modlin Left for Later

Pursuing its policy of encircling its military objectives, the German army was reported to have left only enough forces around the Modlin fortress to prevent the Poles from sallying forth, and marched the bulk of the East Prussian contingents reported descending upon the capital toward Praga. In other words, Modlin, eighteen miles northeast of Warsaw, is being left for later, probably in the hope of starving the garrison.

Warsaw was reported still in Polish hands, but the communique said "five important railway lines were attacked and interrupted" east of the city.

German military circles declined to predict when the fall of the capital might be expected, but they indicated that it might be a matter of only a few days or even hours. A general staff spokesman asserted "the army's schedule for occupation of Poland is being preserved."

The Polish sea force, according to today's communiques, appears to be virtually destroyed, except for three cruisers which escaped to England before hostilities began. With Gdynia said to be in German hands, it was felt here that the last vestige of Polish resistance in the Baltic—the troops fighting outside of the city—seemed doomed. Poland's last remaining submarine was said to have surrendered at Tallinn, Estonia, thus removing the last threat to German mastery of the Baltic and to her highly important trade lines with Scandinavia.

French

Paris, Sept. 15 (AP)—The French Air Ministry today issued the following communique:

Operations of these last few days have permitted us to assure for ourselves possession of an area in the region northeast of Sierck, which has been disputed since a German offensive movement was reported in the evening communique of September 10.

SEP 16 1939

We have, besides, advanced beyond this region.

During the night local improvements in our front line were made despite strong enemy reactions, notably by his artillery.

Paris, Sept. 15-(ap)-
TEXT of the General Staff's night communique:

"We consolidated the positions conquered during the preceding days and repulsed a counterattack, inflicting losses on the enemy.

"There was strong reacti n from enemy artillery and his aviation on part of the front.

"Our pursuit planes repulsed enemy planes delivering an attack against our first lines at a low altitude."

(End Text)
--00--

SEP 16 1939

German

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP)—The German Army High Command issued the following communique on operations in Poland:

The German Army has crossed the Lwow-Lublin road and is progressing toward the Bug river.

Troops which crossed the Narew river east of Modlin have taken Jablona and are approaching the Warsaw suburb of Praga.

Forces directed against the fortress of Brest-Litovsk (Brzesc and Bugiem) have invaded the north and northeastern zones of fortifications.

The city of Gydnia and the southern port of Gydnia were occupied by German troops. East of Warsaw five important railway lines were attacked and interrupted in many places.

At 10 A. M. the German supreme army command issued the following communique:

On September 14 the southern wing of the German eastern army already had crossed the Lwow-Lublin road. Very strong and desperately defending Polish forces encircled around Kutno yesterday again attempted to break through southward. These attacks also failed.

Eastward of the Vistula river German troops are nearing the suburb of Praga from the north, east and southeast. There, too, Polish attempts to break through eastward were warded off.

Those troops aiming at the Brest-Litovsk fortress entered the fortification zone from the north. The fortifications have been partly blown up. The citadel still is occupied by the enemy.

The city of Gydnia is in German hands. Naval forces participated effectively in the fight around Gydnia and on the Hela peninsula. Entry into the southern harbor of Gydnia was forced.

Despite bad weather conditions, the air force successfully attacked rail lines and stations and supported, with bombs and low attacks, the army's fight against enemy forces encircled around Kutno.

Polish war vessels still lying in the harbor of Heisternest were sunk by bombs.

In the west, enemy artillery was active east of Saarbrücken. The enemy, who launched an attack September 12 near Schweig (a border point south of Pirmasens), retreated beyond the border under an impressive German artillery barrage. Air attacks on Reich territory did not occur.

P.). — Germany's Blitzkrieg (lightning war) has added approximately half of Poland's 105,000 square miles to the Nazis' Lebensraum (living room) in two weeks of bitter fighting.

SEP 16 1939

Smashing into Poland from the north, south and west and blasting down from the air, Adolf Hitler's warriors today were straddling the main highway running literally through the middle of Poland after a motorized occupation of all of western Poland except for the desperately defended peninsula containing Warsaw, which still was jutting into Nazi-conquered territory.

The most intense German attacks today were aimed at Warsaw and Lwow, Poland's two largest cities, with the Germans' tactics indicating they were seeking to outflank both cities by engulfing them gradually by drives from the north and south.

A radio station identified by the announcer as in Lwow, declared today that German warplanes bombed Warsaw and Lwow continuously during the night.

The announcer's voice then was drowned out by the screech of sirens apparently warning of another raid.

He warned all persons in war areas in Poland to take every protective precaution since, he said, German planes were dropping bombs everywhere.

The Germans' swift advances and the disorganization of Poland's civil government, with its resultant lack of official statistics, made an estimate of casualties in the first fortnight of the war a mere guess.

From all available information, however, Polish military losses were high. The civilian population throughout the battle zone and behind the lines also was said to have suffered severely in death, injuries, and property destruction.

The Poles admitted today that a German mechanized force held Zamosc, on the main highway between Lublin and Lwow. (Lwow is 220 miles southeast of Warsaw, with Lublin about halfway between the two cities.) This meant that Poland had been split in half, with the greater portion of its population of 33,000,000 either already semi-prisoners in occupied territory, or fleeing toward Hungary, Rumania and Latvia.

New Government Seat Found.

The Polish Government and diplomatic corps today were located at Zaleszczyki, on the Dniester River at the Rumanian frontier, in a report by Stefani, official Italian news agency. The report said that, if this furthest corner of southeastern Poland should become unsafe, the Polish officials were ready to flee into Rumania.

The pressure of the German mechanized drive previously had forced the Government from Warsaw to Lublin and then to Krzem-

Germans Intensify Their Drive in Poland; U. S. Ambassador Crosses Into Rumania

Nazis Attempting to Pinch Off Warsaw and Lwow by Flank Movements.

POLAND NOW SPLIT IN TWO

SEP 16 1939

Berlin Admits Troops Face Desperate Counter Attacks by Poles at Kutno.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 15 (A.

30.24—3341

Biddle at Rumanian Frontier

SEP 16 1939

U. S. Embassy on Wheels Is Set Up in Polish Border Village—3 Women in Party.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The American embassy staff and several other foreign missions arrived today at Zaleszczyki, a little village on the Polish-Rumanian frontier, in a new move along the trail of Poland's traveling Government. If necessary now the diplomats have only to step across the border into neutral Rumania.

The move was the third for the American Ambassador, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., his wife and daughter, Peggy Thompson Schulz, and Mrs. Biddle's secretary, Mary McKenzie, since leaving bomb-wrecked Warsaw.

They have traveled by automobile—an embassy on wheels—through the back roads of Poland, setting up makeshift headquarters wherever they stopped, living from hand to mouth.

They stopped first at Naleczow, just outside Lublin, where the Polish Government established itself temporarily.

The continuous German advance sent them across western Poland to Krzemieniec, twenty-five miles from the frontier of Soviet Ukraine. There, far removed from the battle-front, foreign staff members felt reasonably sure they would remain settled for some time.

Hunt for Living Quarters.

They searched out living quarters, unloaded their archives and personal belongings and sought to establish themselves in order. Motor cars, however, were kept in readiness for another dash.

Mrs. Biddle, her daughter and secretary were the only women of the American embassy who made the last trek to Zaleszczyki. The others have gone on to Bucharest.

There was no information whether the latest trip was made by day or night, but the scene repeated that of the other withdrawals from danger as cars flying foreign flags and loaded high with luggage took to the highways.

Most of the diplomats were weary from lack of sleep, uncertainty of hours and disruption of the routine of their lives at Warsaw.

There were touches of wartime humor in the stay at Krzemieniec. North Winship, counselor of the American embassy, had to shop for his own bed. Mrs. Biddle searched the village for a collection of pots and pans to set up housekeeping. The French embassy took over an old building with long rows of beds like a school dormitory.

Among the diplomats were South American, Turkish, Greek and Japanese embassy attaches.

sible famine.

They said the situation was so bewildering that parents were sewing the names of children on underclothing as a method of identification.

Rumanian authorities intensified frontier control while determining how to deal with the increasingly serious situation.

The diplomats said Germany now apparently was determined to cut off Poland from Rumania before rains bog down the operations, no matter what the cost of a swift advance.

Group of Foreign Diplomats Arriving at Cernauti to Escape War Tell of Nazi Drive to Cut Warsaw Off From Bucharest.

SEP 16 1939

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A caravan of foreign diplomats, their wives and families including the American Ambassador to Poland, Anthony J. D. Biddle, arrived in Cernauti at 6 o'clock tonight (1 P. M. New York time) to escape the war which is flooding swiftly into extreme southeast Poland.

Members of the group—60 persons in all—brought reports of a tremendous new German drive aimed to cut Poland off from Rumania.

[A dispatch from London stated that the Rumanian legation there tonight called on all Rumanians belonging to army, air force or navy reserves in their own country to report to the Rumanian Military Attache in London.]

With Ambassador Biddle were Mrs. Biddle; his daughter, Peggy Thompson Schulz, and Mrs. Biddle's secretary, Mary McKenzie, of Hopkinsville, Ky.

Others in the party included diplomatic representatives of Brazil, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Sweden, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Japan.

All found difficulty in getting accommodations in already overcrowded Cernauti. Most of them planned to leave at once for Bucharest.

Beck's Wife in Group.

The arrivals at this town, just across the Polish frontier included Mme. Beck, wife of the Polish Foreign Minister Josef Beck, and their three children, who are on their way to Paris.

The diplomats said they left Zaleszczyki because of threatened raids by German warplanes. Planes appeared over the town yesterday, they said, and there were several alarms but no bombs were dropped. Zaleszczyki has been a temporary Polish Government headquarters.

They reported refugee conditions in that vicinity were becoming desperate with indications of a pos-

ENVOYS FLEE POLAND IN FACE OF NAZI DRIVE

SEP 16 1939

U. S. Ambassador And Family Among Diplomats Reaching Rumania

New Reich Advance With Vast Numbers Of Fresh Reservists Reported

By ELMER W. PETERSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 15—Foreign diplomats fleeing war-torn Poland arrived here tonight with reports of a tremendous new German drive through southeast Poland designed to cut off Poland from Rumania.

The new southern offensive was reported being built up with vast numbers of reserves pouring in from Germany, while the air attack was being accelerated.

Extensive fighting was reported in the region of Lwow, largest city in southeastern Poland, which lies slightly more than one hundred miles northeast of the Polish-Rumanian frontier.

U. S. Envoy Included

The caravan of diplomats which arrived at this town just across the Polish border included the American Ambassador to Poland, Anthony J. D. Biddle, Jr., Mrs. Biddle, their daughter, Peggy Thompson Schulz, and Mrs. Biddle's secretary, Mary McKenzie. It was their fourth move since leaving bomb-wrecked Warsaw.

Others in the party of sixty which reached here at 6 o'clock tonight included Mme. Josef Beck, wife of the Polish Foreign Minister, and their three children, and diplomatic representatives of Brazil, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Sweden, Japan, The Netherlands and Switzerland.

Cernauti, already overcrowded, offered few accommodations, and most of the diplomatic refugees arranged to leave quickly for Bucharest. Madame Beck is on her way to Paris.

The diplomats said they left Zaleszcyki, an emergency Polish government headquarters, because of threatened German air raids. They reported planes flew over the town yesterday and there were numerous alarms, but no bombs were dropped.

Refugees Face Famine

The diplomats reported refugee conditions in the vicinity of Zaleszcyki, a village on the Polish-Rumanian border, were becoming desperate and said famine appeared to be threatening those fleeing before the Nazi war machine.

Polish reports at the frontier quoted captured German pilots as saying the best German airmen were being saved for the western front, although members of the famous Condor Legion, which fought in Spain, were among those on the eastern front. These reports said youths of seventeen and eighteen were among German warplane crews.

It was reported here that the Germans were employing fully 2,000 airplanes on the eastern front, bombing troop concentrations, patrolling and carrying on observation flights over the entire area. Under the circumstances, it was pointed out, there is no longer any "rear" to the war.

Nazi Spies Are Active

Polish sources said that the situation, both among the military and the civilians, was complicated by the extensive spy system worked out by Germans in Poland. This system, they said, utilized the German minority population as well as hundreds of men dropped by parachutes from German planes to work at disrupting communications and sabotage.

The large number of Polish-speaking Germans of Polish citizenship was said to make detection most difficult. Secret wireless was reported being used extensively to keep the German army and air force informed in every particular.

Pathetic scenes were enacted as refugees reached points near the Rumanian frontier, only to learn that they lacked necessary documents to proceed.

Only a limited number were permitted to cross the frontier as Rumanian authorities intensified border control while determining how to deal with the increasingly serious situation.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 Polish civilian refugees were reported massed within a short distance of Rumania.

The experiences of Ambassador Biddle and his family have been similar to those of other diplomats. They have traveled by automobile, through the back roads of Poland, setting up makeshift headquarters wherever they stopped, living from hand to mouth. Their first stop out of Warsaw was at Naleczon, just outside Lublin, where the Polish government established itself temporarily.

Then they moved across western Poland to Krzemieniec, twenty-five miles from the Soviet Ukraine frontier, in the path of a German advance. There they sought to establish some semblance of a headquarters, although motor cars were kept in readiness for another dash. From Krzemieniec the group moved to Zaleszcyki. The stay there was short and tonight they arrived a Cernauti.

REICH TOWNS TO FEEL LOAD OF WAR COSTS

SEP 16 1939

Communities As Well As Individuals Must Bear Share Of Burden

They Cannot Increase Taxes, But Have To Cut Civic Expenses

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 15—Every German city and commune, in addition to the individual German citizens, must pay the costs of the 1939 war, according to figures revealed tonight by two economic statistical services.

Gemeinde und Wirtschaft, correspondence service for municipal matters, estimated 1,250,000,000 marks—about $500,000,000—must be contributed each year of the war by the cities and communes out of their receipts from taxation.

Each month, the figures showed, the cities and communes must divert two and a half per cent. of receipts from taxes on agriculture and forestry undertakings, five per cent. on real estate, seven and a half per cent. on business and ten per cent. of the tax on citizens.

Estimated Distribution

While it was admitted that such estimates could not be exact, Gemeinde und Wirtschaft said it believed "its figures conservative" and distributed as follows:

The tax on business and trade of all kinds to yield 70,000,000 marks annually for the special war chest; the citizen's tax, 130,000,000; real estate, 420,000,000; agriculture and forestry, 110,000,000.

That would total 1,360,000,000 marks. The service said the taxes were "absolutely certain" to produce at least 1,250,000,000 marks. The nominal value of the mark is 40 cents.

Cities and communities would not be permitted to unload this special war contribution payment onto individual taxpayers by increased rates. Instead, it was said, the money must be obtained from increased economy—paring down the communal expenses.

Citizen Must Pay

That does not mean, however, that the citizen must not pay. He must reach deep into his pocket to hand over his share through six main channels, some affecting the individual directly, others indirectly.

The Reich expects to add to the war chest by:

1. A special war surtax on incomes amounting to fifty per cent. of the regular income tax.
2. A twenty per cent. special war tax on the retail price of beer and tobacco.
3. A war tax on champagne of one mark a bottle.
4. A tax of 100 marks ($40) per 100 liters of cordials and liqueurs.
5. Cutting Federal administrative costs fifty per cent.
6. Lowering wages and prices, thus further cutting public expenditures so the difference would be available for war needs.

Other Figures Given

Pressedienst für Wirthschaftsaufbau, another economic service, estimated receipts of the present income tax in Germany as more than 5,000,000,000 marks—equal to $2,000,000,000—annually. Thus the special income tax alone should yield 2,500,000,000 marks, or $1,000,000,000.

This service said "a respectable number of hundreds of million marks" would come in from the taxes on beer, champagne and hard liquor.

It said specifically that there would be no increase in taxes on corporations, because firms and plants would have to pay from their own funds for additional upkeep, transformation to a war basis and expansions.

Nor is the Reich's Finance Ministry planning special war loans "presently," it was siad.

Pressedienst für Wirthschaftsaufbau quoted Fritz Reinhardt, secretary of the Finance Ministry, as saying "the financing of the war is assured. Measures calculated to reduce the value of money will not be invoked."

LONDON TELLS RESULT OF WAR ON SUBMARINES

SEP 16 1939

Announces That 'a Number' Have Been Destroyed and Many Attacks Made.

BRITAIN CALLS UP MORE MEN

Second Batch of Conscripts Is Summoned—German-bound

Ore and Oil Seized.

LONDON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The British Ministry of Information announced this afternoon that "a number" of German submarines have been destroyed by patrols of British destroyers and airplanes.

The U-boat survivors were rescued and captured wherever possible, the Ministry said:

SEP 16 1939

The following communique was issued:

"His Majesty's destroyers, patrol vessels and aircraft have been carrying out constant patrols over wide areas in search of enemy U-boats. Many attacks have been made and a number of U-boats have been destroyed. Survivors have been rescued and captured when possible."

The Ministry also announced that these goods consigned to Germany had been seized by the contraband control:

28,500 tons of petroleum; 26,350 tons of iron ore; 3,400 tons of hematite ore; 4,600 tons of manganese ore; 7,300 tons of wood pulp; 6,000 tons of pebble phosphate and a number of mixed cargoes.

Long War Again Envisaged.

The Ministry of Information also declared today that Britain's war preparations "are not and cannot be" built for a short term struggle with Germany. Asserting that the German preparations "once again seem based on the hope of a lightning war," the Ministry added:

"By dint of great exertions we had, before the outbreak of war, built up an extremely powerful navy and air force and created the skeleton of an extremely powerful army.

"That skeleton is now having flesh put on it, is now being supplied with a vast industrial cushion which will support its growing weight and will—much faster than in 1914 to 1918—make a contribution to the Allied effort on land in every way conforming to the resources of our country and to the desire of our people."

Britain Calls More Conscripts.

The second batch of British Army conscripts under the conscription act of last spring was called up today. The Southern Army command authorized the information that the new militiamen had reported to more than a dozen reception depots.

British reports, meanwhile, indicated an unceasing vigil of the seas to enforce naval and economic warfare against Germany.

In the House of Commons, which met for slightly more than an hour to discuss minor points of Britain's war legislation, it was announced that Prime Minister Chamberlain would deliver his third statement on the progress of hostilities when the House reconvenes next Wednesday.

The House passed a wartime control of employment bill through third reading. The intention of this measure, through sharp curbs, is to prevent non-essential work from attracting men away from vital war industries. It gives the Minister of Labor sweeping enforcement authority.

U. S. Ship's Cargo Seized.

The first disclosure of a war prize cargo involving an American freighter, the Warrior of Mobile, Ala., was made yesterday. A public notice said about 5,900 tons of phosphate had been taken from the Warrior and was being held by order of the Marshal of the Admiralty.

No details were given of when or how the cargo was seized. (The Phosphate Export Association in New York said the shipment had been paid for in cash before the Warrior sailed and that the association had no further interest in it.)

The Ministry of Economic Warfare previously had announced seizure of the cargo of The Netherlands steamship Gornelo as suspected contraband and the searching of the American freighter Black Osprey. The Admiralty had disclosed that more than a score of ships had been detained for investigation and that a search for contraband already had been made aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, flagship of the Holland-American Line.

The first meeting between the Duke of Windsor and his brother, King George VI, who succeeded to the throne when the former King abdicated nearly three years ago, raised the belief in informed quarters that Windsor soon might begin work in a war assignment.

Britain Breathing Easier.

Britain became progressively brighter as rigid precautionary measures imposed at the outbreak of the war gradually were lifted.

All movie theaters opened today, but Earl De La Warr, president of the Board of Education, warned "the time may come when air raids are a grim reality."

He warned mothers in a radio broadcast last night not to bring their children back from rural refuges "just because nothing has happened during the first few days of the war."

London's West End—the British Broadway—regained a little of its war-lost gayety today with the reopening of movies for daytime shows. But even though the familiar bright lights flashed until dusk there was a reminder that it was wartime in the watchers and air raid squads standing by at each theater. In the event of raids, the management would announce the situation from the stage. Those who wanted their money's worth could remain—at their own risk.

Newspapers gave prominence to the account of the British bombing of German battleships at Kiel as related by an anonymous Royal Air Force flight leader.

"Let the Germans consider the deed and know that there are thousands of young men in Britain envious of their brothers' handiwork and eager to show that their own mettle is no less," the Daily Express commented.

Those Air Raids at Kiel.

The first eyewitness account of the air raids on Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, Germany, were given yesterday through the Ministry of Information.

The Wilhelmshaven raid, the leader reported, was carried out successfully by three British planes and without a casualty.

"We could see a German warship," he said, "taking on stores from two tenders at her stern. . . .

"Flying at 100 feet above mast height all three aircraft converged on her. I flew straight ahead. The pilot of the second aircraft came across from one side, and the third crossed from the other side.

"When we flew on top of the battleship we could see the crews running fast to their stations. We dropped our bombs. The second pilot, flying behind, saw two hit. We came 'round, and the ship's pompom guns began to fire as we headed for home. My navigator saw shells bursting almost on the tail of the aircraft.

"The second pilot, swooping across, took a photograph which was subsequently found to be very blurred owing to the weather conditions at the time just before he dropped his first bomb."

One Struck Amidships.

The officer said the pilot of the third plane told him the second bomber's missle "appeared to drop dead amidships."

The account given by the officers and crew from another squadron which participated in the raids in the Kiel area said one of three bombing planes was hit by sheels and bullets, but returned home safely.

They told of finding the Elbe Estuary and of following its course until a number of German naval vessels were sighted from an altitude of 6,000 feet. The report continued:

"The enemy held his fire until we were almost over the target. Then suddenly he opened with every gun he could bring to bear on us; it was terrific, especially the firing from the big ships, which seemed to carry seven anti-aircraft guns on either beam. . . .

"We made our aircraft as difficult targets as we could by maneuvering. We then straightened out and dropped our bombs. At once we rose up into the clouds with the shells bursting round us and made for home, after an effective smack at the enemy. . . ."

Two of the returning pilots reported they sighted a submarine heading at high speed for Germany. Although it submerged, they said it would have been an easy victim had not their bomb racks been emptied earlier.

SCENE AND TOLL OF ACTION ARE KEPT SECRET

SEP 16 1939

Tons Of Contraband Consigned To Germany Are Intercepted

Organization Of Field Forces For France Moving Rapidly

ROBT ROMNEY

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 15—The British Admiralty declared tonight its forces had destroyed a number of German submarines in widespread fighting on the seas.

Without detailing the engagements, the Admiralty gave this forty-two-word report on its part of the announced campaign to stop German shipping and hunt down enemy submarines:

"His Majesty's destroyers, patrol vessels and aircraft have been carrying out constant patrols over wide areas in search of enemy U-boats. Many attacks have been made and a number of U-boats have been destroyed. Survivors have been rescued and captured when possible."

No Word Of Lives Lost

An official silence kept secret how many lives were lost.

Success in the British drive to choke off Germany's overseas supplies was reported by the Ministry of Information, which said tons of contraband consigned to Germany had been intercepted and detained.

Included in the contraband were petroleum, iron ore, wood pulp, pebble phosphate and a variety of mixed cargoes.

The Government also announced that organization of the field forces which will swell those already in France was proceeding "much faster" than during the World War. It added the rapidly growing army was "being supplied with a vast industrial cushion" in line with Britain's plans for a long war.

Queen Given Posts

King George, the London Gazette announced tonight, has approved appointment of Queen Elizabeth as commandant in chief of the women's royal naval service, the auxiliary territorial service and the woman's auxiliary air force.

The Duke of Windsor, returned to aid his country after an almost three-year voluntary exile that followed his abdication, called on Prime Minister Chamberlain. He also conferred with War Minister Leslie Hoare-Belisha.

Queen Mother Mary lunched with King George and Queen Elizabeth today. It was the first time she had seen her son since the war began.

Civil defense problems also occupied Great Britain's leaders today.

Air-Raid Grants

The Ministry of Pensions laid before Parliament a plan for grants to civilians injured in air raids and pensions for dependents of victims. The pension rates, it was announced, will be broadly along the lines of those applicable to private soldiers.

The Ministry of Agriculture disclosed a plan to give local authorities powers to purchase land and allot it for gardening and farming and to assist in the purchase of seeds and implements.

There were more echoes of the war of words that parallels the war of bullets.

Blame Nazi Propaganda

The British Information Ministry charged German propagandists had circulated reports in Belgium that a British landing on the Belgian coast was imminent.

"There is fortunately no reason to believe that such crude German propaganda would be successful," the Ministry said, charging it was designed to "sow distrust of Great Britain in Belgium."

Pilot Officer R. L. J. Edwards, Sergeant Observer Booth and Aircraftman Slattery, who took part in the Royal Airforce bombing of German warships at Kiel September 4, were listed officially as missing. German reports that the British lost twelve planes in the raid were denied, but there was no attempt to refute an earlier report five planes were casualties.

London Theaters Open

Deprived of the theater and movies since the war with Germany began, London filled its playhouses today as they opened again for daytime shows.

Long lines—the British call them queues—were waiting at the ticket windows when the shows opened.

You had to have your gas mask to get an admission ticket.

The programs showed the haste with which they were assembled, but there was no criticism—the crowds were too pleased to have a show at all.

"Welcome Relief"

The newsreel announced a war resumé, which preceded views of the Australian stars winning the Davis Cup from the United States.

"A welcome relief from the war news," said the announcer.

Next came President Roosevelt saying he hoped and believed America could stay out of the war. There was an indefinable rustle through the audience at that time.

There was a shot of a football game—without spectators. "No crowds permitted, you know," said the announcer. "The army team lost—probably had its mind on the more important struggle."

Hungary Shuns Declaration of Her Neutrality

Attack on Versailles Pact Also Stirs Fear of War in Southeast Europe

BUDAPEST, Sept. 15 (AP).—Hungary's denunciation of the Versailles treaty, her refusal to proclaim her neutrality, and her notice to the world that she would "stand firm until the very last man" to protect he vital interests, caused diplomatic circles today to speculate as to how long neutrality would continue to rule southeastern Europe.

Foreign Minister Count Stefan Csaky's speech last night to the Parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee was considered of prime importance in view of the belief of well informed observers that on Hungary's actions depend a continued peace in the five other little nations now standing aloof from war. Csaky said a Hungarian declaration of neutrality in the present European conflict was "needless," since "any declaration of that sort only could complicate our national life in case of a long-term war." In elaboration, he said that "no danger imperils Hungary from the part of adversaries fighting near her frontiers."

Csaky has been doing much airplane shuttling among Budapest, Rome and Berlin recently. His latest trip was last week. In his address, Csaky praised Premier Benito Mussolini for being the first to attack "sinistrous" peace treaties, and gave him credit for the fact that the entire world had not yet "burst into flames." He expressed Hungary's "sincere regret" that she was not recognized in the Versailles treaty, adding that that settlement was bound to be followed by the present "dreadful revenge."

SEP 16 1939

Also attracting much speculation was his declaration that the situation of the Hungarian minority in Rumania was considered "serious." Emphasizing the determination of Hungary's statesmen and army "to protect the soil of working Hungarian people," he said, "the answer is still delayed from Rumania regarding Hungary's proposals" for a pact giving greater rights to Hungarian minorities. Approximately 1,500,000 Hungarians live in Rumania, chiefly in the Transylvania region given to Rumania after the World War.

In the opinion of some foreign observers, pro-axis speeches by Count Csaky at this stage were prompted by a desire to appease local Nazis, who have been loud in their demands that Hungary line up openly with Germany. Also a factor, it was believed, was a desire to appease Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, who has a mighty mechanized army just across Hungary's northern frontier.

Local Nazis have been making some headway with arguments that correspondence between Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Edouard Benes, former President of

1939

30. 24-3343.

30 24 — 3343

Czecho-Slovakia, as well as the recruiting of Czech army units in France and England, were indications that Czecho-Slovakia might be recreated if Germany lost the war. They claim the Little Entente (Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia) would then be lined up once more against Hungary, with the result that this nation would lose Ruthenia, all chance of regaining other portions of Slovakia would disappear and Transylvania would continue as part of Rumania. These developments would be great blows to Hungarian national aims.

Some conservatives also take the attitude that Hungary has nothing to lose and plenty to gain by lining up with Germany. They call Csaky's stand a sound piece of power politics.

One conservative spokesman put it this way:

SEP 16 1939

"Czecho-Slovakia was all an open friend of England and France. Look what happened to her. So was Poland; now half her territory is a carnage house.

"We are in a dangerous position geographically and politically. We don't want to be swallowed up or devastated. Csaky may have the solution which will save us from both dangers."

PATH OF DUTCH IS ROCKY ONE

Netherlands Is Sorely Tried by Pressure of War.

FACES TRADE DIFFICULTIES

Britain's Stopping of Liner One More Aggravating Incident.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Netherlands is finding the path of peace a rocky one.

The country's objective is to remain at peace and to prevent incidents that might have grave consequences, while at the same time maintaining her international trade.

SEP 16 1939

This objective has been difficult and expensive. The nation has mobilized about 420,000 troops to supplement the regular army of 30,000. These 450,000 men are doing what is largely police work to keep the nation out of the European conflict.

A full investigation has been ordered of the shooting down of a Netherlands naval plane by a German warplane on Wednesday. The German plane and its crew were detained, and the German Government has offered to pay indemnity for the Netherlands.

Germany's version was that the crew of the Nazi plane [illegible] they were being attacked [illegible] could not identify the Netherlands craft in time to avoid the conflict.

The Nieuw Amsterdam Incident.

The stopping of the trans-Atlantic liner Nieuw Amsterdam by British men-of-war in the English Channel Wednesday emphasized another phase of the difficulties confronting this nation.

[The British announced the liner was examined for contraband and released.]

The Netherlands position, officials have declared repeatedly, is one of strictest neutrality. Combatant nations have been warned that no belligerent fighting craft will be permitted to enter Netherlands territorial waters or fly over the country.

Foreign planes, under a recent ruling, will be signalled to land. If they do not comply they may be fired upon.

A day and night watch is kept for trespassing planes. The Dutch tricolor flies from church steeples as well as Government buildings.

At sea, minesweepers patrol adjacent waters for floating mines, several of which have been found off the coast. Thirty Dutch Navy men were killed when a sweeper struck a Netherlands protective mine last week.

Effects on Business.

To test defensive possibilities in relation to present water levels, a small portion of the Province of Utrecht, southeast of Amsterdam, was flooded. About one-fourth of the nation's 13,000 square miles is protected by more than 1,500 miles of dikes.

Among the effects upon business attributed to the war are the following:

Curtailment of service by the K. L. M. (Royal Dutch, Air Line.)

A boom market in shipping stocks, and heavy trading on the Amsterdam stock exchange in American and Dutch "war babies"—steels, aviation, copper, rubber and similar issues.

A drop in the flower bulb business, which is expected to show a 50 per cent reduction. Last year it aggregated about $16,000,000.

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP)—

the German high command reported tonight that a total of thirty-one Polish battle planes had been destroyed today on the eastern front.

The command said the German air force caused such havoc on the railways and roads east of the Vistula river that the retreat of Polish forces was greatly hindered.

SEP 16 1939

Minelayer Destroyed

D. N. B., official German news agency, said in a report from Königsberg, East Prussia, that power divers of the German air force had bombed and "destroyed" a Polish minelayer and two gunboats in the harbor at Heisternest, which is on the Hel peninsula, near Gdynia.

The flyers reported, D. N. B. said, that an explosion occurred on another ship and that two more were damaged.

[Editor's Note—The only Polish minelayer listed in Jane's "Fighting Ships," standard work on the world's navies, is the 2,227-ton Gryf, which was completed early in 1938. Only two gunboats are listed, the Komendant Pilsudski and the General Haller, both of 342 tons.]

11 Planes Wrecked

In the Ukraine region eleven Polish planes were destroyed at the air field at Luck, the high command said in its announcement. Two of these were shot down in battles, it was said.

At Brody eight planes were reported shot down in flames after a sharp clash with German fighters. Dispatches from German land forces stated that seven Polish planes were captured.

The high command said the outstanding group of German aces so far developed by the war is the squadron commanded by Capt. Wilhelm Gentzen.

These flyers are credited with the destruction of seventy-four planes, of which twenty-eight were reported shot down in air battles.

Warsaw Bombed All Night

BUDAPEST, Sept. 15 (AP).—A radio station identified by the announcer as in Lwow, Poland, declared today German warplanes bombed Warsaw and Lwow continuously during the night. The announcer's voice then was drowned out by the screech of sirens apparently warning of another raid.

SEP 16 1939

Report Armored Cars Destroyed.

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A DNB (official German news agency) dispatch from Koenigsberg today announced destruction of nine enemy armored cars in a successful skirmish east of the fortress at Brest-Litovsk, Poland.

SEP 16 1939

Hitler Extends Amnesty.

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler today extended his recent army amnesty decree to include the civilian population. Monetary fines up to 1,000 marks ($250), prison, arrest and penitentiary sentences not exceeding three months were canceled. Pending cases, if they do not involve sentences of greater than three months, also were dropped.

Germans Discuss Trade in Brussels.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A German mission arrived today to resume negotiations with the Belgian Government over maintaining trade in accord with treaties made before the outbreak of war. Germany has asked that such trade be continued. Belgium is expected to send permanent commercial missions soon to Berlin, London and Paris.

SEP 16 1939

Reds Ground Nazi Plane

Moscow, Sept. 15 (AP).—Tass, Soviet official news agency, reported a twin-motored German bomber was forced down by Soviet machine-gunners when it flew over the Russian-Polish border today.

The news agency said the plane came down near the village of Lugino after flying over the town of Olevsk in the Ukraine.

The crew of five was said to have been sent to Kiev and the plane placed under guard.

(A number of Polish planes have rptd forced down by Soviet troops after flying over the Soviet border.)

#

—CAPTIVES—

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 15—Three captured British aviators were interviewed on a German short-wave broadcast, heard in America last night from 7 32 to 7.52 (E.S.T.). The broadcast included a description of a brilliant miltiary funeral given a fourth British flyer who died of his injuries in a German hospital.

A first-person account by the German aviator, Sergeant Grabbe, who shot down one of the British planes off the German coast, opened the program.

SEP 16 1939

Says Three Britons Drowned

He told how he landed his craft and went to the rescue of the British crew after making sure no other British plane was near by. Three of the crew drowned, but he pulled out the fourth, Flying Officer Edwards.

Edwards, questioned by the announcer, said he had been "wonderfully treated."

"They treat me just like I was a German officer," he said, "except that I am constantly under guard."

One Has Fractured Foot

The broadcast then was transferred to a German naval officers' hospital. There two more captives, Sergt. Observer George Booth and Aircraftsman Larry Slattery, were interviewed.

The announcer jovially mentioned Slattery's Tipperary origin, and Booth made a few humorous remarks about his fractured foot. He said he hoped to play football again soon.

"How About Your Food?"

"How about your food?" the announcer asked Booth.

"Well . . . It's different. . . . I'm not exactly starving," the airman answered somewhat hesitantly.

"Where do you come from?" the announcer interrupted.

"Yorkshire," replied Booth.

"That's the trouble, ladies and gentlemen," said the announcer. "He just misses his Yorkshire pudding."

Duke of Windsor Visits War Office.

SEP 16 1939

LONDON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Duke of Windsor, carrying a civilian gas mask, visited the War Office today for forty-five minutes. When he left he was accompanied to the door by War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha. They shook hands on parting. The Duke, Britain's former King, announced on his return this week from exile in France that he would undertake a war appointment.

Denied By Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP)—The semi-official commentary Deutsche Dienst tonight ridiculed reports by Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., United States Ambassador to Poland, that German planes dropped bombs near his Warsaw home.

SEP 16 1939

(Biddle reported a German plane bombed the vicinity of his villa September 3.)

"The fact is the German air force aims at objects of military significance, not the fair head of the young Ambassador," said the commentary.

French, British Envoys Meet

ROME, Sept. 15 (AP)—Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador, consulted today with Andre Francois-Poncet, French Ambassador, as Italy's position of undeclared neutrality in the European war remained static. Their meeting came shortly after M. Francois-Poncet's return from Paris, where he had been in consultation with members of the French Government.

Arrival here of a German described as a former admiral gave rise to reports in foreign circles that Berlin was endeavoring to counteract French and British efforts to assure Italy's permanent neutrality. It was said in German quarters, however, that the unidentified personage—a personal friend of Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, German Ambassador—came on a private visit without any official political significance.

Italian newspapers were devoid of editorials today, as though they were following their own advice to Italians generally to work in peaceful silence.

SEP 16 1939

It was announced that General Attilio Teruzzi, Under-Secretary for Italian Africa, had arrived in Tripoli to study the defense of Libya and the settlement of additional Italians there.

MUSSOLINI ACTS TO GUARD FOOD

Orders Provincial Police to Prevent Hoarding.

LIMITS USE OF COAL AND GAS

French Envoy Returns to Rome.

ROME, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet returned to Rome today after conferences with his Government on British-French-Italian discussions of the European war. Last week he and British representatives separately had conversations with Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister. The trend of the talks was not disclosed.

SEP 16 1939

1939

Crown Prince Humbert Hailed by Press on 35th Birthday.

ROME, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini was announced today to have been in daily conference with Cabinet ministers for the last week on provisions for Italy's food supply for the coming year.

It also was announced that Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, Under-Secretary for Italian Africa, arrived in Tripoli to study the defense of Libya and the settlement of additional Italians there.

Signor Mussolini ordered provincial authorities to organize special police squads to prevent food hoarding and speculation. Limitations were imposed on the use of imported coal in order to conserve Italian fuel reserves. Domestic gas service was restricted to seven hours a day.

SEP 16 1939

Italian Press Praises Umberto on Birthday

Rome, Sept. 15 (AP)—

Italian newspapers took note today of Crown Prince Humbert's thirty-fifth birthday with congratulations that were taken as a reflection of the close relations between the royal family and Premier Mussolini's Fascist regime. The newspapers spoke particularly of the confidence Fascism has in the Crown Prince. Signor Mussolini recently appointed him to the command of half the Italian Army.

Relations between Il Duce and King Victor Emmanuel have been reported in Fascist circles to be increasingly close, particularly because of a feeling that Mussolini was keeping Italy out of the European war.

The King showed appreciation of Signor Mussolini's son-in-law, Count Ciano, by decorating him recently with the Collar of Annunziata, Italy's highest order, making Count Ciano honorary cousin to the King.

BRITISH CASUALTY LIST IS PUBLISHED

SEP 16 1939

Kent Weekly Describes It as Official Notification.

MAIDSTONE, Kent England, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Reports of British casualties in the war with Germany were published here today by a weekly newspaper, the Kent Messenger.

The newspaper printed on the front page, with photographs of the victims, what it described as "the first official notification" of the death on active service of two Kentish men.

The dead men were listed as:

Lieut. Frederick Manley, 28 years old, of Gravesend, Kent, a channel pilot serving in the Royal Naval Reserve; and able seaman Charles Waters, 24, of Maidstone who had served five years in the Royal Navy.

No indication was given of when, how or where the men were killed.

A London newspaper Tuesday carried formal death notices of three men killed in flying accidents on active service since the outbreak of hostilities.

RUMANIANS ARE RECALLED

Those Of Military Age Ordered Home From Italy

Rome, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Rumanian Legation announced tonight that all Rumanians of military age living in Italy had been ordered to return to Rumania, excepting only certain students, Government representatives of various kinds and a few others.

Rumanians In London Called

London, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Rumanian Legation in London tonight called on all Rumanians belonging to army, air force or navy reserves in their own country to report to the Rumanian military attache in London.

SEEKS TO AID ALLIES

Starhemberg Would Form Unit to Fight Hitler.

NICE, France, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, exiled former leader of the disbanded Austrian Fascist army, the Heimwehr, has asked permission of the Surete Nationale to organize a special Austrian brigade to fight Germany.

In a personal declaration to Commissaire Marcel Bourdon at Nice, Prince Von Starhemberg urged the release of Austrians from a concentration camp at the Old Square Fort at Antibes to engage in military activity.

M. Bourdon referred the Prince to the War Ministry, which is considering the offer. The Prince now lives with Fritz Mandl, former Austrian munitions maker and former husband of Hedy LaMarr, at Chateau Da Pins, Antibes.

Cambodian Prince Joins French

PARIS, Sept. 15 (AP)—Prince Sisowath Monivong of Cambodia, son of the King of that French Asiatic possession, joined the French army today "for the duration of the war." The Prince, who was vacationing on the Riviera when the war started, reported personally to Colonial Minister Georges Mandel.

German Soap Hoarder Gets 18-Month Term

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (AP).—The first conviction under war-time regulations against hoarding of staples was reported today from Hamburg.

Tried in Summary Court on charges of hoarding soap and other laundry articles valued at 70 marks (about $28), Gustav Schmidt, fifty-three years old, was sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment. Under the present rationing system, every German receives one stick of shaving soap every five months and about a quarter of a pound of laundry soap monthly.

SEP 16 1939

SEVENTY SHIPS 'ARRESTED'

Merchantmen of Every Flag Held by British for Contraband Search

DEAL, Kent, England, Sept. 15 (AP)—The British Navy, strictly enforcing Britain's wartime rule of detaining virtually every merchant ship to search for contraband cargo, tonight held seventy vessels under armed guard off the southeast coast.

Standing on the Deal pier just before sundown, the writer counted sixty-eight merchant ships at anchor under the eye of the fleet. Three others weighing anchor steamed slowly to sea as two new arrivals joined the enforced parade.

Heading the line stretching in a wide arc from Broadstairs to Dover was a big passenger liner. From the mainmast above her steel gray hull and massive white decks bellied the Dutch Tricolor.

Two low-lying oil tankers lay in a long line of freighters. Virtually every maritime nation in the world was represented.

Aboard each "arrested" ship were British seamen under a junior officer on twenty-four-hour guard.

Away to the east strategically placed among the merchantmen two slim British escort ships rode at anchor.

Two British destroyers followed by one of France's fast powerful, new gunboats patrolled the roadsteads.

Making a bare eight knots with a quarter-mile gap between them the warships steamed past the "captive" merchantmen. Back and forth, night and day the patrol never is relaxed.

This constant vigilance serves a twin purpose. Unremitting watch for enemy submarines is linked with a determination to balk a possible getaway by a "captive" merchantman.

Outside the line of merchant ships within sight of the grey chalk cliffs of Calais, bright in the glow of the setting sun, the British navy stood guard.

A mile from shore parallel with Deal's slipping brick red beach lie the downs, the deep narrow sealane between the English coast and the treacherous Goodwin sands.

Beyond the Goodwins the navy has fenced the English Channel with a barrier of mines.

Away to the east, dim on the horizon, Cape Grisnez marks the coast of France.

..0..

SEP 16 1939

Fate Of Mysterious Victim Of Submarine Undisclosed

Distress Call Intercepted In U. S. Believed Relayed From Shelled Irish Freighter

[By the Associated Press]

SEP 16 1939

Chatham, Mass., Sept. 15—A mysterious distress call from an unidentified ship, crackling out the terse message, "shelled by submarine, going down," left the fate of the vessel and her crew uncertain tonight as hours passed without additional word.

The distress signal was intercepted late today both by the Radiomarine station here and by Mackay Radio at New York, and was relayed from another ship which gave neither her name nor that of the vessel "going down."

As picked up by Radiomarine, the message read: "Some ship with loud signal sent distress signals on 600 meters, saying 'shelled by submarine; going down.' Nothing further heard. Ships please keep lookout."

Speculation centered around the chance the message was from the 5,200-ton freighter Fanad Head, en route from Montreal to Belfast. The Ulster Steamship Company, of Belfast, owner of the vessel, reported late today she had been attacked by a submarine.

Radiomarine said the signals from relaying the distress call were of such volume we are certain she is not far away." However, the station added that would give no indication of the position of the ship in distress because frequently vessels intercept messages from ships far removed.

(A LONDON DISPATCH SAID THE FANAD HEAD HAD BEEN REPTD SUNK.)

Canadians Aboard

Montreal, Sept. 15 (Canadian Press). W. R. Eakin, president of McLean Kennedy, Ltd., said tonight "there may have been eight or ten Canadian passengers" aboard the Irish freighter Fanad Head, reported attacked by a submarine off Ireland.

Eakin's company also is agents for the 5,200-ton Ulster Steamship Company liner. The freighter had a crew of approximately forty men.

SEP 16 1939

Irish Vessel Reported Attacked By Submarine

Belfast, Sept. 15 (AP)—The 5,200-ton freighter Fanad Head, owned by the Ulster Steamship Company, of Belfast, has been attacked by a submarine, the company reported today.

The vessel was bound from Montreal to Belfast.

SEP 16 1939

British Trawler Sunk

Liverpool, Sept. 15 (AP)—The crew of twelve of the British fishing trawler tonight disclosed the craft had been sunk off the English coast. They arrived here on the steamer Liverpool, which had picked them up in the Irish Sea.

CORK, Ireland, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Forty-two members of the crew of the British ship British Influence, which sank yesterday off the coast of Ireland, were landed today. They were picked up by the Norwegian ship Ida Bakke.

SubmarineSent Churchill SOS For Its Victim

SEP 16 1939

Survivors of 2 Torpedoed British Vessels Praise Conduct of Nazi Captains

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP).—A report of an S O S on behalf of a British steamship sent by a German submarine commander to Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, was given today by the chief officer of the ill-fated boat.

James Woodruff said the German officer sent the S O S, addressed personally to Churchill, before the submarine sank the steamship Firby off the Scottish coast on Monday.

Woodruff said the German gave the Firby's master "a stiff drink," nine loaves of black bread and three rolls of bandages for four crewmen wounded by shells.

Nazi Captain "a Proper Fellow"

CORK, Ireland, Sept. 15 (AP).—Patrick Walsh, member of the crew of the tanker British Influence, described today the commander of the German submarine that sent his ship down as "a proper fellow—a regular gentleman." Walsh, who, along with others of the crew of fifty-two, was landed today after being picked up by a Norwegian ship said he was in the engine room yesterday when the submarine approached.

SEP 16 1939

"We heard three shots fired," he said, "and rushed on deck to get to the lifeboats. The submarine was about three-quarters of a mile away, and when she got within hailing distance the commander asked us if we had water and provisions on the lifeboats.

"When he sighted a vessel on the horizon he sent up red rockets as a distress signal. Then the Norwegian boat came up and took us aboard. The Germans remained about until they saw we were all picked up safely. They waved goodby to us and the commander wished us good luck. We all agreed he was a good scout and cheered back to him."

Plank From Sea a Mystery

NEW WATERFORD, Nova Scotia, Sept. 15 (Canadian Press)—A battered eight-foot plank bearing the markings "M. V. III" tonight provided a mystery of the seas. The plank was found yesterday by a fisherman at Barachois, near here. It was believed to have come from the deck or hatch of some vessel sunk off Cape Breton, but there was no further clue as to the ship's identity.

SEP 16 1939

Sunk Without Warning, British Seaman Says

Liverpool, Sept. 15 (AP)—Thirty-one men from the British ship Vancouver City, sunk with the loss of three lives, arrived here tonight.

Boatswain Michael Conway said the ship was sunk without warning.

"We never saw the submarine," said Conway. "The second engineer was struck and killed by flying debris and two others were killed in the engine room. We took to the boats, and were picked up later by the Netherlands steamer Manura."

Conway said the Vancouver City went down within twelve minutes after she was struck amidships.

SEP 16 1939

Passengers Stay Dressed All Night.

COBH, Ireland, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Passengers on the eastbound liner Manhattan said today they spent last night fully dressed as a precaution against any war-time misadventure. The precaution was suggested by the ship's officers, they said.

SEP 16 1939

BRITISH WARSHIP'S VICTIM

Wreckage Of German Freighter Drifts To Brazil

Porto Alegre, Brazil, Sept. 15 (AP). Wreckage of the German freighter Olinda, sunk September 3 by the British cruiser Aja off Rio Grande, was found today between Mostarda and Quintao. Life savers and cans of food were picked up

SEP 16 1939

30.24—3345

German Boat Believed Trying To Pass Blockade

Wheat-Laden Freighter Leaves Montevideo Anchorage, Near British Men-of-War

SEP 16 1939

Montevideo, Sept. 15 (AP)—The 4,574-ton German freighter Gonzenheim, loaded with wheat, disappeared today from the "food fleet" anchorage off Montevideo and was believed attempting to get through the British blockade.

German vessels have been anchored off South American ports waiting for an opportunity to make a run for Germany past British men o' war operating in South Atlantic waters.

Belgian Steamer Sunk In English Channel; Some Of Crew Saved

London, Sept. 15 (AP)—A Belgian steamer whose name was not learned was sunk in the English Channel tonight.

SEP 16 1939

Survivors were picked up by a south coast lifeboat and British naval vessel which received a message that the ship was sinking.

Six of the men were taken to a hospital suffering from shock and other injuries. They told hospital authorities their vessel had struck something about 6 P. M. and an explosion followed.

It could not be ascertained whether the entire crew was saved. A later report said a Greek vessel had picked up forty-nine survivors.

Barge Laden With Flour For Britain Sinks at Pier

Jersey City Loss Brings Denial of Sabotage Rumors

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 15 (AP).—A barge loaded with 364,000 pounds of flour consigned to Great Britain sank at a Lehigh Valley Railroad pier today. Harry Emory, assistant marine superintendent of the railroad, said that the heavily loaded barge apparently had struck a submerged piling which ripped open its bottom.

Emory denied rumors of sabotage which had reached the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Newark and brought indications of a Federal inquiry.

SEP 16 1939

Dutch Ship Held 3 Days, Arrives In Rotterdam

Rotterdam, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Holland-American liner Nieuw Amsterdam arrived tonight with 250 passengers from New York after being released by the British Admiralty, which held the vessel for thre days in The Downs, off the southeast English coast.

Captain Byl reported that the British removed three German passengers and sixteen German crew members for further investigation. Fifty German passengers were allowed to remain aboard.

SEP 16 1939

Inspection for contraband showed the cargo in order.

The Nieuw Amsterdam, booked to take 1,200 passengers back to New York, is expected to sail Monday or Tuesday. The Netherlands freighter Zaandam is to sail for New York Sunday with 125 or more passengers.

Crews' Demands Delay Sailings Of Three Ships

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—Members of three United States Lines crews demanding extra benefits for sailing in war zones tonight held up the departure for England of the Scanstates, the American Trader and American Traveler.

The American Trader had fifty-three passengers and the Traveler thirty-nine. The crews refused to throw off their lines and the liners still were at their piers three hours after departure time.

SEP 16 1939

Newbold T. Morris, general manager of United States Lines, informed officials of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) he would not accept responsibility for the failure of the liners to sail. The liner President Roosevelt was delayed September 6 under similar circumstances.

Aquitania To Arrive Today

While departures were being delayed, definite word was received of the scheduled arrival of the British liner Acquitania. Federal officials said the Cunard White Star liner carrying 1,663 passengers, many of them Americans, would dock tomorrow morning.

The Italian liner Rex, first large ship to sail since the war started, was scheduled to arrive tomorrow with 1,431 Americans. She sailed from Genoa September 8 with 1,779 passengers.

The arrival of the Monarch of Bermuda today with 477 passengers marked what may be her last trip in the Bermuda service during the war. The Queen of Bermuda, a sister ship, returned to England two weeks ago for troop transport duty. It was expected the Monarch of Bermuda would be pressed into similar service.

DISCUSS WAR RISK

Shipping Leaders Study the Insurance Question.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Maritime Commission discussed with representatives of ship owners and labor today the question of war risk insurance for crew personnel sailing in danger areas.

No conclusion was reached, a spokesman for the commission said.

SEP 16 1939

The commission recommended to the last session of Congress that it be given authority to provide insurance on the lives of personnel, as well as cargoes and vessels. No action was taken. Attending today's conference were Frank Taylor, head of the American Merchant Marine Institute; John B. Bryan, president of the Pacific American Shipowners Association and Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union.

Hongkong Shippers Lift Pacific Freight Rates

British, American And Japanese Interests Make 20 P. C. Increase Effective Oct. 1

Hongkong, Sept. 15 (AP)—British, American and Japanese shippers today announced a twenty per cent. increase in transpacific freight rates, effective October 1, because of wartime reduction of available commercial vessels.

Bookings already made under the former rate for after October 1 were canceled.

SEP 16 1939

Hongkong to Bombay shippers increased rates twenty-five per cent effective immediately.

CANADA PREPARING ITS FOOD SUPPLIES

SEP 16 1939

Dominion Sets Out to Meet Britain's Requests.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Canada's newly formed Agricultural Supplies Committee, set up since the Dominion's declaration of war on Germany last Sunday, already is laying the groundwork for meeting requests for foodstuffs from Great Britain and France.

Although it is understood no requests have been received as yet, they are expected soon. The committee, made up of heads of Agriculture Department branches, therefore will have to map means of meeting these orders as well as providing for the normal needs of the home market under wartime conditions.

SEP 16 1939

Meanwhile the committee, in meetings with representatives of producers and shippers, is threshing out more immediate problems.

As a result of the war, the British market for Canadian cheese, apples and bacon has slumped severely. Normally half of Canada's apple crop (75 per cent of the Nova Scotia crop) goes to Britain, and substitute ways of disposing of this year's large crop are being studied.

The decline in British exchange in terms of Canadian dollars, after retail prices were pegged at the present low level by the British Government, and the fact that marine insurance has been boosted, combined to throw both the cheese and bacon markets out of gear.

Australia to Raise Army

Newly Formed War Cabinet Decides on Initial Force of 20,000

CANBERRA, Australia, Sept. 15 (AP).—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies announced today the formation of an Australian War Cabinet which decided to raise immediately an initial volunteer force of 20,000 men for "service in Australia or overseas."

The Cabinet also decided to increase the current year's defense expenditure from 33,000,000 Australian pounds (approximately $105,600,000) to 45,000,000 pounds (approximately $144,000,000).

SEP 16 1939

In addition to Menzies, the Cabinet includes William Hughes, Australian Prime Minister during the World War; R. G. Casey, Brigadier G. A. Street, Sir Henry Gullett and Senator G. McLeavy.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Finance Minister Walter Nash told Parliament today the Government had informed Great Britain the whole of New Zealand's surplus products and resources were at the disposal of the United Kingdom.

SEP 16 1939

Scandinavian Nations Urged To Look To U. S.

Oslo Newspaper Declares They And America Should Get Together On Commerce

Oslo, Sept. 15 (AP)—The newspaper Norges Handels today urged the Norwegian Government to cooperate with the other Scandinavian nations and the United States in all matters concerning blockade by belligerents and seizure of contraband.

SEP 16 1939

It added:

"The United Sites is so powerful that she does not need to submit to threats. The American nation's high ideals refuse to submit to unjust requests. Cooperation between America and Scandinavia may benefit common mercantile interests and promote common idealistic aims."

U. S. Delegation Sails For Parley In Panama

Sumner Welles Heads Group Going To Pan-American Conference On European War

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—State Department officials headed by Sumner Welles, Under Secretary, sailed late today for a conference with twenty-one South American republics on war problems.

SEP 16 1939

"The chief discussion will be how to cushion the shock of the dislocation of inter-American commerce resulting from the war," Welles said.

"The conference is being called because the general European war is a potential menace to the peace of this continent," he added.

The party which will attend the conference, opening in Panama City September 23, included Edwin C. Wilson, Minister to Uruguay; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, and seven others.

Mexico Wants Declaration Of Continental Solidarity

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Foreign Office announced today that Mexico would ask the Pan-American Conference opening at Panama next Thursday to make a joint declaration of continental solidarity.

SEP 16 1939

Three Nations Consider Joint Action By Fleets

Brazil, Argentina And Uruguay Move To Prevent Violations Of Their Neutrality

Buenos Aires, Sept. 15 (AP)—Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay tonight considered the possibility of joint action by their fleets to assure strict surveillance of the Atlantic coast to prevent violations of their neutrality.

Rear Admiral Jose Guisasola, Commander-in-Chief of the Argentine Navy, conferred today with the Minister of the Navy, Rear Admiral Jose Scasso. Admiral Guisasola reported on talks with Brazilian naval chiefs during a recent visit of an Argentine mission.

The immediate sailing of the battleships Moreno and Rivadavia has been ordered. Destroyers already are on their way to join the rest of the Argentine navy at El Rincon to begin patrol duty.

SEP 16 1939

U. S. Will Be Dragged Into War, Japanese Newspaper Assets

Tokyo, (Saturday) Sept. 16—The newspaper Asahi, today said the United States will be dragged into war "whether she likes it or not."

The neutrality stand proclaimed Thursday by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, Asahi commented in an editorial, actually "is a unilateral warning to Germany to respect the right of the American people to aid Great Britain and France."

Germany, said Asahi, would attempt to avoid drawing the United States into war by "irritating them to no useful end," but "is not likely to submit meekly to such treatment from the United States."

SEP 16 1939

The United States "seeks to continue to increase her trade with belligerents in order to bring war prosperity by the sale of munitions," said the paper, but added that President Roosevelt had made it clear this did not mean trade with German.

"The attitude of the Administration must be regarded as most biased, non-neutral and partial," Asahi said.

Japan's Envoy and Hull Discuss World Affairs

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi conferred with Secretary Hull today on what he said was the world situation.

He said he had no communication from his Government to present.

SEP 16 1939

Secretary Hull said yesterday that this Government was watching carefully developments in the Far East now that the European war had broken out.

Allies Hide Fate of U-boats

'Admiral Sims's Idea of Secrecy Being Used to Lower Morale of Nazi Crews.

By Associated Press

"Sinister secrecy"—as in the last world war—is again being employed by Britain and France as a basic strategic weapon in the fight against German submarines for mastery of the seas.

SEP 16 1939

British Cruiser Visits Chilean Port.

TALCAHUANA, Chile, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The British cruiser Achilles, patrolling South American waters on the lookout for German shipping, spent six hours in this port today.

SEP 16 1939

Paraguay Proclaims Neutrality.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Paraguay formally declared her neutrality today in the European conflict.

The policy of suppressing the news when submarines were sunk and refusing to disclose the methods used to track them down was credited with breaking the German morale by the late Admiral William S. Sims, supreme commander of the United States Navy in European waters during the world war.

He estimated that a mysterious fate for one out of every ten U-boats leaving German bases would turn the trick. One out of seven was the ratio in the closing weeks of the war and this, naval historians have said, had a direct bearing on the German naval mutiny of 1918.

Again today, the British and French official news agencies keep grimly silent regarding the fate of German submarines except for vague references, completely devoid of facts. While they do this they freely give details regarding submarine successes.

The toll of the German submarines reached eighteen British ships and one French vessel yesterday but not one specific counter-claim had been made regarding the capture or destruction of a submarine. American naval men familiar with submarine warfare say it is unbelievable that crews of some German submarines are not in briny graves.

Hard to Catch U-boats.

But the big problem—in the last war—is how to catch the submarines, said an American officer who has commanded several undersea craft. The development of radio and sound detection devices has both helped and hindered the submarines. It has permitted submarines to remain under sea during an attack without using periscopes to aim their torpedoes, but it also has been a big help to their pursuers.

Naval authorities doubt, however, that the campaign against the German submarines has been especially effective because of the frequent reports of courtesies shown their victims.

With the notable exception of the Athenia sinking as described by survivors, most of the British ships apparently have been sunk only after the submarine's commander permitted the crew to put off in lifeboats, send S O S calls for help or fire flares and, in at least one case, they offered to tow the stricken crew in lifeboats to safety.

Doubt U-boats Are Being Sunk.

If Britain had been sinking submarines by trick methods—as with the disguised U-boats of the world war—or if British destroyers and submarine chasers were hot on the trail of the submarines, naval authorities reason the Germans might not be so polite.

The Q-boats weer disguised old tramps, sailing ships, trawlers or fishing smacks which carried powerful guns hidden on their decks, depth bombs and even torpedoes under water. When a submarine came to the surface to warn the crew to abandon ship, these hidden weapons opened fire.

It wasn't long before some submarines escaped and the trick was exposed. After that, the U-boats no longer were so considerate, and the Q-boats were no longer so effective.

32 Ships Lost So Far.

Sea combat has cost belligerent and neutral nations thirty-two ships, an average of more than two and a half a day since war was declared on September 3.

Tonnage destroyed is estimated at 144,645 and the death toll at more than 180. Cargoes valued in the millions of dollars also have been lost.

The chief victim, with eighteen vessels gone, is Great Britain, whose need to feed and supply her sea-locked millions from abroad has forced her to keep a vast merchant fleet in operation.

France has lost one ship and Germany nine, including three that struck mines and three than ran aground in Norway.

SEP 16 1939

Four Neutrals

The four neutral ships sunk included two by The Netherlands, one by Finland.

German submarines sank two British merchantmen off the Irish coast yesterday, the 4,955-ton motor freighter Vancouver City and the 8,431-ton British Influence. Crews of both ships were rescued.

An indication that the Nazi Government might extend its submarine warfare to waters of the western hemisphere was seen in repeated reports of submarines in the vicinity of St. John, N. B. At St. John, a radio warning was dispatched advising ships in the Bay of Fundy to procedd with caution.

8 Millionth at Swiss Fair

Exhibition Called Success Despite War; Last Was in 1914

ZURICH, Sept. 15 (AP).—Switzerland's international fair feted its 8,000,000th visitor last night and announced the fair had been a success in spite of the present war. Originally, organizers of the exposition had expected only 4,000,000 to attend.

SEP 16 1939

The Swiss now are superstitious about their fairs, which are held only once every twenty-five years. The last one was held in 1914.

RED CROSS AT WORK

SEP 16 1939

Observers Compiling Data on War Prisoners.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The local committee of the international Red Cross today announced observers had been sent to Germany, France, Great Britain and Poland to organize the rapid collection of information on war prisoners for the files of the Red Cross office to be opened here.

Neutral Zones Proposed For Aged, Young, Sick

Geneva Committee Addresses Appeal to Belligerents

GENEVA, Sept. 15 (AP).—The International Committee of "White Zones," meeting here, appealed today to the French, British, Polish and German governments for creation of neutralized zones where aged, children and the sick would be guaranteed against bombing.

The committee proposed that the general staffs of the belligerent states agree through the medium of the committee on the location of such zones, which would be placed under neutral commissioners.

The committee made a similar appeal to Generalissimo Francisco Franco during the Spanish civil war, and a part of Madrid was set aside as a "white zone." The Japanese, following a similar appeal, marked off Nantao, one of the suburbs of Shanghai, as such a neutral zone, and the committee said 300,000 persons found refuge there.

SEP 16 1939

Berlin News Writers Allowed Night Meals

Foreign Correspondents' Favorite Tavern Excepted From 1 A. M. Curfew Law

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP)—The German Government acted today to protect the stomachs of foreign correspondents working day and night to cover the war.

SEP 16 1939

Berlin closes up tight at 1 A. M., but the restaurant Taverne, the correspondents' favorite, was given permission to remain open to serve onion soup and other warm dishes. Only foreign correspondents are to be admitted.

Another restaurant was allowed to remain open exclusively for waiters.

Britain To Take Over Ham, Bacon Imports

Organization Of Traders To See That They Are Equitably Distributed

SEP 16 1939

London, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Ministry of Food announced tonight that all imports of ham and bacon arriving in Great Britain after midnight, September 16, with the exception of shipments from Ireland, would be requisitioned.

The requisitioned supplies, for such amounts as are needed for storage and service requirements, will be disposed of by a collective organization of traders which has just been formed for the purpose.

The object of the order, it was said, is to insure that imported bacon and hams are equitably distributed throughout the country.

Britons to Fight in Ring, Too

LONDON, Sept. 15 (AP).—Stewards of the British Boxing Board of Control today decided that all promoters should carry on as usual during the war, including promotion of English and regional championships.

SEP 16 1939

Cesarewitch Canceled Because of War

LONDON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Cesarewitch, two-and-a-quarter-mile popular racing fixture, will miss its centenary this year by the cancellation of turf programs because of the war.

SEP 16 19

The grueling race, first run at Newmarket in 1839 with ten starters, normally attracts around thirty horses.

Lisbon Curbs Exports

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 15 (AP)—A decree issued by the Ministry of Commerce tonight prohibited exports of machinery and certain raw materials except under special permit.

SEP 16 1939

London Reopens Movies For Daytime Shows

London, Sept. 15 (AP)—London's West End—the British Broadway—regained a little of its war-lost gaiety today with the reopening of movies for daytime shows.

But even though the familiar bright lights flashed until dusk there was a reminder that it was wartime in watchers and air-raid squads standing by at each theater.

SEP 16 1939

National Prayer Day Announced in England

LONDON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The Archbishop of Canterbury "with the approval of the King" announced today that Sunday, October 1, "has been appointed to be obesrved as a day of national prayer."

SEP 16 1939

GAS RATIONS POSTPONED

British Motorists Get One-Week Reprieve From Curb

London, Sept. 15 (AP)—The British motorist tonight got one week's reprieve from gasoline rationing which in the average case would have reduced him to six gallons a month.

Rationing was delayed from tomorrow until September 23 to give motorists more time to obtain ration books necessary for getting supplies.

SEP 16 1939

Queen Elizabeth Heads 3 War Organizations

LONDON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The London Gazette announced tonight that King George had approved the appointment of Queen Elizabeth as commandant-in-chief of the Women's Royal Naval Service, commandant-in-chief of the Auxiliary Territorial Service and commandant-in-chief of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force.

SEP 16 1939

Hoover Proposes Group Probe War On Civilians

Former President Suggests North European Neutrals Form Observation Body

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover proposed today that North Europe neutral countries create an international commission to "observe and report" facts concerning "incidents of warfare upon civilian populations."

He said "the belligerent countries should be asked to give agents of this commission free movement within their borders."

SEP 16 1939

"The purpose of this commission through these agents would be to determine where, and when, and whether these undertakings not to war on innocent men and women and children have been intentionally violated," he said. He suggested the commission "could well be organized by the northern European neutral nations—Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Holland and Belgium.

AMERICANS URGED TO LEAVE RUSSIA

SEP 16 1939

U. S. Embassy in Moscow So Advises Tourists.

MOSCOW, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The United States embassy today advised American tourists who have no compelling reason for remaining to leave Soviet Russia.

SEP 16 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The State Department said today its Moscow embassy's advice that Americans leave Russia was in line with standing instructions on embassy procedure in times of threatened danger.

The department lists 400 Americans in Russia as of January 1 as permanent or semi-permanent residents. This does not include an unknown number of tourists.

Americans may have difficulty leaving Russia because of the mines supposedly sown in the Baltic Sea. They could, however, go out over the trans-Siberian Railway to the Far East or to the south through Odessa and the Black Sea, or through Rumania.

AMERICANS TURNED BACK

SEP 16 1939

Hundred Weekly Canadian Fighting Forces

Fort Erie, Ont., Sept. 15 (Canadian Press)—Immigration officials here said today hundreds of United States citizens wishing to join Canadian active service forces had been turned back at the border during the last week.

Prison and Banishment For Spying in France

SEP 16 1939

NANCY, France, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A military court today announced a twenty-year prison sentence and twenty years of banishment from France for Jacques Tonner, 27 years old, convicted of espionage. Tonner's activity pre-dated the decree of the death penalty for spies.

War Postpones Completion of Carillon

ALFRED, N. Y., Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The European war has blasted the hopes of Alfred University of augmenting its old world carillon—at least before the war ends.

SEP 16 1939

Dr. Lloyd Watson, back from Europe announced that the bells he went to get are buried in the ground, somewhere in the war zone.

The university claims to have the only old world carillon in the United States and Dr. Watson's trip climaxed a campaign for additional bells to complete the set.

MAY BE HITLER KIN

Texan Says Nephew by That Name Disappeared.

EAST BERNARD, Tex., Sept. 15 (A. P.). — Eighty-three-year-old Alois Kozelsky sat in his wheel chair and wondered if one of the principals in the European drama was his long lost nephew, Adolf Hitler.

The old man, an invalid thirty years, remarked about two years ago that he had lost track of a nephew Adolf Hitler. All he could recall was his sister married a man named Hitler and they had a son, Adolf, who disappeared from home at the age of 12. The sister has been dead many years.

Czech-Bohemian-German residents here say some of the six Kozelsky children physically resemble Germany's Fuehrer.

SEP 16 1939

Joe Kozelsky, the eldest, cattleman and business man, says: "My father thinks Adolf Hitler may be his lost nephew but neither he nor members of his family in Austria, Germany and Czcho-Slovakia really know."

SEP 16 1939

Woman of 72 Returns To War Nurse Job

BOSTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Mme. Jane Clauzel, 72 years old, a nurse with the French forces during the world war, prepared today to leave Boston, her home for the last sixteen years, to report for duty with the French Red Cross.

"I have only my life to give for my country," she said in announcing that she would leave on the Dixie Clipper for Lisbon October . "I have no children to give—they were killed in the last war—but I can nurse. It is only a little, but it will help."

30.24-3347

30.24—3347

IN THE AIR—Poles Fight Alone

SEP 16 1939

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Aviation Editor

The inherent limitation of the airplane as a war weapon, in spite of the impressive performance of German air units as reported in censored dispatches from German sources, has prevented the British and French from helping the hard-pressed Poles in the air.

Also a factor is the evident desire of the British and French high commands to keep their planes at home until they discover which way the wind will blow on the question of mass-bombing raids.

Like all motorized war equipment, planes must have repair shops and ready fuel supplies. Moreover—and perhaps this is the most telling story—they must have airdromes from which to operate.

An initial objective of any warring nation's air fleet is the enemy's airdromes. Poland had few, if any, secret bases for its planes. From all available accounts, the Germans made short work of Polish landing fields.

From the standpoint of straightaway flight, British and French help for the Polish air force would have been highly feasible. The distance from either England or France to interior Poland is less than 900 miles, and the Anglo-French Allies have bi-motored bombers capable of much longer nonstop flights.

But once there, the supplemental air force instantly would have been faced with a lack of protective pursuit planes from their own forces. Neither British nor French pursuits are built for the long-range flights common in our own air corps.

Before the war began the British talked of a bomber "shuttle service" across Germany, with planes refueling and replenishing their bomb loads in Poland in the east and in France or England in the west. That has not developed.

The results of the Allies' decision not to bolster the Polish air force can be read in the daily communiques. Much of the Germans' rapid advance can be attributed to a near-perfect intelligence service on Polish troop movements. That, in turn, has been due almost entirely to freedom of action by German reconnaissance planes.

Impregnable Canal Is Aim

SEP 16 1939

Swift Army Moves Make Zone Already One of Strongest U. S. Positions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The army's quick moves to safeguard the Panama Canal have made that waterway the most strongly defended American military position, with the possible single exception of the Hawaiian Island of Oahu.

Anti-aircraft troops loaded on the transport St. Mihiel this week at New York, and others already dispatched or under orders to leave shortly, will swell the Canal Zone garrison to more than 18,500 officers and men, exclusive of naval and marine forces.

Several thousand others are destined to re-enforce the defenders still further. Because of the European war crisis, the movements were advanced several months, with the result that the bulk of the arriving troops will have to sleep in tents until barracks are ready, officials said today.

Impregnability Is Aim.

The troop movements to Panama and to the new outpost on Puerto Rico, the placing of the canal under martial law, the dispatch of thirty-one additional army fighting planes and other measures, all gave evidence of intent to make impregnable quickly the vital link between the Atlantic and Pacific.

In numbers at present, Oahu still has more troops, but the Panama garrison within a few months will be stronger than the Pacific outpost. There were 21,777 army officers and men in Hawaii on June 30.

The army does not stress actual figures, but made public the Hawaii and Panama strength at the end of the fiscal year at the direction of Congress. There were 14,942 officers and men in the Canal Zone then, and some 3,600 others have been ordered there in less than three weeks.

Congress provided $27,000,000 last session to strengthen the canal garrison by 272 officers and 7,360 men, but under original plans the re-enforcements would not have started until months hence. The first actual recruiting was scheduled for next February.

Needed to Man Guns.

They are needed, officials testified, to man long range Coast Artillery rifles and new anti-aircraft guns, which already were mounted but did not have full crews.

The first troop movements, in transports sailing from New York and earlier from San Pedro, Cal., included 1,089 officers and men, all from Coast Artillery anti-aircraft regiments. Another transport sailing is scheduled from New York on September 27. The movement of about 2,500 troops of the Eighteenth Infantry Brigade from New England posts is to start October 19.

Transport Leaves San Diego.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The U. S. S. Henderson, navy transport, carrying a large number of navy officers and [illegible] sailed yesterday for the Panama Canal Zone and Hampton Roads. Officers and men will be assigned to ships in the neutrality patrol in the Canal Zone and on the Atlantic coast.

ARMS SALES BIG

$58,499,588 Exports Sent to Europe Up to Sept. 1.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—This country's arms export business, which has been curtailed recently by the prohibition of shipments to the nations at war in Europe, amounted to $58,499,588.65 in the first eight months of this year, a State Department report showed.

France took $15,661,318.08 of this and Great Britain $21,159,427.58. Total arms export licenses obtained by France amounted to much more, but $56,702,063.31 of her orders, mostly for fighting planes, were not filled during the period.

Shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war to all the countries fighting in Europe have been barred by a presidential proclamation issued under the neutrality act. President Roosevelt has called Congress into special session next Thursday to consider repealing the arms embargo provision of that statute.

Lakehurst Air Station Is Closed To Visitors

Ruling Made To Conform With Navy Orders To Guard Against Possible Sabotage

Lakehurst, N. J., Sept. 15 (AP)—Commander Jesse Kenworthy, of the Lakehurst Naval Air Station, today ordered the lighter-than-air base closed to visitors until further notice.

Kenworthy said the new ruling was in conformation with a general order issued by the Naval Department in Washington Saturday to guard against [illegible] sabotage should America become involved in the European war, and to protect military secrets."

Acts To Protect Ships On Antarctic Expedition

U. S. Will Have Huge American Flags Painted On Sides, Illuminated At Night

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Government is taking precautions against mistaken attacks by war vessels of the European belligerents on the ships of its Antarctic expedition.

The ships, officials said today, will have huge American flags painted on their sides and hatches, illuminated at night.

There has been no change in plans for the expedition, officials said. Led by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the expedition will make scientific observations and claim for the United States a part of the Antarctic continent.

Plants Experiment With Army Orders

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A committee of industrialists headed by Benedict Crowell, former Assistant Secretary of War, indorsed today the War Department's plans to train manufacturers in production of war materials by means of educational orders.

The committee approved the department's basic [illegible] to set up selected industrial plants in plants receiving educational orders, produce sufficient quantity for test purposes and prepare production schedules based upon the experience gained.

Educational orders totaling $16,500,000 are expected to be placed soon. The first such orders totaling $2,000,000 were given last year and six vital items of military equipment are now being produced.

WAR CALL MAY GET NINETEEN CONGRESSMEN

Members Are Officers In Army Reserve Corps Units

SEP 16 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 15—Nineteen members of Congress, which will begin consideration of neutrality problems next week, might be among the first to be called to the colors if this country became involved in war.

They hold commissions as officers in the army reserves, and their status makes them subject to call to active duty in time of emergency. Whether they would be called would depend on whether the President believed they could be of better service to the nation as members of Congress or as officers in the armed forces.

Might Resign Commissions

Even if called, however, they could resign their commissions. If they desired to answer the call, they could resign from Congress. Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York left Congress to serve in the Army Air Corps during the World War.

Twelve of the nineteen reserve officer members saw active service during the World War, and two of them served in the Mexican campaign.

Senator Ernest W. Gibson, Vermont, who holds a reserve commission as a lieutenant-colonel, served in both the Mexican and the World wars.

Plumley A Colonel

Also from Vermont, Representative Charles A. Plumley, 64, is a colonel in the reserves. Both he and Senator Gibson are in the "inactive" classification and may be called to duty only in time of war. Those not in the "inactive" classification may serve also in time of peace.

Two other New England Congressmen, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., 7, of Massachusetts, and Representative James A. Shanley, 43, of Connecticut, are captains in the Reserve Corps.

Three Indiana members, Senator Sherman Minton, 49, and Representatives George W. Gillie, 59, and Raymond S. Springer, 57, are among the Congressional reserves. Minton, a World War veteran, is a captain in the infantry reserve; Gillie is a captain in the veterinary unit, and Springer, a World War veteran, is a lieutenant colonel on the "inactive" list.

Lucas In World War

Senators Scott W. Lucas, 47, of Illinois, and Harry S. Truman, 55, of Missouri, complete the list of Senatorial reserves. Lucas, who served in the World War, is a lieutenant colonel in the judge advocate general's department, while Truman is a colonel in the field artillery.

Other reserve officers in the House include:

Millard F. Caldwell, Jr., 42, of Florida; Herman P. Eberharter, 47, of Pennsylvania, and Charles I. Faddis, 49, of Pennsylvania; Hamilton Fish, 51, of New York; Clarence J. McLeod, 44, of Michigan; Matthew J. Merritt, New York; Elmer J. Ryan, 32, of Minnesota; James G. Scrugham, of Nevada; John J. Sparkman, 50, of Alabama, and Albert L. Vreeland, 38, of New Jersey.

PICKS HOLYOKE SITE FOR ARMY AIR BASE

SEP 16 1939

War Department Approves 4300-acre Tract.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—The War Department selected a site near Holyoke, Mass., today for the army's new northeast air base, last of the new bases approved by Congress.

Initial construction, to cost $3,613,000 will be started without delay, it was announced.

Preliminary work already has been commenced on new Army bases or extensions of existing air facilities in Puerto Rico, Panama, Hawaii, in the southeast near Tampa, Fla., and on air corps depots at Mobile, Ala., and Ogden, Utah.

The northeast base site was selected, the War Department said, "only after the most careful consideration as to its strategic location and military value in the general scheme of the national defense."

The base will cost more than $8,000,000 when completed. The site is approximately 4,300 acres about three miles east of Holyoke and three and a half miles northeast of Chicopee Falls. First construction will consist of runways, shops and temporary housing for a limited number of officers and men.

In the national defense [illegible], a force of planes will be stationed permanently there to safeguard approaches from the shortest route from Europe. It could be quickly re-enforced from Mitchel Field, Long Island; Selfridge Field, Mich., and other major bases in an emergency.

U. S. ATTORNEY DENOUNCES WAR PROFITEERING

Arnold Tells Petroleum Group It Has Already Cost Millions

SEP 16 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Atlantic City, Sept. 15—Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant United States Attorney General, expressed belief that "organizations" of businessmen had taken advantage of what he termed war hysteria to institute "profiteering."

Arnold told the National Petroleum Association he thought the present "profiteering" was only a temporary condition, but that nevertheless it had already taken millions of dollars out of people's pockets.

Called "Advance Symptom"

It "is an advance symptom of what may happen in the future," Arnold told convention delegates.

He said his office would seek criminal indictments against price-fixing groups in the hope of deterring offenders before they "compel orderly businessmen to follow in self-protection." He said he "regretted" the necessity of seeking criminal indictments but Congress had failed to make civil penalties stiff enough.

Arnold expressed belief such price-fixing was done largely by trade associations composed of persons who get together at organization meetings and decide they are not getting enough money for given commodities.

Illinois New Field.

The oil men showed interests in the discovery of new oil fields in Illinois and Michigan—especially Illinois which two years ago was producing only 20,000 barrels a day. The State is now turning out 300,000 barrels daily.

Joseph E. Pogue, vice-president of the Chase National Bank, New York, said, Illinois producers had already wasted "tens of millions of barrels underground." He said that if the State didn't pass conservation laws soon "the stability of the American petroleum industry and the welfare of thousands of people depending upon it for existence" would be menaced.

New Laws Drafted.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Legislation designed to supplement the anti-trust laws in checking profiteering has been drafted by the Department of Justice.

Attorney-General Murphy said at a press conference late yesterday that some bills had been drawn at the request of the President. They would be offered for enactment, he added, only if needed or if the anti-trust and other laws proved inadequate to keep prices normal and prevent "gouging and profiteering, especially in the necessities of life."

Asserting there had been some examples of profiteering since war began in Europe, but that it was not widespread throughout the country, the quiet-spoken Attorney-General said the Government's final policy would be determined by the President.

Mr. Murphy said his department's anti-trust division had been instructed to be alert against any prices getting out of reasonable bounds and that it was studying the situation so grand juries can be called without delay in case of violations.

He expressed belief that it would be a "very healthy thing for this country to let the normal economic laws work for the time being, using the Department of Justice facilities only to reach those exploiting and profiteering."

Government efforts should be to "encourage normal recovery," Mr. Murphy continued, and the new legislation "is not to thwart but to encourage a natural and normal recovery."

Ludlow to Demand Ouster of Propagandists

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Representative Louis A. Ludlow, Democrat, of Indiana, will propose in the special session of Congress to start next Thursday that the neutrality law be amended to require deportation of alien propagandists for belligerent nations.

He made this plan public upon arrival here [illegible]

"If there was ever a time we should refrain from emotionalism and keep out of war it is now," Mr. Ludlow said.

McNutt Opposes Steel Wall.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, said [illegible] any attempt to build a wall of isolation around the Americas would "mean an upheaval in the United States almost as devastating as a war itself."

"It would not divorce us from the threat of militarism," he said, "but it would force us to maintain an armed camp from one end of the Americas to the other."

Speaking at a celebration of the 125th anniversary of the writing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Francis Scott Key, Mr. McNutt said the proper policy for the United States in a warring world was one which "patiently and cautiously endeavors to contribute to the reestablishment of world peace, which looks consciously toward an ultimate world order under international amity."

The army and the navy helped celebrate "The Star-Spangled Banner" anniversary and Senator George L. Radcliffe, Democrat, of Maryland, also spoke. Army airplanes took part in another celebration last night.

TNT STILL KING OF EXPLOSIVES

Germany Believed to Have an Ample Supply.

NO INVENTIONS REPORTED

France May Be Using Picric Acid and England Amatol.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—A harmless looking powder resembling maple sugar, trinitrotoluene (TNT), discovered in 1863, is still the standard high explosive of the world's armies.

Germany, as a major manufacturer of dyestuffs, should be well supplied with the TNT raw materials derived from dyes. France may still be using some picric acid, dangerous as it is, while the British again may be employing amatol.

Some military observers believe that no valuable new explosive has been invented since the world war, though combinations of the old ones have been made. Information on such novelties as Spain's liquid air combs in incomplete.

Experts say that comparatively few substances can be employed as military high explosives because not only their strength but other properties must be considered, such as sensitivity, and action on metals. Liquid air [illegible] extruded explosive corporates quickly.

Among commonly known high explosives, with their properties, are the following:

TNT—Detonates at the rate of 17,000 to 25,000 feet a second, 2,000 to 10,000 feet faster than 40 per cent dynamite. A charge of 1 2-3 pounds will shatter a 9½-pound 75-mm. shell into approximately 700 fragments. Reasonably insensitive to shock, it is used, also, as a bursting charge for hand grenades, rifle grenades, airplane bombs, submarine mines, depth bombs and land mines.

Ammonium picrate (Explosive D—Is useful, because it resists shock, as a bursting charge in armor-piercing projectiles.

Picric acid—Has a detonation rate equal to TNT's maximum. However, in contact with metal, it produces dangerously sensitive salts that might cause a premature explosion from shock, heat or friction. All countries except France had abandoned it by the end of the world war.

Nitrostarch explosives — Cheap and insensitive, are prepared from ordinary starch and are used in combination with other chemicals for hand grenades, trench mortars and shell explosives. In a grenade, 2½ ounces of 40 per cent nitrostarch explosive will produce 100 to 150 effective fragments, more than TNT.

Tetryl — Has a higher detonation rate than TNT, but since it cannot withstand the shock of a gun discharge is used as a booster explosive only with other powders.

Tetranitroaniline (TNA)—Strongest of all solid high explosives, 40 per cent stronger than TNT, is more expensive and more s[illegible] and is not usable in bursting shells, drop bombs, &c.

Mercury fulminate — Explodes completely and violently when set off by heat and isused to detonate high explosive shells.

Amatol—A mixture of TNT and ammonium nitrate developed by the British as a bursting charge. It has the same strength and detonation rate as TNT, and is used in airplane bombs.

Rules for Pronunciation Of Polish Are Explained

By The Associated Press.

In speaking the Polish language there are a few basic rules, but, as in English, there are exceptions to many of them.

Accent usually is on [illegible] next to last syllable.

Final consonants do not have their normal values; "bug" is pronounced "book" and "Cracow" is pronounced "Krakoof."

The letter A is pronounced as in "arm"; E as in "net," except when it has a cedilla, and then it is sounded as the A in "hang"; I is sounded as in "ink," O has the same variations as in English and U is sounded as in "full" or "rumor."

C has a TS sound. C with an accent is sounded like CH. The combination CI, followed by a vowel, also is sounded like CH; when not followed by a vowel it is sounded like the first four letters in "chief."

CH has the soft H sound, as in "hot"; CZ as in "church"; DZ as in "gin." J has the English Y sound. L in some cases is pronounced as in English, but often is sounded like W.

RZ is sounded like the S in "pleasure," SZ as in "shower" and W always as V, as in "vine."

ROOSEVELT WILL SET CONGRESS ONE TASK

President Indicates He Will Ask for No Legislation Other Than Repeal of Embargo.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt indicated strongly today that he hoped to limit legislation at the special session of Congress to revision of the neutrality law.

Asked at his press conference whether he planned to request anti-profiteering legislation, he said that he did not expect to do so. He told reporters also that he planned to make no request for a deficiency appropriation [illegible] for war risk insurance legislation.

At the same time the President said that no plans had even been considered that could be remotely connected with the possibility of our entering the war.

When a reporter requested a presidential definition of territorial waters of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt said that the limit was as far as our interests needed to go out. Chuckling, he added that that was a hot one off the bat and that no one ever before has defined territorial waters that way.

A reporter asked whether those waters, under his definition, "reached to the Rhine?"

Again Mr. Roosevelt chuckled and said that he was talking about salt water.

Asked whether the fact that American war vessels were patroling 200 miles off the coast indicated that that distance was the boundary of territorial waters, Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative and said that the ships were out there to obtain information.

War Brings Amity.

The war in Europe appeared today to have brought President Roosevelt nearer a reconciliation with some Senate critics of his policies than at any time since many of them rebelled against his proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court in 1937.

At the same time an administration supporter, Representative Bloom of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, told reporters that the conflict had already assured House passage of the President's proposal to repeal the embargo against arms shipments to warring nations.

Mr. Bloom said that a poll of sixty-three House Democrats who voted against outright repeal at the last session of Congress showed more than enough had changed their minds to change the verdict at the special session beginning next Thursday.

Although there were signs of improving relations between Mr. Roosevelt and some critics, there was speculation over whether relations between him and Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, would suffer from the latter's leadership of those opposing repeal.

Borah Critical of Plan.

Senator Borah criticized the President's program for revising the neutrality act in a radio address last night, saying:

"When we couple repeal with the announced and declared program of furnishing arms and munitions to one side and withholding them from the other, such a program will unquestionably constitute intervention in the present conflict in Europe."

Mr. Roosevelt is obviously eager to unify as much of Congress as possible behind his program. Recently he has made friendly gestures to three powerful Democratic Senators who have at times opposed his policies—Harrison of Mississippi, Glass of Virginia and George of Georgia. The latter was one of those who voted with a majority of the Foreign Relation Committee last July to postpone action on neutrality legislation.

While there has been no public reaction from George, both Senators Harrison and Glass indicated a willingness to let bygones be bygones.

The President sent a personal message of sympathy to Senator George when the Senator underwent an eye operation in New York recently.

Senator Harrison announced, after conferring with the President twice by long distance phone about plans for the special session, that he was supporting him 100 per cent in his foreign policy dealing with neutrality.

Senator Glass, commenting on the recess appointment of James Elliott Heath, a friend of thirty years standing, as collector of customs at Norfolk, was quoted as saying, among other things, "Naturally I would prefer to be on friendly terms with the White House."

On a previous occasion Senator Glass and his colleague, Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, called President Roosevelt's appointment of Floyd H. Roberts, to be a Virginia district judge, personally objectionable to them; and they influenced Senate rejection of that nomination last spring.

Some analysts professed to see in the President's summoning of Republican as well as Democratic leaders to meet with him next Wednesday an indication that he intended to renew his appeal that partisan politics be divorced from congressional consideration of neutrality act revision.

He called in Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican Senate leader; his assistant, Senator Austin of Vermont, and Representative Martin of Massachusetts, the Republican House leader, along with Vice-President Garner and other Democratic leaders.

Some Republicans Wary.

There were indications, however, that some Republicans were chary of accepting at its face value any announcement that politics would be adjourned.

"I observe that the President is to meet with Republican leaders and all agree to facilitate the repeal of the embargo provision of the law," Senator Johnson, Republican, of California, a critic of the President's foreign policies, telegraphed Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota. "I congratulate you on your stand."

Senator Nye, who has opposed repeal on the grounds that it would be almost sure to involve this country in war, said he had no desire to see politics injected into the coming contest.

"But I suppose," he added, "that any one who differs in opinion with the administration is going to be charged with playing politics. Nevertheless, if we are going to speak, we had better speak now."

Nye Criticizes Hull.

Senator Nye criticized also a statement made yesterday by Secretary of State Hull as going beyond the bounds permitted under the present neutrality act.

"I think it is a signal, and one that is well to have now, that they are determined to destroy the neutrality act," Senator Nye declared.

Mr. Hull gave notice to belligerents that the United States reserved all of its rights under international law and would take appropriate measures when such rights were violated.

The Secretary said that restrictions placed on American citizens by the neutrality act "do not and cannot constitute a modification of the principles of international law, but rather they require nations of the United States to forgo, until Congress shall decide otherwise, the exercise of certain rights under those principles."

SEP 16 1939

In his radio talk Senator Borah argued that to repeal the arms embargo would be tantamount to furnishing arms to one side in the European war while denying them to the other. Many legislators on both sides of the controversy agree that repeal would benefit Great Britain and France because, with their sea power they would be able to obtain arms here while Germany would not.

Senator Borah said that the neutrality law had been almost unanimously passed by Congress in 1937 and approved by the executive department.

"If," he said, "in a few months we can tear up the law which the nation almost unanimously approved, how long do you think it will take to put across the proposition of sending our young men to the trenches once we have intervened?"

Representative Bloom, discussing his poll of sixty-three House Democrats who voted last session against the administration's proposal for repeal of the arms embargo, told a newspaper men:

"Of the thirty-eight replies I've had to my questionnaire so far, all but six favored repeal, and we only need twenty-one votes."

Shift of Twenty-one Needed.

Mr. Bloom explained that the House adopted the so-called Vorys amendment, which would have put a limited embargo provision into the law, by a vote of 214 to 173. A shift of twenty-one votes would have reversed the result. The Vorys amendment, like the remainder of a House bill to revamp the statute, went into a Senate committee pigeonhole at the last session.

For that reason, Mr. Bloom said, the House would let the Senate take the initiative at the coming session.

Representative Starnes, Democrat, of Alabama, said he favored repeal of all neutrality legislation and a return to international law.

Text of Lindbergh's Appeal to the Nation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (AP).—Following is the text of Charles A. Lindbergh's speech broadcast tonight:

SEP 16 1939

In times of great emergency, men of the same belief must gather together for mutual council and action. If they fail to do this, all that they stand for will be lost. I speak tonight to those people in the United States of America who feel that the destiny of this country does not call for our involvement in European wars.

We must band together to prevent the loss of more American lives in these internal struggles of Europe. We must keep foreign propaganda from pushing our country blindly into another war. Modern war with all its consequences is too tragic and too devastating to be approached from anything but a purely American standpoint. We should never enter a war unless it is absolutely essential to the future welfare of our nation.

This country was colonized by men and women from Europe. The hatreds, the persecutions, the intrigues they left behind gave them courage to cross the Atlantic Ocean to a new land. They preferred the wilderness and the Indians to the problems of Europe. They weighed the cost of freedom from those problems, and they paid the price.

Found Way to Live in Peace

In this country they eventually found a means of living peacefully together—the same nationalities that are fighting abroad today. The quarrels of Europe faded out from American life as generations passed. Instead of wars between the English, French and Germans, it became a struggle of the New World for freedom from the Old—a struggle for the right of America to find her own destiny. The colonization of this country grew from European troubles and our freedom sprang from European war; for we won independence from England while she was fighting France.

No one foresaw the danger ahead of us more clearly than George Washington. He solemnly warned the people of America against becoming entangled in European alliances. For over one hundred years his advice was followed. We established the Monroe Doctrine for America. We let other nations fight among themselves. Then, in 1917, we entered a European war. This time we were on England's side, and so were France and Russia. Friends and enemies reverse as decades pass—as political doctrines rise and fall.

The great war ended before our full force had reached the field. We escaped with the loss of relatively few soldiers. We measured our dead in thousands. Europe measured hers in millions. Europe has not yet recovered from the effects of this war, and she has already entered another. A generation has passed since the Armistice of 1918, but even in America we are still paying for our part in that victory—and we will continue to pay for another generation. European countries were both unable and unwilling to pay their debts to us.

Now that war has broken out again, we in America have a decision to make on which the destiny of our nation depends. We must decide whether or not we intend to become forever involved in this age-old struggle between the nations of Europe.

Let us not delude ourselves. If we enter the quarrels of Europe during war, we must stay in them in time of peace as well.

"Madness" to Send Soldiers

It is madness to send our soldiers to be killed as we did in the last war if we turn the course of peace over to the greed, the fear and the intrigue of European nations.

We must either keep out of European wars entirely or stay in European affairs permanently.

In making our decision, this point should be clear: These wars in Europe are not wars in which our civilization is defending itself against some Asiatic intruder. There is no Genghis Khan or Xerxes marching against our Western nations. This is not a question of banding together to defend the white race against foreign invasion.

This is simply one more of those age-old struggle within our own family of nations—a quarrel arising from the errors of the last war—from the failure of the victors of that war to follow a consistent policy either of fairness or of force.

Arbitrary boundaries can only be maintained by strength of arms. The Treaty of Versailles either had to be revised as time passed, or England and France, to be successful, had to keep Germany weak by force. Neither policy was followed; Europe wavered back and forth between the two. As a result another war has begun, a war which is likely to be far more prostrating than the last, a war which will again kill off the best youth of Europe, a war which may even lead to the end of our Western civilization.

We must not permit our sentiment, our pity or our personal feelings of sympathy to obscure the issue, to affect our children's lives. We must be as impersonal as a surgeon with his knife.

Cost Would Be Enormous

Let us make no mistake about the cost of entering this war. If we take part successfully, we must throw the resources of our entire nation into the conflict; munitions alone will not be enough. We cannot count on victory merely by shipping abroad several thousand airplanes and cannon. We are likely to lose a million men, possibly several million—the best of American youth. We will be staggering under the burden of recovery during the rest of our lives. And our children will be fortunate if they see the end in their lives, even if, by some unlikely chance, we do not pass on another Polish Corridor to them. Democracy itself may not survive.

If we enter fighting for democracy abroad, we may end by losing it at home.

America has little to gain by taking part in another European war. We must not be misguided by this foreign propaganda to the effect that our frontiers lie in Europe. One need only glance at a map to see where our true frontiers lie. What more could we ask than the Atlantic Ocean on the east and the Pacific on the west? No, our interests in Europe need not be from the standpoint of defense; our own natural frontiers are enough for that. If we extend them at all, we might as well extend them around the earth. An ocean is a formidable barrier, even for modern aircraft.

Our safety does not lie in fighting European wars. It lies in our own internal strength, in the character of the American people and of American institutions.

As long as we maintain an Army, a Navy and an air force worthy of the name, as long as America does not decay within, we need fear no invasion of this country.

Again I address those among you who agree with this stand. Our future and our children's future depend upon the action we take. It is essential to think clearly and to act quickly in the days which are to come. We will be deluged with propaganda, both foreign and domestic—some obvious, some insidious. Much of our news is already colored. Every incident and every accident will be seized upon to influence us. And in a modern war there are bound to be plenty of both.

Look for Propaganda

We must learn to look behind every article we read and every speech we hear. We must not only inquire about the writer and the speaker—about his personal interests and his nationality but we must ask who owns and who influences the newspaper, the news picture and the radio station.

If our people know the truth, if they are fully and accurately informed, if they are not misled by propaganda, this country is not likely to enter the war which is now going on in Europe.

And if Europe is prostrated again by war as she has been so often in the past, then the greatest hope for our Western civilization lies in America. By staying out of war ourselves we may be able to bring peace to Europe more quickly. Let us look to our own defenses and to our own character. If we attend to them, we have no need to fear what happens elsewhere. If we do not attend them, nothing can save us.

If war brings more dark ages to Europe, we can better preserve those things which we love and which we mourn the passing of in Europe today by preserving them here, by strengthening them here, rather than by hurling ourselves thoughtlessly to their defense over there and thus destroying all in the conflagration. The German genius for science and organization, the English genius for government and commerce, the French genius for living and the understanding of life—they must not go down here as well as on the other side. Here in America they can be blended to form the greatest genius of all.

The gift of civilized life must still be carried on. It is more important than the sympathies, the friendships, the desires of any single generation. This is the test before America now. This is the challenge—to carry on Western civilization.

Lindbergh's Radio Talk Is Called Friends' Idea

Close Associates Said to Have Persuaded Him to Speak

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's radio speech tonight—his first broadcast in eight years—was arranged, a broadcasting company representative said, by close friends who persuaded him that the American people would like to hear his views on the European war.

The matter was first broached, it was said, at a private dinner three weeks ago. Col. Lindbergh agreed Sunday to make the address.

His speech was an unusual occurrence, in that he rarely makes public utterances. He arranged to make it in the seclusion of a hotel room, with very few persons present.

After the broadcast, however, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh left their hotel room and walked a block to a radio studio to hear a transcription of the address. A small crowd tagged along behind the couple.

Before the broadcast Col. Lindbergh talked to the radio technicians about how the portable apparatus operated.

While making the address he leaned on the speaker's stand with both elbows, gripping his manuscript with both hands, glancing up only occasionally at the five microphones ranged in front of him.

When the few persons in the suite congratulated him after the speech, praising his delivery, he laughed and shook his head negatively.

Except to change a word once or twice, Col. Lindbergh adhered to his prepared text.

SEP 16 1939

At the War Department, where Col. Lindbergh has just concluded a tour of duty as a reserve officer, officials said they knew nothing of his intention to make the speech until it was announced by the broadcasting companies.

30.24—3349

NIGHT LEAD NEUTRALITY (BUDGET)

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON, SEPT. 15-(AP)-COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH URGED AMERICA TONIGHT TO KEEP CAREFULLY OUT OF EUROPE'S WAR, ASSERTING THAT "IF WE ENTER FIGHTING FOR DEMOCRACY ABROAD, WE MAY END BY LOSING IT" HERE AT HOME.

"WE MUST NOT BE MISGUIDED BY THIS FOREIGN PROPAGANDA TO THE EFFECT THAT OUR FRONTIERS LIE IN EUROPE," THE FAMOUS FLIER SAID IN AN ADDRESS PREPARED FOR BROADCAST BY ALL MAJOR NETWORKS. "ONE NEED ONLY GLANCE AT A MAP TO SEE WHERE OUR TRUE FRONTIERS LIE. WHAT MORE COULD WE ASK THAN THE ATLANTIC OCEAN ON THE EAST AND THE PACIFIC ON THE WEST. X X X X AN OCEAN IS A FORMIDABLE BARRIER EVEN FOR MODERN AIRCRAFT."

LINDBERGH, WHO FIRST CAME TO PROMINENCE BY FLYING ONE OF THE OCEAN BARRIERS HE MENTIONED, MADE NO ALLUSION TO THE CURRENTLY AGITATED QUESTION OF REPEALING THE NEUTRALITY LAW'S EMBARGO ON ARMS SHIPMENTS TO THE NATIONS AT WAR. BUT HERE IN WASHINGTON, WITH CONGRESS CALLED INTO SPECIAL SESSION TO CONSIDER THAT QUESTION, THERE WERE SEVERAL DEVELOPMENTS CONNECTED WITH IT OR WITH THE WAR ITSELF.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, WHEN ASKED IF THE ADMINISTRATION WOULD BE SATISFIED WITH REPEAL OF THE ENTIRE NEUTRALITY ACT AND A RETURN TO INTERNATIONAL LAW, REPLIED THAT ANY ANSWER WOULD DISCLOSE WHAT HE IS PLANNING TO TELL THE SPECIAL SESSION IN HIS MESSAGE OF NEXT THURSDAY.

SEP 16 1939

AT THE SAME TIME, HE DEFINED AMERICAN TERRITORIAL WATERS AS EXTENDING AS FAR OUT AS AMERICAN INTERESTS REQUIRE. NO ONE, HE SAID, HAD EVER DEFINED THE TERM THAT WAY AND HE THOUGHT IT A GOOD DEFINITION.

HE ADDED A HOPE THAT THE WORK OF THE SPECIAL SESSION WOULD BE CONFINED TO NEUTRALITY LEGISLATION. HE WOULD NOT ASK, HE SAID, EITHER FOR NEW ANTI-PROFITEERING LAWS OR FOR LEGISLATION DEALING WITH WAR RISK INSURANCE.

LINDBERGH'S ADDRESS WAS AN UNUSUAL OCCURRENCE, IN THAT HE RARELY MAKES PUBLIC UTTERANCES. HE ARRANGED TO MAKE IT IN THE SECLUSION OF A HOTEL ROOM, WITH VERY FEW PERSONS PRESENT.

AFTER THE BROADCAST, HOWEVER, THE COLONEL AND MRS. LINDBERGH LEFT THEIR HOTEL ROOM AND WALKED A BLOCK TO A RADIO STUDIO TO HEAR A TRANSCRIPTION OF THE ADDRESS. A SMALL CROWD TAGGED ALONG BEHIND THE COUPLE DURING THEIR JAUNT.

BEFORE THE BROADCAST, HE TALKED TO THE RADIO TECHNICIANS ABOUT HOW THE PORTABLE APPARATUS OPERATED.

WHILE MAKING THE ADDRESS, HE LEANED ON THE SPEAKER'S STAND WITH BOTH ELBOWS, GRIPPING HIS MANUSCRIPT WITH BOTH HANDS, GLANCING UP ONLY OCCASIONALLY AT THE FIVE MICROPHONES RANGED IN FRONT OF HIM.

WHEN THE FEW PERSONS IN THE SUITE CONGRATULATED HIM AFTER THE SPEECH, PRAISING HIS DELIVERY HE LAUGHED AND SHOOK HIS HEAD NEGATIVELY.

EXCEPT TO CHANGE A WORD ONCE OR TWICE, LINDBERGH ADHERED TO HIS PREPARED TEXT.

SEP 16 1939

"NOW THAT WAR HAS BROKEN OUT AGAIN," HE SAID, "WE IN AMERICA HAVE A DECISION TO MAKE ON WHICH THE DESTINY OF OUR NATION DEPENDS. WE MUST DECIDE WHETHER OR NOT WE INTEND TO BECOME FOREVER INVOLVED IN THIS AGE-OLD STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE NATIONS OF EUROPE.

"LET US NOT DELUDE OURSELVES. IF WE ENTER THE QUARRELS OF EUROPE DURING WAR, WE MUST STAY IN THEM IN TIME OF PEACE AS WELL.

30.24-3357

IT IS MADNESS TO SEND OUR SOLDIERS TO BE KILLED AS WE DID IN THE LAST WAR IF WE TURN THE COURSE OF PEACE OVER TO THE GREED, THE FEAR, AND THE INTRIGUE OF EUROPEAN NATIONS. WE MUST EITHER KEEP OUT OF EUROPEAN WARS ENTIRELY, OR STAY IN EUROPEAN AFFAIRS PERMANENTLY.

"IN MAKING OUR DECISION, THIS POINT IS CLEAR: THESE WARS IN EUROPE ARE NOT WARS IN WHICH OUR CIVILIZATION IS DEFENDING ITSELF AGAINST SOME ASIATIC INTRUDER. THERE IS NO GHENGIS KAHN OR XERXES MARCHING AGAINST OUR WESTERN NATIONS.

"THIS IS NOT A QUESTION OF BANDING TOGETHER TO DEFEND THE WHITE RACE AGAINST FOREIGN INVASION. THIS IS SIMPLY ONE MORE OF THOSE AGE-OLD QUARRELS WITHIN OUR FAMILY OF NATIONS---A QUARREL ARISING FROM THE ERRORS OF THE LAST WAR---FROM THE FAILURE OF THE VICTORS OF THAT WAR TO FOLLOW A CONSISTENT POLICY EITHER OF FAIRNESS OR OF FORCE. SEP 16 1939

"ARBITRARY BOUNDARIES CAN ONLY BE MAINTAINED BY STRENGTH OF ARMS. THE TREATY OF VERSAILLES EITHER HAD TO BE REVISED AS TIME PASSED, OR ENGLAND AND FRANCE, TO BE SUCCESSFUL, HAD TO KEEP GERMANY WEAK BY FORCE. NEITHER POLICY WAS FOLLOWED; EUROPE WAVERED BACK AND FORTH BETWEEN THE TWO. AS A RESULT, ANOTHER WAR HAS BEGUN, A WAR WHICH IS LIKELY TO BE FAR MORE PROSTRATING THAN THE LAST, A WAR WHICH WILL AGAIN KILL OFF THE BEST YOUTH OF EUROPE, A WAR WHICH MAY EVEN LEAD TO THE END OF OUR WESTERN CIVILIZATION."

SINCE 1918, HE SAID, A GENERATION HAS PASSED, EUROPE HAS NOT YET RECOVERED BEFORE PLUNGING INTO ANOTHER WAR, AND AMERICA IS "STILL PAYING" FOR HER PART IN THE LAST CONFLICT.

"EUROPEAN COUNTRIES WERE BOTH UNABLE AND UNWILLING TO PAY THEIR DEBTS TO US," HE ADDED.

"OUR SAFETY DOES NOT LIE IN FIGHTING EUROPEAN WARS," HE SAID AT 30.24—3351

ANOTHER POINT. "IT LIES IN OUR OWN INTERNAL STRENGTH, IN THE CHARACTER OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS. AS LONG AS WE MAINTAIN AN ARMY, NAVY AND AN AIR FORCE WORTHY OF THE NAME, AS LONG AS AMERICA DOES NOT DECAY WITHIN, WE NEED FEAR NO INVASION OF THIS COUNTRY."

"OUR FUTURE AND OUR CHILDREN'S FUTURE DEPENDS UPON THE ACTION WE TAKE," LINDBERGH CONTINUED. "IT IS ESSENTIAL TO THINK CLEARLY AND TO ACT QUICKLY IN THE DAYS WHICH ARE TO COME.

"WE WILL BE DELUGED WITH PROPAGANDA, BOTH FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC--SOME OBVIOUS, SOME INSIDIOUS. MUCH OF OUR NEWS IS ALREADY COLORED. EVERY INCIDENT AND EVERY ACCIDENT WILL BE SEIZED UPON TO INFLUENCE US.

"AND IN MODERN WAR THERE ARE BOUND TO BE PLENTY OF BOTH. WE MUST LEARN TO LOOK BEHIND EVERY ARTICLE WE READ AND EVERY SPEECH WE HEAR. WE MUST NOT ONLY INQUIRE ABOUT THE WRITER AND THE SPEAKER--ABOUT HIS PERSONAL INTERESTS AND HIS NATIONALITY--BUT WE MUST ASK WHO OWNS AND WHO INFLUENCES THE NEWSPAPER, THE NEWS PICTURE AND THE RADIO STATION.

"IF OUR PEOPLE KNOW THE TRUTH, IF THEY ARE FULLY AND ACCURATELY INFORMED, IF THEY ARE NOT MISLED BY PROPAGANDA, THIS COUNTRY IS NOT LIKELY TO ENTER THE WAR NOW GOING ON IN EUROPE."

LT1034PES SEP 16 1939

SECOND NIGHT LEAD FRENCH

BY H.TAYLOR HENRY

PARIS, SEPT 15-(AP)-FRENCH WARPLANES WERE REPORTED TONIGHT TO HAVE DEFEATED AN UNDISCLOSED NUMBER OF GERMAN PLANES WHICH WERE BOMBING AND STRAFING FRENCH TROOPS IN AN EFFORT TO HALT THEIR GENERAL

ADVANCE ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

DISPATCHES FROM THE FRONT INDICATED GERMAN FORCES WERE RETREATING SLOWLY FROM ADVANCE POSITIONS ALL ALONG THE FRONT'S NORTHERN FLANK.

THE FRENCH AND GERMAN PLANES CLASHED SO LOW OVER THE LINES, IT WAS SAID, THAT ADVANCING TROOPS ALMOST COULD DISTINGUISH THE FACES OF THE PILOTS.

SEP 16 1939

THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED TO BE BRINGING TO BEAR THE FULL FORCE OF THEIR AIRFORCE AND ARTILLERY IN AN ATTEMPT TO STOP THE FRENCH.

AT LEAST THREE FULL NAZI DIVISIONS WERE REPORTED FIGHTING TO HOLD THE STRONGEST ADVANCE DEFENSES OF THE GERMAN SIEGFREID LINE ALONG A 12-MILE FRONT BEFORE THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL CITY OF SAARBRUECKEN AND TO THE EAST OF THAT CITY, WHOSE DEFENSES HOLD THE KEY TO THE CENTER OF THE ACTIVE FRONT.

ALTHOUGH THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL INFORMATION, THE FRENCH WERE ASSUMED TO HAVE THROWN AS MANY IF NOT MORE DIVISIONS INTO THE FIGHTING IN THIS SECTOR.

THE ONLY OFFICIAL INDICATION YET GIVEN ON FRENCH STRENGTH WAS A COMMUNIQUE WHICH ANNOUNCED A WEEK AGO THAT ONE DIVISION HAD TAKEN PART IN THE CONQUEST OF THE WARNDT FOREST AREA ALONE. THE AREA LIES WEST OF SAARBRUECKEN.

THE GERMANS WERE SAID TO BE FIGHTING A DOGGED REAR GUARD ACTION TO COVER THEIR MAIN FORCES FALLING BACK TOWARD THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

LOCAL COUNTER-ATTACKS HELD UP THE FRENCH FOR HOURS UNTIL REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVED. THE ATTACK WAS STOPPED AND THE ANNOUNCED FORWARD MARCH OF THE FRENCH WAS RESUMED.

FROM THE BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE AIR FIGHTING IN THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE TONIGHT, IT WAS APPARENT THAT GERMAN PLANES DIVED LOW ON THE FRENCH ADVANCE LINES, RAKING THEM WITH MACHINE GUN FIRE AND FORCING THEM TO DIG FOR COVER.

FRENCH PURSUIT PLANES ROARED OUT FROM AIRDROMES BEHIND FRANCE'S MAGINOT LINE AND FOUGHT OFF THE GERMAN SHIPS.

THE FRENCH WERE SAID TO BE ADVANCING THROUGH A SCREEN OF SHELLS LAID DOWN BY GERMAN ARTILLERY ON A 40-MILE SECTOR EXTENDING FROM THE MOSELLE RIVER ON THE EXTREME NORTH, WHERE THE FRONT TOUCHES LUXEMBOURG, TO A POINT TWO MILES BEYOND THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL CITY OF SAARBRUECKEN.

(DISPATCHES FROM BRUSSELS SAID THE MOSELLE VALLEY FIGHTING PROCEEDED ALL DAY WITH INTENSE BOMBARDMENTS. TERRIFIC GUNFIRE WAS HEARD AT THE LUXEMBOURG FRONTIER, WHERE INHABITANTS WERE ANNOYED BY FIRES FROM EXPLODING SHELLS).

THE PRESENT PHASE OF THE FRENCH ATTACK, IT WAS SAID, BEGAN TO MAKE ITSELF FELT ON THE GERMANS WHEN THE FRENCH PENETRATED NAZI ADVANCE POSITIONS IN FRONT OF THE SIEGRIED LINE TO THE EAST OF SAARBRUECKEN, THREATENING THE CENTRAL KEYSTONE OF THE GERMAN NORTHERN FLANK.

A COMMUNIQUE FROM THE GENERAL STAFF INDICATED THE FRENCH LINE WAS MOVING STEADILY TOWARD SAARBRUECKEN, CAPITAL OF THE INDUSTRIALLY RICH SAAR VALLEY, "DESPITE STRONG ENEMY REACTIONS, NOTABLY BY HIS ARTILLERY."

SEP 16 1939

THE NAZIS STARTED A METHODICAL WITHDRAWAL FROM THE SAARBRUECKEN AREA UNDER COVER OF A BARRAGE FROM THEIR HEAVY MORTARS AND THEN BEGAN PULLING TROOPS BACK FROM THE LINE TO THE NORTHWEST TO STRENGTHEN THE REST OF THE LINE, IT WAS REPORTED HERE.

THE FRENCH ADVANCE WAS REPORTED TO HAVE CAPTURED AT LEAST FOUR GERMAN VILLAGES, TWO NEAR THE MOSELLE AND TWO EAST OF SAARBRUECKEN. ALTHOUGH THEY WERE NOT NAMED IN DISPATCHES FROM THE FRONT, SOME OBSERVERS SAID IT WAS LOGICAL TO ASSUME THAT ONE OF THEM WAS THE TYPICAL OLD WORLD VILLAGE, PERL.

IT WAS FROM PERL, A MILE AND A HALF WITHIN GERMANY, THAT FRESH NAZI TROOPS LAUNCHED A COUNTER-OFFENSIVE UP THE MOSELLE VALLEY LAST SUNDAY, FORCING THE FRENCH TO GIVE UP SOME 500 YARDS OF PREVIOUSLY-WON TERRITORY.

THE FRENCH REPORTED TODAY THAT THEY NOT ONLY HALTED THE GERMAN ATTACK BUT HURLED THE NAZIS BACK AND CAPTURED THE POSITIONS FROM THE GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACK HAD BEGUN.

A FRESH FRENCH ATTACK WAS REPORTED TO HAVE STARTED IN FORCE ALONG THE MOSELLE LATE TODAY.

SEP 16 1939

THE MAIN BODY OF FRENCH TROOPS ADVANCED ON THE ROAD FROM MERSCHWILLER SOUTHEAST TO PERL WHICH RUNS BETWEEN HIGH GROUND DESIGNATED ON MILITARY MAPS AS HILLS 354 AND 373. THE ADVANCE GUARD WAS SAID TO HAVE CLEANED OUT THE HILLS BEFORE THE ATTACK BEGAN.

AT THE SAME TIME, A SECONDARY COLUMN DROVE STRAIGHT NORTH DOWN THE MOSELLE VALLEY BETWEEN THE RIVER AND A RAILROAD TO THE EAST.

AS THE GERMANS RETREATED DOWN THE VALLEY OBSERVERS REPORTED THEY WERE RIPPING UP THE RAILROAD TRACKS, OBVIOUSLY FEARING A FRENCH ATTACK TOWARD THEIR BASE AT TRIER, WHICH IS ONLY A FEW THOUSAND YARDS IN FRONT OF THE SIEGFRIED LINE. THE RAILROAD IS THE MAIN NORTHERN COMMUNICATION BETWEEN FRANCE AND GERMANY.

THE GENERAL STAFF MORNING COMMUNIQUE INDICATED THE GERMANS WERE NOT GUESSING WRONG. IT REPORTED THAT AN OFFENSIVE NORTHEAST OF THE FRONTIER TOWN OF SIERCK CARRIED THE FRENCH CLOSER TO TRIER.

30.24 - 3353.

30.24 — 3353

THE ADVANCE, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID, GAVE THE FRENCH ASSURED "POSSESSION OF AN AREA IN THE REGION NORTHEAST OF SIERCK WHICH HAS BEEN DISPUTED SINCE A GERMAN OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT WAS REPORTED IN THE EVENING COMMUNIQUE OF SEPT. 10."

"WE HAVE, BESIDES, ADVANCED BEYOND THIS REGION," IT ADDED.

NAZI AUTHORITIES WERE REPORTED TO HAVE REMOVED ALL CIVILIANS OF THE ENTIRE REGION BETWEEN THE SIEGFRIED LINE AND THE FRONTIER. IT WAS ESTIMATED AT LEAST 1,000,000 WOMEN, CHILDREN AND OLD MEN HAD BEEN MOVED, NOT ONLY FROM THE TWO LARGE CITIES OF TRIER AND SAARBRUECKEN, BUT FROM THE SMALL MINING TOWNS AS WELL.

SAARBRUECKEN ITSELF HAS BECOME A MAJOR PRIZE OF THE BATTLE OF THE SAAR RIVER. THE FRENCH SAY IT IS BEING GRADUALLY PINCHED OFF BY THEIR TROOPS WHO NOW ARE ESTABLISHED ON THE HEIGHTS EAST OF THE CITY WHICH DOMINATE A CONSIDERABLE SECTOR TO THE REAR.

ALL ROADS LEADING TO THE CITY FROM THE GERMAN SIDE ARE REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN DESTROYED BY FRENCH GUNS POUNDING AT THE AREA DAY AND NIGHT. THE FRENCH SAID ADVANCE GUARDS, WHICH NOW ARE OPERATING IN UNITS AS LARGE AS BATTALIONS, HAD CAPTURED IMPORTANT POSITIONS EAST OF THE CITY, INCLUDING TWO VILLAGES SLIGHTLY TO THE REAR.

SEP 16 1939

MILITARY SOURCES SAID FAST SQUAD CARS DASHED INTO THE VILLAGES AHEAD OF THE INFANTRY PATROLS, SPRAYING HOUSES HELD BY NAZI TROOPS WITH MACHINE-GUNS AND LIGHT CANNON. THEY DECLARED THAT THEN LINES OF INFANTRY, FOLLOWED BY MOTORIZED UNITS, SPREAD OUT THROUGH FIELDS AND ALONG SECONDARY ROADS IN THE VICINITY.

THE FRENCH WERE DESCRIBED AS TAKING NO CHANCES AS THEY CLOSED IN AROUND SAARBRUECKEN. THE ADVANCE SLOWED DOWN AFTER THE CAPTURE OF EACH IMPORTANT POSITION TO GIVE THE MAIN BODIES TIME TO CONSOLIDATE THEIR LINES FOR THE NEXT DRIVE.

THE WAR ON THE WESTERN FRONT IS STILL ONE IN WHICH GAINS ARE MEASURED IN YARDS INSTEAD OF MILES; A WAR IN WHICH THE CAPTURE OF SMALL CLUSTERS OF HOUSES TOO TINY TO APPEAR EVEN AS NAMES ON THE MAP FIGURES AS A DISTINCT ADVANTAGE.

THE GERMAN ADVANCE LINES APPEARED TONIGHT TO START AT THE SMALL VILLAGE OF BESCH, 2 1/2 MILES WITHIN GERMAN TERRITORY ON THE MOSELLE RIVER AND ON A RAILROAD LIV2,A 149. .3

THE GERMAN ADVANCE LINES APPEARED TONIGHT TO START AT THE SMALL VILLAGE OF BESCH, 2 1/2 MILES WITHIN GERMAN TERRITORY ON THE MOSELLE RIVER AND ON A RAILROAD LINE RUNNING FROM METZ TO TRIER.

FROM BESCH, A GERMAN LINE OF BLOCKHOUSES AND AND MACHINE-GUN NESTS RUNS PARALLEL TO THE FRONTIER 12 MILES SOUTHEAST TO MERZIG, WHERE IT REACHES THE SAAR RIVER. FROM MERZIG THE GERMAN POSITIONS RUN IN FRONT OF THE RIVER PAST THE TOWN OF SAARLOUIS TO SAARBRUECKEN.

IN THE EASTERN SUBURBS OF SAARBRUECKEN THE FRONT DIPS BACK IN A SHALLOW "V" WHICH IS TWO MILES DEEP AND, AT THE MOUTH, IS SIX MILES WIDE. AT THE EASTERN END OF THE "V" SECTOR THE FRONT STRAIGHTENS

T

SEP 16 1939

A SHALLOW "V" WHICH IS TWO MILES DEEP AND, AT THE MOUTH, IS SIX MILES WIDE. AT THE EASTERN END OF THE "V" SECTOR THE FRONT STRAIGHTENS BACK TO MEET THE SIEGFRIED LINE 10 MILES SOUTHEAST OF ZQWEIBRUECKEN.

THE ENTIRE 60 MILES OF ACTIVE FRONT BETWEEN THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT LINES TAKES THE GENERAL FORM OF A CURVE WHICH BULGES OUT TOWARD THE MAGINOT LINE.

(EDS: IN 9TH GRAPH OF FOREGOING STARTING "THE FRENCH REPORTED" MAKE READ X X X CAPTURED THE POSITIONS FROM WHICH THE GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACK HAD BEGUN).

CENSORED

SEPT.15 AM 2015E

IT WAS LEARNED THAT A LARGE PART OF THE FOOD SUPPLIES WHICH CAME XXX FRONTIERS
OUT OF ITALY BY WAY OF THE ST.GOTHARD PASS WERE DESTINED FOR ENGLAND VIA FRENCH CHANNEL PORTS.

SWISS AGENTS OF ITALIAN SHIPPERS REPORTED THAT ITALIAN FIRMS ALREADY HELD SO MANY BLOCKED CREDITS IN GERMANY THAT THEY PREFERRED TO SEND FOODSTUFFS TO BRITAIN FOR CASH, RATHER THAN TAKE MORE GERMAN COAL IN EXCHANGE.

SEP 16 1939

THE SWISS HAVE A VITAL INTEREST IN THE ECONOMIC SIDE OF THE WAR. WHILE THEY DEPEND FOR IMPORTED FOODSTUFFS AND OTHER SUPPLIES ON THEIR NEIGHBORS, THE BELLIGERENT NATIONS ALREADY ARE REPORTED COMPLAINING THAT SOME SHIPMENTS SENT TO SWITZERLAND EVENTUALLY FIND THEIR WAY ACROSS THE ENEMY'S FRONTIERS.

THE SWISS ARE DEBATING THE FEASIBILITY OF A CONTROL BOARD, SIMILAR TO THE ONE WHICH OPERATED DURING THE WORLD WAR. THIS BOARD WOULD FURNISH GUARANTEES THAT GOODS MANUFACTURED IN A BELLIGERENT NATION WOULD NOT BE SENT TO ITS ENEMY. II

NIGHT LEAD BASEL

BY CHARLES FOLTZ, JR. SEP 16 1939

BASEL, SEPT. 15-(AP)-FRENCH FORCES WERE REPORTED HERE TONIGHT TO BE CLINGING TO HARD-WON ADVANTAGES ON THREE WESTERN FRONT BATTLE-GROUNDS, ON ONE OF WHICH THEY WERE SAID TO BE THREATENING MAIN FORTS OF GERMANY'S SIEGFRIED LINE.

THIS THREAT, MILITARY OBSERVERS SAID, WAS IN THE CENTER SECTOR OF THE 100-MILE FRONT WHERE THE FRENCH ARMY PRESSED AGAINST THE CAPITAL OF THE RICH SAAR INDUSTRIAL AREA, SAARBRUECKEN, AND THE RAIL LINE ALONG THE SAAR RIVER, WEST OF THE CITY.

MILITARY OBSERVERS DESCRIBED THIS LINE OF ACTION AS BEING IN THE SHAPE OF A GIANT SPOON. THE TIP OF THE SPOON'S BOWL WAS REPORTED HERE TO LIE ACROSS THE MAIN SAARBRUECKEN--ZWEIBRUCKEN HIGHWAY, WHERE THE VILLAGE OF FECHINGEN WAS SAID TO BE IN FRENCH HANDS.

SEP 16 1939

THE SPOON'S HANDLE WAS DESCRIBED BY THESE OBSERVERS AS LYING NORTH OF THE WARNDT FOREST, CLOSE AGAINST THE SAAR RIVER FROM BIST CREEK, NEAR THE VILLAGE OF DIFFERTEN, ACROSS ROSELLE CREEK AT LUDWEILER.

THROUGHOUT THE DAY REPORTS REACHED SWITZERLAND THAT FRENCH FORCES HAD REACHED THE SAAR RIVER AT WEHRDEN, BUT THESE COULD NOT BE CONFIRMED.

MANY SMALL SAAR MINING VILLAGES ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF SAARBRUECKEN ITSELF WERE REPORTED REDUCED TO RUINS BY CONSTANT FIRE FROM MAGINOT LINE FORTS AND FROM FRENCH HEAVY ARTILLERY DRAGGED INTO CAPTURED POSITIONS IN THE WARNDT FOREST.

ON THE SECOND BATTLEGROUND AT THE EXTREME WESTERN END OF THE FRONT, FRENCH FORCES WERE REPORTED IN VIOLENT FIGHTING FOR TWO FRONTIER HILLS NEAR THE VILLAGES OF APACH AND PERL.

THE FRENCH, HOWEVER, WERE REPORTED TO HAVE REGAINED POSSESSION OF THE HILL EAST OF PERL WHICH RISES ABOUT 600-FEET ABOVE THE MOSELLE RIVER AT THE STRATEGIC THREE-COUNTRIES CORNER OF GERMANY, FRANCE AND LUXEMBOURG.

BEFORE THE WAR, THIS AREA, LITTLE MORE THAN THREE MILES

30.24-3363

30.24-3355

SQUARE, WAS A SLEEPY LITTLE LORRAINE VILLAGE WHERE FARM WORKERS DAILY CROSSED THE UNGUARDED HILL FRONTIERS TO WORK THEIR LANDS IN OTHER COUNTRIES.

THE FRENCH TOWN OF APACH, WHICH STANDS ON THE THREE-COUNTRIES CORNER FACING THE MOSELLE, AND WAS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN OCCUPIED BRIEFLY BY THE GERMANS, LOOKED LIKE A QUIET TOWN IN MIDDLE NEW YORK STATE.

APACH IS NOW A NO-MANS LAND, ALTHOUGH WELL BEHIND THE FRENCH ADVANCE, FOR IT LIES IN A HOLLOW UNDER EASY COMMAND OF GERMAN GUNS AT BOURG AND TETTINGEN.

BEHIND IT IS THE LITTLE HILL HAMLET OF MARCHWEILER, WITH ONE COBBLESTONE STREET AND MUD ALLEYS, NOW DESERTED AND COMMANDED BY FRENCH ARTILLERY. THE ARTILLERY WAS SAID TO BE ESTABLISHED IN OLD MARLBOROUGH CASTLE WHICH DOMINATES IT.

THE CASTLE, A PEACETIME SHOWPLACE OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, ORIGINALLY WAS CALLED MENSBERG CASTLE, BUT WAS RENAMED AFTER THE ENGLISH GENERAL MARLBOROUGH WHO MADE HIS HEADQUARTERS THERE ~~IN THE WORLD WAR.~~ during the war of SUCCESSION, EARLY IN THE 18TH CENTURY.

IT STANDS WELL ACROSS THE BORDER IN FRANCE, BUT THE FRENCH GUNS MOUNTED ON PARAPETS AND A HILL JUST NORTH OF THE CASTLE, DOMINATE GERMANS TOWNS OF EFT AND HELLENDORF, NOW REPORTED HELD BY THE FRENCH, AS WELL AS THE LARGER TOWN OF BORG, WHICH WAS REPORTED STILL IN GERMAN HANDS.

SEP 16 1939

ON THE OTHER END OF THE WINDING FRONT, ALONG WHICH FRENCH OUTPOSTS WERE REPORTED ALMOST EVERYWHERE ON GERMAN SOIL, IS THE THIRD BATTLEGROUND IN THE FOOTHILLS OF THE VOSGES.

THE FRENCH ATTACKS IN THIS SECTOR WERE REPORTED HERE TO BE CAREFUL INFILTRATIONS NORTHEAST OF BITCHE FORTRESS WHICH OBSERVERS

BELIEVED WERE TAKING FRENCH TROOPS DEEP INTO THE PALATINATE FORESTS.

ON THE EASTERN FLANK OF THIS DRIVE, THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED TO HAVE RETAKEN THE VILLAGE OF SCHWEIZ, WHICH ALREADY HAS CHANGED HANDS SEVERAL TIMES IN THE FIGHTING IN THIS AREA.

THE MAIN PROGRESS OF THE FRENCH TROOPS, HOWEVER, WAS REPORTED TO BE ON THE WESTERN WING WHERE THE HEADWATERS OF SAUER RIVER FOLLOW THE EASTERN SLOPE OF THE VOSGES FOOTHILLS AND EVENTUALLY REACH THE RHINE THROUGH FRANCE.

BOTH GERMAN AND FRENCH FORTS WERE SAID TO BE WITHHOLDING THEIR FIRE FOR FEAR OF HITTING THEIR OWN PATROLS WHICH WERE REPORTED CLASHING AT VARIOUS POINTS DEEP IN THE WOODS.

SEP 16 1939

G717PED

1 DD SEPT 15

BERLIN-- S[redacted] ADD NIGHT LEAD GERMAN BY WHITELEATHER

X X X STARVING [redacted] SCANDINAVIA

BESIDES ADVANCING UPON WARSAW, THE GERMAN FORCES WERE SAID TO BE EQUALLY CONCERNED ABOUT CUTTING THE CAPITAL OFF FROM AVENUES OF ESCAPE OR SUPPLIES FROM THE EAST. SIMILARLY, ANOTHER SECTION OF THE EASTERN ARMY WAS REPORTED MOVING EAST OF THE BUG RIVER WITH THE OBVIOUS INTENTION OF SOON HEADING STRAIGHT SOUTHWARD FOR LWOW, ABOUT 220 MILES SOUTHEAST OF WARSAW, AS PART OF A GENERAL ENCIRCLEMENT MOVEMENT TOWARD THIS IMPORTANT CENTER WHICH IS THE SECOND LARGEST CITY IN POLAND.

SEP 16 1939

AROUND KUTNO, 70 MILES WEST OF WARSAW, A FIERCE BATTLE WAS SAID TO BE STILL RAGING.

THE FIRST COMMUNIQUE OF THE DAY SAID GERMAN TROOPS WHICH CROSSED THE NAREW RIVER EAST OF MODLIN HAD TAKEN JABLONA, A NEARBY TOWN, AND WERE APPROACHING PRAGA. EAST OF WARSAW FIVE IMPORTANT RAILWAY LINES WERE REPORTED ATTACKED AND INTERRUPTED IN MANY PLACES.

WARSAW, HOWEVER, WAS REPORTED STILL IN POLISH HANDS.

(DEWITT MACKENZIE, IN HIS ANALYSIS OF THE FIGHTING, SAID GERMANY'S BIG OBJECTIVE WAS THE RUSSIAN BORDER OF POLAND TO PROVIDE THE REICH WITH QUICK COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE SOVIET STATE. HITLER IS EXPECTING RUSSIA TO PROVIDE HIM WITH SUPPLIES HE NOW LACKS, MACKENZIE SAID, ADDING THIS WOULD PROTRACT THE WAR INDEFINITELY).

SEP 16 1939

DISCUSSING THE POSSIBILITY OF PEACE, DIENST AUS DEUTSCHLAND SAID PEACE TO GERMANY MEANT NOT MERELY LAYING DOWN HER ARMS BUT CREATION OF A NEW ORDER IN EUROPE.

"BERLIN BELIEVES IT IS AUTHORIZED TO SPEAK OF A POSITIVE PEOPLE'S FRONT, THE COMMON OBJECT WHEREOF WOULD BE CREATION OF A NEW AND JUST PEACE AND ORDER," THE NEWS SERVICE CONTINUED.

"WHETHER THIS PROBLEM WILL BE SOLVED THROUGH PEACEFUL OR WARLIKE MEANS DEPENDS IN THE GERMAN VIEW ON WESTERN POWERS. THEY DECLARED WAR AND SHIFTED A GERMAN PEACEFUL ACTION IN THE EAST INTO A WESTERN WAR PROBLEM. IT THEREFORE LIES SOLELY IN THEIR HANDS WHETHER A PEACEFUL WAY CAN BE FOUND X X X .

"IF PEACE IS DISCUSSED IN GERMANY IT ISN'T DONE IN THE SENSE OF ENDING HOSTILITIES AT ANY PRICE, BUT SOLELY IN THE SENSE OF A NEW AND JUST ORDER, REALIZATION OF WHICH WESTERN POWERS UP TO NOW HAVE ALWAYS AVOIDED."

MEANWHILE, INTEREST WAS EXPRESSED IN NAZI CIRCLES OVER CHINA'S ATTITUDE TOWARD ENGLAND. SHOULD CHINA DECLARE OPENLY FOR BRITAIN IT WAS BELIEVED HERE JAPAN, DESPITE HER DISAPPOINTMENT OVER GERMANY'S MAKING FRIENDS WITH RUSSIA, WOULD THROW HER LOT WITH GERMANY.

NEWSPAPERS TONIGHT REVIEWED THE FIRST 15 DAYS OF WAR ASSERTING THEY BROUGHT REALIZATION TO BRITAIN THAT BRITISH AND FRENCH AID TO POLAND WAS IMPOSSIBLE AND THAT COUNTRIES SUCH AS TURKEY AND RUMANIA, UPON WHICH BRITAIN COUNTED IN A POLICY OF ENCIRCLING GERMANY, WERE ACTUALLY REMAINING NEUTRAL.

SEP 16 1939

THE WAR SHOWED, THE REVIEWS SAID, THAT THE POLISH ARMY WAS EQUIPPED FOR AN EASTERN WAR BUT NOT FOR A WESTERN ONE WHERE MASSES OF MOTORIZED UNITS MUST BE FACED. THE RENOWNED POLISH CAVALRY HAS BEEN HELPLESS AGAINST TANKS AND MACHINE GUNS, THE REVIEWS CONTINUED, WHILE GERMANY'S POWERFUL AIR FORCE CUT COMMUNICATIONS BEHIND THE LINES SO EFFECTIVELY THE POLISH ARMY COULD NOT MOVE.

HITLER HAS BEEN AT THE FRONT SINCE SHORTLY AFTER MILITARY ACTION BEGAN IN POLAND SEPT. 1. SINCE THEN DANZIG HAS BEEN ANNEXED; THE POLISH CORRIDOR, INDUSTRIAL SILESIA, GALICIA TO THE RUMANIAN BORDER, POLAND'S CENTER UP TO A SHORT DISTANCE WEST OF WARSAW, AND TERRITORY BETWEEN THE CAPITAL AND EAST PRUSSIA HAS BEEN TAKEN.

MORE THAN 100,000 PRISONERS WERE SAID TO BE IN GERMAN HANDS.

THE RICH INDUSTRIAL GAIN REPORTED FOR THE REICH INCLUDES THE GALICIAN OIL FIELDS FROM WHICH GERMANY EXPECTS TO GET GASOLINE FOR 77,500 MEDIUM SIZED AUTOMOBILES FOR A YEAR OR TO FLY BIG PASSENGER AIRPLANES 345,000 HOURS, IN ADDITION TO OIL PRODUCTS FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

A TRAINLOAD OF RUMANIAN OIL DESTINED FOR POLAND WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN SEIZED AFTER IT HAD CROSSED THE BORDER. THE PRIZE WAS SUFFICIENT, IT WAS SAID, TO RUN THE ARMY SEVERAL DAYS.

G10PED

30.24-3357

30.24-3357

FOLO CERNAUTI [redacted] POLISH

BUCHAREST, SEPT. 15--(AP)--MADAME JOZEF BECK, WIFE OF THE POLISH FOREIGN MINISTER, AND TWO OF THEIR CHILDREN, AGE 7 SEVEN AND FOUR, ARRIVED HERE TONIGHT FROM THE BORDER TOWN OF CERNAUTI FOR A TWO-DAY STAY BEFORE LEAVING FOR PARIS.

SEP 16 1939

ALSO IN BUCHAREST WERE THE WIDOW OF MARSHAL JOSEPH PILSUDSKI, POLISH NATIONAL HERO, AND AUGUST CARDINAL HLOND, Primate of Poland

MARSHAL. THE CARDINAL PLANNED TO [redacted] LEAVE TOMORROW FOR ROME.

MEANWHILE SEPT 15

NEWS OF HARLEYS DEATH

WAS SENT TO HIS WIDOW IN A GOVERNMENT TELEGRAM ON MONDAY THE KENT MESSENGER SAID PARAGRAPH THE NEWSPAPER ALSO SAID THAT THE PARENTS OF FLIGHT SERGEANT DONALD JARVIS 24 OF CHATHAM KENT HAD BEEN OFFICIALLY NOTIFIED THAT THEIR SON WAS QUOTE MISSING FOLLOWING WHAT WAS DESCRIBED AS A FLYING ACCIDENT ON SEPTEMBER 4 UNQUOTE THE DATE OF THE BRITISH AIR FORCE RAID ON WILHELMSHAVEN AND BRUNSBUTTEL

SEP 16 1939

STARK

A103

OTTAWA, SEPT. 15-(CANADIAN PRESS)-THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT MOVED TODAY TO REGULATE AND CONTROL FOREIGN EXCHANGE TRANSACTIONS.

A FOREIGN EXCHANGE BOARD, HEADED BY GRAHAM TOWERS, GOVERNOR OF THE BANK OF CANADA, WAS CREATED WITH POWER TO LICENSE IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF ALL TYPES OF GOODS, INCLUDING MONEY AND SECURITIES.

ANOTHER ORDER-IN-COUNCIL MAKES EFFECTIVE CERTAIN PROVISIONS OF THE EXCHANGE FUND ACT, PROVIDING FOR USE OF THE EXCHANGE FUND CREATED IN 1935 BY THE REVALUATION OF GOLD.

"USE OF THIS FUND," THE FINANCE MINISTER SAID, "WILL ENABLE THE GOVERNMENT, THROUGH THE EXCHANGE CONTROL BOARD, TO ASSIST EXPORT AND IMPORT TRADE BY MAINTAINING MORE STABLE EXCHANGE RATES THAN WOULD OTHERWISE BE POSSIBLE."

THE NEW REGULATIONS BECOME EFFECTIVE TOMORROW.

G1035PED

SEP 16 1939

GIVEN.

PARIS, SEPT. 15-(AP)-IN A HUGE OFFICE CONVERTED FROM AN AUTOMOBILE SHOWROOM, THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC IS HANDLING THE OFFERS OF FOREIGNERS TO SERVE FRANCE.

[redacted].

THE VOLUNTEERS ARE EXAMINED AND PUT TO JOBS DEEMED BEST SUITED TO THEM.

SEP 16 1939

OFFICIALS TELL OF A SHY LITTLE CHINESE WHO ASKED TO HELP. --WITHOUT PAY-- THEY PUT HIM TO WORK UNDER A SIGN INSCRIBED WITH CHINESE CHARACTERS ANSWERING THE QUESTIONS OF HIS COUNTRYMEN. A FEW DAYS LATER THEY LEARNED WHO HE IS-- ONE OF THE RICHEST MEN IN PARIS.

-PAM 530-LONG-220P-

BUCHAREST, SEPT. 15-(AP)-DECLARING IN AN OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE THE RUMANIA WOULD PROCEED ACCORDING TO STRICT NEUTRALITY RULES IN THE EUROPEAN WAR, RUMANIA TONIGHT SAID SOLDIERS COMING INTO THE COUNTRY FROM POLAND WOULD BE INTERNED UNTIL THE END OF THE CONFLICT.

SEP 16 1939

THE GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED IT WOULD PROVIDE SHELTER FOR REFUGEE CHILDREN AND WOUNDED PERSONS. IT ALSO ANNOUNCED THREE POLES WHO HELD HIGH POLITICAL POSTS WOULD BE INTERNED AND FORCED TO ABSTAIN FROM ALL POLITICAL ACTIVITY. THEIR NAMES WERE NOT

SEPT 15 LONDON-FIRST ADD NIGHT LEAD BRITISH X X X STRUGGLE.

SEP 16 1939

THE ATTACKS ON GERMAN SUBMARINES ANNOUNCED TODAY WERE BRITAIN'S REPLY TO A SERIES OF SWIFT [redacted] RAIDS ON BRITISH SHIPPING FROM THE VERY BEGINNING OF THE WAR.

WITHIN 24 HOURS AFTER WAR WAS DECLARED, THE LINER ATHENIA, WITH A PASSENGER LIST THAT INCLUDED MORE THAN 300 AMERICANS,

30.24-3359

30.24-3359

WAS SUNK.

SEP 16 1939

(GREAT BRITAIN CHARGED THE ATHENIA WAS TORPEDOED BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE, BUT GERMAN OFFICIALS DENIED THE CHARGE.)

SUBSEQUENTLY HAVE COME ANNOUNCEMENTS OF ATTACKS ON MANY OTHER BRITISH SHIPS STOP WITHIN THE LAST TWO DAYS THE VANCOUVER CITY THE BRITISH INFLUENCE AND THE FANAD HEAD HAVE ALL BEEN REPORTED SUNK PARAGRAPH CHAMBERLAIN IN A A SPEECH BEFORE THE HOUSE OF COMMONS WEDNESDAY EXPLAINED THAT EARLY LOSSES OF MERCHANT SHIPPING HAD BEEN EXPECTED QUOTE FOR THE REASON THAT WAR CAME AT A MOMENT WHEN LARGE NUMBERS OF OUR MERCHANT FLEET WERE SCATTERED OVER THE SEVEN SEAS MOVING UNDER PEACE CONDITIONS PARAGRAPH

SIXTH AND LAST BULLETIN: THE BRITISH HOWEVER EXPECT TO BOTTLE UP SUBMARINES RETURNING TO BASES FOR SUPPLIES, TO DISPOSE OF MOTHER SHIPS THAT COULD SUPPLY THEM IN MIDOCEAN, AND TO GET A CONVOY SYSTEM IN FULL OPERATION TO MAKE SUBMARINE WARFARE INEFFECTUAL PARAGRAPH DETAILED NEWS OF THE SUBMARINES SUNK IT WAS EXPLAINED OFFICIALLY IS BEING WITHHELD FOR TWO REASONS DASH TO PREVENT REPLACEMENT IN AREAS WHERE THEY ARE ELIMINATED AND FOR PSYCHOLOGICAL EFFECT OF THE SIMPLE REPORT OF QUOTE MISSING UNQUOTE ON THE CREWS OF OTHER SUBMARINES AF

SEP 16 1939

LEAD MACKENZIE'S WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE REPORTED ARMISTICE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN IN THEIR LITTLE WAR ALONG THE MANCHOUKUO-MONGOLIAN FRONTIER IS AN AFFAIR OF MOMENT, HOWEVER ONE VIEWS IT, AND IT WOULD SEEM TO REPRESENT A VICTORY FOR HERR HITLER.

SEP 16 1939

GERMANY HAS BEEN WORKING FEVERISHLY FOR A NON-AGGRESSION PACT BETWEEN THE SOVIET UNION AND JAPAN AND AN ARMISTICE MIGHT BE THE FORERUNNER OF THE BROADER INSTRUMENT.

HITLER'S CHIEF PURPOSE IN ENSURING PEACE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN PRESUMABLY WAS TO KEEP RUSSIA FREE OF ENTANGLEMENTS IN THE FAR EAST AND THUS ABLE AT LEAST TO FURNISH THE REICH WITH THE MILITARY AND FOOD SUPPLIES WHICH IT SO BADLY NEEDS. HE MAY EVEN HAVE HOPED FOR MILITARY AID FROM RUSSIA, TO JUDGE FROM SOME COMMENTS IN THE GERMAN PRESS.

GERMANY ALSO HAS BEEN REPORTED AS ANXIOUS TO SECURE JAPAN'S ADHESION TO A MILITARY ALLIANCE WITH THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS. A NON-AGGRESSION PACT MIGHT EASE THE WAY FOR THAT SOMEWHAT, ALTHOUGH JAPAN HAS SHOWN HERSELF INCLINED TO PLAY A LONE HAND IF FEASIBLE.

HITLER'S BLITZ KRIEG AGAINST POLAND CONTINUED TODAY TO LIVE UP TO ITS NAME--LIGHTNING WAR.

SEP 16 1939.

THE POLES STILL BATTLED DOGGEDLY AND FIERCELY TO SAVE THEIR BELEAGUERED CAPITAL, AND IN THE KUTNO AREA JUST TO THE WEST OF WARSAW A "SUICIDE ARMY" OF SOME FIFTY THOUSAND REFUSED TO SURRENDER, ALTHOUGH THEY HAVE BEEN FIGHTING FOR DAYS WITHOUT REST AND ARE SURROUNDED.

STILL THE GERMAN WAR-MACHINE CRUSHED STEADILY ON IN MOST PLACES. DOWN IN THE STRATEGIC SOUTHEAST SECTION OF THE UNHAPPY COUNTRY,

IN THE LWOW (LEMBERG) AREA, THE GREAT GERMAN MOVEMENT TOWARD THE RUSSIAN BORDER PROCEEDED FAST.

LEMBERG STILL HELD OUT AT LATEST REPORTS, BUT WAS HARD PRESSED, AND THE POLISH TROOPS IN NEARBY SECTORS WERE SAID TO BE PULLING BACK IN SHATTERED CONDITION.

SEP 16 1939

LONG LINES OF REFUGEES--OLD MEN, WOMEN, CHILDREN--WROTE A STORY OF TERROR ACROSS THE COUNTRYSIDE WHICH WAS THEIR HOME.

THIS LEMBURG DRIVE IS OF VAST MOMENT. ALREADY THE GERMANS APPEAR TO HAVE CUT POLAND OFF FROM RAIL COMMUNICATIONS WITH RUMANIA AND HUNGARY. THE POLES HAD BANKED ON GETTING SUPPLIES FROM THESE TWO NEIGHBORS.

BUT THE BIG OBJECTIVE IS THE RUSSIAN BORDER--THE QUICK ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN THE SOVIET AND GERMANY ACROSS BROKEN POLAND.

HITLER IS EXPECTING RUSSIA TO PROVIDE HIM WITH ALL THE FOODSTUFFS AND SINEWS OF WAR WHICH HE NOW LACKS--TO NULLIFY THE ALLIED ATTEMPT TO STARVE GERMANY OUT.

THIS FEEDING OF GERMANY WOULD TEND TO PROTRACT THE WAR INDEFINITELY. THE ALLIES HAVE RECONCILED THEMSELVES TO THAT, BUT JUST NOW HAS COME FURTHER DEVELOPMENT WHICH HAS SET TONGUES RACING WITH SPECULATION AS TO JUST WHAT ROLE RUSSIA MAY PLAY.

ALL EUROPE HAS BEEN STIRRED BY THE MOBILIZATION OF A BIG RUSSIAN ARMY OPPOSITE THE POLISH BORDER AND YESTERDAY THE MOSCOW NEWSPAPER PRAVDA ATTACKED POLAND'S HANDLING OF THE RUSSIAN MINORITIES WITHIN HER BORDERS.

PARIS AND OTHER CAPITALS GREW ANXIOUS BECAUSE OF THE WIDESPREAD BELIEF THAT GERMANY MIGHT BE PREPARING TO TURN EASTERN POLAND OVER TO RUSSIA.

IT WILL BE RECALLED THAT WHEN POLAND WAS CREATED AFTER THE WORLD WAR, ABOUT 43,500 SQUARE MILES OF HER TERRITORY CAME FROM RUSSIA, 30,500 FROM AUSTRIA AND 16,000 FROM GERMANY.

THE MUSCOVITES, HOWEVER, REMAINED SILENT AND LET THE OUTSIDE WORLD DO THE SPECULATING. SO THE BIG QUESTION OF THE MOMENT IS, WHAT WILL RUSSIA DO. YOU TELL ME THAT, AND I WILL PRETTY WELL TELL YOU HOW THE WAR IS GOING TO GO.

SEP 16 1939

THE FRENCH AND GERMANS CONTINUED THEIR FIGHTING ABOUT THE INDUSTRIAL TOWN OF SAARBRUECKEN IN THE RICH GERMAN SAARLAND. THE FRENCH APPARENTLY ARE GETTING READY FOR A BIG ASSAULT ON THE GERMAN SIEGFRIED LINE AND THE NAZIS REPORTEDLY ARE MASSING A HUGE FORCE IN THAT ZONE FOR DEFENSE.

SPEAKING OF THE SIEGFRIED LINE, OR WESTWALL AS IT GENERALLY IS CALLED, I'VE BEEN ASKED TO DESCRIBE "WHAT A GUY WOULD SEE GOING THROUGH THE COUNTRY BETWEEN THE MAGINOT AND SIEGFRIED LINES." WELL, THAT

SIEGFRIED LINE AND THE NAZIS REPORTEDLY ARE MASSING A HUGE FORCE IN THAT ZONE FOR DEFENSE.

ANOTHER DEVELOPMENT, AND ONE WHICH IS OF PARTICULAR INTEREST TO AMERICANS, IS BRITAIN'S STATEMENT THAT SHE BELIEVES GERMANY WILL TRY TO ESTABLISH SUBMARINE AND AIR BASES IN CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA. THE NAZIS DENOUNCE THIS AS A "CLUMSY ATTEMPT TO CREATE PANIC AMONG LATIN-AMERICAN NATIONS."

STILL, SOMETHING WOULD APPEAR TO HAVE DISTURBED THE UNEMOTIONAL ENGLISH. EVEN BEFORE THE DECLARATION OF WAR, BRITISH GUIANA AND THE IMPORTANT BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN THE RUM-PUNCH AND SWIZZLE-STICK AREA OF THE SPANISH MAIN HAD BEEN DECLARED TO BE UNDER A STATE OF EMERGEN-CY. FOR PURPOSES OF DEFENSE.

APROPOS OF THIS, WHEN I WAS TOURING SOUTH AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN COUNTRIES THREE YEARS AGO I MADE WHAT WAS TO ME A STARTLING DISCOVERY AT TRINIDAD, BRITAIN'S BIG ISLAND-COLONY. I WAS TOLD BY QUARTERS USUALLY WELL-INFORMED THAT ENGLAND INTENDED TO ESTABLISH A NAVAL BASE IN THE BAY OF PARIA, BETWEEN TRINIDAD AND VENEZUELA, BOTH FOR WAR-SHIPS AND NAVAL PLANES. PARIA IS A NATURAL HARBOR, WELL DEFENDED BY NATURE, AND ABLE TO PROVIDE ANCHORAGE FOR A DOZEN NAVIES.

IT WOULD BE SURPRISING IF BRITAIN HADN'T PREPARED TO MAKE SUCH PLANS EFFECTIVE IF NECESSARY.

A NAVAL BASE AT PARIA WOULD PROVIDE DEFENSE FOR THE NUMEROUS OTHER BRITISH HOLDINGS IN THIS PART OF THE WORLD. IT WOULD GIVE QUICK ACCESS TO CANADA, AND TO BRITISH TERRITORY IN THE FAR EAST VIA THE PANAMA CANAL.

ALSO DON'T FORGET THAT VENEZUELA POSSESSES ONE OF THE WORLD'S RICHEST KNOWN OIL SUPPLIES. OIL IS WHAT MAKES THE WHEELS OF WAR TURN. AND A NAVAL BASE IN PARIA MIGHT ENABLE BRITAIN TO KEEP GERMANY FROM ACCESS TO VENEZUELA'S LAKES OF PETROLEUM.

JUST OFF THE VENEZUELAN COAST IS A PIN-POINT OF AN ISLAND CALLED ARUBA. IT IS DUTCH AND ON IT IS ONE OF THE GREATEST OIL REFINERIES IN EXISTENCE. MUCH HIGH GRADE AIRPLANE GAS IS MADE HERE.

WHILE THIS ISN'T BRITISH TERRITORY, IT'S CERTAIN ENGLAND WOULDN'T LET ANY ENEMY TAKE IT OVER OR GAIN CONTROL. THERE ALSO IS A HUGE REFINERY ON THE DUTCH ISLAND OF CURACAO NEARBY.

TRINIDAD WILL BE AN INTERESTING PLACE TO WATCH.

SEP 16 1939

ME937AED

30 24-3361

3024—3361

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

NEW YORK, SEPT. 15-(AP)-THE GERMAN SIEGFRIED AND THE FRENCH MAGINOT LINES OF DEFENSE HAVE TAKEN THEIR PLACES AMONG THE WONDERS OF THE MODERN WORLD.

PUBLIC INTEREST IN THEM IS INTENSIFIED BY THE SECRECY WITH WHICH THE AUTHORITIES CLOAK MANY OF THE DETAILS OF THESE VAST SUBTERRANEAN FORTIFICATIONS WHICH STRETCH ALONG THE FRONTIER. I'VE BEEN ASKED TO DESCRIBE WHAT ONE WOULD SEE IN THE COUNTRY BETWEEN THESE LINES. WELL, THAT'S A PRETTY HOT SPOT JUST NOW, BUT HERE GOES:

SEP 16 1939

WE ARE IN A VAST NO-MAN'S-LAND FROM 12 TO 14 MILES WIDE. TO BE SURE THERE ARE OCCASIONAL TOWNS WITHIN THIS AREA, AND IN PEACE TIMES IT IS TRANQUIL ENOUGH. BUT NOW THESE TOWNS ARE DESERTED AND DEAD, FOR THE QUIET COUNTRYSIDE HAS BEEN TURNED INTO A HELL IN WHICH MEN STRIVE TO TAKE EACH OTHER'S LIVES.

ALL ABOUT US ARE THE ADVANCE DEFENSES OF THE MAGINOT AND SIEGFRIED LINES--RUNNING OUT INTO NO-MAN'S-LAND FOR SEVERAL MILES UNTIL THEY ALMOST MEET. WE ARE SURROUNDED BY PILL-BOXES--THOSE LITTLE, ROUND-TOP FORTRESSES OF CONCRETE WHICH HOLD TWO OR THREE MEN AND SPOUT DEATH FROM THEIR MACHINE-GUNS.

EVERYWHERE ARE THOSE TERRIBLE BARBED-WIRE BARRIERS UPON WHICH WOUNDED MEN HANG AND DIE IN HEAT OF BATTLE. THERE ARE EMPLACEMENTS FOR ANTI-TANK GUNS, MACHINEGUN NESTS, BARRIERS FOR TANKS AND TRAPS TO CAPTURE THESE GREAT STEEL SCORPIONS. HERE AND THERE ARE MINES, LOADED WITH ENOUGH EXPLOSIVE TO BLOW A REGIMENT TO KINGDOM COME.

I SEE A LOT OF OTHER THINGS AS WELL, BUT IT ALL TOTALS UP TO ONE THING-- A LAND OF HORRORS.

THE GREAT LINES THEMSELVES? BOTH ARE ATTENUATED UNDERGROUND

CITIES. DOWN IN THOSE CONCRETE CAVERNS HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF SOLDIERS LIVE WHEN WAR IS ON.

THERE WE HAVE ALL THE NECESSITIES OF THE NORMAL CITY. THERE ARE ELECTRIC POWER STATIONS, RAILWAYS, LIVING QUARTERS, KITCHENS, FOOD STORE-HOUSES, HOT AND COLD WATER, VENTILATION SYSTEMS, ELEVATORS, REST ROOMS AND AMUSEMENTS. OH YES, AND THERE ARE THE HOSPITALS, FED WITH A STEADY STREAM OF WOUNDED FROM ABOVE.

AND OVER THESE CITIES AND BEHIND THEM ARE THE MODERN FORTRESSES FROM WHICH GUNS OF ALL SORTS BELCH FIRE AND STEEL. BEHIND THEM, TOO, ARE OTHER LINES, DETAILS OF WHICH ARE DENIED TO THE PUBLIC.

G546PED SEP 16 1939

UNDATED POLISH-GERMAN

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TWO WEEKS OF GERMANY'S BLITZKRIEG (LIGHTNING WAR) LAST (FRIDAY) NIGHT FOUND THE LEGIONS OF ADOLF HITLER IN POSSESSION OF APPROXIMATELY ONEHALF OF POLAND. SEP 16 1939

THE COST OF GERMANY'S RAPID INVASION OF A NATION WHOSE TERRITORY IS SLIGHTLY SMALLER THAN THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA WAS TOLD THUS FAR IN UNCOUNTED DEAD--BOTH CIVILIAN AND SOLDIERS--LONG LINES OF PRISONERS STREAMING TO THE REAR, AND THE DESTRUCTION OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN PROPERTY.

POLAND'S CIVILIAN LIFE WAS SAID BY POLISH OFFICIALS TO HAVE BEEN HIT HARD BY THE WAR BUT NO ATTEMPT WAS MADE TO ESTIMATE THE NUMBER KILLED IN AIR RAIDS AND OTHER PHASES OF THE WAR. AT THE SAME TIME, THE OFFICIAL POLISH RADIO STATION AT WARSAW PRAISED THAT CITY'S POPULATION FOR HELPING IN WARSAW'S PROTRACTED RESISTANCE TO INTENSE GERMAN PRESSURE.

WHILE POLAND SAID LITTLE DURING THE LAST WEEK ON THE NUMBER OF PRISONERS SEIZED BY HER SOLDIERS, GERMANY ANNOUNCED THURSDAY THAT AT LEAST 120,000 TROOPS HAD BEEN CAPTURED SINCE THE WAR BEGAN AT DANZIG ON SEPT. 1. SEP 16 1939

GERMAN MILITARY REPORTS SAID 60,000 POLISH SOLDIERS SURRENDERED IN THE RADOM SECTOR SOUTH OF WARSAW DURING THE WEEK. GERMAN OFFICIALS HAVE SAID THAT 60,000 WERE SEIZED IN OTHER SECTORS.

STRIKING FROM THE NORTH, SOUTH AND EAST, THE NAZI TROOPS THUS FAR HAVE PUSHED TO THE MIDDLE OF POLAND AFTER CONQUERING ALL OF WESTERN POLAND EXCEPT FOR THE BITTERLY-CONTESTED AREA AROUND WARSAW.

LAST (FRIDAY) NIGHT, THE GERMANS REPORTED THEY WERE POUNDING AT WARSAW AND KUTNO, TWO OF THE KEY POINTS IN POLAND'S DEFENSE. THE GERMANS ALSO WERE SAID TO HAVE ENTERED POLISH FORTIFICATIONS AT BREST-LITOVSK (BRZESC NAD BUGIEM), 100 MILES EAST OF WARSAW.

30.24-3363

A CHECK OF GERMANY'S GAINS SHOWED THAT THE GREATER PORTION OF POLAND'S POPULATION OF 33,000,000 EITHER WERE IN OCCUPIED TERRITORY, OR WERE FLEEING TOWARD HUNGARY, RUMANIA AND LATVIA.

THE POLISH GOVERNMENT ITSELF, FLEEING FROM WARSAW FOR THE PAST SEVERAL DAYS, WAS LOCATED AT ZALESZCZYKI, ON THE DNIESTER RIVER AT THE RUMANIAN FRONTIER, SAID A REPORT BY STEFANI, THE OFFICIAL ITALIAN NEWS AGENCY.

SEP 16 1939

HOW MANY DIVISIONS OF GERMAN AND POLISH TROOPS WERE PARTICIPATING IN THE FIGHT FOR THE REMAINDER OF POLAND COULD NOT BE ESTIMATED, BEING HID BY OFFICIAL SECRECY AND DISRUPTED COMMUNICATIONS.

AT THE START OF THE WEEK, HOWEVER, IT WAS ESTIMATED ON THE BASIS OF CONFUSED REPORTS FROM THE WARSAW FRONT, THAT AN ARMY OF 1,000,000 POLES WAS BEING MASSED FOR A STAND ON THE EAST BANK OF THE VISTULA RIVER WHILE OTHERS WERE BEING SENT TO POSITIONS ALONG THE BUG RIVER. GERMANY WAS SAID TO HAVE STARTED WITH 70 DIVISIONS OF 10,000 TO 12,000 MEN EACH AT THE OUTSET OF THE CONFLICT.

THROUGHOUT THE WEEK, POLAND HELD WARSAW AGAINST REPEATED GERMAN ATTACKS, BUT THE GERMANY HIGH COMMAND SAID THE CITY HAD BEEN ENCIRCLED.

AT THE WEEK'S END, HOWEVER, THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED IN A TREMENDOUS DRIVE IN THE SOUTHEAST IN AN ATTEMPT TO ISOLATE POLAND FROM RUMANIA. EXTENSIVE FIGHTING WAS REPORTED NEAR LWOW, 100 MILES NORTH OF THE POLISH-RUMANIAN BORDER AND THE LARGEST CITY IN SOUTHEASTERN POLAND.

PMC 1022P

MONTREAL, SEPT. 15--(CANADIAN PRESS)--WAR RISK INSURANCE RATES FOR CARGOES ON VESSELS TRAVELLING BETWEEN PORTS ON CANADA'S ATLANTIC COAST AND FOR CARGOES ABOARD NON-NEUTRAL SHIPS GOING TO ANY PART OF THE NORTH AMERICAN COAST LINE WERE DOUBLED TODAY.

THE NEW RATE, IT WAS ANNOUNCED HERE, IS 50 CENTS FOR EACH $100 OF CARGO VALUE.

SEP 16 1939

NEW YORK, SEPT. 15-(AP)-UNITED STATES MARINE INSURANCE UNDERWRITERS AGREED LATE TODAY AGAIN TO PERMIT THE PLACING OF WAR RISK INSURANCE ON SHIPMENTS CARRIED BY ITALIAN VESSELS.

WAR RISK INSURANCE ON ITALIAN AND GERMAN VESSELS WAS BANNED ABOUT A MONTH AGO, WHEN THE UNDERWRITERS DECIDED A EUROPEAN WAR WAS IMMINENT.

SEP 16 1939

THE UNDERWRITERS ALSO DECIDED TODAY ON A WAR RISK RATE OF 25 CENTS PER $100 ON GOODS SHIPPED BY UNITED STATES VESSELS TO

SOUTH AMERICA, BUT 50 CENTS ON SHIPMENTS TO CANADA. OTHER NEUTRALS VESSEL SHIPMENTS MUST PAY 50 CENTS IN BOTH CASES AND BELLIGERENT VESSELS-- EXCLUDING GERMAN --MUST PAY $1.

SEP 16 1939

G1044PED

NEW YORK,SEPT 15-(AP)-FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE HENRY L. STIMSON AND DR.NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, PRESIDENT OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, TODAY URGED REPEAL OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT.

IN LETTERS TO THE NEW YORK TIMES THE NATIONALLY KNOWN REPUBLICANS DISAGREED WITH THEIR FELLOW PARTISAN, SENATOR BORAH OF IDAHO, LEADER OF THE SENATE GROUP SEEKING TO RETAIN THE ACT.

SEP 16 1939

STIMSON, HOOVER CABINET MEMBER WHO FREQUENTLY CONFERS WITH SECRETARY OF STATE HULL, SAID REPEAL WAS THE ONLY SURE WAY FOR THE UNITED STATES TO KEEP OUT OF WAR.

ON THE OTHER HAND, DOCTOR BUTLER URGED REPEAL ON THE CONTENTION THE ACT REPRESENTED A POLICY OF ECONOMIC NATIONALISM NOW "THE CHIEF CAUSE OF THE WORLD'S TROUBLES."

THE NEUTRALITY ACT, STIMSON SAID, HAS THROWN THE UNITED STATES INTO THE HANDS OF A GROUP OF NATIONS WHICH "HAS ARISEN IN THE WORLD BY WHOM THE PRACTICE OF MILITARY AGGRESSION UPON THEIR NEIGHBORS HAS BECOME A WELL DEVELOPED ART."

HE DECLARED THE ACT HAD MADE MORE DIFFICULT "THE DEFENSE AGAINST THEIR SKILLFUL AGGRESSION BY THE NATIONS WHOM THEY HAVE ATTACKED."

INTERNATIONAL LAW AND TRADITION SUPPORT THE PRACTICE OF PURCHASE OF ARMS, HE SAID.

DOCTOR BUTLER DECLARED SENATOR BORAH'S SPEECH URGING RETENTION OF THE ACT "BELONGS TO AN AGE THAT IS PAST."

THE UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT ASSERTED THE "PRESENT MISCALLED NEUTRALITY ACT PUTS US INTO THIS WAR ON THE SIDE OF THE AGGRESSOR."

SNIPSAID

NEW YORK, SEPT.15-(AP)-MARY CATHERINE UNDERWOOD, AN ENERGETIC YOUNG WOMAN FROM TEXAS WHO SURVIVED THE TORPEDOING OF THE BRITISH LINER ATHENIA, CRIED "WHEE!" TODAY AND FLUNG HERSELF INTO THE ARMS OF HER MOTHER, MRS.ARCHIE UNDERWOOD OF ATHENS, TEX., HER GRANDMOTHER, MRS.FRED QUICKENSTAD, AND HER BROTHER, HARRIS.

THE REUNION WAS TYPICAL OF MANY OTHERS WHEN THE TRAIN WHICH BROUGHT 38 SURVIVORS OF THE TRAGEDY FROM MONTREAL ARRIVED AT PENNSYLVANIA STATION.

SEP 16 1939

IT WASN'T ALL HAPPINESS, THOUGH. THREE WOMEN, SISTERS, WHO HAD COME TO THE STATION IN THE HOPE OF FINDING THEIR MOTHER, MRS.KATHERINE LESLIE, 69, A WIDOW, OF BROOKLYN, WEPT WHEN THEY COULD NOT FIND HER. THEY HAD BELIEVED HER LOST, BUT A PICTURE OF SURVIVORS LANDING AT HALIFAX FROM THE FREIGHTER CITY OF FLINT HAD GIVEN THEM HOPE. THEY THOUGHT THEY HAD RECOGNIZED HER IN THE HALIFAX CROWD.

IRONICALLY, ONE OF THEM SAID, THEIR FATHER, THOMAS WRIGHT LESLIE, HAD LOST HIS LIFE WHEN THE CITY OF MEXICO, OC WHICH HE WAS A SEAMAN IN THE WORLD WAR, WAS TORPEDOED BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE ABOUT 200 MILES FROM THE SPOT WHERE THE ATHENIA WAS SUNK.

THE THREE WOMEN, MRS.GEORGINA HAMILTON, MRS.JOANNA JACKSON AND MRS.KATHLEEN TORRIE, ALL OF BROOKLYN, WERE WATCHING ANXIOUSLY THROUGH REDDENED EYES WHEN A PEAL OF LAUGHTER STARTLED THEM--8-YEAR-OLD JAMES GORDON, OF ASTORIA, QUEENS, HAD JUST FOUND HIS PARENTS. THE BOY HAD GONE TO SCOTLAND TO VISIT HIS GRANDPARENTS AND WAS ON HIS WAY HOME.

30.24-3365

MRS.ALEXANDER ELEFANT AND HER DAUGHTER, HELENE, WERE MET BY HER BROTHER, ARTHUR SCHWARTZ, OF (29 ODELL AVENUE) WHITE PLAINS. THEY CAME FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND SPOKE NO ENGLISH.

HF1140AED

SHIPS

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 15-(AP)-STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS EXPRESSED HOPE TODAY THAT MORE SHIPS WOULD BE AVAILABLE NEXT WEEK TO SPEED THE EXODUS OF AMERICANS FROM EUROPE.

MORE THAN 20,000 PERSONS RETURNED TO THE UNITED STATES IN THE TWO WEEKS ENDED SEPTEMBER 7, THE DEPARTMENT REPORTED.

THE BRITISH LINER AQUITANIA WAS EXPECTED TO DOCK IN NEW YORK TODAY WITH 1,633 PASSENGERS AND 2,649 ARRIVED ON THREE LINERS YESTERDAY. THEY INCLUDED 1,654 ON THE HOLLAND-AMERICA LINER STATENDAM, 791 ON THE NORWEGIAN-AMERICA LINER OSLOFJORD AND 204 ON THE AMERICAN LINER PRESIDENT MONROE.

SEP 16 1939

THE ITALIAN LINER REX IS SCHEDULED TO REACH NEW YORK TOMORROW WITH 1,779 PASSENGERS, INCLUDING 1,431 AMERICANS.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT MADE NO ESTIMATE OF THE NUMBER OF AMERICANS REMAINING IN EUROPE WHO WISH TO RETURN HOME. IT SAID THAT EVERY OPERATOR OF A FREIGHT STEAMER FLYING THE AMERICAN FLAG HAD BEEN ASKED TO MAKE HIS VESSELS AVAILABLE TO AMERICANS AT ANY PORT OF CALL IN EUROPE. AMERICAN CONSULAR OFFICIALS HAVE BEEN AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE EMERGENCY CERTIFICATES ENABLING SUCH SHIPS TO CARRY EXTRA PASSENGERS.

THE DEPARTMENT SAID FIVE SHIPS WITH A PASSENGER CAPACITY OF 3,920 HAD BEEN CHARTERED TO AID IN THE TASK OF BRINGING NATIONALS HOME FROM EUROPE. THE SS. ORIZABA AND THE SS. SHAWNEE

30.24-3365

ARE NOW HEADED FOR AN ENGLISH AND A FRENCH PORT, RESPECTIVELY, AND THE OTHER THREE SHIPS WILL SAIL SOON.

MD550AES

NEW YORK, SEPT.15-(AP)-SENATOR JOSEPH F.GUFFEY (D-PA.) SAID TODAY HE WOULD SUPPORT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND SECRETARY OF STATE HULL IN SEEKING REVISION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW AT THE SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS.

SEP 16 1939

THE SENATOR, WHO ARRIVED LAST NIGHT FROM PITTSBURGH, WAS ASKED AT THE HOTEL BILTMORE IF HE THOUGHT REVISION OF THE LAW WOULD MEAN THE ULTIMATE INVOLVEMENT OF THE UNITED STATES IN A EUROPEAN WAR.

"I DON'T KNOW," HE SAID. "NOBODY KNOWS. ALL I DO KNOW IS THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL DO EVERYTHING HE CAN TO KEEP US OUT OF IT."

GUFFEY SAID HE WAS GOING TO WASHINGTON LATE TODAY.

QG1130AED

WASHINGTON--ADD ANTARCTIC

SEPT 15

ALTHOUGH OFFICIALS ARE GOING AHEAD WITH PLANS FOR THIS EXPEDITION, THE EUROPEAN WAR, HAS CAUSED CANCELLATION OF ANOTHER PROPOSED EXPLORATORY TRIP.

SEP 16 1939

THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY AND THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA, COOPERATING WITH THE COASTGUARD, HAD PLANNED AN EXTENSIVE RESEARCH OF MARINE, EARTHQUAKE AND WEATHER CONDITIONS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC. IT HAD BEEN PLANNED FOR THAT EXPEDITION TO SAIL FROM SAN FRANCISCO NEXT TUESDAY ABOARD THE COASTGUARD CUTTER HAMILTON, BUT THE HAMILTON WAS ORDERED TO PATROL DUTY ON THE ATLANTIC COAST AND THE EXPEDITION'S SPONSORS CALLED OFF THE TRIP.

LT1033PES

1939

BY DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON, SEPT 15-(AP)- NO SOONER DO THE GALS GET A WAR THAN THEY MAKE IT A FASHION PARADE.

ACCORDING TO NORMAN HARTNELL, DEBENHAMS FREEBODY AND THE OTHERS WHO DRESS THE PLUSHIER MEMBERS OF THE WEST END THIS IS "DEFINITELY A STYLISH WAR."

SEP 16 1939

IT'S NOT ALL ON THE DISTAFF SIDE EITHER. MEN ARE SPORTING PIGSKIN GAS MASK CASES AND SIR NEVILE HENDERSON SPORTS A BLACK AND WHITE STRIPED CANE FOR BLACKOUT NIGHTS.

NORMAN HARTNELL, WHO DRESSES QUEEN ELIZABETH AMONG OTHERS, SAID THAT BUSINESS WAS GOOD AND THAT ALTHOUGH STYLES SHOWED A TREND TOWARD "SOBERER LINES AND TAILORED MODELS" THINGS WILL PROBABLY BRIGHTEN UP WHEN "WE GET USED TO THE SITUATION."

A HARTNELL SPOKESMAN ASSERTED THE HOUSE HADN'T MADE ANY UNIFORMS FOR QUEEN ELIZABETH, BUT ADDED "OF COURSE IF SHE DESIRES TO HAVE SOME MADE, WE WILL BE ONLY TOO GLAD TO OBLIGE."

BLACK AND NAVY BLUE ARE THE MOST POPULAR COLORS AND A BLACK AND WHITE COMBINATION VERY SMART, ACCORDING TO HARTNELL'S.

SOME OF THE SHOPS WHICH THE COCKNEYS CALL "VERY POSH" ARE CLOSING FOR A WHILE. MOLYNEUX ET CIE HAS CLOSED ITS GOWN DEPARTMENT "UNTIL THINGS QUIET DOWN A BIT." DEBENHAMS FREEBODY IS ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT ITS NEW "AIR RAID SUIT," WHICH IS NOTHING MORE THAN OUR OLD FRIEND THE OVERALL COME BACK IN ANGORA AND A DOZEN DIFFERENT COLORS.

ANOTHER DEPARTMENT DISPLAYS AN ANTI-MUSTARD GAS SUIT MADE OF OILED SILK.

ALONG BOND STREET CAN BE SEEN DERBY HATS WITH WHITE BANDS AND WHITE GLOVES. THE BLACK AND WHITE IDEA IS FOR BLACKOUTS. ENGLAND IS FULL OF BLACK EYES AND BLOODY NOSES DUE TO BLACKOUT BANGUPS.

THE SHOPS ARE ALL FOR WHITE AND BLACK BUT THEY ARE HOLLERING AGAINST A FELLOW WHO SUGGESTED ALL THE GALS WEAR WHITE COTTON STOCKINGS A LA SUDETENLAND.

"OUR CUSTOMERS WOULD NEVER STAND FOR SUCH THINGS," SAID A FELLOW IN A FRENCH ACCESSORY SHOP. "EVERYTHING ELSE WE WILL DO--SANDBAGS, WHITE SHOES AND THE REST, BUT WHITE COTTON STOCKINGS--NEVER!"

K2251PED

BY FRED VANDERSCHMIDT

LONDON, SEPT 15-(AP)-OLIVER HARDY AND THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY ARE AS MUCH ALIKE AS BARON MAC MILLAN OF ABERFELDY, BRITAIN'S NEW MINISTER OF INFORMATION, AND DR.PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS, WHO DOES THE SAME JOB FOR ADOLF HITLER.

LORD MAC MILLAN MET THE GENERAL PRESS FOR THE FIRST TIME TODAY.

EXCEPT FOR HIS DEEP CHUCKLE, THIS TALL, BLACKCOATED SCOT OF 66 IS A RINGER FOR THE UNDER-TAKERISH FIGURE WHICH AMERICAN CARTOONISTS USED TO LABEL "PROHIBITION."

HIS GLISTNING BALD DOME SLOPES TO A WIDE FOREHEAD AND HORNRIMMED GLASSES: HIS FACE IS LONG, THIN AND CONCAVE. HE SITS HUNCHED UP LIKE A JUDGE AND HE TALKS LIKE A JUDGE CHARGING A JURY. IN FACT HE IS A JUDGE.

HE STUCK A CIGARET SQUARELY IN HIS MOUTH, LIT IT, TOSSED THE MATCH IN THE DIRECTION OF A "NO SMOKING" SIGN AND ASKED FOR COMPLAINTS.

HE GOT THEM.

SEP 16 1939

FOR THE NEXT HOUR HE LISTENED.

LISTENING IS LORD MAC MILLAN'S BUSINESS.

IN ADDITION TO HAVING BEEN A CONSERVATIVE LORD ADVOCATE IN RAMSAY MACDONALD'S SOCIALIST GOVERNMENT AND SERVING AS A LORD OF APPEAL IN ORDINARY FOR NINE YEARS, HE PROBABLY HAS HEADED

Next sheet has nothing vital

1939

30.24-3367

MORE INVESTIGATING COMMISSIONS THAN ANY OTHER MAN IN BRITAIN. THEY HAVE RANGED FROM COMMISSIONS ON LUNACY TO COMMISSIONS ON INTERNATIONAL CONCILIATION.

HE IS FOLLOWING ANOTHER FAMILIAR LINE IN THIS WAR, TOO -- HIS INTEREST IN THE CARE OF CHILDREN. HIS COUNTRY PLACE IN SURREY IS HOST TO SEVERAL CHILDREN DISPERSED FROM LONDON'S EAST END. HE SAYS THEY ARE HAVING A SWELL TIME. HE HAS NO CHILDREN OF HIS OWN.

SEP 16 1939

HE LOVES TO WORK AND CAN TALK; AND IT IS A GOOD THING, TOO, BECAUSE THERE IS PLENTY FOR HIM TO DO. ONCE HE TALKED FOR FIVE DAYS IN A TANGLED COURT ACTION. EVEN GOEBBELS HASN'T MATCHED THAT.

G315PED

ADD UNDATED CHRONOLOGY SHIPS SUNK (PREVIOUS SENT SEPT. 14)

SEPT. 15--FISHING TRAWLER DAVARA (BR) 291 GROSS TONS, SUNK OFF ENGLISH COAST. CREW OF 12 RESCUED.

SEP 16 1939

SEPT. 15-UNIDENTIFIED BELGIAN STEAMER SUNK IN ENGLISH CHANNEL. 49 SURVIVORS PICKED UP BY GREEK VESSEL.

SEP 16 1939

WD136PED

MANILA, SEPT.15-(AP)-AN EXTENSION OF THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE COMMONWEALTH ASSEMBLY, POSSIBLY FOR CONSIDERATION OF NEUTRALITY LEGISLATION, WAS ORDERED TODAY BY PRESIDENT MANUEL QUEZON.

POLITICAL OBSERVERS SAID THE PRESIDENT MIGHT ASK LEGISLATION NEXT WEEK TO MAINTAIN PHILIPPINE NEUTRALITY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR. IT ALSO WAS THOUGHT HE MIGHT SUBMIT A NEW IMMIGRATION LAW.

SEP 16 1939

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS APPROVED WOULD CUT THE PRESIDENTIAL TERM FROM SIX YEARS TO FOUR YEARS AND PERMIT RE-ELECTION AND ABOLISH THE UNICAMERAL LEGISLATURE IN FAVOR OF TWO HOUSES.

X745PCS NM

30.24—3367

Retreating Nazis Blast Whole Villages ~~Civilians~~ Get 12 Hours to Quit Warsaw In Major Saar Battle, French Declare;

SEP 18 1939

Ultimatum Warns City Faces Ruin By Bombardment

SEP 18 1939

Leaflets Showered by Planes Declare Capital Is Now in Active War Area —Say Commander Refused to Surrender

BERLIN, Sept. 17 (Sunday) (AP).—A German army ultimatum to Warsaw to surrender without resistance expired some time after 3 a. m. today (10 p. m., New York time, Saturday), but there was no immediate report to Berlin as to what happened at the Polish capital.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORTED AT 4:30 A.M. THIS MORNING, ONE AND ONE-HALF HOURS AFTER EXPIRATION OF THE ULTIMATUM, THAT ITS ARMY IN THE FIELD STILL HAD NO WORD FROM POLISH AUTHORITIES

Government officials here said they were without information.

The ultimatum said Warsaw would be regarded as a war area if the German terms were not accepted, meaning that the city would be bombarded by artillery and the air force.

German fliers during the afternoon dropped leaflets warning the civilian population of the Polish capital to get out.

The German terms specified that the military command of Warsaw had 12 hours to give up, and then rather ambiguously stated that civilians would have 12 hours to escape in the event the Polish military stood pat.

A propaganda ministry spokesman said a smashing bombardment and air attack on the Polish capital were not expected before 3 p. m. (10 a. m., New York time).

As he interpreted the ultimatum, "the first 12 hours was given the army after which, in the event of its rejection, the civilians have another 12 hours to flee."

The terms to the population were set forth in millions of leaflets distributed over the city by German planes late today.

Resistance Useless, Nazi Message Says

DNB said the German commander sent a message to the Polish commander in Warsaw saying resistance was useless and that the Germans were out of patience because of sniping.

The terms to the Warsaw civilian population were set forth in millions of leaflets distributed over the city by German planes late today.

Out Of Patience

DNB said the German commander sent a message to the Polish commander in Warsaw saying resistance was useless and that the Germans were out of patience because of sniping.

It was reported here the Warsaw commander refused to receive the German messenger or to heed the threat that the city would be subjected to bombardment if capitulation was not forthcoming immediately.

The news agency said the German command was reluctant to endanger innocent citizens and that it had good reason to suspect that "irresponsible Polish leadership" had failed to inform the citizens of the urgency of the situation.

Planes Drop Leaflets

So it was decided, DNB said, to inform the Warsaw population by leaflets showered from planes.

The civilians were told they had twelve hours to get out on two roads which the German army [illegible] and agreed to protect.

The planes started dropping the leaflets at 3.10 P. M. Therefore it was presumed a smashing German attack on the Polish capital might start soon after that hour tomorrow morning.

Three Demands Made

Th leaflets said the following demands had ben made on the military commander of Warsaw:

All parts of Warsaw and all Polish troops within it must surrender within twelve hours.

In case the order is complied with, the surrender must be reported to the nearest German military commander.

In the event this command is not obeyed, the civil population is given twelve hours to leave the city on the roads in the direction of Siedlce and Garwolin.

To Be Regarded As War Area

After twelve hours, the leaflets said, the entire city of Warsaw will be regarded as war area.

The final paragraph said the twelve-hour notice began with their distribution.

German military headquarters said a negotiator was sent to the Polish lines at 8 A. M. (2 A. M. E.S.T.) today with a request that he be taken to the commander of Warsaw's defense. Half an hour later the German officer found a Polish infantry commander who forwarded the German request to the city.

After a wait of an hour and a half, it was reported, the answer was received that the request was rejected.

Sufficient Time To Escape

In German quarters, it was said the ultimatum gave the civil population short but sufficient time to escape. It was added that today's warning was the last, and that if unheeded the authorities of Warsaw would be "completely responsible" for what might happen.

The German command was quoted as saying its patience had been exhausted by sniping and by military opposition that served no purpose and that it now was determined to smash an "annoying but insignificant hindrance which is an inhuman crime against the civil population."

Former experience, it was said, justified the high command in believing that the Polish population had information of the impending da[illegible]

Scattered Throughout City

Therefore, the pamphlets, it was added, were addressed to "Citizens of Warsaw' 'and scattered in every part of the city. The leaflets said:

"Your Government has made your city a war area. Your military leaders not only shot into the city with heavy artillery, but it was demanded of you that you erect street barricades and present the greatest opposition to German troops.

"By the demand that the civil population seize weapons and conduct a warfare of sniping, your Government has violated the commonly accepted rules of humane conduct.

"The fact that part of the population heeded this call to arms makes Warsaw a war area. In spite of this the Germans up to now, in conformity with the command of the Führer, bombed only the objects of military significance, such as railway stations, airfields, baracks, arterial highways and sections of the city in which military establishments were situated."

Upon being informed that the German army had given the Warsaw populace twelve hours in which to leave the city, under threat of "destroying" it, Poles here said that Warsaw would hold out "to the last man, woman and child."

10-Day Bombardment Cited

Poles here pointed out the city already had been subjected to a ten-day bombardment and still was holding out.

Many Polish towns were bombed heavily yesterday, Polish advices received here said. These included Wilno, in northwest Poland. It was said at the Polish legation that German losses so far have totaled at least 100,000 dead and wounded.

The army of General Kutrezebas at Kutno, seventy-five miles west of Warsaw, yesterday repulsed seventeen attacks which were aimed at uniting German forces trying to close in on Warsaw from the north and south, the Legation announced.

The Poles, pleased at the stubborn resistance of the defenders of Warsaw and Kutno, hoped that "general rain" and his reinforcements of mud yet might come soon enough to check the heavily motorized invaders.

All-Day Attack Described

The all-day attack on Warsaw was described late last night by a Polish Government radio announcer who said the attack was the "beginning of an apparent German attempt to take Warsaw at all costs."

He said 200 heavy Nazi guns were pouring shells into the capital's streets.

Through the scream of air-raid sirens, the speaker's voice could be heard here, saying there was constant bombing by large Nazi squadrons.

Hiding In Cellars

The Warsaw announcer, broadcasting at 8.50 P. M. (2.50 P. M., E.S.T.), said nearly all civilians in the capital were hiding as best they could in cellars, although buildings were collapsing on them.

The battered capital was said to be lacking adequate water and food supplies in the ninth day of the German siege.

The announcer said streets were piled with wreckage created by bombs and shells dropping into "nearly every block of the city."

Church Destroyed

"All day Warsaw has been under heavy fire," said the announcer. "Air raids destroyed the Protestant church while service was being held and the roof collapsed, killing one hundred persons.

"The Lithuanian Legation was destroyed by air bombs.

"All day airplanes have bombed and machine-gunned every inch of the city.

Germans Tossing Bombs

"German planes flying low over buildings tossed incendiary bombs. The capital now is almost a flaming torch.

"Shells crashed into houses and they, in turn, crashed into heaps of ruins with terrible detonations.

"The fire department is racing helplessly all over town for there have been more than 400 separate fires today.

"Women and children and old men—all the rest are fighting the invaders—are trying to extinguish the blazes with sand and the little water that can be spared from the drinking supply. Their faces are blackened by soot and pitifully lined by fatigue."

New Posters Appear

The announcer said new posters signed "Smigly-Rydz" (Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, commander-in-chief of the Polish Army) had been plastered on "those walls still left standing."

He quoted the posters as calling upon men, women and children to "defend Warsaw to the last drop of blood for the honor of Poland demands it. We must fight the barbarian invaders in every field in every manner with every weapon."

Shortly after 9 P. M. Warsaw's military commander, General Czuma, said over the microphone: "From the east the German artillery is bombarding the capital.

Tank Reported Captured

"In Wola (western suburb of Warsaw) we captured one tank and one machine gun. To the east of the city there was mostly reconnoitering activity.

"We took many prisoners in the western part of the city, including a colonel and much material."

Referring to the food situation in Warsaw, General Czuma said: "From today, restaurants can serve one plate of food—nourishing soup—only."

POLES REINFORCE WARSAW IN FACE OF EVACUATION ULTIMATUM FROM NAZIS

Between 40,000 And 50,000 Troops Join Defenders Of Besieged Capital Despite Terrific All-Day Bombardment

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sunday, Sept. 17—Between 40,000 and 50,000 Polish troops under General Bartnowski, have joined the defenders of the besieged Polish capital of Warsaw, it was stated in Polish circles here early today.

General Bartnowski led three divisions to the relief of the capital despite a terrific all-day air and land bombardment by the surrounding German forces, it was said.

SEP 18 1939

Buoys Polish Hopes

The news buoyed Polish hopes here that the capital yet might be saved.

30.24- 3369

30.24— 3369

POLES CLAIM ARMIES NOW ARE IN CONTACT

Government, Just Across Border From Rumania, Makes Report

[By the Associated Press]

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 16—Polish authorities declared tonight contact had been reestablished among their different beleaguered armies, fighting against Germany on widely separated fronts.

The Poles said their Government, now across the border from this frontier city in the little town of Zaleszcyki, was being informed again of the armies' defense efforts in the various war zones. However, reports from the fronts were becoming increasingly infrequent here and no complete picture of the war's progress was available.

SEP 17 1939

Hotel accommodations in Cernauti were at a premium as thirty-seven foreign missions struggled to establish some sort of temporary headquarters while seeking to maintain contact with the Polish Government.

Biddle Keeps Contact

United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., has established himself here after a hazardous trek with his wife and staff from Warsaw. He returned to Poland by car today to make a fresh survey of the situation.

The refugee diplomats received a report that Zalsczczyki, where they made their last stand on the Polish side of the Rumanian border, was bombed today at 7.30 A. M. No details of casualties or damage were given.

It was reported French Ambassador Leon Noel conferred in Poland with Polish Foreign Minister, Josef Beck, at a point not far from the Rumanian frontier.

Beck's wife and children, who reached Bucharest last night, were said tonight to be on their way to Paris.

May Return To Moscow

Soviet-Russian Ambassador Nicholas Sharanov reported now at Spollunow, a Polish town on the Russian frontier, was reported to have declared he soon may return to Moscow.

Polish authorities dispatched food and clothing by rail to Sniatyn, a Polish town just across the border from Cernauti. Apparently they planned to aid thousands of refugees reported surging toward the Rumanian frontier in front of the German army.

An official Rumanian announcement said Rumanian hospitals were prepared to receive large numbers of Polish wounded.

Among the Polish refugees in Cernauti were the wives of the Polish President, Ignace Moscicki, and the commander in chief of Poland's armies, Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz.

To Aid Jewish Refugees

It was reported an attempt was being made to run special trains for Jewish refugees with Palestinian citizenship through Rumania. Hundreds of such Jews were caught by the war while visiting relatives and friends in Poland.

A large group of both Poles and Jews without passports was understood to be surging closer to the frontier.

Rumanian authorities, in planning arrangements to handle the refugees, were confronted with a housing problem due to the approach of the rainy season in this section.

POLISH CHIEFS MAY SEEK PARIS

SEP 17 1939

Expected to Ask to Go Through Rumania.

BUCHAREST ISSUES WARNING

Moscicki Is Told That Politics Will Be Forbidden.

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Persons in diplomatic circles said today that Polish Government officials plan to circle to Paris, if they are forced to flee from their country, rather than remain in Rumania and halt all political activity.

Some minor officials were said to be already on the way.

Most of the officials were expected to remain in Poland as long as possible. Permission would be sought to travel across Rumania.

The Polish President, Ignace Moscicki, and other officials were notified they must remain under surveillance and stay at selected places if they enter Rumania. Even then they would be urged to leave the country as quickly as possible.

Many of the officials were reported residing in a little village just across the Dniester River from the Rumanian frontier.

Diplomats Cross Border.

At the same time many foreign diplomats who came here last night with their families and staffs, including the American Ambassador, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., returned to the Polish Government seat at Zaleszczyki, presumably for the day only.

The Rumanian envoys were instructed to tell Polish officials that Polish children and wounded would be given shelter upon crossing the border. Polish troops will be disarmed and placed in internment camps for the duration of the war.

"Those who have political occupations," the order said, "will be bound to occupy guarded domiciles and agree to shun politics."

Large numbers of Polish child refugees arrived here under supervision of Polish diplomatic authorities.

Rumors On Moscicki And Jews

An unconfirmed report persisted here, despite denials from the Polish legation, that Moscicki already had crossed the frontier secretly.

Another report circulated that Britain had asked Rumania to let 45,000 Polish Jews pass through the country to Palestine. This report said the British had agreed to allow them to enter Palestine. It could not be verified immediately.

POLES SAVE THEIR GOLD

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Sept. 16 — Half of the Bank of Poland's gold was reported authoritative ly today to have been shipped by a British steamer from Constanza, Rumania's chief port on the Black Sea.

The shipment was said to have reached Rumania by way of Sniatyn, on the Polish-Rumanian border. Its destination is believed to be England.

Reported Sending Rest

The other half of the Bank of Poland's gold, amounting to 200,000,000 zlotys ($37,640,000), was said to be en route to Constanza for transshipment abroad.

Both consignments were reported to have arrived in this country in heavily-guarded railroad cars.

6 Americans Carry On In Beleaguered Warsaw

Consulate Officers Keep Busy Amid Storm of Bombs

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP).—In the heart of Poland's beleaguered capital city, entirely surrounded by German troops, a half-dozen American-born service officers are carrying on in the tradition of their corps.

SEP 17 1939

Cut off from outside communication for some days, these career men are conducting their work amid a storm of aerial bombs.

Although the American Embassy has just left Polish territory, the men of the American Consulate have stayed on. They may remain in German-occupied oland indefinitely. Since they are not accredited to the Polish government as the Embassy officials are, they may stay on by diplomatic custom and carry on under local authority.

They sent their wives and families to various Scandinavian cities before the fighting began.

If Warsaw falls, their work may be more arduous than before, since they will also represent British and French interests in the occupied territory. The United States is acting for those two countries in Germany.

At the head of the corps is John K. Davis, the Consul General, a veteran of nearly thirty years in the foreign service.

With Davis are American Foreign Officers George J. Haering, of New York; William M. Cramp, of Pennsylvania; Douglas Jenkins jr., of South Carolina; M. William Blake of Ohio, and E. Tomlin Bailey, of New Jersey.

NAZIS THROW MORE TROOPS AGAINST KUTNO

SEP 17 1939

Germany Considers Polish War Won, With Government On Run

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 16—Germany threw additional divisions of troops against Kutno, Poland, today in the hope of crushing a Polish "lost army" reported engaged in a bitter seven-day defense of the city.

SEP 17 1939

A German communique, revealing the new move, indicated the army's design was to destroy the Polish divisions at Kutno quickly, at the same time tightening the ring of steel around Warsaw, the capital.

Kutno, seventy-five miles from Warsaw, is a Polish buffer between Warsaw and the German army to the west.

Poles Still Holding Lwow

Another section of the German Eastern army was reported pressing southeast toward Lwow, Poland's second largest city and capital of the Polish Ukraine, 225 miles from Warsaw. The communique said the Poles still held Lwow, but that scattered divisions of their army were being swept backward.

Pryzemysl, fifty miles west of Lwow, was announced to be in German possession, as was Bialystok, one hundred miles northeast of Warsaw.

During fighting at Praga, a Warsaw suburb, the German announcement said, 8,000 Polish prisoners and 126 cannon were captured.

Meanwhile, a renewal of activity on the diplomatic front was seen in a semi-official "warning" to neutral states not to submit to the British "blockade."

This came as official circles said they saw in the Russian-Japanese armistic the "most important diplomatic event since the outbreak of the European war." The armistice, they said, was greeted in Berlin as "the first step toward further bettering of Russian-Japanese relations."

The "warning" to neutrals, especially the so-called Oslo group, contained a veiled threat of German retaliation if they did not take a strong stand against the British action.

Britain And Neutrals

The Nazi position was given as semi-official comment on an official Foreign Office press release stating that the German Government possessed proof that Britain in the last few days had sent notes to the neutrals defining economic neutrality.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—At The Hague, The Netherlands Government issued a statement that it had received no such note from Britain.]

"The notes confirm," the press release said, "that England intends to unscrupulously dominate the neutral states and, without regard to the rights of the peoples, ride roughshod over the vital necessities and neutrality rights of these states.

"The tone of the notes is categorical. Their contents go further than the worst fears raised in the neutral states during the past fourteen days as a result of their experiences in the World War and the latest British encroachment."

Warned Against England

The semi-official statement added:

"We, therefore, warn states to whom England sent threat notes against submitting to England. Especially we warn the Ministers of the Oslo conference who are meeting September 18 in Copenhagen (to discuss common neutral action by the Scandinavian nations, the Netherlands and Belgium in view of the blockade) to take up a position against the English attempt to overpower them. Germany's wish was and is to leave neutral states undisturbed by the conflict."

This new diplomatic attack on Britain came as Germany considered that the Polish war was won.

Consider Polish War Won

While the Polish Government was reported still on Polish soil, it was believed here that the Government intended to flee to Rumania. In that case, officials said, Germany would consider Poland without a government, inasmuch as Rumania, being neutral, could not permit the Polish Government to exercise its functions from Rumanian soil.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Dispatches from Cernauti, Rumania, just across the Polish frontier, said diplomatic circles understood that Polish Government officials planned to circle to Paris, if forced to flee their country, rather than remain in Rumania and halt their political activity.]

Asked whether Germany would then attempt to set up a new Polish government, German officials said they could not give a precise reply. At any rate, they said, the territory occupied by the German army would be under rule of the German high command or such persons as the high command might designate.

Gesture From Bucharest

That Rumania intended to remain on friendly terms with Germany was indicated by the arrival in Bucharest of a German trade delegation for the biennial ironing out of kinks in the German-Rumanian trade agreement.

Belgium also was seen as cultivating German trade, having sent a trade mission to Berlin. The Nazis interpreted this step as meaning that King Leopold's country wanted to assure itself of an overland trade route now that the British blockade was working.

What role Germany played in bringing Russia and Japan together could not be ascertained, but Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, immediately after the signing of the Russo-German non-aggression pact last month, attempted to induce Japan to follow suit.

Then Japan appeared disappointed that the Nazis had embraced the Soviets and a certain coolness toward Germany was expressed.

In their jubilation over the Russian-Japanese armistice, the Nazis merely have mentioned the hope that this would lead to wider understanding between Russia and Japan, without going so far as to say it was groundwork for a non-aggression pact and either Japan's active aid or benevolent neutrality in the European war.

Expected To Discuss Pact

It was expected a Russian-Japanese non-aggression pact would be discussed during the visit here starting tomorrow of Gen. Kazuichi Terauchi, former Japanese Minister of War who came to Europe as a member of the official Japanese delegation to the Nürnberg Nazi party Congress, which later was canceled.

The mission, en route when the Russian-German pact was signed, received orders not to come to Germany as a result of Japanese disappointment over the agreement. Arrangements later were made for Terauchi to come alone on the invitation of von Ribbentrop.

British "Threat Notes"

The British "threat notes" to neutrals, according to semi-official comment, contained three main things:

1. No neutral state may deliver to belligerents coal, petroleum, metals, nitrates or other raw materials that can be used for war purposes. Neutral states which, because of geographical position, can continue to trade with Germany must completely halt the exports of all materials named.
2. The English Government will not permit neutral countries to exchange so-called raw materials for other German products.
3. Transit of commercial goods through a neutral country to Germany will not be permitted by the English Government.

Finland "Lone Exception"

The single exception, this comment said, was Finland "because Finland's ships do not lie under British guns (because Germany claims mastery of the Baltic)."

Britain, it was said, granted Finland the right to continue "normal" trade with Germany.

The British notes, it was said, were couched in the following "threat":

"Non-observance of these regulations will be regarded as a breach of neutrality fundamentals and as sympathetic collaboration with the enemy."

It was said this "contrary-to-law English oppression of neutral States will, if these States accommodate themselves to the pressure, unavoidably call for counter action of similar nature."

Attack on Kutno.

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—A German communique said today that additional divisions have been hurled against Kutno in a determined drive to crush a Polish "lost army" which has held out for six days and then to concentrate on Warsaw, sixty miles further east.

Kutno is a key to a diminishing circle of territory still held by the Poles west of Warsaw and a buffer between the beleaguered capital and the German Army to the west.

The importance of the position was demonstrated by the visit yesterday of Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, German Army Chief of Staff, to front lines.

The German announcement was taken to indicate that the plan is to destroy the divisions at Kutno quickly, while closing the ring of steel tighter around Warsaw in the hope that the capital may surrender.

The high command also said that 8,000 prisoners and 126 cannon had been captured by the Germans as they moved into Praga, a Warsaw suburb on the east bank of the Vistula River.

Meanwhile another section of the eastern army was reported pushing to the southeast with its principal objective Lwow, the principal city of southeastern Poland, 225 miles from Warsaw.

The communique said that scattered divisions of the Polish Army were being swept backward by the German advance. It added that the Poles still held Lwow and Bilgoraj, seventy miles to the northwest toward Warsaw.

At the same time the communique cited successes in drives to the northeast and southeast. Przemysl, fifty miles west of Lwow, and Bialystok, 110 miles northeast of Warsaw, were reported taken. The communique said that German planes had destroyed Polish transports east of Warsaw.

On the Western Front.

On the western front, the high command announced, activity was limited to the region around Saarbruecken. It was admitted that the city, residents of which have moved, was under French artillery fire.

There was no elaboration of the results of the fighting. Local advances by the French were reported repulsed. The High Command described the enemy losses as heavy.

In Berlin, midday editions of the German press had banner lines on the agreement between Russia and Japan to halt frontier fighting and to arbitrate. The stories recalled a statement by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop that the non-aggression pact between Germany and Russia would

Reich May Mediate

Dispatches from Moscow while Von Ribbentrop was there last month quoted him:

"I am convinced that this treaty (the German-Russian pact) will have a favorable effect upon Russo-Japanese relations as also upon German-Japanese friendship."

In Government circles it was said Germany might take a part in directing mediation between Russia and Japan.

New Peace Move Hinted

There were vague hints here today of a new peace effort, possibly emanating from Rome.

German military experts said the full force which the army could apply to Kutno had not been exerted, but the Polish forces—which have been making occasional attempts to break out—no longer are in a position to cause much trouble.

Germany's air force and swift motorized detachments concentrated on pushing their drive far to the southeast.

Once the Polish troops at Kutno are out of the way, there will remain no opposition between Berlin and Warsaw except the snipers who still are giving the Germans trouble in hundreds of towns and villages.

At Brest-Litovsk, 100 miles east of Warsaw, where Germany imposed a world war peace on Russia, which was later swept aside by the Versailles treaty, a swiftly moving East Prussian army was pressing down from the north.

Brest-Litovsk is defended by a line of permanent fortifications and the Germans face a fierce battle for its possession. Dispatches from the front today, however, said the East Prussian army had taken some of the outer defenses.

Outside of these operations, the Polish campaign appeared to be developing into a chase to the southeast, where the Russian and Rumanian borders come together.

German forces were reported close to Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine. Speedy advance units, which strike swiftly and fall back when the need arises, were said to be nearly Stanislawow, seventy miles southeast of Lwow.

News and military dispatches reaching Berlin described the flight of Polish officials, diplomats, refugees and even some soldiers over the Rumanian border, increasing the problem facing the Rumanian Government.

Rumania, which a few days ago advised Berlin it was observing the strictest neutrality, was said to be troubled by the flood of refugees fleeing before the German advance and to have required those seeking asylum to refrain from political or military activity.

Official Germany meanwhile remained almost completely silent about the war in the west. The average German knew there was bitter fighting in Poland and was aware of the British blockade in the North Sea, but was relatively uninformed on other phases of the war.

West Front War Unreported.

There was no hint of activity along the Siegfried Line, and there appeared to be a general lack of animosity toward the French.

Nevertheless Germany was fighting actively in other directions in this modern war—the diplomatic, economic and propaganda fronts.

In the field of diplomacy informed sources say Germany has scored telling points by persuading Rumania to remain neutral, by the seeming reluctance of Turkey to become involved in the conflict and by arousing the smaller neutrals to protest against the sweeping character of Britain's blockade.

Another diplomatic triumph from the German viewpoint was the apparently increasing firendliness o Soviet Russia.

SEP 17 1939

German

Berlin, Sept. 16 (AP)—The German supreme high army command today issued the following communique:

Fighting around Lwow continues. Polish divisions encircled around Kutno still are offering resistance. Bialystok was captured.

Following is the text of a second communique issued today by the German supreme army command:

On September 15 the southern wing of the German Eastern Army again swept shattered units of the Polish Southern Army before it. Fights still are continuing with them at the gates of Lwow and at the Tanew river near Bilgoraj.

Przemysl was taken. Far eastward thereof motorized troops reached Wlodzimierz.

By sending new German forces, the ring around the Polish Army encircled at Kutno was strengthened and narrowed for attack.

After warding off the enemy's attempts to breakthrough southeastward of Warsaw, German troops stationed there captured 8,000 prisoners and 126 cannon. They now are close to Praga. Bialystok was captured.

The fight for the citadel of Brest still is in progress.

The air force frustrated an attempt of the last Polish transport movements to the eastern frontier.

In the west there was enemy artillery activity at Saarbrücken. Local enemy forward thrusts were warded off with heavy losses for the enemy. No air attacks on German territory occurred.

little aerial raiding today over Warsaw and Lwow. They said most German air activity was confined to scouting operations.

The Hungarian news agency declared German forces attacking Lwow, Poland's third largest city, had been beaten back with the loss of ten tanks and ten armored cars, while Polish aircraft brought down several Nazi planes.

The Polish Telegraph Agency quoted a Polish Army major as saying the Germans had not been able to destroy important military objectives around Lwow. The agency declared the Poles had captured 13,000 men and 350 officers, mostly aviators, forty-eight guns, 215 machine guns, 170 tanks, 1,000 armored cars and 280 planes.

The Warsaw radio station No. 2 went off the air "due to technical difficulties." Warsaw station No. 1 stopped broadcasting for the same reasons last week.

Southeast Drive Continues.

The smashing German drive through southeast Poland to cut off access to Rumania continued while refugees kept on streaming toward the frontier.

The Rumanian Government worked to establish refugee camps. The Hungarian news agency said Bucharest expected to receive an official Polish appeal to admit refugees.

Diplomats fleeing from Poland said the German southern offensive was being accelerated by vast numbers of reserves pouring from Germany.

In the diplomatic caravan which reached Cernauti, Rumania, just across the Polish frontier, yesterday, were United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., his wife and her daughter, Peggy Thompson Schulz, and Mrs. Biddle's secretary, Mary McKenzie.

Others in the party were Mme. Josef Beck, wife of the Polish Foreign Minister, and their three children, en route to Paris, and the diplomatic representatives of Brazil, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Sweden, Japan, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Tonight's official general staff communique acknowledged for the first time that French and German troops were in contact along the entire front.

Germans Abandon Towns

Following is the text of the night communique:

"There was heavy activity of the two artillery and contact elements all along the entire front.

"The enemy is being constantly reinforced before us.

Warsaw and Lwow Defenders Said to Have Pushed Back Foe

Budapest Dispatch Tells of German Losses —Berlin Announces Plan to Crush a Polish 'Lost Army.'

By Robert St. John

SEP 17 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Hungarian diplomatic and press circles today received reports the Polish defenders of Warsaw and Lwow had pushed back their besiegers, inflicting severe losses on the German forces.

Although Warsaw and Lwow were holding out against ceaseless hammering of Nazi planes, artillery and tanks, reports from numerous sources said, the German lines had been extended 110 miles east of the Polish capital to Brest-Litovsk (Brzesc).

The newspaper Pesti Hirlap reported German forces west of Warsaw had suffered considerable losses from a Polish counter-attack and that skirmishes were continuous on the city's eastern site.

French news agency reports said heavy German attacks were repulsed at Vola, a Warsaw suburb, with the loss of some artillery and mechanized equipment.

Little Warsaw Air Raiding.

Other foreign sources reported Polish gains, but there was no further confirmation of the dispatches. Hungarian reports said there was

MAJOR BATTLE RAGING IN SAAR; NAZIS RETREAT, DESTROY OWN VILLAGES

Germans Bring Up Still More Reinforcements In Effort To Stem French Advance. Forty-Mile Front Ablaze

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 16—The European war's first real grand-scale battle on the western front appeared tonight to be developing by the hour, with hundreds of thousands of French and German troops engaged.

SEP 17 1939

German troops were reported retreating and methodically destroying small villages as they abandoned them.

French observers reported back to the general staff that the Germans, as they doggedly gave ground, blasted entire villages out of existence in an effort to slow the French drive through the no-man's-land toward the Siegfried line.

Nazis Bolster Lines

The general staff announced the Germans were "constantly" throwing reinforcements into the battle, which was swinging into its decisive stage tonight after two weeks of preliminary skirmishing.

This "battle of the Saar" was being waged along a forty-mile front from the Moselle Valley southeastward to Saarbrücken.

30.24 - 3371

30.24—3371

"At many points he abandoned and destroyed certain of his villages in retreating."

Civilians Cleared Out

Small crossroads hamlets in the battle zone have been cleared of all civilians and many of them already had been pounded almost beyond recognition by shells from both French and Germans guns in a ceaseless give-and-take warfare.

Premier Edouard Daladier, the "little dictator of France," who is his own Minister of National Defense and Foreign Affairs, left Paris suddenly today to make a surprise personal inspection of the Maginot fighting zone.

He left for the front in a military automobile on what, so far as is known, was his first inspection of the battlefront. The Premier, who entered the last war as a private soldier and fought the entire four years, winning promotion after promotion and three citations for valor under fire, started for the front without previous announcement.

SEP 17 1939

He was accompanied only by Gen. J. P. O. De Camp, head of his military cabinet, and their military aides.

During the German retreat, French units reported, the German destruction of villages was being carried out so systematically that even cellars were being filled and the ground leveled.

In this area typical Old World houses built centuries ago have mediæval cellars, which extend two or three levels down into the ground and provide excellent shelter for troops.

Such close contact has been made on the front, it was reported, that the no-man's land separating the front lines almost has disappeared. In some cases lines were said to overlap, with advance posts pushed forward between two similar enemy positions.

Strike At Three Points

In the fighting zone, military dispatches said the French struck at the German lines at three distinct points. Along the Moselle river valley in the north; at Saarbrücken at the south, and about midway between the two down the little Nied river, which is a tributary to the Saar.

What was described as the most important French advance of the last twenty-four hours was reported to have brought them into the angle formed by the two rivers east of their confluence.

From a high ridge and two heights which flank it, French guns were said to be able to dominate the opposite bank of the Saar from the town of Merzig to Saarlouis, a distance of ten miles.

Thirty Divisions Fighting

Military observers estimated that at least fifteen German divisions and about the same number, if not more, of French divisions had been drawn into the fighting for possession of the strategic area between the Siegfried and Maginot lines.

[Editor's Note—This would mean that approximately 300,000 men are locked in battle, as each French and German division consists of about 10,000 combatants.]

In the area of this battle between Saarbrücken and the Moselle Valley are Germany's strongest advance fortifications, guarding the central sector of the northern flank.

The Saar fighting has been growing increasingly desperate since Britain's Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain, flew to France September 12 for the first secret meeting of the British-French supreme war council, called to discuss immediate measures of aid for their Polish allies.

Dispatches from Poland described the situation there as critical, but said all hope had not been abandoned.

"Some Progress" Made

The French morning communique told of "some progress" east of the Moselle river, where French troops have been engaged for six days in a projected march toward the German city of Trier.

The communique tersely reported "an excited night" south of Saarbrücken when German artillery went into action.

Completing a move that opened last Sunday, French troops were said to have captured a small woods northeast of Sierck in German territory near the Moselle.

Despite heavy fire from both large and small artillery in the rear of Germany's troops, the French reported the successful advance of reinforcements through the muddy countryside.

Saarbrücken Hemmed In

As if in retaliation at the other end of the forty-mile front, busy French guns were said to dominate the Saarbrücken area, which was reported being surrounded by Poilus. Already the guns were said to have halted operations of the area's mining industry, which supplies much of the coal, coke and iron needed by the German forces.

To understand the fighting on the western front it must be remembered that the war began as stabilized warfare with no chance for the rapid maneuvers which in the past always characterized the start of operations.

Germans as well as French were already entrenched in strong lines of fortifications which they had been years building. With the Germans resting on the defensive behind their fortifications, the French—if their aid was to mean anything to the Poles—had to strike that line with a major offensive.

Contact Means Victory

Military observers feel that if the French make contact with the main Siegfried Line, from which they still are some six or seven miles, they can be considered to have won the battle of the Saar.

If the Germans prevent the French from penetrating their advance lines, it will mean the French have lost this battle, these observers say.

The German theory of fortress warfare is that the best way to defend a line of fortifications is to make a stand in front of it and, if possible, prevent the attack from ever reaching it.

Apparently to carry out this theory the Germans have been slowly giving ground, thus tiring the French as much as possible. Then, with fresh men moved out from the comparative safety of the Siegfried Line, they strike at the French troops which have been under fire for several days.

Guns Pound French

During the whole time the heavy German guns pounded unceasingly at French advance positions; warplanes bombed and raked thin lines of troops with machine-gun fire.

After each German counter-attack, however, the French reported that although they may have dropped back some hundred yards, the Poilus had not yet failed to regain their original positions in the forward push.

Fighting along the Nied last night and this morning was described as typical of the whole front.

While heavy advance guard action was under way both in the east [illegible] west of this sector during [illegible] or three days, French troops claimed to have moved up across the German frontier into hills southeast of the Nied.

Resistance "Normal"

During these few days they were said to have met only "normal" resistance as the Germans withdrew, conserving the strength of the German troops, but at the same time harassing the advancing French.

Then yesterday the German guns began laying "interdictory" fire on the railroad and highways which follow the winding course of the river, intending to choke off French reinforcements and isolate the weary troops trying to consolidate the positions they had just taken.

This was followed by wave after wave of German infantry pouring across the Saar river, causing the French to recoil and reform their lines in the shelter of groves on a plateau from which heights rise along the river's banks.

French Reinforced

The French were declared to have been able to bring up sufficient reinforcements to hurl the Germans back across the river, where they again took shelter in their blockhouses.

The net result of the action, as viewed here, was that the French advanced their line about a quarter of a mile beyond their first positions and gained control of the hills from which they were able to toss shells along the whole valley on the heights held by the enemy and on the town of Saarlouis, which sits on the river at the foot of the French positions.

HITLER'S TROOPS SENT 'OVER TOP' 1914 STYLE

SEP 17 1939

Germans Repulsed After Resorting to Old War Technic—Paris Night Communique Tells of Heavy Artillery Duel.

PARIS, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Hundreds of thousands of French and German troops were reported engaged in a terrifc battle today along a forty-mile western front after two weeks of skirmishes.

The fighting, including a reported "over the top" advance by Nazi infantry, was said by military observers to be ranging all the way from the Moselle River southeast to the Saarbruecken area—rich industrial prize.

Observers estimate that at least fifteen German divisions and an equal if not larger number of French divisions had been drawn into the fighting between the Maginot and Siegfried Lines. The divisions range between 10,000 and 15,000 men each.

The French High Command reported tonight that German troops were destroying villages as they retreated before the French advance on the western front.

Germans Bring Up More Troops.

An official communique said that the Germans were bringing up more re-enforcements in an effort to halt the French drive against advance positions of the Siegfried Line.

The General Staff announcement confirmed reports that French and German troops were in contact all along the front which stretches through western Germany.

The Germans were reported to have gone "over the top" toward French lines in the lower Nied River valley under cover of a heavy artillery bombardment.

The French General Staff said the attack was "sharply repulsed."

The Germans apparently used the world war technic of sending their infantry in waves against French rifle and machine-gun fire.

After hours of fighting, the French command reported, the German charge was broken and the attackers were forced to retire to their original positions.

Premier Daladier, accompanied by his military aids, paid a surprise visit to the Maginot Line today. Mr. Daladier, who is also War Minister and Foreign Minister, left Paris in a military automobile with Gen. J. P. O. de Camp, chief of his military Cabinet, and other personal staff officers.

The following is the text of tonight's communique:

"There was heavy activity of the two artilleries and contact elements all along the entire front.

"The enemy is being constantly re-enforced before us.

"At many points he abandoned and destroyed certain of his villages in retreating."

Military observers paid tribute to the morale of the French troops operating from intrenched positions in the face of German infantry crossing the shell-pocked area, a new salient on the western front.

They said the troops held their positions against the charge and against blasting fire from German mortars and long-range guns.

Northeast of Sierck, in German territory, the French were reported to have captured a small woods which had been under German fire during a five-day battle that began September 10.

They were said to be holding consolidated positions gained after a temporary withdrawal and a later recovery of the disputed terrain.

French forces were reported today to have driven beyond the tiny German border village of Perl in an attempt to turn the flank of Germany's army in the Moselle Valley, near the Luxemburg frontier.

Dispatches said the Germans were giving ground slowly, fighting from every hilltop and woods, after having blown up the main railroad line between the French city of Metz and the German city of Trier. The railway parallels the border of neutral Luxemburg.

Perl, a typical Old World village a mile and a half within Germany, was the starting point of a German counter offensive up the Moselle Valley last Sunday in which the French were forced to give up some 500 yards of German territory.

A General Staff communique this morning mentioned a new salient bordering the lower Nied River Valley south of Merzig where the Nied joins the Saar River.

Previous communiques had said the French were driving from Sierck toward Trier in the north and from the general direction of Sarreguemines toward Saarbruecken in the south. The new salient is between these points.

The communique reported "some progress" east of the Moselle River, apparently indicating French troops had advanved toward Trier after five days of fighting to push their positions forward. It acknowledged that the Germans had attacked in the Nied Valley sector after pounding French positions with heavy guns but said the attack had been repulsed.

The communique said German artillery action against the French front lines south of Saarbruecken had caused an "excited night" on the western front.

Near the Luxemburg boundary, French dispatches reported French re-enforcements moving up through the muddy countryside under fire from heavy German guns attempting to break up French concentrations at that westernmost end of a forty-mile front extending eastward along the German-French border to Saarbruecken.

French Surround Saarbruecken.

Saarbruecken, industrial center of Germany's rich Saar Valley, was reported being surrounded by French forces. French guns were said to dominate the area, forcing to a standstill mining operations which supply a considerable percentage of the coal, coke and iron needed for the German war machine.

But French dispatches acknowledged the going has been tough.

Every conquered position has been taken first by a tank crew, they said, and has had to be widened and protected on all flanks before it has been possible to move men up.

German artillery constantly sought to break up French rearguard convoys and yesterday the Germans introduced low-flying aerial attack. French pursuit planes, however, poured out from airdromes behind France's Maginot Line and fought off the German ships. The French described their losses as slight and the enemy's as heavy.

Today's Communique.

The morning war communique said today: "There was an excited night in many parts of the front.

"There was very strong enemy reaction in the region south of Saarbruecken. Some progress has been realized by our troops east of the Moselle River.

"A strong enemy counter-attack with artillery preparation has been repulsed in the region neighboring the lower valley of the Nied River."

Military observers here saw a two-fold objective in the German tactics: First, to extract as heavy losses as possible before the French are able to reach the more formidable main Siegfried Line in large bodies, and, second, to delay the French advance in the hope that a crushing blow soon may be delivered to Poland in the east.

A completed campaign in Poland, they pointed out, would release Germany's full power to face the combined strength of British and French forces in the west.

Poland's position continued to cause anxiety in French circles. Advices indicated that the German strategy was preventing the Polish general staff from mobilizing its full manpower for a stand. Polish dispatches said Nazi forces were feinting with mechanized columns, then cutting through widely separated Polish areas without stopping for cleanup operations.

Russia Watched Closely

The attitudes of Russia and Rumania were followed closely. The German drive through Poland was reported to have left open only the easternmost part of the Polish-Rumanian frontier, and some quarters expressed fear that any action by Russian forces might involve Rumania.

Henry De Kerillis, rightist deputy and journalist, wrote today in his daily newspaper, L'Epoque, that he had requested the Air Ministry for special permission to join the air force.

He said he wanted no non-combatant, rearline job when it was "necessary to win the war, no matter what happens in Warsaw or Moscow."

Germans Counter-Attack.

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—German troops were reported today to be fiercely counter-attacking against newly won French positions along a sixty-mile front between the Moselle River and the foothills of the Vosges.

The reports indicated the assault was the most extended yet undertaken on the western front by the German high command.

Previously the German defenders have confined their counter-attacks mostly to sharp local thrusts.

Results of the German offensive, which began last night and was continuing this morning, were not clear here.

It was reported, however, that the French had lost ground on their right flank in the Vosges forests northeast of Bitche.

Used Their New Planes.

During the fighting the Germans for the first time made use of warplanes based in underground hangars behind the Siegfried Line.

Fast fighters were said to have approached the lines in formation and roared low over the French forces between the Saar and Vosges, where comparatively level ground afforded the French little protection from strafing.

Despite heavy fire from French anti-aircraft batteries, the German planes were reported to have caused heavy casualties, particularly among French troops moving up as re-enforcements.

German bombers also participated in air attacks in the Saar sector, where the French previously had occupied Nazi advance fortified positions.

However, anti-aircraft fire was reported to have forced them to fly at too high an altitude to drop their bombs with any degree of accuracy.

British Planes in Action.

Swiss reports also said a number of British Royal Air Force planes had participated in air battles in the Palatinate, east of the Saar.

Numerical superiority of the German planes over the combined French and British air force now engaged in action was believed by the Swiss observers to account for the plan of attack mapped out by Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander of the Allied troops.

Despite geographical difficulties facing ground troops in the Saar and in the Vosges foothills, Gen. Gamelin apparently chose to stab at points where forests and hills made German air attacks most difficult and protection easiest, they said.

To meet the German air power, both the French and British were reported not only increasing their own plane production but increasing anti-aircraft artillery as well.

French officers were said to be jubilant over the ease with which scouting parties and artillery had removed the hazard of mine fields on which the Germans had counted heavily to protect the outlying defenses of the strongly fortified Siegfried Line.

Positions of most of the mine fields, it was said, were known to the French before the war began.

SWISS TROOPS PROVE COSTLY

The positions of most of the mine fields, it was said, were known to the French before the war began. German patrols captured in night attacks were said to have given information on the location of others by naming areas they had been ordered to avoid.

Some of the mines were exploded by heavy shelling. Others were reported to have been set off by French scouts working by night under cover of artillery barrages.

Change in Tactics Seen

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 16 (AP)—The German High Command on the Western front today abruptly changed its tactics from static defense and was reported to have launched a series of violent attacks on French positions in four main sectors.

Advices received here showed the Germans struck at the French in the Moselle Valley, the Nied Valley, the area around the city of Saarbruecken and in the Vosges Mountains.

On the Moselle front the counter-attacks of the Germans were reported to have been driven back by the French, who continued to advance slowly.

In the Nied Valley the Germans were said to have reoccupied a small section of a strategic plateau but to have suffered heavy losses. German casualties were reported heavier during this engagement than in any battle on the Western front since the war began on Sept. 3. French sources said hundreds of prisoners had been taken.

To the south, at Saarbruecken, the battle continued to rage tonight.

In the Palatinate foothills of the Vosges, French forest patrols were reported swept back near the frontier line by a numerically superior German force.

Military observers in Switzerland, who previously considered the French attacks in the Moselle Valley sector mere local actions for position, said they were amazed at the French progress in that region despite fierce resistance.

The observers said they were beginning to wonder if German defenses in the Moselle Valley were not overrated.

Mobilization Expense Put at $1,130,000 a Day.

SEP 17 1939

SEEK TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

Commander of Army Advises His Soldiers to Be Economical.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Frugal Swiss, holding shut the neutral side door to French and German battle lines, learned with shock today that their general mobilization is costing about 5,000,000 Swiss francs ($1,130,000) a day.

Along with publication of this estimate, a staggering figure to many a Swiss citizen, an order of the day entitled "Economy is a soldier's duty" was issued by Gen. Henri Guisan, the gentleman farmer who heads Switzerland's 400,000 citizen soldiers.

Gen. Guisan urged soldiers to economize on gasoline and oil, to take no unnecessary train trips and to throw away nothing which might be of possible use in civilian or military life.

Mobilization a Strain.

Gen. Guisan acknowledged that continued mobilization was a strain on the economy of a nation whose total debt, including cantonal obligations, is about 8,000,000,000 Swiss francs ($1,808,000,000). Although the Swiss have 116.3 per cent gold coverage of their currency in circulation, which is the envy of most of the world, a long European war might be ruinous to Swiss economy.

Few Swiss, however, suggested that their army should be demobilized, even though confident their neutrality will not be violated.

Switzerland, like Belgium and The Netherlands, is operating on the principle a weak nation these days is an open invitation for molestation by stronger Powers.

Convenient Side Route.

Geographically Switzerland looks like a convenient side route around the south ends of the French Maginot and German Siegfried lines. The Basel region, however, bristles with fortifications and is teeming with crack sharpshooters of the Swiss citizen army. Furthermore, Switzerland intends for things to remain that way.

When France and Germany started massing troops on the Western Front, Switzerland called 500,000 men to arms. It was a tremendous effort for a nation with only 4,066,400 inhabitants.

Mobilization went through smoothly, aided by the ancient Swiss tradition that every able-bodied man keeps a rifle ready in his own home for defense of the nation.

After ten days of war along the Western Front without trouble touching the Rhineland area where the Swiss, German and French frontiers meet, cantonal authorities discreetly reminded Gen. Guisan that he had most of their best cowherds and farm hands under arms.

The General immediately gave temporary leaves to thousands but kept 400,000 still on duty.

His order today was another concession to the national economy.

Troops Urged To Help Others

Garrison officers and soldiers off duty were encouraged to help peasants with their crops and other tasks. Already it is a common sight in Swiss railway stations to see soldiers, with rifles crooked in their arms, helping women with their baggage.

Army officers said the majority of the troops would be kept at their posts to see what develops on the Rhineland front. If there are indications that inactivity will continue, there may be partial demobilization.

GERMANY PLEDGES HUMANE WARFARE

Note To France Cites Hitler's Address To Reichstag On September 1

Berlin Warns, However, Actions Of Opponents Will Be Final Guide

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 16—Germany sent a note to France tonight stating she was determined to abide by the rules of civilized warfare, but warned she must be guided by what her opponents do.

The note, transmitted through Sweden, was in reply to a British-French declaration at the beginning of war setting forth methods by which the Allies proposed to conduct the war.

France asked a German answer, which was given in tonight's note.

Hitler Speech Cited

Germany called attention to the fact that Hitler, on September 1, told the Reichstag that the Reich was not warring against women and children. The note emphasized that thereafter Hitler ordered the German air force to attack only military objectives.

Germany said she welcomed and applauded the plea by President Roosevelt that the war be conducted as humanely as possible and later told Britain she proposed to abide by the Geneva agreement of 1925 against use of poison gases.

Text Of Note

The Reich's note said:

"Germany intends in the future also to abide by the injunction of the Führer to conduct war on principles of chivalry and humanity. But the Reich must reserve the right to avenge with weapons at hand any violation of humanitarian principles by its opponents.

"In respect to England's determination to wage war on women and children with a hunger blockade, the Reich must answer with means at its disposal to demonstrate realistically to its foes of the methods they use."

The official Soviet news agency Tass, said the armistice, announced last night, would go into effect at 2 P. M. (7 A. M. New York time) today.

Military forces of the two Powers, who have been fighting intermittently for four months on the frontier of Sovietized Outer Mongolia and Japanese dominated Manchoukuo, would maintain positions which they held at 1 P. M. yesterday.

SEP 17 1939

The armistice culminated negotiations started not long after Soviet Russia on August 24 signed a non-aggression pact with Germany, Japan's partner in the anti-Comintern agreement. The discussions of long troubled Soviet-Japanese relations were carried out by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff, who is also Foreign Commissar, and Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo.

Fighting Has Been Severe.

The most recent hostilities on the Manchoukuo frontier started May 11, and at times reached great intensity as aerial and mechanized forces were brought into play. The outbreak was only one, however, of a series of difficulties the two nations have had along 1,000 miles of their twisting frontier.

The Tass announcement said a commission of two Soviet-Mongolian and two Japanese-Manchoukuan representatives would be organized at the earliest possible date to determine the boundary.

Within a few hours after announcement of the armistice, Russia named a new Ambassador to Japan, Constantin Smetanin, who had served as charge d'affaires in Tokio since June 5, 1938, when former Ambassador Mikhail Mikhailovitch Slavutsky returned to Moscow.

A Japanese communique announcing said prisoners and dead of the four-month conflict would be exchanged, while arrangements are

Soviet-Japanese War Halts

Armistice Ends Fighting and Commission Is to Establish Manchoukuo Frontier.

By WILLIAM HANCOCK

MOSCOW, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—An armistice today in Far Eastern fighting between Soviet Russia and Japan was stipulated in an agreement which diplomatic quarters saw as foreshadowing a possible non-aggression pact between those traditional enemies.

SEP 17 1939

1939

30-24—3373

30-24—3373

completed to establish the boundary.

War Damage Is Admitted.

The army section of the Japanese Imperial Headquarters declared both sides had suffered considerable damage during an outburst of bitter fighting between August 20 and September 1. No details were made known, however.

Moscow observers said a rumored Soviet-Japanese nonagression pact would be a blow to the British position in East Asia and possibly to Far Eastern interests of the United States.

It would have an even greater effect on the Japanese campaign in China. Russia has given material aid to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in his fight against Japan.

Throughout the Japanese-Chinese conflict reliable sources have reported that the flower of Japan's military forces have been concentrated in Manchoukuo in readiness for any major move by the Soviet Union.

SEP 17 1939

A reconciliation between Moscow and Tokio has been one of Germany's aims since the Soviet-German pact was signed, and would constitute a diplomatic triumph for Adolf Hitler.

Nazi officials have been strenuously active trying to stave off what they feared were British efforts to reach an understanding with Japan.

Russo-Japanese Anti-War Pact May Be Put Off

Points Still Under Dispute Cited; Border Truce Seen as Bolstering Moscow

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 16.—The Soviet Union, having made "peace" first with Germany and then Japan, cautiously watched the war in Europe tonight, convinced that her position strategically was greatly improved.

The Russian-Japanese armistice pact that called for the end today to four months of intermittent battling along the disputed 1,000-mile frontier between Soviet-protected Outer Mongolia and Japanese-dominated Manchukuo was viewed in Soviet circles as making both the [illegible] frontiers safe.

SEP 17 1939

Failure of Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo to make an expected call today on Viacheslav M. Molotov Premier and Foreign Commissar, was taken to indicate all details for the cessation of hostilities had been worked out.

Diplomatic sources speculated whether the next step would be a Russian-Japanese non-aggression pact like the one Russia and Germany signed Aug. 24. Some observers in Moscow said such a pact would be a blow to the British position in Eastern Asia and possibly to the interests there of the United States.

Soviet sources did not expect action on a possible pact at once. It was pointed out several points remained to be settled—including disputes over fishing rights in Eastern waters and Soviet aid to China. There was the belief, however, that a major obstacle to an agreement had been torn down by the armistice.

Appointment yesterday of Constantin Smetanin as new Ambassador to Japan also was said to have been desirable for obvious diplomatic reasons. He served as charge d'affaires in Tokio after former Ambassador Mikhail Mikhailovitch Slavutsky returned to Moscow on June 5, 1938.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said Japanese and Russian forces would hold temporarily the same positions along the frontier they occupied yesterday. A commission of two Soviet-Mongolia and two Japanese-Manchukuo representatives was to be formed "at the earliest possible date" to detremine a permanent boundary.

(A Japanese communique said prisoners and dead of the frontier fighting would be exchanged. The army section of the Japanese imperial theadquarters announced both sides suffered "considerable damage" in the last bitter engagements from Aug. 20 to Sept. 1, but made known [illegible])

TRUCE LETS JAPAN PRESS CHINA WAR

SEP 17 1939

Renewed Activity Viewed As Prelude To Major Campaign

Advance South Of Nanchang Said To Have Driven Back Four Army Corps

[By the Associated Press]

Shanghai, Sept. 16—Japanese troops were reported tonight to have opened a general offensive on one Central China front and observers predicted possible development of major campaigns to crush Chinese resistance.

The report of the Central China activity was from Domei, Japanese news agency. Coming after a year of only desultory operations, the attack was regarded as a possible prelude to major offensives by the Japanese, now relieved of their preoccupation on the Manchoukuo border by the new Tokyo-Moscow truce.

Expected To Strike In South

Domei said Japanese troops in northwestern Kiangsi province were driving westward south of Nanchang. Four Chinese Army Corps were said to have been hurled back by the advance.

Foreign observers expected the Japanese to strike in South China in an attempt to crush Kwangsi and Yunnan province forces and cut major communication and supply lines of Chungking, temporary Chinese capital.

Heretofore, it was said, Japanese had delayed further advance into the interior because of fear of a Soviet attack in the north. With conclusion of a truce, they apparently have a free hand to attempt to smash the armies of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Seen As Capitulation

Foreign circles were watching for further signs of a Russian-Japanese reconciliation, which they said would strengthen Japan's position as against third powers in China.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—In Chungking, Chinese declared the Moscow-Tokyo armistice indicated Japanese capitulation to force. They based their assertion on the ground that Japan could not defeat the Soviet-Mongolians in battle and, therefore, were obliged to make peace. Chinese semi-official circles professed to see no danger to Chinese in the agreement, saying that their present good relations with Russia, which has been a source of Chinese war supplies, were unimpaired.]

No Major Drive In Year

Since last October Japan has not engaged in a major military campaign on a grand scale in China, but has been content with attempts to consolidate her gains.

One phase of the war which started July 7, 1937, was brought to a close in central China with the capture of Hankow by Japanese forces on October 26, 1938. Its occupation completed Japanese conquest of the lower Yangtze River Valley.

Capitulation of Hankow came only five days after the fall of Canton, China's greatest southern city.

Truce Is Hailed In Japan As Freeing Force In China

Tokyo, Sept. 16 (AP)—Japanese today hailed the Tokyo-Moscow armistice generally as an important step which would permit Japan to devote greater attention to her China campaign.

Some officials warned, however, that the agreement which ended fighting on the Manchoukuo-Outer Mongolia border did not mean necessarily the settlement of all the numerous Japanese-Soviet problems.

SEP 17 1939

Zengo Yoshida, Navy Minister, expressed the hope the armistice would pave the way for diplomatic adjustment of the other issues, principally those regarding Sakhalin Island oil and coal concessions, long a center of friction between the two powers. Russia owns the northern half of Sakhalin, Japan the southern half.

Wants China War Speeded

Yoshida reiterated the necessity of a speedy conclusion to Japan's campaign in China.

Haruhiko Nishi, director of the West Asiatic bureau of the Foreign Office, in a speech at Osaka said it was difficult to expect the truce to settle other Japanese-Soviet problems "because of the relations of the two nations heretofore."

Japanese newspapers prominently displayed a Domei (Japanese news agency) dispatch from Chungking, Chinese capital, saying the armistice was a severe blow to the pro-Communist faction of the Central Chinese Government.

Neutral observers here were not optimistic because of the indecisive results of an armistice that ended fighting between Japanese and Russians last summer at Changkufeng. Commissions named to settle the boundary dispute there thus far have failed to reach an agreement.

Japan's Naval Mission Leaves Italy For Home

Economic Group Sails For New York—General Expected In Berlin Today

Naples, Italy, Sept. 16 (AP)—A Japanese naval mission sailed today for home and a companion economic mission left for New York.

The naval mission, headed by Admiral Osumi, sailed aboard the Hakone Maru. It was uncertain whether the group would go by way of England or the United States. The economic mission, under Isaka Takasi, left on the Italian liner Conte de Savoia for New York.

SEP 17 1939

Meanwhile a Stefani (Italian news agency) dispatch from Berlin said General Kazuichi Terauchi, former Japanese Minister of War, was expected in the Nazi capital tomorrow for "important talks."

REICH DEMAND FOR RUMANIAN OIL HITS SNAG

Calls For Output Already Owned Or Pledged To Allies Or U. S.

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Sept. 16—Rumania's inability to meet German demands for increased oil exports is threatening to take a serious turn soon.

Diplomats as well as oil producers said tonight that a German mission headed by Dr. Karl Claudius, which now is in Bucharest, is seeking huge quantities of Rumanian oil to run German war equipment.

American Companies Involved

The snag, according to these quarters, is that the oil which Germany demands already is owned by or pledged to French, British or American companies.

The Germans, it was understood, ask for the Government's percentage of the annual output, but this oil, which amounts to 72,000 tank cars annually, is pledged to a French company as security for a Rumanian loan floated in France.

Largest Firms Termed Unwilling

The two largest Rumanian oil companies, the Astra Romana and the Steaua Romana, are owned by American and British concerns and are said to be unwilling to sell to Germany.

The Rumanian Government was said to be willing to sell Germany greater quantities of oil, but that the complications prevent it.

Soviet Steps Absorb London

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP).—Soviet Russia's aims in the four-power European conflict absorbed British political quarters almost as deeply as the war itself today after the Russian-Japanese armistice in Far East borders fighting.

Among informed observers the consensus was that whatever Russia's intentions she had thus freed her hand in the East for assuming a more dominant role in European politics from which she long has been isolated. Whether she ultimately would throw the weight of her mobilized millions behind her new friend, Germany, in the war now two weeks old was the question to which all seemed looking for an answer here. British officials, however, were silent.

The diplomatic correspondent of Reuters, British news agency, in an article issued today, said: "Whether the confidence of the Russians in the truce will enable them to withdraw any of the 300,000 men now concentrated on the Soviet-Mongolian border is a somewhat moot point."

The liberal "Evening Star" editorializing on "The Russian Riddle," said that, despite the Russian-German pact, "the Russians cannot feel anything but alarm about the prospect of having the Germans as their next-door neighbors." Asserting that the attempt to bring Russia into the British-French front broke down "chiefly because the Poles declined to allow Russian troops on their soil," the "Star" continued:

"It would be a strange sequel if the result of the anti-aggression pact (German-Russian) was to bring the Red Army into Poland to arrest the advance of the Germans."

Italy Sees Trade Gain in Warfare

SEP 17 1939

Commentator Admits Move to Absorb Foreign Commerce

ROME, Sept. 16 (AP).—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Italian commentator, said today in Il Giornale d'Italia that Italy planned to gain additional wartime foreign trade while producing enough for her own needs.

As an important industrial power not involved in war, Italy was described as in a favorable position.

Special opportunity was seen in the Balkan market, with the possibility Italy might take over much of Germany's former trade there.

Gayda wrote that coal fields at Arsa, near Trieste and on the Island of Sardinia would be worked more extensively.

Oil production in Albania would be increased and an effort would be made to develop Albania's "vast rich beds" of iron ore.

Rumania Tells Poles League Would Have To Pass On Anti-Russ Pact

SEP 17 1939

Bucharest, Sept. 16 (AP).—A Polish inquiry regarding Rumania's attitude in the event Soviet Russia should attempt to occupy the Polish Ukraine was reported authoritatively tonight to have met with the response that Rumania would have to consult the League of Nations before putting into effect its anti-Russian treaty with Poland.

These sources said the Polish-Rumania mutual assistance pact was designed only to function in case of Russian attack and needs League action to become effective.

100 SAILORS DIE IN EXPLOSION ON FRENCH CRUISER

Blast, Followed by Fire, Occurred While Boat Was in Port.

BELGIAN MOTORSHIP SUNK

British Blame Germany for the Destruction of Four More Ships.

SEP 17 1939

PARIS, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—One hundred French sailors today were reported killed in an explosion aboard the 4,773-ton French cruiser-minelayer Pluton.

Advices reaching the French Government said the explosion, followed by fire, occurred aboard the warship while she was anchored in port.

The Pluton normally carries 450 mines and 400 officers and men. The number of wounded was not disclosed.

Only fragmentary information concerning the disaster could be obtained. This much was made known, French said, to counteract a report abroad that the warship was torpedoed.

The port where the explosion occurred was kept a military secret.

The Pluton carries the largest number of mines of any such vessel in the French Navy. She is ten years old.

At Least 100 Seamen Killed As French Cruiser Blows Up

Explosion And Fire Sweep Minelayer Pluton In Accident Off Coast Of Morocco

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 16—At least one hundred French sailors tonight were reported to have been killed in an explosion and fire which swept the cruiser Pluton, a main unit in France's mine-laying fleet.

It was believed possible that the final toll might be twice that number.

The explosion was understood to have occurred off Casa Blanca, French Morocco, last Tuesday.

Two hundred would be half the Pluton's normal crew of 400 officers and men.

The 4,773-ton cruiser, although smaller than other vessels of the mine-laying fleet, carries a normal cargo of 450 mines, which is twice that of some of the larger ships.

The first advices which penetrated official secrecy surrounding the disaster, failed to specify the port out of which the Pluton was operating and gave the impression she still was in port when a mine exploded accidentally.

Later information indicated, however, that the minelayer was out on an expedition in Moroccan waters.

The explosion was followed by fire which swept over the 10-year-old warship.

SUCH ACTION WAS DELAYED 3 YEARS BEFORE

SEP 17 1939

21 Vessels, Involving 122,843 Tons, Have Been Sunk In Two Weeks

Naval Quarters, However, Are Optimistic About Sea Situation

FROM MIDDLETON

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 16—The British Admiralty tonigh. pressed convoys for merchant shipping into service, after it was authoritatively disclosed that enemy craft have sunk twenty-one British ships, involving a tonnage of 122,843, during the first two weeks of the war.

The use of convoys was not instituted by the British in the last war until 1917.

While slim cruisers and racing destroyers roved and struck on the shipping lanes, planes of the royal aricraft patrolled the skies around the United Kingdom in redoubled efforts to halt the persistent shipping losses to U-boats or mines.

Despite the casualties, naval quarters expressed optimism about the situation at sea.

Success Is Indicated

Increasing patrol activity and the Admiralty's cautious announcement that "a number of U-boats have been destroyed" were taken by naval authorities to tell a story of far greater successes than the guarded statement indicated.

Britain placed responsibility on Germany for the sinking of the 8,000-ton Belgian motorship Alex van Opstal last night in the channel off Weymouth, claiming she was sunk by mine or torpedo in violation of international law.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—In Brussels, Belgian authorities refrained from lodging a protest pending a report from the master of the vessel as to whether she was sunk by torpedo or mine.]

A British communique said there were no British mines in the neighborhood, that Germany had sent no notification of German mines there and that attack without warning was in violation of the submarine protocol to which Germany subscribed.

British Tanker Sunk

The Alex van Opstal left New York September 6 for Antwerp with eight passengers and 3,400 tons of grain.

Latest ship to be added to the list of British losses was the tanker Cheyenne, of the Anglo-American Oil Company, which was officially announced as attacked by a submarine off the southwest coast of Ireland.

Messages from the captain indicated she was shelled and set afire. The crew, like that of the Alex van Opstal, was rescued. The Norwegian steamer Ida Bakke, which already had saved the survivors of the sunken freighter British Influence, picked up all thirty-seven members of the Cheyenne's crew.

The crew of the British tanker Inverliffey, shelled to pieces September 9, told how they huddled around the conning tower of the German submarine which had attacked them while a tidal wave of fire rolled over the sea from their sinking ship.

U-Boat Offers Aid

Members of the Cheyenne's crew had a similar tale to tell. The submarine which attacked the tanker stayed on the surface until the Ida Bakke hove into sight. The undersea boat, they said, offered to tow the lifeboats toward the British coast.

Chief consolation to shipping men after announcement of plans for convoys was that the navy was hunting submarines on an efficient pattern. They had, moreover, every faith that submarines were speeding home for rest, food, fuel and fresh shells and torpedoes at Kiel and that many would be trapped en route.

Evidence that detection was increasing and that the patrol was widening its scope was given by crew members of the Cheyenne. They said a British destroyer was racing to the scene while the submarine was destroying the tanker. The destroyer later sank the wreck of the Cheyenne as a menace to navigation.

Hand in hand with British plans for the extinction of the submarine menace went the navy's prize offensive weapon—blockade of Germany and seizure of her sinews of war.

BRITISH CHARGE U-BOATS SANK 4 MORE SHIPS

Three Vessels Are English and One Belgian—No Deaths Reported.

LONDON CLAIMS ADVANTAGE

SEP 17 1939

Say Virtually All German Traffic Has Been Driven Off Seas—Have Faith in Convoys.

LONDON, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Great Britain today officially held Germany to blame for the sinking of a Belgian motorship in the English Channel last night, either by mine or torpedo.

Within a few hours after the Ministry of Information issued a communique to that effect, news was received of the sinking of a third British vessel within little more than twelve hours.

The 8,825-ton tanker Cheyenne, owned by the Anglo-American Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, was sunk by a German submarine off the southwest coast of Ireland yesterday.

A message received by the ship's owners from the captain said the sunken tanker had been set on fire by shells.

Crews and passengers of all vessels were reported rescued.

Crewmen of the Cheyenne—the twenty-first British ship to go down in the war—were picked up by the Norwegian ship Ida Baake, making its second rescue of the war. They declared the attacking submarine first fired warning shots and sunk the vessel after the men were in lifeboats.

Then the submarine stood by until the Ida Baake hove to several hours later. They said the submarine commander had offered to tow the lifeboats toward the coast.

The Cheyenne was the second ship of the Anglo-American company to have been sunk, the Kennebec having been sent to the bottom on September 9. Her crew of thirty-two also was saved.

Blame 'Enemy Action.'

The Belgian vessel sunk off Shambles lightship near Weymouth was the 5,965-ton motorship Alex Van Opstal. While the Ministry of Information said the sinking was the result of "enemy action," the captain said:

"All I know is there was a terrific explosion and the ship broke in two."

The eight passengers and crew of forty-nine got away safely in the vessel's lifeboats and were picked up by the Gree ksteamer Atlanticos and brought ashore on the south coast of England.

One of the passengers, an unidentified woman from New York, was taken to a hotel with several ribs broken, he said.

[In Tenafly, N. J., it was stated this afternoon that Miss Germaine Fulchiron, 31 years old, was a passenger on the Alex Van Opstal. She is a Red Cross nurse returning to her homeland, France, to assume war duty. She had been visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Fulchiron, for two years. Her home is in Lyons, France.]

The other British vessels sunk were the 5,200-ton cargo boat Kanad Head and the 291-ton trawler Davara. They were the nineteenth and twentieth British ships sunk since Britain declared war on Germany two weeks ago tomorrow.

These sinkings followed by a few hours a Government announcement that "a number of U-boats" had been destroyed by war vessels and planes and that the British were stepping up preparations for a protracted war.

The Ministry of Information said the Alex Van Opstal was either "torpedoed or, as her master believes, struck a mine."

The statement argued that the mine—if that was the cause of the sinking—must have been laid by the enemy because of the assertion that at no time have the British laid mines in the vicinity of the sinking.

[Welmouth is on the south coast of England, in the English Channel.]

British Claim Advantage

On the whole, they said, naval activity so far has been heavily in Britain's favor. The following reasons were cited:

1. Britian's drive against submarines has been much more effective than during the first two weeks of the world war, when only one U-boat was sunk.

2. Britain already has driven virtually all German shipping off the seas and during the first week of the war seized more than 76,000 tons of contraband cargo bound for Germany on neutral vessels.

These experts said losses of British vessels would diminish rapidly after the convoy system came fully into operation and that German submarines should not be a serious threat to British shipping.

The British press gave prominence to the announcement that "a number of U-boats" had been destroyed by the navy, but commented editorially the Government still was too grudging in giving out news of its operations.

"This is the first time that the authorities have alluded publicly to the success of operations against the submarine menace," the Daily Sketch said. "Even now the claim is modest enough, but reading between the lines we can see that already within a fortnight from the beginning of the war the U-boat as a weapon has been paralyzed."

Silence Still Criticized

The British press gave prominence to the official announcement yesterday that "a number of U-boats" had been destroyed by the navy, but commented editorially that the Government still was too grudging in giving out news of its operations.

"This is the first time that the authorities have alluded publicly to the success of operations against the submarine menace," said the Daily Sketch. "Even now the claim is modest enough, but reading between the lines we can see that already within a fortnight from the beginning of the war the U-boat as a weapon has been paralyzed."

"Grudging Announcement"

The Daily Mail said, "The Admiralty at last admits what Fleet Street has known for some time. 'A number of German U-boats have been destroyed.' Even now the announcement is grudging in character. We are not told how many."

The Daily Telegraph described the announcement as "a laconic but cheering message," and said that "for the first time a positive response has been officially made to public concern with this question."

The pressure of the press and the opposition leaders in Parliament, however, still has failed to bring from the Ministry of Information anything but the scantiest of news on the activities of the army and air force.

So far all that has been announced officially is that British troops have landed in France and that the air force is operating from French soil.

It also was disclosed, in line with Britain's wartime policy of detaining merchant ships to search for contraband cargo, that seventy vessels were being held under guard off the southeast coast.

Many Victims Represented.

Nearly every maritime nation in the world was represented in the fleet of detained vessels riding at anchor in a wide arc from Broadstairs to Dover.

Aboard each ship was a guard of British seamen under a junior officer. British escort ships lay anchored at strategic points among the merchantmen.

Patrolling the roadstead were two slim British destroyers and one of France's powerful new gunboats. At an eight knot speed, the patrols steamed steadily back and forth in front of the detained ships.

The patrol, it was explained, was keeping a lookout for enemy submarines as well as guarding against a possible getaway by any of the captive'sthe captive."

Out in the channel, yet within sight of the gray cliffs of Calais, other British warships stand guard to protect the vital sea lane to France. Fencing the lane is a barrier of mine fields.

U-Boats Didn't Worry Captain of Ill-fated Ship

SEP 17 1939

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 17 (A. P.).—The captain of the Belgian vessel Alex Van Opstal, sunk in the English Channel near Weymouth, commented before leaving the Albany port on September 3: "Submarines will not be such a menace in this war as in the last."

"Airplanes have just about ended the peril from submarines," Capt. Vital Delgoffe said before the 5,965-ton boat left with grain en route to New York city and Antwerp, Belgium.

"It is easy for airplanes to spot them when submerged in the English Channel, for instance, where the water is only 20 or 30 fathoms deep," he added. "A depth bomb or two will knock them out."

SHIP STRIKE

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 16—A strike by seamen demanding cash bonus for entering war zones held up the departure today of three liners ordered by the State Department to pick up stranded Americans in Europe.

Gangplanks had been pulled up ready for sailing last night when the crews made last-minute demands for a bonus of $250 per man for plying submarine-infested waters.

Ships affected were the Scanstates of the American-Scantic Line and the United States liners American Traveler, with thirty-nine passengers, and the American Trader, with fifty-three.

Two Bound For England

The Traveler and Trader were bound for English ports, the Scanstates for Oslo and Copenhagen.

Stewards served dinner to the passengers, who later came on deck and relayed messages to watchmen a few feet away on the pier. Taking the delay nonchalantly, they were made comfortable by the crew and later given permission to leave. Most of the passengers were Britons returning to England for volunteer war duty.

30.24-3375

Fried Warns Seamen

Capt. George Fried, head of the United Sttaes Bureau of Steamboat Inspection, and central figure in many sea rescues, warned the crews of the Traveler and Trader their certificates as seamen were jeopardized by their action.

Newbold T. Lawrence, general manager of the United States Lines, said seven members of the Trader crew of seventy agreed to sail, but others refused to obey orders of Capt. Harold Milde. He said no officers were involved.

CIO Denies Knowledge

Joseph Curran, president of the Maritime Union (C.I.O.), disclaimed knowledge of the tieup, but added that "no one can drive a man into what he thinks is extreme danger regardless of the type of articles signed."

This was the second instance of delayed departure since the return of Americans abroad got under way. The liner President Roosevelt sailed eight hours late September 6, when similar demands were made.

At that time seamen also asked war risk or disability insurance of $25,000 a man and a 40 per cent. increase in the manning scale. They finally sailed with the understanding that negotiations would continue and any settlement would be made retroactive.

Demands "Astronomical"

Shipping men have given some indication of allowing extra remuneration for seamen on ships traveling through war zones but they said the present demands were "astronomical."

Representatives of the operators went to Washington yesterday to discuss the matter with the Maritime Commission but apparently failed to reach a decision. Present at the conference were Frank J. Taylor, president of the American Merchant Marine Institute, and John B. Bryan, president of the Pacific American Shipowners Association.

SEP 17 1939

Two Liners Arrive

Two foreign liners arrinving today carried 3,402 passengers, mostly Americans. The British lone Acquitania whosecourse has been a mystery since she left Southampton ten days ago, reached quarantine at 3.22 A. M. (E.S.T.). She had 1,633 passengers.

The Rex, first large Italian ship to sail since war started, carried 1,43[illegible] Americans.

Kennedy Message Approved.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—State Department officials said today that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy did the right thing in warning American passengers on the British liner Aquitania that a convoyed vessel of a belligerent might be sunk without warning.

Passengers on the Aquitania, which arrived in New York today after much delay, protested that the Kennedy warning message, delivered just before the liner sailed from Southampton, caused them to be panic stricken.

Officials here said they approved the warning but they gave a slightly different version of the message from that reported by the passengers.

The Aquitania passengers said Mr. Kennedy's message stated that with regard to American travel on a belligerent ship "when such vessels are being convoyed, the opposing belligerent may take this opportunity to sink them without warning."

Officials here said Mr. Kennedy's message stated that "when such vessels are being convoyed, the opposing belligerent may claim the right to sink without warning."

State Department spokesmen said they knew Mr. Kennedy was to deliver the warning to Aquitania passengers. As to future warnings on travel on belligerent ships, the department said these would depend on the circumstances.

U-BOAT SINKS SHIP BUT SAVES SAILORS

Captain Lets Survivors Stand on Deck.

LONDON, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Members of the crew of the sunken British steamer Inverliffey were temporarily taken aboard a German submarine when they feared they were lost in a wall of flame, a survivor relayed today.

The submarine blew the Inverliffey to pieces Monday near Le Havre.

SEP 17 1939

"The submarine surfaced and ordered us to stop," Third Officer Land said. "We sent out an S O S and tried to get away but the shells continued to burst all around us and we knew it was no good.

"There were forty of us and we piled into the ship's lifeboats, and when we pulled away the submarine fired into the Inverliffey amidships. Flames and smoke shot up into the sky and it seemed as if we were almost under the wall of flame which began to rush at us like a tidal wave.

"We rowed for our lives and when we thought we were done for the submarine commander steered his ship alongside and said we could stand around the conning tower. But he told us that if any British warships turned up he would have to dive away from under us.

"We took the chance, although we were waist deep in water on that U-boat deck.

"No sooner were our feet on that deck than the submarine picked up sped and took us out of danger of the fire.

"The U-boat commander was a young fellow and he treated us decently. He asked why we didn't halt when he fired the first shot. When our captain told him it was our duty to try to escape he shrugged his shoulders.

"After a while the submarine got near one of our own boats and put us off. The R. G. Stewart (Standard Oil tanker) picked us up several hours later."

Report 3 Nazi Ships Tied Up At Curacao

Private Messages Say Vessels Sought Refuge In Dutch West Indies

San Pedro, Cal., Sept. 16 (AP)—Private messages received today said three Hamburg-American-North German Lloyd ships, which were on their way to or from here when war was declared, are now at Curacao, Dutch West Indies.

SEP 17 1939

They are the liners Seattle and Vancouver and the motor ship Este.

Passengers arriving on the British motor liner Pacific Grove saw the motor ship Weser and two other smaller and unidentified German craft tied up in Puntarenas, Costa Rica, to avoid capture.

U. S. Destroyers Due At Bordeaux Today

Two Craft To Escort Liner Manhattan Bearing Americans Through War Zone

Paris, Sept. 16 (AP)—The United States destroyers Badger and Jacob Jones were due at Bordeaux tomorrow to escort the United States liner Manhattan when she sails Thursday laden with Americans fleeing the European war.

SEP 17 1939

The destroyers are part of the American Mediterranean fleet. It was not considered likely the Manhattan would be escorted all the way home, but only as long as she is in dangerous European waters.

GERMAN ENVOY HINTS BRITISH HOLD BREMEN

SEP 17 1939

Ambassador to Moscow Says Churchill Should Tell Fate of Liner.

SUGGESTS U. S. HELPED OUT

Cites America's Delaying Ship 2 Days and Asserts Britain Has Fast Destroyers.

MOSCOW, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The German Ambassador to Soviet Russia, Count Friedrick von der Schulenburg, intimated today that the $20,000,000 German liner Bremen, mysteriously unreported since she sailed from New York on August 30 had been captured by Britain.

He said questions concerning the German merchant flagship should be referred to Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty.

"American authorities were so kind as to hold up the Bremen for hours and so far as I know the British have rather fast destroyers," the German diplomat said in response to queries about reports the Bremen had reached Murmansk, Soviet arctic port.

"I should think the joint efforts of the two powerful empires—the United States and British—should have been able to trap and take an unarmed German ship.

"So I think it would be more proper to ask Mr. Winston Churchill where the Bremen is," said the Ambassador.

Mystery About Liner.

The whereabouts of the $20,000,000 liner Bremen has been a mystery ever since it slipped out of New York Harbor without passengers on the night of August 30 after being held in port for two days while Government officials searched it from keel to truck.

In the meantime rumors have had it seized by the British, sunk at sea, en route to neutral ports and under the Italian flag after a change of nationality in midocean.

First reports on September 5 indicated the Bremen was heading for a port in Mexico, where seven German ships tied up soon after war was declared. On September 6 two lifebuoys marked "Bremen," washed ashore at Orleans, Mass., gave rise to the belief the ship had been sunk. This belief faded, however, when Coast Guardsmen said they were found before the Bremen had been out of New York four hours.

On the same day it was announced from Berlin that the liner was in a neutral port but the port was not named. Next reports on September 8 expressed the belief the Bremen was at anchor near Alexandrovsk, on Russia's Murmansk peninsula, or in port at Iceland.

On September 13 Rome denied reports the Bremen had become an Italian vessel and was heading for an Italian port. Last Thursday it was again reported from Berlin that the Bremen, taking the most northerly course possible, had entered the Arctic Ocean and was proceeding to Murmansk.

Conte di Savoia Sails for New York

SEP 17 1939

NAPLES, Italy, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The Italian liner Conte di Savoia sailed for New York today with many Americans including Lincoln Ellsworth, the explorer, aboard.

Scores of travellers seeking last minute accommodations were disappointed.

SAILING ON THE VESSEL WAS TOSHIO SHIRATORI, JAP. AMB. TO ROME, WHO IS RETURNING TO TOKYO.

SEP 17 1939

ATHENIA CHILD BURIED

Girl, 10, First War Casualty To Be Interred In Canada

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 16 (Canadian Press)—High officials of the Dominion and provincial governments today attended the funeral of Margaret Hayworth, 10, the first casualty of the European war to be buried in Canadian soil.

SEP 17 1939

The girl died of injuries suffered in the sinking of the passenger liner Athenia on September 3. Her body was brought to Canada aboard the rescue ship City of Flint.

Ship Refusing To Carry Contraband Libeled

British Concern Acts Against Owner Of Greek Vessel Tied Up At Richmond

Richmond, Sept. 16 (AP)—While the Greek freighter Aspasia lay idle at the city dock with her crew refusing to carry contraband into war zones, a British corporation today filed in United States District Court here a libel against her owner asking $53,500 damages for alleged breach of contract.

SEP 17 1939

B. A. Delano, United States Deputy Marshal, posted attachment notices on the ship, preventing removal of the vessel unless bond, estimated to be about twice the amount sought by the libelant, is posted.

The British Iron and Steel Corporation, Ltd., of London, as libelant brought the action against John Th. Galakis, now resident in Athens and owner of the ship, as respondent.

U. S. Lodges No Protest On Ships Held by British

Few of Seventy Detained Craft Believed American

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP).—State Department officials said today no protests had been made by the United States because of detention of American merchant ships by the British.

SEP 17 1939

Some seventy vessels, flying flags of nearly every maritime nation, are being held under guard off the southeast coast of England while a search is made for contraband cargo. Officials here said that they believed very few of these were American ships, although they had received no definite information.

126 Landed by Mormachawk

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 16 (AP)—Reaching haven from warring Europe, 126 refugees, mostly Americans, dispersed to their destinations by train tonight after debarking from the American Scantic cargo liner Mormachawk. They had had a stormy nine-day passage from Oslo, Norway. The passengers were crowded in improvised sleeping quarters and took part in boat drills and life-belt inspections.

Seamen Who Refused To Sail Ship Are Cited

Twelve Members Of Liner's Crew To Appear Before Navigation Bureau Head

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—Twelve members of the crew of the United States liner American Trader who refused to sail the ship until the line met their demands for war-risk insurance and bonuses for going into the war zone were summoned today to appear before Capt. George Fried, head of the local Maritime Inspection and Navigation Bureau.

SEP 17 1939

Captain Fried boarded the ship last night and warned the men they were jeopardizing their seamen's certificates by refusing to obey orders after they had signed the ship's articles.

The ship's fifty-three passengers, mostly Britons, disembarked today and their passage money was refunded.

WAR RISK INSURING URGED FOR SHIPPING

Land Says It Is 'Axiomatic' That Legislation to Provide This Will Be Needed

SEP 17 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP)—Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission declared today that the need for legislation to provide war risk insurance for American shipping was "axiomatic, but I'm not saying when."

With the vice chairman, Thomas M. Woodward, Admiral Land conferred with President Roosevelt, but said that he did not discuss the war risk subject. The Chief Executive has indicated that nothing but neutrality revision would be sought at the special session of Congress.

To reporters, the chairman said that the present situation was likely to become a "vicious circle of increasing war-risk rates and bonus compensation for ship crews and services like we had in 1918."

At that time, he added, war-risk rates and compensation went around "like a squirrel in a cage," a rise in one rate forcing an increase in another.

Asked about the tying up of United States ships at New York by crews demanding bonuses for entering danger zones, he said:

"We are trying to iron out the bonus and other problems and find some stop-gap until Congress gives us legal relief. We've got to have some kind of control.

"The last Congress had a bill (the Bland proposal) which represented the best brains of five executive departments based on our 1918 experiences. There is no politics in it. It is not authoritative, as some have charged, but purely permissive."

Gibraltar Patrol Strengthened.

ALGECIRAS, Spain, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—The British strengthened their Gibraltar Patrol today, assigning ten destroyers to halt vessels passing through the strait. The ships are to be searched for war contraband.

SEP 17 1939

Nazis Apologize to Switzerland.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Otto Kocher, the German Minister to Switzerland, called today on the Chief of the Swiss Political Department, Giuseppe Motta, to express Germany's regrets for violation of the Swiss frontier by a Nazi civil plane at Schaffhausen Wednesday.

Pacific Coast Lines Raise Water Rates 20P.C.

Shipowners' Conference Sets $7.50 Ton Minimum On General Commodities

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16 (AP)—The Pacific Westbound Conference, including all Pacific Coast shipowners, announced today freight rates would be advanced twenty per cent., effective September 25.

The conference also established a minimum of $7.50 a ton for general commodities.

SEP 17 1939

Action was taken to "meet the conditions resulting from the war which affects . . . all countries served by ocean carriers," the conference declared. It asserted further increases were "highly probable as the difficulties increase."

Blast Shakes Offices Of Reich Air Ministry

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

BERLIN, Sunday, Sept. 17—An explosion occurred in the Air Ministry headquarters on the Leipzigerstrasse early today. Firemen and police closed off an extensive area around the building.

The Propaganda Ministry acknowledged that there had been an explosion, but no immediate explanation was forthcoming. It was reported that no one had been injured. There was shattered glass in the street, but the extent of the damage was not immediately apparent.

The Propaganda Ministry refused to speculate whether the blast might have been caused by a bomb. It said merely that an investigation was under way.

"The persons responsible are being sought energetically," a Propaganda Ministry spokesman declared.

The blast came during the regular nightly blackout and the streets were deserted.

OSKAR FIRST HOHENZOLLERN TO DIE IN WAR

SEP 17 1939

Young Prince Is Killed "Somewhere In Poland" In Hitler's Service

Eight Of Former Kaiser's Family Listed As Under Arms

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 16—A grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm—Prince Oskar, Jr., of Prussia—was listed today as "killed in action," the first Hohenzollern victim of the German-Polish war.

The family received word yesterday that Oskar fell honorably "somewhere in Poland" while leading an attack by his company. A lieutenant, Oskar was 24 years old. He was a member of the Fifty-first Infantry Regiment.

Oskar's mother, the former Countess Ina Bassewitz, is seriously ill in a hospital in Mecklenburg.

His father, Prince Oskar, the fifth son of the former Kaiser, is in charge of a reserve regiment with the rank of colonel.

Eight Princes In Service

The young Prince's brother, Prince Burchard, is a member of the Ninth Infantry Regiment, also on the Polish front.

A Hohenzollern spokesman said eight princes of the family were in active service, but declined to give their names or locations.

From reliable sources, however, it was learned that the eight were: One son of the Kaiser—Oskar—and seven grandsons. Of the latter three are sons of former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, one a son of Prince Adalbert, one of the late Prince Joachim and the two sons of Oskar.

Of the former Crown Prince's sons, all three of whom are lieutenants, Wilhelm is on the Polish front with the First Infantry Regiment; Louis Ferdinand is with the Hindenburg bombing squadron, and Hubertus is with the air force "somewhere in Poland," it was said.

Fritz Feared Interned

The Crown Prince's fourth son, Friedrich—or Fritz, as he is popularly known—was feared to be interned in England. He was last reported as sick at a friend's home near London and too ill to move. He may have recovered too late to leave the country.

Adalbert's son, Prince Wilhelm-Viktor-Freund, is believed to be on the Western front, while Karl Franz Joseph, son of the late Prince Joachim, is believed to be on the Polish front with an armored car regiment.

The fact that only one of the Kaiser's five surviving sons is in active service was explained on the ground that none who received the rank of major general or higher in the World War was being admitted to service now, while officers of lower rank have been drafted as reserves. Oskar had the rank of colonel, while his older brothers were all generals.

Eldest of Four Children

Prince Oskar Jr. of Prussia was the eldest of the four children of Prince Oskar, fifth son of the former Kaiser, and Ina Countess von Bassewitz. He was born July 12, 1915, a year after the marriage of his parents, who were married just three days before the first World War started in August, 1914.

His father was a member of the governing board of the National People's party when it was forcibly put out of business by Chancellor Hitler in 1933. Though never active in politics, Prince Oskar was groomed to oppose President von Hindenberg in the 1932 election, but the scheme to have the Kaiser's son seek the Presidency of the republic was abandoned and the Nationalists threw their support to Colonel Duesterberg, candidate of the Steelhelmet faction.

His mother was a lady-in-waiting to Empress Augusta Victoria. The match between the then young Prince and the Countess was wholly an affair of the heart. It was opposed by the fathers of both the bride and the bridegroom. The Kaiser objected because she was not of royal birth. However, she was received into the royal family by the Kaiser and made Countess von Ruppin. In 1920 she obtained the title of Princess of Prussia.

During the first World War Prince Oskar, who was born in 1888, served as a colonel in th Royal Grenadiers.

KAISER'S GRANDSON KILLED IN POLAND

SEP 17 1939

First Hohenzollern to Die in Present War.

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Prince Oskar, Junior, of Prussia, a grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm and son of Prince Oskar has been killed in Poland, the first Hohenzollern victim of the German-Polish war.

The family received word yesterday that Oskar, who was born in Potsdam on July 12, 1915, fell honorably "somewhere in Poland" in an attack.

The young Prince, a lieutenant, was said to have led a company into a skirmish.

The news reached his family while his brother, Prince Burchard, a member of the Ninth Infantry Regiment, also was somewhere on the Polish front. His father, Prince Oskar, the fifth son of Wilhelm, is in charge of a regiment with the rank of Colonel. The family did not know his whereabouts.

GANDHI MAKES APPEAL

Asks England to Activate Faith in Democracy.

[By the Associated Press]

Wardha, India, Sept. 16—Mohanda K. Gandhi appealed to the British Government today for what he called "honest action to implement the declarations of faith in democracy made on the eve of the war."

The Indian Nationalist leader hinted that the degree of cooperation by India with Great Britain in the war might depend on the answer to his appeal.

SEP 17 1939

Asks Recognition

"The recognition of India," Gandhi declared, "and for that matter, of all those who are under the British crown as free and independent nations, seems to me to be a natural corollary of the British profession as to democracy.

"To put it still more plainly, all that is required is honest action to implement the declarations of faith in democracy made on the eve of the war and still being repeated from British platforms.

Willing Or Unwilling?

"Will Great Britain have an unwilling India dragged into the war or a willing ally cooperating with her in the prosecution of the defense of true democracy?"

Gandhi was commenting on the statement of the working committee of the Indian Congress party which invited Britain to declare her war aims in regard to democracy and imperialism. He said he found himself alone among the committee "in seeking that whatever support was given to the British sould be given unconditionally."

BULGARIA NEUTRAL; NATIONS NOTIFIED

SEP 17 1939

Declaration Follows Week of Conferences.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Bulgaria, Germany's ally in the first world war, officially declared her neutrality today.

Premier George Kiosseivanoff, a communique announced, has ordered diplomats to notify governments throughout the world that Bulgaria would remain "neutral and peaceful."

The declaration came at the end of a busy week of conferences between the Premier and foreign diplomats. Mr. Kiosseivanoff frequently met the envoys of Great Britain, France, Russia, Germany and Italy as well as of the Balkan nations.

King Boris frequently talked on the telephone with the Bulgarian ministers to large European nations.

Bulgaria's decision was interpreted as meaning that she valued neutrality higher than her twenty-year dream of recovering the Dobruja region from Rumania.

Greece To Enforce Law Regarding Conscription

SEP 17 1939

Will Apply Act October 1 When Class Will Be Called—To Prohibit Sale Of Vessels

Athens, Greece, Sept. 16 (AP)—The War Ministry announced today the nation's conscription law hereafter would require twenty-four months of service.

The law, passed in 1937 but not rigidly applied, will be fully effective October 1, with a class to be called on that date.

The Government issued an order prohibiting the mortgage or sale of Greek vessels to foreigners.

Haiti Declares Herself Neutral.

SEP 17 1939

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—A presidential proclamation of Haitian neutrality in the European war was published today.

Quezon Asks Wide Power To Meet War Emergency

Would Curb Profiteering, Annul 8-Hour Law Control Ships

MANILA, P. I., Sept. 16 (AP).—President Manuel Quezon asked the Philippine Commonwealth Assembly today to enact legislation designed to meet any emergency that might arise "from the present critical state of affairs."

SEP 17 1939

He requested the Assembly to authorize him for a limited time to prevent profiteering through monopolization and speculation affecting articles of prime necessity; take over until March 31, 1941, for use and operation by the government and public service or enterprise; regulate transfer of vessels and shipping facilities and authorize suspension wholly or partly of the eight-hour labor law for the same period.

License For Imports Decreed In Finland

President Acts To Curb Speculation And Accumulation Of Non-Vital Goods

Helskinki, Finland, Sept. 16 (AP)—President Kyosti Kallio today issued a decree that a Government license for all imports was compulsory, effective Monday, to curb speculation and prevent excessive importation of non-vital goods.

Construction of the first section of a railway to Finland's Arctic harbor, Liinahamari, was expected to begin soon.

SEP 17 1939

Liinahamari, at present reached only by highway, is likely to become an important trade outlet to circumvent Baltic and North Sea war dangers.

Germany Fails To Reply To Relief Need Query

American Red Cross Head Says Other Belligerent Countries Have Answered

Washington, Sept. 16 (AP)—Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross and the International League of Red Cross Societies, said today that inquiries as to relief needs of foreign societies had brought replies from all belligerent countries except Germany.

Davis, who had just discussed with President Roosevelt the Red Cross situation in the present emergency did not give details on the suggestions received from the other societies, but said quite a lengthy reply came from Poland.

SEP 17 1939

The question now was, he added, how to coordinate Red Cross work here as well as with the foreign societies. He said it had not reached the point where a new money-raising campaign might be necessary.

May Study Polish 'Atrocities'

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (AP)—The German Red Cross announced today a commission representing neutral and belligerent countries might be sent into the war area in Poland within the next few days to investigate its charges of Polish atrocities. The announcement said a Swiss delegate representing the International Red Cross had arrived from Geneva to arrange technical details.

30.24-3377

30.24—3377

French Decree Bars Food Price Rises.

PARIS, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—A decree by Premier Daladier today prohibited raising wholesale or retail prices on merchandise or foodstuffs during the war without official authorization. The decree provided penalties of from 100 francs ($2.20) to 10,000 francs ($220) for infractions of the wholesale restrictions, and from 16 francs (32 cents) to 500 francs ($11) for retailers. Requests for price increases must be submitted in advance to the Government.

SEP 17 1939

Plan 'White Zones' Free of Bombing

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—The international committee of "White Zones" met with International Red Cross officials today to discuss their plans for neutral areas in all belligerent nations where women, the aged, infirm and children might be concentrated under a guarantee against bombing.

SEP 17 1939

Red Cross officials said they had agreed to support the plan by asking national Red Cross units to establish headquarters in the proposed zones.

Victor Hugo Dua Duras of Washington is the United States delegate to the neutral zone committee.

Salvador Cancels Ship Tax

San Salvador, Salvador, Sept. 16 (AP)—A Government decree today canceled a tonnage tax against ocean steamships calling at Salvadorean ports. The move was intended to help business face the European war situation.

SEP 17 1939

Critics Of France's War Policy Jailed

Hungarian Chambermaid And Algerian Cook Disciplined For Pro-Hitler Talk

Paris, Sept. 16 (AP)—A man and woman who criticized France's position in the war were jailed and fined today.

Maria Rumbach, a chambermaid of Hungarian descent, was sentenced to eight months in prison and fined 1,000 francs (about $22) for saying:

"We should have given Danzig to Hitler, for the city should belong to him."

Idir Ben Said Hamrani, an Algerian cook, was sentenced to fifteen months in jail and fined 1,000 francs. It was testified he said: "Hitler is right. Everything he does is good. He will win."

King Confers On War

London, Sept. 16 (AP)—King George VI today conferred with War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha and Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, chief of the imperial general staff.

SEP 17 1939

FRANCE JAILS JEAN GIONO

Writer, a Pacifist, Accused of 'Defeatist Statements'

DIGNE, France, Sept. 16 (AP).—The French writer Jean Giono was arrested today under wartime regulations for having made what officials described as "defeatist statements."

Jean Giono has been an outspoken pacifist since his return from the front during the World War. He retired then to his native town of Manosque in the lower Alps, to which he has attracted as permanent residents hundreds of nature-loving Frenchmen who are willing, like himself, to till the soil and live the simple life.

He is opposed to all political parties and systems and has but one affiliation, membership in the Association des Ecrivains, which he joined in 1934 to support its anti-war program. His first novel, "Colline," was published soon after his return from the war. He is credited with bringing back to modern French literature the very soul of the peasants. More than a dozen books have followed, including "The Song of the World," "Harvest," "Hill of Destiny" and "Lovers Are Never Losers."

Annabella and Child In Spain; U. S. Bound

Hendaye, France, Sept. 16 (AP)—The French movie star Annabella, wife of Tyrone Power, crossed the frontier into Spain today on her way to Lisbon, where she will sail for the United States accompanied by her 3-year-old daughter by a previous marriage.

SEP 17 1939

Firing Squad For Pacifist

Berlin, Sept. 16 (AP)—Execution of Germany's first conscientious objector was reported today by authorities.

SEP 17 1939

August Dickmann, of Dinslaken, was shot by a firing squad on charges of refusing to go to the front.

Paul Mueller, of Halle, was shot for arson and sabotage.

WAR SHUTS NOTED FASHION HOUSES

SEP 17 1939

Only Two Leading Paris Couturiers Remain.

PARIS, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—French fashion houses were among the war's first casualties.

Only two of the great dressmakers who set modes for most of the world are open for business today—Lanvin and Creed.

Mainbocher, the only American among Paris couturiers, is on his way to the United States with the expressed intention of setting up shop in New York. He told a friend he would reopen in Paris after the war.

The directors of Patou, Vionnet, Piguet and Worth were called to the colors.

The director of Lanvin's, M. Labusquiere, also has gone to war, but Mme. Lanvin is making an effort to carry on.

The sudden exodus of clients caused the shutdown of houses like Alix, Schiaparelli, Chanel and Maggy Rouff.

Creed was able to carry on because it makes the kind of clothes women are looking for now—strictly tailored suits and businesslike topcoats suitable for women volunteer workers. Lower prices also have helped business.

Sandbags And Loose Earth Clutter Famed Cathedral

Canterbury's Ancient Shrine Turned Into Busy Workshop To Protect It Against Air Raids

SEP 17 1939

By the Associated Press.

Canterbury, England, Sept. 16—Wartime fear of bombing raids has turned Canterbury Cathedral, twelfth century shrine of devotion, into a busy workshop to protect the edifice in event of air raids.

A five-ton truck grunts methodically through the great west door, dumping loads of earth in front of the pulpit.

A two-foot gauge rail track mounted on rough wooden ties winds up the sanctuary steps, runs through the choir and terminates at the high altar.

Trucks And Carpenters

Dynamos, humming busily where the lectern normally stands, send a rail truck grinding through the church.

Sweating laborers dump the earth, shovel it into sandbags and send the truck back for more.

Carpenters toil at work benches that formerly were choir stalls.

Sandbags stand in place of the bishop's throne.

Harassed cathedral canons watch workmen root out prized, centuries-old ornaments, crate them in coffin-shaped boxes and haul them to secret hiding places.

A mound of sandbags hides the tomb of Thomas a'Becket, twelfth century churchman slain at the altar.

The apse behind the high altar, built to hold the archepiscopal chair of St. Augustine, stands empty. The chair—first cathedral treasure to be moved—was hurried to safety three weeks ago with the choicest of the stained glass.

"No Smoking" By Pulpit

What few church services there are now are held in the dim crypt. The vaulted arches are blocked up with double walls of wood filled with loose earth.

Pale blue lights give the only illumination for carpenters whose workshop is a bowshaped side chapel. Night and day they fashion rough supports for the delicately ornamented ceiling.

The cathedral, normally a magnet for tourists, gets few visitors now.

A big red sign by the pulpit says "no smoking."

CHURCH ATTENDANCE LIMITED IN GERMANY

Capacity of Air-Raid Shelters Not To Be Exceeded

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (AP)—German church authorities were instructed today not to permit more persons to attend services than could be accommodated in each church's air-raid shelters. The regulations forbid church services at night.

The restrictions are necessary, it was explained, because church air-raid cellars must be some distance from the churches, so that in the event of bombing debris will not fall on the shelters. It was regarded as unwise to require a crowd to run any distance through the darkness of blackouts to reach security.

Bishop Konrad von Preysing, a Roman Catholic, in a diocesan letter to be read in all pulpits tomorrow, prayed for "the blessed future of our people." He avoided political speculation or discussion of the merits of the conflict.

"In this hour I am moved to say how deeply I feel with you the earnestness and seriousness of the times," the Bishop wrote. "Your Bishop is father through Christ to all of you, so I am concerned with you for all who went into the field. I mourn with all who are in mourning. I pray for those God has called home. I pray for those standing in the field and for their safe return.

SEP 17 1939

"I pray for the future of our people, blessed by God. And you may, my children, well pray with me. The fruit of these supplications will be faith in God and moral strength, which will support you in these hours."

CANADA'S FOREIGN TRADE REGULATED

Board to Control Exports Imports and Exchange.

SEP 17 1939

OTTAWA, Sept. 16 (Canadian Press).—A newly created foreign exchange control board today took control of all Canadian exports of goods, money and securities.

An order-in-council created the board yesterday with wide powers to regulate and control transactions as part of Canada's program to put the nation on a wartime footing.

Graham Ford Towers, Governor of the Bank of Canada, was appointed chairman.

Licenses must be obtained for all types of exports or imports and the board will determine rates at which foreign exchange may be bought and sold.

The board has the authority to require all foreign securities owned or controlled by Canadians in excess of $1,000 be turned over to the Government in return for some compensation.

English Boy Admirer Of Hitler, Denied Nazi Broadcasts, Kills Self

SEP 17 1939

Birmingham, England, Sept. 16 (AP)—The body of a youth, 17, was found today with a Swastika armlet and Adolf Hitler's book "Mein Kampf" by his side.

A coroner's inquest found that he poisoned himself because he wanted Hitler to win the war and his father had forbidden him to listen to Nazi propaganda broadcasts. He was said to have been in love with a girl in Germany.

Air Raid Warning a Mistake.

LONDON, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Air raid sirens shrilled a warning at Aldershot during the night, but an official statement today said it was all a mistake. The warning was sounded in error, it was explained, after receipt of a test message sent to determine whether air raid precautions men were on the alert. Hundreds of persons slept through the alarm, which was followed in ten minutes by the all clear signal.

SEP 17 1939

Says Nazis Will Free Ukrainians

SEP 17 1939

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 16 (AP).—Alexander N. Granovsky, president of the American Ukrainian Liberation Committee, said Europe's 50,000,000 Ukrainians "welcome" the German invasion of Poland in the hope it will "liberate" the 8,000,000 Ukrainians in Poland.

The professor of philosophy at the University of Minnesota told the Ukrainian Club of Suburban McKees Rocks: "Our fellow men in Poland have weakened the Polish attack, simply because Poland has refused to set up a Ukrainian national state."

Omahans Get German Propaganda Leaflets

Folders, Printed In English, Mailed From Norwegian Cities, Including Oslo

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 16 (AP)—Five Omahans today reported receiving German propaganda leaflets mailed from Norwegian cities.

There was no indication as to the source. None of the recipients was of German origin, and all said they couldn't explain the selection to receive them.

SEP 17 1939

The leaflets were entitled "Hitler's Appeal to the German People to Repel Polish Terrorization," "Germany's Proposals for a Peaceful Settlement Refused by Poland," and "Molotov on the Soviet Pact With Germany." They were printed in English.

Some were mailed in Oslo. Other cancellation marks were blurred.

25 Machine Guns Seized By U. S. Agents in Seattle

Apparently Not for Export; Storage Since '25 Hinted

SEATTLE, Sept. 16 (AP).—Twenty-five machine guns, valued at $6,000, were seized by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and city police today.

SEP 17 1939

Witnesses at police headquarters said one package of guns contained a New York newspaper dated April 15, 1925, described the weapons as of French make and expressed belief they had been stored for a considerable time.

The Federal agents dropped out of the case immediately on ascertaining that the guns apparently were not intended for export.

Who owned the guns, where they were found or for what purpose they were intended was not disclosed.

Two Britons Allowed To Cross Canadian Border

Passed By United States When Accepted By Dominion Army Recruiting Officer

Buffalo, Sept. 16 (AP)—Two British subjects, previously turned back at the Canadian border when they sought to enlist, were accepted for the Dominion's army today, Arthur J. Karnuth, United States immigration inspector, said.

Karnuth said the men, Saul Barnett, 35, London, England, and Hugh McGuigan, 24, Ayr, Scotland, were taken to Fort Erie, Ontario, after Canadian immigration authorities notified him they might enter if found eligible to enlist.

Both were accepted by a recruiting officer, he said, and deportation proceedings here were dismissed.

SEP 17 1939

Hull Holds Session With Key Officials

Neutrality And Safeguarding Of Americans Abroad Subjects Of Conference

Washington, Sept. 16 (AP)—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and key officials of four Government agencies conferred today on what State Department spokesman said were matters concerning neutrality and the safeguarding of American nationals abroad.

In addition to Hull the following State Department officials attended:

Assistant Secretary A. A. Berle.
Assistant Secretary George Messersmith.
Green Hackworth, legal adviser.
Harry Hawkins, chief of the trade-agreements division.

Acting Secretary Edison represented the Navy Department, Assistant Secretary Johnson and Gen. George Marshall, chief of staff, the War Department.

SEP 17 1939

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson represented the Justice Department and Under Secretary John W. Hanes, the Treasury Department.

ROOSEVELT AT WORK

Quits Cruise to Clear Desk for Neutrality Speech.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt decided today to forgo a week-end cruise on the Potomac River in order to clear his desk of accumulated routine business. This will permit him to undertake as the first thing next week his message to Congress urging neutrality act revision.

He made few appointments for today and kept his afternoon clear for work on mail.

SEP 17 1939

Vandenberg Favors Embargo

Says We Can't Be Arsenal for One Side and Not Become Other's Target.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 16 (A. P.).—United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, said today that he would oppose any proposal to change provisions of the existing neutrality act.

"I do not believe America can be an arsenal for one belligerent," he said in an address prepared for delivery before a western Michigan Republican rally, "without ultimately becoming a target for the other."

The senior Michigan Senator, who is a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that in 1937, "while we could still think objectively upon the subject," Congress adopted a neutrality code which he said represented our best thought as to what would be best for America in the event of another foreign war.

SEP 17 1939

"In my view," he said, "it is not 'neutrality' for us to change that code today to make it fit some favored belligerent, no matter what our sympathies. In my view, that is unneutrality. It is trying to be half in this war, and yet to safely stay half out. I do not believe there can be any such middle ground.

'Be Wholly Neutral.'

"Therefore, I favor the maintenance of the neutrality code, so that we shall be wholly neutral so long as we are neutral at all. And, barring direct challenge to our own sovereignty, I believe it is vital that we should remain neutral; first, for the sake of our own peace; second, so that there may remain at least one powerful voice in this chaotic world which may always be eligible to speak to all belligerents at all times in behalf of the humanities and in behalf of peace-with-reason at the earliest appropriate moment."

Mr. Vandenberg told his audience that the nation should "unite wholeheartedly with the President in combating every subversive influence in the United States and in giving the nation an invulnerable defense."

"In respect to foreign policy, after we have decided in free debate what our national course shall be," he continued, "The existence of foreign war requires all of us to close ranks and present an unprejudiced united front to the entire world. We shall not fail these obligations to America."

—NEUTRALITY—

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 16—Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Dem., Utah), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, expressed the view today that the Soviet-Japanese agreement to suspend fighting on the Manchoukuo-Outer Mongolia border might be a retaliatory move against the United States for serving notice of intention to terminate the 1911 commercial treaty with Japan.

Secretary Cordell Hull notified the Japanese Government in July that the 28-year-old treaty would lapse on January 26, 1940.

While Washington awaited the full significance of the Russo-Japanese truce, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appealed to the United States in a radio address to stay out of the European war. In one of his infrequent public utterances, the famous flyer warned the nation not to be "misguided by this foreign propaganda to the effect that our frontiers lie in Europe."

Thomas Sees New Danger

Some diplomats in Moscow looked upon the Russo-Japanese armistice as the possible forerunner of a non-aggression pact between the two countries. Noting this, Senator Thomas told reporters:

"If it means an unfriendly Japan the danger would be closer to our shores. If it is a sincere non-aggression pact it is a peaceful move. If it is a cloak for something else it is not so good."

Blow To China

Thomas said a Russian-Japanese agreement would make it possible for Japan to withdraw troops from Manchoukuo and "fight all the harder in China." He added that he was not surprised, because the two countries "have been trying to get together for years."

Although Colonel Lindbergh made no mention of the arms-embargo clause of the Neutrality Act, which the Roosevelt Administration will seek to repeal at the special session starting next Thursday, two prominent Republicans spoke last night in support of the Administration's position.

Stimson Supports It

Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, made their positions known in letters to the New York Times.

Stimson said repeal offered the only sure way for the United States to keep out of war, and Butler contended that the Neutrality Act represented a policy of economic nationalism which, he said, was "the chief cause of the world's troubles."

Hoover Has Idea

Former President Herbert Hoover suggested in New York the creation of an international commission composed of neutral nations of northern Europe to "determine where and when and whether these undertakings not to war on innocent men and women and children have been intentionally violated." He proposed that agents of the commission be given free movement in belligerent countries.

Discussing the Lindbergh speech Representative Sol Bloom (Dem., N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, commented that Lindbergh had voiced "what every American feels—that under no circumstances must this country enter the war." He added, however, that the flyer had "left unsaid anything about the arms embargo, which helps Hitler and actually is leading to the collapse of the western civilization he spoke of."

Burke Favors Repeal

Weeping Water, Neb., Sept. 16 (AP)—Senator Edward R. Burke (Dem., Neb.) told a county-fair audience today he favors lifting the arms embargo and amending the Neutrality Act to provide cash and carry on shipments of all goods to belligerents.

Burke said he would support President Roosevelt's proposals for amending the act as "the best method to keep this country out of war."

Van Nuys Backs Repeal

French Lick, Ind., Sept. 16 (AP)—Senator Van Nuys (Dem., Ind.), a frequent foe of the New Deal, tonight indorsed the plan for cash-and-carry sales of supplies to European belligerents.

Van Nuys, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "for the protection of our own peace and economic security" he would support a "properly safeguarded" cash-and-carry plan in the approaching special session of Congress.

Opposed To Revision

Idaho Falls, Idaho, Sept. 16 (AP)—Senator Clark (Dem., Idaho) declared today he would oppose revision of the Neutrality Act "because I am against risking the life of one American boy to protect our foreign dollars."

He added:

"If we repeal the embargo and start selling guns and munitions, eventually we would start extending credits for the European nations to make their purchases. And then we would feel compelled to protect those credits and send our boys over there."

M'NUTT FOR 'CASH-CARRY'

Van Nuys Joins at Indiana Rally in Backing Roosevelt Plan

FRENCH LICK, Ind., Sept. 16 (AP)—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, hailed by his hearers as "the best qualified man in all America" to succeed President Roosevelt, and Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, who has been a frequent foe of the New Deal, united here tonight in endorsement of the President's plan for "cash-and-carry" sales of supplies to European belligerents.

Both told an Indiana Democratic rally, arranged by Democratic editors, that they favored the Roosevelt plan rather than a policy of strict isolation under the present neutrality.

SEP 17 1939

Urging cash-and-carry sales of munitions and other American goods, Mr. McNutt said:

"If we wish isolation in the western world, we must recognize what it really means . . . It would not divorce us from the threat of militarism, but it would force us to maintain an armed camp from one end of the Americas to the other."

Mr. Van Nuys, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "for the protection of our own peace and economic security," he would support a "properly safeguarded" cash-and-carry plan at the special session of Congress.

HOLT FIGHTS SHIFT IN NEUTRALITY LAW

Senator Arrives Home From Trip in Europe.

SEP 17 1939

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 16 (A. P.).—U. S. Senator Rush D. Holt, Democrat, of West Virginia, returned from Europe today aboard the refugee-crowded motorship Mormachawk firmly opposed to revision of American neutrality legislation.

The American liner carried 125 other passengers who had been picked up at Baltic ports in days immediately after the opening of hostilities in Europe.

Among them were forty-six Mormon misionaries, ordered by their superiors to evacuate Germany. They were en route to New York for future reassignment.

Declaring he would fight changes in the neutrality law, Senator Holt said "a vote for revision is a vote for war."

"Overshadowing even news of battlefield progress is the interest in Europe as to whether we will repeal the arms embargo," said Senator Holt, an anti-New Deal Democrat.

"The administration's neutrality policy will lead us directly into war and there are those in Europe who want us involved and who would be glad to see such revision of the present law. The only way for the United States to stay neutral is to stay out."

During his visit to Europe, Senator Holt attended an international conference at Oslo, Norway.

active duty and the men who are being recruited will go into the fleet marine force, successor to the marine expeditionary force of world war fame. It was created five years ago to meet the need for a naval auxiliary landing force for operations in such areas as the Caribbean, carrying out the traditional marine function to land and get the situation well in hand.

The force now numbers only 4,478 officers and men, including flyers, only a fourth of war strength. The additional officers and men will swell it to double 6000 Additional Men to Be Recruited to Double Present Force.

SEP 17 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (A. P.).—Revised army-navy plans for defense of the Western Hemisphere, military sources reported today, include expansion of the Marine Corps' mobile, hard-hitting fleet marine force.

President Roosevelt's limited national emergency decree to safeguard American armed neutrality gave the marines 6,000 additional men, the largest relative increase of any of the armed services.

Most of the reserves recalled to

Marine Force to Be Expanded

30.24-3379

30.24-3379

this figure within a few months under reported plans. The force is divided now between bases on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, with one brigade each at San Diego, Cal., and Quantico, Va.

New Equipment Tested.

New equipment for which Congress provided funds, such as specially-built boats for landing men and five-ton tanks on a beach, already have been tested in war games at Culebra Island, off Puerto Rico.

The Marine Corps has opened fourteen new enlistment stations and forty substations in an attempt to accelerate recruiting from a recent average of 83 to 1,000 a month.

The fleet force expansion is in line with a recommendation by Gen. Malin Craig that the army create five mobile divisions, available to re-enforce quickly garrisons at the Panama Canal, Hawaii or other exposed positions.

Regulars Got 17,000 More.

Mr. Roosevelt's executive orders adding about 100,000 officers and men to the armed forces gave the regular army only 17,000 additional men, insufficient to meet the recommendation, which the former chief of staff estimated would require about 25,000.

The marine expeditionary force had only 3,000 men just prior to American entry into the war in 1917, but was expanded to 31,315 by the time the marines were fighting at Belleau Wood in France. It numbered 24,000 at the armistice.

Citizenship Bureau Gets Wartime Rush

90,000 Aliens, Including Many Who Have Lived Here For Years, File Petitions At Ellis Island

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—The European war has stepped up naturalization proceedings in the United States.

Byron H. Uhl, district director of the immigration and naturalization bureau at Ellis Island, said the bureau's work had been increased so that "even if war conditions were removed tomorrow it would take two years to return to normal."

Uhl said that applications for certificates of arrival—the first step toward United States citizenship—had been filed by 90,000 persons, including some who had lived here for years without attempting to become American citizens.

SEP 17 1939

—THE SUBMARINE WAR—

SEP 17 1939

By Albert W. Wilson
[Associated Press Staff Writer]

Tremendous strides in the science of radio have revolutionized the war now being fought by and against submarines.

The British Admiralty is proud of the new listening devices it has developed. They have a great range under water, and are being used on many British naval ships, particularly destroyers and new speedy pursuit motor boats designed to run down submarines.

A Sub-Spotting Device

While reporting the international naval conferences held in recent years in London, the writer heard much talk of a powerful directional wireless. When a submarine prowling off the British Isles felt the urge to communicate with its base in Germany, this apparatus in London would intercept the message, quickly locate the sub, and notify the nearest British destroyer.

But American naval men, with long experience on submarines, point out that the destroyer has to be "Johnny on the spot" to catch its prey.

The Vessels' Radius

The cruising radius of submarines on the surface, where they are run by Diesel engines, has greatly increased since the World War. But little improvement has been made in underwater travel. They still must run by electricity when submerged, a costly operation, and must come to the surface in a limited time to recharge batteries.

Germany's largest submarines, only half the size of the ill-fated Squalus and other recent American submarines, are credited with a cruising radius of 7,000 miles, but under water they probably cannot exceed 200 miles in a continuous run at a speed of only about seven to ten miles an hour.

Reich Believed To Have 77

Germany officially reported last December that it had 49 submarines and 28 more under construction. These are craft of 750, 500 and 250 tons, which take from eight months to a year to build. Therefore, most of the 28 should now be completed.

Although Chamberlain has said he will never believe Hitler again, naval authorities are inclined to accept these figures as true. They point out that the yards are on river banks at Hamburg and Bremen and on the Kiel Canal, all frequented by commercial vessels, so that the general nature of ships under construction would be difficult to conceal.

More intensified building may be expected now that war has begun. In the last war Germany lost 205 submarines, many of which were built during the war years.

The Submarine's Ears

The United States, on its subchasers, introduced a device at the end of the last war which now is invaluable to both subs and destroyers. The invention soon became everyone's property. It is a sound detector placed on each side of the submarine. A man sitting in the center with earphones, listening to both mechanisms, soon can locate a ship. At that moment, the torpedo is pointed directly at its prey. This means that a submarine does not have to rise to the surface and locate a ship through its periscope before firing.

In fighting submarines, depth bombs were used only toward the end of the last war and are much improved today. More widespread use of convoys to guard ships already has been indicated by dispatches from abroad.

Subs Best Sub-Catchers

Germany's greatest losses in the last war were in the mine "hells"—five U-boats were sunk in one day after the United States laid a North Sea mine barrage.

Another lesson of the last war was that submarines were more effective than any other type of ship in catching submarines. Toward the end of the war—when the Q-boats, those disguised tramps and sailing ships with concealed arms, could no longer decoy the subs—Britain put its own submarines on the routes taken by the German boats. Waiting under water for their prey, they took a heavy toll

Larger Mechanized Cavalry Brigade Contemplated. Navy Enlistments Gain

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 16—The War Department disclosed today that the regular army's combat divisions would be reorganized into swift-moving, compact fighting units.

Infantry divisions are to be "streamlined" into mobile units less than half the size of their World War counterparts, after the general pattern of European armies. Expansion of an existing mechanized cavalry brigade into a full division also is contemplated.

SEP 17 1939

Tested At Fort Sam Houston

In a fast-moving provisional division, under test since early this year at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, will be the model for other infantry units, it was announced.

Moving in some 1,100 motor vehicles, the new division has been able to speed across country at an average of thirty miles an hour, contrasted with less than three miles covered by marching troops in the mass. At war strength, the division numbers 11,500 men, compared with 27,000 in American Expeditionary Force infantry divisions.

For the present, no changes are planned for the National Guard, it was said.

Put On Voluntary Basis

The announcement was coupled with the statement that the emergency expansion of the regular army by 17,000 men, ordered last week by President Roosevelt, would be effected entirely on a voluntary basis. The regular army reserve of 23,000 former soldiers will be held "for quick call when it is evident that their services are actually needed to meet a critical emergency," the War Department said.

In another defense development, the navy reported enlistments increased materially this week, in the wake of the President's order expanding the navy by 29,000 men. There were 1,320 first enlistments and 278 former sailors were reenlisted.

ARMY TO SPEED UP COMBAT DIVISIONS

Will Make Infantry Units Mobile, Less Than Half Size Of Old Groups

Navy Takes 1,000 Weekly

The normal naval recruiting rate has been about 1,000 a week. There is still a substantial list of applicants.

The army's "streamlining" order was in accord with recommendations of General Malin Craig, retiring chief of staff, who reported this summer the army lacked a single seasoned division "to seize, or hold naval and air bases, or to destroy enemy bases."

'SUPER-GUERRILLA' WAR IS ADVOCATED

Capt. Liddell Hart, In New Book, Warns Allies On Direct Offensive

Forces Should Not Be Wasted On Gamble With Long Odds, He Says

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 16—Present activities on the German Western front may be part of a carefully prepared and understood plan which has had advocates for a long while in Britain, Capt. Liddell Hart, international authority on armies and their use, indicates.

Captain Hart is the man who writes a large share of the British staff manuals, not to mention dozens of articles in various important English papers and some eighteen books on his specialty.

SEP 17 1939

Hart, eighteen months ago, was asked by the British Secretary of State for War to help formulate plans for the modernization of British defenses, and some of his ideas are included in a book to be published in America October 19, by Random House.

Advises Against Offensive

"A sober survey of the balance of forces," writes Captain Hart in "The Defense of Britain," "should rule out the idea that an offensive campaign could be waged on the northern frontiers of France with an effect proportionate to its cost.

"On that side the strategic defense is indicated.

"And in considering what contribution we (the British) might make to it, we have to take account not merely of the defense of France but of other contingencies linked with it. One of these is a fresh violation of Belgium's neutrality; another is an invasion of Holland.

Suggests Indirect Aid

"A reinforcement of their defense might be even more important than that of France herself, not least as an indirect aid to the latter. We, as well as the Belgians, paid so heavily for our failure to give prompt support to her defense in 1914, by reason of our participation in the French plan, that we should have learned by this hard experience."

And Captain Hart adds:

"It is not difficult to find places, most of them more suited to infantry, where a reinforcement might be required simultaneously with any that was called for in France. It would be unwise to leave ourselves without the means, by sending all we have to one quarter."

Yet Hart believes prospects of defense in Holland, Belgium and in theoretically "safe" Switzerland to be fair, and in the first named countries to be on the whole improved over 1914.

Recommends "Super-Guerrilla"

A "super-guerrilla" type of warfare is recommended by the captain, developed, he suggests, from the military history of Britain and using the most effective resources of the national character and physical possessions.

"The advantage of the general defensive could be enhanced, its risks diminished and its common value increased by combining it with a 'harassing offensive,'" he says. "This could be pursued by:

"(A) Carrying out local or limited attacks, carefully mounted as a surprise, and with the maximum fire-power, against weak points on the main front;

"(B) Utilizing artillery fire and air bombing to harass the enemy's routes of supply and rest camps;

"(C) Utilizing sea power to isolate, and then to concentrate a decisive superiority of land force against detached bases and territories which the opponent cannot reinforce . . . ;

"(D) Utilizing sea power and air power combined to cause a general disturbance of the enemy's system of supply and internal life."

Captain Hart insists that even modern weapons, the machine-gun, anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns, and mustard gas are peculiarly adapted to his form of warfare, one primary purpose of which would be to "convince the enemy that he has nothing to gain and much to lose by pursuing a war."

"To organize and train an army primarily for the offensive," says Hart in an analysis of the tactics of war, "is to stake the national fortunes on a very dark horse. As a policy it seems too much like the optimism of a man who makes a practice of backing hundred to one chances. . . .

"Analysis shows that in the majority of the battles which are engraved in the pages of history, the loser was the army which was the first to commit itself to the attack. . . . It is thus our responsibility to dissuade any Allies from endangering their defensive prospects by pursuing an offensive strategy."

Captain Hart continues with a suggestion which possibly has been followed to the letter on the Western front: "The first need is to make it clear that any force we lend shall not be wasted in an offensive gamble which would now have longer odds against it than ever before."

Discusses Infantry Role

The captain also sees a new approach to the problem of infantry in war. A proper approach should lead them to be regarded, he says, as a "corps d'elite, not as cannon fodder.

"Their essential value lies in their power to be, or at least to become, a stinging swarm of skilled individual fighters working in combination, not mere cogs in a machine-like operation . . . automatic soldiers, manufactured on the parade ground, are out of place on the modern battlefield."

Captain Hart believes that, between forces equal in armament and organization, modern war favors the infantry which can think and act for itself, which, he says, is equivalent to saying that modern war favors the democracies.

Armies Collapse

In the last war, he points out, the armies which collapsed were those of the autocratic states—Germany, Austria, Turkey and Russia in reverse chronological order. The best fighting troops were the Canadian and the Australian, he says. These felt perfectly free to criticize a foolish order, and did so generously.

On the old and ever-present question of the invasion of England, Captain Hart has some partially reassuring words. He considers all the standard methods, and finds possibilities but no certainties in these. He includes even such untried methods as parachute troops, and believes these most valuable as accessories to air bombardment.

and as a means of introducing saboteurs.

The only first-rate danger to the soil of England is still, he believes, an overwhelming air attack, and it is his idea that to be most effective this should (and probably would) come in the first weeks of war.

Value Of Air Force

"Of all types of force," says Hart, "an air force has the greatest mobility and flexibility, especially when it is operating in its own territory, where there is likely to be a close-linked chain of aerodromes.

"By contrast, the invader's resources are rigidly limited unless he cannot only make good his landing but occupy a sufficiently large stretch of the country to establish aerodromes. Only against some isolated colony, out of reach of air reinforcements from the mother country, does there seem to be a chance of overseas invasion succeeding under present conditions.

"In case of war that factor might seriously hamper our Mediterranean strategy, and prevent us applying our historic method of amphibious operations.

Expedition Might Fail

"A new Gallipoli expedition, against a different Mediterranean opponent, might not merely end in failure, but meet disaster at the outset.

"But England herself, in consequence, is at least more secure than ever before against invasion in the familiar sense.

"So far as there is any chance of a decisive stroke directly against us it would only come from overwhelming air attack. This would not be invasion in the normal sense of the word, since it would be delivered by forces operating from, and returning after each attack to, another country. It would really be super-scale raiding."

Although he wrote before war began, his implied opinion that air attacks against England might not be an immediately decisive factor have been borne out by events to date.

Militia to Get New Rifles

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 (AP)—The 107th Regiment of the New York National Guard is soon to be equipped with the army's new semi-automatic rifles, Major Gen. Albert H. Blanding, chief of the War Department's National Guard Bureau, said today.

HANES IS HOPEFUL OF QUICK RECOVERY

Under Secretary Says That At Last Money Is Coming Out Of Hiding

Cites Increase In Miscellaneous Tax Revenues In September

SEP 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 16—Expressing the opinion that money is at last "coming out of the storm cellar," John W Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, said today he was "extremely hopeful" that business recovery would absorb the majority of unemployment.

The undersecretary, a former Wall street investment banker, said in an inerview that he was "optimistic on the business outlook because the "profit motive is returning," whereas in the last five years people were "concerned chiefly with safety."

Cites Revenue Upswing

With the recent improvement in business sentiment, "money—the most timid of all commodities—has been coming out of storm cellars," he said. "This, together with such Treasury statistics as the upswing in miscellaneous revenues, indicates a healthy increase in the tone of business in my opinion."

The Treasury's miscellaneous internal revenue collections, which included manufacturers' excise taxes, amounted to $192,514,173 for the first two weeks of September, compared with $96,165,827 in the like period of last year.

Hanes made it clear that he believed American business would get a boost from the war in Europe. This strife, he said, has thrown a "large percentage" of competing production to wartime uses and leaves the United States in an advantageous position.

He declared that industry would be wise, however, to take steps to prevent the building up of "stepladder" prices, as was done during the World War.

Urges A "Spread"

"It would be smart if it spread this thing out—by stepping up production and keeping down the cost per unit basis," he said. "In this way, public purchasing power would not be cramped by high prices to the consumer."

As to evidences of business improvement, anes said that to his own personal knowledge, the textile industry in New England and the South is gathering momentum. In this connection, he said that in Gaston county, North Carolina, it had been impossible to complete a WPA project because of the demand for labor at mills.

No less significant, he asserted, is the reemployment under way in the durable goods indsutries, including steel. He said, however, he believed there is a need for a quick poll of unemployment in many industries.

One important factor in the business outlook, he said, is what he termed the "lag in the plant and equipment account of industry." This lag, he said, amounts to about $31,000,000,000. Ten years ago this account stood at about $42,000,000,000. Now, he said, it is around $31,000,000,000 whereas it should be approximately $52,000,000,000.

Funds Moving Faster

As a result of the quickening of business confidence, he said, business executives are now more freely putting accumulated company funds into plant equipment and improvement. He contrasted this with the fact that not so long ago some Government obligations were quoted at a minus interest rate.

"In other words," he said, "people were paying the Government money to keep their funds safe."

Thus far, however, he said, he has seen little evidence of increased equity, or enterprise, financing.

VAST ARMAMENTS URGED BY BARUCH

Army, Navy and Air Force So Strong as to Awe Powers Held Our Best Peace Insurance

SEP 17 1939

QUICK ACTION SEEN NEED

'Cash-and-Carry' Sales to All Recommended—Would Woo Latin-American Trade

N.Y.-SEPT. 16 (AP)

By The Associated Press.

There is one best way the United States can keep out of war, no matter what happens in Europe or Asia, Bernard M. Baruch said yesterday.

That way, he said, is to create immediately an army, navy and air force so strong that no power or possible combination of powers would risk fighting us.

Mr. Baruch said he believed it was possible to keep out of war and that every effort should be made by the nation to do so.

After his return from Washington, where he conferred with President Roosevelt and others on the subject of national defense, the man who had charge of industrial mobilization during the last great war as head of the War Industries Board, asserted that America is "seriously unprepared."

The outcome in both Europe and Asia is doubtful, he said, in an interview, adding "there is definitely a possibility which we must prepare against—a combination of powers might attack us on one or both oceans in the not distant future."

"God help the United States if they ever get by our one-ocean navy," he said. "They have what may seem to them reasonable inducements. They might try to take our vast resources from us.

Army "Very Deficient"

"Our army, as Generals Pershing and Drum have recently said, is, to put it mildly, very deficient, unable to put up any real defense against a strong invasion.

"The tragedy is that every one knows it except the people of the United States. Every foreign power knows it.

"This is no reflection on the personnel of our army; but the army is pitifully small, untrained, lacking modern arms and up-to-date munitions.

"Up to the present time our whole system of national defense has been based upon maintaining a navy good enough and strong enough to delay an enemy power's landing on our shores until we could raise, train and equip an adequate army—which might take a year.

"For the first time, that is no longer sufficient defense. We have a good one-ocean navy. But recent political realignments in Europe and Asia have opened up the possibility (let us pray it is not a probability) that combinations of powers could attack us on both oceans simultaneously without interference from the British Navy.

"In the last war it took us more than a year of costly effort to create an army, and there was great waste of life and money because of its meager training and equipment.

"We have still not taken far-reaching steps to organize an adequate enough national defense against all contingencies."

Present Plans Held Inadequate

While declining to go into details, Mr. Baruch said that preparedness plans thus far initiated in Washington, although large, were "inadequate" in scale, both as to industrial mobilization and as to creation of defense man power. He said he had confidence that the deficiencies would be filled as the authorities were cognizant of the changing need, but that it should be done with all speed possible.

Mr. Baruch outlined a course for this nation which he said would go far to keep us out of war no matter what happened.

Our foreign trade, he said, should be concentrated as much as possible in Latin America.

United States producers and exporters, he said, must exercise self-discipline to keep export prices to Latin America down to a level which "will make it enduring and keep competitors out of this hemisphere."

"We can destroy the barter system," he said, "if we keep our prices down low enough so the Latin Americans will always want to do their trading with us."

"Cash and Carry" Plan Urged

He thought we should also sell to warring nations and their neighbors, but only on the "cash and carry" plan in United States harbors, the goods to be shipped in foreign bottoms. This would remove a great potential cause of our involvement in war, he said. This policy would, of course, involve United States restriction of movement of our nationals.

But having laid down such a policy, he continued, we should be thoroughly prepared to enforce it. He explained:

"Our policy should be: 'Justice backed by might.'

"Neutrality is going to be just what the United States makes it. Secretary of State Hull has announced that we will stand on our rights under international law and I have unlimited confidence that he will make that policy a just one.

"But, realistically, those rights will be what we make them.

"Both the Germans and the English will hesitate to risk trouble with us by interfering with our foreign commerce if we are right backed by might."

Mr. Baruch, who has long argued publicly against war "profiteering," as a result of his wartime experiences, said he believed that in the event we do become involved in war, that the Administration would "put a ceiling over prices."

Second Week of the War

By The Associated Press

SUNDAY

Germany opens counter attack on Western Front to halt invading French forces who, thus checked in Northern end, shift attack to the South and report advances in New Vosges foothills. Canada declares war on Germany, following Great Britain by exactly a week. Germans and Poles fight bitterly for Warsaw. Germany reports capture of Lodz, textile center 80 miles southwest of Warsaw.

MONDAY

Polish Army halts German advance on Warsaw in battle raging from the Capital's gates to a point 60 miles westward. Warsaw radio says many houses are aflame and women and children killed and wounded. German bombers active over Polish forces. Hitler flies to battle area around Lodz. British troops land in France.

TUESDAY

Poles again turn back Germans at Warsaw. Nine German divisions (approximately 100,000 men) are shifted from Warsaw battle to other fronts, Warsaw radio says. French report advance units enter Saarbruecken suburbs on Western Front. Germans announce Polish resistance blasted in Radom sector and Nazis advancing rapidly on Lwow (Lemberg), Ukrainian capital.

WEDNESDAY

Germans announce Warsaw is encircled and Polish army is retreating Eastward; that Nazi troops continue push toward Lwow and that Modlin, Northern keystone to Warsaw defense, is surrounded. French form new war Cabinet, say several hundred thousand British troops arrive in France and that the Poilus move about a mile further into Nazi territory. Germany publishes contraband law as "defense" against British "blockade." President Roosevelt calls special session of Congress Sept.

SEP 17 1939

THURSDAY

Germans reported plunging deeper into heart of Poland, but giving ground to French troops on Western Front. Germans announce they have severed communications between Lublin and Lwow, southeast of Warsaw, and that Gdynia, Poland's only seaport, has fallen. Prime Minister Chamberlain tells House of Commons Britain would claim right to take "appropriate action" if Germany bombs civilians. Britain loses her 18th ship to German submarines or mines.

FRIDAY

Britain announces she has destroyed "a number of U-boats." French report new gains on Western Front as Germans tell of further gains in Poland. Unofficial estimates in Moscow are that about 1,000,000 recruits are being called up under regular annual draft. Unofficial talk of [illegible] heard in Berlin.

SATURDAY

Germany throws more divisions against Kutno in effort to crush Polish "Lost Army," tightens ring of steel around Warsaw, presses towards Lwow. First grand scale battle on Western Front appears developing with hundreds of thousands of French and Germans engaged. Britain presses convoys into service for merchant shipping; reports 21 British ships sunk in first two weeks of war.

Division Strength Varies In the Armies of Europe

SEP 17 1939

The following figures give the approximate war strength of the divisions of the various warring nations:

Germany

Infantry Division—15,224 officers and men.

"Panzer" (Armored) Division—425 to 475 tanks, 3,000 vehicles, 11,000 men.

30.24—3381

Poland

Infantry Division—About 12,000 officers and men.

Britain

Infantry Division—19,000 to 20,000 officers and men.

Armored Division—About 15,000 officers and men.

Motorized Division—About 12,000 officers and men.

France

Infantry Division — 367 officers and 14,050 men.

Italy

Infantry Division — About 17,000 officers and men.

The infantry division is the standard combat unit of all armies, but nearly all infantry divisions now have motor vehicles as an integral part of their transportation and supply systems. Special divisions, like cavalry and armored divisions, vary sharply in composition, organization and numbers.

IN PEACETIME LITTLE MORE THAN A HANDY NAVAL COALING STATION, DOVER TODAY WATCHES THE BRITISH NAVY POLICING THE ISLAND'S "SEA WALL."

FROM THE TURF CLAD WHITE CLIFFS IN THE SHADOW OF BATTLEMENTED DOVER CASTLE YOU GET OCCASIONAL GLIMPSES OF THE NAVY AT WORK.

THREE DESTROYERS STEAMING LEISURELY IN LINE FORMATION ENTER THE HARBOR AND DROP ANCHOR, THEIR LEAD-GREY HULLS BRIGHT IN THE MORNING SUN.

SEP 17 1939

BACK FROM CHANNEL DUTY THEY HAVE BEEN RELIEVED BY OTHER SHIPS OF THE EMERGENCY "BARRAGE SQUADRON."

THREE MILES FROM SHORE, SLIM ON THE PALE SEA, TWO PATROL SHIPS MOVE ALMOST IMPERCEITIBLY A HALF MILE APART. WESTWARD A THIRD STANDS OVER THE FRENCH COAST, BARELY VISIBLE THROUGH WHITE SEA MIST.

AWAY TO THE EAST IN A DIM IRREGULAR LINE A GROUP OF WAR CRAFT STAND AS POISED TO STRIKE.

THEY FADE AS CLOUDS SCREEN THE SUN, REAPPEAR AS VAGUE SHAPES IN THE DISTANCE. BEYOND THEM, INVISIBLE, YOU KNOW THERE ARE OTHER SHIPS OF THE "KING'S NAVY."

AN OCCASIONAL NAVAL SEAPLANE DRONES OVERHEAD, WHEELING ABOVE THE SEA LIKE THE GULLS THAT STILL, OBLIVIOUS TO WAR, CRY ACROSS THE RED-PEBBLED BEACH.

WHO LEADS THE 1939 VERSION OF THE WORLD WAR DOVER PA

UNDATED--SECOND ADD WAR DAY BY DAY (BY THE AP) XXX OF

ARMY OF 40,000 TO 50,000 POLES REPORTED TO HAVE JOINED WARSAW DEFENDERS.

SEP 17 1939

-- SUNDAY --

EXPLOSION SHAKES GERMAN AIR MINISTRY IN BERLIN. EXTENT OF DAMAGE AND CAUSE NOT IMMEDIATELY DISCLOSED. GERMAN ARMY ULTIMATUM TO WARSAW TO SURRENDER EXPIRES WITHOUT IMMEDIATE REPORT TO BERLIN WHETHER THREAT TO BOMBARD CAPITAL IS CARRIED OUT. GERMANS ORDER CIVILIANS TO LEAVE WARSAW UNDER THREAT OF BOMBARDMENT.

SN1228AED

DOVER PATROL (AMS BUDGET) (NEW)

BY JOHN W.CULMER

DOVER, ENGLAND, SEPT 16-(AP)-BRITAIN'S NAVY, TUNED TO FIGHTING EFFICIENCY WEEKS BEFORE WAR STARTED, HAS REESTABLISHED THE FAMED DOVER PATROL THAT KEPT CONSTANT WORLD WAR GUARD OVER THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

SEP 17 1939

SEA LIKE THE GULLS THAT STILL, OBLIVIOUS TO WAR, CRY ACROSS THE RED-PEBBLED BEACH.

WHO LEADS THE 1939 VERSION OF THE WORLD WAR DOVER PATROL IS AN ADMIRALTY SECRET.

WHETHER HE IS USING THE SAME TACTICS THAT WON MEDALS AND PROMOTION

FOR RETIRED ADMIRAL SIR ROGER KEYES IS THE NAVY'S BUSINESS.

ASHORE DOVER FOLK SAY THEY ARE GRIMLY CONFIDENT THAT LAND DEFENSES VASTLY IMPROVED FROM MAKESHIFT WORLD WAR STANDARDS ARE ADEQUATE TO MEET ENEMY ATTACKS.

DOVER HAS BITTER MEMORIES OF THE LAST WAR.

GERMAN SEAPLANES ATTACKED THE TOWN; ZEPPELINS DROPPED BOMBS. IN THE STRAIGHTS, SUBMARINES STRUCK AT MERCHANT VESSELS AND TORPEDOED A BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP.

"THINGS ARE DIFFERENT NOW," A RETIRED NAVY MAN SAID. "FRITZ GAVE US ONE GOOD LESSON. WE DON'T FORGET QUICKLY."

HF130PED

PARIS, SEPT 16-(AP)-PARIS CONTINUES TO EAT WELL DESPITE THE WAR.

THE FOLLOWING AMOUNT OF FOODSTUFFS WAS REGISTERED TODAY AT CENTRAL MARKET:

252,000 POUNDS OF MEAT.

127,600 POUNDS OF CHICKEN AND OTHER FOWL.

94,380 POUNDS OF BUTTER.

97,800 POUNDS OF EGGS.

229,240 POUNDS OF FISH EXCEPT SOLES AND OYSTERS.

225 TONS OF FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

SEP 17 1939

THE MAJORITY OF PRICES WERE NORMAL OR SLIGHTLY LOWER THAN THE LAST FEW DAYS, SINCE THE NATIONAL RAILWAYS BEGAN RETURNING TO NORMAL SCHEDULE.

PORTERS 01420 LET-960AED

LONDON, SEPT. 16--(AP)--LONDONERS LOOKED INQUISITIVELY AT THE SKY TODAY AND WONDERED AT THE ABSENCE OF THE BARRAGE OF BALLOONS WHICH USUALLY HOVER OVER THE CITY LIKE STUDY [illegible].

THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION EXPLAINED THAT THE GROUNDING OF THE BALLOONS, WHICH CARRY NETS TO TRAP LOW-FLYING ENEMY AIRPLANES, WAS DUE "SIMPLY TO A MEASURE OF ROUTINE".

IT ADDED THAT THE BALLOONS CAN BE HOISTED IF AND WHEN REQUIRED, AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE.

SEP 17 1939

SEP 17 1939

LONDON, SEPT. 16-(AP)-A NUMBER OF GERMAN AND AUSTRIAN REFUGEES WHO SERVED IN THE INTERNATIONAL BRIGADE IN THE SPANISH

1939

30.24 - 3383

30.24 — 3383

CIVIL WAR WERE REPORTED TODAY TO HAVE VOLUNTEERED TO FIGHT WITH BRITISH FORCES AGAINST GERMANY.

MISS ELEANOR RATHBONE, MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT, WHO IS CHAIRMAN OFNTHE BRITISH COMMITTEE FOR REFUGEES IN SPAIN, INFORMED THE GOVERNMENT THAT CAPT. FRANZ PIXNER AND LIEUT. COL. HANS RAHLE WROTE HER THAT THE BRIGADIERS WANTED TO JOIN IN THE "FIGHT AGAINST HITLER."

SEP 17 1939

THE NUMBER WHO WANTED TO VOLUNTEER WAS NOT DISCLOSED.

HR

BERLIN, SEPT 16-(AP)-LEGAL EXPERTS TONIGHT STUDIED GERMAN TENTATIVE LIST OF WAR CONTRABAND ARTICLES TO DETERMINE WHERE TO DRAW THE LINE BETWEEN OUTRIGHT WAR MATERIALS AND THOSE WHICH MIGHT PROVE OF INDIRECT AID TO THE ENEMY.

THEIR DECISION, INFORMED SOURCES SAID, WOULD BE A FACTOR IN DETERMINING THE REICH'S POLICY AT SEA.

SEP 17 1939

PRESENT LISTS ARE DIVIDED INTO THE CLASSIFICATIONS OF "UNCONDITIONAL" AND "CONDITIONAL" CONTRABAND.

"UNCONDITIONAL" CONTRABAND, WHICH WOULD BE DESTROYED OR SEIZED WITHOUT FORMALITY WHENEVER POSSIBLE, WAS DEFINED BY GERMAN SOURCES AS EVERYTHING HITHERTO RECOGNIZED AS SUCH IN INTERNATIONAL LAW.

THAT WOULD INCLUDE MUNITIONS, CHEMICALS, GUNS, FUEL, WAR VESSELS, WARPLANES, SPARE PARTS FOR WAR EQUIPMENT AND ALL OTHER EQUIPMENT AND MATERIAL FOR USE DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY IN BATTLE.

UNDER "CONDITIONAL" CONTRABAND THE LIST INCLUDES ARTICLES GERMAN SOURCES SAID WERE PLACED ON CONTRABAND LISTS BY BRITAIN IN CONTRAVENTION OF ACCEPTED INTERNATIONAL LAW.

GERMANY HAS SAID SHE MIGHT TREAT SUCH ARTICLESIAS CONTRABAND IF BRITAIN DOES.

THIS CLASSIFICATION COVERS MATERIAL THAT WOULD AFFECT THE CIVILIAN POPULATION IN WARTIME--FOODSTUFFS, LIVE ANIMALS, CLOTHING AND MACHINERY.

MR310PED

BERLIN, SEPT. 16--(AP)--THE HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT TWO FRENCH AVIATORS HAD BEEN BURIED BY THE GERMANS IN SAARBRUCKEN CEMETERY WITH MILITARY HONORS.

SEP 17 1939

THE COMMUNIQUE SAID THAT A FRENCH CAPTAIN AND LIEUTENANT, WHOSE PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN EAST WEDNESDAY, WERE GIVEN GERMAN MILITARY HONORS "FOR THE COURAGEOUS FIGHT THAT WON OUR ESTEEM."

SEVEN GERMAN SERGEANTS LOWERED THE COFFINS INTO GRAVES WHILE THREE GERMAN SOLDIERS SOUNDED TAPS, WHILE THE GERMAN

COMMANDING OFFICER LAID WREATHS ON THE GRAVES, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.

ROME, SEPT. 16--(AP)--A STEFANI (ITALIAN NEWS AGENCY) DISPATCH FROM THE POLISH-RUMANIAN FRONTIER TODAY SAID GERMAN WAR-PLANES HAD BOMBED THE ZALESZCYKI RAILROAD STATION.

"IN THE VILLAGE (WHERE THE POLISH GOVERNMENT SET UP TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS) WE SAW MANY FUNCTIONARIES OF THE FOREIGN AFFAIRS MINISTRY WITH BECK (FOREIGN MINISTER JOZEF BECK) IN A COLONEL'S UNIFORM."

SEP 17 1939

THE DISPATCH SAID THE POPULATION WAS IN PANIC DUE TO THE LACK OF BOMB SHELTERS, THAT BREAD WAS BEING RATIONED AND REFUGEES WERE JAMMING TRAFFIC. IT ADDED THAT MANY POLISH GOVERNMENT OFFICES HAD MOVED TO KUTY, ON THE RUMANIAN FRONTIER. THE FLOW OF FOOD STOCKS WAS REPORTED EXHAUSTED.

THE DISPATCH SAID COLUMNS OF AMBULANCES WERE BRINGING WOUNDED TO THE VILLAGE AND THEN RETURNING TO THE FRONT.

PRAGUE, SEPT. 16-(AP)-POLICE BROKE UP A CROWD WHICH WITNESSES SAID GATHERED AND CHEERED 19 POLISH PRISONERS OF WAR HERE TODAY. THE PRISONERS WERE BROUGHT [redacted] THROUGH PRAGUE AND TRANSFERRED FROM ONE RAILROAD STATION TO ANOTHER.

SEP 17 1939

STEIN'S 02230 -EDB-727PED

CGO NYC OUT

NEW YORK, SEPT. 16-(AP)-WESTERN UNION SAID TODAY THAT BECAUSE OF "UNSETTLED CONDITIONS" IN POLAND, PAYMENT OF MONEY ORDERS CABLED THERE HAD BEEN SUSPENDED. CABLE MESSAGES ARE STILL BEING ACCEPTED SUBJECT TO DELAY "AND POSSIBLE NON-DELIVERY.

SEP 17 1939

W1130AED

BRUSSELS, SEPT 16-(AP)-JOSEPH E.DAVIES, UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR TO BELGIUM, AND CAPT. J.A.GADE, NAVAL ATTACHE, ARRIVED TODAY FROM ROTTERDAM WHERE THEY LANDED FROM THE HOLLAND-AMERICA LINER NIEUW AMSTERDAM WHICH WAS DELAYED THREE DAYS BY THE BRITISH NAVY.

SEP 17 1939

NIGHT LEAD NEUTRALITY (WITH [redacted]

(ADVANCE)...WASHINGTON, SEPT. 16-(AP)-SENATOR CLARK (D-MO) ASSERTED TONIGHT THAT THE ISSUE IN THE IMPENDING CONGRESSIONAL STRUGGLE OVER REPEALING THE ARMS EMBARGO WAS WHETHER THIS COUNTRY WANTED TO TAKE SIDES IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

SEP 17 1939

30.24 — 3385

"THOSE WHO FAVOR THE COURSE OF TAKING SIDES AND FIGHTING SHOULD NATURALLY VOTE FOR REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO AS A STEP IN THAT DIRECTION," HE SAID IN A STATEMENT. "THOSE WHO FAVOR KEEPING OUT OF THE WAR SHOULD VOTE FOR THE RETENTION OF OUR PRESENT SAFEGUARDS AND THE ADDITION OF ANY OTHERS THAT MAY BE NECESSARY."

ALTHOUGH THE NEUTRALITY DEBATE HAS CONTINUED INTERMITTENTLY FOR MONTHS, THE MISSOURI SENATOR'S STATEMENT WAS REGARDED AS A FURTHER LAYING THE GROUNDWORK FOR THE FIGHT TO BE CONDUCTED BY HIMSELF, SENATORS BORAH (R-IDAHO), NYE (R-ND) AND OTHERS AT THE SPECIAL SESSION OPENING THURSDAY AGAINST PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S EFFORTS TO WIN REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO.

WHILE ADVOCATES OF REPEALING THE ARMS EMBARGO HAVE, FOR THE MOST PART, REMAINED SILENT, THE CLARK-BORAH-NYE BLOC HAS BEEN ACTIVELY ORGANIZING FOR THE STRUGGLE. BORAH BROADCAST AN APPEAL EARLIER THIS WEEK THAT THIS COUNTRY CONTINUE TO REFUSE TO SELL ARMS TO WARRING NATIONS.

SOME SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES, TOO, ALREADY HAVE BEEN "TAKING THE QUESTION TO THE COUNTRY."

SENATOR VANDENBURG (R-MICH) PRESENTED TO A REPUBLICAN RALLY AT GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., TODAY HIS VIEW THAT THE EMBARGO SHOULD NOT BE REPEALED.

"IN MY VIEW," HE SAID, "IT IS NOT 'NEUTRALITY' FOR US TO CHANGE THAT CODE TODAY TO MAKE IT FIT SOME FAVORED BELLIGERENT, NO MATTER WHAT OUR SYMPATHIES. IN MY VIEW, THAT IS UNNEUTRALITY. IT IS TRYING TO BE HALF IN THIS WAR AND YET TO SAFELY STAY OUT. I DO NOT BELIEVE THERE CAN BE ANY SUCH MIDDLE GROUND."

SEP 17 1939

30.24 — 3385

REPRESENTING THE OPPOSING VIEWPOINT ON THE QUESTION, SENATOR VAN NUYS (D-IND) TOLD A GATHERING OF INDIANA EDITORS AT FRENCH LICK THAT IF TO REPEAL THE ARMS EMBARGO OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW MEANT THAT ENGLAND AND FRANCE COULD OBTAIN SUPPLIES IN THIS COUNTRY WHILE GERMANY COULD NOT THAT COURSE WOULD BE "WELCOMED BY MANY AMERICANS

CLARK SAID HE THOUGHT EVENTS HAD DEMONSTRATED THE WISDOM OF THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE'S MAJORITY VOTE LAST SESSION TO POSTPONE ACTION ON NEUTRALITY LEGISLATION. CLARK MADE THE MOTION FOR DELAY WHICH WAS ADOPTED BY A 12 TO 11 VOTE.

"BUT FOR THE NECESSITY OF CALLING CONGRESS, WE WOULD ALREADY HAVE GONE VERY FAR IN THE DIRECTION OF GOVERNMENT BY DECREE," CLARK'S STATEMENT ADDED.

"ALREADY REMARKABLE THINGS HAVE TAKEN PLACE. ALREADY---BY WHAT AUTHORITY OF LAW IT IS NOT CLEAR---A WAR RESOURCES BOARD HAS BEEN SET UP WITH ITS DOMINANT PERSONNEL CLOSELY AFFILIATED WITH J.P.MORGAN AND COMPANY (NEW YORK BANKING HOUSE) TO SIEZE CONTROL OF ALL OF THE RESOURCES OF THE COUNTRY.

SEP 17 1939

"ALREADY, WHEN WE HAVE NOT EVEN A SERIOUS DISPUTE PENDING WITH ANY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD, THE WAR DEPARTMENT IS WORKING AS FEVERISHLY ON MOBILIZATION PLANS AS IF WAR WERE CERTAIN TO BE DECLARED TOMORROW. ALREADY PLANS ARE BEING DRAWN FOR THE ASSUMPTION OF EXTRAORDINARY POWERS, INCLUDING POSSIBLY A CENSORSHIP OF THE PRESS."

CLARK SAID THAT OPPONENTS OF THE PRESIDENT'S PROGRAM, WHOM HE

TERMED "INSULATIONISTS" AGAINST WAR RATHER THAN "ISOLATIONISTS," HAD NOT CONSIDERED THE POSSIBILITY OF A SENATE FILIBUSTER. HE CHARGED THAT "THE SUGGESTIONS OF A FILIBUSTER" HAD BEEN PUT OUT FROM ADMINISTRATION SOURCES AND WERE "DESIGNED TO PROMOTE GAG RULE AND STIFLE FREE AND FAIR DISCUSSION."

AT THE CAPITOL, LEGISLATORS WHO HAVE ARRAYED THEMSELVES ON OPPOSING SIDES OF THE NEUTRALITY QUESTION WERE UNANIMOUS IN THEIR PRAISE OF THE APPEAL OF COL.CHARLES A.LINDBERGH, OVER THE RADIO LAST NIGHT, THAT THIS COUNTRY STAY OUT OF EUROPE'S WARS.

SENATOR BORAH OBVIOUSLY WAS ELATED AT THE TONE OF LINDBERGH'S SPEECH, ALTHOUGH HE DECLINED TO COMMENT DIRECTLY ON IT.

SENATOR GURNEY (R-ND) OBSERVED THAT HE BELIEVED THE TALK "SHOULD HAVE A GOOD EFFECT ON PUBLIC OPINION."

SENATOR HAYDEN (D-ARIZ), AN ADVOCATE OF REPEAL OF THE EMBARGO, SAID LINDBERGH HAD SOUNDED WHAT WAS AN ALMOST UNIVERSAL SENTIMENT OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE---THAT THIS COUNTRY SHOULD NOT BECOME INVOLVED IN WAR.

"BUT I DID NOT TAKE IT," HE SAID, "THAT COLONEL LINDBERGH WAS SUGGESTING HOW WE MIGHT KEEP OUT OF WAR AND THAT SEEMS TO ME THE BIG QUESTION."

DURING THE DAY, FULTON LEWIS, JR., MUTUAL BROADCASTING COMPANY NEWS COMMENTATOR, ISSUED A STATEMENT IN EXPLANATION OF HOW LINDBERGH CAME TO MAKE THE ADDRESS, AND IN ORDER, HE SAID, "TO CLARIFY ANY CONJECTURES THAT THE APPEARANCE OR COLONEL LINDBERGH OR THE VIEWS HE EXPRESSED IN HIS RADIO BROADCAST MAY HAVE BEEN PROMPTED BY SOME GROUP OR INDIVIDUAL."

SEP 17 1939

LEWIS WENT ON TO SAY THAT HE HAD INVITED LINDBERGH THREE WEEKS AGO TO USE HIS TIME ON THE RADIO, BUT THAT THE COLONEL FIRST REFUSED, THEN ACCEPTED LAST SUNDAY, AFTER THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR.

RZ637PES

FOLO LONDON ALEX VAN OPSTAL

NEW YORK, SEPT 16-(AP)-THE ALEX VAN OPSTAL, BELGIAN MOTORSHIP SUNK IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL NEAR WEYMOUTH, LEFT NEW YORK SEPT. 6 FOR ANTWERP WITH EIGHT PASSENGERS AND 3,400 TONS OF GRAIN.

J.A.MAGH & CO., AGENTS HERE FOR THE BELGIAN LINE, SAID THE FOLLOWING PASSENGERS WERE ABOARD:

MISS GERMAINE FULCHIRON, TENAFLY, N.J., MARCEL HARPE, AN ESTHONIAN LIVING IN NEW YORK, JULES DEROECK, ARMAND ROTSAERT, MR. & MRS. AUGUST ANDRE, AND MRS.YOURI SMIRNOW ALL BELGIAN TOURISTS AND PATRICK DROUGHTON, BRITISH TOURIST.

LONDON REPORTS SAID THE PASSENGERS AND CREW WERE RESCUED BY A GREEK STEAMER AND TAKEN TO THE SOUTHERN COAST OF IRELAND.

THE BELGIAN VESSEL, REGULARLY IN CARGO SERVICE BETWEEN NEW YORK AND ANTWERP WITH OCCASIONAL CALLS AT ALBANY, N.Y., CARRIED A CREW OF 60.

SEP 17 1939

IN ADDITION TO THE GRAIN SHE CARRIED 1,000 TONS OF GENERAL CARGO.

WF1159AED

NIGHT LEAD UNDATED SEA WARFARE

BY JOHN A.MOROSO, 3RD

SEP 17 1939

ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER

(NY)-THE TOLL OF SHIPS SENT TO THE BOTTOM OR WRECKED ON FOREIGN SHORES ROSE TO AT LEAST 36 YESTERDAY (SATURDAY) AS GERMAN SUBMARINES AND BRITISH AND FRENCH WARSHIPS ENDED THE SECOND WEEK OF

30.24-3387

THEIR STRUGGLE FOR CONTROL OF THE SEVEN SEAS.

AS IF IN ANSWER TO THE BRITISH CLAIM THAT "MANY" SUBMARINES HAD BEEN DESTROYED, NAZI UBOATS STRUCK LIGHTNING BLOWS TO SINK THREE MORE BRITISH VESSELS, RAISING THE ENGLISH LOSS TO 21.

MEANWHILE, ENGLAND BLAMED GERMANY FOR THE DESTRUCTION OF THE NEUTRAL ALEX VAN OPSTAL, BELGIAN FREIGHTER, SUNK IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL NEAR WEYMOUTH. THE ENGLISH SAID A GERMAN MINE OR SUBMARINE SANK THE VESSEL, BUT THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT WITHHELD ACTION UNTIL THE VESSEL'S MASTER REPORTED.

THE KNOWN DEATH TOLL ROSE TO 183 WHEN 31 OF THE CREW OF THE TORPEDOED BRITISH FREIGHTER VANCOUVER CITY ARRIVED AT LIVERPOOL AND REPORTED THREE COMRADES WERE KILLED WHEN A U-BOAT ATTACKED WITHOUT WARNING SEPT. 14.

IN ADDITION, 100 FRENCH SAILORS WERE REPORTED KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION ABOARD THE WARSHIP PLUTON, A 4,773-TON CRUISER-MINELAYER, IN AN UNNAMED FRENCH HARBOR.

THE SHIP CASUALTY LIST SHOWED THE FOLLOWING:

BRITISH--21; GERMAN--9; NEUTRAL--5; FRENCH--1.

THE KNOWN GROSS TONNAGE LOSS ROSE TO 164,926 TONS, EXCLUDING CARGOES WORTH MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

SEP 17 1939

THE VAN OPSTAL CARRIED A CREW OF 60, 8 PASSENGERS, 3,400 TONS OF GRAIN AND 1,000 TONS OF GENERAL CARGO FROM ALBANY AND NEW YORK. NO LIVES WERE LOST.

SINKING OF THE CHEYENNE, AN OIL TANKER OWNED BY THE ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL COMPANY, A SUBSIDIARY OF STANDARD OIL OF N.J., WAS THE SECOND LOSS FOR THE COMPANY IN A WEEK. THE KENNEBEC WAS TORPEDOED

30.24-3387

SEPT. 9 AND HER CREW OF 32 SAVED.

THE OTHER NEW BRITISH LOSSES WERE THE TRAWLER DAVARA, DESTROYED IN THE IRISH SEA, AND THE FREIGHTER FANAD HEAD, TORPEDOED IN THE ATLANTIC NEAR THE ENGLISH COAST. THE CREWS WERE RESCUED.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS:

BRITAIN ANNOUNCED THE FAMED DOVER PATROL HAD BEEN REESTABLISHED AND THAT 70 SHIPS OF ALL NATIONS WERE BEING HELD AT DOVER FOR CONTRABAND SEARCH.

THE U.S.NAVY ANNOUNCED IT WOULD SEARCH ALL SHIPS BEFORE ALLOWING THEM TO USE THE PANAMA CANAL. IT SAID THIS WAS BEING DONE TO ENFORCE THE NEUTRALITY ACT.

BERLIN ISSUED A "WARNING" TO NEUTRAL NATIONS NOT TO SUBMIT TO THE BRITISH BLOCKADE.

THE BREMEN CONTINUED TO BE THE MYSTERY SHIP OF THE WAR. COUNT FRIEDRICH VON DER SCHULENBURG, NAZI AMBASSADOR TO RUSSIA, INTIMATED THAT THE $20,000,000 SHIP HAD BEEN CAPTURED BY ENGLAND AFTER "AMERICAN AUTHORITIES WERE SO KIND TO HOLD" HER FOR 22 HOURS. (SHE WAS DELAYED BY A CUSTOMS SEARCH IN NEW YORK). UNOFFICIAL BERLIN SOURCES HAVE SAID THE BREMEN REACHED A NEUTRAL PORT SAFELY.

G949PED

NIGHT LEAD SHIPS

BY ED WALLACE

NINE

SEP 17 1939

NEW YORK, SEPT. 16-(AP)-EIGHT AMERICAN LINERS, POISED FOR A DASH TO EUROPE TO BRING HOME UNITED STATES CITIZENS, IDLED AT THEIR PIERS TODAY, TRAPPED BY A STRIKE OF SEAMEN DEMANDING BONUSES FOR SAILING IN WAR ZONES.

WHILE MASTERS OF THE SHIPS WAITED IMPATIENTLY FOR SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEM, THE BRITISH LINER AQUITANIA, FIRST ARMED MERCHANTMAN OF A BELLIGERENT NATION TO REACH NEW YORK, LANDED 1,625 PASSENGERS, INCLUDING 669 AMERICANS. IN HER WAKE CAME THE ITALIAN SHIP REX, CARRYING 1,820 PASSENGERS, 1,454 OF THEM AMERICANS.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE AQUITANIA TOUCHED OFF A RESENTFUL CHORUS BY AMERICANS ABOARD BECAUSE OF A MESSAGE TO THEM FROM AMBASSADOR KENNEDY JUST BEFORE THE SHIP SAILED FROM ENGLAND.

ONE PASSENGER, GILBERT MILLER, THEATRICAL PRODUCER, SAID THE MESSAGE "SCARED THE GIZZARD OUT OF US."

MILLER SAID G.K.DONALD, AMERICAN CONSUL AT SOUTHAMPTON, CAME ABOARD THE SHIP AND READ THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE:

"AMBASSADOR KENNEDY FEELS THAT IN ADDITION TO OTHER STATEMENTS HE HAS MADE, IT IS HIS DUTY TO WARN AMERICAN CITIZENS TAKING PASSAGE ON VESSELS OF BELLIGERENT NATIONS THAT WHEN SUCH VESSELS ARE BEING CONVOYED, THE OPPOSING BELLIGERENT MAY TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY TO SINK THEM WITHOUT WARNING. THIS DOES NOT MEAN THAT CONVOYED VESSELS ARE MORE UNSAFE THAN UNCONVOYED VESSELS, BUT IT IS MADE PURELY TO ACQUAINT AMERICAN PASSENGERS WITH THE CONTINGENCIES THAT MAY ARISE."

MILLER SAID THAT AS A RESULT OF THE MESSAGE "MANY PEOPLE BECAME PANIC-STRICKEN." A PROTEST WAS SENT TO KENNEDY, WHO REPLIED HE WAS SORRY HE HAD CAUSED ALARM, BUT THAT HE FELT CONSTRAINED TO GIVE THE WARNING.

SEP 17 1939

IN WASHINGTON, STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS SAID KENNEDY DID THE RIGHT THING, BUT THEY GAVE A SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT VERSION OF THE MESSAGE. THEY STATED THAT KENNEDY SAID "WHEN SUCH VESSELS ARE BEING CONVOYED, THE OPPOSING BELLIGERENT MAY CLAIM THE RIGHT TO SINK WITHOUT WARNING.

THE AQUITANIA WAS CONVOYED FOR A DAY, THEN SAILED ON ALONE. HER AFTER DECK WAS CLEARED FOR ACTION AND TWO 12-POUNDERS WERE MOUNTED, ONE ON EITHER SIDE. OFFICERS SAID THEY WERE FOR DEFENSIVE PURPOSES, AND THAT NONE WERE MOUNTED FORWARD, BECAUSE THAT MIGHT BE CONSTRUED AS AN OFFENSIVE POSITION.

MEANTIME, OFFICIALS OF THE VARIOUS STEAMSHIP LINES, REPRESENTATIVE OF THE NATIONAL MARITIME UNION (CIO), REPRESENTING THE STRIKING SEAMEN, AND CAPT. GEORGE FRIED, SUPERVISING INSPECTOR OF THE NEW YORK DIVISION OF THE BUREAU OF MARINE INSPECTION AND NAVIGATION, STROVE TO END THE TIE-UP OF THE AMERICAN SHIPS.

THE STRIKE BEGAN YESTERDAY, WHEN 70 SEAMEN ABOARD THE AMERICAN TRADER AND 29 ON THE AMERICAN TRAVELER, BOTH OF THE U.S. LINES, REFUSED TO CAST OFF HAWSERS.

THE STRIKE, MEANWHILE, SPREAD TO SIX OTHER SHIPS SCHEDULED TO SAIL DURING THE DAY.

SEP 17 1939

THE STRIKERS DEMAND A $250 MONTHLY BONUS, $25,000 LIFE AND DISABILITY INSURANCE POLICIES AND A 40 PERCENT INCREASE IN PERSONNEL. THEY ALSO DEMANDED THAT IF A SHIP WERE INTERNED, WAGES CONTINUE DURING THE PERIOD OF INTERNMENT.

CHAIRMAN EMORY S.LAND OF THE MARITIME COMMISSION DECLARED THE PRESENT SITUATION WAS LIKELY TO BECOME A "VICIOUS CIRCLE OF INCREASING WAR RATES AND BONUS COMPENSATION FOR SHIP CREWS AND SERVICES

3024-3389

3024-3389

LIKE WE HAD IN 1918.

"WE'RE TRYING TO IRON OUT THE BONUS AND OTHER PROBLEMS AND FIND SOME STOP GAP UNTIL CONGRESS GIVES US LEGAL RELIEF. WE'VE GOT TO HAVE SOME KIND OF CONTROL."

OTHER SHIPS HALTED BY THE STRIKE WERE THE SCANSTATES OF THE AMERICAN SCANTIC LINE, BOUND FOR OSLO AND COPENHAGEN; THE IROQUOIS, OF THE NEW YORK AND CUBA MAIL LINE, UNDER CHARTER TO THE UNITED STATES LINES; THE LIBERTY, OPERATED BY THE HAMPTON ROADS LINE; THE BLACK DIAMOND LINE STEAMER, BLACK GULL; THE ~~CALMAR,~~ OF THE AMERICAN ORIOLE LINE, AND THE EXCAMBION, AN AMERICAN EXPORT LINE SHIP WITH 123 PASSENGERS ABOARD, BOUND FOR MEDITERRANEAN PORTS. SHE WAS TO PICK UP AMERICANS ON THE RETURN TRIP, FROM ITALY AND SOUTHERN FRANCE.

A SWEDISH-AMERICAN LINER, THE KUNGSHOLM, SAILED TODAY FOR GOTHENBERG, SWEDEN, WITH 214 PASSENGERS, INCLUDING 12 AMERICANS. THREE SHIPS OF THE HOLLAND-AMERICA LINE ALSO SAILED FOR ROTTERDAM; THE STATENDAM, WITH 300 PASSENGERS INCLUDING GROVER WHALEN, PRESIDENT OF THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR, THE NOORDAM, BEARING 23 PASSENGERS, NONE AMERICANS, AND THE WESTERNLAND, WHICH HAD NO PASSENGERS BUT CARRIED A HEAVY CARGO.

THE U.S.LINES' WASHINGTON AND AMERICAN SHIPPER ARE EXPECTED TO REACH NEW YORK MONDAY WITH 1,904 PASSENGERS, MOST OF THEM AMERICANS.

MJ-G940PED

SEP 17 1939

TO COVER DEVELOPMENTS, THE FOLLOWING CHANGES SHOULD BE MADE IN NIGHT LEAD SHIPS (BY WALLACE):

IN FIRST PGH, MAKE IT READ AT START, "NINE AMERICAN, ETC. (IN PLACE OF EIGHT).

IN 16TH PGH, BEGINNING "OTHER SHIPS, ETC." CORRECT YOUR COPY TO READ X X X UNDER CHARTER TO THE UNITED STATES LINES; THE ACADIA, OF THE EASTERN STEAMSHIP LINES, UNDER CHARTER TO THE UNITED STATES LINES; THE ST.JOHN, SIMILARLY CHARTERED FROM THE EASTERN STEAMSHIP LINES; THE BLACK DIAMOND LINE STEAMER, BLACK GULL; THE COLLAMER OF THE AMERICAN FRANCE LINE (CORRECT), AND THE EXCAMBION, ETC.

AFTER 16TH PGH, ENDING X X X SOUTHERN FRANCE, THE FOLLOWING SHOULD BE INSERTED:

THE LIBERTY OF THE ORIOLE LINE, A FREIGHTER CHARTERED FROM THE MARITIME COMMISSION, SAILED FOR LIVERPOOL.

A SWEDISH-AMERICAN LINER, ETC., PICKING UP IN 17TH PGH PREVIOUS.

G1054PED

FIRST LEAD SHIPS

NEW YORK, SEPT 16-(AP)-THE BRITISH LINER AQUITANIA, THE FIRST ARMED MERCHANTMAN OF A BELLIGERENT NATION TO REACH NEW YORK SINCE THE EUROPEAN WAR STARTED, ARRIVED TODAY WITH 1,625 PASSENGERS, 669 OF THEM AMERICANS.

SEP 17 1939

THEIR NERVES WERE RAGGED AFTER THE CAUTIOUS CROSSING AND MANY OF THE AMERICANS EXPRESSED RESENTMENT OVER A WARNING THEY SAID AMBASSADOR JOSEPH P.KENNEDY HAD SENT THEM BEFORE THE SHIP SAILED. THE MESSAGE, SAID GILBERT MILLER, THEATRICAL PRODUCER, "SCARED THE GIZZARD OUT OF US."

THE CUNARD LINER'S AFTER DECK WAS CLEARED FOR ACTION THE DAY BEFORE SHE SAILED. ABOUT 100 FEET OF RAILING WAS REMOVED AT THE STERN AND TWO 12-POUNDERS WERE MOUNTED, ONE ON EITHER SIDE.

OFFICERS SAID THE GUNS WERE PURELY FOR DEFENSIVE PURPOSES. NO WEAPONS WERE MOUNTED FORWARD, THEY SAID, BECAUSE THERE THEY MIGHT HAVE BEEN CONSTRUED AS BEING IN AN OFFENSIVE POSITION.

THE SHIP HAD A DESTROYER CONVOY FOR ONE DAY AND THEN SAILED ALONE, BUT CAPT.GEORGE GIBBONS, MASTER OF THE LINER, DECLINED TO TELL WHAT COURSE HE HAD FOLLOWED IN THE SIX-DAY VOYAGE. PASSENGERS ASSUMED THE SHIP HAD GONE FAR NORTH BECAUSE THEY SAW NO OTHER VESSELS AND THE WEATHER WAS COLD AND FOGGY.

MILLER SAID G.K.DONALD, AMERICAN CONSUL AT SOUTHAMPTON, SUMMONED THE AMERICANS TO THE LOUNGE JUST BEFORE SAILING AND READ THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE FROM AMBASSADOR KENNEDY:

"AMBASSADOR KENNEDY FEELS THAT IN ADDITION TO THE OTHER STATEMENTS HE HAS MADE, IT IS HIS DUTY TO WARN AMERICAN CITIZENS TAKING PASSAGE ON VESSELS OF BELLIGERENT NATIONS THAT WHEN SUCH VESSELS ARE BEING CONVOYED, THE OPPOSING BELLIGERENT MAY TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY TO SINK THEM WITHOUT WARNING. THIS DOES NOT MEAN THAT CONVOYED VESSELS ARE MORE UNSAFE THAN UNCONVOYED VESSELS, BUT IT IS MADE PURELY TO ACQUAINT AMERICAN PASSENGERS WITH THE CONTINGENCIES THAT MIGHT ARISE."

SEP 17 1939

MILLER SAID "THIS VERY NEGATIVE MESSAGE" LEFT THE ASSEMBLY "MOST IRATE AND RESENTFUL."

"THE SPIRIT OF THE SHIP UP TO THAT TIME WAS VERY HIGH," HE EXPLAINED. "THAT (THE MESSAGE) SCARED THE GIZZARD OUT OF US. HEARING THAT, MANY PEOPLE BECAME PANIC-STRICKEN."

ROBERT J.LANDRY, RADIO EDITOR OF VARIETY, THE THEATRICAL WEEKLY, SAID HE HAD "NEVER SEEN SUCH BAD MOB PSYCHOLOGY IN ALL MY LIFE OF PROFESSIONAL THEATRE-GOING."

"THIS STATEMENT DID NOT TELL US WHAT TO DO, AND THE CONSUL REFUSED TO ANSWER ANY QUESTIONS OR TAKE ANY RESPONSIBILITIES," HE SAID.

VAN VECHTEN SHAFFER, BANKER OF CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA, AND A NEPHEW OF CARL VAN VECHTEN THE WRITER, ASKED THE GATHERING WHETHER IT WAS AGREED TO PROTEST TO KENNEDY THE TONE OF THE MESSAGE.

THE MESSAGE WAS SENT.

SEP 17 1939

KENNEDY REPLIED THAT HE WAS SORRY HE HAD CAUSED ANY ALARM, BUT THAT HE FELT CONSTRAINED TO WARN THE PASSENGERS.

SIR ASHLEY SPARKS, RESIDENT DIRECTOR IN NEW YORK OF THE CUNARD WHITE STAR LINE, SAID HE THOUGHT THE AMBASSADOR'S MESSAGE "WAS PERFECTLY ALL RIGHT FROM THE AMBASSADOR'S POINT OF VIEW, BUT I CERTAINLY THINK IT DISTURBED THE PEOPLE WHO HAD TO SAIL."

HE SAID HE BELIEVED ONLY SIX PASSENGERS LEFT THE SHIP AFTER THE MESSAGE WAS READ.

MEANWHILE THE DEPARTURE OF THREE AMERICAN SHIPS, ORDERED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT TO PICK UP STRANDED AMERICANS IN EUROPE, WAS HELD UP BY A STRIKE OF SEAMEN DEMANDING A CASH BONUS FOR ENTERING WAR ZONES.

THE SHIPS AFFECTED WERE THE SCANSTATES OF THE AMERICAN-SCANTIC LINE, AND THE UNITED STATES LINERS AMERICAN TRAVELER AND THE AMERICAN TRADER WITH 39 AND 53 PASSENGERS RESPECTIVELY, MOST OF THEM BRITONS. THE LAST TWO LINERS WERE SCHEDULED TO SAIL LAST NIGHT FOR ENGLISH PORTS, AND THE SCANSTATES FOR OSLO AND COPENHAGEN.

GANGPLANKS HAD BEEN HAULED IN AND THE CREW DEMANDED A BONUS OF

30.24-3391

$250 A MAN FOR RUNNING THROUGH SUBMARINE-INFESTED WATERS.

THE AQUITANIA LEFT SOUTHAMPTON LAST SATUEDAY NIGHT, DROPPED DOWN TO PORTSMOUTH AND ANCHORED OVER NIGHT. IT SAILED IN THE MORNING WITH A DESTROYER CONVOYING IT UNTIL SOMETIME SUNDAY NIGHT.

SHIP'S OFFICERS WERE RELUCTANT TO TALK, AND PASSENGERS SAID NO OTHER CRAFT WAS SIGHTED UNTIL TWO DAYS AGO WHEN THEY SIGHTED A CANADIAN PLANE, AND YESTERDAY SAW AN AMERICAN DESTROYER.

CAPT.GEORGE FRIED, ETC. PICKING UP AT SIXTH GRAPH PREV.

THE ITALIAN LINER REX, FIRST ITALIAN VESSEL TO SAIL INTO NEW YORK HARBOR SINCE THE WAR BEGAN, ARRIVED CARRYING 1,820 PASSENGERS, 1,454 OF THEM AMERICANS.

SEP 17 1939

AMONG THE PASSENGERS WERE JAMES H.R.CROMWELL AND HIS WIFE, THE FORMER DORIS DUKE; ARCHBISHOP JOSEPH SCHREMBS, OF CLEVELAND; GIOVANNI MARTINELLI, THE OPERATIC TENOR; MONSIGNOR ALEXANDER SYSKI, A PROFESSOR AT THE POLISH SEMINARY, ORCHARD LAKES, MICH., AND TWELVE CHESTER HALE GIRLS--MEMBERS OF A DANCING TROUPE WHICH WAS STRANDED FOR A WHILE ON THE RIVIERA.

THE REX SAILED FROM GENOA SEPTEMBER 8 AND FROM NAPLES THE FOLLOWING DAY. MANY OF THE PASSENGERS COMPLAINED ABOUT THE INCREASED TRAVEL RATES. CROMWELL SAID HE FIGURED HE PAID ALMOST THE DOUBLE RATE, PAYING ABOUT $2,000 FOR ACCOMODATIONS OF TWO ROOMS FOR HIMSELF, HIS WIFE, AND HER MAID.

CROMWELL SAID HE THOUGHT "THE UNITED STATES WILL BE DRAGGED INTO WAR."

"WE HAVEN'T MISSED YET," HE SAID. "WE HAVE TO CARRY ON OUR COMMERCE WITH THE REST OF THE WORLD, AND I DON'T SEE HOW THAT CAN BE DONE WITHOUT RUNNING AFOUL OF GERMAN SUBMARINES."

CAPT.GEORGE FRIED, ETC 6TH GRAPH.

30.24—3391

ADD CHRONOLOGICAL UNDATED SHIPS SUNK X X X BY GREEK VESSEL.

SEPT. 15--IRISH FREIGHTER FANAD HEAD, 3,200 TONS, EN ROUTE TO BELFAST FROM MONTREAL, SUNK IN ATLANTIC OFF IRELAND BY SUBMARINE.

SEPT. A[illegible] GREEK OIL TANKER OWNED BY ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL CO., [illegible] OIL [illegible], SUBSIDIARY, 8,825 GROSS TONS, TORPEDOED AND SHELLED BY GERMAN SUBMARINE OFF SOUTHWEST COAST OF IRELAND, CREW RESCUED BY NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER IDA BAKKE.

SEPT. 15--ALEX VAN OPSTAL (BELG), [illegible] GROSS TONS, SUNK NEAR WEYMOUTH IN ENGLISH CHANNEL. CREW OF 40 AND 8 PASSENGERS RESCUED BY GREEK STEAMER ATLANTICOS, TAKEN TO SOUTHERN IRELAND. BRITISH CLAIMED TORPEDO; CAPTAIN OF SHIP THOUGHT IT HIT MINE.

(EDS: ABOVE SHOULD BE SUBSTITUTED FOR SEPT. 15 UNIDENTIFIED BELGIAN STEAMER SUNK).

WF121APED

ADD JAPS. NAPLES - SEPT 16 XXX JALES 11

GENERAL TERAUCHI HEADED THE MILITARY MISSION WHICH WAS EN ROUTE TO GERMANY FOR THE NUERNBERG NAZI PARTY CONGRESS WHEN THE RUSSIAN-GERMANY NON-AGGRESSION PACT WAS SIGNED. THE MISSION WENT SIGHTSEEING AFTER [illegible] RECEIVING ORDERS NOT TO GO TO GERMANY BECAUSE OF THE AGREEME

SEP 17 1939

LATER IT WAS ARRANGED FOR GENERAL TERAUCHI TO CONFER ALONE WITH RIBBENTROP.

FCT

BUCHAREST—SEPT 16 ADD 1ST.

THE PACT, WHICH WAS RENEWED THREE YEARS AGO, THESE SOURCES SAID, STIPULATES THAT THE LEAGUE MUST DECIDE WHO IS THE AGGRESSOR AND RUMANIA COULD ACT ONLY AFTER SUCH A DECISION WAS MADE AT GENEVA. THIS WOULD MEAN CONSIDERABLE DELAY, DIPLOMATS POINTED OUT, EVEN IF THE INTERNATIONAL BODY COULD BE ASSEMBLED AT THIS TIME.

SEP 17 1939

NEW YORK AND PARIS

CROMWELL SAID HE HAD INTENDED GOING TO GERMANY TO STUDY TH ECONOMIC SITUATION WHEN HE AND MRS.CROMWELL SAILED ON AUGUST 2 IN BRUSSELS HE WAS ADVISED AGAINST IT.

HE WAS IN PARIS WHEN THE FIRST AIR RAID ALARM SOUNDED AFTER THE START OF HOSTILITIES. MRS.CROMWELL WAS IN DEAUVILLE. THEY BROUGHT HOME WITH THEM THE GAS MASKS THEY HAD BOUGHT IN LO NDON.

ASKED ABOUT HIS PLANS FOR RUNNING FOR CONGRESS, HE SAID:

"IF I DO GET TO CONGRESS I'LL TAKE MY GAS MASK WITH ME."

IN A PREPARED STATEMENT CROMWELL SAID:

"EVEN THOUGH THE AMERICAN PEOPLE FEEL THEY HAVE NO INTEREST IN THIS BATTLE OF 'LAW AND ORDER' VERSUS 'MIGHT IS RIGHT,' I CANNOT BELIEVE THAT THEY WOULD KNOWINGLY SWING OUR TREMENDOUS ECONOMIC POWE AGAINST THE DEMOCRACIES. YET THIS IS PRECISELY THE EFFECT OF OUR EXISTING SO-CALLED NEUTRALITY ACT.

SEP 17 1939

"TO BE NEUTRAL HAS ALWAYS BEEN, HERETOFORE, TO ACCORD THT SAME PRIVILEGES TO BOTH BELLIGERENTS. IT SURELY CANNOT MEAN TO DENY THE SAME PRIVILEGES TO BOTH BELLIGERENTS WHEN SUCH DENIAL IS VERY LIKELY TO ASSURE THE DEFEAT OF ONE.

"THE ADVANTAGE OF THE DEMOCRACIES WHICH OFFSETS THE STRATEGIC SUPERIORITY OF THE NAZIS IS THE FACT THAT GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE HAVE SEVERAL BILLIONS OF CREDITS IN AMERICA AND THROUGH THEIR CONTROL OF THE SEA COULD PURCHASE AND TRANSPORT WAR MATERIALS FROM THE UNITED STATES.

"WHEN, THEREFORE, WE DENY TO THE DEMOCRACIES THE TRADITIONAL PRIVILEGE OF PURCHASING WAR MATERIALS FROM A NEUTRAL NATION WE ARE DELIBERATELY DESTROYING THEIR SOLE ADVANTAGE OVER THE NAZIS AND, IN MY OPINION, PROBABLY UNDERWRITING THEIR EVENTUAL DEFEAT."

CROMWELL SAID HE AND HIS WIFE WOULD GO DIRECT TO THEIR HOME IN SOMERVILLE, N.J. HE HAD NOTHING TO SAY ABOUT HIS IMMEDIATE POLITICAL PLANS, EXPLAINING HE HAD BEEN "OUT OF TOUCH."

THE REX HAD NO CONVOY NOR DID IT TAKE ANY DEFENSE MEASURES, SAVE THAT ITALIAN FLAGS WERE PAINTED ON BOTH SIDES OF THE SHIP AND ON THE SUN DECK.

ADD BASEL—SEPT. 16 EXAGGERATED

AFTER GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS EARLIER THIS WEEK AND FIERCER ATTACKS THIS MORNING, THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED NOT ONLY HOLDING THEIR GAINS BUT DRIVING CLOSE TO BORG, TEN KILOMETERS (6 1/4 MILES) FROM THE FRONTIER.

SEP 17 1939

THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED SLIGHTLY MORE SUCCESSFUL IN THE SOUTHEAST AT THE COST OF HEAVY CASUALTIES.

30.24-3393

30.24-3393

A70

AT THE TIME THE GERMAN ATTACK WAS LAUNCHED FROM THE EDGE OF THE NIED RIVER PLATEAU DOMINATING SAARLAUTERN (SAARLOUIS), THE FRENCH, BY A SERIES OF CAREFULLY-PLANNED LOCAL ATTACKS, HELD POSITIONS ALONG THE INTERNATIONAL RAIL LINE DOMINATING THE VILLAGE OF KEMRICHHEMMERSDORF AND GAINED A FOOTHOLD ON THE PLATEAU TO THE SOUTH.

THE GERMANS, IN MASS ATTACKS BEHIND TANKS REMINISCENT OF WORLD WAR DAYS, WERE SAID TO HAVE APPARENTLY WON BACK PART OF THE PLATEAU BUT THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED HOLDING THE MAJORITY OF THEIR GAINS.

SEP 17 1939

THE FRENCH PRESSURE ON SAARLAUTERN CONTINUED, WITH THE POILUS' WARNDT FOREST POSITIONS APPARENTLY UNCHANGED BY THE LEFT WING OF THE GERMANS IN THE NIED DRIVE AND BY THE RIGHT WING OF THEIR SAARBRUECKEN FRONT.

AT SAARBRUECKEN, THE GERMAN DEFENDERS APPARENTLY RELIED ON THE CITY'S FORTS TO WITHSTAND FRONTAL ATTACKS BUT LAUNCHED TWO WING ATTACKS TO THE SOUTHWEST AND THE SOUTHEAST.

THE SOUTHWESTERN DRIVE WAS SAID TO HAVE GAINED LITTLE BUT UNOFFICIAL GERMAN SOURCES DECLARED THE FRENCH WERE FORCED BACK TO POSITIONS NEAR THEIR FRONTIER NORTH OF SAARGUEMINES BY THE SOUTH-EASTERN ATTACK.

IN THE PALATINATE FOREST, WHERE THE FRENCH HAVE BEEN SLOWLY PENETRATING WITH PATROLS OPERATING FROM THE BITCHE-WISSEMBOURG ROAD, THE GERMANS LAUNCHED ATTACKS FROM THEIR PRELIMINARY SIEGFRIED DEFENSE FORTIFICATIONS IN THE LUDWIGSWINKEL-FISCHBACH AREA.

THEY WERE REPORTED TO HAVE SWEPT BACK FRENCH PATROLS TO TRENCHES NEAR THE FRONTIER LINES, CLEARING OUT THE CENTER OF THE FOREST BUT LEAVING THE FRENCH HOLDING THE WESTERN PART NORTH OF BITCHE AND HIGH HILL POSITIONS NEAR HOHENBOURG CASTLE.

ACTION ALONG THE EASTERN SECTION OF THE LINE FROM WISSEMBOURG TO LAUTERBOURG WAS LIMITED TO ARTILLERY DUELS.

GE30PED

C71

SEPT 16

TOKYO--FIRST ADD MOSCOW TRUCE.

SEP 17 1939

AN AGREEMENT.

IT WAS REPORTED RELIABLY THAT

THE ARMISTICE FOUND THE SOVIET-MONGOLIAN TROOPS IN A POSITION WITHIN THE DISPUTED KHALKA RIVER AREA AFTER REINFORCED TROOPS FOUGHT BACK DURING THE THIRD MAJOR BATTLE OF NOMONHAN HILL.

THE JAPANESE CONTEND THE KHALKA IS THE TRUE BORDER BETWEEN MANCHOUKUO AND OUTER MONGOLIA; THE RUSSIANS CLAIM IT IS EAST OF THE STREAM.)

SOME REPORTS SAID THAT MONGOL TANKS, IN A NORTHERN FLANKING MANEUVER REACHED KANJURMIAO, 70 KILOMETERS (ABOUT 43 1/2 MILES) NORTHWEST OF NOMONHAN.

DOMEI, OFFICIAL JAPANESE NEWS AGENCY, REPORTED THAT CHANG CHUMIAO, 50 KILOMETERS (ABOUT 31 MILES) FROM NOMONHAN, WAS SHELLED BY ARTILLERY.

THE BORDER WARFARE IN WHICH THE FIGHTING HAS BEEN ALMOST CONTINUOUS SINCE MAY 11 WAS SAID TO HAVE INFLICTED HEAVY LOSSES

ON BOTH SIDES AND CAUSED BOTH TO RUSH REINFORCEMENTS TO THE BARREN PRAIRIE.

C72 SFP 17 1939

THREE MAJOR BATTLES HAVE BEEN FOUGHT IN THE VICINITY OF NOMONHAN ON MAY 24, JULY 2 AND AUG. 20. THE JAPANESE CLAIMED VICTORY IN THE FIRST TWO, IN WHICH THEY REPORTED THEY DROVE ALL EXCEPT REMNANTS OF THEIR OPPONENTS ACROSS THE KHALKA.

WB1010PED

EDITORS: SEPT. 16

TO COVER DEVELOPMENTS, THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER 4TH GRAPH, BUDAPEST, NIGHT LEAD POLISH X X X ON THEM.

(IN BERLIN, DNB, THE OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY, REPORTED THE NAZI ARMY HAD GIVEN CITIZENS OF WARSAW 12 HOURS, UNTIL 3 A.M. (9 P.M. EST SATURDAY), TO LEAVE THE CITY, WHICH WAS DECLARED AN ACTIVE WAR AREA.

(STILL IN WARSAW AND CUT OFF FROM OUTSIDE COMMUNICATION WERE SIX UNITED STATES CONSULAR OFFICERS, HEADED BY JOHN K.DAVIS, A VETERAN OF 30 YEARS IN THE FOREIGN SERVICE).

POLISH AUTHORITIES IN BUDAPEST REPORTED A POLISH ARMY OF UNANNOUNCED STRENGTH HAD ARRIVED IN WARSAW TODAY AFTER BREAKING THROUGH GERMAN FORCES IN POMERANIA AND IMMEDIATELY REINFORCED WARSAW'S DEFENDERS.

THE BATTERED CAPITAL, ETC., 5TH GRAPH.

G746PED SFP 17 1939

MADE TO DEVELOP AL[illegible]

ADD RIME - SEPT 16 - ITALY

ITALY WAS DESCRIBED AS HAVING ENOUGH ZINC AND ALUMINUM AND ALMOST ENOUGH LEAD, BUT INSUFFICIENT COPPER, NICKEL AND TIN.

COTTON PRODUCTION, WHICH AMOUNTED LAST YEAR TO 44,000 BALES, WOULD BE INCREASED AND THE OUTPUT OF ARTIFICIAL COTTON, SILK AND WOOL STEPPED UP. A LARGE FACTORY AT FERRARA HAS BEEN ASSIGNED TO PRODUCE ARTIFICIAL RUBBER.

THE FOOD SUPPLY IS ADEQUATE, ACCORDING TO GAYDA, BUT HOUSEWIVES WERE URGED TO EXERCISE THE SAME ECONOMY AS INDUSTRY.

ITALY'S ECONOMIC POLICY WAS TERMED "RESOLUTE REDUCTION OF CONSUMPTION AND INTENSIVE DEVELOPMENT OF ALL PRODUCTION IN AGRICULTURAL, MINERAL AND INDUSTRIAL FIELDS."

THIS WOULD NOT ONLY PROVIDE HOME SUPPLIES, GAYDA WROTE, BUT WOULD ALLOW EXPORTS TO THE WORLD MARKETS. THESE, HE SAID, WOULD BRING IN FOREIGN MONEY ESSENTIAL IN PURCHASING RAW MATERIALS THAT ARE INCREASINGLY DIFFICULT TO OBTAIN BECAUSE OF WARTIME RESTRICTIONS, GENERAL CONSERVATION AND HIGHER FREIGHT AND SHIPPING RATES.

SFP 17 1939 W/SW514PED

ADD-LONDON-SEPT-16 GERMANS

CLOSELY CONNECTED WITH RUSSIA'S POSITION ALSO WAS TURKEY WITH WHOM BRITAIN AND FRANCE HAVE MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACTS COVERING "WAR IN THE MEDITERRANEAN AREA."

SFD 17 1939

TURKEY'S ATTITUDE TOWARD THE EUROPEAN WAR THUS FAR HA

TURKEY'S ATTITUDE TOWARD THE EUROPEAN WAR THUS FAR HAS BEEN GOVERNED APPARENTLY BY ITALY'S NEUTRALITY. BUT TURKEY AND RUSSIA HAVE CLOSE RELATIONS AND THE EFFECT OF RUSSIAN DIPLOMACY ON TURKEY IS A MATTER OF DISCUSSION IN POLITICAL QUARTERS HERE.

MO1119AED

30.24-3395

30.24 3395

SEPT 16

LONDON--SECOND ADD NIGHT LEAD BRITISH X X X SINEWS OF WAR.

TO GERMAN PROTESTS THAT THE BLOCKADE WAS "ILLEGAL," THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION MADE TART ANSWER. IT WAS ANNOUNCED THE NAVY WAS FOLLOWING "THE PRACTICE ESTABLISHED DURING THE LAST WAR NOT ONLY BY GREAT BRITAIN, BUT BY THE UNITED STATES."

THE GERMAN PROTEST CONTENDED THE BLOCKADE WAS ILLEGAL ON THE GROUND THE BRITISH CONTRABAND LIST INCLUDED GOODS OTHER THAN ARMAMENTS.

THE COMMUNIQUE MENTIONING "THE IMPORTANCE TO THE GERMAN MILITARY MACHINE OF PETROLEUM IMPORTS IS WELL KNOWN," AND THEN REITERATED THAT 28,500 TONS OF CONTRABAND PETROLEUM HAD BEEN CAPTURED DURING THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 9 AND THAT CARGOES INCLUDING LARGE QUANTITIES OF IRON ORE, MANGANESE, WOOD PULP AND PHOSPHATE HAD BEEN SEIZED DURING THE SAME PERIOD.

SEP 17 1939

THE BRITISH MINISTRY OF INFORMATION DISCLOSED TONIGHT THAT "IMPATIENCE" HAD BEEN EXPRESSED IN ANTWERP OVER THE DETENTION AT CONTRABAND CONTROL BASES OF GRAIN CARGOES CONSIGNED TO BELGIUM. IT WAS POINTED OUT THAT ANTWERP IS A NORMAL PORT FOR THE ENTRY OF FOODSTUFFS FROM SOUTH AMERICA TO GERMANY. IN THESE CIRCUMSTANCES, THE MINISTRY EXPLAINED, A NUMBER OF SHIPS CARRYING CEREALS TO BELGIUM WERE DETAINED PENDING INFORMATION AS TO THEIR ULTIMATE DESTINATION. THEY WERE ALLOWED TO PROCEED, HOWEVER, AFTER AN ASSURANCE WAS RECEIVED FROM THE BELGIAN AMBASSADOR IN LONDON THAT THEIR CARGOES WERE FOR BELGIAN CONSUMPTION.

THE MINISTRY ADDED THAT MANY OF THE SHIPS ARE NOW ON THEIR WAY TO ANTWERP "IF THEY HAVE NOT ALREADY REACHED THAT PORT."

COMMENT ON WESTERN FRONT WARFARE WAS STILL CONFINED OFFICIALLY TO AMBIGUOUS PHRASES, BUT NEWS OF GERMAN COUNTERATTACKS AGAINST THE FRENCH PROMISED SOMETHING MORE IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

NEUTRAL MILITARY MEN STILL FELT AN ALLIED OFFENSIVE WAS IN THE MAKING, BUT ADMITTED IT MIGHT BE DELAYED AND PREPARATION LENGTHENED AND INTENSIFIED SHOULD GERMANY DIVERT TROOPS FROM THE POLISH FRONT TO MAN THE WESTWALL.

IT WAS TAKEN FOR GRANTED BY THE SAME OBSERVERS A MAJOR COUNTER-OFFENSIVE BY POLES AGAINST ENCIRCLING GERMANS WAS IMPOSSIBLE AS LONG AS GERMANY COMMANDED THE AIR.

SOLE HOPE TO MOST WAS AN ORDERLY POLISH WITHDRAWAL TO THE EAST OR THE SLIM CHANCE THAT EXTENDED GERMAN LINES OF COMMUNICATION WOULD BE HARRIED AND BROKEN BY POLISH LIGHT COLUMNS.

BRITISH POLITICAL AND MILITARY QUARTERS MEANTIME VIEWED WITH THE UTMOST GRAVITY THESE EASTERN EVENTS:

FIRST, SOVIET RUSSIA'S ACTION IN SETTLING HER EASTERN BORDER SCORES WITH JAPAN AND THUS FREEING HERSELF FOR A POWERFUL ROLE IN THE WEST.

SEP 17 1939

SECOND, RUSSIA'S MOBILIZATION ON HER WESTERN BORDER WITH POLAND OPPOSITE THE FURIOUS WEST-EAST LINE OF MARCH OF THE GERMAN FORCES IN SOUTHERN PLLAND.

THESE GERMAN FORCES, HAVING SEIZED POLAND'S RICH MINERAL LANDS IN THE SOUTHWEST, PRESUMABLY ARE CLOSING IN ON THE POLISH OIL LANDS NORTH OF THE RUMANIAN BORDER.

AT THE SAME TIME POLISH ARMIES OF THE NORTH ARE FIGHTING TO BREAK THROUGH TWO GREAT POCKETS UNDER ASSAULT FROM THE NORTH ON THE WARSAW-BRZESC-NAD-BUGIEM LINE.

FD-G7AAPED

SEPT. 16

BERLIN, FIRST ADD GERMAN X X X SOVIET RUSSIA.

TALK OF POSSIBLE PEACE EFFORTS BY PREMIER MUSSOLINI WAS GIVEN IMPETUS BY THE RETURN TO BERLIN OF THE ITALIAN AMBASSADOR, BERNARDO ATTOLICO, WHO EARLIER IN THE WEEK MADE A FLYING VISIT TO ROME AFTER CONFERRING WITH NAZI STATE SECRETARY BARON ERNEST VON WEIZSAECKER.

WHILE OFFICIAL QUARTERS MADE NO COMMENT, THE INFORMED NEWS SERVICE, DIENST AUS DEUTSCHLAND, SAID "BERLIN POLITICAL CIRCLES ARE NOTING WITH INTEREST THE FACT THAT THE INTERNATIONAL PRESS IS AGAIN DISCUSSING THE POSSIBILITY OF PEACE."

SOME DIPLOMATS EXPRESSED BELIEF "SOMETHING WAS IN THE WIND", BUT SAW SMALL HOPE FOR SUCCESS OF ANY PEACE MOVE AT THE PRESENT TIME.

ON THE ECONOMIC FRONT, THE REICH WAS TAKING ENERGETIC MEASURES TO OFFSET THE BRITISH BLOCKADE.

SOME MILITARY LEADERS SAID FLATLY "THE BLOCKADE IS LICKED". THEY ARGUED THAT WITH THE ACQUISITION OF THE POLISH MINING REGION, GERMANY BECOMES EUROPE'S GREATEST COAL PRODUCER AND IN THE WHOLE WORLD IS EXCEEDED ONLY BY THE UNITED STATES.

WITH POLISH NAVAL RESISTANCE SHATTERED, THEY SAID, THE BALTIC WAS FAST BECOMING A GERMAN LAKE OVER WHICH ESSENTIAL ORES MIGHT BE BROUGHT IN FROM THE NORTHERN STATES AND THE BLOCKADE, CONSEQUENTLY, COULD BE NO MAJOR DISASTER.

SEP 17 1939

VAST REORGANIZATION IS UNDER WAY AT HAMBURG, GERMANY'S WORLD PORT TO REPLACE BY TRADE WITH THE BALTIC STATES AND THE EAST THE TRAFFIC BEING HELD OUT OF GERMANY BY THE BRITISH NAVY.

IT WAS INDICATED RUSSIA WOULD PROVIDE A LAND OUTLET FOR COMMERCE VITAL TO GERMANY. THAT SHIPPERS REGARDED THIS OUTLET SAFE WAS INDICATED BY THE FACT THAT INSURANCE RATES WHICH WERE RAISED AT THE OUTSET OF THE WAR TO ONE PER CENT OF THE VALUE OF CARGOES WERE SLASHED TODAY TO ONE FOURTH OF ONE PERCENT.

ON THE PROPAGANDA FRONT, A MIGHTY EFFORT TO KEEP ON GOOD TERMS WITH THE UNITED STATES AND PERSUADE ALL INDEPENDENT NATIONS OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE TO REMAIN NEUTRAL WAS APPARENT.

NEWSPAPERS HAVE BEEN PLAYING UP SENATOR WILLIAM E.BORAH'S STAND AGAINST CHANGE IN THE UNITED STATES NEUTRALITY LAW. REPORTS OF POLLS IN THE UNITED STATES INDICATING A SENTIMENT FOR NEUTRALITY ATTRACTED WIDE INTEREST AND PLEASED COMMENT.

WHAT IS IN THE MIND OF THE GERMAN PUBLIC AND WHAT IT IS TALKING ABOUT IS BEST SHOWN BY THE CONTROLLED PRESS.

HITLER'S "VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER" TODAY PRINTED ON PAGE ONE A PICTURE OF GERMAN TROOPS ENTERING GDYNIA, AND A PHOTOGRAPH OF WINSTON CHURCHILL, BRITISH FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, SMOKING A CIGAR ACCOMPANIED BY A FLATTERING ARTICLE ON HIS POLITICAL CAREER.

WXPX

NX

SEP 17 1939

SEP 16 1939

PHILADELPHIA, SEPT 15-(AP)-PIERRE MONTEUX, CONDUCTOR OF THE SAN FRANCISCO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, AND HIS NIECE, VIRGINIA DAVIS, DAUGHTER OF MEYER DAVIS, WELL KNOWN PHILADELPHIA DANCE ORCHESTRA LEADER.

1939

30.24-3397

30.24 3397

HAVE BEEN LOCATED IN LES BEAUX, FRANCE, RELATIVES SAID TODAY.

MRS. DAVIS, WHO ASKED THE STATE DEPARTMENT A WEEK AGO TO SEARCH FOR HER BROTHER-IN-LAW AND DAUGHTER, SAID SHE HAD RECEIVED WORD FROM SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL THAT THEY WOULD REMAIN ABROAD UNTIL NEXT MONTH.

SEP 16 1939

MRS. DAVIS PREVIOUSLY HAD RECEIVED NO WORD IN ALMOST A MONTH FROM HER DAUGHTER AND MONTEUX. MISS DAVIS WENT ABROAD TO STUDY VOICE WHILE MONTEUX HAS BEEN CONDUCTING CLASSES ABROAD.

RH111SAED NM

AZAKX

TEX-OKLA OUT

HITLER (PMS BJT-NEW)

SEP 16 1939

BY OLEN W.CLEMENTS

EAST BERNARD,TEX.,SEPT.15-(AP)-EIGHTY-THREE YEAR OLD ALOIS KOZELSKY SAT IN HIS WHEEL CHAIR AND WONDERED IF ONE OF THE CHARACTERS IN THE EUROPEAN DRAMA WAS HIS LONG LOST NEPHEW, ADOLF HITLER.

THE OLD MAN, AN INVALID 30 YEARS, WAS NOT SURE. ABOUT TWO YEARS AGO, HE REMARKED HE HAD LOST TRACK OF A NEPHEW ADOLF HITLER. THE STORY SPREAD. ALL KOZELSKY COULD RECALL WAS HIS SISTER MARRIED A MAN NAMED HITLER AND SHE HAD A SON ADOLF WHO DISAPPEARED FROM HOME AT THE AGE OF 12. THE SISTER HAS BEEN DEAD MANY YEARS.

THE PEOPLE OF THIS CZECH-BOHEMIAN-GERMAN COMMUNITY ARE DIVIDED ON THE QUESTION. THEY SAY SOME OF THE SIX KOZELSKY CHILDREN PHYSICALLY RESEMBLE GERMANY'S FUEHRER.

JOE KOZELSKY, THE ELDEST, A CATTLEMAN AND EAST BERNARD BUSINESS MAN, DOESN'T KNOW WHETHER HE IS THE DICTATOR'S FIRST COUSIN.

"WE DO NOT KNOW," HE EXPLAINED. "A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO THE NEWSPAPERS PRINTED STORIES THAT HITLER WAS MY FATHER'S NEPHEW. ALL THEY HAD TO SUPPORT THAT CLAIM WAS THE MEMORY OF AN OLD, OLD MAN, WHO HAS NOT BEEN IN GERMANY IN 50 YEARS.

"MY FATHER THINKS GERMAN'S ADOLF HITLER MAY BE HIS LOST NEPHEW BUT NEITHER HE NOR MEMBERS OF HIS FAMILY IN AUSTRIA, GERMANY AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA REALLY KNOW."

HE WISHES PEOPLE WOULD FORGET THE WHOLE THING AND LET THE KOZELSKY FAMILY CONTINUE THE QUIET LIFE THEY HAVE FOLLOWED HALF A CENTURY ON THE GREAT TEXAS COASTAL PLAIN.

NEWSPAPER STORIES TWO YEARS AGO BROUGHT OFFERS FROM NEW YORK PROMOTERS FOR PUBLIC APPEARANCES.

"WE DON'T WANT THAT," KOZELSKY SAID. "WE HOPE PEOPLE WILL UNDERSTAND THE WHOLE THING STARTED WHEN PAPA HAPPENED TO REMEMBER HAVING A LOST NEPHEW NAMED ADOLF HITLER. THERE ARE MANY PEOPLE NAMED HITLER IN GERMANY."

FJ227ACS

(ADVANCE FOR AMS SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 17)

NEUTRALITY ARGUMENTS

SEP 17 1939

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON,SEPT. 16-(AP)-HERE ARE SOME OF THE PROS AND CONS OF THE ARGUMENT OVER REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO PROVISION OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT WHICH CONGRESS WILL CONSIDER IN THE EXTRAORDINARY SESSION STARTING THURSDAY:

SEP 17 1939

THE ADMINISTRATION: THE EMBARGO IS A HAZARDOUS DEPARTURE FROM THE PRINCIPLE OF INTERNATIONAL LAW WHICH RECOGNIZES THE RIGHT OF BELLIGERENTS TO TRADE WITH NEUTRALS.

THE OPPOSITION: BECAUSE THE SUPERIOR SEA POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN PREVENTS GERMANY FROM TAKING FULL ADVANTAGE OF IMPARTIAL SALE OF ARMS BY THE UNITED STATES TO ALL BELLIGERENTS, THE OBJECTIVE OF "IMPARTIALITY" IS NOT ATTAINED.

THE ADMINISTRATION: THE PRESENT LAW IS UNNEUTRAL. IF ONE BELLIGERENT, BECAUSE OF GEOGRAPHICAL OR MILITARY CIRCUMSTANCES, IS UNABLE TO OBTAIN ARMS FROM THE UNITED STATES AFTER REPEAL OF THE EMBARGO, NO RESPONSIBILITY ATTACHES TO THIS COUNTRY, WHEREAS IN THE PRESENCE OF AN EMBARGO, THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THIS COUNTRY FOR THE CREATION OF THE CONDITION IS INEVITABLY DIRECT AND CLEAR.

SEP 17 1939

THE OPPOSITION: THE MAIN PURPOSE OF THOSE ADVOCATING REPEAL IS TO ENABLE THE UNITED STATES TO FURNISH ARMS TO ONE GROUP OF NATIONS. THIS WOULD BE LAYING THE FOUNDATION FOR INTERVENTION IN THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT--LIKELY TO BE FOLLOWED BY AMERICA'S ARMED PARTICIPATION.

BEYOND THE ARGUMENTS OVER THIS PARTICULAR SECTION, THERE IS A FURTHER QUARREL AS TO HOW MUCH DISCRETIONARY POWER SHOULD BE LODGED IN THE EXECUTIVE. HERE THE PRINCIPAL CONTENTIONS ARE:

THE ADMINISTRATION: IT IS INADVISABLE TO LAY DOWN HARD AND FAST RULES BECAUSE EVERY SITUATION IS DIFFERENT IN SOME PARTICULARS FROM EVERY OTHER. FURTHERMORE, THE CONSTITUTION VESTS CONTROL OF FOREIGN POLICY IN THE PRESIDENT.

THE OPPOSITION: A MANDATORY NEUTRALITY LAW IS DESIRABLE BECAUSE OF INEVITABLE PRESSURE UPON THE EXECUTIVE TO "TAKE SIDES." THE STATUTE SHOULD BE INFLEXIBLE ENOUGH TO PREVENT ANY DRIFT FROM A STRICT KEEP-OUT-OF-WAR POLICY.

(END ADVANCE FOR AMS SUNDAY SEPT. 17--SENT SEPT. 16)

VX1207AES NM

SEP 18 1939

To Occupy Two Districts

MOSCOW, Sunday, Sept. 17 (AP).—Soviet Russia has decided to send her army across the Polish frontier today and to occupy the Polish Ukraine and White Russia.

The government was understood unofficially to have sent a note last night to the Polish Ambassador here saying that the Red Army would enter the Polish Ukraine and White Russia today from Polozk to Kamanets-Podolski.

Copies of this note were said also to have been sent simultaneously to all diplomatic representatives here saying the action was taken because Poland no longer exists. It was said to have declared there no longer is a Polish Government because its whereabouts are unknown.

The note was said to have declared that "the Soviet Union will retain neutrality, but feels it necessary to protect White Russian and Ukrainian minorities in Poland and will do everything to keep peace and order."

SEP 18 1939

[Poland has only has a non-aggression pact with Russia but in mutual assistance treaties by which the British and French are pledged to aid Poland in defense of her independence against any aggression. Polish invocation of this treaty brought Great Britain and France into war against Germany on Sept. 3, two days after a German army invaded Western Poland.]

Covers Entire Frontier

The scene of the Russian action would extend across the whole of Russia's Polish frontier.

It would increase considerably Russia's frontier with Rumania. Rumania holds Bessarabia, wrested from Russia after the World War, and the Soviet Government never has relinquished its claims on this territory.

Russia's decision to act came after she had sent a vast number of men to her western frontier in semi-mobilization and had followed with her "peace" with Japan.

It was believed here that the Polish Embassy in Moscow would leave and that, possibly, the British also would leave, since they are allies of Poland.

Man Power Is Threat

If necessary, Soviet Russia could throw nearly 2,000,000 trained soldiers against the struggling Poles.

The official Communist party newspaper Pravda this Spring estimated Russia's peacetime army at 1,800,000. This estimate did not include the millions of semi-trained reserves who could be called up by conscription.

In addition to this manpower, the newspaper credited Russia with 9,000 airplanes, 30,000 light machine guns, 23,000 heavy machine guns, 1,600 pieces of heavy artillery and between 6,000 and 10,000 tanks.

During the past week Russia called up part of her army reserves in a mobilization move, and foreign observers said most of the troops were sent to the western frontier, facing Poland.

SEP 18 1939

TO COVER DEVELOPMENTS, THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER

MOSCOW-SUN-SEPT-17

FIRST GRAF, MOSCOW, POLISH, X X X WHITE RUSSIA.

THE TIME WHEN THE RUSSIANS WOULD MARCH WAS NOT SPECI-

FIED BUT UNOFFICIAL REPORTS WIDELY CIRCULATED IN MOSCOW SAID

THE FRONTIER WOULD BE CROSSED TODAY.

THE POLISH EMBASSY DISCLOSED IT HAD RECEIVED A NOTE FROM

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCING THAT RUSSIAN TROOPS WOULD CO-

THE OPPOSITION: BECAUSE THE SUPERIOR SEA POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN PREVENTS GERMANY FROM TAKING FULL ADVANTAGE OF IMPARTIAL SALE OF ARMS BY THE UNITED STATES TO ALL BELLIGERENTS, THE OBJECTIVE OF "IMPARTIALITY" IS NOT ATTAINED.

THE ADMINISTRATION: THE PRESENT LAW IS UNNEUTRAL. IF ONE BELLIGERENT, BECAUSE OF GEOGRAPHICAL OR MILITARY CIRCUMSTANCES, IS UNABLE TO OBTAIN ARMS FROM THE UNITED STATES AFTER REPEAL OF THE EMBARGO, NO RESPONSIBILITY ATTACHES TO THIS COUNTRY, WHEREAS IN THE PRESENCE OF AN EMBARGO, THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THIS COUNTRY FOR THE CREATION OF THE CONDITION IS INEVITABLY DIRECT AND CLEAR.

SEP 17 1939

THE OPPOSITION: THE MAIN PURPOSE OF THOSE ADVOCATING REPEAL IS TO ENABLE THE UNITED STATES TO FURNISH ARMS TO ONE GROUP OF NATIONS. THIS WOULD BE LAYING THE FOUNDATION FOR INTERVENTION IN THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT--LIKELY TO BE FOLLOWED BY AMERICA'S ARMED PARTICIPATION.

BEYOND THE ARGUMENTS OVER THIS PARTICULAR SECTION, THERE IS A FURTHER QUARREL AS TO HOW MUCH DISCRETIONARY POWER SHOULD BE LODGED IN THE EXECUTIVE. HERE THE PRINCIPAL CONTENTIONS ARE:

THE ADMINISTRATION: IT IS INADVISABLE TO LAY DOWN HARD AND FAST RULES BECAUSE EVERY SITUATION IS DIFFERENT IN SOME PARTICULARS FROM EVERY OTHER. FURTHERMORE, THE CONSTITUTION VESTS CONTROL OF FOREIGN POLICY IN THE PRESIDENT.

THE OPPOSITION: A MANDATORY NEUTRALITY LAW IS DESIRABLE BECAUSE OF INEVITABLE PRESSURE UPON THE EXECUTIVE TO "TAKE SIDES." THE STATUTE SHOULD BE INFLEXIBLE ENOUGH TO PREVENT ANY DRIFT FROM A STRICT KEEP-OUT-OF-WAR POLICY.

(END ADVANCE FOR AMS SUNDAY SEPT. 17--SENT SEPT. 16)

VX1207AES NM

SEP 18 1939

To Occupy Two Districts

MOSCOW, Sunday, Sept. 17 (AP).—Soviet Russia has decided to send her army across the Polish frontier today and to occupy the Polish Ukraine and White Russia.

The government was understood unofficially to have sent a note last night to the Polish Ambassador here saying that the Red Army would enter the Polish Ukraine and White Russia today from Polozk to Kamanets-Podolski.

Copies of this note were said also to have been sent simultaneously to all diplomatic representatives here saying the action was taken because Poland no longer exists. It was said to have declared there no longer is a Polish Government because its whereabouts are unknown.

The note was said to have declared that "the Soviet Union will retain neutrality, but feels it necessary to protect White Russian and Ukrainian minorities in Poland and will do everything to keep peace and order."

SEP 18 1939

[Poland has not only has a non-aggression pact with Russia but in mutual assistance treaties by which the British and French are pledged to aid Poland in defense of her independence against any aggression. Polish invocation of this treaty brought Great Britain and France into war against Germany on Sept. 3, two days after a German army invaded Western Poland.]

Covers Entire Frontier

The scene of the Russian action would extend across the whole of Russia's Polish frontier.

It would increase considerably Russia's frontier with Rumania. Rumania holds Bessarabia, wrested from Russia after the World War, and the Soviet Government never has relinquished its claims on this territory.

Russia's decision to act came after she had sent a vast number of men to her western frontier in semi-mobilization and had followed with her "peace" with Japan.

It was believed here that the Polish Embassy in Moscow would leave and that, possibly, the British also would leave, since they are allies of Poland.

Man Power Is Threat

If necessary, Soviet Russia could throw nearly 2,000,000 trained soldiers against the struggling Poles.

The official Communist party newspaper Pravda this Spring estimated Russia's peacetime army at 1,800,000. This estimate did not include the millions of semi-trained reserves who could be called up by conscription.

In addition to this manpower, the newspaper credited Russia with 9,000 airplanes, 30,000 light machine guns, 23,000 heavy machine guns, 1,600 pieces of heavy artillery and between 6,000 and 10,000 tanks.

During the past week Russia called up part of her army reserves in a mobilization move, and foreign observers said most of the troops were sent to the western frontier, facing Poland.

TO COVER DEVELOPMENTS, THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER MOSCOW-SUN-SEPT 17

FIRST GRAPH, MOSCOW, POLISH, X X X WHITE RUSSIA.

THE TIME WHEN THE RUSSIANS WOULD MARCH WAS NOT SPECIFIED BUT UNOFFICIAL REPORTS WIDELY CIRCULATED IN MOSCOW SAID THE FRONTIER WOULD BE CROSSED TODAY.

SEP 18 1939

THE POLISH EMBASSY DISCLOSED IT HAD RECEIVED A NOTE FROM THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCING THAT RUSSIAN TROOPS WOULD OC-

1939

30.24-3399

30.24 3399

CUPY THE POLISH UKRAINE AND WHITE RUSSIA REGIONS OF POLAND THAT ONCE BELONGED TO RUSSIA.

BUT POLISH AMBASSADOR WACLAW GRZYBOWSKI FORMALLY REFUSED TO ACCEPT IT.

SEP 17 1939

AT THE SAME TIME, HOWEVER, HE REFERRED THE MATTER TO HIS GOVERNMENT ASKING FOR INDSTRUCTIONS. HE HAD CONFERRED YESTERDAY WITH VLADIMIR ~~HERR~~ POTEMKIN, SOVIET VICE COMMISSAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

THE SUBJECT OF THE DISCUSSION WAS N O T DISCLOSED.

RUSSIA'S NOTE WAS SAID UNOFFICIALLY TO HAVE DECLARED THE RED ARMY WOULD CROSS THE BORDER AT 6 A.M. TODAY (10 P.M.,E.S.T. LAST NIGHT) ON A LINE FROM POLOTZK TO KAMANETZ-PODOLSK.

RUSSIAN PREMIER - FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF, IT WAS LEARNED, CONFERRED WITH GRZYBOWSKI AT 4 A.M. (8 P.M., E.S.T. SATURDAY NIGHT), PRESUMABLY AFTER A MIDNIGHT CONFERENCE OF SOVIET LEADERS.

COPIES OF ETC., SEVENTH GRAPH.

A136

BULLETIN

BERLIN, SEPT 17-(SUNDAY)-(AP)-DNB, OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY, REPORTED TODAY FROM MOSCOW THAT THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT HAD INFORMED THE POLISH AMBASSADOR TO RUSSIA THAT SOVIET TROOPS WOULD CROSS THE RUSSIAN-POLISH FRONTIER AT 4 A.M., MIDDLE EUROPEAN TIME (10 P.M., E.S.T., LAST NIGHT.)

ACCORDING TO DNB, THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT PRESENTED THE POLISH AMBASSADOR A NOTE SAYING THAT RUSSIA, IN ITS OWN INTEREST AS WELL AS IN THE INTEREST OF WHITE RUSSIAN AND UKRAINIAN MINORITIES IN POLAND, HAD BEEN FORCED TO ISSUE ORDERS FOR THE ARMY TO CROSS THE BORDER INTO POLAND.

SEP 17 1939

FD105AED

THE AGENCY SAID SOVIET FORCES WOULD ADVANCE SIMULTANEOUSLY ON THE ENTIRE FRONTIER LINE FROM POLOZK IN THE NORTH TO KAMANEZ-PODOLSK IN THE SOUTH.

THE REPORT SAID THE ADVANCE OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY INTO EASTERN POLAND WOULD TAKE PLACE UNDER FULL OBSERVANCE OF RUSSIAN NEUTRALITY IN THE PRESENT CONFLICT.

AS THE POLISH STATE MUST NOW BE REGARDED AS NON-EXISTENT, THE DNB REPORT CONTINUED, THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT ARRIVED AT THE OPINION THAT FORMER TREATIES CONCLUDED WITH POLAND ARE NULL AND VOID.

IT SAID THE RUSSIAN NOTE WAS SUBMITTED TO ALL FOREIGN MISSIONS ACCREDITED IN MOSCOW.

SEP 17 1939

FD155AED

REDS OVERRUN EAST POLAND

ARMY REPORTS CAPTURE OF MANY TOWNS; FLYERS SHOOT DOWN 7 PLANES

BUDAPEST, SEPT. 17 - (SUNDAY) -- (AP) -- AN AUTHORITATIVE SOURCE HERE SAID TODAY INFORMATION HAD BEEN RECEIVED FROM MOSCOW THAT RUSSIAN FORCES CROSSED THE FRONTIER INTO POLAND AT 6 A.M., MOSCOW TIME, (10 P.M., E.S.T., 1939 NIGHT.)

THE RUSSIAN ARMY WAS SAID TO HAVE ENTERED WHITE RUSSIAN NORTHEAST POLAND AND THE POLISH UKRAINE IN THE SOUTH.

DASH MATTER FOLLOW MOSCOW

UKRAINIAN AGENCIES ESTIMATE 46,723 SQUARE MILES OF TERRITORY ARE INCLUDED IN THE POLISH UKRAINE WHICH RUSSIA HAS ANNOUNCED SHE WILL OCCUPY.

THE WHOLE UKRAINE DISTRICT BELONGED TO THE POLISH-LITHUANIAN EMPIRE UNTIL 1667, WHEN PART OF IT WAS CEDED TO RUSSIA. RUSSIA TOOK THE REST OF THE UKRAINE IN 1793 IN THE SECOND PARTITION OF POLAND.

DURING THE MIDDLE OF THE 19TH CENTURY, THE UKRAINIANS STARTED A MOVEMENT TO ESTABLISH A SEPARATE REPUBLIC WHICH ACHIEVED A SHORT-LIVED SUCCESS WITH THE FALL OF CZARIST RUSSIA IN 1917.

THE UKRAINIAN PEOPLES REPUBLIC WAS THEN INVADED BY GERMAN, AUSTRIAN, RUSSIAN AND POLISH ARMIES AND FOLLOWING THE FALL OF THE CENTRAL POWERS THE DISTRICT WAS ONCE AGAIN DIVIDED.

POLAND RECEIVED THE SECTION OF THE UKRAINE AROUND GALICIA. SOVIET RUSSIA FINALLY OBTAINED THE LARGEST SECTION AND RUMANIA AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA ACQUIRED OTHER UNITS IN THE YEARS FOLLOWING THE WORLD WAR.

IN LAST YEAR'S PARTITIONING OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA, HUNGARY TOOK OVER THE AREA KNOWN AS THE CARPATHO-UKRAINE.

UKRAINIAN SOURCES ESTIMATE 7,500,000 NATIVE UKRAINIANS LIVE IN THE POLISH AREA SOUGHT BY RUSSIA.

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT, DNB SAID, EMPHASIZED THAT IT WAS ACTING ONLY UNDER A DESIRE TO RESTORE PEACE AND ORDER IN EASTERN POLAND.

IT CONTENDED PEACE AND ORDER WERE NOT SAFEGUARDED AT THIS MOMENT BECAUSE OF WHAT IT SAID WAS THE COLLAPSE OF THE POLISH STATE AND THE PLIGHT OF THE POLISH GOVERNMENT.

FD157AED

30.24-3401

30.24 3401

Soviet To Maintain Neutrality In War, Moscow Says—Molotoff Blames Invasion On "Ill-Starred" Polish Leaders

SEP 18 1939

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Sept. 17—Soviet Russia's great Red army, marching on orders to "liberate" their "brothers" in Poland, moved into that embattled country today along the entire frontier, from Latvia to Rumania.

With the army sweeping west through Poland, the Government at Moscow assured other nations, including Great Britain, France and Rumania, that Russia would maintain neutrality in the European war.

Dozen Towns Captured

A general staff communique tonight reported occupation of a dozen towns along a 500-mile front on the first day's march, penetrating as far as fifty miles inside the Polish border at the farthest point.

The Russians reported capturing the Ukrainian city of Tarnopol, which would mean that their swift drive carried them to within forty-eight miles of the nearest German forces—those at Przemyslany, southeast of Lwow, which the Germans were reported to have reached last week.

Tarnopol normally is of 35,000 population. Other large towns reported were Rowno, of 40,000 population, and Kolomea, of 33,000, both also in the Ukraine.

"Weak" Resistance Cited

The communique said the Reds defeated "weak advance units and reserves of the Polish army." Earlier both Soviet and German radio broadcasts disclosed heavy fighting at some points.

The general staff said seven Polish fighting planes were brought down and three heavy bombers forced to land.

The Soviet troops marched on a line from the Zapadnaya Dvina river, at the Latvian border on the north, to the Dniester river, at the Rumanian border to the south.

The northernmost town reported occupied was Glubokoye, and the southernmost Kolomea, 485 airline miles away.

Air Force Assists

The farthest thrust into Poland was reported made after the German air force had assisted in the attack.

This was at Baranovichi, a railway center fifty miles from the Russian border, which the general staff reported captured at the end of the day's march. Earlier German and Russian broadcasts had told of heavy German air raids against the city, which is in the northeast about 120 miles south of Wilno.

Tonight's communique ended:

"The population everywhere meets the Red army units with jubilation."

Neutrality Claimed

Government officials at Moscow, in assuring other nations that Russia would maintain neutrality in the war, announced that their intention was to "take under their protection" about 11,000,000 Ukrainians and White Russians in eastern and southern Poland.

[Editor's Note—White Russia and the Polish Ukraine, where most of these minorities live, comprise approximately 46,723 square miles of Poland's territory.]

The Polish Embassy, as well as the French and British, immediately asked for instructions from their Governments.

Red Army forces crossed the Polish frontier at 6 a. m. (11 p. m Saturday New York time), putting Poland in a tightening vise oetween German troops advancing from the west and Russian troops marching from the east. Five and one-half hours later, Viacheslav M. Molotov Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar, said in a radio broadcast that the Soviet move was made because Poland had "virtually ceased to exist" as a result of the German invasion which started on Sept. 1.

Assails Polish Leaders

"Poland has become a fertile field for any accidental and unexpected contingency which may create a menace to the Soviet Union," said Molotoff, charging that "ill-starred" Polish leaders had abandoned the Polish people to their fate.

"No one knows the whereabouts of the Polish Government," he said.

"In view of this state of affairs, treaties concluded between the Soviet Union and Poland have ceased to operate."

A note announcing the Soviet decision to send troops into Poland was handed Waclaw Grzybowski, Polish Ambassador, early today after a late night conference of high Soviet officials. The Polish envoy immediately rejected the communication.

The extent of Polish territory which Russia planned to occupy was not made known.

[Editor's Note—When Poland was created after the World War, 101,196 square miles of former Russian territory were included, much of it won after bitter Polish-Soviet warfare which ended in 1920. Part of that territory, notably sections around Warsaw and in the southeast near Lwow, already is in the hands of the Germans.]

Polish Defenses Pool

Poland was understood to have good fortifications on her eastern frontier and, before Germany struck into Poland from the west, troops were stationed along the eastern frontier. However, it was not known how many of them might have been diverted to try to stem the German invasion.

Military reserves already have been called up to bolster Russia's standing army, which the Communist party newspaper Pravda last spring said totaled 1,800,000 men in peacetime.

The Soviet advance into Poland followed conclusion September 15 of an armistice with Japan ending conflict along the frontier between Outer Mongolia and Manchoukuo. Another important factor in the picture was the non-aggression agreement with Germany signed August 24.

Armistice Bid Expected

Moscow diplomatic quarters expressed the belief that either the Soviet Union or Italy, Germany's Axis partner, would propose an armistice in the European war as soon as the fate of Poland had been settled by Germany and Russia.

These quarters believed Germany's terms would call for retaining Danzig, Silesia and other former German sections of Poland, the creation of a small Polish buffer state and the cession of White Russia and the Polish Ukraine to the Soviet Union.

Neutral sources were of the opinion, however, that such a proposal would be rejected by Britain and France.

[Editor's Note—Poland is linked with France and Britain by mutual-assistance treaties pledging British and French aid if Polish independence were threatened from any source. Invocation of these treaties by Poland brought France and Britain into the war September 3 following the German invasion.]

Hits Polish "Impotence"

Molotoff declared "nobody could have expected that the Polish state would have betrayed such impotence and such swift collapse as has now taken place all over Poland."

He said Poland's rulers had "suffered bankruptcy" and that "Warsaw as the capital of the Polish state no longer exists."

His broadcast laid stress on the plight of Byelo-Russians (White Russians) and Ukrainians who were incorporated in Poland after the World War.

These minorities "were without rights," under Warsaw's rule and "now have been abandoned entirely to their fate," he said.

Cites "Sacred Duty"

"The Soviet Government deems it its sacred duty to extend the hand of assistance to its brother Ukrainians and brother Byelo-Russians inhabiting Poland."

Molotoff said the Red armies had been instructed "to take under their protection the lives and property" of these minorities, promising "to deliver the Polish people from the disastrous war into which they have been plunged by their unwise leaders."

The Soviet Government at the same time sought to reassure its own citizens through a statement declaring food rationing would not be instituted "despite measures of state necessitated by foreign events should be prolonged for some time."

Denies Food Shortage

The statement said that after military reserves were called up "some of our citizens have shown a tendency to accumulate hoards of food and other commodities for fear that the ration system of supply may be introduced.

"Our country is provided with all it requires and can get along without the ration system," the statement declared.

Workers' groups in many sections of the Soviet Union held meetings this afternoon to voice approval of the Government's decision. Molotoff's speech was read and cheered.

Rumania and the small northern nations bordering Russia were among the twenty-four countries which received copies of the Soviet note to Poland and an additional note pledging that Russia would "pursue a policy of neutrality" toward them.

U. S. Gets Assurances

The United States was the only nation of the Western Hemisphere also to receive the assurances.

Occupation of sections of Poland would give the Soviet Union more extensive frontiers with Latvia and Rumania, both of which include former Russian territory. Lithuania would also be brought into direct contact with Russia.

The note to Poland said "the Polish Government has fallen to pieces and shows no signs of life" and that, therefore, Poland as a state "ceased to exist." After rejecting the note Ambassador Grzybowski and his diplomatic staff were expected to depart from Moscow soon.

The Polish Embassy spokesman referred bitterly to "the obvious contradiction in the fact that Soviet authorities addressed a note to the envoy of a state they claim is existing no longer."

Hitler Denounced Treaty

"Even Hitler denounced his treaty with Poland, while the Soviets, who have several treaties with us, did not even denounce them before declaring their intention to send troops into our territory," he said.

The spokesman said that during the World War the existence of two governments—those of Belgium and Serbia were recognized even though they were outside their own countries.

Premier Molotoff's broadcast was the first intimation that the huge Soviet forces massed on Polish eastern borders had gone into action.

Morning newspapers carried no mention of the plans, even though the Polish Ambassador had been summoned to Mr. Molotoff's office at an early hour and received notice of Soviet intentions to march.

Red Army Communiqué

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Red Army General Staff published tonight the following communiqué on the first day of its operations in Poland:

"On the morning of Sept. 17 troops of the workers' and peasants' Red Army crossed the Western frontier along the whole line from the River Zapadnaya Dvina [The border of the Soviet Union with Latvia] to the River Dniester [the border of the Soviet Union with Rumania].

Throwing back weak advance units and reserves of the Polish army, the Soviet troops reached by the evening of Sept. 17:

"In the North—in Western Byelo-Russia [White Russia]—the town of Glubokoye [Glebokie], its station, and the station of Paraffianovo, and took possession of the railway junction of Molodechno [Molodeczno] and the town of Volozhin [Wolozyn].

"In the direction of Baranovichi [Baranowicze] the Red Army troops crossed the River Niemen and occupied the towns of Korelitse and Mirpolonechka, the railway junction of Baranovichi and Snov.

"In the South—the Western Ukraine—Soviet troops occupied the towns of Rowno [Rowne], Dubno, Zbarazh [Zbaraz], Tarnopol and Kolomea.

"Soviet aviation brought down seven Polish fighters and forced three heavy bombers to land. Their crews were detained.

"The population everywhere meets the Red Army units with jubilation."

LEADERS IN FLIGHT

Moscicki and Beck Are in Rumania—Officers Also Cross Frontier

NAZI FORCES DRIVE ON

Reich Reports Warsaw Agrees to Confer on Evacuation Terms

By The Associated Press.

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Monday, Sept. 18—Large sections of the Polish Army were pouring across the frontier into Rumania early today following the flight of President Ignace Moscicki and the apparent collapse of the Polish Republic.

M. Moscicki arrived during the day with Foreign Minister Josef Beck and a government party of fifty-six.

Colonel Beck immediately arranged to meet with the heads of diplomatic missions to Poland, now established here, and was expected to tell them that their mission was "now ended."

The plans of the Polish Government, however, were not immediately clear. There were some reports that it would go on to Bucharest, Rumania's capital.

The Polish soldiers came with arms and equipment and immediately were disarmed by the Rumanian border patrol.

Many of the soldiers declared their intention of joining a foreign legion to continue the fight against Germany.

132 Polish Planes Land

By 10 o'clock last night 132 Polish

planes had landed in groups at Cernauti and more were landing early today.

Two of the planes crashed. The crush was so great at the small airport that one plane landed on top of three others, destroying all four. The planes and crews were interned.

Hundreds of refugees swarmed across the frontier in wagons, automobiles and autobuses.

They proceeded to Cernauti, where the Rumanian Government established rigid inspection service.

Poland's twenty-year republic appeared to have received a knockout blow as German and Russian armies struck from the west and east.

The Russian invasion blasted the hopes of high Polish officials here that Polish forces could make a stand through the Winter in marshes along the Russian border.

The national archives and Poland's gold fund already have been brought to Rumania.

The Rumanian Government notified the thirty-seven countries' diplomats accredited to Poland that they must leave their temporary quarters here and go either to Bucharest or home.

The French and British diplomatic missions to Poland, including the British Ambassador, Sir Howard Kennard arrived here yesterday.

Resistance Is Denied

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 17 (AP).—A report from Wilno (Vilna) today said invading Soviet troops had reached Wileika and Molodeczno, Polish towns, twenty-five miles from the Russian border.

When the troops passed through the village of Postavy it still was being bombed by German planes, the report said.

Witnesses said the Poles were offering no resistance to the advancing troops.

Poles Report Battle

PARIS, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Polish Embassy announced today that Polish troops were resisting Russian invasion of Poland at at least one point. A one-sentence communique said: "Russian troops crossed the Polish frontier this morning near Molodeczno and encountered immediate resistance of Polish troops there."

MOSCICKI PROTEST SENT TO ROOSEVELT

Polish Leader Reports Nazi Planes Bombed Civilian Centers Deliberately

DENIES MILITARY PURPOSE

Reply to President's Plea for Humane Curbs Tells of Thousands of Victims

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 17 (AP)—President Ignace Moscicki of Poland, in a telegram to President Roosevelt, charged today that German planes had "bombarded methodically and with premeditation open Polish towns and villages."

President Moscicki said his message was in reply to Mr. Roosevelt's message, "in which you recommended that open cities must not be bombed." The telegram was sent through Franklin Mott Gunther, United States Minister to Bucharest.

"There are thousands of dead and wounded in the civil population," M. Moscicki said, "in cities without a military objetcive."

The text of the message follows:

"In answer to your telegram in which you recommended open cities must not be bombed, the Polish Government sends a clear and unequivocal response. I consider it, therefore, my duty to inform you, Mr. President, that for several days German planes have bombed methodically and with premeditation open Polish towns and villages which without doubt contained no classed [listed] military objective.

"There are thousands of dead and wounded in the civil population. Because it is a question here of a matter which concerns the whole civilized world and for which you, Mr. President, showed special interest, I wish to inform you of these facts."

President Roosevelt, in identical messages on Sept. 1 to Great Britain, France, Germany and Poland, asked each for a pledge that she would not bombard civilian populations and unfortified cities. The heads of the four countries replied favorably.

THE RUSSIANS WERE SAID TO HAVE OCCUPIED ZALESZCZYKI VILLAGE ON THE POLISH-RUMANIAN FRONTIER, WHICH WAS TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS FOR FOREIGN DIPLOMATIC MISSIONS, INCLUDING THE AMERICAN, UP UNTIL YESTERDAY WHEN THEY CAME HERE.

THE VILLAGE IS ABOUT 30 MILES FROM THE NEAREST POINT OF THE RUSSIAN-POLISH BORDER.

SEP 18 1939

HEAVY FORCES WERE DISPATCHED BY THE RUMANIAN ARMY COMMAND TO GUARD THE FRONTIER AGAINST ANY TRANSGRDSSION.

IT WAS EXPECTED THAT RUSSIAN AND GERMAN TROOPS WOULD MEET NEAR THE POLISH-RUMANIAN BORDER.

RUMANIA'S OLD FEAR THAT RUSSIA WOULD TRY TO TAKE BACK BESSARABIA, RUMANIAN REGION WHICH WAS RUSSIA'S BEFORE THE WORLD WAR, WAS ALLAYED SOMEWHAT BY ASSURANCES MADE BY THE SOVIET MINISTER IN BUCHAREST TODAY THAT RUMANIAN TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY WOULD BE RESPECTED.

IT WAS BELIEVED THAT GERMANY'S INTENTIONS TOWARD RUMANIA WOULD NOW BE CONFINED TO ECONOMIC EXPLOITATION.

SEP 18 1939

MQ729PED

GERMAN PLANES WERE REPORTED TO HAVE BOMBED A 50-MILE STRIP OF THE POLISH-RUMANIAN BORDER AND DESTROYED THE ZALESCZYZKI BRIDGE ACROSS THE DNIESTER RIVER, A MISDIRECTED BOMB KILLING AND INJURING MANY IN

SEP 18 1939

BULLETIN

CERNAUTI, RUMANIA, SEPT 17-(AP)-SOVIET RUSSIAN TROOPS WERE REPORTED TONIGHT TO HAVE ADVANCED 35 MILES INTO POLAND DURING THE FIRST DAY OF THEIR INVASION.

SEP 18 1939

MQ531PED

THE NEARBY RUMANIAN VILLAGE OF WIGNITZ.

THE RUMANIAN ARMY DREW UP LARGE REINFORCEMENTS TO PROTECT THE FRONTIER.

SEP 18 1939

MQ325PED

ANOTHER POLISH EMBASSY COMMUNIQUE DECLARED THE POLISH GOVERNMENT WAS REMAINING ON ITS OWN SOIL DESPITE INVASION FROM TWO SIDES.

PARIS-SEPT-17-AP-

SEP 18 1939

30.24--3403

30.24 3403

"THE POLISH EMBASSY IN PARIS," IT SAID, "DENIES CATEGORICALLY ALLEGATIONS CONTAINED IN THE SPEECH WHICH MOLOTOFF (SOVIET PREMIER - FOREIGN COMMISSAR) DELIVER D LAST NIGHT AND ACCORDING TO WHICH THE POLISH GOVERNMENT WOULD N O LONGER BE ON THE TERRITORY OF THE (POLISH) REPUBLIC.

SEP 18 1939

"THE EMBASSY ASCERTAINS THAT BOTH THE PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC AND THE POLISH GOVERNMENT ARE ON POLISH TERRITORY."

HCC FOURTH 1125 BB734A

Texts of Molotoff Talks Explaining Military Action

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 17—Following is the text of a radio speech today by the Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, as distributed by Tass, the official Soviet News Agency:

Comrades, men and women citizens of our great country:

Events arising out of the Polish-German War have revealed the internal insolvency and obvious impotence of the Polish state.

Polish ruling circles have suffered bankruptcy.

All this has happened in the briefest space of time. A mere fortnight has passed and Poland already has lost all her industrial centers.

Warsaw as the capital of the Polish state no longer exists. No one knows the whereabouts of the Polish Government.

The population of Poland have been abandoned by their ill-starred leaders to their fate. The Polish state and its government have virtually ceased to exist.

In view of this state of affairs, treaties concluded between the Soviet Union and Poland have ceased to operate. A situation has arisen in Poland which demands of the Soviet Government especial concern for the security of its State.

Poland has become a fertile field for any accidental and unexpected contingency that may create a menace to the Soviet Union.

Until the last moment the Soviet Government has remained neutral. But in view of the circumstances mentioned, it can no longer maintain a neutral attitude toward the situation that has arisen.

Nor can it be demanded of the Soviet Government that it remain indifferent to the fate of its blood brothers, the Ukrainians and Byelo-Russians [White Russians] inhabiting Poland, who even formerly were without rights and who now have been abandoned entirely to their fate.

The Soviet Government deems it its sacred duty to extend the hand of assistance to its brothers, Ukrainians and brother Byelo-Russians inhabiting Poland.

In view of all the above, the government of the Soviet Union has this morning handed a note to the Polish Ambassador in Moscow announcing that the Soviet Government has instructed the higher command of the Red Army to order troops to cross the frontier and take under their protection the lives and property of the populations of the western Ukraine and western Byelo-Russia.

The Soviet Government also stated in this note that at the same time it intends to take every measure to deliver the Polish people from the disastrous war into which they have been plunged by their unwise leaders and give them an opportunity to live a life of peace.

In the early part of September when a partial mobilization of Red Army reserves was undertaken in the Ukraine, Byelo-Russia and in four other military areas, the situation in Poland was not clear and this mobilization was undertaken as a precautionary measure.

Nobody could have expected that the Polish State would have revealed such impotence and such swift collapse as has now already taken place all over Poland.

But inasmuch as this collapse is a fact and Polish statesmen have revealed their utter bankruptcy and are incapable of changing the situation in Poland, our Red Army, having received large reinforcements as the result of the recent calling up of reserves, must perform with credit the honorable duty placed upon it.

The government expresses the firm conviction that our Workers and Peasants Red Army will this time too display its combative might, conscientiousness and discipline and that in the performance of its emancipatory task it will distinguish itself by new feats of heroism and glory.

Simultaneously the Soviet Government handed copies of its note to the Polish Ambassador and to all the governments with which the Soviet Union has diplomatic relations, at the same time declaring that the Soviet Union will pursue a policy of neutrality toward all these countries.

This determines our recent steps in foreign policy.

Notes Sent by Soviet

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 17—Following are the texts of the Soviet note to Poland and the notes to nations maintaining diplomatic relations with Russia, as made public by Tass, the official Soviet News Agency:

The Note to Poland

Mr. Ambassador:

The Polish-German war has revealed the internal insolvency of the Polish State.

In ten days of hostilities Poland has lost all her industrial regions and cultural centers. Warsaw, as the capital of Poland no longer exists. The Polish Government has fallen to pieces and shows no signs of life.

This means that the Polish State and its government have virtually ceased to exist.

Treaties concluded between the U. S. S. R. and Poland have thereby ceased to operate.

Abandoned to her fate and left without leadership, Poland has become a fertile field for any accidental and unexpected contingency which may create a menace to the U. S. S. R.

Hence, while it was neutral hitherto, the Soviet Government can no longer maintain a neutral attitude toward these facts. Nor can the Soviet Government remain indifferent when its blood brothers, Ukranians and Byelo-Russians [White Russians] in Polish territory, having been abandoned to their fate, are left without protection.

In view of this state of affairs, the Soviet Government has instructed the higher command of the Red Army to order troops to cross the frontier and take under their protection the lives and property of the population of Western Ukraine and Western Byelo-Russia.

At the same time the Soviet Government intends to take every measure to deliver the Polish people from the disastrous war into which they have been plunged by their unwise leaders and to give them an opportunity to live a life of peace.

I have the honor, etc.

MOLOTOFF,
Peoples' Commissar of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R.

The Note to Other Powers

Mr. Ambassador (or Minister):

In transmitting to you the enclosed copy of a note of the Soviet Government of Sept. 17, 1939, to the Polish Ambassador in Moscow, I have the honor on instructions of my government to inform you that the U.S.S.R. will pursue a policy of neutrality in relations between the U.S.S.R. and your country.

I have the honor, etc.

MOLOTOFF,
Peoples' Commissar of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R.

The latter note was handed the diplomatic representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, China, Japan, Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, Finland, Bulgaria, Latvia, Denmark, Estonia, Sweden, Greece, Belgium, Rumania, Lithuania, Norway, Hungary, the Mongolian Peoples' Republic and the Tuva Peoples' Republic.

SEP 18 1939

POLISH SURRENDER EXPECTED BY REICH

Warsaw's Defenders Agree to Confer on Capitulation—Nazis Take 3 Strongholds

BREST-LITOVSK FALLS

Leblin Also Goes to Invaders —Kutno Surrenders After a Long Battle

SEP 18 1939

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Germans tonight expressed the belief that the complete surrender of Poland was a matter of only a few hours.

Noting that the forces of Soviet Russia were marching into Eastern Poland on a 500-mile front, the German high command stated that the capitulation of long-besieged Warsaw was imminent.

In response to abroadcast appeal for the Polish capital's surrender, the high command reported that the defenders had agreed to dispatch emissaries to the German lines.

Germans then stipulated that under traditional white flags one Polish officer and a member of the diplomatic corps should report to German advance lines at 10 P. M. Previously the high command had subbarized a series of vital blows at te crumbling defense of Poland.

Three Strongholds Fall

Three strongholds of stratigic importance were announced to have fallen:

Kutno, seventy-five miles west of the embattled capital.

Beblin, seventy miles southeast of Warsaw.

The citadel of Brest-Litovsk where 600 prisoners were reported taken. Th city outside the fort had already been reported captured by German troops striking from East Prussia. Brest-Litovsk is 110 miles due east of Warsaw.

Dramatic requirements for the meeting of the expected Polish emissaries from Warsaw were outlined by the High Command.

Out from the beleaguered capital, the army officer and the diplomatic representative were to ride in separate automobiles. Their protection from the surrounding masses of German troops, lying invisibly in wait in the night, was to be the specified illuminations in the lights and the white flags fluttering plainly in front of them. They were to proceed until halted.

Eevnts leading up to the capitulation of Warsaw began yesterday. The Warsaw military commander was then reported to have refused to receive a German emissary with an ultimatum that the city lay down its arms within twelve hours. If the ultimatur were refused, civilians were to receive an additional twelve hours to leave the city.

These hours of grace, according to the ultimatum, expired at 3 P. M. today [10 A. M. New York time] and thereafter the city was to be open to unrestricted assault of artillery and aerial bombing.

Germans Back Soviet Move

As far as was known in Berlin, this was not begun before the report of the Polish commander's change of mind—to discuss surrender on German terms.

Russia's invasion of Eastern Poland, official Berlin sources said, was undertaken in complete agreement with Chancellor Hitler. Germany and Russia, these sources added, had been in "closest collaboration." Official quarters would not say how far the Russian troops would penetrate westward.

It was intimated, however, that Russian and German Armies might greet each other as friends in the vicinity of Lwow in the south, Brest-Litvosk in Central Eastern Poland and Bialystok in the north.

Unofficial but informed quarters professed to see one complication to such an amicable meeting. They said they had reports the Lituanian Army might join in administering what all Berlin confidently expected to be Poland's "knockout blow."

According to their outline, the Lithuanians would march into Vilna and retake their lost capital that the "rebel" General Zeligowski seized Oct. 10, 1920. Vilna, the birthplace of Marshal Pilsudski, Poland's late general and hero, has been a constant source of dispute since Poland took it nineteen years ago. The Lithuanian-Polish frontier has never been settled from the Lithuanian viewpoint.

More than 250,000 White Russians, whom Moscow has proclaimed it would "protect" as an underprivileged Polish minority, live in this disputed area.

Polish Terrorism Cited

The Deutsche Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, Foreign Office mouthpiece, had this to say of the Russian invasion:

"The terrorism against the German population in the Western Polish Provinces which finally gave the Reich reason to counter-attack now have found their sad, horrorful parallel in the Polish Eastern Provinces. White Russians and Ukrainians inhabiting these regions were refused their vital rights for twenty years.

"There also a small population of Poles thier through terrorism to denationalize and expel original inhabitants and to efface the ethnical character of these regions. The inhuman atrocities committeed by the vanquished and retreating Polish army exhausted the patience of these populations numbering several millions of persons.

"Moscow this morning decided to watch this conduct no longer without doing something about it. Germany has good memory for such methods of political action and recalls them in this hour."

Text of German Communique

The text of the communique issued by the German army high command today follows:

"Mopping up in East Galicia continued Sept. 16.

"Lwow is surrounded on three sides and retreat of Polish forces toward the southeast is cut between Lwow and Przemysl.

"North of the mouth of the San River, German troops are pushing steadily toward Lublin.

"Deblin was taken. One hundred undamaged airplanes fell into our hands there.

"Near Wlodawa, south of Brest-Litovsk, advance guards and scouting forces from the East Prussian, Upper Silesian and Slovakian armies joined each other and shook hands.

"The battle around Kutno continues according to plan. Kutno was taken from the west and the Bzura River crossed in a northerly direction.

"Warsaw is tightly closed in. In order to protect the population of the Polish capital from heavy suffering and terror, the German Army undertook to convince the Warsaw military command of the futility of further resistance. The Polish military command in Warsaw nevertheless refused to receive a German officer.

"An attempt to escape over Siedice toward the southeast ended with 12,000 being taken prisoner. Eighty guns, six armored cars and eleven planes also were seized.

"Despite overcast skies, the air force continued activity, notably east of the Vistula, where groups of retreating troops were so badly bombarded that the enemy was unable to avoid confusion in retreat.

"Radio stations at Wilno (Vilna) and Baranovitsy were destroyed by air attacks.

"On the western front the enemy attempted several local operations near Zweibruecken and suffered considerable losses. An adversary balloon was destroyed. No air attacks against Reich territory took place."

With the subsequent capture of the Brest-Litovsk citadel and the announcement that Lwow was now being besieged from three sides, it was evident that the high command regarded hard-pressed Polish divisions north of Lodz and Warsaw itself as the only trouble spots where Poles were holding out.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Polish radio station at Warsaw announced tonight that foreign consuls, include the veteran United States Consul General John K. Davis and his staff of a half-dozen Americans, would be permitted to leave the besieged city tomorrow morning under a German-Polish agreement.

The decision was reached tonight at a brief meeting of German and Polish plenipotentiaries outside Warsaw. Shortly before that announcement, the Polish legation here had announced the city would be defended to the "bitter end" despite the Nazi threat to annihilate it.

Consul General Davis has a record of nearly thirty years in the service. With him in Warsaw, it was reported, were Foreign Officers George J. Haering of New York, William M. Cramp of Pennsylvania, Douglas Jenkins Jr. of South Carolina, M. Williams Blake of Ohio and E. Tomlin Bailey of New Jersey.

The meeting of the plenipotentiaries began at 10 P. M. [5 P. M. New York time] and the announcement of plans for foreign consuls was broadcast at 11:40 P. M. [6:40 P. M. New York time].

The German utlimatum to Warsaw to surrender had expired. However, the meeting of the Polish and German representatives was arranged during the day while the Warsaw station broadcast appeals for continued resistance.

The broadcast of the action regarding foreigners came during a berak in what officials said was the "pamming" of the Warsaw station by Nazi broadcasts.

A German station broadcasting on the same wave length as Warsaw declared "Warsaw cannot hold out." This was said by observers to mean the city's leaders refused to accede to the Nazi ultimatum for its surrender despite Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's threat to blast it to pieces.

Up to widnight there was no indication here whether the German air and land forces had taken the threatened action.

Warsaw has charged, however, that Nazi planes and artillery have blasted civilian centers for many days.

The civilian population has been reduced to one plate of soup daily under what Polish officials said was a steady rain of shells and bombs from the Germans.

When the ultimatum expired this afternoon, the Warsaw station played Polish anthems and broadcast patriotic talks.

The weather in Poland was described as [illegible] bad, with heavy rains hampering the advance of the Nazi motorized equipment, especially around Lwow, where heavy fighting was said to be in progress.

BERLIN, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Warsaw radio station at 9:15 P. M. tonight [4:15 P. M. New York time] began broadcasting pro-German addresses and attacks on Great Britain. Listeners took the development as indicating probable occupation of Warsaw by Nazi troops.

Germans Shift Troops to West, Hammer Lines

French Say Entire Divisions March Up From Poland as War Theater Moves

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The French high command reported tonight that activity had slowed down after earlier German attacks on the western front.

Heavy movements of German troops from the east were seen by France as shifting the European war's main theater to the western front, where two forceful German attacks were begun. Simultaneously with the Soviet Russian advance on Poland, which might release German forces for use on the west, Nazi contingents struck twice at French advance positions.

French advices said their troops were holding firm at Perl, a mile and a half inside German territory near Luxemburg, and had turned back wave after wave of Germans attacking east of Saarbruecken, forty miles southeast of Perl.

The following is the text of the French high command's night communique:

"There is nothing of importance to note. Aerial activity has been reduced, due to weather conditions."

The French General Staff declared Germany was shifting entire divisions of troops and large air force units from the eastern front, where they have been fighting Poland, to the western front facing France.

Soviet Russia's march into Poland caught France unaware. Premier Edouard Daladier cut short a weekend inspection tour of the front lines and returned to Paris to assume charge of resulting diplomatic activity. Before arrival of the Premier, who also is War Minister and Foreign Minister, Under Secretary Auguste Champetier de Ribes held a long discussion with American Ambassador William C. Bullitt.

The head of Daladier's secretariat, Robert Coulondre, former French envoy to Berlin, conferred with Polish Ambassador Julius Luskaisewicz. The French and British governments were understood to be in almost continuous consultation on the new situation created by Russia's move.

Informed French said that if a major conflict developed between Poland and Russia, France might be faced with a state of war between herself and the Soviet Union, since France has pledged to aid Poland against any threat to Polish independence. Invocation of that pact brought France into war against Germany on Sept. 3.

French said their forces were clinging tenaciously to German territory won in the first two weeks of war. A semi-official summary of military developments reported the French lines were about twelve miles in advance of the Maginot fortifications all the way from the Moselle River, near the Luxemburg frontier, to the point where the frontier touches the Rhine. Since the French-German frontier twists continually, only part of that twelve-mile advance would be in German territory.

The French war communique issued this morning said:

"Late yesterday there were enemy attacks on two points of our front: east of the Moselle Valley, the other toward the center of the front between the Saar and Vosges. These attacks were repulsed.

"The latest information confirms the return on our front reported for several days of German forces returning from Poland. (Aviation and heavy units)."

The War Ministry, in summarizing the first two weeks of war, said "our mobilization has been completed perfectly," and asserted "we have assured the integrity of our national territory."

Announcement that German troops were being moved westward was said to indicate that the two-week attack on the Reich finally was bringing the effect desired by the French, but whether it was too late to relieve pressure on Poland remained to be seen.

Havas, the French news agency which has official connections, declared Russia's entry into Poland as yet contained no proof it was made in co-operation with Germany.

"Despite efforts of German propaganda" to make it appear the Russian advance was by Hitler's agreement, Havas declared, there was no evidence "that the Russian act is [illegible] entry of the Soviet Union into the war on Germany's side."

In Kaunas (Kovno), the French, Polish and British Ministers to Lithuania, reports to Paris said, held an emergency meeting while Foreign Minister Urbsyd conferred with German and Russian diplomatic representatives. Lithuanian forces along the Russian frontier were reinforced and the border with Poland was closed.

France continued to settle a war regime on the civilian population. The Paris prefecture of police issued notice that all radios must be removed from autos within forty-eight hours under military orders.

FASCIST HOSTILITY TO SOVIET DROPPED

Press Suddenly Begins Giving Space to Stories Praising Activities in Russia

FAR EAST PACT ACCLAIMED

No Immediate Comment on Polish Entry—Solidarity With Nazis Newly Evidenced

ROME, Sept. 17 (AP)—Fascist Italy greeted Russia's invasion of Poland today with indications that she had dropped her former animosity toward the U.S.S.R. and with signs of solidarity with Germany, her military ally.

While no official or semi-official comment was made immediately on the Russian advance into Poland, the Fascist press acclaimed the Soviet-Japanese accord to halt Mongolian-border fighting. The comments were written before news of the Polish move by Russia.

Foreign Minister Ciano's paper, the Telegrafo, Leghorn, said that the accord "must be received with lively satisfaction as an important contribution to the defense of what might be called the residue of peace still existing in the world."

The paper added that the accord served the laudable end of limiting the present struggle in Europe and expressed the hope that it would help "the triumph of order and civilization in the Far East."

Stress Berlin Reaction

Newspapers emphasized the favorable reception the accord received in Berlin.

While the first reaction of some diplomats was that the new role of Russia would lessen the chances of Italian participation in the war on Germany's side, the Fascist press gave no such indication.

Although up to a short time ago almost all news in Italian newspapers about Russia was unfavorable, dispatches appeared today reporting various achievements there.

A Milan paper published on the front page a picture and biographical sketch of the Russian War Commissar, Klementi I. Voroshiloff.

The newspapers in general, while not attacking Britain and France, continued to praise German soldiers in Poland for valor and efficiency.

Indications were that the Russian-Japanese understanding might have brought Japan once more into cooperation with the Rome-Berlin Axis, since General Juichi Terauchi, head of a Japanese mission, left yesterday for Berlin in the company of an Italian general, an Italian admiral, and a German admiral who came here a few days ago.

Revised Attitude Surmised

The mission came originally for important talks with Italian and German officials. The German-Russian non-aggression pact resulted in such a change of opinion that the mission changed its plans and spent its time mainly sightseeing.

Observers thought today, however, that General Terauchi might have resumed to some extent his original plans.

In the face of developments over the week-end there were indications in Rome that Italy was redoubling her preparation for any eventuality but for the present would not abandon her officially undeclared neutrality.

Italian ships are at sea and others are continuing to sail, but the newspapers are calling on the people to help the government in measures to conserve the country's resources, saying it is their duty to consume less.

Polish Envoy Protests 'Act Of Direct Aggression'

London, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Polish Embassy, charging that the entry of Soviet Russian troops into Poland constituted an "act of direct aggression," hurried a representative to the British Foreign Office tonight to confer on the new turn of events.

Factors in the enigmatic situation included:

1. The Soviet Government informed Sir William that it would pursue a policy of neutrality with Britain.
2. The Polish Ambassador remained in Moscow.
3. While the Polish Ambassador branded the Russian thrust as "wanton aggression," the British diplomatic view was that the attitude of the Polish Government itself is not clear and that if it flees into Rumania it cannot operate.

Official quarters said there could be no speculation on implications under the pact that binds Great Britain to fight aggressors of Poland until the precise facts are determined.

Pledge To Be Honored

Arthur Greenwood, deputy leader of the Labor Opposition in the House of Commons, asserted repercussions of Russia's action "cannot yet be foreseen."

"One thing, however, is certain, whatever may happen," he added, "Britain's pledge to Poland will be honored. Polish freedom is a symbol of all the hopes which we cherish—the final overthrow of tyranny and the liberation of the forces of democracy and freedom."

The Polish Embassy statement recalled the Polish-Russian non-aggression pact concluded in Moscow in 1932 and a protocol extending it until 1945 and added:

"Thus by this act of wanton aggression the Soviet Government stands self-condemned as a violator of its international obligations."

There was no comment from the Russian Embassy here. A spokesman said "the situation calls for nothing from us."

Registration Set For Sept. 29

Britain, pressing detailed preparations for efficient prosecution of a long war, set September 29 for registration of every man, woman and child in the nation. The only exceptions will be members of the fighting forces.

The census of personnel will be compiled by 65,000 enumerators to provide a comprehensive register of all residents, both native and alien, to meet as far as possible all contingencies of war conditions.

30.24-3405

30.24 3405

Registration will form the basis for issuance of ration cards and the cards may be used as a voucher of identity in support of claims for payments under war benefit plans.

New Leaflets Dropped

The British Information Ministry disclosed tonight that Royal Air Force planes have dropped three different sets of leaflets over Germany.

The third set, as released by the Ministry, read:

"Germans . . . we hate war as much as we know you do, but remember Britain never give[s] way. . . . We shall never give up.

The message, like the other, reiterated "despite the efforts of all men of good will to avert the catastrophe, the Nazi Government has plunged the world into war."

The Ministry of Information announced also that neutral ships under detention in the British Isles numbered thirty-three yesterday and twenty-five this morning. They were held for search for possible contraband.

British Ministry Denies Its War Aims As Stated By Reich In Broadcast

London, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Information Ministry announced tonight the British Government "has not yet made known a precise definition of its war aims," which it said a German broadcast had listed as restoration of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria and Polish annexation of Danzig.

Terming the German report "completely without foundation," the Ministry said Prime Minister Chamberlain had made clear "certain fixed principles" of Britain's war aims. Chamberlain has reiterated his aim is to smash Hitlerism.

In another "rebuttal" statement, the Ministry said Germany, accusing Britain of warring against women and children by blockade, threatened retaliation.

Official circles in London interpreted the German statement, said the Ministry, as an indication the Nazis recognize the efficacy of the blockade, which "has for its aim the early termination of hostilities with a minimum of violence and is recognized by all civilized nations as a perfectly legitimate and proper weapon."

Declaring Germany could not blockade England, the Ministry added Germany "has resorted to means internationally recognized as illegal . . . by inhumane attacks on merchant shipping."

Scandinavian Leaders To Discuss War Problems

Meet Today on Heels of Soviet March Into Poland

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 17 (AP).—The Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of Norway, Sweden and Denmark are to meet in Copenhagen tomorrow to discuss mutual problems growing out of the European war.

The meeting will follow closely on the heels of the Russian Army's march into Poland, which has complicated further the precarious position of the neutral northern countries between British and German blockades.

The conferees will include:

Prime Ministers Aimo Kaarlo Cajander of Finland, Johann Nygaardsvold of Norway, Per Albin Hansson of Sweden and Thovald Stauning of Denmark, and Foreign Ministers Eljas Ersko of Finland, Halvdan Koht of Norway, Richard J. Sandler of Sweden and Dr. Peter Munch of Denmark. Each will be accompanied by a secretary, but no experts from the respective ministries were expected to participate.

No agenda have been published, but it is understood discussion will touch on all problems of neutrality, trade and other repercussions of the hostilities. No communique was expected until after the conference closed Tuesday night.

Bulgarians Hail Soviet Invasion of Polish Soil

Successful Campaign May Mean Return of Dobruja Region

SOFIA, Sept. 17 (AP).—Soviet Russia's entry into Poland was hailed today in many Bulgarian quarters as heralding the beginning of active Soviet help in changing Europe's post-World War boundaries.

Bulgaria is racially and linguistically close to Russia. The belief was expressed in Sofia that Bulgaria would get back the Dobruja region whic hshe lost to Rumania in the event Russia launched a successful campaign to regain Bessarabia from Rumania.

Turkey and Soviet Said To Plan New Amity Pact

Ankara Neutrality Would Close Black Sea to Allies

ANKARA, Sept. 17 (AP).—Diplomatic circles heard persistent reports today of negotiations for a new pact between Turkey and Soviet Russia to reinforce their friendship. It was understood Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu would leave within a few days for Moscow, at the invitation of Josef V. Stalin, for discussions to "prevent the war from spreading into a world war."

Observers pointed out that despite Turkey's mutual assistance obligations to Britain and France, she lost no time making plain a desire for continued warm friendship with the Soviet Union, whose troops are massed along her frontiers.

The state-inspired Turkish press has stressed since the Russian-German non-aggression treaty that the country has no quarrel with the Reich" and that Turkey's friendship with the Soviet is more important than any other consideration.

Some diplomats said they felt there was slight doubt that Turkey would remain neutral should Russia become an active participant in the war. Such a stand would close the Black Sea to British-French naval forces as in the World War, since war vessels would be unable to pass through the Dardanelles without violating Turkey's neutrality. With the Black Sea closed, Russia could send raw materials up the Danube to Germany, observers pointed out.

Belgian Mobilization Calls Army Veterans

BRUSSELS, Sept. 17 (AP).—The National Defense Ministry ordered further mobilization measures today, calling up mainly army veterans.

The Ministry previously ordered its air patrol brought to full strength in defense of Belgian frontiers. All leaves of army officers have been canceled.

The Ministry said the order was a "precautionary move."

CARGO SEIZED AT HONGKONG

British Declare Metal On Danish Ship From Hamburg Contraband

Hongkong, Sept. 17 (AP)—Cargo alleged to be contraband consisting of iron and steel consigned to Shanghai was sized aboard the Danish steamer Malaya by British officials today.

The Malaya came from Hamburg, Germany.

SURPRISE FOR YUGOSLAVIA

Russia's Invasion Of Poland Brings Neutrality Warning

Belgrade, Sept. 17 (AP)—Reports that Russian troops had invaded Poland came as a tremendous surprise in Yugoslavia today. Informed quarters stressed that Yugoslavia must maintain absolute neutrality pending developments.

Zoo to Lend Elephants To Farmers in Germany

They'll Serve as Tractors; Camels to Pull Plows

HAMBURG, Germany, Sept. 17 (AP).—The elephants, camels and shetland ponies of the world-famous Hagenbeck Zoo are being given special war courses these days.

Elephants will be lent to farmers as substitutes for tractors as soon as they have been trained by their guards. (Gasoline and oil for the war machine will be saved).

The camels are attending daily courses in pulling plows—while the ponies have learned to take the Hagenbeck brothers to places formerly reached by automobile. (More gasoline and oil savings).

Even the fish have been hit by the war—for Hagenbeck's Aquarium has been converted into an air-raid shelter.

Polish Submarine Limps Into Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 17 (AP).—The damaged Polish submarine Sep, with an exhausted crew of sixty-seven aboard, was taken to a harbor near here today and disarmed. Food supplies for the crew were depleted and several men were ill.

The Sep (Vulture) was damaged in an encounter in Gdynia Harbor and could not dive. The vessel is a 273-foot craft equipped for mine laying and was built in 1936. A sistership, the Orzel, took refuge at Tallinn (Reval), Estonia, several days ago.

Singapore Sets Tin Price

Singapore, Sept. 17 (AP)—The maximum price of unwrought tin from here and Selangor was fixed officially today at £230 (about $920) a ton.

Trawler Is Sunk

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Fleetwood trawler Rudyard Kipling was sunk today by a German submarine which allowed a lifeboat containing the crew to within five miles of the coast.

Lavender Sandbags Add Dash to Unter Den Linden

Berlin Resorting to Shaving Mugs to Store Marmalade

BERLIN, Sept. 17 (AP).—War oddities in Berlin:

A hausfrau in a china store buying twelve shaving mugs. "Just the thing for marmalade," she observed. Because of a shortage of butter and the possibility of rationing all products, householders are making as much marmalade as possible. As a result, no jelly glasses could be bought anywhere in Berlin.

There has been a brisk sale of canes and walking sticks. Women are buying them, as well as men, because they find them handy to tap along the sidewalk giving warning of the approach these nights of blackout.

A hard question which is bothering many merchants: Is a can of sardines in oil to be regarded as fish or oil? The question is important because on the decision depends which coupon is to be clipped from the customers' ration cards.

Esthetic note from Unter den Linden: Sandbags with lavender stripes. They are more attractive and were used by a smart millinery shop to give an artistic touch to war measures, which otherwise are drab.

Complaint of belated Americans trying to get home: We need a police permit to get out, which means standing in line anywhere from three to seven hours. We also need a certificate from the tax office and special permits to move baggage. This may be done within a week—but then arises the question of which neighboring country will permit Americans to enter to catch a boat. Denmark, for example, requires approval by the police, which must be obtained from Copenhagen before going to the border.

3 LATIN REPUBLICS COORDINATE NAVIES

Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay Set Up Neutrality Patrol

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 17 (AP)—South America's three Atlantic seaboard nations, Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, established today a coordinated naval patrol of their territorial waters to safeguard their neutrality in the European war.

As Argentina's fleet patrolled that nation's coast from Buenos Aires to Southern Patagonia, the Uruguayan cruiser Uruguay, aided by three small gunboats, the Zapican, Huracan and Corsario, watched over the coast from Montevideo northward for seventy-five miles to Punta del Este, Uruguay. Three armed cutters moved along the Plata River estuary off Montevideo.

Brazilian vigilance was concentrated north of Punta del Este to Belem.

The foreign ministries of the three nations were busy preparing diplomatic measures further to enforce their neutrality.

Dr. Jose Maria Cantilo, Argentine foreign minister, studied the results of a conference held yesterday with the ambassadors of Brazil and Uruguay. All three countries have been important exporters of foodstuffs and raw materials to Europe. Argentina and Uruguay particularly shared the Eureopean meat and cereal markets.

With the prices of these staples rising and transatlantic navigation becoming even more risky, the Uruguayan and Argentine Finance Ministers were expected to have much to discuss in a meeting to be held here soon.

Another topic is expected to be development of home industries with an interchange of products by South American nations.

Brazil and Argentina have industries which became important after the World War. In common with the rest of South America, they may now become larger markets than before for North American manufactured products, but also may contribute products of their own to an enhanced trade within the Western Hemisphere.

2 AMERICANS DIE AS SHIP HITS MINE

Four Others Among Survivors Reaching Netherlands After Nazi Craft Blows Up

DRIFTED IN PERIL 2 NIGHTS

Milwaukee Youth Called Hero —U. S. Liner Saves 29 as Freighter Sinks

FLUSHING, the Netherlands, Sept. 17 (AP)—Four battered American survivors of the Norwegian freighter Ronda, sunk by a mine off northern Holland, described graphically today two days and nights without food or water in a tiny lifeboat before they were rescued by an Italian steamer. Seventeen persons, including two Americans, were lost with the ship.

Karl Hilgendorf of Milwaukee, described as a hero in the struggle to stay afloat, summed up the attitude of the survivors with three words—"We were lucky."

"How we ever made it I don't know," declared Josephine Allen Duncan of Richmond, Va., who was carried overboard by waves.

"We bailed out the lifeboat continuously with only our shoes for buckets," said Douglas Miller, son of George Miller of Ann Arbor, Mich., a university Michigan student.

Woman Girl, 13, Drowns

Mrs. Elizabeth Etchison of Richmond, an aunt of Miss Duncan, and sixteen members of the crew were the other survivors. Ann, 13-year-old daughter of Mrs. Etchison, and Gordon Felts of Odessa, Mo., singer, who had been studying in Germany—the only other passengers—and fifteen crew members drowned.

The Ronda struck a mine off the Island of Terschelling in the North Sea Wednesday, exploded and broke into three pieces. The Americans, en route from Antwerp to New York fleeing war dangers, were rescued Friday by the Italian steamer Provvidenza, which brought them here late last night.

Mrs. Etchison, suffering from shock and exhaustion, rested at a hotel. The other Americans were bruised and shaky, but able to be about, though several crew members were hospitalized.

Mr. Hilgendorf was credited with saving Mrs. Etchison, who was unable to swim, by tying her to two floating planks until a Norwegian sailor helped them into a boat.

"We were eating luncheon about 1 P. M. when the mine went off," Miss Duncan related. "Three other explosions followed immediately. Somehow we rushed to deck. I was by the bridge when water rushed up to a terrific height as one end of the ship went down. I was thrown inside and kept hitting my head. I thought I was done for.

Made a Raft of Planks

"Then I was in the water holding to a barrel. Two Norwegians improvised a raft with planks. Other people kept swimming up to us all the time. The wireless operator, who was among those rescued, was able to send an S O S, but lacked time to give the name of the ship or her position.

"The ship's carpenter grabbed a rope, to which was tied a small boat trailing the ship, and broke the rope with his hands. There was no time to use lifeboats and that tiny boat, built for ten people, was the only one available. Sailors rowed about collecting all they could. All except officers were without coats, many were without shirts and some had on only their pajamas.

"The Norwegian sailors were magnificent. Five built a raft to keep from loading the little boat too much. They stayed on the raft two nights, hooked to the boat by an oar.

"There was lots of rain, and I cupped my hands to drink some, since we had no food or water in the boat. The raft began to collapse Friday, so we all had to use the boat—literally crushed atop one another. It was cold and we stayed close together to keep warm.

"The boat was never used before and was not watertight, so the boys bailed day and night. Then we jammed a hole in the side of the boat. One man had on a leather jacket. The sailors took all the rubbery pieces of it to plug the leak."

Saw Three Planes at Sea

Miss Duncan said that during the two and a half days adrift the party saw three planes they believed them German but saw no ships until Friday afternoon.

"The sailors sighted smoke and rowed hard toward a point they believed Holland," she said. "About sunset we saw fishing boats and lights, which we were certain were from Holland, but the men decided to wait until morning before landing.

"The current was very strong and made their task exceedingly difficult. It was cold and stormy, too. About 11 P. M. we saw a ship—the Provvidenza—headed in our direction. The second mate of our boat whistled and the captain heard him. Thus we were rescued.

"Somehow we got to the side of the boat and the excited Italians lowered rope ladders. We took on renewed strength and got aboard. The Italians took us into a huge kitchen and fed us water, whisky and food in front of a big fire. Then they put us to bed, where we got a good rest. We arrived at Flushing about midnight but stayed aboard until late this morning."

Miss Duncan said her mother, Mrs. T. B. Scanes, with whom she had been living in England for the last three and a half years, had wanted her to go to America after the war started but she planned to remain in Europe to do war work.

Her aunt, Mrs. Etchison, "bore up splendidly and, despite the loss of her child, kept up faith in all of us that we'd be saved," the American girl said. Mrs. Etchison has been living in Brussels for two years, teaching in an American school.

Mr. Miller, the Michigan youth, said he had "quite a cold, but I feel pretty good since I got some rest."

"I was washed off the deck by water as the back end of the boat went down," he related. "I struggled to get to the surface and I thought I'd never do it. I was never under water that long before—must have been two minutes."

Mr. Miller said he had gone to London Aug. 1 for a vacation, but planned to go home on the next available boat.

"We are all going to Rotterdam tomorrow to see the American consul about what can be done," he explained.

Mr. Hilgendorf said he had landed in London July 1, cycled through England and France and was in Germany when the war started.

"I heard Hitler's speech of Sept. 1 and headed for Paris," he said. "Then I went to Antwerp, where I caught the Ronda. I thought we had hit another ship when the first explosion came. I ran to the top deck and had started down, when more explosions came. I was thrown into the water and felt everything was getting black before I came up.

"There was a Norwegian near by with sort of a raft. I saw Mrs. Etchison, who couldn't swim, and went over to her. I tried her to two planks and paddled with my feet until the Norwegian saw the boat and we managed to get aboard. All of us were very sick from oil spilled by the Ronda. I came ashore with one shoe, having used the other for bailing."

Felts Known Here as Singer

ODESSA, Mo., Sept. 17 (AP)—Gordon Lee Felts, 26 years old, reported drowned in the sinking of the Norwegian motorship Ronda, was returning home from Germany, where a singing contract was interrupted by the war.

Accompanied by his teacher, Franjo Stoffer of Vienna, he was to have begun a ten-month singing engagement with the State Opera at Saarbruecken on Sept. 1.

The last word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Felts, was a letter from Rotterdam, dated Sept. 4, in which he said he was sailing for home as soon as he could obtain passage on a neutral boat.

Mr. Felts was graduated from Park College, Parkville, Mo., in 1934. Later he went to Long Island, N. Y., and sang one season with the Schubert Chorus at Jones Beach. Before going to Germany last December he sang with the St. Louis Municipal Opera.

Survivors, besides his parents, include a sister, Mrs. Helen Van Ness of New York City, and a brother, Robert, of Seattle.

Hero Was on Bicycle Tour

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 17 (AP)—Karl Hilgendorf, described as a hero in the rescue and struggle of four Americans to stay afloat after the Norwegian freighter Ronda was sunk by a mine, was on a bicycle tour of Europe when the war broke out.

With Mr. Hilgendorf's safe arrival in [illegible]shing, it was the first word h[illegible]ther, F. C. Hilgendorf of subu[illegible] Whitefish Bay, had received [illegible]s son for several weeks.

Mr. [illegible]endorf landed in London July 1 and cycled through England and France and was in Germany when the war started, the father said. He was graduated from the University of Wisconsin Journalism School two years ago.

Trawler Sunk by Submarine

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Fleetwood trawler Rudyard Kipling was sunk today by a German submarine, which towed a lifeboat containing the crew to within five miles of the coast.

"Stood by until we arrived. Submarine also offered towage toward Ireland if not located.

Plane And Sub Battle

"Survivors cheered submarine commander.

"During rescue operation airplane suddenly appeared, bombarded submarine. Submarine responded with machine-gun fire, then disappeared, leaving very heavy white smoke on surface.

"Survivors' health generally good. PEDERSEN."

Lloyd's gives the Kafiristan as of 5,193 gross tons and owned by the Hindustan Steam Shipping Company, Ltd., with Newcastle the port of registry.

The American Farmer left London presumably last Friday with about 135 passengers aboard, the United States Lines said.

Trawler Is Sunk

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Sept. 17 (AP)—The Fleetwood trawler Rudyard Kipling was sunk today by a German submarine which towed a lifeboat containing the crew to within five miles of the coast.

Plane Bombs Nazi Sub That Sinks British Ship

Captain Of American Farmer Reports Battle At Sea After Rescuing 29 Of Kafiristan's Crew

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 17— Capt. H. A. Pedersen, master of the United States liner, American Farmer, reported to line officers tonight that as he was rescuing twenty-nine persons from the sinking British ship, Kafiristan, an airplane bombed the submarine which had torpedoded the Kafiristan.

Pedersen said the submarine, apparently German, replied with machine guns and "disappeared, leaving a very heavy white smoke on the surface."

The line said that Pedersen and those aboard the American Farmer apparently witnessed the battle between the British airplane and submarine far off the coast of Ireland.

Captain Pedersen's Message

The message from Captain Pedersen read:

"Rescued twenty-nine members of the crew British steamer Kafiristan sunk by submarine 400 miles west of Scilly (Isles). Six men missing due to submarine action.

"Submarine assisted us to locate boats, using rockets and blinker. Survivors report submarine commander very humane.

28 AMERICANS ON ATHENIA IN MISSING LIST

State Department Adds Efforts To Locate Them Continue

Suggests Some May Have Been Saved, Unknown To Officials

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 17—The State Department announced today that twenty-eight Americans believed to have been passengers on the torpedoed British steamer Athenia still were unaccounted for.

The department said efforts were continuing by the United States representatives in Great Britain and Ireland to locate the missing persons.

The department listed these as missing:

JOHN LUCIAN BERNARD, Somerville, Massachusetts.
PETER BIRCHALL, Los Angeles, Cal.
HUBERT BOWN, Minneapolis.
WILLIAM BROWN, Chicago.
MRS. SARAH J. BURDETT, Cambridge, Massachusetts.
MRS. MARGARET CAMPBELL, no address.
CORA AND JOHN CLARK GILROY, Detroit.
[illegible] ELLEN HANNAH, Elizabeth, N. J.
[illegible] HARRINGTON, South Boston, Massachusetts.
ROBERT SHENTON HARRIS, Fredericksburg, Va.
MRS. ELLEN SWANN HOWLAND, Philadelphia.
BRIDGET MCERLEAN, Philadelphia.
MARGARET K. MCGOORTY, Woodside, Long Island.
ALEXANDER NICOL, North Andover, Massachusetts.
MRS. EDITH NICOL and Marion Edith Nicol, North Andover, Mass.
ALEXANDER ROSS PARK, Philadelphia.
MRS. ANNE QUINE, Fullerton, Cal.
MRS. (GERTRUDE) FRANK GEORGE REED, Buffalo, N. Y.
MRS. (ALICE GRAHAM) WILLIAM ROBINSON, New York city.
FRED TINNEY, Madison, Wis.
MADELINE TINNEY, Madison, Wis.
HARRIET TOLLEY, Ponca City, Okla.
SARAH WARENREICH (unable to identify).
MRS. (MATHILDE) E. T. WILKES, New York city.
JONATHAN WILKES, New York city.
DAVID WRIGHT, Scarsdale, N. Y.

Not Certain

The department said it was unable to say with certainty that the addresses were correct.

"It is possible some of the persons whose names are listed may have been landed somewhere and failed to communicate with local officials or with our ambassador or minister," it added. "If any friend or relative have received a communication from any person whose name appears on this list, indicating that that person has survived, the Department of State will be glad indeed to receive that information."

C29

(THE FOLLOWING ACCOUNT OF THE TORPEDOING AND SINKING OF THE BRITISH SHIP ATHENIA WAS WRITTEN BY WILLIAM BUCHANAN, STAFF WRITER FOR THE DANVILLE (VA.) REGISTER, WHO WAS VACATIONING IN EUROPE WHEN THE GERMAN-POLISH WAR BROKE OUT. BUCHANAN, WHO WAS ABOARD THE ATHENIA WHEN SHE WAS STRUCK, MAILED THE FOLLOWING DISPATCH FROM GLASGOW).

BY WILLIAM BUCHANAN

STAFF WRITER DANVILLE (VA.) REGISTER.

GLASGOW, SEPT. 6—(BY MAIL)—(AP)—THE ATHENIA WAS CROWDED. SHE WAS BUILT TO CARRY 450, BUT UNDER THE EMERGENCY CONDITIONS, SHE HAD ABOARD HER ABOUT 1,500, MORE THAN THE QUEEN MARY USUALLY CARRIES.

AS WE WENT DOWN TO DINNER THE SECOND DAY OUT, THERE WAS A NOTICE THAT SINCE HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT WAS AT WAR WITH GERMANY, PRE-

1939

30.24 3407

CAUTIONS WOULD HAVE TO BE EVEN MORE STRICTLY ENFORCED. "NO SMOKING! NO LIGHTING OF CIGARETS ON DECK AFTER DARK; NO PORTHOLES THAT WILL LET OUT LIGHT."

I WAS CHATTING WITH SOME CHAPS AT THE STERN WHEN THERE WAS A TREMENDOUS CLANG, AS IF A HUGE IRON DOOR SLAMMED. CHAIRS LEAPED SEVERAL INCHES STRAIGHT UP FROM THE DECK AND SMASHED BACK DOWN. SLIVERS OF WOOD SHOWERED THE DECK, PEOPLE THROWN TO THE FLOOR, LEAPED UP AND MILLED ABOUT SHRIEKING.

SEP 18 1939

AS I RAN TO SHELTER FROM THE FALLING DEBRIS, I SAW AND HEARD ANOTHER EXPLOSION AND A GEYSER OF WATER SOME HUNDRED YARDS OFF TO THE PORT SIDE.

THE SHIP WAS CANTING, AND SINKING VISIBLY, AS I WALKED CAREFULLY AMONG THE WOMEN AND CHILDREN WHO WERE MILLING ABOUT AND CRYING IN A LITTER OF DECK CHAIRS.

I STARTED FOR MY CABIN BUT THERE WERE NO STAIRS THERE, JUST A HOLE IN THE WALL AND, CLIMBING OUT OF THE HOLE WHERE THE STARS HAD BEEN, WAS A WOMAN WITH BLOOD ON HER FACE.

AS THE SHIP APPARENTLY STOPPED SINKING, I CONSIDERED STAYING ABOARD HER, BUT CHANGED MY MIND AND WENT FOR THE LAST LIFE BOAT. THE NEAREST THING TO A SEAMAN IN OUR BOAT WAS A BARTENDER, SO WE APPOINTED HIM SKIPPER. THERE COULDN'T HAVE BEEN A WORST CHOICE. HE DIDN'T EVEN KNOW HOW TO HANDLE THE RUDDER; HE DIDN'T KNOW WHERE TO FIND THE OAR LOCKS OR THE FLARES.

HE STOOD IN THE STERN, AND POINTING: "TURN 'ER THIS WAY," OR "TURN 'ER THAT WAY."

I FUNCTIONED AS AN OAR LOCK, THE OAR BETWEEN MY ARMPITS AS I LEANED OVER THE SIDE OF THE BOAT WHILE A UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA PROFESSOR PULLED ON THE OAR AND A SCOTCH SHIP-BUILDER PUSHED. THE ROWERS TIRED AND WE DRIFTED THROUGH THE NIGHT SIDE-LONG, ROCKING IN THE TROUGH OF THE WAVES--I WAS SEASICK AND VERY THIRSTY.

WE DRIFTED NEAR ONE OF THE RESCUE SHIPS, NEAR ENOUGH TO SEE THE OTHER BOATS BEING PICKED UP, BUT WERE SO TIRED WE COULDN'T ROW TO IT. WE DRIFTED PAST IT AND BACK INTO THE BLACKNESS AROUND THE CIRCLE OF ITS LIGHT.

THEN, ABOUT 10 HOURS AFTER WE HAD LEFT THE SHIP, A NAVAL VESSEL ROLLED UP, THREW US A LINE, LOWERED LADDERS, TOSSED DOWN NOOSES TO PULL THE WOMEN UP, AND IN 15 MINUTES ALL 70 OF US WERE ABOARD. ALTHOUGH GROGGY FROM THE STRAIN, WE WERE WELL ENOUGH OFF TO HAVE A GOOD LAUGH WHEN ONE OLD GENTLEMAN LOST HIS PANTS CLIMBING UP THE ROPE LADDER.

I DON'T KNOW WHAT THE OTHERS DID, BUT I SLEPT ALMOST STEADILY UNTIL THE NEXT MORNING. WE WERE RATHER CROWDED, AND MANY WERE STILL SEASICK, BUT THOSE IRON BULKHEADS WERE SO SUBSTANTIAL THEY LOOKED LUXURIOUS.

SEP 18 1939

WE WERE LANDED ON A WHARF IN GREENOCK. OTHER RESCUE SHIPS PULLED ALONGSIDE AND AS WE LEFT FOR GLASGOW, 10 BUSES FULL OF US, THE CITIZENS PACKED THE SIDEWALKS, WAVING AND CHEERING. THEY CARRIED US TO THE BIGGEST HOTEL HERE, GAVE US A SUMPTUOUS DINNER, PROVIDED US WITH LUXURIOUS ROOMS, PAJAMAS, SEVERAL DOLLARS FOR INDIVIDUAL EXPENSES, AND BEST OF ALL, TOOTH BRUSHES AND TOOTH PASTE.

TODAY WE WERE GIVEN CLOTHES ENOUGH TO TIDE US OVER. I TOOK A SHIRT, TIE, SOCKS, UNDERWEAR, AND SINCE THEY HAD NO OTHERS TO FIT, AN IMMENSE PAIR OF HIGH-QUARTER SHOES--AND A GAS MASK.

MJ603PED

A23

(NYC IN)

INSERT UNDATED CHRONOLOGICAL SHIPS SUNK

SEPT. 13--NORWEGIAN MOTORSHIP RONDA. 5,136 TONS. STRUCK MINE OFF ISLAND OF TERSCHELLING, NEAR NORTHERN COAST OF NETHERLANDS. 17 PERSONS INCLUDING TWO AMERICANS DROWNED WHEN SHIP BROKE IN THREE PARTS. AT LEAST 20 PERSONS SURVIVED, RESCUED BY STEAMER PROVIDANTIA. RONDA WAS ENROUTE TO UNITED STATES FROM ANTWERP.

SEP 18 1939

MQ132PED

BULLETIN

FIRST LEAD POLISH

BERLIN, SEPT 17-(AP)-THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND TONIGHT BROADCAST DIRECT TO WARSAW DIRECTIONS FOR REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CIVILIAN POPULATION AND FOREIGNERS TO NEGOTIATE UNDER WHITE FLAGS FOR WITHDRAWAL FROM THE BELEAGURED CITY.

SEP 18 1939

MQ209PED

A33

BULLETIN MATTER

BERLIN--FIRST ADD FIRST LEAD POLISH X X X BELEAGURED CITY.

THE BROADCAST WAS IN REPLY TO A RADIO MESSAGE ANNOUNCED AS RECEIVED FROM INSIDE THE CITY ASKING THE NAZIS TO RECEIVE POLISH REPRESENTATIVES TO DISCUSS A GERMAN ULTIMATUM THAT WARSAW SURRENDER.

THE HIGH COMMAND'S MESSAGE WENT TO WARSAW AT 6:10 P.M. (12:10 P.M. E.S.T.) AND SAID THE PROPER REPRESENTATIVES WOULD BE EXPECTED TO APPEAR UNDER WHITE FLAGS AT 10 P.M. (4 P.M. E.S.T.)

SEP 18 1939

MQ212PED

THE HIGH COMMAND'S MESSAGE SAID:

"REPLYING TO YOUR APPEAL, WE STATE THAT OFFICERS WITH A WHITE FLAG FOR THE EVACUATION OF THE WARSAW POPULATION AND REPRESENTATIVES OF THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS FOR THE EVACUATION OF THE WARSAW DIPLOMATIC CORPS AND FOREIGN COLONIES ARE EXPECTED TONIGHT AT 10 O'CLOCK.

"EACH MUST COME IN A MOTOR CAR ALONG THE PRAGA-MINSK MAZOWIECKI ROAD (EAST OF WARSAW) TO THE GERMAN ADVANCE GUARDS. THE CARS MUST HAVE FULL HEADLIGHTS AND WHITE FLAGS.

"POLES MUST TAKE CARE THAT ON 2,000 METERS (ONE AND ONE-FOURTH MILES) TO THE RIGHT AND LEFT OF THE STREET ALL FIRING CEASES. THE GERMANS WILL ACT SIMILARLY. THIS MESSAGE MUST BE CONFIRMED IMMEDIATELY ON 1,790 KILOCYCLES."

THE MESSAGE WAS BROADCAST ON THE REGULAR AIR WAVES AND WAS HEARD BY ORDINARY RADIO LISTENERS.

IT WAS REPEATED FREQUENTLY WITH THE INTRODUCTION "ATTENTION, ATTENTION, WARSAW!"

THE GERMAN RADIO EARLIER HAD ANNOUNCED THAT THE GERMAN ARMY OUTSIDE WARSAW HAD BEEN ASKED BY RADIO FROM INSIDE WARSAW TO RECEIVE POLISH REPRESENTATIVES.

SEP 18 1939

DNB, GERMAN X X X ETC., SECOND GRAPH.

MQ233PED

A14

BULLETIN MATTER

BERLIN--FIRST ADD POLISH X X X CITY SURRENDER.

SEP 18 1939

DNB, GERMAN OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY, SUBSEQUENTLY ISSUED THE FOLLOWING DISPATCH UNDER A BERLIN DATE:

1939

30.24-3409

30.24 3409

"AFTER HAVING YESTERDAY REFUSED TO RECEIVE A GERMAN EMISSARY SENT TO CONFER WITH HIM, THE WARSAW COMMANDER TODAY BY RADIO ASKED THE GERMAN ARMY COMMAND TO RECEIVE A POLISH EMISSARY. WILLINGNESS TO RECEIVE A POLISH EMISSARY WAS TRANSMITTED BY THE GERMAN SIDE TO THE WARSAW COMMANDER."

THE HIGH COMMAND IN BERLIN SAID NEGOTIATIONS FOR WARSAW'S SURRENDER HAD NOT GONE FAR ENOUGH FOR IT TO MAKE ANY STATEMENT REGARDING THE WARSAW COMMANDER'S ACTION.

WARSAW REPRESENTED ONE OF THE FEW REMAINING STRONGHOLDS OF POLISH RESISTANCE TO GERMAN ARMS AS SOVIET RUSSIAN TROOPS ALSO BEGAN POURING INTO THE POLISH STATE.

EARLIER, THE GERMAN ARMY HIGH COMMAND HAD ANNOUNCED THE FALL OF KUTNO, 75 MILES WEST OF WARSAW, AND OF DEBLIN, SOUTHEAST OF THE EMBATTLED CAPITAL.

REPORTS FROM THE FRONT ALSO SAID THAT GERMANS HAD CAPTURED THE CITADEL OF BREST-LITOVSK (BRZESC), EAST OF WARSAW, AND THAT THE CITY'S ENTIRE FORTIFIED WORKS THUS HAD FALLEN INTO NAZI HANDS.

THE CITY OUTSIDE THE CITADEL ALREADY HAD BEEN CAPTURED.

SIX HUNDRED PRISONERS WERE REPORTED TAKEN WHEN THE CITADEL FELL.

HEAVY GERMAN BATTERIES HAD BEEN TRAINED ON WARSAW AWAITING THE END TODAY OF A 12-HOUR ULTIMATUM GIVEN YESTERDAY FOR THE POLISH FORCES DEFENDING THE CITY TO SURRENDER.

MQ1243PED

SEP 18 1939

BERLIN-SEPT-17

MEANWHILE, BERLIN ITSELF WAS CONCERNED ABOUT TWO MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSIONS IN THE HEART OF THE CITY. BOTH OCCURRED IN DOORWAYS DURING LAST NIGHT'S BLACKOUT.

SEP 18 1939

THE FIRST AT THE AIR MINISTRY--HEADQUARTERS OF FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN GOERING--SHATTERED HALF-A-DOZEN BIG FRONT WINDOWS IN STORES ACROSS THE STREET, THE LEIPZIGERSTRASSE. THE FORCE OF THE SECOND BLAST POCKMARKED THE DOORWAY OF THE CENTRAL POLICE STATION.

POLICE BLOCKED OFF THE RESPECTIVE STREETS AND OFFICIALS DECLINED TO COMMENT FURTHER THAN TO SAY THAT INVESTIGATORS "WERE ON THE TRAIL OF THE PERPETRATORS."

SEP 18 1939

NO ONE WAS INJURED.

439

BULLETIN

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, SEPT 17-(AP)-THE POLISH LEGATION TODAY ANNOUNCED IT HAD RECEIVED RADIO REPORTS FROM A POLISH RADIO STATION THAT A SOVIET RUSSIAN ATTACK ON MOLODECZNO, ABOUT 20 MILES FROM THE RUSSIAN FRONTIER, HAD BEEN REPULSED BY POLISH TROOPS.

MQ234PED

SEP 18 1939

THE LEGATION SAID THE RUSSIANS APPARENTLY WERE AIMING THREE SEPARATE DRIVES AGAINST WILNO, POLAND'S NORTHERNMOST PROVINCE, AND TWO OTHER ATTACKS AGAINST PINSK IN CENTRAL EASTERN POLAND.

THE ATTACKS, SWIFTLY FOLLOWING THE SOVIET UNION'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF INTENTION TO TAKE OVER THE EASTERN SECTIONS OF POLAND, WERE SAID TO BE FOLLOWING THE MAIN EAST-WEST RAILWAY LINES.

MQ239PED

A130

WITH FRENCH

SEP 18 1939

PARIS, SEPT 17-(AP)-PREMIER EDOUARD DALADIER RETURNED TO HIS HEADQUARTERS HERE TONIGHT AFTER VISITING HIS ARMY OF POILUS IN FRONT LINE TRENCHES ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

THE 55-YEAR-OLD PREMIER LEFT HIS PARIS OFFICE YESTERDAY AT 1:30 P.M. (7:30 A.M. EST) AND DEVOTED A DAY AND A HALF TO AN INSPECTION

OF ADVANCED POSITIONS IN THE SAAR AREA AND FRATERNIZING WITH HIS SOLDIERS.

THE LINES VISITED BY THE PREMIER WERE SAID TO BE IN GERMAN TERRITORY WRESTED FROM GERMAN TROOPS IN RECENT HEAVY FIGHTING.

IT WAS THE FIRST TIME DALADIER HAD SET FOOT ON GERMAN SOIL SINCE HE ATTENDED THE MUNICH CONFERENCE LAST SEPTEMBER.

SO SECRET WAS THE PREMIER'S DEPARTURE THAT ONLY THE BARE NEWS HE HAD GONE WITH GENERAL JULES DE CAMP, CHIEF OF HIS PERSONAL MILITARY STAFF, LEAKED OUT.

WHEN HE CAME BACK TONIGHT, HOWEVER, FRENCH OFFICIALS DISCUSSED THE TRIP MORE FREELY.

SEP 18 1939

THEY SAID HE CONVERSED WITH SOLDIERS AND DISCUSSED TACTICAL PROBLEMS WITH OFFICERS.

IT WAS NO NEW EXPERIENCE FOR THE PRIME MINISTER TO BE IN THE FRONT LINES. HE FOUGHT THROUGHOUT THE WORLD WAR, ENTERING AS A PRIVATE AND BEING DEMOBILIZED AS AN OFFICER.

A SPOKESMAN SAID DALADIER RETURNED "CONVINCED OF THE COURAGE AND RESOLUTION OF OUR MEN. AMONG ALL OF OUR TROOPS HE SAW EVIDENCES OF THIS COURAGE WHICH HAS CHARACTERIZED OUR ADVANCE."

IT WAS EXPLAINED, HOWEVER, THAT THE FRENCH ADVANCE HAD BEEN SLOWED UP BY THE "ENEMY FIRE, ACTS OF DESTRUCTION, MINES AND TRAPS."

DURING THE TRIP DALADIER VISITED BORDER TOWNS AND VILLAGES, SOME OF WHICH WERE SAID STILL TO BE UNDER THE MENACE OF GERMAN GUNS. HE MADE THE TRIP BY AUTOMOBILE.

ONCE MORE AT HIS HEADQUARTERS, DALADIER PLUNGED INTO A STUDY OF THE COMPLICATED SITUATION BROUGHT ON BY THE RUSSIAN INVASION OF POLAND.

MQ751PED

RURAL ENGLAND HAS WAR FEVER

Placid Life Is Interrupted by Preparedness

SEP 18 1939

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, Sept. 17 (A. P.).—To see England at war one must quit the comparative calm and near-normalcy of London for the urgent preparedness of the countryside.

Motoring from town one quickly finds signs of wartime interruptions of placid rural life.

Driving south from the city recently one could see a suburban park pitted with gaping holes where heavy trucks loaded fresh-dug earth to fill sandbags.

Further out, barely clear of close-packed suburbs, gunners from anti-aircraft batteries played football. In a nearby field a barrage balloon squad tended its miniature blimp with affectionate care.

At the gateway of a naval barracks beneath a six-foot gold coat of arms a sergeant of marines blocked the road. Besides him a police officer carried a revolver. In peacetime Britain's police go unarmed. This is war.

Sector is all Prepared.

Behind the tall barrack walls topped with barbed wire and broken glass navy men worked with ant-like industry.

Through back streets of this naval port town marched a squad of seamen, gas masks stowed in khaki knapsacks.

Everywhere in these southern towns and villages you find the same urgency of preparedness.

In the town, navy and army officers drive commandeered automobiles.

In the country soldiers are billeted in a village, filling every room in the place. The local saloon, doing its best business in history, adapts itself to war conditions by earmarking a private room for non-commissioned officers.

Ammunition Guarded.

Down the road in a private park trucks loaded with ammunition are lined up beneath broad oaks and guarded by armed sentries.

The trim Georgian mansion nearby is a battalion headquarters. Sacks for bayonet practice swing from a row of elms.

Fields off lonely narrow roads hide anti-aircraft batteries. Close by sentries guard a searchlight post—five lamp units nestled in with sandbag emplacements for the personnel, patched cleverly with brown and green shrubs, merge into field and tree.

England is tuned for war.

SEP 18 1939

EUROPEAN ROUNDUP (BUDGET)

BY MILO M. THOMPSON

SEP 18 1939

COPENHAGEN, SEPT 17-(AP)-SOVIET RUSSIA'S DECISION TO MOVE IMMEDIATELY INTO POLAND LEFT THE INTERNATIONAL SITUATION AT THE END OF THE SECOND WEEK OF THE WAR MORE MUDDLED THAN EVER, POSING A GRAVE QUESTION FOR BRITAIN AND FRANCE AND ALARMING ALL SMALL NATIONS IN EASTERN EUROPE.

SHOULD BRITAIN AND FRANCE DECIDE THIS IS A FURTHER THREAT TO POLISH INDEPENDENCE, WHICH POLAND RESISTS, THEY WOULD BE OBLIGATED UNDER THEIR INDEPENDENCE GUARANTEE TO POLAND TO ACCEPT A STATE OF WAR WITH THEIR ERSTWHILE HOPED-FOR ALLY, RUSSIA.

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT COUPLED ITS DECISION TO ENTER POLAND WITH THE ASSERTION THAT THE POLISH GOVERNMENT NO LONGER WAS EFFECTIVE AND THAT OCCUPATION OF POLISH WHITE RUSSIA AND THE POLISH UKRAINE WAS NECESSARY TO KEEP ORDER AND PROTECT RUSSIAN BORDERS.

SOME DIPLOMATIC CIRCLES, HOWEVER, EXPRESSED THE OPINION IT WAS

30.24-3411 30.24 3411

A POSSIBLE MOVE TO DISCLOSE WHAT WAS TO BE RUSSIA'S REWARD FOR HER RECENTLY SIGNED NONAGGRESSION PACT WITH GERMANY.

THE POSSIBILITY THAT RUSSIA WAS IDENTIFYING HERSELF WITH POWERS INTENT UPON REMAKING THE MAP OF THE WORLD ENGINEERED A FLOOD OF SPECULATION CONCERNING THE RESULTING ATTITUDE OF THE BALTIC STATES, ALSO RUMANIA AND TURKEY. THERE ALSO WAS SPECULATION CONCERNING ITALY'S REACTION.

THE NEW UPSET CAME WITH GERMAN FORCES STANDING BEFORE LWOW, POLAND'S SECOND CITY, AFTER HAVING DECLARED POSSESSION OF BIALYSTOK ON THE NORTHEAST FRONTIER.

WARSAW, THOUGH ENTERED AS EARLY AS SEPT. 8 BY GERMAN MOTORIZED SCOUTS AND ENCIRCLED BY GERMAN FORCES, WAS STANDING THOUGH GERMANY THREW FRESH REGIMENTS INTO THE ATTACK TO BREAK STIFF RESISTANCE. KUTNO, ONE OF THE KEYS TO WARSAW, AND DEBLIN WERE REPORTED BY THE GERMANS TO HAVE FALLEN.

SEP 18 1939

(MORE)

MOA1AIRED

COPENHAGEN: FIRST ADD EUROPEAN ROUNDUP X X HAVE FALLEN.

SIGNS THAT WARSAW'S DEFENSE MIGHT BE CRACKING WERE SEEN IN BERLIN REPORTS THAT A RADIO MESSAGE HAD BEEN RECEIVED FROM INSIDE THE POLISH CAPITAL ASKING NAZIS TO RECEIVE POLISH REPRESENTATIVES TO DISCUSS A GERMAN ULTIMATUM THAT WARSAW SURRENDER.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND FOLLOWED QUICKLY WITH A BROADCAST DIRECT TO WARSAW FOR REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CIVILIAN POPULATION AND FOREIGNERS TO NEGOTIATE UNDER WHITE FLAGS FOR WITHDRAWAL FROM THE BELEAGUERED CITY.

SEP 18 1939

PRESIDENT IGNACE MOSCICKI OF POLAND ARRIVED AT THE RUMANIAN BORDER TOWN OF CERNAUTI, RUMANIA, SIGNALLING THE RETREAT OF THE POLISH GOVERNMENT FROM ITS INVADED HOMELAND. IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THE GOVERNMENT MIGHT TRANSFER ITS OPERATIONS TO PARIS.

GERMANY HAD CLAIMED FINALLY MASTERY OVER THE BALTIC SEA THROUGH CAPTURE OF POLAND'S BRIGHT, AMERICAN-LIKE PORT, GDYNIA, BEFORE THE RUSSIAN MOVE CAME.

THE BRITISH-FRENCH POLICY STILL WAS LARGELY SHROUDED IN MYSTERY. IT WAS REPORTED FROM LONDON BRITAIN HAD UNDERTAKEN IN THE FIRST FORTNIGHT TO ORGANIZE HER WAR EFFORT ALONG BROAD LINES WHICH HAD ENTAILED TWO OR THREE YEARS OF ARGUMENT AND WORK IN THE WORLD WAR. INVOLVED WERE THE FORMATION OF A SUPREME WAR COUNCIL AND PERFECTING OF MILITARY CONSCRIPTION.

SEP 18 1939

CONSCRIPTION IS NOW MOVING ALONG A REGULAR PATTERN. THE SECOND BATCH OF MILITIA AUTHORIZED LAST SPRING WAS CALLED UP TWO DAYS AGO.

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS PLAYED UP PICTURES OF TOMMIES WITH FRENCH SOLDIERS, ALONG WITH STORIES OF THE NAVY'S MIGHTY EFFORTS TO CHOKE OFF A PERSISTENT GERMAN SUBMARINE MENACE, AND TIGHTEN THE BLOCKADE OF GERMANY. MEAGER REPORTS FROM THE WESTERN FRONT WHERE THE ALLIES ARE PRESSING INTO THE SAAR BASIN, NOTWITHSTANDING THE SIEGFRIED LINE, INDICATED SLIGHT GAINS BUT SUGGESTED A BIG PUSH IN PREPARATION.

OBSERVERS WERE PAYING CAREFUL ATTENTION TO THE ATTITUDE OF RUMANIA, WHERE AN ESTIMATED 50,000 REFUGEES WERE CENTERING.

IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE, TURKEY, ~~WHICH~~ who is ALLIED ~~[redacted]~~ WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE ~~IN THE WORLD WAR~~, STILL SHOWED NO INTENTION OF GOING TO WAR AGAINST GERMANY. JUST PRIOR TO RUSSIA'S DETERMINATION TO MARCH INTO POLAND SHE HAD REAFFIRMED HER CLOSE FRIENDSHIP WITH THAT POWER.

CCD 18 1939

OTHER SOUTHEASTERN EUROPEAN NATIONS STILL ARE HOLDING TO NEUTRALITY. BULGARIA FOLLOWED GREECE AND YUGOSLAVIA IN DECLARING ABSOLUTE NEUTRALITY. IN HUNGARY, FOREIGN MINISTER CSAKY ASSUMED "WATCHFUL WAITING."

OF THESE NATIONS, IT IS RUMANIA WHICH IS MOST ACTIVE, INCREASING HER FRONTIER GUARD UNTIL MORE THAN A MILLION MEN ARE UNDER ARMS. FEAR IS EXPRESSED IN RUMANIA THAT RUSSIA MIGHT INCLUDE BESSARABIA AMONG HER OBJECTIVES.

WHAT ALSO DISTURBS THE COUNTRY IS THE POSSIBILITY THAT GERMANY WILL TAKE POLAND'S PLACE AT HER FRONTIER AND THEN SEEK A MONOPOLY OF HER OIL.

SEP 18 1939

THROUGHOUT SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE SMALL NATIONS CONTINUE TO ARM MORE MEN, INSTRUCT CIVILIAN POPULATIONS IN ANTI-AIR RAID, ANTI-GAS DEFENSE, RATION FOOD, RESTRICT USE OF RAW MATERIALS AND APPLY CLOSER CENSORSHIP.

THIS ALSO DESCRIBES GENERALLY THE ACTIVITIES IN NORTHEASTERN AND NORTHERN NEUTRAL NATIONS WHOSE FEARS OF SAFEGUARDING NEUTRALITY ARE INCREASED BY THE NEW RUSSIAN ACTION.

CONCERN NATURALLY IS GREATEST IN THE EASTERN BALTIC AREA WHERE IT IS KNOWN RUSSIA COULD USE BETTER WINTER PORTS THAN LENINGRAD AND MIGHT NOT LIMIT HER WESTWARD MOVEMENTS TO THE POLISH TERRITORY.

SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES CONTINUED THEIR VIGILANCE IN THE PRESENCE OF MANY REMINDERS OF THE PROXIMITY OF THE CONFLICT. IN DENMARK WATERS ALONE IT IS ESTIMATED ABOUT 20,000 TONS OF SHIPS HAVE BEEN SUNK BY MINES AND AT LEAST 36 PERSONS HAVE LOST THEIR LIVES.

THE NETHERLANDS HAD 350,000 MEN UNDER ARMS COMPARED WITH A NORMAL 30,000 AND WAS KEEPING ALERT TO GUARD AGAINST VIOLATIONS OF HER NEUTRALITY, ESPECIALLY IN THE AIR. PLANES WERE FORBIDDEN TO CROSS HER TERRITORY. ONE FOREIGN PLANE HAD BEEN FIRED UPON IN THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR AND A GERMAN PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN.

COPENHAGEN: SECOND ADD EUROPEAN ROUNDUP X X SHOT DOWN.

IN VIEW OF THESE INCIDENTS THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED IT WAS MAINTAINING A RESERVED ATTITUDE IN ORDER TO LESSEN THE DANGER OF A GRAVE BREACH WITH ANY GOVERNMENT. IT ALSO TOOK COGNIZANCE OF THE BRITISH STOPPAGE OF THE LINERS NIEUW AMSTERDAM AND REMOVAL OF THREE GERMAN PASSENGERS AND 16 OF THE CREW FOR INVESTIGATION ALTHOUGH 50 GERMAN PASSENGERS WERE PERMITTED TO CONTINUE.

THE NETHERLANDS ISSUED FOOD CARDS AND NEW PERMITS PURCHASE OF ONE WEEK'S FOOD SUPPLY.

SWITZERLAND, WHICH HAD MOBILIZED 500,000 MEN IN HER CITIZEN ARMY TWO DAYS BEFORE BRITAIN AND FRANCE DECLARED WAR, KEPT THEM UNDER ARMS, NOTWITHSTANDING THE ECONOMIC STRAIN ON THE COUNTRY OF 4,000,000 PPEOPLE. SWISS GEN. HENRI GUISAN WAS ELECTED TO HEAD AN ALPINE CONFEDERATION ARMY AUG. 30. HE CONVERTED THE CITY OF BASEL, WHERE FRENCH, GERMAN AND SWISS FRONTIERS MEET AT THE RHINE, INTO A HUGE FORTRESS. ITS STREETS ARE BARRICADED WITH LARGE STEEL GIRDERS, ANTITANK SPIKES AND CONCRETE FORTS. MACHINEGUN NESTS TOP THE BUILDINGS. ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS CIRCLE THE CITY.

SEP 18 1939

THE SWISS EXECUTIVE COUNCIL WHICH HAS FULL POWER TO DEFEND THE NATION ORDERED MEASURES LEST BELLIGERENTS ATTEMPT TO SKIRT THE MAGINOT AND SIEGFRIED LINES THROUGH SWITZERLAND. THOUGH THE ENTIRE NATION GEARED ITSELF TO A WAR BASIS, THE WAR BROUGHT FEW DANGEROUS INCIDENTS. SWISS TOWNS ON THE BORDER WERE BOMBED IN ERROR A FEW TIMES AND ONE PLANE WAS FIRED ON BY THE SWISS AT SCHAFFHAUSEN, WHEREUPON THE GERMAN MINISTER APOLOGIZED TO THE GOVERNMENT.

THE SITUATION FOUND SPAIN'S GENERALISSIMO FRANCO STILL FIRMLY RESOLVED TO KEEP HIS COUNTRY OUT OF THE CONFLICT AND CONCENTRATE ON INTER-

30.24-3413

NATL PROBLEMS. CONTRARY TO THE GENERAL EUROPEAN TREND, SPAIN IS DEMOB-
ILIZING HER TROOPS. FRANCO SELECTED 11 GENERALS AND 79 OTHERS TO FORM
THE FALANGE COUNCIL AND GIVE THE PEOPLE A VOICE IN GOVERNMENT TO SPEED RECONSTRUCTION.

PORTUGAL, LIKE SPAIN, WITNESSED A CONTINUED FLIGHT OF NEUTRALS.
A STRONG EFFORT IS BEING MADE AT LISBON TO KEEP THE PRESS NEUTRAL
NOTWITHSTANDING THAT IT IS APPARENT TO IMPARTIAL OBSERVERS PUBLIC OPINION SIDES AGAINST GERMANY.

SEP 18 1939

THE GREAT QUESTION MARK STILL IS OVER ITALIAN POLICY. THIS AXIS
PARTNER OF GERMANY CONTINUED AN UNDECLARED NEUTRALITY WHILE THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR CALLED SEVERAL TIMES ON FOREIGN MINISTER COUNT CIANO. IT WAS ANNOUNCED FRENCH AMBASSADOR ANDRE FRANCOIS-PONCET RETURNING FROM A PARIS CONFERENCE, INTENDED TO DO LIKEWISE. THE GERMANS ALSO WERE REPORTED IN CONTINUOUS CONTACT WITH ITALIANS, WHO STILL ARE THEIR MILITARY ALLIES.

OBSERVERS EXPRESSED THE BELIEF MUSSOLINI WAS WAITING FOR A TURN IN EVENTS AND STUDYING AMERICAN REACTIONS BEFORE DECLARING A PROGRAM.
THE CONTROLLED PRESS IS REFRAINING FROM COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

THE WAR ATMOSPHERE IN ITALY STILL IS SLIGHT. ITALIAN SHIPS ARE SAILING AGAIN TO NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA. AIRLINES ARE OPERATING NORMALLY EXCEPT TO BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES. FOOD AND GASOLINE DECREES
ARE STRICTLY ENFORCED. THE USE OF CARS FOR ANY PLEASURE DRIVING
COSTS DRIVERS THEIR PERMITS AND MANY HAVE BEEN PENALIZED FOR FOOD HOARDING.

THE EFFECT OF THE NEW RUSSIAN MOVE ON ITALIAN POLICY INTRIGUED
OBSERVERS WHO ARE WONDERING WHETHER VAST RESERVES OF SOVIETS MOVED WESTWARD MIGHT THREATEN ITALIAN PRESTIGE IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE OR WHETHER IT WOULD CONVINCE ITALY THE PARTITIONERS OF POLAND LIKELY WOULD BE THE WINNING SIDE, THEREFORE THE BEST TO JOIN.

MQ530PED

30.24 3413

SWISS

BY CHARLES S.FOLTZ, JR.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT 17-(AP)-GERMAN FORCES ON THE WESTERN FRONT, STRENGTHENED BY MEN AND MATERIAL WITHDRAWN FROM THE POLISH CAMPAIGN, WERE REPORTED TONIGHT TO HAVE STRUCK AT FRENCH LINES WHICH HAVE BEEN SLOWLY TIGHTENING ON THE MOSELLE RIVER VALLEY.

SEP 18 1939

THE APPEARANCE OF ADDITIONAL GERMAN TROOPS ON THE SIEGFRIED LINE
WAS REPORTED TO BE A TREMENDOUS STIMULUS TO THE GERMAN MORALE.
FURTHERMORE, THE REGULAR WEST WALL TROOPS, WHO UNTIL THE LAST TWO DAYS HAVE RELIED MAINLY ON DEFENSIVE WARFARE, NOW WERE DECLARED IN DISPATCHES TO HAVE OBTAINED THE EQUIPMENT, IF NOT THE ACTUAL ORDERS, FOR AN OFFENSIVE CAMPAIGN.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND WAS SAID TO HAVE SENT MUCH CAPTURED
POLISH MATERIAL IN ADDITION TO GERMAN FIRST-LINE MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT TO THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

REPORTS REACHING BASEL SAID A HEAVY GERMAN ATTACK BEGAN AT DAWN
TODAY AGAINST THE AREA 10 MILES EAST OF THE MOSELLE.

THE FRENCH WERE SAID TO HAVE GAINED CONTROL OF AN IMPORTANT
HIGHWAY FROM THE MOSELLE ALMOST TO THE SAAR RIVER. BASING THEIR ACTIO
ON THE GERMAN VILLAGES OF BUSCHDORF AND TUNSDORF, THE FRENCH HAVE BEEN PUSHING STEADILY TO THE NORTH AND NORTHEAST.

THIS MOVEMENT, IT WAS SAID, THREATENED TO ISOLATE GERMAN FORCES
STILL HOLDING FORTS BETWEEN PERL AND TETTINGEN.

THE GERMAN ATTACK, BASED ON THE SAARBURG FOREST AND THE SAAR RIVER NEAR ORSCHOLZ, WAS REPORTED TO HAVE STRUCK SOUTHWARD, SUPPORTING ANOTHER GERMAN ATTACK WEST FROM MERZIG.

BOTH GERMAN ACTIONS WERE SUPPORTED BY HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE AIMED AT ROADS OVER THE FRONTIER HILLS ACROSS WHICH THE FRENCH AND BRITISH TROOPS MUST CROSS TO REINFORCE THEIR COMRADES IN GERMANY.

SOUTHWARD ALONG THE SAAR RIVER, THE GERMANS WERE FORCED TO TAKE THE DEFENSIVE IN FACE OF A STUBBORN FRENCH DRIVE DESIGNED TO REACH THE NIED RIVER HEIGHTS COMMANDING SAARLAUTERN, IT WAS SAID.

SUPPORTING THIS ACTION, A STRONG FRENCH FORCE BRANCHED OUT TO THE NORTH FROM THE MAIN BOUZONVILLE-SAARLAUTERN HIGHWAY TO ATTACK THE LEFT FLANK OF THE GERMANS DEFENDING THE NIED RIVER VALLEY. THIS FRENCH FORCE WAS REPORTED TO HAVE CAPTURED THE VILLAGE OF KERLINGEN DURING THE AFTERNOON AFTER A BATTLE WITH GERMAN TROOPS ON NEARBY HILLS OVERLOOKING THE SAAR VALLEY.

IN FRONT OF THE INDUSTRIAL CITY OF SAARBRUECKEN ITSELF, THE OPPOSING FORCES SEEMED CONTENT FOR THE TIME BEING WITH ARTILLERY DUELS AND CLASHES OF SMALL PATROLS BUT BOTH SEEMED TO BE PREPARING FOR A MAJOR ENGAGEMENT IN THAT AREA.

EASTWARD TOWARD THE VOSGES FOOTHILLS, THE GERMANS APPARENTLY WERE RESISTING SUCCESSFULLY THE FRENCH EFFORTS TO GAIN A FOOTHOLD ON THE WOODED WATERSHED NORTHWEST OF BITCHE, WHICH WOULD GIVE THEM A ROLLING DESCENT TOWARD THE LITTLE MANUFACTURING TOWN OF PIRMASENS.

STILL FARTHER EAST, FRENCH SOURCES REPORTED CONSIDERABLE PROGRESS IN THEIR ADVANCES THROUGH THE PALATINATE FORESTS AROUND FISCHBACH AND LUDWIGSWINKEL, OUTPOSTS OF THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

ON THE EXTREME EASTERN END OF THE WESTERN FRONT BETWEEN WISSEMBOURG AND THE RHINE AT LAUTERBOURG, FRENCH PATROLS ADVANCED CAUTIOUSLY DESPITE THE ALMOST COMPLETE LACK OF RESISTANCE.

IT WAS REPORTED THE GERMANS APPARENTLY LEFT THIS WAY OPEN IN THE KNOWLEDGE THEY COULD CATCH ANY STRONG FRENCH FORCE WHICH ATTEMPTED TO FOLLOW IT IN A TRAP BETWEEN THE HAARDT MOUNTAINS AND THE RHINE. THE FRENCH COMMAND, HOWEVER, GAVE NO INDICATION OF ANYTHING BEYOND LOCAL ATTACKS IN THIS AREA.

SEP 18 1939

KA813PED

UNDATED POLISH [illegible] WITH MOSCOW

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE POLISH UKRAINE AND WHITE RUSSIAN TERRITORY WHICH SOVIET RUSSIA YESTERDAY (SUNDAY) DECLARED SHE WAS TAKING UNDER HER "PROTECTION" ARE DIVIDED INTO TWO SHARPLY-CONTRASTED PROVINCES.

THEY ARE EAST GALICIA--OR EAST LITTLE POLAND--WHICH WAS AUSTRIAN BEFORE THE WORLD WAR, AND VOLHYNIA, WHICH WAS RUSSIAN.

IN HER TROUBLED HISTORY, POLAND WAS PARTITIONED THREE TIMES IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY BY PRUSSIA, RUSSIA AND AUSTRIA.

HER INDEPENDENCE AGAIN WAS DECLARED IN 1916 AND THREE YEARS LATER THE TREATY OF VERSAILLES RECOGNIZED POLAND'S INDEPENDENCE.

OF HER TERRITORY, 101,196 SQUARE MILES WAS TAKEN FROM RUSSIA, 30,914 SQUARE MILES FROM AUSTRIA AND 6,973 SQUARE MILES FROM PRUSSIA. IN 1938 POLAND ANNEXED 419 SQUARE MILES, WITH A POPULATION OF 241,698, FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

THE POLISH UKRAINE AND WHITE RUSSIAN TERRITORY COMPRISE APPROXIMATELY 46,723 SQUARE MILES AND HAVE A POPULATION OF 7,500,000, ACCORDING TO UKRAINE AGENCIES.

PRAVDA, COMMUNIST PARTY ORGAN IN MOSCOW, ON THURSDAY LISTED 8,000,000 UKRAINIANS AND ABOUT 3,000,000 WHITE RUSSIANS AMONG 1939

30.24-3415

30.24 3415

FOREIGN-NEUTRALITY (BUDGET)

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 17-(AP)-STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS INDICATED TONIGHT THAT THIS GOVERNMENT'S OFFICIAL ATTITUDE TOWARDS RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND WOULD AWAIT FURTHER ADVICES REGARDING THE IMPLICATIONS OF THE SOVIET MOVE.

A DEPARTMENT SPOKESMAN SAID THE NOTE GIVEN TO AMERICAN AMBASSADOR LAURENCE A.STEINHARDT IN MOSCOW AND ANNOUNCING THE DECISION OF THE SOVIET TO SEND TROOPS INTO POLAND HAD BEEN RECEIVED HERE, BUT THAT THE DEPARTMENT, FOR THE TIME BEING, HAD NO ANNOUNCEMENT CONCERNING IT.

THIS WAS TAKEN TO MEAN THAT UNTIL THE SITUATION WAS CLEARER THERE WOULD BE NO DECISION ON WHETHER ANY ACTION BY THIS COUNTRY WAS NECESSARY, SUCH AS POSSIBLE APPLICATION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW.

SEP 18 1939

IF THE LAW SHOULD BE APPLIED, AN EMBARGO ON ARMS SHIPMENTS TO RUSSIA WOULD BE DECLARED AND THE LAW'S OTHER RESTRICTIONS ON TRADE WITH BELLIGERENTS PUT INTO EFFECT.

THE QUESTION WAS RAISED IN NON-OFFICIAL CIRCLES, HOWEVER, WHETHER THE APPARENT IMMINENT COLLAPSE OF POLAND MIGHT NOT END ANY POSSIBILITY OF AN ACTUAL STATE OF WAR BETWEEN RUSSIA AND POLAND.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL WAS AT HIS OFFICE FROM EARLY MORNING UNTIL MID-AFTERNOON TO GO OVER THE DISPATCHES FROM ABROAD AND CONFER WITH AIDES.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT BROKE HIS CLOSE VIGIL OVER THE EUROPEAN EVENTS TO MAKE A SHORT AFTERNOON CRUISE ON THE POTOMAC.

SEP 18 1939

THE RUSSIAN-POLISH DEVELOPMENT FURNISHED FRESH FUEL FOR THE CONGRESSIONAL CONTROVERSY OVER PROPOSED REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO.

SENATOR BORAH (R-IDAHO) SAID IT SHOULD STRENGTHEN THIS COUNTRY'S DETERMINATION TO KEEP OUT OF THE CONFLICT IN EUROPE.

THE VETERAN IDAHO SENATOR SAID IT APPEARED TO HIM THAT THE SOVIET INVASION OF EASTERN POLAND COULD MEAN ONLY THAT RUSSIA AND GERMANY WERE OPERATING UNDER AN UNDERSTANDING TO DIVIDE POLAND.

HE VOICED THE OPINION, HOWEVER, THAT RUSSIA, ONCE IT HAS RECLAIMED THE UKRAINIAN AND WHITE RUSSIAN SECTIONS WHICH IT HELD BEFORE THE WORLD WAR, WOULD BE LOATHE TO FIGHT ON THE WESTERN FRONT IF THE COLLAPSE OF POLAND MOVES THE MAJOR THEATER OF WAR THERE.

"IT SEEMS TO ME," HE ADDED, "THAT EACH NEW DEVELOPMENT IN THE EUROPEAN SITUATION REVEALS MORE AND MORE REASONS WHY WE SHOULD HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH IT."

POLAND'S ENTIRE POPULATION. THE GROUP WAS TERMED LARGER THAN THE ENTIRE POPULATION OF FINLAND, ESTHONIA, LATVIA AND LITHUANIA.

MORE THAN 100 YEARS OF AUSTRIAN AND RUSSIAN RULE LEFT A GREAT DIFFERENCE OF FEELING AMONG THE POPULACE OF THE TWO PROVINCES. THE UKRAINIANS OF VOLHYNIA ARE GREEK ORTHODOX AND THE GALICIANS ARE ROMAN CATHOLICS OF THE UNIATE RITE.

VOLHYNIANS POSSESS RADIO SETS BUT SELDOM LISTEN TO UKRAINIAN BROADCASTS FROM VIENNA OR BRATISLAVIA. THEY PICK UP PROGRAMS FROM KIEV AND WINITZA.

HEADS OF THE UNDO, LEADING POLITICAL PARTY IN GALICIA, CAME TO TERMS WITH THE POLISH GOVERNMENT IN 1934 FOLLOWING THE POLISH-GERMAN NONAGGRESSION PACT.

THE UKRAINIAN NATIONALISM OF THE TERRITORY HAS BEEN DIVIDED, HOWEVER, AS MORE THAN 1,000,000 RUTHENIANS FORM THEIR OWN PARTY.

KA819PED

1939

BORAH HAS BEEN A VIGOROUS ADVOCATE OF RETAINING THE ARMS EMBARGO OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW, CONTENDING THAT REFUSAL OF THIS COUNTRY TO SELL ARMS TO ANY BELLIGERENT NATION IS THE SUREST WAY OF KEEPING OUT OF WAR.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS EXPECTED TO ASK CONGRESS, WHEN IT CONVENES IN SPECIAL SESSION THURSDAY, TO REPEAL THE EMBARGO.

OPPONENTS HAVE CHARGED THAT THIS WOULD BE TANTAMOUNT TO OPENING THIS COUNTRY'S MUNITIONS MARKETS TO ENGLAND AND FRANCE, WHILE THEY WOULD REMAIN CLOSED TO GERMANY BECAUSE OF THE ALLIES' SUPERIOR SEAPOWER.

SEP 18 1939

SENATOR GUFFEY (D-PA), STAUNCH SUPPORTER OF THE PRESIDENT AND A MEMBER OF THE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE, PREDICTED, HOWEVER, THAT THE EMBARGO CLAUSE WOULD BE REPEALED, THAT THERE WOULD BE NO SENATE FILIBUSTER AND THAT CONGRESS WOULD BE OUT OF WASHINGTON BY THANKSGIVING.

A VIEW THAT IT WAS "UNWISE" FOR THE PRESIDENT TO CALL CONGRESS INTO SPECIAL SESSION WAS EXPRESSED BY REP.DIES (D-TEX). HE SAID MOST CONGRESSMEN WITH WHOM HE HAD TALKED BELIEVED THAT "NO EMBARGO LAW OR ABSENCE OF IT IS GOING TO KEEP US OUT OF WAR."

"I THINK THAT MOST MEMBERS OF CONGRESS ARE DEFINITELY OPPOSED TO CONVERTING THE UNITED STATES INTO A MUNITIONS CENTER FOR THE WORLD," HE DECLARED. "THAT'S THE UNWISE ECONOMIC POLICY IN EUROPE THAT WE HAVE BEEN CONDEMNING.

"PUBLIC SENTIMENT IS THE ONLY THING THAT CAN KEEP THIS COUNTRY OUT OF THAT MESS. I CERTAINLY BELIEVE THAT WE OUGHT TO STAY OUT OF THE WAR AND THAT WE CAN."

CITING ANOTHER SIDE OF THE ARGUMENT, HOWEVER, SENATOR HAYDEN (D-ARIZ) SAID HE COULD SEE NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE SALE OF COPPER TO A BELLIGERENT NATION AS NOW PERMITTED UNDER THE LAW, AND THE SALE OF A SHELL MADE OUT OF COPPER.

SEP 18 1939

RZ-VX523PES

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Sept-17-1939

SEP 18 1939

RUSSIA'S MILITARY OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND IS AN UNESCAPABLE REMINDER THAT THE TREND OF THE EUROPEAN WAR DEPENDS IN LARGE DEGREE AT THIS JUNCTURE ON THE SOVIET UNION'S INTENTIONS.

EVEN THE POSSIBLE EXTENSION OF THE WAR INTO A WORLD CONFLICT MAY HINGE ON MOSCOW.

EUROPE NOW STANDS AT THE FIRST BIG CROSS-ROADS OF THE GENERAL UPHEAVAL. THE TURNING THAT IS TAKEN WILL BE DETERMINED BY THE INTERPRETATION WHICH THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES PLACE ON RUSSIA'S ACTION.

NEITHER PARIS NOR LONDON THUS FAR HAS EXPRESSED ANY OFFICIAL OPINION REGARDING THIS DEVELOPMENT WHICH HAS STAGGERED BOTH OF THEM, EVEN THOUGH IT WASN'T UNEXPECTED. THEY MUST DECIDE QUICKLY, HOWEVER, WHETHER TO ACCEPT:

1. RUSSIA'S DECLARATION THAT THE OCCUPATION IS MERELY TO PROTECT THE RUSSIAN PEOPLES OF POLAND, AND THAT THE SOVIET INTENDS TO REMAIN NEUTRAL. ON THE FACE OF IT THIS WOULD PRESAGE A WITHDRAWAL OF RUSSIAN FORCES WHEN THE NEED OF PROTECTION PASSED.

2. POLAND'S CHARGE THAT THE RUSSIAN MOVE CONSTITUTES AGGRESSION WHICH WOULD MEAN THAT GERMANY AND RUSSIA HAVE PARTITIONED POLAND BETWEEN THEM -- AN EVENT WHICH HAD BEEN WIDELY PREDICTED BY THE EUROPEAN PRESS. THIS WOULD PLACE ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN THE POSITION OF CHALLENGING RUSSIA TO WAR.

HOWEVER THE ALLIES MAY CHOOSE TO REGARD THAT NOW, THE FACT REMAINS

30.24 - 3417

30.24 3417

THAT THEY HAVE PLEDGED THEMSELVES TO FREE POLAND FROM INVASION. THAT MEANS NOT ONLY INVASION FROM GERMANY, BUT FROM ANY OTHER COUNTRY.

SHOULD THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD DEFEAT GERMANY, THEN THEY WOUL BE BOUND BY THE BOND WITH POLAND TO TRY TO EJECT FROM POLAND ANY FOREIGN FORCE OF OCCUPATION WHICH REFUSED TO MOVE OUT.

SINCE POLAND ALREADY WAS TOTTERING BEFORE THE OVERWHELMING GERMAN ONSLAUGHT, THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION CAN SCARCELY MAKE THE LITTLE NATION'S POSITION WORSE. INDEED, IT MAY SAVE THE POLES FROM SHEDDING MORE OF THEIR BLOOD IN AN EPIC BUT HOPELESS EFFORT TO DEFEND THEMSELVES.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH STRATEGY, SO FAR AS IS KNOWN, HADN'T ANTICIPATED THAT POLAND WOULD BE ABLE TO STAND OFF THE GERMANS, OR THAT THE ALLIES WOULD BE ABLE TO GIVE THE POLES THE IMMEDIATE AID NECESSARY TO WITHSTAND THE ASSAULT.

SEP 19 1939

RATHER HAVE BRITAIN AND FRANCE BEEN TAKING A LONG VIEW OF THE WAR AND PLANNING TO REESTABLISH POLAND IN FULL SOVEREIGNTY AT THE END OF THE CONFLICT.

OTHER IMMEDIATE EFFECTS OF THE INVASION ARE SUCH AS TO CAUSE THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES DEEP CONCERN.

HUNGARY AND THE BALKANS ALREADY HAD FELT THE BREEZE OF THE RUSSO-GERMAN ANTI-AGGRESSION PACT AND WERE TREADING CIRCUMSPECTLY.

HUNGARY LAST WEEK DECLINED TO ANNOUNCE HER NEUTRALITY, AND THIS WAS GENERALLY INTERPRETED AS BEING FAVORABLE TO GERMANY. TURKEY, RECENTLY PLEDGED TO BRITAIN IN A DEFENSIVE PACT, LET IT BE KNOWN THROUGH THE INSPIRED PRESS THAT SHE IS THE SOVIET'S GREATEST FRIEND.

THE SUPPORT OF TURKEY IS OF VAST IMPORTANCE TO EITHER SIDE IN THE WAR, SINCE SHE CONTROLS THE STRATEGIC DARDANELLES.

RUMANIA NATURALLY IS SHAKING IN HER BOOTS OVER THE RUSSIAN INVASION JUST ACROSS HER BORDER. FOR YEARS SHE HAS BEEN LIVING IN FEAR THAT THE SOVIET WOULD DEMAND RETURN OF BESSARABIA, WHICH WAS TAKEN FROM RUSSIA AT THE END OF THE WORLD WAR. RUMANIA'S HEART IS WITH THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES, BUT HIDDEN SYMPATHY IS ALL SHE CAN GIVE THEM NOW.

IN SHORT, HUNGARY AND THE WHOLE BALKAN PENINSULA WOULD SEEM TO HAVE BEEN DRAWN CLOSER WITHIN THE NETWORK OF GERMAN CONTROL BY THE RUSSIAN MOVE.

THE SOVIET OCCUPATION HAS RELEASED MASSES OF GERMAN TROOPS WHICH ARE BEING RUSHED TO THE WESTERN FRONT TO COMBAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH ATTACK.

THE FIGHTING IN THIS THEATRE WAS SUMMED UP BY A FRENCH COMMUNIQUE THIS MORNING: "THE NIGHT WAS CALM ON THE ENTIRETY OF THE FRONT."

ME&DB956PED

GERMAN AND SOVIET OFFICERS BEGIN TALKS

Leaders of Armies Invading Poland Meet at Brest-Litovsk—Revision of Minorities' Status Reported Agreed On.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Nazi swastika and the Russian hammer and sickle met today in the fallen Polish city of Brest-Litovsk, where Russian revolutionists and Germans signed their separate peace in the world war.

SEP 19 1939

The Soviet Russians came in from the east, according to German advices from the front, and shook hands with German officers at the head of troops who completed the conquest of Brest-Litovsk, 105 miles east of Warsaw, yesterday.

German and Russian officers were said tonight to be engaged in fixing a line beyond which their respective forces would not go in Poland.

In the east, Russian forces which crossed the border yesterday were reported bearing down all along the extensive frontier which divides Poland from the Soviet.

Wilno's Fall Rumored.

[A Russian General Staff communique in Moscow last night indicated their forces had penetrated as far as Baranowicze, a railroad center about fifty miles inside Poland from the Russian frontier, and there was a rumor in Paris that the advancing Russian troops had occupied Wilno.]

Seven Points of Agreement.

Informed quarters said the following general points already were agreed upon:

SEP 19 1939

1. No Polish State exists.

2. From this fact, the two Governments draw the natural consequences.

3. The two governments are agreed that the situation of minorities under the former Polish Government demands revision along the lines of ethnical development of each minority. (Officials would not say whether this meant complete or modified self-government for the minorities.)

SEP 19 1939

4. The task of each government is to bring about a new order and establish quiet.

5. Germany and Russia alone are interested in the reconstruction of this area, for in every respect the former Polish State was the natural sphere of influence of Germany and Russia.

6. The contention of France and England that they must come to the aid of Poland has proven an impossible realization and their treaties with Poland have become pointless.

7. France and England once again are faced with the question of why they want to wage war against Germany.

Officials said there was a possibility that the Poles might be granted the right to hold a small strip of territory of a buffer between Germany and Russia but this "depends a great deal on the attitude the Poles assume."

DNB, German official news agency, today announced an explanation of the activities of German and Soviet Russian troops in Poland "to avoid unfounded rumors regarding the tasks" of these troops.

Say They Restore Order.

"The German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R. declare that the actions these groups are pursuing have no aims whatever which contravene the interests of Germany or the Soviet Union, or contradict the spirit and letter of the non-aggression pact concluded between Germany and the Soviet Union.

"On the contrary, the task of these troops consists of establishing law and order in Poland which has been destroyed through the dissolution of the Polish State and to help Poland's population regulate the basis of their public existence."

Polish Buffer State Hinted.

MOSCOW, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Germany and Soviet Russia today gave what was interpreted as a strong hint of intentions to create a small Polish buffer State when their invading armies finish conquering Poland.

A joint Soviet-German communique was issued declaring that the intention of their armies was to help the Polish people "reconstruct conditions of their State existence."

"These troops do not pursue any aims which are against the interests of Germany or the U. S. S. R. or against the spirit and letter of the Soviet-German non-aggression pact," said the communique.

"The mission of the troops is to bring order and peace to Poland."

(The official German news agency issued a substantially similar announcement in Berlin.)

The joint communique was broadcast from Russian radio stations as Soviet troops moved deeper into war-weakened Poland.

Word from the Red army general staff of a constantly narrowing wedge between Russian and German troops revived reports an armistice in the European war will be proposed as soon as Poland's fate is determined. Such a proposal, diplomatic sources said, might be made by Russia or Germany's Axis partner, Italy.

With the first move from the east that pinned Poland in a vise yesterday, Moscow informed Poland's allies, Britain and France, the Soviet Union would follow a neutral policy toward them.

In a radio broadcast by Premier-Foreign Commissar Yvacheslav Molotov and in his notes to twenty-four governments represented in Moscow, crossing of the frontier was described as necessary to protect once-Russian minorities in eastern Poland.

Molotov said the Polish Government had "ceased to exist," and the minorities—11,000,000 White Russians and Ukrainians—were "abandoned entirely to their fate."

Tell of Joyous Greetings.

A Russian broadcast said Red army troops had been given jubilant welcomes by the population of White Russia and in the Polish Ukraine.

It made no mention of fighting, although the radio last night acknowledged the Poles were putting up resistance.

The broadcast said inhabitants of the previously Russian regions were greeting Soviet soldiers with flowers, and that political workers attached to the Russian Army already had organized meetings to propound benefits of life in the Soviet Union and promise the same to Ukrainians and White Russians. Newspapers here were filled with accounts of meetings in factories and on collective farms throughout Russia acclaiming the Government's decision to march into Poland.

Along 500-mile Front.

The Red Army advance was reported general along a 500-mile frontier between Latvia on the north and Rumania on the south.

Deepest thrusts were said to be far to the north—center of Poland's White Russian minority—and in southeastern Poland—the Ukrainian minority territory. Towns as far as fifty miles from the frontier were listed as captured in the first day's invasion.

Russians said they took Glebokie, northeast of Wilno; Baranowicze, railway center fifty miles from the frontier; Dubno, northeast of Lwow, and Tarnopol, in the Ukrainian section southeast of Lwow.

That would place the Russian and German armies within sixty-eight miles of each other. That is the distance from Dubno to Wlodzimierz, reported held by German troops north of Lwow.

Advance guards of the two forces would be even closer southeast of Lwow. German mechanized units were reported to have crossed a railway southeast of Lwow. Russian advance troops were said to be in Tarnopol, within fifty miles of the railroad.

Strike at Same Goal.

At Baranowicze, German planes and Russian troops struck at the same objective. The Russian General staff announced the capture after Russian and German radio broadcasts told of heavy German air raids against the city.

A general staff communique said the Russians defeated several "weak advance units and reserves of the Polish Army" at points where there was resistance.

[The Polish legation at Berne, Switzerland, said it heard a Polish radio broadcast that Russian troops had been repulsed at Molodeczno, twenty miles from the northeastern frontier. At Paris, it was reported the Red army had taken Zaleszczyki, in the southeast, on the Polish-Rumanian border.]

The General Staff said ten Polish warplanes were brought down.

Invasion from the east, reported started yesterday at 6 A. M. (11 P. M., New York time, Saturday), same two days after Russia and Japan called an armistice along the border of Soviet-controlled outer Mongolia and Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo. Four months of intermittent battling there had kept Russia's attention turned to the east. Military reserves already had been called to bolster Russia's army which the Communist party newspaper Pravda has said totaled 1,800,000 men in peace time.

First intimation that Russian troops were crossing the border came in a radio broadcast by Molotov.

A note giving Russia's reasons for sending troops into Poland was handed Polish Ambassador Waclaw Grzybowski after a conference with Soviet officials. He rejected the note. A spokesman for the Polish embassy referred bitterly to the "obvious contradiction in the fact that Soviet authorities addressed a note to the envoy of a State they claim is existing no longer."

Extent of the territory Russia intends to occupy was not disclosed. After the world war, 101,196 square miles of former Russian territory were included in Poland. Part of that territory already has been occupied by German troops.

Moscow diplomatic quarters said that Germany might ask to retain Danzig, Silesia and other one-time German sections, and call for return of White Russia and Ukrainia to Russia and creation of a narrow Polish buffer State between.

At workers' meetings in many parts of the Soviet Union cheers greeted the reading of Molotov's speech and the news Poland had been entered from the east.

SOVIET ARMY SEIZES TWO BORDER TOWNS

Red Soldiers Take Zaleszczzki and Sniatyn and Advance on Kuty—Paris Hears Rumor of Wilno's Fall.

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—It was reported here today that the Russian Army, striking swiftly since its entry into Poland yesterday, now held the Polish-Rumanian border towns of Zaleszczzki and Sniatyn and was closing in on Kuty.

Zaleszczki and Kuty are about forty miles apart; Sniatyn is about midway between them on a line running southwest.

Germans in their eastward drive still were reported more than fifty kilometers (about thirty-one miles) from Kuty. Foreign circles considered it likely the Soviet divisions would seek to sweep the entire length of the Polish-Rumania frontier and meet the Germans on the Polish-Hungarian border.

Battered remnants of the Polish Army fled headlong across the Rumania frontier, barely escaping the advancing Russian troops.

SEP 19 1939

Polish Troops Surrender.

Tanks, planes and artillery as well as hundreds of Polish soldiers were said to have surrendered to the Red Army.

Two planes of undetermined nationality were reported to have dropped incendiary bombs on Crisceatec, Rumanian border town which already was suffering from a similar raid of last night when a sugar refinery was set on fire. Eight peasant homes were destroyed and six persons were killed in the second attack, advices reaching here said.

Four were killed by bombs at another Rumanian border town—Kotringeni—Rumanian dispatches reported.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Two powerful forces—the mighty German military machine on the west and the vast Soviet Russian Army on the east—were crushing Poland today under the weight of overwhelming odds.

At the very gates of Warsaw, abandoned by fleeing Government leaders, German troops waited impatiently for the Polish capital to capitulate.

In the east, Russian forces which crossed the border yesterday were reported bearing down all along the extensive frontier which divides Poland from the Soviet.

News reaching Berlin indicated that the Red troops had penetrated as much as twenty-eight miles into Poland with little opposition, and no one here could guess where they proposed to stop.

Wilno's Fall Rumored.

(A Russian General Staff communique in Moscow last night indicated their point of furthest preparation was Baranowicze, a railroad center about fifty miles inside Poland from Russian frontier, and there was a rumor in Paris that the advancing Russian troops had occupied Wilno.)

It seemed certain, however, that the Russian and German armies would meet somewhere in mid-Poland.

Meanwhile German forces continued their drive to the southeast. The high command announced that opposition was crumbling and that defeated and shattered remnants of the Polish army were in virtual rout.

The German Army's communique today again emphasized the complete dissolution of Polish forces by an encirclement movement.

The situation in Warsaw, the Polish capital, was left unanswered. The communique merely said that no Polish negotiator had appeared by last midnight although Warsaw has asked for his reception. Authoritative information, however, said that the threatened bombardment of the city had not begun.

See Lwow's Fate Sealed.

The fate of Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, 225 miles southeast of Warsaw, seemed sealed after its complete encirclement and after Lublin, about midway on the Warsaw-Lwow road, had been captured, the Germans said.

One-fourth of the Polish Army, the communique claimed, faced destruction or dissolution in a narrow compressed space southwest of Wyszogrod, which is about forty miles west of Warsaw.

The communique described the Western Front as quiet except that one French plane was shot down.

With the German military machine on the west and the vast Soviet Russian army on the east, placing Poland in a mighty vise, authoratative quarters here intimated that they had information of an outbreak of civil war in Warsaw. They said one group was desirous of capitulating and another was determined to fight the invaders.

Pending settlement of this issue, they said, there was little likelihood of German forces doing anything about the capital, from which Polish Government leaders have fled and which is reported surrounded by German troops. They pointed out that Bismarck also refrained from bombarding Paris in 1871 while the Commune was fighting.

30.24-3419

30.24 3419

Authoritative sources declared they were unable to say anything about German-Russian conferences reported as scheduled for Brest-litovsk.

The Berlin radio, in dramatic messages to the Warsaw commander which all Europe could hear last night, gave instructions as to the manner in which Polish emissaries were to leave the capital to meet the German commander. The message was repeated numerous times, both in Polish and in German, and the Poles were asked to respond by radio.

The high command reported the defenders had agreed to dispatch emissaries to the German lines, but no response was heard here over the ordinary wavelengths.

History via an Assembly Line.

German forces encircling Warsaw are so powerful, official circles said, they would have little difficulty in virtually destroying the capital, if they wished to apply pressure.

"You are seeing history being turned out with assembly line efficiency," one foreign office spokesman declared.

Possibly significant in this connection were repeated German radio assertions early today that "the peoples in Africa and Asia now dominated by England await the day of final settlement of their score with the British Empire."

"It's Warsaw today, but the story is by no means finished," an informed spokesman said.

Another asked why England had not declared war on Russia in view of the Soviet advance into Poland.

"According to the mutual assistance pact with Poland," he said, "Britain is obliged to resist anyone undertaking an invasion of Poland. The case seems to be clear."

Russian Move Is Hailed.

Only hearty expressions of agreement with Russia were heard in Berlin today. Russia, the Germans argued, has vital interests in suppressed minorities in Poland to whose aid, they said, she is obliged to go.

SEP 19 1939

"But Stalin is the shrewdest diplomat of all," it was observed in one quarter. "He waited until Germany had performed the major part of smashing the Polish Army before stepping in."

Part of the Polish Army, which had been surrounded by Nazi troops at Kutno, surrendered yesterday and two other Polish strongholds were reported to have fallen simultaneously with Kutno, which is seventy-five miles west of beleaguered Warsaw. These were Deblin, seventy miles southeast of the capital, and Brest-Litovsk, 100 miles due east, where 600 prisoners were said to have been taken.

Detailed reports on the western front were lacking in Berlin, although the High Command reported heavy losses had been inflicted on the French and there had been local engagements near Zweibruecken.

ARMY STAFFS FIX LINES OF OCCUPATION

Forces Of Stalin And Hitler Join Hands At Brest-Litovsk

Berlin And Moscow Agreed That Polish State No Longer Exists

SEP 19 1939

By MELVIN K. WHITE-BEACHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 18—German and Russian army officers were drawing up an occupation line for their armies in Poland tonight as it was reported the Nazi's were resuming their battle to force the surrender of Warsaw.

Detachments of the two armies of occupation met at Brest-Litovsk, the fallen Polish city where Russian revolutionists and Germans signed their separate peace in the World War.

Officers bearing the Nazi swastika exchanged friendly greetings with officers bearing the Communist hammer and sickle.

Fixing Line In Poland

The two commands were concerned with fixing a line in Poland beyond which the German and Russian armies would not go.

Reports were heard here that the best the Poles could hope for was a possible protectorate similar to Bohemia and Moravia in what was Czecho-Slovakia, with Warsaw as the capital.

About 120 miles to the west of Brest-Litovsk the attack on Warsaw began again, D. N. B. (official German news agency) reported. It was not stated, however, whether the city was being bombed or shelled.

Surrender Bid Ignored

The reported action at Warsaw followed the asserted failure of the Poles to send a negotiator to discuss the capital's surrender. The Germans had been waiting since 10 o'clock last night for the emissary and during that time hostilities had ceased at Warsaw.

In Berlin, German officials watched closely proposals for changing the United States neutrality law.

Officials declared that any change in the United States act which would make it possible for Great Britain and France to obtain arms "could only mean the first step toward the United States' entrance into the war."

Points Agreed Upon

While the Russian and German armies pushed their occupation of Poland, informed quarters said several general points already had been agreed upon. Among these were:

No Polish state exists.

From this fact, the two governments draw the natural consequences.

The two governments are agreed the situation of minorities under the former Polish Government demands revision along the lines of racial development of each minority. (Officials would not say whether this meant complete or modified self-government for the minorities.)

The task of each Government is to bring about a new order and establish quiet.

Germany and Russia alone are interested in the reconstruction of this area, for in every respect the former Polish state was the natural sphere of influence of Germany and Russia.

The contention of France and England that they must come to the aid of Poland has proven an impossible realization and their treaties with Poland have become pointless.

France and England once again are faced with the question of why they want to wage war against Germany.

May Hold Small Strip

It was said officially there was a possibility the Poles might be allowed to hold a small strip of territory as a buffer between Germany and Russia, but this "depends a great deal on the attitude the Poles assume."

German sources disclosed plans already were being made to absorb the Poles in West Poland into the Reich industry which badly needs laborers. Other workers also will be needed to rebuild the war-torn western part of Poland.

The reported failure of an emissary to negotiate with the Germans for civilians to leave Warsaw was explained by statements that chaos reigns within the capital.

It was the German view that the Poles were divided among themselves as to whether they should give up.

The German high command's instructions for the emissary to appear at the German lines were repeated many times by radio last night but from Warsaw came nothing but silence.

The Polish campaign was said to be considered by the high command as won, so that "strong units" of the air force were sent to the West last night to participate in what is being termed here as the "leaflets war on the Western front."

It was explained that this reference was to propaganda leaflets which the British have dropped by the millions on Reich territory.

Nazis Await Russians

Military activities in Poland were relatively minor while Germans awaited the Russians coming across the marshes and mountains of eastern Poland.

No news was given about the battle north of Lodz, where Germans were said earlier to be squeezing the only remaining substantial Polish forces. But military sources said that in the Carpathian foothills the right wing of the so-called southern army pushed farther into the oil fields, taking Drohobycz on the Tysmienica river, the most important oil center of the region.

The German army, it was indicated, would halt along its present line of occupation, running northward from Lwow to Brest-Litovsk to Bialystok, and comprising roughly the western two-thirds of Poland.

All territory east of that line—unless Lithuania is permitted to retake its capital, Wilno (Vilna)—will be Russian, it was believed. With Russians reported already in Wilno, it may be too late for the Lithuanians, who were reported partially mobilizing, to act.

Officials said the "squatter's right" rule might obtain in Wilno, thereby indicating the Lithuanians were to be ignored.

"Noted As Interesting"

Two other items were "noted as interesting" tonight in officialdom.

One was that Britain and France have not declared war on Russia for entering Poland, with whom both had assistance pacts. In the German view, this signified acknowledgment by the British and French that the Polish state no longer exists.

The other was the presence in Germany of Gen. Kayuichi Terauchi, former Japanese Minister of War. His acceptance of an official invitation was called "very symptomatic," indicating Japan has not cut loose from Germany because of the latter's friendship with Russia, generally considered Japan's enemy. General Terauchi will visit the Polish front Wednesday and confer with Führer Adolf Hitler.

German Communique

The communique issued today by the German high command follows:

"The campaign in Poland is nearing its end. After the complete encirclement of Lemberg (Lwow) and the capture of Lublin, part of the Eastern Army is drawn up along a line touching Lemberg, Wlodzimierz, Brest-Litovsk (Erzesc) and Belostok (Bialystok), thereby having occupied the greatest part of Poland.

"Beyond this line the annihilation and capture of individual scattered remnants of the former Polish Army proceeds apace at several points. The strongest of these encircled Polish fighting groups, constituting approximately one-fourth of the Polish Army, is pressed together in the narrowest of space southwest of Wyszogrod between the Bzura and Vistula Rivers, and since yesterday is facing dissolution.

"On Sept. 17 a request was addressed to the supreme command of th eGerman Army by the Polish broadcasting station from encircled Warsaw to receive a Polish negotiator. The suprem ecommand of the army declare dits readiness so to do. Until midnight of Sept. 17, however, no negotiator arrived at our troops.

"The air force effectively attacked Polish forces encircled southwest of Wyszogrod. Polish aviation forces n olonger figured anywhere along the entire front. The German air force, thereby, on the whole, accomplished the task set before it in the east. Numerous units of air force, troops and anti-aircraft artillery have been drawn together and stand ready for service elsewhere.

"There is no noteworthy war activity in the west. Near Saarbruecken a French plane was shot down by a German pursuit plane. During Sept. 17 no air attacks on German soil occurred."

Nazi Freighter's Wreckage Found

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP).—Indications that British warcraft might be operating in the North Atlantic reached Berlin today in a report that a Norwegian fishing vessel had found two empty lifeboats and wreckage of the German freighter Johannes Molkenbuhr, near Trondheim, Norway. ("Lloyd's Register" lists the Johannes Molkenbuhr's home port as Hamburg and its tonnage as 5,294.)

SEP 19 1939

GERMANS RESUME MILITARY ATTACK AGAINST WARSAW

SEP 19 1939

Act as No Negotiations Develop — Polish Chiefs Flee to Rumania.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—DNB (German Official News Agency) reported tonight that the German military effort to force Warsaw to surrender had been resumed after failure of Poles to negotiate for withdrawal of the city's inhabitants. It was not stated whether the beleagured capital was being shelled.

"Day before yesterday we thought the great onslaught had broken Warsaw's spirit, but . . ."

Here the broadcast was broken off.

It was the first heard from the War- radio in many hours. It was silent all last night.

3 Polish Armies Keep On Fighting Despite Odds

SEP 19 1939

By [illegible]
Associated Press Correspondent

Cernauti, Rumania, Tuesday, Sept. 19—Three widely separated Polish armies, badly battered and almost surrounded, today were reported continuing to fight against overwhelming German armies despite the flight of the Polish Government from the nation.

Advices received at this border town showed the Polish armies were entrenched as follows:

1. In Warsaw and west of the city still holding out after a twelve-day siege.
2. Along the Bug river north of Pinsk and in the Bailystok sector.
3. Along the San river west of Lwow, capital of the Ukraine territory now being invaded by the Russian and German armies.

SEP 20 1939

Leaders Cross Border

As the Polish President, Ignace Mosscicki, Foreign Minister Josef Beck and Marshal Edward Smigly-Ridz, Polish army commander, crossed the border, the Cernauti chief of police estimated that at least 100,000 refugees had fled Poland for safety in Rumania.

The Polish infantry and artillery were said to be fighting practically without aerial assistance as most of the Polish aircraft has been destroyed or interned in Rumania.

The three armies were said to be resisting the Germans as individual units, without unified direction from the Polish general staff.

Observers here said the opening days of the Polish-German war were made up of long distance warfare.

German planes have bombed troops

Warsaw Broadcaster Heard Again, Only To Be Broken Off

Radio Falls Silent In Midst Of Description Of Siege. Poles Flee By Thousands

SEP 19 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 18 — The Warsaw radio fell silent suddenly at 10.10 o'clock tonight as Col. Vaclav Lipinski was telling of fighting against German besiegers in the Polish capital.

He had said fighting in the Praga district of east Warsaw was violent last night with heavy shelling. The west sector was quiet.

Colonel Lipinski claimed the Poles had taken many prisoners.

Yesterday, he asserted, German artillery had shelled the center of the city. "And yet," continued the radio announcement, "we have comparative order here.

"We have lived through yesterday and today despite bombing, machine gunning and shelling.

and communications in cities far behind the battle lines while most of the German advances have been achieved by motorized and mechanized units speedily encircling towns and cities rather than by direct frontal attacks.

Polish Losses Kept Down

Polish staff officers and foreign military observers estimate that—because of that type of warfare—Polish combatant losses have been not more than 50,000 to 100,000 killed.

Before the war the Poles figured they could lose a million men before Warsaw could be taken.

German losses were estimated by the same observers at between 35,000 and 50,000 killed.

As the Polish leaders crossed the border, they were reported on their way to Bucharest from where, it was said they planned to go to Paris.

Moscicki entrained yesterday for Craiova, near the Bulgarian frontier, while Beck motored to the Slasikul-Modovja district and Marshal Smigly-Rydz to Bikaz in the Carpathian Mountains.

Polish Leaders Quarrel

There was a bitter argument between Beck and Smigly-Rydz at the station during the farewell to Moscicki. The army chief stalked off to an automobile, ignoring Beck's aides.

Poland's "big three" were now separated.

The Russian army, striking swiftly since its entry into Poland Sunday, was rolling westward through the Ukraine. The motorized forces were reported advancing through the province of Tarnopol, through Zaleszczyki (which was a temporary seat of the Polish Government) and Sniatyn.

Military observers believed the Russians had reached Kolomija sometime today and were approaching Kuty.

[Editor's Note—These towns are all in the extreme southeast corner of Poland. Zaleszczyki is on the Polish-Rumanian frontier about thirty miles from Russia's western border; Sniatyn is about twenty miles farther in Poland to the southwest; Kuty twenty miles farther on almost a direct line. Kolomija is just north and east of Sniatyn.]

Soviet tanks and motorized forces apparently planned to occupy the territory along the entire length of the Polish-Rumanian frontier. Eastward driving German troops were reported fifty kilometers (about thirty-one miles) from Kuty. Observers considered it likely the German and Russian forces would meet at the Polish-Hungarian frontier.

Major W. H. Colbern, United States military attache in Poland, reported that a Russian tank commander told him the Russians were "against the Germans."

Major Colbern had crossed the Dniester river in Poland yesterday and was on the road to Horodenka, about forty miles northwest of here, when he said he saw a column of eleven-ton tanks going in the same direction as some Polish troops.

Told To Halt

He said one pulled aside and told him to halt. A Soviet officer who was cordial and polite, Major Colbern said, came out to speak to him.

Major Colbern said he later talked to the tank commander and quoted him as saying "We are against the Germans." The American officer said Polish troops fraternized with the Russians and gave them cigarettes.

United States, French, British and other foreign envoys to Poland have crossed the border as well as the French and military missions and are now in Cernauti, Bucharest or on their way to the Rumanian capital.

Scene Of Confusion

The Rumanian-Polish border is the scene of almost unbelieveable confusion with a steady stream of fleeing refugees and Polish troops.

All through Sunday, Sunday night and yesterday they were climbing Cernauti's slippery, hilly streets in the rain.

Polish troops, especially air force men and equipment, including 270 Polish army planes, crossed the frontier. The Poles were being interned by Rumanian military authorities.

The Cernauti chief of police said they crossed the border in automobiles, on bicycles, horses and on foot, and the stream of humanity still came winding across the bridge through the Rumanian countryside and then up Cernauti's cobblestone streets.

SEP 19 1939

Taxis From Warsaw

Even taxis came from Warsaw loaded with refugees and their baggage. A fire engine and hook-and-ladder truck from Krakow entered.

The backwash of war has made a grim pageant in little Cernauti, suddenly transformed into a pseudo-international capital.

Seriously wounded Polish airmen filled the military hospital. Concentration camps for fleeing Polish troops sprang up overnight like boom mining towns. The soldiers were sorted out acording to rank. Most Poles said they willingly faced internment, glad to have escaped the chaotic struggle in their homeland.

Personal tragedy was on every hand. Families were separated, with husbands or wives or children still trapped in Poland.

Diplomatic representatives of more than a score of nations rubbed shoulders in the two small hotels. Many slept on cots in the corridors.

A constant stream of Rumanian troops marched toward the troubled frontier. The uncertainty of the future weighed heavily on Rumanians and refugees alike.

Observers commented that Rumania was obviously in a critical position and the lightning pace of the war made many fear the worst.

Germans' Faith In Mechanized Arm Borne Out

London Military Men Also Emphasize Value of Nazi Planes in Polish Conquest

LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP).—Military men in London drew tonight from the first two weeks of the Polish campaign some of the initial lessons of the 1939 war, as Polish resistance crumbled.

SEP 19 1939

They said they included:

1. The mechanized arm of the German Army proved itself capable of swift, sure advances. The legend, carefully cultivated after the Austrian invasion, of its structural deficiencies has been dissipated. The speed with which its forces took military objectives was staggering in comparison with similar attacks in Spain's civil war.

2. Afforded every opportunity by the rolling, dry terrain of Poland, the mechanized forces nevertheless had to be followed by cavalry and infantry. The former arm was especially useful in moving speedily to positions already stormed by tanks and armored cars.

3. It was established that aerial bombardment is a most effective weapon against the preparation of counter-attacks in open country, and that the air strength of warring powers must be somewhere near equal if the war is to be fought on anything like even terms.

Attacks Broken Up

They said that to these points must be added three observations on a broader scale:

First, that the German general staff appears more flexible and adaptable in strategy than in 1914.

Second, that the sweep through Poland might have been accomplished in a week had the Poles not exhibited desperate bravery throughout.

Third, that the downfall of the Polish armies was accomplished as much through the superior—almost uncanny—work of the German intelligence service as through any other agency.

Speaking of the mechanized arm, one neutral officer who fought through the World War, said:

"I was skeptical of its efficiency until the last two weeks. But its performances, attested by neutrals, have been prodigious. It performs today many functions of cavalry in the nineteenth century, but it moves faster than any cavalry, even your Jeb Stuarts, ever moved.

"If the Maginot Line is ever broken, this mechanized arm will be of inestimable value even in the rougher terrain of the western front. It may be early to make the prediction, but I believe that in mechanized columns, such as the German, the World War advantage of the defense over the offense in casualties has been adjusted."

Although the advancing Germans used cavalry to follow tanks and armored cars into new positions in Poland, observers pointed out that this was made possible by the character of the country.

"In the rugged terrain of western Europe these same cavalry divisions would be slowed down to the pace of infantry," said one, "but cavalry always will be useful over such ground."

Planes Prove Worth

The German air force was used chiefly to bomb and strafe with machine guns the concentrations of Polish infantry and artillery for counter-assaults. In this it was invaluable.

"A large part of the German success must be laid to this source," said a soldier who had just returned from Germany. "The Poles planned counter-offensive after counter-offensive, only to see them broken up as German planes swooped on troops getting ready for these offensives and scattered them."

To this task military men add invaluable aid in reconnaissance and bombing preparation for German offenses as the main work of the German air force.

"PERHAPS IT IS TOO EARLY TO SAY" REPORTED AN OFFICER WHO HAD FOLLOWED LUDENDORFF IN THE WORLD WAR, "BUT I BELIEVE THE GERMAN GENERAL STAFF'S POLICY TODAY IS MORE FLEXIBLE THAN IT WAS IN THE WORLD WAR. IT WAS ABLE TO DIVERT A DIRECT ASSAULT ON WARSAW INTO A FLANKING MOVEMENT ON BOTH FLANKS WHICH WOULD ENCIRCLE THE ENEMY AND AT THE SAME TIME CONSOLIDATE GAINS MADE BY OTHER ARMIES.

"THIS SHOWS STAFF WORK OF A HIGH DEGREE OF IMAGINATION AS WELL AS THOROUGHNESS---THE GERMAN FORTE."

SEP 19 1939

THE MILITARY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE OF THE GERMANS RECEIVED HIGH PRAISE. OBSERVERS NOTED THAT THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE POLISH GENERAL STAFF APPEARED NEVER UNKNOWN TO THE GERMAN, THAT POLISH GENERALS WERE CONTINUALLY ON THE MOVE, HARASSED BY GERMAN BOMBERS AND ARTILLERY.

ALLIED AND NEUTRAL OBSERVERS ALIKE SWORE BY THE STEADY COURAGE OF THE POLISH SOLDIER.

"THEIR BRAVERY WAS ALMOST UNBELIEVABLE," SAID ONE EXPERT. "STRAFED AND BOMBED FROM THE AIR WITHOUT EVER SEEING EFFECTIVE AERIAL RESISTANCE TO THE GERMAN AIR FORCE, THEIR COMMUNICATIONS DISORGANIZED, THEIR

1939

30.24-342

30.24 342

COUNTRY OVERRUN, THEIR GENERALS COMMITTED TO A POLICY OF RETREAT AND DEFENSE, THEY NEVERTHELESS KEPT THEIR COURAGE AND THEIR MORALE HIGH, AS A FRENCH OBSERVER SAID OF GENERAL PICKETT'S CHARGE AT YOUR BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG: "IT WAS MAGNIFICENT BUT IT WAS NOT WAR!"

FD745PED

SEP 19 1939

SOVIET ACCUSES ESTONIA, SETS NAVY IN MOTION

Charges Baltic State Connived In Disappearance Of Polish Sub

SEP 20 1939

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Tuesday, Sept. 19—The Soviet Russian Baltic fleet is "taking measures" against Polish submarines believed hiding in Baltic waters, the official news agency, Tass, announced today.

The announcement strongly indicated the steps being taken by the Soviet Baltic command were aimed specifically at Estonia, one of the small Baltic states north of Poland and adjoining Russia.

"On September 18 a Polish submarine previously interned in Tallinn, port of Estonia, escaped and disappeared in an unknown direction," said Tass. "This is believed to be a case of abetment on the part of Estonian authorities."

Covert Support Charged

"As reported from Leningrad, according to reliable information, Polish submarines are hiding in ports of the Baltic states and find there covert support on the part of certain government personages," the Tass statement began.

"According to information available, besides Polish submarines, also submarines of certain other states are hiding in those ports."

Creation of Buffer Polish State By Reich and Russia Indicated

SEP 19 1939

Joint Communique Says Aim Is to Help Poles Rebuild Existence; Soviet Army Reports Steady Advance, Seizure of 13 More Towns

MOSCOW, Sept. 18 (AP).—Germany and Soviet Russia gave today what was interpreted as a strong hint of intentions to create a small Polish buffer state when their invading armies finish conquering Poland

A joint Soviet-German communique was issued declaring that the intention of their armies was to help the Polish people "reconstruct conditions of their state existence." (The official German news agency issued a substantially similar announcement in Berlin.)

The Soviet general staff announced a continued advance along the entire 500-mile front of yesterday's invasion with the capture of thirteen additional towns and cities. One of these is Stanislavov (Stanislowow) in the Ukraine, of 60,000 population and the largest yet taken by Soviet troops. The farthest thrust was at Volkovysk (Wolkowysk), 119 miles from the Russian border and representing a sixty-mile advance from Baranovichi (Baranowicze), the farthest point reached Sunday.

[Volkovysk is eighty miles north of Brest-Litvok (Brezeos), which the Germans captured on Sunday and at which Berlin dispatches on Monday reported Russian and Germon officers met to discuss where their respective lines would be drawn. It was assumed the Soviet officers went on in advance of larger forces.]

The general staff closed with the statement that "advance columns of the Red Army are approaching Lemberg (Lwow) and Vilna (Wilno) by Germans. The Russians reported capturing Krasne, railway point only thirty miles east of Lemberg. The nearest they reported being to Vilna, old Lithuanian capital, was at Sventsiany (Sweiciany), fifty miles to the northeast.

[The United Press reported from Moscow that the Russian advance on Vilna was being led personally by War Commissar Klementi E. Voroshilov.]

The text of the second Red Army communique on its operations in Poland, covering Monday's activities, follows:

"During the day of Sept. 18, Red Army troops continued throwing back Polish Army units and by evening had occupied:

"In the north, in western Byelo-Russia (White Russia) the town of Sventsiany, the railway junction of Lida, the town of Novogrudok (Nowogrodek), the town of Oryla (Orla) on the Niemen River, the towns of Slonim, Volkovysk (Wolkowysk) and the station at Yaglevichi on the railway line between Minsk and Brest-Litovsk;

"In the south, in the western Ukraine, the railway junction of Sarny, the towns of Lutsk, Stanislavov, Galich, Krasne and Bubach.

"Advance columns of the Red Army are approaching Lemberg and Vilna."

Lemberg, capital of the Polish Ukraine and third largest city in Poland, was still held by Polish troops, although almost encircled

CARRIER SANK IN HALF HOUR AFTER ATTACK

Members Of Crew Sang And Cheered While Swimming In Sea

Britons Believe Submarine Was Sent To Bottom By Destroyers

SEP 20 1939

By the Associated Press

London, Tuesday, Sept. 19—The British Admiralty issued today a list of 438 survivors of the torpedoed aircraft carrier Courageous, first warship casualty in the war with Germany.

The Admiralty emphasized that the list was not complete. The ship's company numbered slightly more than 1,100 when she went down at an unnamed spot yesterday.

About 400 of the survivors were landed in England tonight by a destroyer, some of them telling vivid stories of the sinking. Others were reported on merchant ships.

Sub Reported Sunk

The British declared their belief the attacking submarine had been sent to the same grave with the Courageous by a spirited onslaught from British destroyers.

The first list of survivors included Commander E. M. C. Abel-Smith, former equerry to King George, the ship's chaplain, the commanding engineer and various officers.

Commander C. W. G. M. Woodhouse also was listed, but there was no immediate mention of Captain W. T. Makeig-Jones, who was last reported by survivors on the bridge directing his men to abandon ship.

The ship had two commanders, Abel-Smith for the air arm, Woodhouse for the executive, while Captain Makeig-Jones was in direct command of the ship.

Survivors Sang And Cheered

The survivors reported crewmen sang and cheered while they swam after the Courageous foundered.

This loss of a powerful unit of the world's greatest navy shocked a nation already angered by the loss of twenty four merchant ships—among them the liner Athenia—in what the British Government described as unrestricted submarine warfare.

The admiralty's communique on the sinking, was barren of detail. It said only the Courageous had "been lost by enemy submarine action," that an undisclosed number of survivors had been picked up by destroyers and merchant ships and that the submarine was "heavily attacked by destroyers and is believed to have been sunk."

"After her bows had submerged and her stern had cocked up into the air," one survivor reported, "she actually foundered within fifteen to thirty minutes after being hit. Some boats on the starboard side were got out but those on the port side could not be used as she heeled over too quickly."

Hit Without Warning

Survivors said the Courageous was struck without warning although the submarine was quickly spotted after the attack.

There was a moderate sea and it was still daylight.

The captain's secretary said he reached one of the destroyers after swimming forty minutes. "Everybody behaved with calm and men cracked jokes," he said. "There was no panic or disorder."

How a German undersea boat could have slipped past the screen of destroyers which ordinarily protects the floating airbases that carry the "eyes of the fleet" was not explained officially.

Perhaps A Deep Dive

Neutral observers conjectured a submarine could have slipped upon the Courageous and her destroyers by a dangerously deep dive and then attacked in full knowledge that her chances for escape were slim.

Where the Courageous went down was not disclosed. The Admiralty said she had been "performing very good service in protecting ships of the mercantile marine against U-boat attacks."

This was taken to mean she had been convoying merchantmen as well as carrying planes in Britain's effort to drive enemy submarines and shipping from the seas.

Six Other Aircraft Carriers

The loss of the Courageous, while a severe blow, left Great Britain with six other, newer aircraft carriers—the Albatross, Ark Royal, Eagle, Furious, Glorious and Hermes. Five more are under construction.

A communique tonight reviewing England's air patrol of the sea said "many submarines" have been found and attacked, some sunk and others severely damaged "with little opposition from the German airforce."

The communique also gave an eyewitness account by a young South African pilot, telling how he sighted a submarine in the Atlantic, approached under cover of a cloud and sank the craft with bombs.

He said he opened fire at a man on the conning tower. His first bombs hit the water fifteen to twenty yards ahead of the submarine as it rapidly submerged, and the explosions blew her back to the surface, he said. His account continued:

"The nearest bomb of my second salvo was a direct hit on the submarine's portside and there was a colossal explosion and her whole stern lifted out of the water. She dived into the sea at an angle of thirty degrees.

"There were two distinct bangs at intervals of about a second," related one of the survivors. "After that there were a few minor explosions and most of the crew jumped into the water. The order to abandon ship came within five minutes and the Courageous foundered thirty minutes after the first explosion. The ship heeled so badly some lifeboats could not be used."

One officer reported Capt. W. T. Makeig-Jones last was seen on the bridge ordering his men to abandon ship.

The number of survivors of the ship's company of slightly more than 1,100 could not be determined until other vessels have reported the number they picked up. One survivor said those members of the crew who could not swim supported themselves with pieces of wood and rafts until they were rescued.

"She immediately began to list to port," he said, "and within five minutes the captain gave orders to abandon her, and after her bows had submerged and her stern had cocked up into the air, she actually foundered within fifteen to thirty minutes after being hit. Some boats on the starboard side were got out, but those on the port side could not be used, as she heeled over too quickly."

Lists of the survivors were posted, and joy and tears were mixed in the crowds around the bulletins. There were joyful reunions, and there were relatives who turned away in tears of disappointment.

Survivors said the Courageous was struck without warning, although the submarine was quickly spotted after the attack.

The captain's secretary said he reached one of the destroyers after swimming forty minutes. "Everybody behaved with calm and men cracked jokes," he said. "There was no panic or disorder."

How a German undersea boat could have slipped past the screen of destroyers which ordinarily protects the floating air bases that mother the "eyes of the fleet" was not explained officially. Neutral observers conjectured a submarine could have slipped upon the Courageous and her destroyers by a dangerously deep dive and then attacked in full knowledge that her chances for escape were slim.

Where the Courageous went down was not disclosed. The Admiralty said she had been "performing very good service in protecting ships of the mercantile marine against U-boat attacks." This was taken to mean she had been convoying merchantmen, as well as carrying planes in Britain's effort to drive enemy submarines and shipping from the seas.

1939

The loss of the Courageous, while a severe blow, left Great Britain with six other, newer aircraft carriers—the Albatross, Ark Royal, Eagle, Furious, Glorious and Hermes. Five more are under construction.

A communique tonight reviewing England's air patrol of the sea said 'many submarines" have been found and attacked, some sunk and others severely damaged, "with little opposition from the German air force."

In 1918, before the Courageous was converted from a cruiser, she claimed an Atlantic record with a crossing to the United States in less than four days. She made the return journey almost as rapidly

"Jane's Fighting Ships," authoritative work on world fleets, described the Courageous as a converted cruiser of 22,500 tons (26,500 tons full load). She originally was intended for Baltic service.

First built in February, 1916, "Jane's" figures showed her to be the oldest but one of the largest of the six British aircraft carriers. "Jane's" gave her thickest armor plate as three inches on her sides and amidships. She carried sixteen 4.7-inch guns, four three-pounders and seventeen smaller pieces. The beam of her flight deck was 100 feet and her overall length 786¼ feet.

Captain Sends Message

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Maritime Commission said today its freighter Collingsworth had rescued fifty-three survivors of the torpedoed Courageous. The commission's information came in a brief message from Captain Reynolds of the Collingsworth. It said:

"Rescued fifty-three survivors of H. M. S. Courageous. Later evacuated all to other vessels. Now proceeding."

The commission did not give the location of the Collingsworth other than the North Atlantic.

R. A. F. Flying Boat Crew Is Saved Off Nova Scotia

Halifax, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press)—The Swedish freighter Pollux tonight took aboard the crew of a Canadian Air Force flying boat which was forced down in the Atlantic off Nova Scotia.

Royal Canadian Air Force officers said the freighter was standing by the disabled ship while a tug steamed out from Sydney to tow her into port. The plane's position was given as off Sydney.

It was said "possibly a half dozen" men were aboard the plane, which was on a reconnaissance flight when a broken aileron forced her down today.

U. S. Ship To Return Athenia Survivors Today

Glasgow, Sept. 18 (AP)—The American liner Orizaba has arrived in Clyde to embark 150 American survivors of the torpedoed liner Athenia.

W. H. Davies, American consul, announced passengers would board the vessel tomorrow.

"She will have no escort," Davies said. "This is not necessary as the Orizaba is from a neutral country."

Some of the survivors had urged that a convoy be provided for the voyage home.

SEP 19 1939

Column Of Fire Is Seen In Ocean Off Norway

Stavanger, Norway, Sept. 18 (AP)—A huge column of fire which rose suddenly far out at sea was sighted from here at 8 o'clock last night.

Watchers from the shore estimated the blaze was 600 feet high and theorized it might have been caused by the explosion of a tanker.

Stavanger is on the southwest coast of Norway about 100 miles south of the North Sea port of Bergen.

"Damaged" Liner Towed in LONDON, Sept. 18 (AP)—The British Press Association said tonight that the 10,902-ton Glasgow steamer City of Paris was "damaged" Saturday night and taken in tow for salvage. [The report did not say how the damage was caused.]

The 138 members of the crew, except one seaman who was crushed to death in the lowering of a lifeboat, got away in boats. They were picked up by other ships.

The City of Paris, owned by the Ellerman Lines, was a popular ship on Norwegian cruises during the Summer season.

The Ministry of Information asserted today that the 9,456-ton motor vessel Inverliffey, sunk Sept. 11 by a German submarine, was sent down after her master had pointed out to the submarine's commander that she was flying to flag of neutral Ireland.

To the assertion that the Inverliffey was under a neutral flag, said the Ministry communiqué, the submarine's commander replied that she "carried a contraband cargo" and that he intended to sink her. He did so as soon as her crew abandoned ship. The American tanker R. G. Stewart picked up the survivors and transferred them to a steamer bound for Havre. They were landed in France Sept. 14.

Irish Registration Dropped

Holyhead, England, Sept. 18 (AP).—The owners of three ships whose crews refused to sail under the Irish flag as a matter of loyalty to England made arrangements today to change ports of registration so the British flag could be flown.

At first the question was raised whether dependents of the crew, if they sailed under the Irish flag, would be entitled to compensation for loss of life or injury under a compensation scale laid down by the British Board of Trade.

When this issue was settled the spokesman of the sailors brought up the question of loyalty. Ireland has adopted a stand of neutrality in the present war. The vessels are owned by the London, Scotland & Midland Railway and operate over the Irish Sea.

SEP 19 1939

LONDON--THIRD ADD COURAGEOUS X X X OCCURRED.

THE TEXT OF THE ADMIRALTY STATEMENT (ABOUT 175 WORDS) FOLLOWS:

"THE ADMIRALTY REGRET TO ANNOUNCE THAT H.M.S. COURAGEOUS HAS BEEN LOST BY ENEMY SUBMARINE ACTION.

"SHE WAS COMMISSIONED WITH THE RESERVE FLEET IN AUGUST WITH A REDUCED COMPLEMENT OF AIRCRAFT AND SINCE THE OPENING OF HOSTILITIES HAS BEEN PERFORMING VERY GOOD SERVICE IN PROTECTING THE SHIPS OF THE MERCANTILE MARINE AGAINST U-BOAT ATTACKS.

"SURVIVORS HAVE BEEN PICKED UP BY DESTROYERS AND MERCHANT SHIPS WHICH ARE NOW RETURNING TO HARBOUR. SEP 19 1939

"THE SUBMARINE WAS IMMEDIATELY HEAVILY ATTACKED BY DESTROYERS AND IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN SUNK.

"H.M.S. COURAGEOUS IS ONE OF THE EARLIEST AIRCRAFT CARRIERS. SHE WAS ORIGINALLY COMPLETED AS A CRUISER IN 1917 AND WAS CONVERTED AFTER THE WAR AS AN AIRCRAFT CARRIER.

"THE NEXT OF KIN WILL BE INFORMED AS SOON AS INFORMATION CAN BE OBTAINED AS TO THE NAMES OF THE SURVIVORS."

DB826AED

LONDON--DASH MATTER UNDER COURAGEOUS.

AT LEAST FOUR NEW AIRCRAFT CARRIERS ARE ON THE BRITISH BUILDING PROGRAM. H.M.S.VICTORIOUS, AN AIRCRAFT CARRIER WAS SCHEDULED TO HAVE BEEN LAUNCHED SEPT.14. OTHERS TO COME, ALL EXPECTED TO HAVE A TOP SPEED OF 31 KNOTS, ARE THE INDOMITABLE, IMPLACABLE AND INDEFATIGABLE. SEP 19 1939

THE ARK ROYAL WAS THE FIRST BRITISH WARSHIP DESIGNED EXCLUSIVELY AS AN AIRCRAFT CARRIER. THE OTHERS HAVE BEEN CONVERTED

1939

30.24-3423

30.24 3423

CRUISERS, AS WAS THE COURAGEOUS.

AIRCRAFT NORMALLY CARRIED ON BRITISH CARRIERS INCLUDE FIGHTERS, RECONNAISSANCE PLANES, TORPEDO-SPOTTER-RECONNAISSANCE PLANES AND LIGHT BOMBERS.

SEP 19 1939

ONE TYPE OF FIGHTER PLANE ASSIGNED TO THE BRITISH NAVY IS THE SEA GLADIATOR WHICH HAS A MAXIMUM SPEED OF 245 MILES AN HOUR.

THE ARK ROYAL CARRIES A NEW TYPE OF PLANE, A DIVE BOMBER WEIGHING FOUR TONS AND HAVING A RANGE OF ABOUT 900 MILES.

N1129AED

Say Il Duce Knew Soviet Plan

Diplomats at Rome Believe Mussolini Was Told of Polish Invasion Scheme.

ROME, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Polish Government has delivered to Italy a note protesting that Poland is the victim of "unprovoked aggression by the Soviet Russian Army."

SEP 19 1939

No official comment was immediately forthcoming on the message, which was presented to the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, by the Polish Ambassador, Gen. Boleslao Wienzwa Dlugoszowski, last night.

While Italy's attitude thus remained an enigma, foreign diplomats expressed the belief that Premier Mussolini knew in advance of Russia's intention to enter Poland. They said that the Russian thrust might have been arranged in the German-Soviet non-aggression pact negotiations, and was probably envisaged at conferences held on August 12 and 13, last, between Count Ciano and the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Swing Toward Russia.

Despite lack of comment on the Polish note, there were indications in the Fascist press that Italy had dropped her former animosity toward Russia.

News of the Russo-Japanese accord to end border fighting were acclaimed by the press in terms of high praise. Count Ciano's paper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, said that the accord "must be received with lively satisfaction as an important contribution to the defense of what might be called the residue of peace still existing in the world."

Newspapers emphasized the favorable reception the accord received in Berlin.

At the same time, the press, while not attacking Great Britain or France, continued to praise the German soldiers in Poland for valor and efficiency.

Redoubling Preparations.

Although the first reaction of some diplomats was that Russia's new role in Poland would lessen the chance of Italian participation in the war on Germany's side, the Fascist press gave no such indication.

There was, however, a belief that the Russo-Japanese understanding might have brought Japan more into co-operation with the Rome-Berlin axis. It was noted that Gen. Juichi Terauchi, head of a Japanese mission, had departed for Berlin in the company of an Italian general, an Italian admiral and a German admiral who came here several days ago.

Developments in Rome over the week end brought indications that Italy was redoubling her preparations for any eventuality, but for the present would not abandon her officially declared neutrality.

Many Italian ships are at sea, and others are continuing to sail, but the newspapers are calling on the public to help the Government in measures to conserve the nation's resources.

Time Off for Planting.

Meanwhile today the Italian Government announced that peasant reservists under arms would be given time off from military duty for the wine making and grain planting.

The temporary return of the reservists to their farms for the planting season, just starting, would assure Italians of their bread and wine for the next year "without in the least affecting the efficiency of the armed forces, which remain with arms ready to defend Italian rights in Europe, turbulent and turned upside down by war," the announcement said.

The order does not affect colonial forces.

The communique indicated that the only action on the western front today consisted of artillery bombardment concentrating in the Saarbruecken sector.

The general staff's night communique follows:

"Artillery activity on various points of the front, particularly in the region south of Saarbruecken.

"An enemy submarine has been attacked with success by our naval forces."

SEP 19 1939

French Ace Shoots Down 3 Nazis Planes in Battle

Rapid-Fire Guns Prove Worth in Aerial Combat

PARIS, Sept. 18 (AP).—A single French pilot shot down three German planes in aerial combat over the western front today, French military authorities said.

Advices from the front lines given out at Paris said French planes had been generally active along the front in meeting the German air force on an even footing.

The French ace, as yet unnamed in dispatches, was said to have shot down three planes in rapid succession. The German planes, all of which apparently fell behind the French lines, were identified as Messerschmidt fighters.

French rapid-firing guns, presumably heavier than ordinary machine guns, were reported to have proven their worth in aerial combat.

U-Boat Is Sunk by the French

General Staff Announces Destruction of Sea Raider—Nazi Planes Head West.

PARIS, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—France reported tonight it had sunk its first enemy submarine since war was declared against Germany.

SEP 19 1939

A General Staff communique reported the attack on the submarine was carried out "with success."

Nazis Stiffen West Wall

Whole Trainloads of Troops Reported Pouring Into Siegfried Line.

SEP 19 1939

PARIS, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Thousands of steel-helmeted German reserves were reported flooding into the Siegfried Line today to strengthen Germany's stand against the French advance on Nazi soil. Their movement toward the western front was regarded by military experts as a sign that the Nazis expect Polish resistance on the eastern front to collapse soon.

Heavily outnumbered, the Poles appeared from reports reaching here to be surrounded by Germans on the west, north and south and by Russians on the east.

Russia's invasion of Poland shocked France, although the nation had expected it. The press condemned it almost unanimously as treachery.

Officially, however, France gave no hint whether she would classify the Russian move as an act of war against the Allied interests or accept the Soviet explanation that the invasion was undertaken merely to protect Russian interests on the assumption that the Polish Government no longer existed.

Premier Daladier came back from the Franco-German front to study the new circumstances. He had been visiting the army of poilus in lines reported within German territory.

Trainloads of Troops.

Even as he returned to Paris praising the morale of French soldiers, it was reported that Germany was releasing whole trainloads of Nazi troops to stiffen her West Wall defense.

The French army now firmly holds the left bank of the Saar River from the German border city of Saarguemines, where the river enters Germany, to Melsig, where it nears Luxemburg.

Repulse German Moves.

The French reported fighting off numerous flanking movements attempted by the German infantry to gain the summits overlooking Saarbruecken and Saarlautern, two important objectives in German territory.

Thus the French dominate the whole Saar valley, a rich industrial region which more than offsets, they have said, German mineral gains in the conquest of Polish Silesia.

The French have also thrown out a cordon threatening the right bank of the Saar River which they control from that side to Saarbruecken itself.

[Reports from Basel, Switzerland, said that French fortress troops had gained and held positions within three miles of Saarlautern last night.]

French reports indicated an intention to gain Saarlautern and Saarbruecken virtually intact. They said that the German artillery was threatening the destruction of both.

'All Calm.'

In a communique issued today, the French General Staff reported that the night had been calm along the entire front, with only local advance guard actions. The communique did not designate the sectors where the skirmishes occurred.

Meanwhile, to balance the German reenforcements the French doubled their own defensive lines. They continued to pile up shell reserves and light and heavy artillery behind the advance posts as both sides shuttled into positions for an expected major combat.

French patrols reported that the last German troops had moved out of Saarbruecken. They said that the Nazis had blown up the bridges and railway lines to the north as they retired to new outposts before Dudweiler, several thousand yards away.

Warplanes From Poland.

Action is now centered midway along a 100-mile front extending from Luxemburg to the Rhine.

Reports from the front said that the Germans were bringing up whole squadrons of warplanes from Poland as well as ground troops. Some of the German troops which had fought previously in the east were reported to have taken part in recent action on the Nied river near the Luxemburg frontier.

The French said in an official announcement that they had broken a German attack there in some of the fiercest fighting of the war.

The Government published a decree making it compulsory for all persons and companies to declare all foreign holdings amounting to approximately 100,000,000,000 francs ($2,200,000,000), of which a great proportion is centered in the United States.

French dispatches said that the Red Army, which invaded Poland yesterday, had reached Zaleszczyki on the Polish-Rumanian frontier last night. This report indicated that the Russian army had come close to meeting the Germans, striking through southeastern Poland from the opposite direction, and had cut off part of the Polish-Rumanian frontier shortly after many foreign diplomatic missions to Poland had fled across the line.

Nevertheless it was emphasized in official circles that France and Great Britain were determined to "crush Hitlerism" and free Poland of foreign troops.

What many Frenchmen had predicted was apparently approaching reality—German and Russian forces were nearing a junction close to the Rumanian frontier, where they would have a channel for Russia to send Germany supplies for her war in the west. Frenchmen wondered what success this might have in counteracting the Anglo-French naval blockade, a factor in Germany's world war defeat.

Trouble for the Balkans.

Informed persons here regard the entry of Russia into Poland a blow to the neutrality of the small State of southeastern Europe. They consider Rumania particularly endangered because she holds territory once belonging to Russia. Should the conflict spread to the Balkans, however, these persons expect a quick reaction from Turkey.

In some French quarters it is also believed that the Russian action may bring the official policy of Italy—still on the sidelines, although a military ally of Germany—into sharper focus. Some Frenchmen even profess to see helpful signs in Poland, since, they say, there is bound to be mutual distrust between Hitler and Stalin with both their armies on the same foreign soil.

Via Switzerland.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—French fortress troops were reported here today to have won and held positions less than three miles from the German border town of Saarlautern during a series of night operations.

Advices reaching Switzerland said that while the Germans concentrated on attacking the French lines on a ridge ten miles north of Saarlautern, the French in the Bouzonville-Bedersdorf sector struck suddenly at the hills before the town itself.

SEP 19 1939

The fighting centered around the junction of the Saarlautern-Bouzonville and Saarlautern-Boulay highways. Saarlautern is about thirteen miles northwest of Saarbruecken, chief city of the Saar Valley.

In brief though bitter fighting, the French were said to have captured the heights from which their machine-guns commanded the town of Felsberg and its railroad station on a branch line from Saarlautern.

French light artillery in this sector already held under its fire Saarlautern, birthplace of the famous Napoleonic commander, Marshal Ney.

Along the Moselle.

On the northwest, along the Moselle River, the German attacks were reported to have subsided, leaving the French substantially in the same positions they held before.

East of Saarbruecken, however, reports reaching Basle indicated, the Germans had recaptured a number of positions which relieved French pressure on the Saar capital from that area.

Fighting in the Zweibrueken-Pirmasens sector died down somewhat during the night, while in the Vosges area, action was limited to artillery duels, these reports said.

POLISH CHIEFS CROSS BORDER INTO RUMANIA

SEP 19 1939

President Mościcki and Foreign Minister Beck Safe in Cernauti.

SMIGLY-RYDZ EXPECTED SOON

Warsaw Leaders Planning to Depart Immediately for London Via Paris.

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—President Ignace Mościcki and Foreign Minister Josef Beck, who fled from two invading armies in Poland, were reported today planning to take their Government to London.

President Mościcki and Col. Beck were in virtual custody of Rumanian authorities who denied them permission to confer with other diplomats here. It was believed that the Polish officials would leave shortly for London via Paris.

Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Polish army commander, although expected here, had not arrived. Members of the Polish General Staff did reach here, however.

The United States Ambassador to Poland, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., who came here last week, went to Bucharest last night. There was no immediate word here of two Americans, William Morton, of the consular service, and Richard Mowrer, of the Chicago Daily News, last reported in Zaleszczyki.

Close on the heels of President Mościcki, Foreign Minister Beck and a Government party of fifty-six, stunned divisions of Poland's defenders, disarmed at the border, began streaming into neutral Rumania.

Additional Polish war planes landed at this frontier town, bringing to more than 250 the number reaching here within the past few days.

The planes were seized and the flyers interned, as were Polish soldiers who crossed the border. All were disarmed. Privates and non-commissioned officers were taken to one camp and officers were sent to a concentration center near Bucharest.

Meanwhile, through Franklin Mott Gunther, United States Minister to Bucharest, President Mościcki sent a telegram to President Roosevelt protesting that German planes had "bombarded methodically and with premeditation" open towns in Poland.

The telegram added:

"There are thousands of dead and wounded in the civil population in cities without a military objective."

President Mościcki said that the telegram was in reply to Mr. Roosevelt's message at the start of hostilities to all belligerents, asking that there be no bombardment of open cities.

Rumania massed troops behind her border and established inspection stations for disarming Polish soldiers.

The Poles tramped in wearily, carrying full equipment. Many said they weren't through fighting. They told of plans to form a foreign legion and face German troops again.

With the soldiers came hundreds of civilian refugees in wagons, automobiles and afoot.

The number of Polish war planes reaching here was so great for the limited landing space that the small airport was jammed. One plane landed on top of three others, destroying all four.

German planes were reported close to the Polish-Rumanian border. Word of bombings came from several points along the frontier. The Zaleszczyki Bridge, across the boundary-marking Dniester River, was destroyed.

Polish Planes Reach Latvia.

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—More than sixty Polish warplanes, many of them damaged in combat, were confiscated and their crews interned when they arrived at Daugavpils Airport here today.

Polish citizens, including numerous officials, started crossing the border last night.

A relatively small number of soldiers also crossed the frontier. They were disarmed and placed in concentration camps.

Pouring Into Hungary.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Ungvar, official Hungarian news agency, reported today that Polish refugees were "pouring" across the boundary into Hungary.

Refugees said that soldiers also were fleeing for safety. The Government agreed to accept civilians and give them aid. Sigmond Perenyi, Govenor of Ruthenia, was placed in charge of relief.

SEP 19 1939

Middle Europe to Paris.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, American Ambassador to Poland, would make his headquarters in France for the time being.

Mr. Hull said that no decision had been reached as to whether the American Embassy to Poland would continue to function from France.

He added that the six American consuls in Warsaw were safe when the State Department last heard from them. Officials said, however, that this was some days ago.

Russians Capture 15,000 Of Czech Legion in Poland

Commander Will Go to France and Fight

SEP 19 1939

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 18 (AP).—Gen. Lev Prchala, commander of the Czech Legion formed in Poland after Germany absorbed Czecho-Slovakia, told the Associated Press today that 15,000 of his men were captured by the Russians. He said that he was informed his soldiers had been sent into Russia.

En route to the Rumanian border, he said, he was stopped by the Russians at Trembowla, but released quickly. On a side road he was stopped again by a Russian armored car, questioned for two hours but permitted to continue, he related.

"Now that my mission is over I intend to go to France and fight," he said.

Poles reaching here today reported that Edward Kulatowski, Foreign Press Officer in Warsaw, former Polish Consul at Chicago and at one time a Secretary in the Polish Embassy at Washington, was believed killed by a bomb that hit a special train leaving Warsaw. He and three others disappeared.

German residents of Cernauti hissed at Polish refugees around the Polish Consulate today, calling them "swine." They were dispersed by police.

PAPAL NEWSPAPER DENOUNCES RUSSIA

Calls Invasion of Poland 'Uncourageous Gesture.'

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, today denounced Soviet Russia's invasion of Poland as "an uncourageous gesture" on an "untrue pretext."

A front-page editorial, written by Count Giuseppe della Toree, the editor, declared that Poland was not finished by the German invasion.

"All those know it and believe it who are attached to the Poles by the same faith and who know the danger which, with the fate of their country, threatens the Catholicism that is the thought of European and world civilization," the paper said.

SEP 19 1939

5 Northern Lands Confer On War-Time Economics

Iceland Joins Scandinavians, Seeking to Keep Up Trade

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 18 (AP).—Complicated problems in readjustment of northern countries to the European war occupied statesmen of five nations participating in a neutrality conference here today. Iceland joined the discussion, sending Premier Hermann Jonasson to confer with the Premiers of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland.

The five countries represented at the conference have aggregate annual exports valued at £180,000,000 ($684,000,000). The difficulty is that £70,000,000 ($266,000,000) worth of these exports normally goes to Great Britain, £25,000,000 ($95,000,000) to Germany, and only £23,000,000 ($87,400,000) exchanged among the northern countries themselves.

The conference agenda includes problems of economics and of neutrality. One of the problems which observers expected would be discussed was the virtual paralysis of the fishing industry in the Baltic as a result of mined waters.

Just before the four-hour afternoon session opened, the German Minister visited the Danish Foreign Office. The possibility that the conference was launching a peace move was denied by an authoritative source. It was indicated the northern countries felt they had enough to do to settle their own affairs.

The Finish press saw no danger of a breach in Soviet-Finnish neutrality, and Russian Premier Viacheslav Molotov's non-aggression assurances were welcomed as trustworthy.

The Norwegian Foreign Office likewise reported it had received assurances from Molotov that the Soviet Union would obserev a policy of strict neutrality toward Norway.

HEAR LITHUANIA MAY STRIKE TO REGAIN WILNO

SEP 19 1939

Baltic Premiers Are Told of Troops Massing on New Polish Frontier.

CONCERNED BY RUSSIAN ACT

Four Scandinavian Government Heads Gather to Discuss Joint Problems.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 18 (A. P.)—The Premiers of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland assembled here today to discuss the mutual neutrality problems amid growing anxiety occasioned by Soviet Russia's swift thrust into Poland.

Despite Russian assurances that the neutrality of the Baltic States would be observed, it was generally conceded that developments of the last twenty-four hours have complicated the situation of the northern nations, which are seeking to maintain normal trade relations without offending the belligerents.

Some concern was also manifest here concerning reports from Latvia and Berlin that Lithuanian troops were massing on the Polish frontier—a sign taken in some quarters to mean that Lithuania might seek to regain Wilno, which she lost to Poland in 1920.

Lithuanian informants, however, denied any such troop movements.

Finland Satisfied.

The Finnish press saw no danger of a breach in Soviet-Finnish neutrality, and the Russian Premier's non-aggression assurances were welcomed as trustworthy.

Both sides of the Russo-Finnish border were reported quiet, with no evidence of troop mobilizations. The entrance of the Soviet forces into Poland created little surprise in Finland, the action being regarded as certain after the Moscow Communist party newspaper Pravda's recent charges of Polish oppression of Ukrainian and White Russian minorities.

The Norwegian Foreign Office likewise reported that it had received assurances that the Soviet would observe a policy of strict neutrality toward Norway.

Little information concerning developments at the conference here was expected before tomorrow night, when the talks are scheduled to conclude. The foreign ministers of all four countries participated. It was understood that the talks would touch on all phases of neutrality and trade relations.

One of the problems which observers expected would be discussed was the virtual paralysis of the fishing industry in the Baltic as a result of mined waters.

In some quarters it was argued that Soviet operations in Poland might have their bright side as far as the northern neutrals are concerned. These persons pointed out that new territories acquired by the Soviet would make better outlets in the Baltic increasingly desirable.

SEP 19 1939

A Word to Lithuania.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Nazi circles saw more trouble for Poland today in the north, where Lithuanian claims for the city of Wilno and adjacent territory were reported.

Wilno was wrested from Lithuania in a sensational coup d'etat by the Polish Gen. Zeligowski in 1920. Lithuania has never forgotten, nor forgiven, the loss. It was reported today that Lithuanian societies in Poland had petitioned the homeland to "take us back."

30.24 3425

The informed German news commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, observed that the Lithuanians were not demanding anything, but that Germany "could understand if Lithuania was unable to watch events indifferently."

One well-informed source said it would cause no surprise if Hungarian territorial claims appeared.

To Disarm Fleeing Poles.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The British Ministry of Information stated today:

SEP 19 1939

"It is understood that the Lithuanian Government have decided to undertake partial mobilization for the purpose of disarming and interning any units of the Polish Army which may attempt to retreat ino Lithuania."

SEP 19 1939

U. S. Major Quotes a Red: 'We're Against Germans'

Says Polish Troops and Soviet Invaders Fraternized

CERNAUTI, Rumania (near the Polish Border), Sept. 18 (AP).—Maj. William H. Colbern, American Military Attache, said today that the commander of a Soviet tank whom he had encountered in Poland told him the Russians were "against the Germans."

Maj. Colbern, who has been in Poland as an American military observer, said that yesterday he saw a column of eleven-ton tanks on the road to Horodenka, forty miles northwest of here, going in the same direction as some Polish troops.

One of the tanks pulled aside to force him to halt, he related, and a Soviet officer came out. Maj. Colbern said the Russian was cordial and polite. Colbern later talked to the tank commander and quoted the officer as saying: "We are against the Germans."

The Hungarian Version

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Hungarian Telegraph Agency carried a report today that Maj. Colbern was overtaken in his car by Soviet troops at Kolomer, in Poland near the Rumanian frontier. The report said Maj. Colbern's Polish chauffeur posed as a German and managed to proceed and reach the frontier.

SEP 19 1939

The major left Warsaw with American diplomatic representatives about ten days ago.

Rome Gets Report on Marshal

ROME, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Stefani, official Italian news agency, reported today Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, chief of the Polish army, had arrived in Cernauti, Rumania, with his entire general staff.

SEP 19 1939

Fear and Hope in the Balkans.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia's swift thrust into Poland was watched with fear and hope today by heavily armed neutral nations of southeastern Europe, at odds over their problems of transplanted minorities and disputed territories.

Questions were asked immediately in each capital whether Russia's military move to "protect" the once-Russian minorities in eastern Poland would jeopardize or enhance their chances to hold or regain land won or lost under the world war treaties.

SEP 19 1939

At stake are vast areas, wealth of resources and the fate of 10,000,000 people who live in lands outside those of the nations whose tongues they speak.

In Bulgaria, the Soviet action was hailed widely as reviving hope for a forced revision of the world war boundaries. The opinion was expressed at Sofia that fast-moving events might put Bulgaria in a position to regain the rich Dobrudja section along the Black Sea where 250,000 Bulgars live under the Rumanian flag.

Only last week, Bulgaria declared she would remain "peaceful and neutral."

Rumania in a Bad Spot.

In Rumania, a spokesman for Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu, said that the Russian Minister had given assurances that the Soviet Union would continue to respect Rumania's territorial integrity.

"In the present circumstances," he said, "our foremost duty is to keep cool and have the strength to defend ourselves with the utmost determination."

Some observers said that Rumania, with Polish troops seeking refuge within her borders and the powerful Russian Army advancing just north of her Dniester River frontier, was in the most precarious position of all the southeastern nations.

TRADE PRESSURE EXERTED ON SWISS

SEP 19 1939

Commerce With Both Sides in War Is Watched.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Pressure by Germany on the one hand and by Great Britain and France on the other is already being exerted on Switzerland, whose position between two belligerents and one neutral Power is seen as making her an ideal transit State.

Many officials of the Swiss Government remained at their desks over the week end working on neutral trade plans.

So far, officials said, the pressure has been exerted mainly through semi-official and commercial channels of both sides, for Switzerland generally depends upon France and Italy for her foodstuffs and on Germany for her fuel.

To date the Swiss have permitted free transit of German coal to Italy and Italian foodstuffs to Germany, at the same time carrying large quantities of Rumanian wheat and other produce bound for France and Great Britain.

Switzerland has already instituted Government control of exports and has adopted a policy of continuing to sell her own products—including cheese, milk, machinery, clocks, watches and dyes—to the usual customers. Since the biggest of these customers has always been Germany, the Swiss fear that France may try to force them to halt such trade.

The first thing the Swiss did at the outbreak of war was to assure both sides that products sold to the Swiss for their own use by belligerents would not be resold to their enemy.

SEP 19 1939

A committee was established to see that Swiss exporters and importers carry out the promise.

Traffic On the Rhine.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Rhine front has been so quiet since the war began that Basle shipping interests have started a move to resume Rhine River shipping for neutral States.

Basle merchants, shippers and wholesalers alike, where hit by the sudden halt in Rhine River traffic. The river carried 2,100,000 tons of trade through Basle the past eight months, but not a barge has moved on the river for more than two weeks.

SEP 19 1939

More than 100 barges and river steamboats flying the flags of Switzerland, Germany, France, Belguim and the Netherlands are tied up at Basle docks.

Basle shipowners prepared to shut down operations when France went to war against Germany because the Rhine, from Basle to Lauterburg, about 125 miles on the north, is lined by the Siegfried Line on the German side and the Maginot Line on the French.

Since the beginning of the war, however, none of these forts has fired a shot.

Swiss shipping interests have requested Belgian and Netherlands interests to join in asking France and Germany whether traffic on the Rhine could be resumed at owners' risk.

Rhine traffic is guaranteed free by many treaties.

Basle owners argue that the French and Germans seem so reluctant to attack across the Rhine that they may agree to a resumption of river traffic for neutrals, provided they are given sufficient guaranties that only neutral traffic would be engaged in.

Germans Move Planes West

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (AP)—Intimations that the German air force soon may take a hand in the fighting on the western front were contained for the first time in today's communiqué of the supreme command.

SEP 19 1939

The Polish campaign was said to be considered by the high command as won so that "strong units" of the air force were sent to the West last night to participate in what is being termed here as the "leaflets war on the Western front."

It was explained that this reference was to propaganda leaflets which the British have dropped by the millions on Reich territory.

The communiqué described the Western front as quiet except that one French plane was shot down.

POLES USED GAS, IS CHARGE

Germans Accuse Foe of Breach of 1925 Convention

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—The German Embassy asserted in a statement tonight that retreating Polish troops had left mustard gas mines in a bridge at Jaslo in violation of the 1925 international convention outlawing poisonous gas warfare.

The embassy said it had received the following official announcement from the German high command:

"On Sept. 8 a detachment of German pioneers removed a barricade of trees from the Jasiolka Bridge in Jaslo, Poland, when several mines exploded whereby fourteen pioneers suffered severe combustion of their respiratory organs and lungs.

SEP 19 1939

"Two of these soldiers have already died. Twelve of them are in the military hospital at Jaslo, one of them facing death. A special commission of doctors, officers and chemical experts which had been sent by airplane to Jaslo, after a thorough investigation, found definite proof that those Polish mines contained mustard gas. Thus Poland violated the convention of June 17, 1925, which forbids any use of poisonous gas."

Berlin Hints of Reprisals If We Lift Arms Embargo

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 18—Keeping close watch on the United States Neutrality Act, German officials declared tonight that any revision making it possible for Britain and France to obtain arms "could only mean the first slip toward the United States' entrance into the war."

SEP 19 1939

At the same time, the news service Dienst aus Deutschland, which has close connections with official quarters, said:

"Raising of the arms embargo, which would benefit England almost exclusively, would be a serious breach of economic neutrality that would force Germany to take proper defense measures."

These were expressions of the intense interest which officialdom is showing in what Congress may do when it meets on Thursday in Washington. It was said that they show also the store the government lays on keeping the United States from assisting Germany's enemies.

Full reports on the public debate in the United States on the Neutrality Act are being received here. Newspaper surveys on the positions of neutral States asserted the United States furnished the major element of uncertainty for Germany.

Return to Paris Assailed

PARIS, Sept. 18 (AP).—Parisians returning to Paris in the belief the city is safe from bombardment were criticized today in a semi-official statement published by Havas, French news agency. It said "if no bombardment has occurred as yet, that is not a sufficient reason for believing all danger has been averted."

SEP 19 1939

Holland Requires Visas

THE HAGUE, Sept. 18 (AP).—The government announced today that hereafter no foreigners would be allowed entry without passport visas.

Greece Levies War Duties

ATHENS, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Greek government declared a duty on matches and cigarettes today to cover emergency expenses due to the European war. Tax measures affecting higher income brackets were under consideration.

SEP 19 1939

Plane, Fired On, Proves Own

THE HAGUE, Sept. 18 (AP).—The government press service said today a plane fired at yesterday by anti-aircraft guns at Amersfoord, about thirty miles southeast of Amsterdam, was not foreign as had been believed. The plane, flying high, was not damaged.

SEP 19 1939

Swedes Doubt Soviet Aid On Nazis' Western Front

Press Thinks Polish Invasion Was a Protective Move

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 18 (AP)—Swedish editors, commenting on the Soviet invasion of Poland, expressed the opinion tonight that Russia probably did not intend to join Germany as a military ally to the extent of supporting operations on the western front.

SEP 19 1939

The trend of comment in the Swedish press, which has advantages in perspective and in contacts, was primarily speculation on the meaning of Russia's move.

The editors pointed out that Russia began manifesting concern only when it was apparent that the German advance toward Russia through Poland was swifter than expected. The opinion was expressed that Russia saw in this development a need for protective action.

At the same time, it was said, Russia saw a chance to intervene in fixing limits on the German march and in determining what would happen, if anything, to the Baltic states in which Russia has a strong interest.

Yugoslavia Under Decree Rule

BELGRADE, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Yugoslav government received powers to govern by decree from the regency council today to continue until Parliament convenes.

WAR TRADE PRESSURE FELT BY SWITZERLAND

Italo-German and Anglo-French Traffic a Neutrality Problem

SEP 19 1939

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Federal Council today authorized the army high command to cut the age for military training from 20 to 19, making a new class of about 20,000 available. Normally, the Swiss begin an eighty-eight-day training period for the first year of service, but under the present mobilization set-up the army may call up new conscripts if considered necessary.

28 Interned for War 'Gossiping'

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18 (AP).—Twenty-eight persons, including several Hungarian newspaper men, received indefinite internment sentences today on charges of "gossiping about the war." They were arrested in raids by police who questioned all loud talkers in automobiles and parks.

SEP 19 1939

ZURICH, Sept. 18 (AP).—A Swiss climbing expedition in the Himalayas, which had explored hitherto unscaled peaks, reported today by radio it had canceled future expeditions to report for military service. Two of the four members of the expedition are former Swiss skiing champions.

Bans Rice At Weddings'

Stockholm, Sept. 18 (AP)—Swedish newlyweds no longer will have to worry about removing rice from their hair and clothing after the ceremony.

Church authorities, pointing out rice was an important article of food, recommended marriage celebrants shower rose petals instead.

SEP 19 1939

WOULD JOIN FRENCH ARMY

Prominent Poles In Hungary To Offer Services

Budapest, Sept. 18 (AP)—Prominent Poles residing in Hungary announced today their intention of joining the French army in the war against Germany.

They included Stanislav Lipski, brother of a former ambassador to Berlin; Jean Ulatovski, press attache to the Polish legation here, and Zbigniev Kosciusko, Polish newspaper correspondent.

Air-raid False Alarm Rouses Londoners

SEP 19 1939

LONDON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Hundreds of persons were roused from sleep early today by an air-raid warning from Southall, Middlesex.

Officials said that the siren sounded as "the result of a technical defect." An all-clear signal was given two minutes later.

German Captives Carry British Appeals

PARIS, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Parisians were informed today that the first German soldiers captured in French action on the western front were carrying pamphlets strewn over Germany by British planes.

The Royal Air Force "propaganda war" started during the first week of hostilities. Millions of pamphlets which said that the German Government had "deliberately and coldbloodedly" started the war, and had "refused peace with honor," were dropped from planes to the German people.

SEP 19 1939

German Spy Sentenced.

NANCY, France, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Martin Thelen, forty-four-year-old German, was sentenced to life imprisonment today after being convicted in a military court of espionage in the Maginot Line region.

Blackout Crashes Kill Many in London

LONDON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Police disclosed today nearly five times as many persons were killed in London traffic accidents the first ten days of the "blackout" as during the previous ten days.

In the first ten days of September, 38 were killed and 975 injured, compared with 8 killed and 316 injured the last ten days of August.

SEP 19 1939

DELAYED IN HOLLAND

Americans Await Sailing of Nieuw Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam, scheduled to leave for New York tonight with 1,200 passengers, mostly Americans fleeing the war zone, was held in port today "until further notice" as the crew demanded higher pay for plying dangerous waters.

Other Holland-America Line boats were delayed on previous trips until salary adjustments were made.

SEP 19 1939

LIFTS TIN QUOTA

Second Rise in Quarter; British Fix Price.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The international tin control committee boosted permissible output quotas today for the second time since the outbreak of the war. At the same time, the British Ministry of Supply announced it would control the tin price at £230 a ton (about $926.90).

"In modification of the communique issued September 12," said the international body's announcement, "the international tin committee has fixed the quota for the third quarter of 1939 at 100 per cent of the standard tonnages."

On September 12, the output quotas for the third quarter were boosted to 80 per cent of the standard tonnages from 60 per cent. Today's statement still left open the question of fourth-quarter quotas.

SEP 19 1939

In the London market, spot tin closed with the buyers price £229 17s 6d and sellers £230; futures buyers price £229 10s, sellers £229 15s. Sales totaled 450 tons.

FLYER DESCRIBES SINKING OF U-BOAT

SEP 19 1939

Says Salvo of Bombs Blew Raider Out of Water.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—A young South African Royal Air Force pilot told tonight, through the British Ministry of Information, how a German submarine was blown to the surface by his bombs before it sank.

Neither the pilot nor the scene of the battle was identified by the Ministry.

Returning on his first submarine patrol flight, the pilot said:

"I sighted a submarine on the surface about two miles away traveling pretty fast—about 12 knots—in an easterly direction.

"I took cover in a cloud in order to approach the submarine from astern."

The pilot said he came out of the cloud at 1,500 feet and, identifying the submarine as German, opened fire at 500 feet at a man on the conning tower.

"The man disappeared and the submarine started to dive," he continued. "By the time I dropped my first salvo of bombs, the nearest of which hit the water fifteen or twenty yards directly ahead of the submarine, the submarine was half under water. The explosion blew her back to the surface.

"The nearest bomb of my second salvo was a direct hit on the submarine's portside and there was a colossal explosion and her whole stern lifted out of the water. She dived into the sea at an angle of 30 degrees."

FRENCH TAKE TWO FROM U. S. VESSEL

SEP 19 1939

Germans Seized at Pier for Internment.

BOSTON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Carrying 172 passengers, forty more than ordinary capacity, the American Export liner Exochorda arrived here today from Mediterranean ports with news that French authorities at Marseilles had seized two passengers, one the German husband of an American citizen, for internment.

Capt. Wenzel Habel said that one of two Germans removed from his vessel was Joseph Wagner, 39 years old, a construction engineer for an oil firm. Mr. Wagner's wife, a resident of Memphis, Tex., sent radiograms to United States Ambassador Bullett at Paris and the United States Consul at Marseilles asking aid.

The second passenger seized, the captain said, was a seventeen-year-old youth known only by the last name of Wallenburger, who boarded the vessel with Wagner at Haifa on August 28. He was to join relatives at New York.

Capt. Habel said that he protested the removal of the men from his ship by two French gendarmes, but was overruled by a French admiral who came aboard and demanded their removal. Mr. Wagner was said to have lived intermittently in the United States for twenty-six years and to have obtained first papers for United States citizenship. He left this country last November and was joined by his wife in Palestine last July.

Canada Is Reported Studying New War Move

Dominion Cabinet Holds Long Session And Will Meet Again This Afternoon

Ottawa, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The Dominion Cabinet, in session until about 11.30 o'clock tonight, was reported—without official confirmation—to be considering a new and important war measure.

The Government's spokesman gave no hint of what was under discussion and would say only that another meeting would be held tomorrow afternoon.

SEP 19 1939

On September 10, when the Dominion formally went to war with Germany, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said the qusetion of a Canadian expeditionary force to Europe still was to be decided.

BULLETINS

Aachen Hospital Patients Removed.

BERLIN, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—All expectant mothers were removed today from Aachen on the western front in first or second class train compartments, informants revealed. Hospital patients also have been removed further inland in order to accommodate soldiers in the event the western campaign assumes larger proportions. It was denied, however, that Aachen generally has been deserted by civilians, although preparations have been made to do so if the need arises.

SEP 19 1939

Polish Submarine Escapes.

TALLINN, Estonia, Sept. 18 (By the Ritzaus Danish News Agency) (A. P.).—The Polish submarine Orzel eluded Estonian gunfire early today and escaped from Tallinn harbor on the Gulf of Finland, where it had been interned as a result of the Polish-German war. Estonian shore batteries and warships attempted unsuccessfully to halt the submarine which made the break at 3 A. M.

Warsaw's Radio Silent.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Warsaw's fate was unknown here today as the Polish capital's lone radio station, her last contact with the outside world, remained silent throughout the night.

Until now the "all's well" signal has been sounded nightly at thirty-second intervals to the tinkling accompaniment of xylophone music and announcements that the city still was holding out against the German besiegers.

SEP 19 1939

Latvia Receives Soviet Assurances.

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Latvian Minister to Moscow was reported today to have received assurances from the Soviet Government that Russia is maintaining a policy of neutrality toward Latvia. The Government here has declared it will resist attempts to cross the Latvia frontier, but has undertaken no new military measures.

Canadian Labor Gets War Resolution.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (Canadian Press).—The All-Canadian Congress of Labor was asked by its officers at the opening of its ninth annual convention today, to approve the executive board's action in pledging full support to the Government of Canada during the war.

SEP 19 1939

Uruguay Protests on Contraband.

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Uruguay followed today the action of Argentina in protesting in commodities classed by Great Britain as war contraband. The Government reiterated the stand expressed at various Pan-American gatherings that food and raw materials for civilians in belligerent countries should not be considered contraband.

Bomb on Argentine Railway.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—A track walker today discovered a contact bomb between the rails on the British-controlled Argentine Railway near Santa Fe. Police investigators said it was apparently a case of attempted sabotage.

SEP 19 1939

Polish Submarines in Swedish Port.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—The Polish submarine Rys, with an exhausted crew of fifty-four aboard, took refuge in a Swedish harbor today. The commander said that the craft had been slightly damaged by German depth bombs. The submarine Sep (Vulcan) limped into port yesterday with a crew of sixty-seven who had been without food for several days.

White House Aid Denies That Any Coalition May Result From Conference

SEP 19 1939

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt has invited former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas and Frank Knox of Chicago—the titular heads of the Republican party—to a White House parley Wednesday at which leaders of the nation will consider America's neutrality program.

Stephen T. Early, a presidential secretary, said that Mr. Roosevelt had talked with Messrs. Landon and Knox by telephone last night and that they had accepted the invitation without hesitation. He described the President as being "very happy in their acceptance."

Mr. Early said that Representative Mapes, Republican, of Michigan, ranking minority member of the House Rules and Interstate Commerce committees, also had been asked to the meeting and that the list of those attending probably was complete.

SEP 19 1939

The President arranged for the conference, a day before Congress meets in special session to consider the neutrality issue, in order to get an exchange of views among bipartisan leaders in the national legislature. The addition of Messrs. Landon and Knox, which went outside of Congress, was understood to be in the nature of further attempting to bury partisanship and politics in the present crisis.

No Party Labels.

LANDON ASKED TO ARMS TALK BY ROOSEVELT

Knox Also to Join Parley on Embargo Before Special Session.

MEET AT 3 P. M. WEDNESDAY

Mr. Early said that the President told him today: "This is no time to call any of those who will take part in Wednesday's meeting either Republicans or Democrats."

Mr. Early spoke of them as national leaders rather than political leaders, and said that underlying the conference was a portion of Mr. Roosevelt's address to the nation by radio a week ago, in which he said that partisanship and selfishness should be adjourned and that national unity should be the thought that underlies all others.

Asked whether it was known how Mr. Landon felt about the administration's neutrality ideas, Mr. Early said that he did not believe the record ever had been scrutinized to find out.

The secretary said the meeting would begin at 3 P. M., Eastern standard time, and that Secretary Hull also would sit in, probably the only Cabinet member to do so.

Roosevelt Orders Coast Guard Force Increased by 2,000 Men

SEP 19 1939

Enlistment Drive Projected to Fill Up Ranks; Army Air Purchasing Bureau Is Shifted to Washington in New Regulation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt issued an executive order today providing for an increase of 2,000 men in the Coast Guard.

The order was in line with steps taken recently, under a proclamation of a limited national emergency, to boost the strength of the nation's armed forces.

At the same time, centralization of the army air corps' purchasing activities in Washington was ordered for the purpose of accelerating the program of tripling the size of the corps in the next two years.

The War Department announced that the office of the chief of the materiel division and the division's industrial planning section would be moved from Wright Field, at Dayton, Ohio, to the office of the chief of the Air Corps, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold.

The change will involve the transfer of Brig. Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the materiel division, seventeen other Air Corps officers and fifty-nine civilian employees. The date of the transfer was not announced.

The department said: "The centralization of these activities has been decided upon in order to permit the office of the chief of the Air Corps to simplify procurement problems and to complete action on all matters pertaining to the procurement of airplane and aircraft equipment during the present expansion program with greater speed than has heretofore been possible."

A $676,400 contract for airplanes and spare parts was awarded by the Navy Department today to North American Aviation Inc., Inglewood, Calif.

SEP 19 1939

The order was placed under the five-year program to expand the Navy air force from 2,200 to 3,000 planes. Navy Air Corps procurement appropriations for the current year totaled $46,000,000.

The Navy also awarded a contract for $558,000 worth of fuel oil to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. A $178,415 contract for drills went to Reeves Brothers, Inc., New York.

The Navy is going ahead with preparations for its annual war games in the Pacific regardless of the hostilities in Europe.

Unless plans are changed in the mean time, 150 or more warships and several hundred planes, manned by more than 50,000 officers and men, will test the defenses of the California-Hawaii-Alaska defense triangle beginning in January.

A sideshow will be the landing exercises of the fleet marine force. They were at Culebra Island in the Caribbean last winter, when the fleet was massed in the Atlantic, but usually are at San Clemente Island, off southern California.

Months in advance of the major war games, which last for two months, there will be five days of war exercises off California's southern coast next week.

About 130 surface craft, 450 warplanes and 42,000 officers and men will be concentrated off San Pedro under Admiral Claude C. Bloch.

The Navy is secretive about operations of the new neutrality patrol off the Atlantic Coast, but there has been no indication thus far of any shift of naval strength from the Pacific Coast. The Navy's settled policy is to avoid division of its main forces.

As a limited exception to that rule a number of World War destroyers long idle at San Pedro are to be put back into service to reinforce the Atlantic Patrol. Of 110 such idle vessels at San Diego and Philadelphia, forty are to be recommissioned immediately.

The text of President Roosevelt's order for an increase in the Coast Guard follows:

"Whereas a proclamation issued by me on Sept. 8, 1939, proclaimed that a national emergency exists in connection with and to the extent necessary for the proper observance, safeguarding and enforcing of the neutrality of the United States and the strengthening of our national defense within the limits of peacetime authorizations; and

"Whereas the United States Coast Guard Treasury Department, will be charged with additional and important duties in connection with such national emergency, requiring an increase in its personnel and facilities:

"Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and by revised statutes, Section 3667, as amended (U. S. C., Title 31, Sec. 665), it is hereby ordered as follows:

"1. The present enlisted strength of the active list of the regular Coast Guard shall be increased as rapidly as possible through voluntary enlistments by not to exceed 2,000 men, exclusive of enlistments authorized by Section 4 of the act of Aug. 5, 1939 (public No. 291, 76th Cong.), of certain former Lighthouse Service personnel.

"2. Within the limits of available appropriations, the present facilities of the Coast Guard shall be increased, repaired, modernized, enlarged and equipped to the extent determined by the Secretary of the Treasury to be necessary to perform such additional duties and to accommodate such increased enlisted strength.

"3. To the extent made necessary by this order, the director of the Bureau of the Budget is hereby authorized to waive or modify the monthly or other apportionments of the appropriations for the Coast Guard for the fiscal year June 30, 1940."

30.24 3427

30.24 3427

NIGHT LEAD BRITISH (BUDGET)

LONDON, SEPT 18-(AP)-THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT STATED TONIGHT THAT IT CONSIDERED SOVIET RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND UNJUSTIFIED AND ASSERTED IT WOULD "PROSECUTE THE WAR WITH ALL ENERGY" UNTIL ITS "OBJECTS HAVE BEEN ACHIEVED."

SEP 19 1939

IT WAS THE FIRST OFFICIAL COMMENT FROM GREAT BRITAIN ON THE ENTRY OF RUSSIAN TROOPS INTO POLAND SUNDAY.

A TERSE COMMUNIQUE FROM THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION ASSERTED, "THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAVE CONSIDERED THE SITUATION CREATED BY THE ATTACK UPON POLAND ORDERED BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT. THIS ATTACK UPON THEIR (BRITAIN'S) OWN ALLY AT A MOMENT WHEN SHE IS PROSTRATE IN THE FACE OF OVERWHELMING FORCES BROUGHT AGAINST HER BY GERMANY CANNOT IN THE VIEW OF HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT BE JUSTIFIED BY THE ARGUMENTS PUT FORWARD BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT."

(MORE) FD614PED

THE BRITISH PEOPLE, SHOCKED BY THE GERMAN SUBMARINE TORPEDOING OF THE VETERAN AIRPLANE CARRIER COURAGEOUS, THRILLED TO STORIES OF HEROISM OF BRITISH SEAMEN WHO SANG AND JOKED AFTER LEAPING INTO THE SEA FROM THE SINKING SHIP.

SEP 19 1939

AMONG THE SURVIVORS WAS COMMANDER ABEL SMITH, FORMER EQUERRY TO THE KING AND ONE OF THOSE CHOSEN TO ACCOMPANY THE KING AND QUEEN ON THEIR VISIT TO THE UNITED STATES LAST SUMMER.

HE IS A DISTANT RELATIVE OF THE QUEEN.

A COMMUNIQUE RELATED EXPLOITS OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE BOTH ON LAND AND SEA, DETAILING HOW ONE PILOT SANK A U-BOAT.

DESCRIBING THE SINKING OF GERMAN SUBMARINES BY BRITISH PLANES

AND ENCOUNTERS WITH GERMAN AIRCRAFT THE COMMUNIQUE ASSERTED, "IT IS GRATIFYING TO KNOW THAT THE RAF MACHINE WAS GREATLY SUPERIOR IN PERFORMANCE TO THE GERMAN."

THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION ALSO ANNOUNCED THAT A BRITISH WARSHIP HAD LANDED 33 CAPTIVE GERMAN SAILORS AT THE FALKLAND ISLANDS TO BE INTERNED. THE BULLETIN SAID THEY WERE FROM THE SHIP CARL FRITZEN SUNK SEPTEMBER 4.

SEP 191939

KING GEORGE RECEIVED ERNEST BROWN, MINISTER OF LABOR, AND SIR RONALD LINDSAY, FORMER BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES, TONIGHT.

QUEEN ELIZABETH LEFT LONDON TO VISIT HER CHILDREN AT BALMORAL. QUEEN MARY FROM MARLBOROUGH HOUSE ISSUED A MESSAGE TO BRITISH WOMEN EXPRESSING "ADMIRATION AT THE WAY MY COUNTRY-WOMEN HAVE COME FORWARD IN THEIR THOUSANDS TO GIVE THEIR HELP IN THE PRESENT EMERGENCY."

FD840PED

LONDON, SEPT.18-(AP)-THE TEXT OF THE BRITISH INFORMATION MINISTRY'S STATEMENT ON THE SOVIET RUSSIAN ACTION IN POLAND:

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAVE CONSIDERED THE SITUATION CREATED BY THE ATTACK UPON POLAND ORDERED BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT.

SEP 191939

THIS ATTACK, MADE UPON HER OWN ALLY AT A MOMENT WHEN SHE IS PROSTRATE IN FACE OF OVERWHELMING FORCES BROUGHT AGAINST HER BY GERMANY, CANNOT, IN THE VIEW OF HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT BE JUSTIFIED BY THE ARGUMENTS PUT FORWARD BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT.

THE FULL IMPLICATION OF THESE EVENTS IS NOT YET APPARENT, BUT HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT TAKE THE OPPORTUNITY OF STATING THAT NOTHING THAT HAS OCCURRED CAN MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE TO THE DETERMINATION OF HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT. WITH THE FULL SUPPORT OF THE COUNTRY.

TO FULFILL THEIR OBLIGATIONS TO POLAND, AND TO PROSECUTE THE WAR WITH ALL ENERGY UNTIL THEIR OBJECTS HAVE BEEN ACHIEVED.

(END TEXT)

UH125AED

LONDON, SEPT 18-(AP)-THE WAR OFFICE ANNOUNCED TONIGHT THAT THE DUKE OF WINDSOR SHORTLY WILL PROCEED ABROAD AS A MAJOR GENERAL IN THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCES.

KING GEORGE, THE WAR OFFICE ANNOUNCED, ACCEPTED TEMPORARILY HIS BROTHER'S RESIGNATION AS FIELD MARSHAL IN ORDER THAT HE MIGHT SERVE ACTIVELY IN THE LOWER RANK OF MAJOR GENERAL. THE APPOINTMENT WAS EFFECTIVE AS OF SEPTEMBER 3 THE DAY BRITAIN DECLARED WAR.

WINDSOR RETURNED FROM FRANCE SEPTEMBER 12 AFTER ALMOST THREE YEARS OF SELF-IMPOSED EXILE, ACCOMPANIED BY HIS MARYLAND-BORN WIFE FOR WHOM HE RELINQUISHED HIS THRONE.

SEP 191939

FD730PED

LONDON, SEPT 18-(AP)-THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION ANNOUNCED TODAY THE WAR CABINET HAD AUTHORIZED GREATER FREEDOM IN THE REPORTING OF WAR NEWS AND THAT PRESS COMMENT WAS TO BE GIVEN MORE LATITUDE. THE WORLD PRESS WILL BE REPRESENTED TEMPORARILY AT THE WESTERN FRONT, UNTIL OTHER CORRESPONDENTS ARE AUTHORIZED, BY ONE MAN, A.G. CLIFFORD, REUTER (BRITISH NEWS AGENCY) CORRESPONDENT, WHO WORKED FORMERLY IN BERLIN AND SPAIN.

SEP 191939

LORD CAMROSE, PUBLISHER OF THE DAILY TELEGRAPH, HAS BEEN NAMED CHIEF ASSISTANT TO LORD MACMILLAN, MINISTER OF INFORMATION.

DB1239PED

1939

30.24 3429

30.24 3429

BERLIN, SEPT 18-(AP)-GERMAN AUTHORITIES ANNOUNCED TONIGHT THAT GEORGE DAY, BRITISH RADIO OPERATOR KILLED WHEN HIS PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN DURING A RAID ON CUXHAVEN NAVAL BASE EARLY IN THE WAR, HAD BEEN BURIED WITH FULL MILITARY HONORS.

SEP 19 1939

DAY'S BODY WAS RECOVERED FROM THE SEA BY A GERMAN FREIGHTER.

CEREMONIES OVER HIS COFFIN, DRAPED WITH A BRITISH BATTLE FLAG, WERE CONDUCTED BY GERMAN MARINES.

FD1106PED

PARIS, SEPT 18-(AP)-THE POLISH EMBASSY MADE PUBLIC TONIGHT A MESSAGE ISSUED BY PRESIDENT IGNACE MOSCICKI OF POLAND STATING HE HAD DECIDED TO TRANSFER THE SEAT OF THE POLISH GOVERNMENT "TO A PLACE WHERE THE FREE EXERCISE OF FULL SOVEREIGNTY" CAN BE MAINTAINED.

THE MESSAGE, THE EMBASSY SAID, WAS ISSUED SUNDAY FROM POLISH TERRITORY A FEW MILES FROM THE RUMANIAN BORDER.

SEP 19 1939

FD514PED

PARIS, SEPT 18-(AP)-PARISIANS WERE INFORMED TODAY THAT THE FIRST GERMAN SOLDIERS CAPTURED IN FRENCH ACTION ON THE WESTERN FRONT WERE CARRYING PAMPHLETS STREWN OVER GERMANY BY BRITISH PLANES.

SEP 19 1939

DB910AED

PARIS, SEPT.18-(AP)-THE FRENCH WAR MINISTRY'S MORNING COMMUNIQUE FOLLOWS:

SEP 19 1939

"THE NIGHT WAS CALM ON THE ENTIRETY OF THE FRONT. THERE WAS LOCAL ACTIVITY BY ADVANCE GUARDS."

(END TEXT)

PARIS, SEPT 18-(AP)-REPORTS REACHED PARIS TODAY THAT SOVIET RUSSIAN TROOPS DRIVING EAST INTO POLAND HAD OCCUPIED WILNO.

(WILNO, HISTORIC CAPITAL OF LITHUANIA, WAS TAKEN FROM LITHUANIA BY POLISH TROOPS IN 1920.

SEP 19 1939

(IT IS POLAND'S NORTHERN CITY IN THE STRIP OF POLISH TERRITORY BETWEEN LITHUANIA AND SOVIET RUSSIA.)

DBEASAED

PARIS, SEPT 18-(AP)-FRANCE REPORTED TONIGHT IT HAD SUNK HER FIRST ENEMY SUBMARINE SINCE WAR WAS DECLARED AGAINST GERMANY.

A GENERAL STAFF COMMUNIQUE REPORTED THE ATTACK ON THE SUBMARINE WAS CARRIED OUT "WITH SUCCESS."

THE COMMUNIQUE INDICATED THE ONLY ACTION ON THE WESTERN FRONT TODAY CONSISTED OF ARTILLERY BOMBARDMENT CONCENTRATING IN THE SAARBRUECKEN SECTOR.

MQ418PED

SEP 19 1939

FIRST LEAD AMBASSADOR

ROME, SEPT 18-(AP)-FILLING A POST THAT HAD BEEN VACANT SINCE JULY, GIUSEPPE BASTIANINI, 40, UNDERSECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND FORMER AMBASSADOR TO POLAND, TONIGHT WAS APPOINTED AMBASSADOR TO LONDON.

SEP 19 1939

ITALY HAS BEEN WITHOUT AN AMBASSADOR TO BRITAIN SINCE COUNT DINO GRANDI WAS MADE MINISTER OF JUSTICE ON JULY 12.

ITALY'S DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH BRITAIN WERE CONSIDERED STRENGTHENED BY THE APPOINTMENT OF AN ENVOY AT THIS TIME. IT WAS TAKEN BY DIPLOMATS TO INDICATE THAT ITALY INTENDED TO REMAIN OUT OF THE WAR FOR SOME TIME, AND THAT PREMIER MUSSOLINI WOULD NOT HAVE

1939

BOTHERED TO FILL THE VACANCY IF THERE HAD BEEN MUCH CHANCE OF A BREAK IN RELATIONS IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE. SEP 19 1939

THE APPOINTMENT SENDS TO LONDON A TRAINED YOUNG DIPLOMAT WHO HAS BEEN KNOWN IN ITALIAN CIRCLES AS THE RIGHT HAND OF COUNT GALEAZZO CIANO, ITALY'S FOREIGN MINISTER.

BASTIANINI, A JOURNALIST, HAS SERVED AS VICE SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE FASCIST PARTY AND SECRETARY-GENERAL OF FASCISTS ABROAD. HE WAS A DEPUTY IN THE OLD PARLIAMENT AND HAS SERVED AS UNDER-SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE AND COMMERCE AND AS ITALIAN MINISTER TO TANGIERS, LISBON AND ATHENS.

FD1049PED

NIGHT LEAD ITALIAN (BUDGET)

SEP 19 1939

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

ROME, SEPT 18-(AP)-A FURTHER INDICATION THAT ITALY IS HOLDING STEADFASTLY TO HER NON-BELLIGERENT STATUS WAS SEEN TODAY IN THE GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT THAT PEASANTS IN THE ARMY WOULD BE PERMITTED TO RETURN HOME FOR WINE-MAKAING AND FALL PLANTING.

WHILE AUTHORITIES DECLARED THAT "AGRICULTURAL LEAVE" FOR RESERVISTS WOULD NOT WEAKEN THE ARMY'S EFFICIENCY, IT WAS CONSIDERED OBVIOUS BY OBSERVERS THAT PREMIER MUSSOLINI WOULD NOT LET THE MEN GO IF WAR FOR ITALY WAS IN HIS PLANS FOR THE NEXT FEW WEEKS.

THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT WATCHED EACH NEW TURN IN THE WAR WITH REDOUBLED VIGILANCE SINCE THE CONFLICT SHOWED SIGNS OF EXTENDING TO THE DANUBIAN BASIN.

WITH THE CONFUSION GETTING NEARER ITALY'S OWN ZONE OF INFLUENCE, MUSSOLINI'S CAUTIOUS CONTROL OF ROME'S NON-BELLIGERENT STATUS WAS SEEN AS STRONGER THAN EVER.

ITALIAN CIRCLES WATCHED DEVELOPMENTS IN ABSOLUTE SILENCE. THIS WAS DUE TO THE DELICATE SITUATION FOR ITALY, WHICH AS AN OUTRIGHT ALLY OF GERMANY AND A NATION WITH CLAIMS FOR SETTLEMENT, IS IN A DIFFERENT POSITION THAN THE SMALLER NEUTRAL POWERS OF EUROPE.

FOR THAT REASON THEY REFRAINED FROM ANY COMMENT ON SOVIET RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND.

ITALIANS SAID THEY HAD EXPECTED THE PARTITION OF POLAND BY GERMANY AND RUSSIA, HOWEVER, BEING INFORMED OF THE SOVIET ARMY'S INTENTION IN ADVANCE THROUGH THEIR DIPLOMATIC OBSERVERS.

MQ430PED

ROME--FIRST ADD NIGHT LEAD ITALIAN X X X OBSERVERS.

THE LACK OF COMMENT AND DWINDLING SIGNS OF BIAS FOR GERMANY IN FASCIST NEWS REPORTS WAS IN ITSELF CONSIDERED SIGNIFICANT IN FOREIGN CIRCLES. THERE WERE SOME WHO THOUGHT ITALY'S DEFINITE POSITION WOULD BECOME KNOWN WITHIN A FEW DAYS.

THERE WERE UNCONFIRMED REPORTS THAT THE VISIT TO ROME OF GENERAL FRANCISCO FRANCO OF SPAIN, POSTPONED BY THE OUTBREAK OF WAR, NOW HAS BEEN PLANNED FOR NOVEMBER. THIS WAS COUPLED BY SOME OBSERVERS WITH RECENT BALKAN REPORTS THAT ITALY MIGHT BECOME A KEYSTONE OF A NEUTRAL BLOC IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

VIRGINIO GAYDA AND OTHER COMMENTATORS INDICATED A BELIEF POLAND WAS FINISHED. SEP 19 1939

GAYDA ATTRIBUTED THE "DISAPPEARANCE OF THE POLISH STATE" LARGELY TO ITS MINORITIES.

"THIS NATIONAL INCONSISTENCY OF THE NEW POLAND WHICH CAME OUT

30.24 - 3431

30.24 3431

OF VERSAILLES AND THEN OUT OF THE RUSSIAN-POLISH TREATY HAS BEEN WITHOUT DOUBT GREATLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PRECIPITATE END OF POLISH MILITARY RESISTANCE," THE AUTHORITATIVE FASCIST EDITOR WROTE IN IL GIORNALE D'ITALIA.

"CZECHO-SLOVAKIA WAS ROUTED EVEN BEFORE ENTERING THE WAR BY HER ACCENTUATED NATIONAL HETEROGENITY. POLAND FOLLOWS HER BY HER QUICKLY DISSIPATED RESISTANCE."

GAYDA SAID THE FLIGHT OF THE GOVERNMENT MEANT POLAND HAD ABANDONED THE STRUGGLE.

SEP 19 1939

ITALY'S PRESENT NON-BELLIGERENT ATTITUDE SHOULD NOT BE REGARDED AS NEUTRALITY BECAUSE NEUTRALITY IS THE ATTITUDE OF THOSE WHO HAVE NO INTERESTS IN THE CONFLICT, SAID THE FASCIST PUBLICATIO CRITICA FACISTA.

FD1044PED

NIGHT LEAD VATICAN (BUDGET)

VATICAN CITY, SEPT. 18-(AP)-SOVIET RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND WAS DENOUNCED TODAY BY L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO, VATICAN NEWSPAPER, AS 'AN UNCOURAGEOUS GESTURE" ON AN "UNTRUE PRETEXT."

"MOSCOW SAID THE POLISH GOVERNMENT NO LONGER EXISTS," DECLARED THE PAPER IN AN EDITORIAL BY COUNT GIUSEPPE DELLA TORRE, ITS EDITOR.

SEP 19 1939

"THAT IT EXISTS IS SO TRUE THAT IN THESE DAYS AFTER LEAVING WARSAW ITS ODYSSEY IS FOLLOWED STEP BY STEP. BUT THE FALSE PRESUPPOSITION WAS NECESSARY TO PROCLAIM FALLEN THE RUSSIAN-POLISH PACTS AND FIRST OF ALL THAT OF NONAGGRESSION--VALID WITH POLAND UNITED AND STRONG, NOT VALID WITH HER HALF INVADED AFTER TWO WEEKS OF UNEQUAL FIGHTING.

"IT IS AN UNCOURAGEOUS GESTURE."

"WHILE THE WORLD WATCHES THIS SPECTACLE," THE PAPER WENT ON, "WITH A HEART THAT DESPAIRS OF ANY REMAINING FEELING OF RESPECT FOR WORD, DEFERENCE TO RIGHT AND CIVIL GENEROSITY, IT WONDERS IF BEYOND THE DECLARED AIMS OF BELLICOSE SOVIET NEUTRALITY THERE ARE OTHER AIMS WHICH MAY SPREAD THE FIRE OF WAR AND ARE MAKING READY TO CARRY THE FIGHT FROM THE POLITICAL AND MILITARY FIELD TO THAT OF IDEOLOGICAL, MORAL AND SOCIAL CONQUESTS.

"IT WILL BE EASY TO ANSWER, PERHAPS SOONER THAN IS THOUGHT."

L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO REMARKED HOW THE WAR HAD GROWN "MONSTROUSLY" FROM GERMANY'S "MOST BLOODY CAMPAIGN."

IT THEN SAID RUSSIA "IS RETRACTING ITS STEPS FROM ASIA TO EUROPE AND IS ALREADY IN THE HEART OF IT. NOBODY KNOWS YET TO WHOM ALLIED AND TO WHOM AN ENEMY."

SEP 19 1939

(MORE)

WE312PED

VATICAN CITY--FIRST ADD NIGHT LEAD VATICAN (BUDGET) XXX AN ENEMY."

THE PAPER DECLARED POLAND WAS NOT FINISHED BY THE INVASION OF GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

SEP 19 1939

"ALL THOSE KNOW IT AND BELIEVE IT WHO ARE ATTACHED TO THE POLES BY THE SAME FAITH AND KNOW THE DANGER WHICH, WITH THE FATE OF THEIR COUNTRY, THREATENS THE CATHOLICISM THAT IS THE THOUGHT OF EUROPEAN AND WORLD CIVILIZATION," THE EDITORIAL DECLARED.

L'OSSERVATORE'S COMMENT WAS PUBLISHED AS AUGUST CARDINAL HLOND, PRIMATE OF POLAND, ARRIVED IN ROME EN ROUTE TO REPORT TO POPE PIUS XII WITH WHOM HE HAS A PRIVATE AUDIENCE TOMORROW. ABOUT 250

PERSONS GAVE THE CARDINAL A TEARFUL WELCOME AT THE RAILROAD STATION. POLISH PRIESTS AND NUNS, MANY OF THEM WEEPING, KISSED THE RING OF THE TALL PRELATE WHO, AT FIRST SMILING, LATER WIPED TEARS FROM HIS EYES.

SEP 19 1939

NIGHT LEAD WAR (WITH BJT)

BY CHARLES S.FOLTZ, JR.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT 18-(AP)-MILITARY ADVICES FROM THE WESTERN FRONT SAID TONIGHT FRENCH FORCES, WHICH HELD GROUND THEY WON IN THE FACE OF HEAVY GERMAN ATTACKS LAST WEEK, RESUMED THEIR METHODICAL TACTICS OF INFILTRATION TOWARD THE MAIN FORTS OF GERMANY'S SIEGFRIED LINE.

SEP 19 1939

NO MAJOR ACTION WAS REPORTED DURING THE DAY.

MILITARY OBSERVERS SAID THE FRENCH HIGH COMMAND HAD SHOWN BY THE PROGRESS OF THE LAST TWO WEEKS THAT THEY RELIED ON A GRADUAL SAPPING OF GERMAN DEFENSES BY TAKING A PILL-BOX HERE, A HILL THERE AND A CROSS-ROADS IN ANOTHER SECTOR, SPARING MANPOWER AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE.

THESE SLOW PENETRATIONS WERE SAID TO BE CONTINUING IN ALL SECTORS SAVE ALONG THE MOSELLE VALLEY AND BEFORE SAARBGUECKEN, INDUSTRIAL CENTER OF THE RICH SAAR VALLEY.

AT THOSE TWO POINTS THE FRENCH ESTABLISHED CONTACT WITH A STRONG FORCE OF GERMAN DEFENDERS, MILITARY ADVICES SAID, AND APPARENTLY WERE CONTENT TO REST AT THEIR POSITIONS UNTIL THE REST OF THE LINE REACHES ITS OBJECTIVES.

MOST RAIDS BY SMALL PATROLS WERE REPORTED CONCENTRATED TONIGHT IN THE SECTOR EAST OF THE SAAR WHERE THE FRENCH WERE TRYING TO DRAW THEIR LINES PARALLEL TO THE OUTPOSTS OUTSIDE THE VILLAGE OF HORNBACH, SOUTH OF ZWEIBRUECKEN.

ATTACKS IN THIS SECTOR WERE SAID TO BE MAINLY UP BLIES CREEK TOWARD THE SAARBRUECKEN-ZWEIBRUECKEN HIGHWAY.

SIMILAR PATROLS WERE REPORTED WORKING THROUGH THE VOSGES FORESTS BETWEEN BITCHE AND WISSEMBROUGH, WHILE ARTILLERY FREQUENTLY ENGAGED IN BRIEF DUELS THE ENTIRE LENGTH OF THE FRONT.

THE CALM ALONG THE RHINE CONTINUED.

BASEL SHIPPING COMPANIES, WHICH ARE BACKED BY BELGIAN AND NETHERLANDS INTERESTS, ASKED GERMANY AND FRANCE IF TRAFFIC COULD BE RESUMED ALONG THE RIVER.

THE SHIPPERS SAID THEY RECEIVED A GERMAN ANSWER TONIGHT IN WHICH THE GERMANS WELCOMED NEUTRAL SHIPPING FROM ROTTERDAM TO A POINT WHERE THE RHINE REACHES FRANCE. NEUTRAL SHIPPERS WERE ASKED TO CONSULT FRENCH AUTHORITIES FOR PERMISSION TO NAVIGATE FROM LAUTERBOURG TO BASEL.

SEP 19 1939

SHIPPERS SAID THE GERMANS APPEARED READY TO PERMIT BARGES TO SAIL DOWN THE RHINE BETWEEN THE MAGINOT AND SIEGFRIED FORTS, BUT WERE RELUCTANT TO DO SO BEFORE THE FRENCH, WHO CONTROL TRAFFIC ON THE LEFT HALF OF THE RIVER, REPLIED TO THE PROPOSAL.

NT REPLY HAD BEEN RECEIVED TONIGHT FROM PARIS. MANY SHIPPERS BELIEVED THE FRENCH MAY FEAR A TRICK TO PREVENT THEM FROM LAUNCHING ACTION ALONG THE RHINE FRONTIER AND MAY REFUSE PASSAGE OF RIVER TRAFFIC.

SWISS MILITARY OBSERVERS, HOWEVER, SAID IT WAS PROBABLE NEITHER

30.24- 34/33

30.24 3433

SIDE WOULD ATTEMPT TO ATTACK THE OTHER ACROSS THE RHINE.

THEY SAID IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT TO FORCE PASSAGE IN THE FACE OF DIRECT FIRE FROM THE FORTS. EVEN IF SUCCESSFUL. THEY EXPLAINED, THE FRENCH WOULD BE UNABLE TO SPREAD THEIR ACTION ON THE GERMAN SIDE SAVE UP THE NARROW VALLEY WITH THE RHINE ON ONE SIDE AND THE BLACK FOREST ON THE OTHER.

SEP 19 1939

THE GERMANS, ON THE OTHER HAND, THESE OBSERVERS SAID, WOULD BE FORCED TO FOLLOW THE HIGHLY FORTIFIED BURGUNDY GAP BETWEEN THE VOSGES AND JURA MOUNTAINS BEFORE BELFORT. THIS, IN THE OPINION OF MANY OBSERVERS, THE FRENCH HAVE MADE PRACTICALLY IMPREGNABLE.

FD528PED

THE HAGUE, NETHERLANDS, SEPT.18-(AP)-QUEEN WILHELMINA WILL OPEN THE REGULAR SESSION OF PARLIAMENT AT 1 P.M. (7 A.M. EST) TOMORROW WITH A SPEECH FROM THE THRONE IN WHICH SHE WAS EXPECTED TO REAFFIRM THE NETHERLANDS' POLICY OF STRICT NEUTRALITY IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

THE QUEEN, IN THE 41ST YEAR OF HER REIGN, WILL DRIVE FROM THE PALACE TO THE JOINT SESSION OF THE FIRST AND SECOND CHAMBERS IN THE FAMOUS GOLDEN COACH PRESENTED BY THE PEOPLE OF AMSTERDAM. SHE WILL BE ACCOMPANIED BY CROWN PRINCESS JULIANA AND HER HUSBAND, PRINCE BERNHARD.

SEP 19 1939

ALTHOUGH THE CEREMONIES WERE TO BE SOMEWHAT CURTAILED IN VIEW OF THE NATION'S MOBILIZATION AND THE WORLD SITUATION, THOUSANDS WERE EXPECTED TO WITNESS THE DRIVE IN STATE.

THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS, IN FULL DRESS, WILL ATTEND THE OPENING. THE QUEEN WILL READ HER SPEECH TO THE 150 MEMBERS OF BOTH CHAMBERS AND IT WILL BE BROADCAST TO THE NATION.

MJ534PED

BRUSSELS, SEPT.18-(AP)-THE CABINET COUNCIL TONIGHT CONFIRMED THE APPOINTMENT OF COL. GEORGES THEUNIS, FORMER PREMIER, TO A SPECIAL MISSION TO WASHINGTON.

SEP 19 1939

UH1030PED

NIGHT LEAD FRENCH (BUDGET)

BY M.TAYLOR HENRY

aus

PARIS, SEPT. 18-(AP)-THE WESTERN FRONT APPARENTLY ENJOYED A LULL IN THE WAR TODAY--A LULL THAT BEGAN WITH THE RUSSIAN DRIVE INTO POLAND.

SEP 19 1939

THE FRENCH GENERAL STAFF, WHICH CONSISTENTLY HAS ANNOUNCED SUCCESSES DURING THE FIRST TWO WEEKS OF OPERATIONS ON THE FRONT'S 100-MILE NORTHERN FLANK, DECLARED IN A COMMUNIQUE THAT "THERE IS NOTHING TO REPORT."

(A GERMAN COMMUNIQUE ALSO DESCRIBED THE WESTERN FRONT AS QUIET, EXCEPT THAT A FRENCH PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN.)

MILITARY DISPATCHES, HOWEVER, SAID HEAVY NAZI REINFORCEMENTS WERE REACHING THE WESTERN FRONT, HAVING BEEN RELEASED FROM POLAND BY THE RUSSIAN ACTION.

(THE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE GAVE THE GERMAN BELIEF THAT THE WAR IN THE EAST WAS VIRTUALLY ENDED AND THAT THE GERMAN AIR FORCE MAY SOON PARTICIPATE IN THE FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

MEMBERS OF THE AIR FORCE BEGAN ARRIVING IN BERLIN FROM THE EAST.)

THE FRENCH AND BRITISH WERE SAID TO HAVE TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF THE LULL BY MOVING BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS INTO THE AREA OF THE MAGINOT LINE. THE TOMMIES WERE REPORTED TO HAVE ENTERED THE MAGINOT

FORTIFICATIONS FROM TUNNELS FAR BEHIND THE LINE AND OUT OF RANGE OF GERMAN ARTILLERY.

THERE WAS NO INDICATION OF THE NUMBER OF GERMAN DIVISIONS PURPORTEDLY BEING BROUGHT TO THE WEST FROM POLAND. THE BEST AVAILABLE ESTIMATES IN PARIS HAVE PLACED THE GERMAN STRENGTH IN POLAND AT MORE THAN 70 DIVISIONS, OR IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF A MILLION MEN.

MILITARY EXPERTS HAVE EXPRESSED THE BELIEF THAT A COUNTRY LIKE POLAND, AFTER BEING CONQUERED, COULD BE POLICED BY 15 DIVISIONS AND THAT RUSSIAN COOPERATION UNDOUBTEDLY WOULD DECREASE THE NUMBER OF TROOPS NEEDED THERE.

SEP 19 1939

HEAVIEST GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS WERE SAID TO BE MOVING INTO POSITIONS AROUND SAARBRUECKEN, THE RICH INDUSTRIAL CITY WHOSE DEFENSES FORM THE KEY TO THE CENTRAL SECTOR OF THE NORTHERN FLANK.

TO THE SOUTHEAST THE FRENCH REPORTED GERMANS WERE SHOWING INCREASED ACTIVITY, THEIR PATROLS OPERATING ALONG THE BLIES RIVER, TESTING POSITIONS IN THE NARROW RECTANGLE OF HILLS WHICH LIES BETWEEN THE BLIES AND THE LITTLE STREAM CALLED THE MANDEL RIVER.

THE THREE-MILE-WIDE AREA BETWEEN THE STREAMS IS 10 MILES EAST OF SAARBRUECKEN. IT WAS DESCRIBED AS DIFFICULT TERRITORY FOR MILITARY OPERATIONS, AS THE RIVERS WIND THROUGH HILLS WHICH REACH THEIR CREST ABOUT MIDWAY BETWEEN THEM.

DISPATCHES SAID THAT GERMAN RAIDING PARTIES, SEEKING TO LOCATE THE MOST ADVANCED FRENCH POSITIONS, CREPT ALONG THE LINE OF HILLS, TAKING ADVANTAGE OF COVER IN WOODS WHICH ARE THICKEST ON THE SLOPES THAT FALL AWAY TOWARD THE MANDEL.

THE FRENCH 75-MILLIMETER GUNS WERE REPORTED TO HAVE LAID HEAVY FIRE ON THE WOODS IN AN EFFORT TO MAKE THE AREA TOO DANGEROUS FOR GERMAN MANEUVERS.

THESE DISPATCHES SAID THE FRENCH FIELD ARTILLERY, COUPLED WITH POSITIONS THE FRENCH HAVE TAKEN DURING THE LAST TWO WEEKS, APPARENTLY GAINED FIRE SUPERIORITY, AT LEAST FOR THE MOMENT.

TO OFFSET THIS, HOWEVER, THE GERMANS WERE SAID TO HAVE BROUGHT UP HEAVIER ARTILLERY, MOSTLY MORTARS HIGHLY SUITABLE FOR THE HILLY COUNTRYSIDE OVER WHICH THE OPERATIONS WERE NOW SPREADING.

OCCASIONAL ARTILLERY FIRE THROUGHOUT THE DAY APPARENTLY WAS DEVOTED MORE TO HARASSING FRONT LINE POSITIONS THAN TO SHELLING THE REAR.

SEP 19 1939

ED&WE1240PED

BUOA PEST-SEPT-18

RUMANIA HAS A PACT TO AID POLAND, IF SHE IS ATTACKED. IT WAS ANNOUNCED AT BUCHAREST THE PACT WOULD NOT BE CONSIDERED EFFECTIVE IN THE PRESENT CASE UNTIL CIRCUMSTANCES WERE EXAMINED.

RUMANIA HAS TWO TERRITORIAL WORRIES. FEAR HAS BEEN EXPRESSED THAT RUSSIA MAY TRY TO TAKE BACK THE BESSARABIA--RICH LAND SOUTH OF THE RUSSIAN UKRAINE--IN WHICH 500,000 UKRAINIANS AND 415,000 RUTHENIANS LIVE.

SEP 19 1939

THERE IS CONCERN, ALSO, OVER WHAT EFFECT THE NEW MOVE MIGHT HAVE ON HUNGARY'S DESIRE FOR THE RETURN OF TRANSYLVANIA, WHERE THERE ARE 1,300,000 MAGYARS.

FOREIGN MINISTER STEFAN CSAKY OF HUNGARY MADE IT CLEAR HIS COUNTRY HAS NOT FORGOTTEN TRANSYLVANIA WHEN HE SAID LAST WEEK THE QUESTION INVOLVING THIS SECTION WAS "SERIOUS."

(MORE) R757AED

30.24-3435

MEANWHILE, HUNGARY'S DESIRE IS COMPLICATED BY THE THOUGHT THAT RETURN OF TRANSYLVANIA MIGHT FIND HUNGARY WITH RUSSIA AS A NEIGHBOR JUST ACROSS THE FRONTIER. SEP 19 1939

SINCE HUNGARY'S BOLSHEVIST REVOLUTION AFTER THE WORLD WAR, BUDAPEST'S SHORT-LIVED COMMUNIST REGIME AND THE BITTER COUNTER-REVOLUTION OF 1919, THERE HAS BEEN STRONG OPPOSITION TO ANYTHING COMMUNISTIC.

PREMIER COUNT PAUL TELEKY MADE A STRONG SPEECH LAST WEEK FOR NEUTRALITY, BUT CSAKY SAID THERE WOULD BE NO NEUTRALITY DECLARATION BECAUSE HUNGARY WOULD PROTECT HER INTERESTS TO THE LAST MAN.

IN AN EDITORIAL, THE BUDAPEST NEWSPAPER FUGGETLIN MAGYARORSZAG SAID:

"JUST 90 YEARS AGO, A RUSSIAN ARMY CRUSHED THE COURSE OF HUNGARY'S GLORIOUS STRUGGLE FOR FREEDOM. THIS THREATENING DANGER FROM THE EAST IS 1,000 YEARS OLD. IN ESSENCE AND CHARACTER THIS DANGER HAS NEVER CHANGED."

(MORE) RSO1AED

IN TURKEY, WHERE IT HAD BEEN REPORTED THAT FOREIGN MINISTER SUKRU SARACOGLU WAS PREPARING TO GO TO MOSCOW TO DISCUSS A FRIENDSHIP PACT BETWEEN RUSSIA AND TURKEY, THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL COMMENT.

OBSERVERS THERE SAID THAT DESPITE TURKEY'S MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE, THERE WAS A DESIRE FOR CONTINUED WARM FRIENDSHIP WITH THE SOVIET, WHOSE TROOPS ARE MASSED ALONG HER FRONTIERS.

DIPLOMATS IN YUGOSLAVIA LOOKED TOWARD ITALY FOR SOME MOVE THAT MIGHT PREVENT THE SPREAD OF WAR.

THE ONLY WORD FROM GREECE WAS ANNOUNCEMENT OF A NEW CONSCRIPTION LAW. SEP 19 1939

DB807AED

30.24 3435

WITH RUSSIAN

MOSCOW, SEPT.18-(AP)-A WORKER-GENERAL WHO LEARNED HIS TACTICS ON THE BATTLEFIELD INSTEAD OF IN MILITARY ACADEMIES, IS DIRECTING THE OPERATIONS OF SOVIET RUSSIA'S ARMY IN POLAND.

HE IS 58-YEAR-OLD MARSHAL KLEMENTI E.VOROSHILOFF, WAR COMMISSAR AND TOP MAN IN ALL SOVIET MILITARY MATTERS. SEP 19 1939

HIS FIRST EXPERIENCE AS A SOLDIER CAME IN 1918 WHEN HE ORGANIZED A DETACHMENT TO FIGHT AGAINST GERMAN FORCES OF OCCUPATION--AND TODAY VOROSHILOFF'S SOLDIERS WERE REPORTED TO HAVE EXCHANGED FRIENDLY GREETINGS WITH THE SOLDIERS OF GERMANY ON POLISH LAND.

MARSHAL VOROSHILOFF IS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR CORPS. IT IS SAID HE PROBABLY TAKES ORDERS FROM NO ONE EXCEPT JOSEPH V.STALIN, TO WHOM, AS A MEMBER OF THE POLITICAL BUREAU, OR INNER CIRCLE, OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY, HE OWES LOYALTY.

THE MILITARY CHIEF WENT TO WORK IN PYRITE MINES AT THE AGE OF SEVEN AND WAS 12 YEARS OLD BEFORE HE LEARNED TO READ AND WRITE. HIS REVOLUTIONARY CAREER BEGAN IN 1903 WHEN HE JOINED THE BOLSHEVIK PARTY WHILE WORKING IN A FACTORY AT LUGANSK (SINCE NAMED VOROSHILOVGRAD).

HIS OFFICIAL BIOGRAPHY DISCLOSES HE WAS IN EXILE MUCH OF THE TIME FROM 1907 TO 1914 FOR STRIKE-ORGANIZING AND REVOLUTIONARY ACTIVITY.

HE WAS SUCCESSFUL IN THE FIGHT AGAINST THE GERMAN FORCES AND QUICKLY STEPPED TO HIGHER COMMANDS.

AT TSARITZIN, NOW STALINGRAD, IN THE VOLGA AREA, VOROSHILOFF AND HIS TENTH ARMY HELD OUT FOR A YEAR AGAINST THE WHITE ARMIES, GIVING THE CITY THE REPUTATION AS A "RED VERDUN."

VOROSHILOFF'S POWERS AS AN ORATOR WERE COMBINED WITH HIS ABILITY AS A STRATEGIST AND HIS ORATORY WON RECRUITS FOR THE ARMY. EVENTUALLY

HE BECAME COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE ARMIES OF THE NORTH CAUCASUS AND WAS ELECTED TO MEMBERSHIP IN THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY. IN 1924 HE BECAME HEAD OF THE MOSCOW GARRISON AND A YEAR LATER TOOK OVER THE POST OF WAR COMMISSAR, AFTER THE DEATH OF COMMISSAR MIKHAIL FRUNZE.

UH1045PED

NIGHT LEAD SOVIET (BUDGET)

BY WITT HANCOCK

SEP 19 1939

MOSCOW, SEPT 18-(AP)-GERMANY AND SOVIET RUSSIA WERE BELIEVED BY SOME SOURCES TONIGHT TO BE POINTING TOWARD CREATION OF A SMALL POLISH BUFFER STATE AS THEIR ARMIES BIT FURTHER INTO POLAND.

THESE SOURCES SAID THEY SAW A HINT OF SUCH A POSSIBILITY IN A JOINT COMMUNIQUE BROADCAST OVER RUSSIAN RADIO STATIONS.

THIS ANNOUNCEMENT DECLARED THE INTENTION OF THE ADVANCING SOVIET AND GERMAN ARMIES WAS TO "ASSIST THE POPULATION OF POLAND IN RECONSTRUCTING CONDITIONS OF THEIR STATE EXISTENCE."

(BERLIN DISPATCHES SAID THE SOVIET AND GERMAN FORCES MOVING INTO POLAND FROM THE EAST AND WEST HAD MET AT BREST-LITOVSK, 105 MILES EAST OF WARSAW, AND EXCHANGED FRIENDLY SALUTES.)

RED ARMY GENERAL STAFF REPORTS INDICATED THE RUSSIAN MARCH, WHICH STARTED EARLY SUNDAY MORNING, WAS PROCEEDING ALONG THE ENTIRE 500-MILE EASTERN POLISH FRONTIER FROM LATVIA TO RUMANIA.

THE JOINT SOVIET-GERMAN COMMUNIQUE DECLARED:

"IN ORDER TO FORESTALL UNFOUNDED RUMORS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION WITH REGARD TO THE TASKS OF SOVIET AND GERMAN TROOPS IN POLAND, THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE U.S.S.R. AND GERMANY DECLARE THAT THE ACTIONS OF THESE TROOPS PURSUE NO AIM COUNTER TO THE INTERESTS OF GERMANY OR THE SOVIET UNION OR CONTRADICTING THE SPIRIT AND THE LETTER OF THE NON-AGGRESSION PACT CONCLUDED BY GERMANY AND THE U.S.S.R.

"ON THE CONTRARY, THE TASK OF THESE TROOPS IS TO REESTABLISH IN POLAND THE PEACE AND ORDER DISRUPTED BY THE COLLAPSE OF THE POLISH STATE AND TO ASSIST THE POPULATION OF POLAND IN RECONSTRUCTING CONDITIONS OF THEIR STATE EXISTENCE."

(SUBSTANTIALLY THE SAME ANNOUNCEMENT WAS MADE IN BERLIN BY THE OFFICIAL GERMAN NEWS AGENCY.)

SEP 19 1939

FIRST REPORTS SAID RED TROOPS HAD TAKEN DUBNO AND TARNOPOL IN THE POLISH UKRAINE, BARANOWICZE, A RAIL CENTER 50 MILES INSIDE THE POLISH FRONTIER, AND GLEBOKIE, NORTHEAST OF WILNO.

(PARIS REPORTS SAID WILNO, THE TRADITIONAL LITHUANIAN CAPITAL WHICH POLAND SEIZED IN 1920, HAD BEEN CAPTURED BY THE RUSSIANS.

(RUMANIAN FRONTIER DISPATCHES SAID THE SOVIETS TOOK ZALESZCZYKI AND SNIATYN ON THE BORDER AND WERE DRIVING TOWARD KUTY.)

FOREIGN MILITARY EXPERTS ESTIMATED THE SOVIET UNION HAS AT LEAST 2,000,000 SOLDIERS ON HER WESTERN FRONT AND THAT BETWEEN 500,000 AND 1,000,000 PROBABLY WERE PARTICIPATING IN POLAND.

POLAND'S AMBASSADOR, WACLAW GRZYBOWSKI, RECEIVED INSTRUCTIONS FROM HIS GOVERNMENT TO LEAVE MOSCOW IN PROTEST. THERE WAS NO IMMEDIATE INDICATION WHEN HE WOULD LEAVE.

BRITISH AND FRENCH DIPLOMATIC MISSIONS, WHOSE GOVERNMENTS HAVE PLEDGED TO AID POLAND AGAINST ANY THREAT TO HER INDEPENDENCE, STILL AWAITED INSTRUCTIONS FROM LONDON AND PARIS OVER THE NEWEST DEVELOPMENT

30.24 - 3437 30.24 3437

OF THE EUROPEAN WAR.

SEP 19 1939

WHEN HE INFORMED 24 OTHER NATIONS OF THE SOVIET MARCH, PREMIER-FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF TOLD BRITAIN AND FRANCE THAT RUSSIA INTENDED TO REMAIN NEUTRAL. HE DECLARED THE SOVIET INTENTION WAS TO PROTECT THE 11,000,000 UKRAINIANS AND WHITE RUSSIANS IN POLAND.

GERMAN CIRCLES REPORTED RUSSIAN AND GERMAN PLANES OCCASIONALLY WERE MEETING IN POLAND AND EXCHANGING CHEERY GREETINGS.

THE CREW OF A GERMAN PLANE RECENTLY FORCED DOWN IN RUSSIA HAS BEEN INTERNED IN WHAT WAS ANNOUNCED AS MOST COMFORTABLE CIRCUMSTANCES AT A KIEV HOTEL.

EXCITEMENT OF THE RUSSIAN POPULATION OVER THE ARMY'S ADVANCE SUBSIDED WHEN THEY NO LONGER FEARED WAR WITH GERMANY. SOVIET NEWSPAPERS IN THEIR WAR REPORTS GAVE THE BULK OF SPACE TO BERLIN DISPATCHES.

DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS HEARD CONTINUED REPORTS THAT AN ARMISTICE MIGHT BE PROPOSED AS SOON AS POLAND'S FATE HAS BEEN SETTLED BY GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

(ADVANCE FOR USE AT 9 PM, EASTERN STANDARD TIME, MONDAY SEPT. 18)

SEP 19 1939

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 18-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TOLD THE PRESIDENT OF POLAND TONIGHT THAT HE WAS "DEEPLY SHOCKED" AT REPORTS THAT GERMANY BOMBED OPEN TOWNS AND VILLAGES IN POLAND.

HE CALLED AGAIN UPON BELLIGERENT NATIONS TO RENEW THEIR ORDERS PROHIBITING THE BOMBING OF CIVILIANS FROM THE AIR.

IN A TELEGRAM TO PRESIDENT MOSCICKI, MR.ROOSEVELT ACKNOWLEDGED RECEIPT OF A MESSAGE FROM THE POLISH PRESIDENT STATING THAT "FOR SOME DAYS PAST GERMAN AIRCRAFT HAVE DELIBERATELY AND METHODICALLY BEEN BOMBING POLISH TOWNS AND VILLAGES WHICH CONTAIN NO CONCEIVABLE MILITARY OBJECTIVES."

MR.ROOSEVELT SAID, "I HAVE BEEN DEEPLY SHOCKED... BY THE STATEMENTS CONTAINED IN YOUR TELEGRAM AS WELL AS BY REPORTS RECEIVED FROM OTHER SOURCES INCLUDING OFFICIALS OF THIS GOVERNMENT IN POLAND AT THE SCENE OF HOSTILITIES."

MR.ROOSEVELT REFERRED TO TELEGRAMS FROM ANTHONY J.DREXEL BIDDLE, AMERICAN AMBASSADOR. ONE OF THESE COMMUNICATIONS SAID:

SEP 19 1939

"ALTHOUGH THEY ARE OSTENSIBLY APPEARING TO FOLLOW THE PRINCIPLE OF LIMITING BOMBARDMENTS FROM THE AIR TO OBJECTIVES OF A MILITARY CHARACTER, IN MY OPINION THE GERMAN FORCES ARE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF EVERY OPPORTUNITY, WITHOUT REGARD TO THE DANGER TO THE CIVILIAN POPULATION WHICH MAY BE INVOLVED.

"IT IS ALSO EVIDENT THAT THE GERMAN BOMBERS ARE RELEASING THE BOMBS THEY CARRY EVEN WHEN THEY ARE IN DOUBT AS TO THE IDENTITY OF THEIR OBJECTIVES."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SAID IN HIS TELEGRAM, "IT HAD BEEN MY HOPE FOLLOWING THE RECEIPT FROM THE SEVERAL BELLIGERENT POWERS OF THE REPLIES TO MY APPEAL OF SEPTEMBER 1, IN WHICH THEY STATED THEIR INTENTIONS TO LIMIT THE OPERATIONS OF THEIR AIR FORCES TO MILITARY OBJECTIVES, THAT THE WORLD WOULD BE SPARED THE HORROR OF WITNESSING DURING THIS WAR THE BOMBING OF OPEN TOWNS AND VILLAGES AND THE SLAUGHTERING OF THOUSANDS OF INNOCENT AND DEFENSELESS MEN WOMEN, AND CHILDREN."

THE TEXT OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S TELEGRAM TO THE PRESIDENT OF POLAND FOLLOWS: BUREAUS NEEDING ARRANGE TO MAKE EXTRA COPIES.

WX

(ADVANCE FOR USE AT 9 PM EAETERN STANDARD TIME MONDAY, SEPT.18.

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON,SEPT 18-(AP)-THE TEXT OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S REPLY TO THE TELEGRAM FROM PRESIDENT MOSCICKI OF POLAND REGARDING GERMAN AERIAL BOMBARDMENT FOLLOWS: (300)

I HAVE RECEIVED YOUR TELEGRAM STATING THAT AS THE RESULT OF THE BOMBING BY GERMAN AIRCRAFT OF POLISH TOWNS AND VILLAGES POSSESSING NO CONSIDERABLE MILITARY OBJECTIVE THOUSANDS OF THE CIVIL POPULATION OF POLAND ARE DEAD OR WOUNDED. SEP 19 1939

IT HAS BEEN MY HOPE FOLLOWING THE RECEIPT FROM THE SEVERAL BELLIGERENT POWERS OF THE REPLIES TO MY APPEAL OF SEPTEMBER 1, IN WHICH THEY STATED THEIR INTENTIONS TO LIMIT THE OPERATIONS OF THEIR AIR FORCES TO MILITARY OBJECTIVES, THAT THE WORLD WOULD BE SPARED THE HORROR OF WITNESSING DURING THIS WAR THE BOMBING OF OPEN TOWNS AND VILLAGES AND THE SLAUGHTERING OF THOUSANDS OF INNOCENT AND DEFENCELESS MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

I HAVE BEEN DEEPLY SHOCKED, THEREFORE, BY THE STATEMENTS CONTAINED IN YOUR TELEGRAM AS WELL AS BY REPORTS RECEIVED FROM OTHER SOURCES INCLUDING OFFICIALS OF THIS GOVERNMENT IN POLAND AT THE SCENE OF HOSTILITIES.

IN VIEW OF THE HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF LIVES WHICH MAY BE AT STAKE, IT IS MY EARNEST HOPE THAT THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES WILL RENEW THEIR ORDERS PROHIBITING THE PRACTICE OF BOMBING CIVILIANS IN UNFORTIFIED CENTERS OF POPULATION FROM THE AIR, AND THAT THEY WILL TAKE MEASURES TO ASSURE THEMSELVES THAT THEIR RESPECTIVE AIR FORCES ARE SHOWING THAT REGARD FOR THE LIVE OF NON-COMBATANTS WHICH THEIR REPLIES TO MY APPEAL OF SEPTEMBER 1 HAVE LED THE WORLD TO EXPECT.

(END ROOSEVELT TEXT)

THE STATE DEPARTMENT ALSO MADE PUBLIC THE FOLLOWING TEXT OF PRESIDENT MOSCICKI'S TELEGRAM TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: (125)

MR.PRESIDENT,

IN REPLY TO YOUR TELEGRAM REGARDING THE NON-BOMBARDMENT OF OPEN TOWNS YOU RECEIVED FROM THE POLISH GOVERNMENT A CLEAR AND STRAIGHTFORWARD ANSWER. IN CONNECTION WITH THIS, I CONSIDER IT MY DUTY TO INFORM YOU THAT FOR SOME DAYS PAST GERMAN AIRCRAFT HAVE DELIBERATELY AND METHODICALLY BEEN BOMBING POLISH TOWNS AND VILLAGES WHICH CONTAIN NO CONCEIVABLE MILITARY OBJECTIVES. AMONG THE CIVIL POPULATION THERE ARE THOUSANDS OF DEAD AND WOUNDED. AS THIS IS A QUESTION WHICH CONCERNS THE WHOLE CIVILIZED WORLD AND AS YOU, MR.PRESIDENT, HAVE SHOWN A SPECIAL INTEREST IN IT, I WISH TO INFORM YOU OF THESE FACTS.

IGNACE MOSCICKI.

(END MOSCICKI TEXT) SEP 19 1939

(END ADVANCE FOR USE AT 9 PM EASTERN STANDARD TIME MONDAY, SEPT.18)

HY718PES NM

NIGHT LEAD POLISH

WASHINGTON,SEPT 18-(AP)-COUNT POTOCKI, THE POLISH AMBASSADOR WILL CONTINUE TO REPRESENT POLAND IN THE UNITED STATES DESPITE HIS COUNTRY'S DISINTEGRATION, A STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL SAID TONIGHT. SEP 19 1939

1939

30.24 - 3439

30.24 3439

HIS POSITION WILL BE SIMILAR TO THAT OF VLADIMIR HURBAN, MINISTER OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA, WHO HAS REMAINED HERE AS CZECH MINISTER SINCE THE DISAPPEARANCE OF HIS COUNTRY LAST MARCH. SEP 19 1939

RUSSIAN

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 18-(AP)-A STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL INDICATED TODAY THAT THE UNITED STATES WOULD NOT APPLY AN ARMS EMBARGO AGAINST RUSSIA UNLESS GREAT BRITAIN OR FRANCE DECLARED WAR UPON HER.

HE ALSO LEFT THE IMPRESSION WITH REPORTERS THAT NO ACTION OF ANY KIND WOULD BE TAKEN CONCERNING RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND UNTIL BRITAIN AND FRANCE HAD ANNOUNCED THEIR POSITIONS.

IT IS RECOGNIZED HERE THAT A DECLARATION OF WAR BY BRITAIN AND FRANCE AGAINST RUSSIA WOULD FORCE THAT NATION INTO THE GERMAN CAMP AND THAT APPLICATION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW TO RUSSIA MIGHT BE A MOVE IN THE SAME DIRECTION. SEP 19 1939

SINCE A PARTITIONING OF POLAND SEEMS LIKELY, IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT FOR THE PRESIDENT TO DECLARE A STATE OF WAR AS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND A NATION WHICH DID NOT EXIST, IT WAS EXPLAINED.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT RECEIVED TODAY A TELEGRAM FROM PRESIDENT IGNACE MOSCICKI OF POLAND CHARGING THAT GERMAN PLANES HAD BOMBED OPEN POLISH TOWNS AND VILLAGES "METHODICALLY AND WITH PREMEDITATION."

THE STATE DEPARTMENT ALSO RECEIVED A NOTE FROM POLISH AMBASSADOR COUNT POTOCKI, IN WHICH HE ASSERTED, ON BEHALF OF HIS GOVERNMENT THAT RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND WAS A "FLAGRANT AGGRESSION."

AJ1133AESW

AMERICANS (PMS BUDGET)

FLUSHING, THE NETHERLANDS, SEPT 18-(AP)-THE TERROR OF 36 HOURS IN AN OPEN BOAT HUNG TODAY OVER FOUR AMERICAN SURVIVORS OF THE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER RONDA, SUNK BY A MINE OFF THE NORTHERN COAST OF THE NETHERLANDS WITH A LOSS OF 17 LIVES.

TWO AMERICANS AND 15 MEMBERS OF THE CREW WENT DOWN WITH THE SHIP. SEP 19 1939

THE SURVIVORS, EXHAUSTED BY THEIR ORDEAL, TOLD A GRAPHIC STORY OF THE HOURS OF HORROR PRECEDING THEIR RESCUE BY THE ITALIAN SHIP PROVVIDENZA, WHICH BROUGHT THEM HERE.

"HOW WE MADE IT I DON'T KNOW," DECLARED MISS JOSEPHINE ALLEN DUNCAN, FORMERLY OF RICHMOND, VA., SWEPT OVERBOARD BY WAVES AS THE DOOMED VESSEL SETTLED.

"WE WERE JUST LUCKY," SAID KARL HILGENDORF OF MILWAUKEE, WIS., DESCRIBED BY HIS COMPANIONS AS A HERO.

HILGENDORF WAS CREDITED WITH SAVING MISS DUNCAN'S AUNT, MRS. ELIZABETH DUNCAN ETCHISON, FORMERLY OF RICHMOND, WHOSE 13-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER, NAN, WAS AMONG THOSE LOST.

OTHER SURVIVORS SAID HILGENDORF TIED MRS. ETCHISON TO TWO FLOATING PLANKS UNTIL A NORWEGIAN SAILOR HELPED THEM INTO A BOAT.

THE OTHER AMERICAN SURVIVOR WAS DOUGLAS MILLER OF ANN ARBOR, MICH., UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN STUDENT. GORDEN FELTS OF ODESSA, MO., SINGER WHO HAD BEEN STUDYING IN GERMANY, WAS AMONG THOSE LOST.

WHEN PICKED UP BY THE PROVVIDENZA, THE FOUR AMERICANS AND 16 CREW MEMBERS WERE CROWDED INTO A TINY BOAT INTENDED FOR 10 PERSONS. IT WAS ATTACHED TO THE RONDA'S STERN BY A ROPE WHICH THE SHIP'S CARPENTER BROKE AS THE VESSEL SETTLED.

MISS DUNCAN SAID THE RONDA SANK SO SWIFTLY AFTER STRIKING THE MINE WEDNESDAY THERE WAS NO TIME TO LAUNCH THE LIFEBOATS.

"FIVE OF THE NORWEGIAN SAILORS BUILT A RAFT TO KEEP FROM OVERLOADING THE BOAT TOO MUCH," MISS DUNCAN SAID. "THEY STAYED ON THE RAFT TWO NIGHTS, HOOKED TO THE BOAT BY AN OAR. THEN THE RAFT BEGAN TO COLLAPSE, SO WE ALL HAD TO USE THE BOAT--LITERALLY CRUSHED ATOP ONE ANOTHER."

THE SURVIVORS SAID THE BOAT LEAKED CONTINUOUSLY, AND THAT THEY WERE FORCED TO BAIL STEADILY, USING THEIR HANDS AND SHOES.

MRS. ETCHISON, HER NIECE SAID, "BORE UP SPLENDIDLY AND DESPITE THE LOSS OF HER CHILD KEPT UP FAITH IN ALL OF US THAT WE'D BE SAVED."

MRS. ETCHISON, SUFFERING FROM SHOCK AND EXHAUSTION, WAS CONFINED TO A HOTEL, BUT THE OTHER SURVIVORS, THOUGH BRUISED AND SHAKY, WERE ABLE TO BE ABOUT.

MILLER, WHO WENT TO LONDON AUG. 1 FOR A VACATION, SAID HE HAD "QUITE A COLD," BUT FELT "PRETTY GOOD."

MRS. ETCHISON AND HER DAUGHTER HAD BEEN LIVING IN BRUSSELS, BELGIUM, BUT PLANNED TO RETURN TO THE UNITED STATES BECAUSE OF WAR DANGERS.

SEP 19 1939

HILGENDORF, WHO HAD BEEN BICYCLING IN EUROPE WHEN THE WAR STARTED, SAID THE AMERICANS WOULD GO TO ROTTERDAM AS SOON AS POSSIBLE TO SEE THE AMERICAN CONSUL AND ARRANGE FOR TRANSPORTATION TO THE UNITED STATES.

THE RONDA WAS EN ROUTE FROM ANTWERP BY WAY OF NORWAY TO THE UNITED STATES WHEN SHE STRUCK THE MINE.

RESUMED

OTTAWA, SEPT.18-(CANADIAN PRESS)-CANADA'S ECONOMIC RESOURCES HAVE BEEN GEARED TO WAR-TIME NEEDS THROUGH TEN STATUTES ENACTED AT A SPECIAL SESSION OF PARLIAMENT AND NEARLY 100 ORDERS-IN-COUNCIL SINCE AUG.25.

SEP 19 1939

IN ADDITION TO ORDERS CALLING UP THE NAVAL, MILITARY AND AIR FORCES, IMPORTANT MEASURES HAVE HAD TO DO WITH MOBILIZING INDUSTRY, CONTROL OF FOODSTUFFS AND PRICES, CENSORSHIP, CONTROL OF FOREIGN EXCHANGE AND TAXATION TO BOOST REVENUE.

EMERGENCY MEASURES STARTED AUG.25 WHEN THE GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATED, BY GOVERNOR GENERAL'S WARRANT, $8,000,000 FOR EXPENSES OF CALLING OUT THE NON-PERMANENT MILITIA.

ORDERS CALLING OUT THE MILITIA WERE ISSUED NEXT DAY AND OTHER ORDERS ON THAT DATE APPROPRIATED $7,500,000 FOR IMMEDIATE AIRCRAFT PURCHASES AND ESTABLISHED NAVAL CONTROL OF ALL SHIPPING.

A LONG SERIES OF ORDERS ADOPTED SEPT.1 CALLED PARLIAMENT TO MEET IN EMERGENCY SESSION SEPT.7, PROCLAIMED THAT A STATE OF "APPREHENDED WAR" HAD EXISTED SINCE AUG.25 AND THAT THE WAR MEASURES ACT OF 1914 WAS IN EFFECT GIVING THE GOVERNMENT ALMOST UNLIMITED POWERS, CALLED OUT THE NAVAL RESERVE, ESTABLISHED CENSORSHIP, PUT THE ACTIVE MILITIA ON A WAR TIME BASIS, RECALLED 500 FORMER MEMBERS OF THE ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE AND AUTHORIZED ENGAGEMENT OF 1,100 SPECIAL CONSTABLES.

ON SEPT.3, AN ORDER WAS ISSUED ESTABLISHING THE WAR-TIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD TO CONTROL PRICES AND DISTRIBUTION OF ESSENTIAL

30.24 - 3441

FOODS AND ON SEPT.5 AN ORDER REQUIRED ALL CANADIAN SHIPPING TO OBTAIN A LICENSE FROM THE TRANSPORT DEPARTMENT BEFORE SAILING FROM ANY PORT.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING TRADE WITH THE ENEMY WERE CONTAINED IN AN ORDER ISSUED SEPT.7 AND ON SEPT.9 A BOARD WAS CREATED TO RECEIVE AND RECORD VOLUNTEER SERVICE OFFERS FOR CIVILIAN SERVICE. THAT DAY ANOTHER ORDER ESTABLISHED THE AGRICULTURE SUPPLY COMMITTEE TO FACILITATE MOBILIZATION OF FARM PRODUCTION.

ON SEPT.10 CAME THE PROCLAMATION OF A STATE OF WAR BETWEEN CANADA AND GERMANY.

SEP 19 1939

ON SEPT.12, WHEN PRIME MINISTER MACKENZIE KING WAS OBTAINING APPROVAL OF PARLIAMENT TO CREATE A NEW MINISTRY OF MUNITIONS AND SUPPLY, HE ANNOUNCED THAT THE GOVERNMENT, UNDER AUTHORITY OF THE WAR MEASURES ACT, WAS SETTING UP A WAR SUPPLY BOARD TO ACT UNTIL IT BECAME NECESSARY TO HAVE A FULL TIME MINISTRY.

THIS BOARD, CLOTHED WITH WIDE POWERS, IS BEING ORGANIZED.

SEPT.15 THE GOVERNMENT ADOPTED ORDERS-IN-COUNCIL SETTING UP A FOREIGN EXCHANGE CONTROL BOARD WITH POWER TO LICENSE IMPORT AND EXPORT OF ALL GOODS, MONEY OR SECURITIES. THE BOARD WAS EMPOWERED TO USE THE STABILIZATION FUND OF SOME $60,000,000, CREATED IN 1935 WHEN CANADA'S GOLD RESERVE WAS REVALUED AT $35 AN OUNCE, TO MAINTAIN THE EXTERNAL VALUE OF THE CANADIAN DOLLAR.

A BUDGET ADOPTED SEPT.12 WAS FOLLOWED BY PASSAGE OF A BILL EMPOWERING THE GOVERNMENT TO SPEND $100,000,000 BY ORDERS-IN-COUNCIL UP TO NEXT MARCH 31.

OTHER MEASURES ADOPTED AT THE FIVE-DAY SESSION OF PARLIAMENT INCREASED TARIFF, EXCISE AND INCOME TAXES AND INCORPORATED THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND TO COLLECT AND DISTRIBUTE MONEY FOR THE CARE OF DEPENDENTS OF THOSE WHO SERVE.

30.24 3441

NUMEROUS SUPPLEMENTARY ORDERS HAVE DIRECTED VARIOUS STAGES OF RECRUITING FOR THE NAVAL, MILITARY AND AIR FORCES.

UH1135PED

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

RUSSIA'S MILITARY OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND IS AN UNESCAPABLE REMINDER THAT THE TREND OF THE EUROPEAN WAR DEPENDS IN LARGE DEGREE AT THIS JUNCTURE ON THE SOVIET UNION'S INTENTIONS.

EVEN THE POSSIBLE EXTENSION OF THE WAR INTO A WORLD CONFLICT MAY HINGE ON MOSCOW.

SEP 19 1939

EUROPE NOW STANDS AT THE FIRST BIG CROSS-ROADS OF THE GENERAL UPHEAVAL. THE TURNING THAT IS TAKEN WILL BE DETERMINED BY THE INTERPRETATION WHICH THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES PLACE ON RUSSIA'S ACTION.

NEITHER PARIS NOR LONDON THUS FAR HAS EXPRESSED ANY OFFICIAL OPINION REGARDING THIS DEVELOPMENT WHICH HAS STAGGERED BOTH OF THEM, EVEN THOUGH IT WASN'T UNEXPECTED. THEY MUST DECIDE QUICKLY, HOWEVER, WHETHER TO ACCEPT:

1. RUSSIA'S DECLARATION THAT THE OCCUPATION IS MERELY TO PROTECT THE RUSSIAN PEOPLES OF POLAND, AND THAT THE SOVIET INTENDS TO REMAIN NEUTRAL. ON THE FACE OF IT THIS WOULD PRESAGE A WITHDRAWAL OF RUSSIAN FORCES WHEN THE NEED OF PROTECTION PASSED.

2. POLAND'S CHARGE THAT THE RUSSIAN MOVE CONSTITUTES AGGRESSION WHICH WOULD MEAN THAT GERMANY AND RUSSIA HAVE PARTITIONED POLAND BETWEEN THEM -- AN EVENT WHICH HAD BEEN WIDELY PREDICTED BY THE EUROPEAN PRESS. THIS WOULD PLACE ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN THE POSITION

1939

OF CHALLENGING RUSSIA TO WAR.

HOWEVER THE ALLIES MAY CHOOSE TO REGARD THAT NOW, THE FACT REMAINS THAT THEY HAVE PLEDGED THEMSELVES TO FREE POLAND FROM INVASION. THAT MEANS NOT ONLY INVASION FROM GERMANY, BUT FROM ANY OTHER COUNTRY.

SHOULD THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD DEFEAT GERMANY, THEN THEY WOULD BE BOUND BY THE BOND WITH POLAND TO TRY TO EJECT FROM POLAND ANY FOREIGN FORCE OF OCCUPATION WHICH REFUSED TO MOVE OUT.

SINCE POLAND ALREADY WAS TOTTERING BEFORE THE OVERWHELMING GERMAN ONSLAUGHT, THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION CAN SCARCELY MAKE THE LITTLE NATION'S POSITION WORSE. INDEED, IT MAY SAVE THE POLES FROM SHEDDING MORE OF THEIR BLOOD IN AN EPIC BUT HOPELESS EFFORT TO DEFEND THEMSELVES.

SEP 19 1939

THE ANGLO-FRENCH STRATEGY, SO FAR AS IS KNOWN, HADN'T ANTICIPATED THAT POLAND WOULD BE ABLE TO STAND OFF THE GERMANS, OR THAT THE ALLIES WOULD BE ABLE TO GIVE THE POLES THE IMMEDIATE AID NECESSARY TO WITHSTAND THE ASSAULT.

RATHER HAVE BRITAIN AND FRANCE BEEN TAKING A LONG VIEW OF THE WAR AND PLANNING TO REESTABLISH POLAND IN FULL SOVEREIGNTY AT THE END OF THE CONFLICT.

OTHER IMMEDIATE EFFECTS OF THE INVASION ARE SUCH AS TO CAUSE THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES DEEP CONCERN.

HUNGARY AND THE BALKANS ALREADY HAD FELT THE BREEZE OF THE RUSSO-GERMAN ANTI-AGGRESSION PACT AND WERE TREADING CIRCUMSPECTLY.

HUNGARY LAST WEEK DECLINED TO ANNOUNCE HER NEUTRALITY, AND THIS WAS GENERALLY INTERPRETED AS BEING FAVORABLE TO GERMANY. TURKEY, RECENTLY PLEDGED TO BRITAIN IN A DEFENSIVE PACT, LET IT BE KNOWN THROUGH THE INSPIRED PRESS THAT SHE IS THE SOVIET'S GREATEST FRIEND.

THE SUPPORT OF TURKEY IS OF VAST IMPORTANCE TO EITHER SIDE IN THE WAR, SINCE SHE CONTROLS THE STRATEGIC DARDANELLES.

RUMANIA NATURALLY IS SHAKING IN HER BOOTS OVER THE RUSSIAN INVASION JUST ACROSS HER BORDER. FOR YEARS SHE HAS BEEN LIVING IN FEAR THAT THE SOVIET WOULD DEMAND RETURN OF BESSARABIA, WHICH WAS TAKEN FROM RUSSIA AT THE END OF THE WORLD WAR. RUMANIA'S HEART IS WITH THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES, BUT HIDDEN SYMPATHY IS ALL SHE CAN GIVE THEM NOW.

IN SHORT, HUNGARY AND THE WHOLE BALKAN PENINSULA WOULD SEEM TO HAVE BEEN DRAWN CLOSER WITHIN THE NETWORK OF GERMAN CONTROL BY THE RUSSIAN MOVE.

SEP 19 1939

THE SOVIET OCCUPATION HAS RELEASED MASSES OF GERMAN TROOPS WHICH ARE BEING RUSHED TO THE WESTERN FRONT TO COMBAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH ATTACK.

THE FIGHTING IN THIS THEATRE WAS SUMMED UP BY A FRENCH COMMUNIQUE THIS MORNING: "THE NIGHT WAS CALM ON THE ENTIRETY OF THE FRONT."

HEADLINER

ON SEPTEMBER 21, 1938, ALMOST EXACTLY A YEAR AGO, MAXIM LITVINOFF, THEN RUSSIAN FOREIGN COMMISSAR, IN A SCATHING SPEECH AT GENEVA, ACCUSED FRANCE AND BRITAIN OF CAPITULATING TO HITLER'S DEMANDS ON CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, AND ASSERTED THAT THEY HAD IGNORED RUSSIA'S OFFER OF MILITARY ASSISTANCE TO PROTECT THE LITTLE REPUBLIC.

A NEWSPAPER, RECALLING THIS STRIKING SPEECH, ASKS HOW IT FITS IN WITH MOSCOW'S OWN INVASION OF POLAND.

THAT OPENS UP A VERY WIDE FIELD, INVOLVING THE GRADUAL WEAKENING OF RELATIONS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND THE ANGLO-FRENCH PAIR, UNTIL WE HAVE THE PRESENT POSITION. HOWEVER, LET'S TRY TO CONFINE THE ANSWER TO THE SPECIFIC CASE IN HAND.

30.24-3443

IT IS TRUE THAT RUSSIA DID OFFER MILITARY ASSISTANCE, BUT WHILE WE ARE ON THIS POINT IT SHOULD BE MENTIONED THAT THERE IS A DISPUTE AS TO THE VALUE OF THE ASSISTANCE TENDERED.

WHEN I WAS IN PARIS NOT LONG AFTER HITLER'S TRIUMPH AT MUNICH OVER CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, A HIGH FRENCH SOURCE INFORMED ME THAT FRANCE HAD BEEN READY TO HELP HER SMALL ALLY BUT THAT THE HELP OFFERED BY BOTH ENGLAND AND RUSSIA WAS WHOLLY INADEQUATE. MY INFORMANT DECLARED THAT RUSSIA COULD GIVE ONLY AIRPLANES FOR THIS SERVICE AND BRITAIN JUST A FEW TROOPS.

BE THAT AS MAY, RUSSIAN EYES UNDOUBTEDLY REGARDED THE CZECHO-SLOVAK DIFFICULTIES IN A MUCH DIFFERENT LIGHT THAN THEY DO THOSE OF THE POLES. THE CZECHS AND THE RUSSIANS WERE ON MUCH MORE FRIENDLY TERMS THAN HAVE BEEN THE RUSSIANS AND THE POLES--OLD ENEMIES OF LONG STANDING, ALTHOUGH THEY DID HAVE A NON-AGGRESSION PACT.

THE TERRITORY WHICH RUSSIA APPEARS TO BE TAKING OVER IN POLAND REPRESENTS THAT WHICH THE POLES TOOK FROM RUSSIA SOON AFTER THE WORLD WAR AND ADDED TO THE POLISH STATE WHICH ALREADY HAD BEEN SET UP BY THE ALLIED POWERS. TRUE, THIS AREA HAD BEEN IN POLISH HANDS BEFORE, BUT THE SOVIET NEVER HAS CEASED TO REGARD AS THEIR OWN FOLK THE WHITE RUSSIAN AND UKRAINIAN PEOPLES WHICH THE POLES TOOK OVER.

(MORE)

SEP 19 1939

JS1219PED

A FAR MORE IMPORTANT DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE POLISH AND THE CZECHO-SLOVAK POSITIONS IS THAT GERMANY AND POLAND ALREADY WERE AT WAR AND POLAND WAS IN A STATE OF NEAR COLLAPSE.

WHETHER ONE THINKS THE SOVIET INTENDS TO KEEP THE OCCUPIED TERRITORY, OR HAS OTHER PLANS FOR EXTENDING HER INFLUENCE ABROAD,

30.24 3443

THE FACT REMAINS THAT THE RUSSIAN INVASION MAY EASILY HAVE BEEN INTENDED QUITE AS MUCH TO PROTECT RUSSIAN INTERESTS FROM GERMANY AS FOR ANY OTHER REASON.

THIS IS ANOTHER WAY OF SAYING THAT, DESPITE THE NEW AND SURPRISING RELATIONS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY, THERE HAS BEEN NOTHING TO INDICATE THAT THERE IS ANY LOVE LOST BETWEEN THE TWO.

JS1223PED

ADD UNDATED CHRONOLOGICAL SHIPS SUNK

SEP 19 1939

SEPT 18--BRITISH AIRCRAFT CARRIER COURAGEOUS, 22,250 TONS, SUNK BY "SUBMARINE ACTION". DATE, LOCATION NOT GIVEN BY BRITISH ADMIRALTY WHICH SAID ONLY THE COURAGEOUS, CAPABLE OF CARRYING 1,216 PERSONNEL AND 48 PLANES, WAS OPERATING UNDER "REDUCED COMPLEMENT" AND THAT "SURVIVORS" WERE PICKED UP BY DESTROYERS AND MERCHANT SHIPS.

DBSASAED

Leave Blank

Hitler Says He Wants Peace, Can Win Seven-Year War; Allies Spurn Him; Russia's Navy Blockades Estonia

7-YEAR WAR IF NECESSARY, HITLER SAYS

Führer Warns Allies It Is Not Up To Them How Long Fight Will Last

He Declares Versailles Treaty's Poland "Never Will Rise Again"

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

DANZIG, Sept. 19—Adolf Hitler today warned Britain and France that for every bomb thrown on German towns he would answer with five or ten.

In an impassioned 1 hour and 14 minute speech accepting Danzig into greater Germany, the Führer asserted:

Germany is prepared to wage a seven-year war if necessary.

Germany and Soviet Russia, Europe's "two greatest nations," would re-establish "law and order" in eastern Europe.

Germany has "no war aims" against Britain and France but Germany and Russia guarantee that Poland, as created by the Versailles treaty, "never again will rise."

Germany does not want Russia's Ukraine territory, which many believed to be the ultimate goal of Hitler.

The basis of the German-Russian understanding "is the removal of this nightmare which bore heavily upon British statesmen . . . that the German regime desires to conquer the world."

Pledges Humane War

Hitler pledged he would conduct a humanitarian war, provided his opponents did likewise, but that if they departed from this he would meet them with their own weapons.

The frontier between France and Germany could remain as it is for all time, he asserted.

With England, he said he desired nothing but friendship.

At the same time, much of his speech was devoted to a bitter attack on the British Government. France virtually was exempted from all war guilt.

Blames Britain

That Britain alone is to blame appeared to be Hitler's contention. He insisted he was willing to accept her challenge.

Waxing fervent and shouting with an earnestness that betrayed deep emotion, he exclaimed "There is one thing Germany will never do—capitulate."

Hitler(after eighteen days of the eastern campaign during which he acquired a much healthier complexion than on the day he met with the Reichstag September 1 to announce his military action in Poland, declared himself proud of the achievement of his army, navy and air force.

Honored To Be Denounced

But he also declared himself honored to be denounced by the British Government as the man who must be removed from the European scene.

"I should feel very despondent if men of th Churchill type (Winston Churchill, Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty) praised me," he said.

Before Poland's final fate is settled, he intimated vital interests of Germany and Russia must first be satisfied.

Beyond his references to Poland's fate he did not announce his war aims in precise terms. He merely said they were very moderate.

He implored the same God, who he said visibly blessed German forces the past eighteen days, to grant enlightenment to Germany's adversaries so they [illegible] the blessings of peace [illegible] making work.

Bible Verse Applies

Of the Poles, he said the Bible verse applied which refers to the Lord, who smote them with their men and horses.

Three hundred thousand Polish soldiers, he declared, now German prisoners, were part of the price Poland has had to pay for her "follies."

The Führer asserted it was an error to suppose that a cleavage could be made between the German leadership and its people—a statement which Germany's newest citizens, Danzig's 400,000, cheered wildly.

Hail Amity With Russia

New solidarity with Russia was one of the highlights of his statement of policy.

"Russia remains what she is and Germany remains what she is," he said, "and those who believe these new political friends shortly will be having a falling out are doomed to disappointment."

It was a triumphant entry Hitler made into Danzig. All along the tenmile drive from the seacoast resort of Zoppot flowers had been strewn along the road. Flags and pennants were displayed in windows decorated with Hitler's pictures.

Sights Interesting

But the crowd itself was the most interesting exhibit.

Old women weeping for joy, staid Red Cross nurses breaking through sturdy lines of brown-shirted S. A. men, children shouting, young students forcing their way to Hitler's car almost at the risk of their lives—these were some of the sights.

For the first time on the way to a public demonstration the Nazi chieftain drove in a six-wheeled military car. He was followed by two Gestapo cars in which guards sat with new repeater rifles which can fire twenty-five shots.

And off in the distance the roar of cannon was heard, as German troops made final assaults upon Poles who tried against overwhelming odds to hold their fortified position on the outskirts of Gdynia, former Polish port.

A combined attack of the army, navy and air force was said finally to have silenced the Polish cannon on the heights of Ochshöt, although remnants of the Polish army have not yet capitulated.

Hitler spoke in the medieval Artushof as the crowning event of his first visit to Danzig since he brought the former Free City on the Baltic "back home into the Reich." The wildly heiling populace accorded him a frenzied welcome.

Dwelling at length on Nazi relations with Britain and France, he said, "I have always endeavored to bring about friendly relations."

Accuses "War Agitators"

"In the west and south," he asserted, "Germany made important concessions hoping to bring about definite peace in Europe. We believe we would have been successful had not downright war agitators always upset our efforts."

Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union were in agreement that the post-Versailles Poland should not be revived, the Fuehrer asserted, adding that they were the only nations [illegible] to re-establish law and order in eastern Europe." Before Poland's final fate was settled, he intimated vital niterests of Germany and Russia must first be satisfied.

Beyodn his references to Poland's fate he did not announce his war aims in precise terms. He merely said they were very moderate.

Concluding his speech, Hitler said the German people were much more enthusiastic than in 1914, "but now it is not superficial hurrah patriotism but emphatic determination."

He went into a lengthy review of what he said were his attempts to reach a settlement with Poland without war, asserting:

"I attempted to find a way to connect East Prussia with the Reich and provide an outlet to the sea for Poland. I was too moderate. But I did it because I wanted to spare the German as well as Polish people the other solution.

"In return for these I was ready to guarantee the Polish borders despite heavily bearable conditions. I don't know what state of mind the Polish government was in when it refused this offer. . . . Who could have made Poland so blind?"

Of Danzig, he said: "This land is German and will remain German forever."

The Nazi chieftain's speech was broadcast by the entire radio systems of Germany, Hungary, Slovakia and Scandinavian nations and also was relayed to the United States.

Albert Forster, Nazi district leader, introduced him to the wildly demonstrating audience gahtered in the Artushof, guildhall dating back to the days of the Hanseatic League.

He launched quickly into a denunciation of the Versailles pact, often the object of his most bitter words.

"This peace was forced upon us," he said. "The peace that was the beginning of the new trouble. The fathers of this peace never apparently thought of the consequences. The fact remains, whether it may be deemed right by the British war-inciters or not, that 82,000,000 Germans live in this lebensraum (living space). Germany was done the greatest injustice by the Versailles treaty."

Hitler asserted economic realities were ignored and peoples oppressed by the treaty which ended the World War.

"If foreign statesmen say they cannot have faith in the word of German states," he said, "we can say we have no confidence in the word of the men who made the Versailles treaty."

It was a triumphant entry Hitler made into Danzig. All along the tenmile drive from the seacoast resort of Zoppot flowers had been strewn along the road. Flags and pennants were displayed in windows decorated with his picture.

But the crowd itself was the most interesting exhibit. Old women wept for joy, staid Red Cross nurses broke through sturdy lines of brown-shirted S. A. men, children shouted, young students forced their way to Hitler's car almost at the risk of their lives.

For the first time on the way to a public demonstration the Nazi chieftain drove in a six-wheeled military car. He was followed by two Gestapo cars in which guards sat with new repeater rifles which can fire twenty-five shots.

Talks of Seven-Year War

Taking notice of British assertions that the war might last for three years, Der Fuehrer shouted:

"It will be dependent upon us if the war lasts that long. If it should last three years, the word 'capitulation' will not stand at its end, nor will it stand at the end of the fourth, fifth, sixth or seventh year.

"They are not facing a Germany of Bethmann-Hollweg [German Chancellor when the World War began] but a Germany of Friedrician time [Frederick the Great]."

Hitler stated, for what was believed to be the first time publicly, that he did "not want the Ukraine"—Russian territory which, on the basis of his book "Mein Kampf," many believed to be the ultimate objective [illegible] Osten (drive to the East).

The basis of the German-Russian understanding, Hitler said, "is the removal of this nightmare which bore heavily upon British statesmen. . . . That the German regime desires to conquer the world." "Russia remains what she is and Germany remains what she is," he added, "and those who believe these new political friends shortly will be having a falling out are doomed to disappointment."

Text of Hitler's 'War or Peace' Speech

SEP 20 1939

1939

30.24-3445

30.24 3445

SEP 20 1939

Fuehrer Says Reich Is Ready To Carry On War for 7 Years

Vows He Will Never Surrender and That Poland Will Never Rise Again, Praises Russia and Sneers at British 'War Instigators'

DANZIG, Sept. 19 (AP).—A partial text of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's speech here today follows:

For the first time I am treading the soil which German settlers took possession of 500 years before the first whites settled the State of New York. Five hundred years longer has this soil been German, it remained German and will remain German—let every one convince himself of this.

The fate which met this town and beautiful country is the fate of all Germany. The World War, most senseless fight of all times, counted this town and this country among its victims and left the conviction behind that a similar fate must not be repeated. It is too bad that today this World War is apparently forgotten by the main instigators and those chiefly interested in this massacre.

When this bloody fighting—into which Germany was forced without any war aims—ended, a peace was to be drafted for humanity which was to lead to a new resurrection of law and thereby to final removal of all distress. This peace was then put before the German people at Versailles, not in free negotiation but forced upon us by dictation. The fathers of this peace saw in it the end of the German people.

Perhaps many men believed this peace to be the end of all distress, but it was only the beginning of new trouble. Those who started and those who finished the war at that time erred on one point: they did not solve a single problem, but they created many more problems.

Basic Problem Overlooked

It was only a question of time until representatives of the German nation would rise up to solve these newly created problems. For the basic problem was overlooked at that time—namely, the fact that nations exist. This fact may or may not please one or another British war instigator: there are 82,000,000 Germans united in this Lebensraum [living space]. And these eighty-two millions want to live and they shall live. Even if it should again not please these instigators. Germany was accorded the worst injustice by the Treaty of Versailles.

If today the statesman of another nation [apparently a reference to British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain] feels called upon to say he cannot have confidence in the word of a German statesman or the German people, then we Germans have the right to say we have no confidence whatsoever in the assurances of those who once unmercifully broke their most solemnly given word.

I do not want to speak of injustice in the world. Injustice does not seem to be worst in the life of peoples. But the nonsense and stupidity with which peace was dictated in the world ingnored all historic, economic, ethnological and political facts. Conditions were set up then which make one ask whether the men who created them were really in possession of all their senses.

Lacking any knowledge of the historical development of living spaces, and also lacking any understanding for economics, these people then roamed about Europe, destroyed states, partitioned lands, oppressed peoples and destroyed cultures. This country, too, was the victim of these outrages, and the Polish state was a product of this nonsense.

Germany's Sacrifices

It does not seem to be known in the world what Germany had to sacrifice for this Polish state. I must say this, however: all territory then united with Poland was the product of German activity, industriousness and creation. The cultural importance of this territory is based exclusively on the German people.

Plebiscites wherever held later demonstrated no one longed to live in this Polish state, which was created from the blood of innumerable German regiments and which then was expended at the expense of the old territory used by Germans for settling—above all at the expense of any reasonable economic development.

One thing has been clearly proven within the last twenty years: the Pole who did not found this culture was unable to maintain it. Another fifty years would have been sufficient for this territory to return to the barbarism from which Germans tediously rescued it. This cultural decay already was noticeable throughout Poland.

Poland itself, however, was a state composed of various nationalities. It was created along the same lines which brought blame to the old Austrian state. Poland has never been a democracy. A very thin uppercrust not only ruled over foreign nationalities but also over their so-called own people. It was a state of force governed by the nightstick, by police and last but not least by the military.

The lot of Germans in this state was terrible. There is a difference between a people of less cultural importance meeting the misfortune of being governed by culturally more important people, and a people of high cultural importance being submitted to the tragic fate of rape by a people of lesser cultural importance. For, in these lesser important people, all manner of inferiority complexes show themselves and barbaric treatment results. Germans have been witnesses of this fate for nearly twenty years.

Despite that I attempted here, too, to find a solution which perhaps could have led to a just compensation. I have made efforts in the west, and later in the south, of the Reich to settle borders finally and thereby do away with insecurity in these regions and safeguard future peace there. Here, too (in Poland), I have attempted to reach the same goal.

At that time a man of unquestionable realistic insight and activity existed in Poland. I succeeded in reaching an agreement with Marshal Pilsudski which was to pave the way for a peaceful understanding between both nations, an accord which could not recognize that which the Versailles treaty had created but which, by completely overlooking this treaty, aimed at least at laying the foundation for a reasonable and bearable neighborly relationship.

As long as the marshal lived it seemed as if this attempt would lead to a diminishing of tension. Immediately after his death, however, an intensified fight against Germandom set in. This fight increasingly embittered and darkened relations between the two states. It was hardly possible patiently to look on when in a neighboring country, which had inflicted most serious damage to Germany, the German minority living there was persecuted in an almost barbaric manner.

Cites "Injustices" to Germans

The world, which sheds tears if a Polish Jew who emigrated to Germany a few decades ago is expelled from the Reich, remains deaf and dumb in the face of the distress of those who, as a result of the Versailles treaty, had to leave their former homeland by the thousands and millions, especially if they were Germans. Germany is a great power and yet had to be a mere spectator while a people and a state of much lower rank manhandled Germans.

Two situations were especially unbearable:

First, a city [Danzig] whose German character could not be denied was not only prevented from returning to the Reich, but by a thousand ways a gradual effort was made to Polandize it.

Second, a province [East Prussia] which is cut off from the German Reich possesses no direct access, but traffic with this province is dependent on all conceivable chicanery or from the benevolence of this Polish state. No power in the world would have tolerated this situation as long as Germany.

I do not know what, indeed, England would have said to a similar peace solution at this cost or how France would have taken it, or even America.

I submitted my attempts for a durable solution also of this problem in the form of verbal proposals to the then Polish rulers. These proposals were more than moderate. Danzig was to return to the German Reich, an extraterritorial highway was to be built at our cost to East Prussia. In return Poland was to receive the free port rights in Danzig and obtain the same extraterritorial approach. In return I was prepared even to guarantee the borders, despite the situation which for us was hardly bearable, and finally to allow Poland to participate in guaranteeing the Slovak state.

Answer Was to Mobilize

I do not know in what state of mind the Polish government was when it declined these proposals. I do know, however, that innumerable millions of Germans took the view that I went too far. As an answer, Poland gave the order for the first mobilization. On the strength of that wild terror set in. My request that the then Polish Foreign Minister [Joseph Beck] visit me in Berlin in order to discuss this question once more was declined. Instead of to Berlin, he traveled to London.

There came then those weeks and months of increasing threats which even for a small state would have been hardly bearable, for a great power in the long run impossible. They wracked their brains in Poland whether they should destroy our army before or behind Berlin; the Polish Marshal, who now has lamentably left his army in the lurch, declared that he would hack Germany and the German Army to pieces. Then began a martyrdom for our German nationals, who in tens of thousands were abducted, mishandled or killed in the cruelest manner. Sadistic beasts vented their perverse instincts on them. The entire world saw and looked on without turning a hair.

Blames British Guaranty

At first they believed the German nation continually would stand for all that from such a laughable state, because Poland had been told this was possible by a certain place—by that place in which the general war agitators have been sitting for the last century. There the Poles were even given a guarantee that in case their own resistance was not sufficient they could always make sure of the assistance of the other. The decision was put into their hands to begin war. For these men, to be sure, Poland was only a means to an end. For today they declare quite calmly that it is not primarily a question of Poland at all, but of the German regime.

I have always ponted to this danger which exists in fact: that without further ado men can arise in a land and unceremoniously preach war as a necessity. I mean gentlemen like Churchill, Eden, Duff, Cooper, etc. I have pointed out how dangerous that is in a land where one never quite knows whether these men soon would not be in the government. I was told then that never would be the case. In my opinion they now are the government.

At that time I never left any doubt that Germany would not capitulate under any circumstances in the face of threats of the power of these men. This, my answer, then was most severely attacked, for gradually a certain practice developed in the democracies, namely:

In democracies one may agitate for war; there foreign regimes, statesmen and heads of state may be attacked, slandered and vilified—for there freedom of speech and press reign.

In authoritatian states one may not offer resistance against that, for there discipline rules, and only in states without discipline is it accordingly permissible to agitate for war because in disciplined states the answer may not be given.

SEP 20 1939

At that time I decided finally to inform the German people of the doings of this criminal clique. And the German nation slowly has been brought to that point of defense which I hold necessary in order not to be surprised some day.

I believe that in the last days of August it still would have been possible—to be sure, without the British guaranty and agitation of these apostles of war—to reach an understanding. At one time England itself sought to bring us in direct conference with Poland.

Waited Two Days for Poles

I was ready for that. The Poles were the ones who did not come. I sat with my government for two days in Berlin and waited. In the meantime, I had worked out a new proposal which was read to the British Ambassador sentence for sentence at the beginning of the first day. My Foreign Minister in addition gave him clarifications. The next day came. Nothing happened except the Polish general mobilization, new acts of terror and attack on our Reich's territory.

Even in international life one may not continually mistake patience for weakness. For years I looked on these continuing provocations with boundless fears. What I myself often suffered during this long period only a few can estimate. For hardly a month, hardly a week passed in which some sort of committee did not come to me from this territory to picture the unbearable situation of Germandom and repeatedly plead with me to intervene.

Again and again I requested them still to try. Year after year it continued this way. But I constantly warned that it finally must end. After months of waiting and always new proposals. I finally decided to speak with the Poles in the language which the Poles believed they were able to speak to us.

Duce Stepped In

Even in that moment peace still could have been saved. Friendly Italy, the Duce, stepped in and made a mediation proposal. France was agreeable. And I also declared my agreement. England caused this proposal also to be rejected and instead believed it could send the German Ambassador a two-hour ultimatum with impossible demands.

The English deceived themselves in only one way: They mistook the present German regime for the regime of November, 1918, which they supported, and the German nation of today with the then deluded German nation. Ultimatums can not be presented to the Germany of today. The German Reich is not willing to be talked to in such a tone.

I know that if Poland chose war it did so because others pushed it into it, those others who believe that through this war they would perhaps do their largest world political and financial business. It will not be their greatest business however, but their greatest disappointment.

Poland chose to fight because certain statesmen of the west had assured it that they possessed concrete evidence of the worthlessness of the German Army, of the lesser value of our armament, of the bad morale of our troops, of a defeatist attitude within the Reich, of a discrepancy which was said to exist between the German people and its leadership. The Poles were encouraged that it would be an easy matter for them not only to resist but also to throw our army back. Thereupon Poland set up its campaign plan with the advice of western general staff officers.

Since then eighteen days now have passed and hardly ever in history could the saying be expressed with more right: 'With horse, and man and wagon the Lord defeated the foe.' Troops now are driven upon in long line from Brest to Lemberg and northward. In this moment endless columns of the defeated Polish Army are marching as war prisoners since yesterday from the region around Kutno. This forenoon there were 70,000 already. All the Polish Army standing west of this line will surrender within a few days, will lay down its arms or we will destroy them.

The German Army has taught the Polish statesmen a necessary lesson. Marshal Smigly-Rydz erred in direction. Instead of in Berlin, he landed in Cernauti. With him is the entire government and all the seducers who have driven the Polish people into this madness.

Five Bombs for Every One

German soldiers, however, have done their duty in the highest possible manner on land, sea and in the air. Again our German infantry proved to be an incomparable master Its bravery, courage and activity often have been aimed at but never reached. New weapons, our motorized units, have proved their worth. The sailors of our navy admirably fulfilled their duty and shamed the German [illegible] protectress of German air.

SEP 20 1939

Those who dreamed of shattering Germany and lay in ruins German cities are no longer to be heard because they know that for every bomb falling on a German city five or ten will fall on their cities. They should not pretend that they want to resort to this type of warfare out of humanitarian reasons.

But the Polish soldier fought bravely at many places. The leadership in the medium ranks was fair, in the higher ranks it was bad and the organization was Polish. At this moment roughly 300,- 000 Polish soldiers are in German captivity. Nearly 2,000 officers are amongst them and many generals. I must mention, however, that besides the bravery of many Polish units admitted by us, there are the foulest deeds that have happened anywhere else in the last few decades.

SEP 20 1939

There are things which I, as a soldier who fought in the World War, but only in the west, never learned. Thousands of massacred German nationals and fiendishly slaughtered women, girls and children, innumerable German soldiers and officers who fell into the hands of opponents were massacred; eyes were gouged out and they were bestially mutilated.

The worst, however, is that this Polish government has openly admitted through its own broadcasts that parachute soldiers of the air force have been murdered. One must ask whether under such conditions one should still limit the method of warfare. I have no knowledge that any of our democratic statesmen deemed it worth while to protest against this barbarism.

I have given orders to the German air force to lead this war humanely, in other words, only against fighting troops. The Polish government and the army command gave their civil population orders to conduct the war as ambush snipers. It was very difficult to maintain one's patience.

Patience May End

I would like to emphasize that the democratic states should not believe that things must remain that way eternally. If they want it differently they can have it. Even here my patience can come to an end.

Despite this treacherous manner of warfare, our armies conquered this opponent with lightning rapidity. One English newspaper wrote a few days ago that I dismissed one general because I had counted upon a lightning war and was bitterly disillusioned by the slowness of these operations. This article seems to have been concocted by the same strategist who gave the Poles strategic advice for lining up their armies.

We have attained that state of affairs in Poland which perhaps enables us now to speak reasonably and calmly with the representatives of this people.

In the mean time Russia found itself in a position on its march into Poland for the protection of the interests of White Russian and Ukrainian nationals. Now we see that in England and France this collaboration of Germany and Russia is looked upon as a tremendous crime. An Englishman wrote that this is perfidiousness. The English must know it. I believe England sees perfidiousness in the fact that an attempt of collaboration of democratic England with Bolshevist Russia failed, while on the contrary the attempt of National Socialist Germany with Bolshevist Russia succeeded.

I should like to explain right here: Russia remains what it is and Germany will remain what it is. But both regimes see clearly that neither the Russian nor the German regimes want to sacrifice even a single man for the interests of the Western democracies.

The lesson of four years of war suffices for both states and both peoples. We know exactly that alternately one or the other could be honored with the call to jump into the breach for the ideals of the Western democracies. We are of the opinion from now on to look after our interests ourselves, and we find we can represent them best if the two greatest peoples and states come to terms with each other.

No Desire to Rule Europe

This is the easier since the British assertion of the unlimited aims of German foreign policy is proved to be a mere lie. I am glad now to contradict those who continuously asserted that Germany had the intention to rule Europe up to the Ural Mountains. They will not be happy when they at last learn of the limitation of German political intentions.

I believe thereby I take another reason for war from them. For, they declare they must fight the present German regime just for these reasons because this regime is pursuing unlimited war aims.

Well, gentlemen of the British Empire, Germany's aims are very limited. We have talked about them with the Russians. In the last analysis we are mostly interested neighbors. Englishmen opine that thereby we may get into conflict. But we shall not. The basis of understanding between Germany and Soviet Russia is the removal of this nightmare which bore heavily upon British statesmen. In their view the German regime desires to conquer the world. Let us hope that they are calming down now that they know that it is not true that Germany wants to conquer the Ukraine.

We have very limited interests. However, we are determined to represent these interests in any case. That the German does not stand for joking in that connection should have been proved by the events of the last eighteen days. How definite the fixation of the state of conditions in this large territory will look depends in the first place upon the two countries which here possess their most important interests. Germany here proceeds with limited but unshakeable demands and she will realize these demands one way or another. Germany and Russia will here establish in place of a European danger spot a condition that henceforth can only be adjudged an alleviation of tension.

SEP 20 1939

Says British Forced War

If the west declares that this must under no circumstances be done, and if first of all England declares she is determined to oppose this if necessary with war lasting perhaps three, five or eight years, I should like to reply:

In the west and south of its Reich Germany has accepted final boundaries through serious renunciations. Through such renunciations Germany has sought to bring about a final satisfaction everywhere. We believe we would have been successful if certain war agitators did not possess an absolute interest in the disturbance of European peace. Neither against England nor against France have I any kind of war aim, nor has the German nation.

Since I came to power I have endeavored gradually to bring about again a close trustful relationship, especially with our former World War opponents. I endeavored to remove again all the tension which once existed between Italy and Germany, and I can state with satisfaction that I was completely successful, thanks to the close personal relationship of trust with Mussolini.

I also sought to accomplish the same status with France. Immediately after settlement of the Saar question I ceremoniously renounced all border revision in the west. I set the entire German propaganda in the service of this conception and eliminated everything which could have given Paris occasion to doubt or be concerned.

Poland Will Not Rise Again

My offers to England are known. I had only the great aim of being able to reach a sincere friendship with the English people. If all that was met by rebuff and if England believes today it is necessary to wage war against Germany, then I would like to make the following answer:

Poland never again will rise in the form of the Versailles treaty. Not only Germany, but also Russia, guarantees that.

If notwithstanding England now undertakes an apparent change of war aims and thereby unveils its real war aims, that namely a war against the present regime in Germany is more important, I want to make the following answer:

Fundamentally I have so educated the German people that every regime which is praised by our enemies is rejected by us. If therefore a German regime would receive the agreement of gentlemen Churchill, Duff Cooper and Eden, then this regime would only be paid and kept by these gentlemen and thereby be unbearable for Germany. It is therefore very laudable for us to be rejected by these gentlemen.

I can assure these gentlemen of one thing: if they would not lie, I would be deeply concerned. I am proud to be attacked by them. If, however, these peoples think that thereby they can split the German people from me, then they consider this nation either as fickle or as foolish as they themselves are.

National Socialism has not educated the people in the last twenty years for nothing. We are he-men who in a long fight have always been attacked by our enemies. What our enemies did to us only increased our followers and created this indissoluble unity. And just as the National Socialist party took this battle upon itself through the years and finally emerged victoriously, so the National Socialist German Reich and the German people likewise assume this battle.

"Laughable Propaganda"

The gentlemen can be assured that through their laughable propaganda they never again will disintegrate the German people. These propaganda bunglers ought first of all to come to us and undergo a schooling.

If a nation breaks apart, then it won't be the German nation which is fighting for its rights, which wants no war but which has been attacked. Rather those peoples will fall to pieces who gradually will comprehend how little basis for war their seducers had and that the only reason for war lies in profit and political interests of a very small clique.

When they say that this war will last for three years, then I can express my pity for the French poilu. At present he knows only that he will have to fight for at least three years. Whether the war will last three years also depends on us. If it should last for three years the word capitulation will not appear at the end of the third year, neither at the end of the fourth, nor the end of the seventh year. The German people will not emerge defeated from this fight. Instead it will grow firmer and firmer. If something shatters, it will be those so-called world empires which are solely built upon the suppression and ruling of peoples.

We do not permit some narrow-minded propaganda nincompoop to disseminate that it is only one regime that must be fought against. These people do not lead wars themselves; instead, they look all around the world to find those who lead them. They supply cannons and grenades and others supply the soldiers.

What an irresponsibility! What would be said if we had ever declared that the regimes in France and England are not to our liking and that hence we must make war? What a mean irresponsibility! For such purposes millions of men are hurled into death. We shall see how long these gentlemen who have not been in the field for one hour will hold out in this war.

"We Accept the Gauntlet"

There is, however, no doubt about one thing: We accept the gauntlet and we shall fight in the same manner as our opponents. England already has begun the fight against women and children with hypocrisy and lies. They have a weapon which they think is unbeatable, namely, domination of the seas. On the seas they say England cannot be attacked and that therefore they are justified in waging a war with that weapon against women and children, not only of the enemy but of neutrals.

They should have no illusions. The time could rapidly come when we apply a weapon against which we cannot be attacked. Let us hope that they then suddenly do not remember humanity. We Germans do not want to do it. It is not along our lines. In this campaign I gave orders to spare cities if possible. Naturally, if a column marches across a marketplace and is attacked by airplanes, it may happen that somebody else is the victim.

As a rule we have maintained the principle of sparing cities and civilian populations. At places where idiotic or mad or criminal elements did not resist, not a single window pane was shattered. In a city like Cracow not a single bomb fell into the city except at the railway station and at the airdrome. If, on the other hand, in Warsaw there now begins a war of civilians, in all streets and from all houses, then, of course, this war will include the entire city.

It is also up to England to lead the blockade along lines which comply with international law or along lines which contradict international law. We shall adapt ourselves to this warfare. There should be no mistake about one thing. The English aim logically no longer is a war against a regime, but a war against the German people, against German women and children. The reaction here will be a similar one. One thing will be certain: this Germany does not capitulate. We know exactly what the fate of this Germany would be. Mr. King-Hall [Comdr. Stephen King-Hall, English publicist] on orders of his masters has informed us: a second (treaty) but still worse than the Versailles treaty.

The first Versailles treaty was intended to annihilate twenty million Germans. Thus the second may nearly realize this intention. Meanwhile we received further illustrations of how Germany shall be divided up, how southern German countries shall be torn away, what Poland will obtain again, what new states shall be erected, which princes shall be crowned again, etc. The German people take due notice thereof, and will fight accordingly.

Germans Are Determined

The German people in the last few weeks gave a remarkable demonstration not only of its inner determination, but of actual courage. The German people are much more enthusiastic than in 1914. But now it is not a superficial hurrah patriotism, but an emphatic determination of the enthusiasm of men who know what war is and who have not gone into this war frivolously, but who are determined to conduct this war which was forced upon them as was done on the old front.

We all know the horrors of these events but are determined to bring them to a successful conclusion, come what may. We have only one wish—that Almighty God who now has blessed our weapons may give other peoples light to see how purposeless this contest is. We pray He may cause them to reflect on the blessings of peace which they are sacrificing merely because a handful of war agitators want to involve peoples in conflict.

Whatever burdens may fall to the lot of individual Germans in the next few months and years, they will be easy in view of the consciousness of firm unity which binds our people together.

I accept you, my dear Danzig compatriots, into this brotherhood of unity, determined never again to allow you to be drawn away. This determination is, at the same time, a precept for the whole movement and all Germany:

Danzig was German, is German and remains so as long as there is a German people and empire for which we are determined to stand until the last breath. This Germany of the German national community of all Germans, the greater German Reich. Sieg Heil!

SEP 20 1939

British Reply

LONDON, Sept. 19 (AP).—The text of the British official statement replying to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech follows:

Herr Hitler's speech is full of the crass misstatements which usually fall from his lips and to which the world has now become accustomed. It is surprising that a man in his responsible position should venture to convict himself so palpably out of his own mouth. Thus for example we now hear from Herr Hitler:

"At that time there lived in Poland a man of energy and action. I tried in common with Marshal Pilsudski to find a solution that would secure peace. In this we put aside the Versailles treaty and attempted to reach a voluntary solution."

SEP 20 1939

"After the death of Marshal Pilsudski, however, the mortal fight against all Germans in Poland began anew. This fight naturally embittered and ruined the relations between the two nations.

"It was possible for us only with difficulty to look on while the German minority was barbarously ill-treated. The world, which is always shaken to the depths when a Polish Jew who has recently emigrated to Germany is deported, remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment."

So says Herr Hitler.

Cite Good Polish-Reich Relations

The world remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment for the very good reasons that from the time of Marshal Pilsudski's death until this spring Herr Hitler represented his relations with Poland as excellent. No word was said in Germany of the maltreatment of Germans in Poland. On the contrary, this is how Herr Hitler himself described his friendship for Poland.

In the Reichstag on May 21, 1935:

"We recognize the Polish state as the home of a great patriotic nation with the understanding and the cordial friendship of candid nationalists."

In the Reichstag on Feb. 20, 1938:

"[illegible] fifth year [illegible] followed [illegible] conclusion [illegible] of the first great international conference concluded by the Reich, we state with genuine admiration that our relations with that state with which we had perhaps the greatest antagonism, are not only characterized by a detente, but that in the course of the past years these relations resulted in a more and more friendly drawing together.

"I know full well that this is chiefly due to the fact that at that time there was no ta western parliamentarian in Warsaw but a Polish marshal, whose commanding personality realized the importance for Europe of such a detente between Germany and Poland.

"The value of this was que-

30.24 3447

tioned by many at the time, but it has now passed that test; and I may well say that since the League of Nations has ceased its continuous efforts at disturbance in Danzig and appointed a new commissioner, a man of personality, this most dangerous place for the peace of Europe has entirely lost its menacing significance.

"The Polish state respects the national conditions in this country, and that city and Germany respects Polish rights. Thus it was possible to find the way to an understanding which, emanating from Danzig, in spite of the assertions of many mischief makers, has succeeded in removing all friction between Germany and Poland and made it possible to work together in true amity."

1938 Speech Is Quoted

Once again in this Sport Palast on Sept. 26, 1938 Herr Hitler said:

"Poland was ruled by a man and not by a democracy. With his collaboration it was possible to bring about in less than one year an agreement, which, to begin with, excluded the danger of a clash for a period of ten years. We are all convinced that this agreement will result in a lasting appeasement. We realize that there are two nations which must live side by side and neither of which is in a position to eliminate the other.

"A state with 33,000,000 inhabitants will always strive to have an outlet to the sea. It was therefore necessary to find a way to an understanding. This way has been found and will be consolidated. . . . This was really a peaceful action which is worth more than the whole of the babbling at the palace of the League of Nations in Geneva."

To return to the present speech.

Herr Hitler asks further on, with reference to his proposals for a settlement:

"I do not know in what state of mind the Polish government could have been to reject such proposals."

The answer is that the Polish government had before their eyes the shameful betrayal of the solemn assurances given by the German government at Munich. They knew that these demands were only the preliminary to further exactions. If Herr Hitler had wished to inspire confidence in his word he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises.

Tale of Broken Promises

"Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe," was an undertaking which had been broken too flagrantly and too often. The tale of Herr Hitler's broken promises is so long that he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limied and that Germany has no further asnirations in the west.

And now compare what Herr Hitler tells us of Russia with what he told us when it was Herr von Ribbentrop's mission to persuade Great Britain of the Russian peril.

This is what he says now:

"We have found that it is in the best interests of both our nations to have an understanding with each other. Thus the British assertion of the unlimited world political aspirations of Germany is finally contradicted. We shall never again fight a war in the interests of the western democracies. Make a note of that, my English gentlemen."

This is what he said then (in the Reichstag on Jan. 30, 1937):

Bolshevism is the doctrine of world revolution, of world destruction. . . . As far as Germany is concerned, I do not want to leave any doubt as to the following:

"1. We look upon Bolshevism as upon an intolerable danger to the world.

"2. We shall try and keep this danger away from the German Volk (people) by every means at our command.

"3. We are, therefore, endeavoring to make the German Volk as immune as possible from this contagion.

SEP 20 1939

"Avoid Close Contacts"

"For this it is necessary that we should avoid all close contacts with the bearers of these poisonous baccilli. . . . I request the German workers to avoid all contacts and relations with these international parasites, and consequently, it will never occur that one will see me dining and wining with them. Furthermore, any treaty links between Germany and present-day Bolshevist Russia would be without any value whatsoever."

Again at the Nuernberg (Nuremberg) party rally on Sept. 14, 1937:

"I reject most emphatically to be joined up with those whose program is the destruction of Europe and who do not even try to conceal this program. To refuse to collaborate with such elements does not mean to isolate one's self but to secure one's self."

Again, in the Reichstag on Feb. 20, 1938:

"There is only one state with which we have never sought close relationships and with which we do not want to have any close relationships. I mean Soviet Russia."

"We must look upon Bolshevism as upon the incarnation of the destructive qualities of human nature, and we do so even more than ever before."

There is no question of Great Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children.

The German government have already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany, but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German government can legitimately complain.

Finally Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts.

He was determined to war and hoped to the last that Great Britain would not fulfill her treaty obligations to Poland.

SEP 20 1939

It was only two days after the invasion of Poland, when no reply had been received to the British communication, that an ultimatum was addressed to the German government.

French Reply

Paris Rejects Hitler Peace

PARIS, Sept. 19 (AP).—The French government made known tonight its determination to prosecute the European war in spite of Soviet Russia's invasion of Poland.

A semi-official statement on the eve of a Cabinet meeting tomorrow said that France would continue to carry out her war policy in cooperation with Great Britain.

"The occupation of part of Poland by the Russian Army cannot affect in any way the position taken by the two great democracies." the statement said.

The implied bid of Feuhrer Adolf Hitler for peace on his own terms was rejected. Der Fuehrer's first speech since the start of the European war, declaring that Germany had no war aims against Britain or France, was made public here late tonight through a semi-official dispatch from Switerland.

A formal statement issued simultaneously to the press replied: "France and Britain will not let the dictatorship of Hitler condemn the world to slavery and ruin of all moral values and the destruction of liberty."

Sources close to the government said French Embassies abroad already had received instructions to notify nations to which they were accredited that France and Great Britain were determined to prosecute the war until the Nazi regime is crushed.

Hitler's speech, in semi-official comments, was called a "poor appeal for internal consumption in Germany."

SEP 20 1939

"CRASS MISSTATEMENTS" CHARGED TO FÜHRER IN OFFICIAL BRITISH REPLY

Communique Assails "Tale Of Broken Promises" In Danzig Talk—London Still Determined To Spurn Any Nazi Peace Bid

SEP 20 1939

(By the Associated Press)

By Robt. Bunnelle

London, Sept. 19—Authoritative quarters reiterated Britain's determination to say "No" to any Nazi peace offer tonight as an official communique charged Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech was "full of crass misstatements."

The statement gave a lengthy review of "the tale of Herr Hitler's broken promises" and said "he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited and that Germany has no further aspirations in the West."

Chamberlain To Report

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who has asserted repeatedly that "Hitlerism must be smashed" if there is to be lasting peace in Europe, will give his third report on the war to Parliament tomorrow.

Considerable interest was centered on his appearance in the light of Hitler's statement in his speech today that Germany and Soviet Russia would determine Poland's future.

"It is surprising that a man in his responsible position should venture to convict himself so palpably out of his own mouth," the official British statement said of Hitler.

Poles Remembered Munich

Commenting on Hitler's remark that he could not understand why the Polish Government rejected his proposals, the statement said:

"The answer is that the Polish Government had before their eyes the shameful betrayal of the solemn assurances given by the German Government at Munich.

"They knew that these demands were only the preliminary to future exactions.

"If Herr Hitler had wished to inspire confidence in his word he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises. 'Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe' was an undertaking which had been broken too flagrantly and too often."

Nazi Charge Scorned

Referring to Hitler's charge that Britain through its blockade was waging war on women and children, the statement said:

"There is no question of Great Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children. The German Government has already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German Government can legitimately complain.

Account "A Travesty"

"Finally, Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts. He was determined on war and hoped to the last that Great Britain would not fulfill her treaty obligations to Poland.

SEP 20 1939

"It was only two days after the invasion of Poland, when no reply had been received to the British communication, that an ultimatum was addressed to the German Government."

The statement compares Hitler's present views of Russia with what "he told us when it was Herr von Ribbentrop's mission to persuade Great Britain of the Russian peril.

What Hitler Says Now

"This is what he says now:

" 'We have found that it is in the best interests of both our nations to have an understanding with each other. Thus the British assertion of the unlimited world political aspirations of Germany is finally contradicted. We shall never again fight a war in the interests of the western democracies. Make a note of that my English gentlemen.'

"This is what he said then (in the Reichstag on January 30, 1937):

" 'Bolshevism is the doctrine of world revolution, of word destruction . . . as far as Germany is concerned I do not want to leave any doubt as to the following:

" '1. We look upon Bolshevism as an intolerable danger to the world.

" '2. We shall try and keep this danger away from the German volk (people) by every means at our command.

" '3. We are, therefore, endeavoring to make the German volk as immune as possible from this contagion.

Warns Of Parasites

" 'For this it is necessary that we should avoid all close contacts with the bearers of these poisonous baccilli. . . . I request the German workers to avoid all contacts and relations with these international parasites, and consequently it will never occur that one will see me dining and wining with them. Furthermore, any treaty links between Germany and present-day Bolshevist Russia would be without any value whatsoever.'

"Again at the Nürnburg party rally on the September 14, 1937:

" 'I reject most emphatically to be joined up with those whose programme is the destruction of Europe and who do not even try to conceal this programme to refuse to collaborate with such elements does not mean to isolate oneself but to secure oneself.'

Reichstag Talk Cited

"Again, in the Reichstag on February 20, 1938:

" 'There is only one state with which we have never sought close relationships and with which we do not want to have any close relationships. I mean Soviet Russia.

" 'We must look upon Bolshevism as upon the incarnation of the destructive qualities of human nature, and we do so even more than ever before.' "

The British Broadcasting Corporation broadcast in Polish tonight a message to Warsaw from "the British people," asserting "all the world is admiring your courage. Once again Poland has fallen victim to the aggressive designs of her neighbors. . . . We, your allies, intend to continue the struggle for restoration of your liberties."

King Visits Troops

King George paid a surprise visit to troops in training in the west of England. He lunched seated on a rug behind a haystack.

Other activities on the British war

1939

front:

Maj. Gen. Edward Windsor, Britain's former ruler, visited the Foreign Office.

Clement R. Attlee, opposition leader, and Arthur Greenwood, deputy Labor leader, called on Chamberlain.

Queen Elizabeth organized a work party to make hospital bandages and garments.

Pocket testaments with a special message from the King were orders for all soldiers and sailors.

Casualty List Out

The Air Ministry tonight issued its first casualty list, reporting seventeen officers and men missing. Only one was listed as "believed killed." Three were "believed prisoners of war" and the others just "missing."

Former President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia, in a B. B. C. radio broadcast tonight, urged the Czech and Slovak peoples to "stand by y- obligations to your fatherland."

"Millions of men and millions of tons of material are prepared for the decisive blow against Hitlerism," he said.

"The Czecho-Slovak army in foreign countries will enter the fight."

Der Fuehrer Tells Danzigers That Poland of Versailles Will Never Again Rise and He Is Ready for 7-year Struggle.

LOCHNER

DANZIG, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler assured France and England today that he had "no war aims" against them, but declared that Poland as created by the Treaty of Versailles "never again will rise."

He warned the Western Powers that Germany never would surrender and was prepared for as much as seven years of war if necessary.

In a speech of an hour and fourteen minutes Der Fuehrer dwelt at length on what he called his efforts to bring about friendly relations with Great Britain and France.

He spoke in the medieval guild house of the Hanseatic League as the climax of his first visit to Danzig since he gathered the former Free City into the Reich and after a frenzied welcome by the populace.

He declared that Germany and Russia, "instead of being troublemakers, are going to organize peace in the east."

Says Russia Concurs in Pledge.

"In the west and south," he shouted, "Germany made important concessions hoping to bring about definite peace in Europe. We believe we would have been successful had downright war agitators not always upset our efforts."

He said that Russia concurred in his promise that the Poland of the post-Versailles days would not "rise" again. As Europe's "two greatest nations," Russia and Germany are the only ones "entitled to re-establish law and order in eastern Europe," he declared.

Referring to the British assertions that the war might last for three years, he said that "it will be dependent upon us if the war lasts that long."

"If it should last three years," he declared, "the word surrender will not stand at its end, nor will it stand at the end of the fourth, fifth, sixth or seventh year, for they (Allies) are not facing a Germany of Bethmann-Hollweg, (the German Chancellor of 1914), but a Germany of Friedrician time (meaning that of Frederick the Great)."

Denies He Seeks the Ukraine.

For what was believed to be the first time, Hitler publicly stated he does "not want the Ukraine"—the Russian territory which, on the basis of his own book "Mein Kampf," many believed to be the kernel of his eastern policy.

This statement, he said, should have a "quieting effect" on the Edens and the Churchills—outstanding British opponents of a policy of appeasing Germany.

As he concluded his seventy-four-minute speech, he admitted that the German people were not "displaying the same enthusiasm as in 1914, but down deep they have the enthusiasm to win the war."

"My offer to England you know," he said. "I wanted to achieve a real friendship. But if England today thinks it is necessary to make war on Germany, it will be disappointed."

Great Britain, he said, has "revealed its real war aims—destruction of the Nazi regime."

He reviewed what he presented as his attempts to reach a peaceful solution of the Polish problem, mentioning his offers to Poland.

Calls His Course Too Moderate.

"I attempted to find a way to connect East Prussia with the Reich and provide an outlet to the sea for Poland," he said. "I was too moderate. But I did it because I wanted to spare the German, as well as the Polish people, the other solution.

"In return for these I was ready to guarantee the Polish borders despite hardly bearable conditions. I don't know what state of mind the Polish Government was in when it refused this offer. The former Polish Foreign Minister (Beck) refused my invitation to come to Berlin and talk things over again. Instead he want to London."

Then he asked:

"Who could have made Poland so blind?"

After a triumphant entry into Danzig, Hitler said earlier in his address that the Germany of today "no longer is a country to which ultimatums can be dictated."

Will Answer Bomb for Bomb.

"We will give bomb against bomb, not only one but 500 bombs!" he shouted.

Reviewing the events leading up to Germany's invasion of Poland, Hitler declared in an international broadcast, carried into the United States, that the state of affairs became "impossible" in September after he had believed in August that it would be possible to come to an understanding.

He said he had suffered much from Poland in the last six years but he had not sent them an ultimatum.

Citing attempts by Premier Mussolini to bring a peaceful settlement of the dispute, he said, England intervened. Then he shouted:

"England sent an ultimatum to Germany, but the day is past when any one can send an ultimatum to the Reich."

Hitler said he earlier had attempted to find a "reasonable solution to the problem," but indicated it became impossible with the death of Poland's Marshal, Joseph Pilsudski.

Calls Germany a Superior State.

He had sought, he said, to establish borders in the west and south and to make an agreement with Pilsudski which had as its purpose amicable relations between the Poles and the Germans.

"As long as Pilsudski lived this was possible," he said.

Der Fuehrer said he was depressed by suffering the Nazis endured at the hands of an inferior State, "while Germany was a superior State."

He told the world that nations doubting the word of German statesmen should also be critical of the statesmen of the countries which forced the Versailles Treaty on the Germans. The Versailles peace offers, he said, spelled "stupidity," and cast doubt on the sanity of the men who made them.

Poland sought to make Poles out of German inhabitants of that country, he cried, and asked what England, France or America would have done under those circumstances.

Hitler Introduced by Foerster.

Hitler started speaking at 5:16 P. M. (12:16 P. M. New York time).

He was introduced by Albert Foerster, Nazi leader of Danzig, who said that Hitler had corrected the "injustices of the Versailles Treaty."

A silence fell over the crowd a moment later when Hitler, speaking at first in a calm voice, began addressing them.

This great moment, Der Fuehrer said, was not for Danzig alone, but for all the German people.

The fate of Danzig, Hitler said, was the fate of all Germany.

The world war, he continued, "made no sense."

The peace imposed on the Germans at Versailles, continued Hitler, had worked great oppression, but the time had come for them to live again.

All the Polish territory taken away from Germany at the end of the world war held the best in German labor and culture, he said.

"Only those who are culturably created have the right to exist," he said.

Glad Terms Were Rejected.

Poland tried to make the German inhabitants of the Polish territory into Poles, he shouted.

Poland had received proposals from Hitler which he said he thought he should never have made and which he thought he would have difficulty explaining to his people.

"I cannot understand why Poland did not accept those proposals and the German people today are happy they did not accept them," he declared.

Instead of accepting them, Hitler said, the Poles turned toward London.

He contended that Polish newspapers published stories that the problem was not of boundaries, but one of boundaries and whether the Poles should defeat Germany in front or "in back of Berlin."

As he continued, his voice rose to the shrill pitch characterizing him in moments of excitement.

"The man who had spoken thusly," Hitler said, "was a Polish general who has deserted his army."

The Poles were told they could resist Germany, and if they were not strong enough, they could in any case expect the help of others, he said.

Names British Statesmen.

Hitler said that English statesmen like Churchill, Eden, Duff-Cooper and others always preached war.

"In September the state of affairs became impossible, and yet in the days of August I believed it was still possible to come to an understanding," he said. He added that he went to Berlin and "waited and waited" and even worked out some new proposals, but "nothing happened except a general mobilization by Poland."

"For years I have been extremely patient," he went on.

For years he asserted he begged to change the state of affairs, but he knew "an end must come."

At one time peace again seemed 1939

30.24-3449

30.24 3449

possible, he said, when Premier Mussolini made proposals to France, but England intervened.

"Poland chose war, and the statesmen of the west told her that Germany was poorly equipped and that, moreover, there was social unrest," he said.

"Eighteen days have passed and the fact is that they were beaten by a race of men," he thundered, while the crowd took up his enthusiasm anew and cheered.

"They have been beaten and at this moment countless columns of Poles are retreating."

Hitler cited figures to back up his assertions that thousands of prisoners had been taken and said it was only a matter of hours before the Poles would be completely beaten.

SEP 20 1939

"The statesmen have been shown what the German Army can do and now they ought to have the proper point of view," he asserted. "The German troops have done their duty on the land as well as in the air."

Germany always has been invincible, he said, and the Germans have shown again their invincibility in this war with their unsurpassed weapons, their motorized units and their great air force.

Lays Attitude to Poles.

It must be admitted, he said, that the Poles were responsible for many atrocities.

"Women were massacred, men were massacred, and their eyes were stabbed out and they were killed when they lay wounded," he asserted.

He said he had given orders to the air force to conduct their warfare humanely, but they had been ambushed.

"Here also will my patience come to an end," he said.

Russia entered Poland only to protect her minorities, Hitler said. The attempted agreement between Russia and England had failed, he continued, but Germany and Russia had come to an agreement.

"But I wish to make one explanation," he said, "Russia will remain what it is, and Germany will remain what it is. We have made the greatest and best arrangement between ourselves."

British statesmen will be glad to learn now of his intentions, he said.

Germany had talked matters over with Russia and the German objectives "are extremely limited."

Ridicules British Nightmare.

"The nightmare of the British statesmen should now be dismissed," he said, referring to what he described as their charges that he aimed at world conquest.

"Our interests are very limited, but we shall protect them against any man, and that we will not allow ourselves to be toyed with in this respect, I think the last eighteen days have shown."

'Poland Will Never Arise.'

He tried to arrange and have friendly relations with Italy, he said, and succeeded, and tried to do the same thing with France.

"My offers to England are known, they were refused, and England thinks she must have war with Germany. I can only reply this: Poland will never arise as it was arranged in the treaty of Versailles."

Continuing, he said:

"Now the real causes of the war must be told to everybody. First it was Poland. Then it was the German regime and even I had the honor of being named."

Any German regime approved by Churchill, Eden, Duff-Cooper and others would be intolerable to the German people, he shouted.

"I am proud to be attacked by them," he declared. "If they think they can alienate the German people from me they are wrong and stupid.

"I have not educated the German people in vain for the last twenty years."

The National Socialist party, he said, has assumed the burden of carrying on the battle, and it cannot be hurt by "foolish propaganda."

"If they want to learn something about propaganda, they should come to us to be taught," he said.

Sorry for French Soldiers.

At this point Hitler had been speaking an hour.

Since the war is going to last "three years," he said he could only express sympathy for the French soldiers.

If it should last that long, the word "surrender" would not be there, he continued.

"Nor at the end of the sixth or the seventh year," he added.

"If there are any people who are going to be split up, it won't be the German people. We will not be misled by the propaganda of others.

"We will fight as our adversaries will.

"One country claims to have a sea force which cannot be attacked, but before long we also shall have a sea force which cannot be attacked."

In principle, he added, Germany had carried through its determination not to attack women and children, but there were cases when the wounding and killing of noncombatants could not be avoided.

For the future, he promised Germany would be humane in its conduct of the war.

"We will act as others act toward us," he asserted. "England's objective is not only the German regime, but also the German men and women and children.

"It has been said that Germany should be destroyed, and the first Treaty of Versailles was enacted for that purpose. Possibly a second treaty would attempt the same thing.

"I wish to express my thanks to the German people. They have given us proofs of their courageous will."

—Danzig was a city of joy in the midst of war as it prepared today to welcome Adolf Hitler, who was scheduled to speak to the populace of the former Free City, now rejoined to Germany.

Every home was decorated. Flags, pictures of Hitler, swastika-marked bunting, laurel and other wreaths, and strips of gilded paper were used.

"The Liberator"

Streamers across buildings and from one side of the street to the other carried inscriptions:

"We thank our Führer"; "To the liberator of Danzig"; "Our hearts beat for our Führer."

Hitler was to speak in the Artushof, the medieval guild hall of the Hanseatic League.

The streets through which he was to pass were announced by radio and from early morning crowds lined them—in bright sunshine; what Germans call "Hitler weather."

Danzig was virtually cleared of Poles. About 1,000 were interned after Germany took over the city on September 1, but 500 were released. Those still held are men of arms-bearing age, mostly postal and customs officials who functioned in Danzig under the pre-war arrangement, and other civil servants.

PARIS ANNOUNCES IT IS DETERMINED TO CONTINUE WAR

Daladier Cabinet to Meet Tomorrow — Allies Stiffen Defenses.

SEP 20 1939

PARIS, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The French Government tonight made known its determination to prosecute the European war in spite of Soviet Russia's invasion of Poland.

A semi-official statement on the eve of a cabinet meeting tomorrow said that France would continue to carry out her war policy in cooperation with Britain.

"The occupation of part of Poland by the Russian Army can not affect in any way the position taken by the two great democracies," the statement said.

France and Great Britain strengthened their war line on the western front today in anticipation of a major battle as soon as German reenforcements are rushed back from Poland.

German Movement Speeded.

The entry of the Red armies from Russia into war-battered Poland was viewed here as speeding the task of the German divisions in the east and making more men and equipment available for defense of the West Wall.

French reports said that the nation's Colonial troops — Senegalese, Algerians, Tunisians, Madagascans, Tonkinese, Annamese and Cambodians—were mobilized fully and ready to bolster the French attack. The number of Colonial troops was described as considerably in excess of the total of effective fighting men called to the tri-color during the first world war.

The French General Staff's communique for the evening said:

"An enemy local attack in the region east of the Blies was repulsed.

"Activity of enemy aviation in the same region."

Attack Is Repulsed.

In the regular morning communique, the French General Staff today announced the repulse of a localized German attack, launched during the night "in the region east of the Saar River." The communique did not specify where the fighting took place, but it was believed to be in the shell-pounded region south of Saarbruecken, where French and German forces have fought numerous minor engagements.

British troops were said to have moved into position in the area of France's Maginot Line through tunnels to the vast defense works.

Re-enforcements, the French said, were moving up steadily from the rear through world war battle sites and the crumbling concrete works of Germany's old Hindenburg Line.

Through Neutral Countries.

Meanwhile, the belief was expressed that Berlin would aim a diplomatic campaign at such neutral countries as Belgium, The Netherlands, Rumania and the Balkan nations. There was a feeling, too, that Germany, which is not in a position, the French say, to afford a long war, would strike hard in the west—perhaps even through neutral territory, according to some observers.

Officially France has apparently decided to wait and study the full significance of the Russian invasion of Poland before making any declaration in that regard. The press, however, continued to attack Soviet "brutality and treason to peace."

Reports that German and Russian troops had met at Brest-Litovsk brought predictions that representatives of the two countries might meet in that city to decide Poland's fate.

One Communist deputy was reported to have quit the party, and the French General Confederation of Labor, which a few years ago amalgamated with communist trade unions, called on all leaders and workers to sever any ties with Moscow. A resolution signed by executives of the federation termed the invasion of Poland "treason to the proletariat."

French sources said that the only choice for the Poles was flight to neutral countries, surrender or guerrilla warfare.

French

Paris, Sept. 19 (A)—The French general staff issued the following communique this morning:

A local attack was launched by the enemy during the night in the region east of the Saar river. This attack has been repulsed.

SEP 20 1939

NAZIS OPEN ATTACK ON POILUS IN NORTH

Infantry Charges Across No Man's Land Under Cover Of Artillery Barrage

SEP 20 1939

Heart Of Northern Flank Hit. Paris Asserts Enemy Was Repulsed

BY RADIO TELEPHOTO

[By the Associated Press.]

Paris, Sept. 19—Under cover of a heavy artillery barrage, German troops were reported tonight to have struck in the heart of the northern flank on the Western front and been turned back by French forces.

The German armies, with victory over Poland on the Eastern front virtually complete, took the initiative against the French in the west.

The French general staff's communique said the Germans' "partial attack" was met and turned back during the night east of the Saar river. It was the first major attack by Germany on the Western front since Soviet Russia invaded Poland Sunday, helping German frontal assaults to crush France's eastern ally.

East Of Blies River

The French general staff's evening communique described the place where another German attack had been turned back as east of the Blies river.

The Blies river is about eleven miles east of Saarbrücken and flows northeastward from near the French town of Sarraguemines toward the German town of Blieskastel. Paralleling it about four miles distant is the Bickenalbe river, running northeastward from near the French town of Volmunster toward the German town of Zweibrücken.

The communique also said German aviation was active in the same region.

Reports reaching Basle tonight said that French troops, basing their action from Sarreguemines on the south and the Blies on the east, moved northeast this morning and captured the German village of Bebelsheim, three miles from Sarreguemines, where French artillery had reduced German defenses to rubble. The village had been deserted days ago.

Deeper Advance Reported

In the afternoon the French were reported to have surrounded the village of Wittersheim, a mile and a half deeper in German territory. Both villages stand on the main Sarreguemines-Zweibruecken highway and on the bank of Mandel Creek, which parallels the Blies. Between them on the west is a hill that commands the comparatively unprotected left flank of the German trenches and forts defending Saarbruecken. Reports that the French already had captured this hill and were shelling German positions from it reached Basle but could not be confirmed.

French control of the road to Wittersheim, however, apparently meant that the German forces on the east bank of the Saar and south of Saarbruecken were in an untenable pocket. German troops were reported moving out of a dozen villages in the area.

The suspense which had been hanging over the Western front for forty-eight hours was broken just before dawn today by the German assault.

Charge Near Saarbrücken

French advices said the German infantry charged in the no man's land between Germany's Sierfried Line and the Marginot Line at a point just within German territory. The action was at a point where the French have been filtering through the Nazi trench and pill-box systeem of fortifications toward the important industrial town of Saarbrücken.

The attack was said to have been executed under cover of a heavy artillery barrage by several German companies numbering [illegible] men each.

SEP 20 1939

French troops, who have been digging in as fast as they gained ground during the first two weeks of the war, were reported to have repulsed the attack with machine-gun fire from newly-prepared positions.

Main Lines Unchanged

The main lines of this 100-mile flank, which bulges slightly into western Germany between the Rhine and the Moselle rivers, was unchanged.

Military observers said the real significance of the attack lay in the indication that the Germans were attempting to raid the French lines and take prisoners, apparently in preparation for a large-scale offensive.

Heavy German reinforcements of infantry, artillery and aviation were reported streaming west now that the Polish lines have been slashed to pieces, with only a few knots of resistance remaining to be reduced in the East.

4 Or 5 Others Reported Sunk

On the naval front, where France and Britain have been waging a severe campaign against Germany, French dispatches claimed several successes.

In addition to a German submarine reported sunk last night in the Atlantic, a semi-official statement said four or five similar craft had gone to the bottom under attacks of French warships.

"The submarine warfare has begun under excellent auspices and results obtained at the start of this war are superior to those obtained late in 1918 when the submarine war was at its height," the statement said.

Premier Daladier called the Cabinet to meet tomorrow for a general re-

1939

Nazis Claim 50,000 Captives, 'Immense Booty' After Victory In East

BZURA RIVER AREA FIGHTING REPORTED OVER

German Troops Freed For Concentration Before Warsaw

Gdynia Sector Fight Raging — Invaders Attack By Sea, Land, Air

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 19—The German army, still opposed in Government-abandoned Poland by widely scattered forces, reported today the capture of 50,000 prisoners and "immense booty" after crushing a Polish army in one of the biggest battles on the Eastern front.

The high command's announcement of victory on the Bzura river, west of Warsaw, came as military activity was reported resumed at Warsaw and a force of between 2,000 and 3,000 Polish troops waged a desperate fight against heavy odds west of German-conquered Gdynia, once Poland's seaport.

"Up to now, 50,000 war prisoners have been taken and immense booty captured. The final amount cannot be estimated."

Losses were believed heavy on both sides.

The tersely worded announcement referred to a nine-day engagement along the Bzura north of Lodz, a textile manufacturing center and the second city in size in Poland.

Lodz is about seventy-five miles southwest of Warsaw and the German triumph in the Lodz area apparently relieved thousands of Nazi troops for the attack on the Polish capital, from which the Government of President Ignace Moscicki fled several days ago.

The German high command declared fighting was resumed at Warsaw when an emissary failed to appear to negotiate on the surrender of the city, which was demanded by the Germans last Sunday.

No Word From Warsaw

"The city is being defended by the Poles without regard for the population, which is over a million strong," asserted the German communique.

From Warsaw came no word.

There was no indication of what form the military activity was taking.

The defenders at the tip of what was the Polish Corridor were entrenched in positions on heights west of Gdynia known as Oblosz and in the village of Ochshoeft.

Correspondents who had gone to Danzig for the Hitler speech were taken to the scene and watched the battle from a distance of only two miles.

Apparently the Poles were cut off from the outside world. Prisoners taken by the Germans were said to believe the British were about to come to the aid of the small garrison.

The Poles also seemed to have no anti-aircraft guns, for the scouting planes flew low and were not bothered.

Their artillery fire seemed exact, but not so long ranged as the Germans'. Occasional fire envel[oped] buildings held by German troops and thick smoke over the heights held by the Poles indicated the devastation wrought by both sides.

In southeastern Poland the city of Lwow was called on to surrender to the Germans, the communique said.

Northwest of Lwow, it was reported, some fighting units of the enemy were destroyed and about 10,000 prisoners were captured.

Turning to the Western front, the communique said: "Insignificant artillery and reconnoitering activity occurred at some points in the Saarbrücken region. It was observed that our opponents were doing manifold trench digging. Fighting actions in the air did not occur."

Nazis Report Big Victory.

BERLIN, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—As Adolf Hitler went to flag-decked Danzig, his armies today reported victory in one of the biggest battles of the eastern campaign which has virtually smashed Poland as Soviet troops moved into eastern Polish provinces. Polish forces in northern Poland were said to have been defeated, ending a nine-day battle. A high command communique said 50,000 prisoners had been taken along with "immense booty." Losses on both sides were believed to be heavy.

Despite grave losses the Poles resisted stubbornly throughout the battle in which they were surrounded by German forces slowly closing in on them.

Ring Within Ring.

One curious phase of the engagement occurred when by some freak circumstance a detachment of Germans was surrounded by Poles who in turn were ringed by other German forces. Nazi planes dropped food and gasoline to their men caught in the ring within a ring.

Germans said their trapped forces were rescued last night by Polish capitulation.

The high command communique passed over this dramatic battle with the laconic statement that the "battle at the Bzura River is over. Up to now 50,000 war prisoners have been taken and immense booty captured."

On the western front facing France, the communique said only "insignificant artillery and reconnoitering activity" had occurred.

The Drohobycz oil district in southeastern Poland, about 40 miles from the Hungarian frontier, was reported to have fallen into German hands as Polish forces were pushed across the Hungarian border. The Germans said that a Polish infantry regiment, a cavalry regiment and one tank company had crossed into Hungary.

Warsaw Still Holds Out.

German sources reported turbulent conditions approaching civil strife in Warsaw today as the Polish capital continued to hold out against encircling Nazi troops.

Action to occupy the city was resumed yesterday, the High Command said, after Polish leaders ignored an ultimatum demanding surrender. There was no information here, however, to indicate whether the operations included shelling and bombing from the air.

While the German Army increased its pressure on Warsaw, the High Command issued a communique reporting that elsewhere in Poland "dissolution and capitulation of various enemy forces encircled by our troops continues rapidly."

Informed quarters said today that with most of Poland now in hands of German and Soviet Russian troops, the contention of France and Britain that they must come to Poland's aid had proven an impossible realization. These quarters said French and British treaties with Poland had become pointless and that the two nations are faced again with the question of why they want to wage war against Germany.

Report Warsaw Short of Food.

Announcement of the renewal of assaults upon Warsaw was accompanied by the statement that the city's civilian population was being given every opportunity to flee. From fugitives who already have left Warsaw, the Germans declared, came reports the capital's food supply is virtually exhausted and that confusion prevails.

Apparently no one with sufficient authority to negotiate with German army commanders remains in the city, it was said.

As the battle for possession of Warsaw raged anew, German and Soviet Russian forces, pushing into Poland from opposite directions, met at Brest-Litovsk, 100 miles due east of the capital. Russian revolutionists signed a separate peace with Germany there during the world war.

Military sources indicated a conference between Nazi and Soviet army commanders would be arranged soon, possibly today, to discuss control of Poland pending adjustment of political issues involved. Rumors of another partition of Poland were in the air, but it was said in official quarters these were premature.

Hitler and Stalin in Accord.

Informed circles freely admitted, however, Adolf Hitler and Joseph Stalin had reached agreement as to the steps to be taken in regard to Poland's future.

Exactly what portion of Poland Germany expects to obtain in the event of a partition was not indicated. Berlin newspapers printed maps showing the line held by Nazi forces, and some observers interpreted this as a possible new boundary between a Greater Germany and the Soviet.

The press said 95,000 square miles

---

view of operations.

The question of the dissolution of the Communist party in France, which has been under discussion since Russia signed her non-aggression pact with Germany, was expected to come before the meeting.

SEP 20 1939

Deputies Fight.

A group of Communist Deputies mingled with several Conservatives in a fist fight in a Chamber of Deputies lobby after the Communists issued a statement supporting the Russian march into Poland. The antagonists were quickly separated.

The Premier conferred with Air Minister Guy de Chambre and Gen. Maurice Gamelin and Admiral Jean Darlan, army and navy chiefs, in preparation for the Cabinet meeting. Daladier's aides, August de Ribes and Robert Coulondre, meanwhile, talked with the Polish, Turkish and Belgian ambassadors.

Operations on the Eastern front were acknowledged here to be virtually ended, with only 16 or 17 Polish divisions now estimated to be in positions to carry on a war against 70 divisions and 3,000 planes Germany put into action there.

The Polish Ambassador to France, Jules Lukasiewicz, in a broadcast, however, declared Poles were being recruited abroad and the forces still resisting at home would "continue the war under new conditions with an unyielding determination to vanquish the enemy."

German Morale Is Up.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The morale of Germany's West Wall defenders, as well as their actual fighting strength, was reported today to have been boosted by the arrival of captured Polish guns and other equipment and the allocation of several thousand warplanes no longer needed on the eastern front.

The German man power had already been increased greatly by a shift of army divisions from the east.

Along the Rhine, Saar and Moselle River valleys the German watchword became: "We have finished our part in the Polish campaign; now we will hold the Siegfried Line against the French."

SEP 20 1939

French Fight.

The French tell, however, that they had demonstrated their ability to cling to their gains despite the repeated counter-attacks and "over-the-top" direct assaults of the past week.

Breaking down their attack into a system of infiltration, spearheaded by small units, the French had advanced their battle line steadily through pillbox-guarded advance posts to a line roughly parallel to the Siegfried defenses.

Typical of the French forward movement has been the penetration along the Blies Creek front, between the rich industrial center of Saarbruecken—still objective No. 1 of the drive—and Zweibruecken, sixteen miles farther east. There the boundary runs east and west, and the French attack is from the south.

Ten Miles Into Germany.

Well-equipped patrols, sometimes supported by tanks, first were reported to have wiped out enemy advance positions, usually without the use of artillery. Then, after concentrated artillery fire, the attackers struck at main defense lines from their captured positions.

Using such tactics, the French were said to have won control of the entire Blies Creek area almost ten miles deep into German territory. That would put them within striking distance of the main Saarbruecken-Zwiebruecken road and give them fire control over the Mandel Creek road from Saarguemines, southeast of Saarbruecken, to the village of Assweiler at the junction of two strategic highways.

The advance was understood to have been exposed to fire from heavy guns in Siegfried Line forts in the St. Ingbert Forest behind Saarbruecken.

Jockeying for Position.

On the western flank, just east of the Moselle, which flows from France along the German-Luxemburg frontier, both side continued jockeying for positions for the Saar valley battle.

A heavy artillery duel was said to be underway, with France's long-range Maginot line guns and lighter field artillery reported having the advantage.

Southeast, in a zone east of the Vosges foothills, frontier patrols closed in for skirmishing that is modern warfare's closest approach to the old hand-to-hand fighting.

The Germans were said to have dynamited clearings 100 yards wide in front of their defense positions, enabling their machine guns to sweep attacking parties.

Land Mines.

There were reports that some French patrols had stumbled onto German land mines, hidden along forest trails, but persisted doggedly in wedging into the section north west of Wissembourg and partly surrounding the Fischbach forts. There, because of hills and forests, warplanes and tanks have have proved of little value. Sharpshooters are perched in treetops to pick off enemy patrols.

Firing was reported yesterday for the first time from German forts at Lauterbourg, where the Rhine River leaves the French frontier. Reports reaching Basle said that the Germans' target was a French railroad from which guns mounted on flat cars have been shelling the German forts near Wissembourg.

Along the rest of the Rhine, big guns in the forts remained quiet. Observation planes from both sides were in the air. French sausage balloons, anchored by cables, floated within easy reach of anti-aircraft batteries across the river.

Some captives taken in repeated German onslaughts against the little contingent near Gydnia were quoted as saying they were "waiting for the British to arrive." The fight in the Gdynia sector was raging furiously when Führer Adolf Hitler arrived at nearby Danzig for his triumphal entry into that city.

The German communique said "dissolution and capitulation of scattered or encircled remnants of the Polish army are progressing rapidly.

Bzura River Battle Over

"The battle of the Bzura river is over.

German land, sea and air forces were reported pounding at the Polish force. The newsmen saw three German waves advance on the fortified positions during an hour's stay and each time the Nazis won some ten yards more of hotly-contested ground.

Planes Guide Artillery

The land forces were supported by scouting planes which dropped signals to guide the artillery. Also blasting away at the Poles were the 9-centimeter (about 11-inch) guns of the German cruiser Schleswig Holstein anchored 10½ miles away in Danzig harbor.

1939

30.24 - 3451

30.24 3451

of Polish territory out of a total of 150,051 had been occupied by German troops.

The line marking the limit of German occupation extended on the maps from a point northwest of Grodno almost straight south to Bialystok, Brest-Litovsk, Wlodawa and Lwow and thence southwest to a point near the Slovak-Hungarian frontier. Brest-Litovsk, situated nearly in the center of this line, is 100 miles due east of Warsaw and about 420 from Berlin.

Calls Eastern Drive Over.

The Nazi press emphasized today the campaign in the east had been concluded.

The Lokal Anzeiger, under the caption "The End of Poland," declared "Poland has fallen to pieces." The paper blamed the Poles and their inability to govern themselves for their recent situation.

That Germany considers the Polish war virtually concluded also was indicated by an army communique saying the air force on the eastern front had reported it is ready for action elsewhere.

Confirmation of the German view that the Polish State no longer exists was seen by official circles in the fact that neither France nor Britain has declared war on Russia for invading Poland.

The arrival in Berlin of Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi, member of the Japanese Supreme War Council, and three high staff officers was regarded in official circles as significant, and characterized as "very symptomatic." Newspapers prominently displayed stories concerning the visit, but made no comment.

As a mark of special honor, it was learned, Count Terauchi will be taken to the eastern front tomorrow to see the German Army in action and confer with Hitler.

German

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP)—The German Army high command today issued the following communique on operations in Poland:

Dissolution and capitulation of various enemy groups encircled by German forces continues rapidly.

SEP 20 1939

The enemy encircled south of the Vistula between Warsaw and Kutno, southwest of Wyzogrod, is defeated and in a stage of complete dissolution. The number of prisoners taken and the amount of war material captured cannot be estimated at the present time.

The German Supreme Army Command issued the following communique:

Dissolution and capitulation of scattered or encircled remnants of the Polish army are progressing rapidly. The battle at the Bzura river is over. Up to now, 50,000 war prisoners have been taken and immense booty captured. The final amount cannot yet be estimated.

Northwest of Lwow smaller fighting units of the enemy were destroyed, and 10,000 prisoners were taken. Lwow was asked to surrender.

Military activity was resumed at Warsaw after the Polish emissary failed to appear. The city is being defended by the Poles without regard for the population, which is over a million strong.

The air foce yesterday conducted only individual raids. On the Western front, insignificant artillery and reconnoitering activity occurred at some points in the Saarbücken region. It was observed that our opponents were doing manifold trench digging.

Fighting actions in the air did not occur.

The sinking of the airplane carrier Courageous as announced by the British Admiralty was confirmed by a report of the German submarine which attacked the carrier.

Poles Hold Out Near Gdynia

Little Force, Cut Off From World, Believes British Assistance Is on Way.

SEP 20 1939

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

GDYNIA, Poland, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Some 2,000 or 3,000 Polish troops were desperately waging a fight against great odds today on the heights west of Gdynia known as Oblosz and in the village of Ochshoeft, because, as some captives said, "we are waiting for the British to arrive."

Witnesses watched the battle from a distance of only two miles, on the eastern height above Gdynia, known as Steinberg.

By the time Adolf Hitler had arrived at Zoppot, the Danzig beach resort, shortly after 2 P. M. (9 A. M., New York time), this fight seemed at its height, with Germany's armed might on land, sea and air pounding away at the Polish positions.

Also within thirty minutes I saw both the city putting on its Sunday best to receive Der Fuehrer and the conquered port of Gdynia showing marks of the armed conflict. Here solemn people walked about, seemingly not knowing what to do with themselves unless they happened to be standing in long queues to get ration cards or comply with some other formality of the German army of occupation.

Three Waves of Troops.

Standing on Steinberg height east of Gdynia some sixty correspondents from the four corners of the globe saw the Germans advance in three waves on Oblosz height. Each time during our one hour's stay they won some ten yards more of hotly contested ground. Each attack was preceded by scouting planes dropping light signals to guide the artillery.

They were supported by the cruiser Schleswig Holstein shooting from Danzig harbor ten and one-half miles away and later by bombers unloading their deadly cargo on the hapless Poles.

The Poles apparently had no communication with the outside world and, according to the captives, still believed the British were about to come. They also seemed to have no anti-aircraft guns, for the planes flew low and unmolested.

Depressing Peace in Gdynia.

The Polish artillery fire seemed exact, but not so long ranged as the Germans'. Occasional fire enveloped buildings held by German troops and thick smoke over the heights held by the Poles indicated the devastation wrought by both sides.

Later we descended into Gdynia, Poland's modern port. Broken windows, holes in the houses, and occasional smashed walls showed that, here too, the war had raged.

But now there was peace—depressing peace. For most stores were still closed, most shop windows still boarded up, and business life stagnant. While Polish signs for the most part were left in place, the occupying army lost no time in renaming the principal thoroughfare of the city in German: Adolf Hitler Strasse.

WARSAW

CITY PRESENTS PITIFUL SIGHT, RADIO REPORTS

But Announcer Asserts "We Will Fight To The Last Drop"

Says Buildings, Museums And Art Galleries Are In Ruins

SEP 20 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 19—Warsaw's defiance of the German army's demand for surrender was broadcast again by the Polish capital's radio tonight after a day-long shelling and bombardment.

The announcer in a tired voice recited in English a story of devastation resulting from the twelve-day-old siege.

"Warsaw presents a very pitiful sight," he said. "Buildings, monuments, museums and art galleries are in ruins. We will fight to the last drop and never surrender."

Ultimatum Rejected

The German army delivered an ultimatum to the Warsaw population, dropping leaflets from airplanes, last Saturday, ordering it to evacuate the capital under threat of bombardment. Polish authorities rejected the ultimatum.

Prominent Hungarians today formed a committee to aid Polish refugees.

One committee, of which Mme. Nicholas Horthy, wife of Hungary's regent, was reported to be patroness, arranged for Hungarians to take Polish women and children into their homes for the duration of the war.

Frontier reports said two Polish infantry battalions crossed from Sianki and Uzok and were received with honors by Hungarian border guards.

BUFFER STATE REGIME READY IN POLISH AREA

SEP 20 1939

Pro-German, Pro-Russian Government to Sue at Once for Peace.

NAZIS HAVE MAPS DRAWN UP

Charts Showing Partition Plans Appear in Rumania as Berlin Reports Foes' Collapse.

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Reports from across the Polish border today said that a new pro-German, pro-Russian regime was about to be established in Poland, replacing the Government of President Ignace Moscicki, Foreign Minister Jozef Beck, Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz and other Polish leaders who now are refugees in Rumania.

Informed persons forecast a new Polish Government would immediately sign a peace pact with Germany and Soviet Russia and accept a redrawing of Poland's borders.

It was said the new State would be a "buffer" between the two great Powers.

Maps mailed from Germany showing the expected partition and new spheres of influence were distributed here.

How the Carving Is Done.

The maps, which were not regarded as official but to which some significance was attached, drew this picture of a new partition of Poland:

Russia would acquire the Polish Ukraine and White Russian provinces, with a new boundary starting from the Rumanian frontier and extending northward between Warsaw and Brest-Litovsk to a point above Bialystok, thence eastward to the present Soviet frontier. This region was designated the New Ukraine.

From the point north of Bialystok the border would continue to Germany's East Prussian frontier, and the territory designated White Russia.

The map makers assumed that Germany would take Polish Silesia and the former Polish Corridor by marking a new frontier starting southeast of Katowice and heading into Poland almost to Lodz. The line would then turn west almost to the German border, and then form an arc northeastward to the East Prussian border near Grudziadz. Poznan (Posen) and Bydgoszcz (Bromberg) would be included in the German gains.

The remaining territory, about one-third of Poland, apparently would be left as a buffer State without access to the sea, without Poland's former industrial areas and surrounded by Germany, Russia and Slovakia, a German dependency.

Poles' Plight Desperate.

Polish resistance to Germany's overwhelming armed might was reported today to have dwindled to three widely separated and virtually surrounded armies.

Dispatches indicated the Poles still were holding out at Warsaw, along the San River west of Lwow and in the sector between Bialystok and Pinsk, but the plight of the defenders was said to be desperate.

The three Polish armies were said to be operating as individual units, without direction from the Polish General Staff, which yesterday followed Government leaders across the Rumanian border.

The desperately fighting Poles also were reported practically without aerial assistance. Most of the Polish air force already has been destroyed, or interned in Rumania.

Red Army Marches On.

While the Germans were advancing from the west, the vast motorized Russian Army was reported rolling through the Ukraine from the east.

Along the Rumanian frontier Soviet troops were continuing what appeared to be a bloodless occupation of Polish territory. Poles and Russians were fraternizing in the occupied areas and there were no reports of fighting. To the Poles the advent of the Russians meant the first freedom from German bombardment in more than two weeks.

Polish refugees streaming across the frontier offered an increasing problem to Rumanian authorities. The Cernauti Chief of Police estimated at least 100,000 already had crossed.

Polish staff officers and foreign military observers estimated Polish Army losses during the eighteen days of bitter fighting at 50,000 to 100,000 killed. The same sources estimated German losses at 35,000 to 50,000 killed.

Little was known here concerning fighting around Warsaw, where a radio broadcast last night was broken off suddenly during a talk by Col. Vaclav Lipinski. Before the interruption Col. Lipinski told of violent fighting in the Praga district, a suburb east of the capital. The west sector was reported quiet. Col. Lipinski said that the city had been bombed and shelled throughout the day, but that the spirit of the populace was unbroken and that it would resist "to the last man."

Meanwhile, Gen. Lev Prchala, commander of the Czech legion formed in Poland after Germany's absorption of Czecho-Slovakia, told the Associated Press that 15,000 of his men had been captured by Russians. Gen. Prchala said he had been halted by Russians en route to the Rumanian border, but was released quickly. He said he would go to France to offer his services there.

Plans To Divide Poland 3 Ways Now Reported

SEP 20 1939

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Associated Press Correspondent

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 19—Establishment of a new Polish regime friendly to Germany and Soviet Russia after partition of Poland by those powers was predicted today in reports from across the Polish frontier.

Maps mailed from Germany were circulated here showing such a partition which would leave only about one-third of Poland as a buffer state between powerful neighbors.

Informed persons said a new government, replacing the regime of President Ignace Moscicki and Foreign Minister Jozef Beck, would sign an immediate peace with Germany and Russia.

All East Poland To Russ

Significance was attached to the maps, although they were not regarded as official. They envisaged Russia as getting all of eastern Poland from a line drawn from south of Przemysl to the East Prussian frontier northwest of Bialystok.

The map-makers assumed that Germany would take the territory west of a new frontier which would start below Katowice, extend north nearly to Lodz, then loop westward near the present German frontier and finally swing northeast to join the East Prussian border.

Poznan (Pozen) and Bydgoszcz (Bromberg) would be incorporated in Germany. Lwow and Wilno would become Russia's.

The map indicated about one-third of Poland would remain as a buffer state without access to the sea and without its industrial districts.

Soviets Continue Invasion

Soviet occupation of Polish territory across the frontier from Rumania continued apparently without resistance. There were no reports of bloodshed. To Poles the advent of the Russians meant relief from two weeks of almost continuous bombings.

Poles and Russians fraternized in the occupied regions.

Rumanian and Soviet military authorities opened negotiations for reopening the frontier over which thousands of panic-stricken Poles have fled. News of the negotiations caused those stampeding farther into Rumania to falter and then stop.

Some Poles appeared at the bridgehead hopeful of returning to their homes with most of their possessions carried on their backs. Many others, however, moved on into Rumania hoping to rebuild their fortunes and lives elsewhere than in conquered Poland.

SEP 20 1939

Seek Two Americans

Major William H. Colbern, United States military attache, entered Soviet-occupied sections of Poland to learn the whereabouts of two missing Americans—Richard Mowrer, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, and William Morton, of the United States consular service.

A lone Soviet sentry, standing in the middle of a bridge spanning 300 yards of the Dniestr river, hailed him as he crossed.

Colbern was told that nothing was known concerning the two Americans, but that no restrictions had been placed on persons in the Russian-occupied area.

Mowrer and Morton were last heard from in Zaleszczyki, Polish frontier town, before Soviet troops marched in.

Peasants Harvest Crops

Picturesquely clad peasants peacefully harvested corn, pumpkins and hay in nearby fields. The frontier was almost back to normal after the wild confusion that reigned as late as last night.

One of the incidents most startling to the peasants occurred Sunday morning when two Soviet tanks ambled across the bridge onto Rumanian territory, remained for fifteen minutes while the crew looked around and then departed into Poland.

Foreign diplomats and Polish refugees who escaped into Rumania described a ceaseless German bombardment in towns and cities of unconquered sections of Poland.

They reported towns were almost blasted into the air ahead of the German advance.

Civilian Autos Bombed

On the road from Warsaw to Seidlce Americans said they saw where German bombers attempted to shatter telephone and telegraph lines. They had annihilated a Polish army truck convoy and had bombed fifteen civilian motor cars. Several were overturned with bodies of their occupants scattered about.

Several Polish autos on Cernauti streets were marked by machine-gun bullet holes.

The Japanese Ambassador to Poland Shuichi Sakoh, departed with his staf for Bucharest. The Japanese were th last of the diplomatic missions accred ited to Warsaw to leave Poland.

Jews Flee Into Rumania

The last American diplomat to leav Leland Harrison, third secretary of th United States Embassy in Warsav said Polish Jews made up more tha half of a terrified mob which fled in Rumania from Zaleszczyki when Po ish border guards opened the barri and scurried into Rumania. Harriso left Bucharest.

The Jews had been held at the Polish border for several days by Rumania's refusal at first to grant them entry.

Many Polish Jews at the outbreak of hostilities moved into Polish cities near the Russian frontier, preferring to risk a Soviet occupation than German conquest.

Beck and Smigly-Rydz Quarrel

Polish Foreign Minister and Army Chief in Bitter Argument at Cernauti.

SEP 20 1939

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Polish government leaders, who halted here in their flight before the advancing German forces, were reported today on their way by separate routes to Bucharest, from where, it was said, they might go to Paris.

President Ignace Moscicki entrained last night for Craiova, near the Bulgarian frontier, where he was given permission to reside with Foreign Minister Joseph Beck. Col. Beck left here by motor and Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz departed by way of Bikaz, in the Carpathian Mountains.

A bitter argument between Col. Beck and Marshal Smigly-Rydz on an undisclosed subject occurred at the Cernauti station as they bade farewell to President Moscicki. The army leader, ignoring Col. Beck's aids, stalked off to his automobile.

Statement by Moscicki.

PARIS, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—In a statement issued through the Polish embassy in Paris, President Ignace Moscicki of Poland urged all Poles to guard their nation's honor so that "justice will triumph in the end."

"It becomes necessary to remove that which personifies our republic and constitutes the source of its constitutional power from this momentary cataclysm," his message says.

"For that reason I have decided with my heart filled with grief to transfer the headquarters of the President of the republic and other high State authorities to a residence where conditions assure free exercise of full sovereignty and the possibility of guarding the interests of the republic."

He praised the Polish Army for bravery in facing "almost the entire armed force of Germany" and declares the Russian invasion "violates standing treaties and imprescriptible principles."

Sources close to the French Foreign Office reported today the possibility that Polish President Ignace Moscicki and high Polish Government officials might eventually seek refuge in France if and when Germany completes her conquest of Poland.

Definite plans still remain to be made, these sources said.

Foreign Under-Secretary August Champetier de Ribes conferred during the morning with Polish Ambassador Julius Lukasiewicz. Only meager reports were received here [illegible] eastern front.

SOVIET ANNOUNCES SEIZURE OF WILNO

Army Also Said To Be At Lwow—Estonian Campaign Talk Heard

Reich Embassy Sources Speculate On Peace Bid To England And France

SEP 20 1939

Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Wednesday, Sept. 20—The Red army general staff early today announced the capture of the northeastern Polish city of Wilno, ancient capital of the Lithuanians, "after two hours' fighting."

The Russians also announced the capture of Volynski (Wlodzimierz), 140 miles from the Russian border, a town which the German army announced Saturday had been reached by Nazi motorized units.

Wilno, about eighty-five miles from the Russian frontier, is the most important city yet taken by the westbound Red army. It has a normal population of about 207,000.

Reported At Lwow

In the south, in the Ukraine, the Soviet troops pressed into the "outskirts" of Lwow, Poland's third largest city, from the northeast and from the south. German troops already had virtually encircled the city.

The general staff announced capture altogether of twelve more cities and towns. Besides Volynski, Pruzhany (Pruzany) and Korbin (Kobyrn), also 140 miles into Poland, were reported taken.

Most of the places reported captured were roughly on a line running north and south through Wilno and Lwow. It had been understood the Russian invasion would be halted somewhere along this line, so there was the possibility the drive might be about ended.

The Soviet troops either have met or have stopped a stone's throw from the German forces at several points along the 500-mile line of march.

Estonian Talk Heard

As the German-Russian campaign of mopping up in Poland seemed to be nearing an end, the possibility that Soviet troops might march into little Estonia was discussed in Moscow's diplomatic circles.

News that the Soviet Baltic fleet was sent into action to "take measures" after the escape of a Polish submarine interned at Tallinn was regarded here as significant.

Russia's present sea base on the west is Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland, and Russia is known to want a Baltic base.

Diplomats said that should Russia decide to occupy part of Estonia this might give her complete control of the Gulf of Finland. Estonia now has a number of fortified islands in the gulf as well as shore batteries controlling certain large sectors.

Estonian circles in Moscow insisted, however, there was not a single conflict in the relations of their government with the Soviet Union. They emphasized that their guards had tried to prevent the escape of the submarine, and denied there was any connivance.

Sources close to the German Embassy predicted that the Reich, with the Polish campaign nearly over, might make a fresh approach to France and Great Britain for peace. They said Germany now was transferring numerous airplanes and troops from the Polish to the Western front.

Rumors that the British and French governments had presented a protest against the Russian occupation of Polish territory could not be immediately confirmed.

Soviet Seizes Estates

A communique from the Soviet general staff reported that Russian forces continued to "eject troops of the Polish army" as they advance westward.

A dispatch to the army newspaper Red Star disclosed that the process of liquidating huge estates in the Ukraine and White Russian already was under way.

Army commanders were reported to be instructing peasants "to take the land for the people" and to "turn your cattle into the landlords' pastures."

Tass, official news agency, said that the advance of the Russian forces was received by joyous crowds which lined the roads and that girls decked the tanks and horses with flowers. The agency reported "stirring meetings" of the populace and Soviet army units.

Lithuanian Activity

"We advanced at such high speed," Tass reported, "that all bridges on our way remained intact and telephone, telegraph lines and power stations are working normally."

It was reported in diplomatic circles that the Lithuanian Minister to Moscow had opened negotiations in an effort to have the Russians and Germans return Wilno to Lithuania. The city was occupied by the Poles after the World War.

The Polish Ambassador Dr. Waclaw Grzybowski, who hopes to leave Thursday by way of Rumania, called on Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador, today. The nature of their long conversation was not disclosed.

"to eject the troops of the Polish army" in their westward march and were nearing the cities of Wilno and Lwow.

It was not known how far the Russians intended to penetrate Poland, but it was believed that they would halt on a line between Wilno in the north and Lwow in the south.

It was understood here that the Lithuanian Minister to Moscow was opening negotiations with Foreign Commissar-Premier Vyacheslav Molotov in an effort to have the Russians and Germans return Wilno to Lithuania. The Lithuanians consider Wilno, which the Poles wrested from them in 1920, their ancient capital.

[Reports reaching Riga said that the Russian troops, led by tanks, had occupied Wilno today at 6 A. M. (1 A. M. New York time) and that the inhabitants started plundering the army storehouses, carrying away flour and other goods in large quantities. The streets were reported decorated with narrow Red flags made from the red part of Polish flags, and several places in the suburbs were said to be ablaze.]

As the Red Army continued to roll on into Poland, Tass reported "stirring meetings" of the population with Soviet Army units, particularly in Western (Polish) White Russia and the Western (Polish) Ukraine.

Tass said that the morale of the Russian troops was "especially high," as was best shown by the "unprecedented rapid advance."

"The Red Army men combine ardour and daring with confidence

Soviet Troops Capture Wilno, May March Against Estonia

Moscow Reports Fall of City in Northeast Poland—Russia's Baltic Fleet in Action —London Protest Rumored.

SEP 20 1939

MOSCOW, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Soviet Russian troops were reported authoritatively today to have entered the city of Wilno (Vilna) in northeast Poland, although there was no official announcement of the action.

Rumors in diplomatic quarters that the British and French governments had presented protests against the Russian occupation of Polish territory could not be immediately confirmed.

With the Red army rolling westward, the possibility that Russian troops might march into Estonia was discussed in diplomatic quarters. It was regarded here as significant that the Soviet Baltic fleet was ordered into action after the escape of a Polish submarine interned at the Estonian port of Tallinn.

Estonian circles here, however, emphasized that their guards tried to prevent the escape. They said there was no conflict in the relations of their country with the Soviet Union.

The Soviet general staff earlier reported that army units continued

30.24—3453

30.24 3453

and calmness and Bolshevik discipline," the agency said.

Tass quoted the secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist party in White Russia as saying that people with Red banners lined the roads where Soviet troops passed and that girls decorated the tanks and horses of advancing troops with flowers.

"We advanced at such lightning speed," Tass reported, "that all bridges on our way remained intact and telephone, telegraph lines and power stations are working normally."

SEP 20 1939

Anarchy Awaits

The report further said that the population of areas in western White Russia still unoccupied by the Red Army were "impatiently awaiting its arrival."

The official agency declared that the Soviet Union wishes to live in peace with all countries, that the Soviet Government publicly announced that the Soviet Union will pursue a policy of neutrality with regard to all countries with which the U. S. S. R. maintains diplomatic relations, and that it was in the interest of peace that the non-aggression pact was concluded with Germany and that the pact was in operation.

An editorial in the newspaper Pravda, Communist party publication, said that everywhere in the western Ukraine, Soviet troops were advancing rapidly without meeting serious resistance.

That the process of liquidation of the huge estates of landlords in the Ukraine and White Russia was already in progress was disclosed in a dispatch to the army newspaper, the Red Star. The Red Star's correspondent reported that army commanders were instructing the peasants to "take the land for the people" and to "turn your cattle into the landlord's pastures."

Baltic Fleet in Action.

Meanwhile it was stated here today that Soviet Russia's warships have embarked on "measures" against the remnants of Poland's submarine fleet, believed in hiding in Baltic ports.

The precise nature of the action was not disclosed in an announcement by Tass, the official news agency, which said merely that the Soviet Baltic fleet is "taking measures."

"As reported from Leningrad, Polish submarines are hiding in ports of the Baltic States and find there covert support on the part of certain Government personages," Tass said. "According to information available, besides Polish submarines, submarines of other States are hiding in those ports."

The announcement indicated strongly that the Soviet "measures" are aimed especially at Estonia, north of Poland and joining Russia.

Yesterday's Episode.

"On September 18 a Polish submarine previously interned in Tallinn, port of Estonia, escaped and disappeared in an unknown direction," Tass said. "This is believed to be a case of abetment on the part of the Estonian authorities. The command of the Soviet Baltic fleet is taking measures against possible diversions on the part of the submarines hiding in Baltic waters."

AIMED AT ESTHONIA

The announcement indicated strongly that Soviet "measures" are aimed especially at Estonia, one of the small Baltic States north of Poland and adjoining Russia.

"On Sept. 18, a Polish submarine previously interned in Tallinn, port of Estonia, escaped and disappeared in an unknown direction," Tass said.

"This is believed to be a case of abetment on the part of Estonian authorities. The command of the Soviet Baltic fleet is taking measures against the possible diversions on the part of the submarines hiding in Baltic waters."

110 MILES WITHIN POLAND

(A dispatch from Tallinn by the Ritzaus, Danish news agency, said the Polish submarine Orzel eluded Estonian gunfire early yesterday to escape from Tallinn, where she had been interned. Shore batteries and Estonian warships were said to have tried to halt the craft.)

With Red Army units as deep as 110 miles within Poland's eastern border, Germany and Soviet Russia joined last night in radio communiquest to declare the Russian troops "pursue no aim counter to the interests of Germany or the Soviet Union or contradicting the spirit and the letter of the non-aggression pact concluded by Germany and the U. S. S. R."

"On the contrary, the task of these troops is to re-establish in Poland the peace and order disrupted by the collapse of the Polish State and to assist the population of Poland in reconstructing conditions of their State existence."

The last phrase was taken by some sources as ponting toward creation of a small Polish buffer State.

1,000,000 IN ACTION

(Berlin dispatches said German and Soviet troops already had met at Brest-Litovsk, exchanged friendly salutes and discussed the drawing of their respective lines.)

Foreign military experts estimated the Soviet Union has at least 2,000,000 soldiers on her western front, and that 500,000 to 1,000,000 are in action in Poland—all under the direction of 58-year-old Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, War Commissar.

While the Polish Ambassador to Moscow, Waclaw Grzybowski, had been instructed by his government to leave the Soviet capital, there were no immediate indications when he would comply. British and French diplomatic missions still awaited instructions from their capitals.

Following the first penetration of Poland from the east Sunday morning, Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff informed Britain and France that Russia intended to remain neutral, but would protect the 11,000,000 Ukrainians and White Russians in Poland.

Diplomatic quarters heard continued reports that an armistice may be proposed as soon as Germany and Russia settle Poland's fate.

Wilno Reported Captured

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (Wednesday) (AP).—T[illegible]

SEP 20 1939

The official staff communique said:

"On Sept. 19 Red Army troops continued pressing Polish troops and by the end of the day had occupied:

"In the north, in western Byelo-Russia, the town of Wilno, which was taken after two hours' fighting; the towns of Velika, Berestovista, Pruzhany and Kobrin.

"In the south, in the western Ukraine, the towns of Vladimir, Volynski, Sokol, Brody, Bobrka, Rogatin and Dolina. Cavalry and tank units entered the northeastern and southern outskirts of Lwow."

Most of the places reported captured were roughly on a line running north and south through Wilno and Lwow. It had been understood the Russian invasion would be halted somewhere along this line, so there was the possibility the drive might be about ended.

All Vessels Forbidden To Enter Or Leave Port

SEP 20 1939

Harbor Of Tallinn Under Particular Surveillance—Move Termed One Of Retaliation

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Sept. 19—Reports reaching here from Tallinn, Estonia, tonight said the Soviet navy had blockaded Estonia's coast.

SEP 20 1939

The reports said the harbor of Tallinn was under particular surveillance and that no ships were allowed to enter or leave.

The action was assumed to be retaliation for the failure of Estonian authorities to prevent the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel yesterday from Tallinn.

Russ Say Escape Was Aided

Tass, the Soviet official news agency, announced early today that "measures" were being taken by the Red Baltic fleet because Polish and other submarines were hiding in neutral Baltic ports.

Particular mention was made in the Tass communique of the escape of the Polish submarine. It was charged Estonian authorities had abetted the escape.

SEP 20 1939

Russia Reported Ready To Seize Estonia, Latvia

Copenhagen, Sept. 19 (AP)—Three tiny states lying along the Baltic Sea formed a question mark tonight in the revamping of Eastern Europe's map by the German and Russian military machines.

Dependent for their existence on the mutual interest of Germany and Russia in their independence, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania bobbed helplessly, in the surge of events which struck Poland and which may at any time be directed against them.

Despite Russia's assurances of neutrality, there loomed indications that she intended to dominate the North Baltic area where she was said to want an ice-free port.

Only Question Of Time

In Copenhagen, the Berlinske Tidende carried a report saying English sources believed it was only a question of time before Estonia and Latvia would be incorporated into Russia, advancing as the reason a reported German promise to give Russia a Baltic harbor.

A joint declaration of determination to remain neutral and to uphold their right to trade with all countries, including the belligerents, ended a two-day neutrality conference of five northern countries.

Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Iceland said they hoped to attain their aim through negotiations with the belligerents.

As the conference ended, Prime Minister Thovald Stauning of Denmark said "We dare to expect that the belligerents will respect our neutrality.

Not Seeking Profit

"The northern countries are not aiming at profit from the war, but only such collaboration designed to escape war's normal consequences."

Russian Minister Podziakoff was reported to have conferred today with Lithuanian Foreign Minister Urbsys.

The report did not mention the subject, but in some quarters it was believed the talk may have centered around Wilno, the former Lithuanian capital which Poland took in 1920. Lithuania never has ceased to regard the city as her capital.

Evidence of the desire to avoid any friction was seen in the good reception of Soviet neutrality assurances; the report that the chief of the Estonian navy was removed because of the submarine escape, and assurances from Lithuania that, despite her desire to recover Wilno, the Government was firmly following a policy of neutrality and would give no cause for offense likely to prejudice later claims.

Meanwhile, the tiny postwar states continued to offer a precarious haven to thousands of fleeing Poles. More than 20,000 Polish soldiers have crossed the Lithuanian frontier and were disarmed and interned.

Among the estimated 600 civil refugees were the widow and two children of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, the late "strong man of Poland."

Officials said approximately 500 Polish refugees had crossed the Latvian border, among them only a small number of soldiers. It was estimated one hundred Polish tanks were interned in Lithuania and at least sixty warplanes in Latvia.

SEP 20 1939

No Submarines Hidden In Riga, Latvia Asserts

Riga, Latvia, Sept. 19 (AP)—The official Latvian news agency, commenting on the Soviet Russian allegation that Polish and other foreign submarines are hidden in harbors of Baltic states, said tonight that no foreign submarines had been in Latvian territorial waters since the Polish-German war began.

The agency said the reinforcement of coastal defense since the promulgation of Latvia's neutrality regulations excluded any possibility of foreign warships remaining in Latvian waters without the knowledge of authorities.

Poles Plod Way Homeward

Thousands of Refugees Trudge Along Dusty Roads Back to Places They Fled.

By EDWIN SHANKE

SEP 20 1939

JASLO, Poland, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Tens of thousands of hapless Polish refugees are plodding homeward wearily over the dusty roads along which they fled before the advancing Germans.

I saw this tragic picture while en route from Krakow to Jaslo, deep in Polish Galicia.

The refugees are emerging from forests and other hiding places, some a hundred miles from their homes. Most of them travel afoot and some in rickety carts, but during the last few days German supply trucks, returning empty from the front, have given lifts to many.

I saw scores of women carrying babies in shawl slings, the men trudging along beside them with great packs on their shoulders—packs containing all their remaining possessions. Many of the children of walking age led the family cow, chewing her cud unconcernedly.

Nearly All Barefooted.

Some of the families stuffed their possessions into decrepit baby buggies, which often broke down. Nearly all the refugees were barefoot.

At Tarnow, a city of 55,000 east of Krakow, hundreds of the homeless Poles congregate all day opposite the local German commander's headquarters to wait for empty trucks returning from the front. On their arrival they are mobbed by the refugees.

Especially anxious to take care of women and children, the German soldiers keep the men away from the trucks until the others are inside.

German officials said many Polish soldiers were among the refugees. They were men who, through the lightning advance of the German army, became separated from the main body of the retreating Polish Army. Thereafter they worked their way to friendly farms and changed into civilian clothes.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 19 (AP).—The liberal newspaper Pesti Naplo said today that Soviet Russia, whose troops are fast approaching the Hungarian frontier through Poland, had assured Hungary her neutrality would be guaranteed.

SEP 20 1939

LONDON REJECTS SOVIET EXCUSE FOR INVASION

Holds Drive Into Poland Cannot Be Justified by Argunnent Set Forth.

SEP 20 1939

DECISION ON ACTION WAITS

And Official Communique Gives No Intimation That Declaration of War Is Foreshadowed.

LONDON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Informed observers said today that Great Britain and France, still firm in their pledges to Poland, would consult with Polish leaders on the military situation created by the Russian invasion of Poland before disclosing its "full implication."

SEP 20 1939

The Ministry of Information's statement in which it was understood France would formally concur today, declared that the Soviet action—avowedly to "protect" the Ukrainians and White Russians in Poland—"cannot, in the view of his Majesty's Government, be justified by the arguments put forward by the Soviet Government."

There was, however, no imitation from any informed source that the Ministry's communique could be interpreted as foreshadowing a declaration of war on Russia.

Situation Still in the Air.

"The full implication of these events is not yet apparent," said the communique, "but his Majesty's Government take the opportunity of stating that nothing that has occurred can make any difference to the determination of his Majesty's Government, with the full support of the country, to fulfill their obligations to Poland, and to prosecute the war with all energy until their objects have been achieved."

A full discussion of the situation resulting from the Russian sweep into Poland was expected in the House of Commons tomorrow after another of Prime Minister Chamberlain's reports on the war with Germany.

Captured as Poles, Enlist as Germans

KRAKOW, Poland, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Three great transport trucks came down the road east of here loaded with soldiers in Polish uniforms singing and "heiling." Germans of the signal corps, making a halt along the roadside, gazed wonderingly.

Then came a joyous chorus from the trucks: "We are German nationals traveling west to fight against France."

Germans said that these men, drafted into the Polish Army, had been captured, brought behind the lines and released. Now they were volunteering for the German Army.

SEP 20 1939

2 Americans Missing In Soviet-Held Poland

No Word of Richard Mowrer or Consular Aid

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 19 (AP).—Maj. William H. Colbern, United States military attache, entered Soviet-occupied sections of Poland today to learn the whereabouts of two missing Americans—Richard Mowrer, correspondent of "The Chicago Daily News," and William Morton, of the United States consular service.

A lone Soviet sentry, standing in the middle of a bridge spanning 300 yards of the Dniester River, hailed him as he crossed.

Colbern was told that nothing was known concerning the two Americans, but that no restrictions had been placed on persons in the Russian-occupied area.

Mowrer and Morton were last heard from in Zaleszczyki, Polish frontier town, before Soviet troops marched in. The Soviet soldier declined to answer Colbern's further questioning as to the extent of the Russian advance.

("The Chicago Daily News" said it had received information that Mowrer and Morton were being held by Russians at Zaleszczyki.)

Colbern was attached to the United States Embassy in Warsaw until all diplomatic missions fled in the face of the German invasion. He crossed into Rumania yesterday.

Mowrer Held By Soviets In Poland, Newspaper Say

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Chicago Daily News announced today receipt of information expressing belief that Richard Mowrer, one of its European correspondents, and William Morton of the American consular service, were being held by Russians who had taken over Zaleszczyki, Poland.

The newspaper's information was contained in a dispatch from Frank Smothers, its Budapest correspondent, who said the American consul at Cernauti, Rumania, on the Polish border, was taking steps to obtain a permit from the Russians for the two men to leave Poland.

Carroll Binder, the newspaper's foreign news editor, said the News was checking with Moscow to determine definitely whether Mowrer was in the hands of the Russians.

SEP 20 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 19 (AP).—Hungarian reports from Cernauti, Rumania, at the Polish frontier, said today that the United States military attache, Major William H. Colbern, had returned to Poland to search for Richard Mowrer, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, and William Morton of the American consular service.

They were last heard from at Zaleszczyki on the Rumanian frontier prior to the Russian occupation. Mowrer re-crossed the frontier into Poland a few days ago. Morton was at Brest-Litovsk to aid in the removal of American citizens.

SEP 20 1939

Few of 600 Fleeing Czechs Escape Poland; Many Slain, Most Still Wander in Country

By The Associated Press.

SEP 20 1939

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 19—A gruelling, zigzag trek across Poland by 600 Czecho-Slovak refugees who sought safety from the German Army—which only a handful achieved—was described tonight by Hermann Field of Cambridge, Mass.

Mr. Field represented the British committee for refugees from Czecho-Slovakia in Cracow, Poland. He was one of the last foreigners to cross the Rumanian frontier in advance of Russia's tanks.

"We walked day and night for twelve days until we were exhausted," said Mr. Field. "We begged food in villages and farms. We slept in barns, open fields, woods and along dusty roads.

"A half-dozen times we were in villages and towns when they were frightfully bombed by German planes. And after experiencing all of that, only a few of the poor devils ever escaped."

Mr. Field said the small group escaped Poland at Zaleszczyki, but most of the 600 still were wandering around in Poland.

"Many were killed, and we saw several hundred wounded," he added.

When German planes bombed Cracow for three days at the start of the war, Mr. Field decided to clear the Czech encampment. The British committee previously had sent 1,600 Czechs to England, but 3,000 remained in Cracow.

Mr. Field started the long and dangerous march across Poland with the 600, including old men, women and children, on Sept. 4. Only a few crossed the border to safety in Rumania on Sept. 16. Another group of several hundred Czechs also left Katowice afoot, but Mr. Field said he had no information on their fate.

Shortly after leaving Cracow the wanderers were caught in an air raid at Sandomierz. While they were at Krasnik, he said, German planes bombed the Jewish quarter, killing seventy persons.

Many refugees were caught when the Germans suddenly cut across a road in a wedge which had been driven into the Polish lines.

"Bombing scattered the dwindling Czech column," he recounted. "Many old men, women and children dropped exhausted by the roadside, unable to struggle on. Some were caught by the swift Russian occupation of Southeastern Poland.

"A few of us got out of Tarnopol just before the Russian tanks rolled in—and you almost can count on your fingers the weary but valiant few who finally crossed the border to a Rumanian haven."

Hungary Sends 28 Men to Jail For 'Gossiping About the War'

SEP 20 1939

Budapest, Sept. 19 (AP)—The governments of southeastern Europe, faced with ever-increasing hazards to their neutrality, are taking more drastic safeguards daily—even against conversationalists.

Vigilant censorship, imprisonment for gossipers, control of mass displays of sympathies, dispersal of crowds, pleas for public calmness and a clamping down on revolutionary parties have been employed.

In Hungary, for example, 28 men arrested yesterday in raids on cafes and other public gathering places either were en route to concentration camps for indefinite terms or were under strict police surveillance. They were convicted of "gossiping about the war."

Among the 28 were several socially prominent Budapest citizens and journalists.

Censorship is reducing the amount of war news that can be printed. The story of the sinking of the British aircraft carrier Courageous was printed on back pages. Only bare troop movements in Poland are reported.

There was practically no editorial comment on war developments, although Hungarian sympathy for Poland is traditional. The only editorial on the Russian entry into Poland said: "Russia, taking advantage of confusion in Europe, is fishing in troubled waters."

The Hungarian Nazi party, meanwhile, was kept silent by rigid restrictions.

Rumania also has taken careful steps to keep public emotions under control. At Cernauti, bottleneck through which Polish refugees and disarmed soldiers have poured into Rumania, civil and military authorities kept order. Crowds were dispersed.

Keep Film Crowds Quiet.

In Bucharest and other cities moviegoers must remain quiet during the news reels, or the shows are closed immediately.

Orders regulating civilians in military zones provide imprisonment for gossiping about military matters, loitering, taking pictures or drawing maps.

Bulgaria faced similar restrictions on public expressions and indicated a desire for continued neutrality.

Greece is raising preparedness funds by a special duty on matches and cigarettes and is considering boosting income taxes.

Dispatches from Turkey to Hungarian newspapers said a Turkish-German non-aggression pact probably would follow a pact Turkey now is negotiating with Russia at Moscow.

Polish Gold Reported Shipped to Alexandria

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 19 (AP).—The gold hoard of the Polish National Bank was sent to Alexandria, Egypt, by way of Constanza, Rumania, with a naval escort, according to a representative of the Polish government who arrived at Bergen today.

Supply Worth $75,280,000

[The bank's gold supply was reported previously by The Associated Press to amount tof 400,000,000 zloty. While the present value of the zloty is problematic it was quoted in foreign exchange on Aug. 31 at 18.82 cents, which would make the hoard worth $75,280,000 at that rate of exchange.]

SEP 20 1939

TODAY'S LESSON

UKRAINE POLISH SOVIET RUSSIA

[By the Associated Press]

Polish White Russia and the Polish Ukraine, which Soviet Russia has announced she is taking under her protection, have a population of 11,000,000, estimates Pravda, Communist party newspaper at Moscow. Eight millions of these are said to be Ukrainians.

The combined areas contain approximately 46,723 square miles.

The White Russians, peaceful, industrious and even-tempered, are descendants of an old Slav race. The "White" refers to the traditional color of their dress.

SEP 20 1939

Gave Them Name

Queen Catherine II gave the name of "White Russia" to the present provinces of Vitebsk and Mighilov, but Emperor Nicholas abolished the term. It since has lost all political significance.

Most recent statistics estimate the White Russians at 3.2 per cent. of the total Russian population.

The "Ukraine" literally means a "border land," neither European nor Asiatic. Its people have been known variously as South Russians, Little Russians, Ruthenes or Ruthenians.

Soil Is Rich

When the Soviet Union was established, the Ukraine included parts of southern Russia and what previously was Austria-Hungary. Its soil is rich and fertile. Its strategic value is great because it offers access to the Black Sea and central Europe.

Polish sources estimate there are approximately 5,000,000 Ukrainians in Poland, about 4,000,000 of whom live in Galicia, former Austrian province. Most of the remainder reside in the province of Volhynia, which Poland obtained from Russia.

Ukrainian Republic?

Since 1918, Ukrainian politicians in Poland have been urging creation of an independent republic, embracing all Ukrainians in Europe.

Leaders of the movement have denied Polish accusations their activities were carried on with the connivance of Germany.

Widow of Pilsudski Flees to Lithuania

KAUNAS, Lithuania, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The widow of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, Poland's military hero, and her two daughters were among some 600 civilian refugees crossing today into Lithuania.

It was officially stated that up to this morning 500 Polish refugees had passed the Latvian frontier. Among them was a small number of soldiers.

The majority of Polish warplanes fleeing over the border obeyed Latvian signals to land; some, however, were forced down by artillery and machine gun fire.

Nazis Carry Wounded Out of Poland by Plane

Big Junkers Also Transport Gasoline and Supplies

BERLIN, Sept. 19 (AP).—Modern mechanized warfare has made the transportation of the wounded, of medicine, food, gasoline and other supplies an important function of the German air force.

Three special hospital planes, painted white with a large red cross on the side, make regular trips into Poland from their Breslau base to remove the most seriously wounded from first aid stations to hospitals in Germany. Each of these special planes can carry eighteen wounded men.

SEP 20 1939

Huge Junkers transport planes make steady trips to the front from Breslau, transporting gasoline to the far advanced armored car and tank units which would be unable to proceed without this aid because of the breakdown of rail communications and slow travel over poor roads. Crews of supply planes drop their large bomb-like loads as near as possible to troops. Each load is equipped with a parachute.

At the Breslau Airport, where these transports base, there is a constant bustle. Three or four planes no sooner leave than others return.

The Germans were said to have brought 250 wounded men by plane to Breslau alone. Others have been taken to various other points depending upon bed-space and the type of attention needed.

Wilno Populace Plunders Flour From Army Depots

SEP 20 1939

Red Flag Is Replaced Hastily as Russians Occupy City

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 19 (AP).—Reports reaching here today said Soviet troops led by tanks occupied Wilno (Vilna), Poland, at 6 a. m. (1 a. m. New York daylight time).

Inhabitants were said to have started plundering storehouses, carrying away flour and other goods in large quantities.

Attacking U-Boat Is Reported Safe

BERLIN, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The German high command indicated today that the submarine which sank the British aircraft carrier Courageous had escaped.

SEP 20 1939

A communique said that the sinking of the warship, as announced by the British Admiralty "was confirmed by a report of the German submarine which attacked the carrier."

30-24-3455

30,24 3455

Warship Survivors Put at 681

Official Admiralty Statement Leaves 579 of the Courageous Missing.

LONDON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced today that approximately 681 survivors were accounted for of 1,260 aboard the British aircraft carrier Courageous, sunk by an enemy submarine.

That would leave 579 lives unaccounted for. Naval authorities insisted, however, that there was still some hope that the actual number aboard may have been considerably below 1,260.

The Admiralty statement follows.

"The following are approximate figures of the complement of the Courageous and of survivors;

"Total complement, 1,260, comprising ninety officers, 1,170 ratings.

"Approximate total survivors, 681—seventy officers, 611 ratings.

"In addition to the total of 426 survivors already published—forty-five officers and 381 ratings—the Admiralty said a further twenty-five officers and 230 ratings had been saved."

Naval Power vs. Submarine.

The Admiralty issued earlier a list of 438 survivors. About 400 were landed in England by a rescuing destroyer last night, the Admiralty added, and went on to emphasize that the names published were not a complete list of the men rescued.

Meanwhile today the grim war between British naval power and German submarines continued. Official announcement was made that two British trawlers, the Lord Minto and Arlita, had been sunk but that three other merchant vessels had eluded submarines.

Great Britain's losses since the beginning of the war were set at roughly thirty vessels.

The crews of the Lord Minto and the Arlita, the Admiralty announced, were rescued by a third trawler.

The 3,395-ton Baron Lovat was one of three vessels stated to have eluded submarines. Her crew came safely ashore at Greenock, Scotland, with stories of how they had dodged the gunfire of a submarine off the Irish coast and later heard an explosion which they believed destroyed the attacking submarine.

The crew said that the submarine, apparently short of torpedoes, shelled the Baron Lovat for fifty minutes without registering a hit, while the ship plowed ahead at full steam.

"Then she submerged suddenly," a deckhand said, "and there was a violent explosion. Water shot high in the air. The Baron Lovat shuddered from stem to stern and we thought a torpedo had hit us. But we were safe and the submarine itself must have been the victim."

The Baron Lovat had a cargo of sugar.

Survivors' Stories.

Yesterday's official statement telling of the loss of the Courageous, the oldest but one of the largest of Great Britain's seven aircraft carriers, caused a shock here comparable to that of the previous day's news of the Russian invasion of Poland.

The survivors brought to shore last night told vivid stories of the sinking—the first sinking of a British warship in the present war.

The survivors estimated that about 800 were saved in all. Some of the rescue boats were delayed in landing until afternoon.

One of the rescued men said that within five minutes after the ship was attacked he "saw pieces of the submarine blown sky high by the destroyers."

"The first torpedo penetrated the Courageous on the port side through the stokers' deck and exploded violently," he declared. "A second torpedo passed beneath us. The Courageous sank in thirty-five minutes. Most of us either jumped into the sea from the decks, or slipped down the side of the heavily listing ship into the water.

"Some who were strong swimmers kept afloat without aid, while others clung to rafts or pieces of wood. It was not very rough, and we were able to get some boats away.

"The destroyers raced around, throwing lifeboats overboard. I was in the water for over two hours."

Others said that most of the men lost must have been trapped between decks.

Sang and Joked in Water.

"There were two distinct bangs at intervals of about a second," one of the survivors said. "After that there were a few minor explosions and most of the crew jumped into the water. The order to abandon ship came within five minutes and the Courageous foundered thirty minutes after the first explosion.

"The ship heeled so badly that some lifeboats could not be used."

The seamen who had had to leap into the water sang, joked and cheered as they swam about waiting to be picked up by the destroyers, the survivors said. Others supported themselves in the water with pieces of wood and some with rafts.

Besides those landed by the destroyer, other members of the Courageous crew were reported taken aboard other vessels, including the American freighter Collingsworth.

[From somewhere in the North Atlantic the Collingsworth reported to the Maritime Commission at Washington that she had picked up fifty-three men and transferred them to other vessels.]

Daylight Attack.

The Admiralty's communique did not give the position of the Courageous when she was sunk. The first communique said merely that the Courageous had been "lost by enemy submarine action," that a number of survivors had been picked up by destroyers and merchant ships and that the submarine was "heavily attacked by destroyers and is believed to have been sunk."

There was a moderate sea and it was daylight at the time of the attack.

The Courageous and her planes had served as "eyes" for British warships engaged in convoying merchant ships, protecting them against submarine attacks. She was reported not to have carried her full complement of forty-eight planes.

The Couraegous was built as a cruiser in 1916 and later converted into an aircraft carrier. Great Britain's other and newer carriers are the Albatross, Ark Royal, Eagle, Furious, Glorious and Hermes. Five more are under construction.

No Mention of Captain.

The first list of survivors included Commander E. McC. Abel-Smith, former equerry to King George, the ship's chaplain, the commanding engineer and various other officers. Commander G. W. G. M. Woodhouse also was listed, but there was no immediate mention of Capt. W. T. Makeig-Jones, who had been reported last seen on the bridge ordering his men to abandon ship.

The Courageous had two commanders, Commander Abel-Smith for the air arm and Commander Woodhouse for the executive, while Capt. Makeig-Jones was in direct command of the ship.

Meanwhile, the Ministry of Information announced that thirty-three captive German sailors had been landed by a British warship at the Falkland Islands. They were members of the crew of the ship Carl Fritzen, sunk on September 4.

The Press Association said that the Glasgow steamship City of Paris was "damaged" last Saturday night, and that 138 members of the crew escaped in lifeboats. One was crushed to death as the boats were lowered. Other ships picked up the men and took the 10,902-ton ship in tow for salvage. The report did not say how the damage was caused.

LONDON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—It was authorized [illegible] Flew with John Cunningham Smith, 19, [illegible] dropped the first British bomb of the war, disclosed today that the 10,000-ton German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee had been the principal victim of the raid on Kiel Sept. 4.

—WAR AT SEA—

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 19—An official announcement today said two British trawlers had been sunk but that three other British merchant vessels had successfully eluded submarine attacks.

The Ministry of Information said that the trawlers Lord Minto and Arlita had been sunk and their crews rescued by a third trawler.

The announcement added:

"Several British merchant vessels, including the Rothesay Castle, the Baharistand and the Baron Lovat, have been attacked, but successfully eluded the U-boat.

The report did not immediately specify where the trawlers sank and did not say whether they had been torpedoed or whether they had encountered mines.

(The sinking of the two trawlers brings to twenty-six the total of British ships lost since the beginning of the war)

The Admiralty today followed up a sparsely worded communique on the loss of the twenty-three-year-old aircraft carrier Courageous with a list craft carrier Courageous.

The Admiralty announced today that about 681 survivors were accounted for of 1,260 aboard the Courageous. That would leave 579 missing.

Text Of Statement

The Admiralty statement follows:

"The following are approximate figures of the complement of the Courageous and of survivors:

"Total complement, 1,260, comprising ninety officers, 1,170 ratings (enlisted men).

"Approximate total survivors, 681—70 officers, 611 rations."

In addition to the total of 426 survivors already published—45 officers and 381 ratings—the Admiralty said a further 25 officers and 230 ratings had been saving.

150 FROM ATHENIA SET SAIL FOR U. S.

Survivors Board Orizaba for Voyage to New York.

GLASGOW, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Approximately 150 American survivors of the sunken British ship Athenia began boarding the American liner Orizaba today for New York.

As she embarked, Mrs. Jessie Sutherland of Youngstown, Ohio, still weak from leg injuries suffered in the Athenia sinking, said:

"I do hope we will be all right on this ship. I could not go through it a second time."

Miss Judy Scott of Chickasha, Okla., walked up the gangplank with one arm in a sling, the other full of parcels.

"I spent what little money I had left in Glasgow shops," she smiled.

The party also included Mrs. B. L. Alton of Worcester, Mass., and her daughter Elizabeth. Mrs. Alton recalled ruefully that she declined the offer of a cousin of passage in one of his company's freighters to sail on the Athenia. The freighter since has docked safely in New York.

Kennedy's Children Returning.

LONDON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The three youngest children of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, Patricia, Jean and Edward, will sail for home tomorrow. The Ambassador's second son, John, and Horace Dodge booked passage on the Pan American Clipper leaving Foynes, Ireland, tomorrow for the United States.

Uruguay Strengthens Patrol

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 19 (AP).—Uruguay strengthened her neutrality coast patrol today. Three Coast Guard vessels were transferred from the Plate and Uruguay Rivers to sea duty. Several squadrons of military planes were sent to [illegible] on the extreme eastern point of the country.

The British cruiser Exeter arrived today escorting the French liner Florida, en route to Buenos Aires. The Exeter must depart within twenty-four hours under neutrality regulations.

British Steamer Four Days Late

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 19 (AP).—The British steamer Western Prince arrived today from New York, four days late.

Canadian Exchange Dealings Suspended

BUFFALO, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Local commercial banks have suspended dealings in Canadian exchange. The Buffalo Clearing House Association announced late yesterday that checks and drafts drawn on Canadian banks would be accepted for collection only.

The association added that Canadian currency and cash would be accepted on a contingent basis for conversion into American money only at rates which banks will be able to negotiate in the future.

Local banks posted no daily discount rate on the Canadian dollar, now under rigid governmental control.

British Seize Cargoes Of Two U. S. Vessels

State Department Plans No Present Action Concerning Ships Bound For Germany

Washington, Sept. 19 (AP).—The State Department was informed by the American Embassy in London today that the cargoes of two American freighters have been seized by the British.

The freighters are the Saccarappa and Shickshinny, which sailed from Savannah, Ga., reportedly bound for German ports.

The State Department [illegible] reported [illegible] not to contemplate diplomatic action regarding the seizure. An official said Secretary Hull was studying these and other recent cases and has not yet formulated his policy with regard to them.

Strike Holds Up Washington's Sailing 2 Days

Liner, Due to Go This Noon, Will Wait Until Friday Because of Lack of Crew

The United States liner Washington, scheduled to sail at noon today for England and France with 800 passengers, can not obtain an adequate crew because of the seamen's strike here, it was learned last night, and will not go out before noon Friday.

The Washington [illegible] largest of seven American liners at the Port of New York affected by the strike of seamen who are deadlocked with steamship owners over demands for additional compensation for work on ships sailing through war zone waters.

Passengers, chiefly Europeans eager to return to their countries, were informed by telegram and telephone last night that the ship would go out on Friday. The ship has been awaited eagerly in England and France by Americans seeking passage home.

"We postponed the sailing to await strike developments," an executive of the line admitted over the telephone yesterday. But from other representatives of the line it was learned that seamen had declined to sign on because no agreement had been reached as to how much bonus and other compensations they would receive.

Prospects for an immediate strike settlement appeared poor last night, according to some shipping executives.

1939

Clipper Brings 49 Passengers; 24 From Lisbon

SEP 20 1939

Annabella Among Arrivals on American; Officials Deny a Forced Landing

Special to the Herald Tribune

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., Sept. 19.—The Pan American flying boat American Clipper arrived at Port Washington at 2:58 p. m. today with forty-nine passengers and 200 pounds of mail from Lisbon, Portugal; Horta, the Azores, and Hamilton, Bermuda. Officials explained that erroneous reports that the clipper was forced down soon after leaving the Azores were probably the result of the clipper's omission of two half-hourly radio reports because of a low-pressure area which blanketed radio sending and reception.

Delayed twenty-four hours at Lisbon by unfavorable weather over the ocean, the clipper, commanded by Capt. Robert Ford, left Lisbon at 10:45 a. m. yesterday (5:45 a. m. New York time) with twenty-four passengers. The other passengers were picked up at Horta and Hamilton.

Annabella, French film actress and wife of Tyrone Power, American actor, was among those on the plane. With her was her nine-year-old daughter by a former marriage, Ann Murat. The actress, Mrs. Suzanne Power in private life, said she tried to get her mother, Mrs. Paul Charpentier, fifty-three, to come to the United States, but that Mrs. Charpentier felt it was her duty to remain in France with her two sons, Pierre, eighteen, and Jean, twenty-nine, who is in the French Army.

Another passenger was Carlos Lucantis, of Buenos Aires, an international banker, who said that, after traveling through Germany, Italy, Belgium, England, Switzerland and France, he though Germany would lose the war because the people there "have no food." Serge Semenenko, vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston, said the general opinion in Europe seemed to be the war would be a long one and that there would be a revolution in Germany.

Ernest Bridgewater, of Wilmington, Del., a chemist with E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., arrived in a specially prepared berth from Bermuda, where he had undergone an operation for appendicitis last week. His wife, Mrs. Nancy Bridgewater, and their two daughters, Jane and Ann, were with him.

Two college students were among the passengers. They were Miss Mary Ann McGurk, an American whose family lives in Barcelona, Spain, and Charles M. Baxter, of Cleveland, a Yale student, who returned from a trip abroad with his wife. Miss McGurk is a sophomore at Swarthmore College.

Rex Bars Sailing Of 28 Germans At Last Minute

SEP 20 1939

Baroness Oppenheim Taken Off Liner; Italian Cable Also Affects 2 Slovaks

N.Y. SERIES-TRIBUNE

Twenty-eight persons with German passports and two with Slovakian passports who had intended to leave this country yesterday aboard the Italian liner Rex were denied permission to sail when cabled instructions from the head office of the Italian Line at Genoa, Italy, were received by officials here a few minutes before the ship left her dock. The message from Italy said that no persons with German, Czech or Slovakian passports could travel on Italian ships.

Scheduled to sail at noon, the Rex was delayed for twenty-five minutes while three Germans, two women and a man, who had gone aboard the ship, were escorted back onto the pier. One of them was Baroness Ruth Oppenheim, wife of Frederick Oppenheim, German banker. The other two were Katharina Weber, a middle-aged domestic, and Kurt Muller, a tall man who walked with a limp and was so upset by not being permitted to sail that he would talk to no one.

Officials of the Italian Line here said they had received no explanation of the order, but that it was believed to have been the result of the recent activity of British warships which have searched neutral ships and interned German passengers found aboard them. The Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam was one of the largest ships searched recently by the British in this manner.

Italo E. Verrando, general manager of the Italian Line in North America, who was on the pier when the German citizens were taken off the ship, told Baroness Oppenheim that "we sympathize with you but we have our orders, and that's the situation." He said an effort had been made by cable to get permission from Genoa for German women to sail but that no answer had been received.

Baron Oppenheim, who arrived in New York with his wife on Aug. 29 on the last trip of the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, said he had determined not to sail and was planning an indefinite stay in this country. He said there was no way for him to return to Germany on a German ship and he anticipated capture and internment by the British should he attempt to go home on some other vessel.

Although they knew that he would have small chance of getting home, they felt that the Baroness would be able to reach Cologne to look after their three children, Alfred, five years old; Gishela, three, and Frederick, two. The Baron and his brother, Harold Oppenheim, had come down to see her off. Before sailing time she and her husband had walked up and down the pier, arm in arm, to exchange last-minute confidences before being separated for an indefinite period.

She had gone aboard the boat and was at the rail waving good by to her husband when she was told to go ashore again and informed that she would not be permitted to sail. The Baroness, although tearful, received the news with a show of temper. Waving her arms, she exclaimed: "And why can't I sail? Is a German submarine going to sink this ship?"

She demanded that Mr. Verrando show her the order which had been sent from Genoa, but Mr. Verrando said: "It is enough for me to tell you."

Before she learned that she would not be permitted to sail the Baroness explained why she was leaving without her husband.

"I just came over to have a good time," she said. "I would have had a good time if it hadn't been for the war. I got a cablegram every day during my last three weeks in New York saying my children were all right. I must leave my husband. He can't go because he would be captured if the British stopped the boat. They would take all the Germans off and put them in a concentration camp."

Miss Weber said she had lived in this country for ten years and had been doing housework. She lives with her sister in Brooklyn and had decided to return to Germany. The other twenty-seven persons were told they could not sail before they boarded the ship. Most of them had booked passage in third class.

Kurt Muller could talk to no one. While his baggage was being taken off he stood by biting his lip and with tears rolling down his face. When officials or reporters attempted to talk to him he shook his head and turned away to hide his grief. Finally he walked slowly off the pier. As he walked he smoked a cigarette and, though it is against pier rules, none of the officials asked him to put it out.

Before the cancellation of the thirty sailings as a result of the order, the ship's passenger list numbered 309, of whom fifty-one were in cabin class. The list included fifteen Americans.

Says U. S. Entry Into War 'Only A Matter Of Time'

SEP 20 1939

Yakichiro Suma, On Way To Manchoukuo, Was Counselor Of Japanese Embassy

Yokohama, Japan, Sept. 19 (AP)—Yakichiro Suma, former counselor of the Japanese Embassy at Washington, expressed belief today it is "only a matter of time" until the United States enters the European war returned to Japan en route to his new post at Hsinking, Manchoukuo.

"Unlike 1914, the Americans now are definitely anti-German, and because they are an emotional people I believe it is only a matter of time before the United States goes to war," he said.

Suma said neutrality on the part of America and Japan would be the best guarantee against the European war becoming a world conflict, but he voiced doubt that America would remain neutral.

Neutrals Check Arms Exports By Regulations

SEP 20 1939

Northern European Nations Exercise Control; Some May Await U. S. Action

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP).—An unofficial survey disclosed today that neutral European nations were maintaining a control over the shipment of arms to belligerents. Until their position is further clarified, however, officials here believe it is impossible to predict whether Germany, Great Britain or France can count upon them for war materials.

The officials believe the neutrals will rely as far as possible on international law which permits the sale of arms to belligerents, but will guard against offending either side.

The northern European nations all exercise control over the shipment of arms. Sweden's governmental supervision dates back to 1779. Sweden has several highly efficient arms factories, but whether she will sell arms to Germany or the western Allies, has not been made clear.

Norway has no specific legislation covering arms exports, but has legislation requiring governmental licenses for all exports, which would of course include arms.

Denmark has one large arms plant. For a decade her policy has been not to sell arms to a belligerent. Before an arms shipment can be made a license must be obtained from the Ministry of Justice.

Finland is an arms importing rather than exporting country, but she has put restrictions on the sale of munitions and requires licenses. The Netherlands recently prohibited the export of arms without licenses. Switzerland maintains a control over arms shipments.

Italy believes in the free export of arms and has refused to adhere to international conventions for the control of the arms traffic. All exports, however, are under government control.

Some of the neutrals, it is thought may be waiting for the United States to assert its position through the special session of Congress.

SEP 20 1939

American Freighter Stopped by Submarine

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—A member of the crew of the American freighter Artigas told today of being stopped on the high seas by a submarine whose commander asked the ship's nationality and destination before permitting it to proceed.

William Niectpiel said the submarine, of undetermined nationality, stopped the freighter September 8 two days out of Cardiff, Wales.

The Rev. Sidney E. Grenfell, retired Methodist minister of Stockton, Cal., one of twenty-six Americans returning from Europe on the freighter, said:

"I believe that if it had been a British ship it would have been just too bad. I was never so thankful that I was an American on an American boat."

U.S. Will Guard Rights of Allied War Prisoners

SEP 20 1939

Representatives in Reich Will See That British and French Get a Fair Deal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP).—One of the extraordinary duties thrust upon the American government by the war is to see that British and French prisoners of war get fair treatment in Germany.

In consenting to represent British and French interests in the Reich, the government also agreed to look after the condition of prisoners from those countries.

The American Embassy in Berlin and various consulates will carry on the necessary inspections, which in time may embrace tens of thousands of men. They will expect German treatment to follow the provisions of a treaty regarding prisoners of war signed in Geneva in 1929 by Germany, Great Britain, France, the United States and forty-three other nations. Under this agreement prisoners are given a wide range of rights over which the "protecting power"—in this case the United States—has the duty of inspection.

Prisoners of war must at all times be humanely treated and protected. Reprisals against them are prohibited. No coercion may be used to obtain information about their army or country. All their personal effects, including money, remain their property.

SEP 20 1939

Prisoners may not be placed in prisons but in buildings or barracks affording all possible guarantees of healthfulness. Their living quarters, food and water must be equal to those of troops at German base camps. They have the right to medical attention and to admission to hospitals.

Prisoners of different nationalities and races may not be commingled and officers must be separated from the rank and file.

Germany may utilize the labor of British and French prisoners, but the labor must have no direct relation with war operations. Conditions of work must not be heavier than for the civil workers employed in the same work. Wages must be paid.

The prisoners are permitted to send mail and to receive mail and parcels containing food, clothing and books. Prisoners may be punished for infraction of camp rules, but the punishment may not be corporal; it may not be more severe than that provided for German soldiers for the same offense.

If a judicial proceeding is instituted against a British or French prisoner for a serious offense, American diplomatic representatives must be notified at least three weeks before the opening of the trial. If the prisoner does not choose a defense counsel, the American Embassy or Consulate may name one.

Germany will be obligated to send back to Britain and France seriously sick or injured soldiers as soon as possible.

The American diplomatic corps in Germany, is now under the direction of Alexander C. Kirk, Charge D'Affaires, of Chicago, there being no ambassador.

[Hugh R. Wilson resigned as American Ambassador to Germany on Sept. 1, and was subsequently placed second in command of a special division of the State Department created to help evacuate Americans from Europe.]

EXEMPTS JOBS THAT ARE VITAL

New Draft Plan Protects Economic Structures.

FOUR CLASSES ARE OUTLINED

Directors Would Be Warned That Politics Must Not Enter.

E. G. DANIEL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Should the United States ever become involved in war and Congress enact a draft law, no man whose job is vital to the economic structure would be dragged away from his machine or office.

Munitions are as important as men, food as important as fighting. That is the theory behind the proposed industrial mobilization system, into which army and navy officials have written a selective service plan.

"Complicated weapons and machines are used up rapidly in war," says the 1939 version of the mobilization plan. "Armies and navies must not only be well supplied initially but must be maintained adequately and continuously.

"In addition, throughout the duration of war, the nation must continue to provide all the material items upon which the health and well-being of its civilian population depend. War is no longer simply a battle between armed forces in the field."

SEP 20 1939

Minimum of Disturbance.

So, the draft plan adds, "the procurement of men is to be accomplished with the minimum of disturbance to the economic and social structure of the nation."

In the first call for a draft, it is estimated, 11,000,000 men between the ages of 21 and 30 would be registered. They would be classified as:

1939

30.24 - 3457

30.24 3457

1. Those immediately available for service.

2. Those whose service would be deferred because of the importance of their jobs.

3. Those whose service would be deferred because they had dependents.

4. Those whose service would be undesirable for obvious reasons, such as bad health.

Of the 11,000,000 registered, officials estimate, only 4,100,000 would be left in Class I. An undisclosed number would be in Class II, men with vital jobs.

Politics to Be Barred.

While exceptions are to be made of such men, the draft plan contains a warning to any director of selective service:

"A hint of favoritism or special privilege in the system will destroy him and the public confidence in the fairness of selective service. There must be no 'politics' in the system."

Claims for deferment of service would have to be sworn to and supported by other affidavits. Ultimately a man's neighbors, who know him best, would be the ones who decided his deferment by swearing to the nature of his job.

The draft plan, founded on world war experience, has been ready for years for submission to Congress and could be put into effect in a month. Detailed arrangements have been made for its operation in each area, and the entire system is reviewed periodically.

U. S. EMBASSIES CLOSED BY WAR

SEP 20 1939

Four Out of Business and Three Forced to Move.

WARSAW STAFF ON THE WING

May Set Up Headquarters in Paris —Other Flights in Three Years.

BERLIN6

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Four American embassies and legations abroad have disappeared in three years before the shocks of war and the threat of war, and three others have been forced to move.

The embassy in Warsaw was the latest to pack up bag and baggage. Driven from Poland into Rumania, its officials now are bound for Paris, and may set up headquarters there.

The reduction in American embassies and legations started in 1936 when Italian troops captured Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. A few months later the American legation there was closed and Minister Cornelius Van Engert was withdrawn.

Next came the American legation in Vienna, after Adolf Hitler took over Austria last year. The post of American Minister was vacant at the time, and the legation was shut down.

Disappearance number three was recorded last March at Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, after Germany absorbed the country. The legation was closed and the veteran Minister, Wilbur J. Carr, called home.

Three Embassy Flights.

When Italy took over Albania last spring, the legation at Tirana was closed and its Minister, Hugh Grant, withdrawn.

The embassy flights concern China, Spain and Poland. Ambassador Johnson in China has had to move from Nanking to Hankow to Chungking, far up the Yangtze River, as Japan invaded China.

Ambassador Bowes in Spain had to shift his headquarters to St. Jean de Luz, France, while the embassy itself moved from Madrid to Valencia, then to Barcelona, and later to France. It now is at Burgos, Spain, with a new Ambassador—Alexander Weddell.

Here in Washington the changes abroad have been reflected in the disappearance of two foreign legations—Austria and Albania. The Czech Minister, Vladimir Hurban, however, still continues to represent his country here.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki, likewise will be permitted to represent Poland here and to continue the Polish embassy.

War also has delayed establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and Australia.

WAR CASUALTIES KNOWN IN ADVANCE

SEP 20 1939

150 Out of 1000 Would Be Hurt Every Day.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (A. P.). The Army Medical Corps knows more in advance about the horrors of another war than ever before in American history—even to the frequency of casualties and where they will be nicked.

From our war experience, especially the world war, the corps predicts it would have to be ready to take care of 150 casualties a day among infantry soldiers for every thousand in action.

That would cover a moderately heavy combat day. Twenty-four of the 150 would be killed, 126 wounded or gassed. Sixty-six per cent of the injuries would be caused by gunshot missiles (mostly artillery), 31 per cent by gas, and the rest by other weapons, including bayonets.

SEP 20 1939

Red Cross Will Trace Americans' Kin in War

To Handle Inquiries on Safety and Send Money

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Red Cross is setting up a system to help Americans communicate with relatives in European war zones.

Inquiries may be made to local Red Cross chapters throughout the country, which will forward them here. Where inquiries are made by American citizens, the State Department will attempt to carry out the requests through consular offices. Appeals from American residents, who are not citizens, will be handled through the International Red Cross at Geneva.

The Red Cross will handle inquiries as to the safety of persons in the war zones or dispatch of money for their support or repatriation, but will not handle shipments of food or clothing because of uncertain conditions abroad.

The American Red Cross announced that the British and French Red Cross Societies had requested hospital and medical supplies from the United States, but the German Red Cross said it needs assistance now.

Many Red Cross chapters throughout the country are producing surgical dressings, hospital garments and refugee clothing. The Red Cross does not intend to appeal for war relief funds, however, until the European needs are more clearly ascertained.

THE OLYMPICS

[By the Associated Press]

